In Scotch law. An order, mandate, or warrant to do some act. The precept of seisin was the order of a superior to his bailie, to give infeftment of certain lands to his vassal. Bell.

In old French law. A kind of letters issued by the king in subversion of the laws, being orders to the judges to do or tolerate things contrary to law.

PRECEPT OF CLARE CONSTAT. A deed in the Scotch law by which a superior acknowledges the title of the heir of a deceased vassal to succeed to the lands.

PRECES. Lat. In Roman law. Prayers. One of the names of an application to the emperor. Tayl. Civil Law, 230.

PRECES In English ecclesiastical law. A right of the crown to name to the first prebend that becomes vacant after the accession of the sovereign, in every church of the empire. This right was exercised by the crown of England in the reign of Edward I. 2 Steph.Comm. 670, note.

PRECINCT. A constable's or police district. The immediate neighborhood of a palace or court. A small geographical unit of government. An election district created for convenient localization of polling places. Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Ryan, 5 S.Ct. 601, 113 U.S. 516, 28 L.Ed. 1098; Railway Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 189, 6 N.W. 607, 36 Am.Rep. 840; Rich v. Industrial Commission, 80 Utah, 511, 15 P.2d 641, 645.

PRECIPE. Another form of the name of the written instructions to the clerk of court; also spelled "prcecipe," (q. v.).

PRECIPITATION. Hastening occurrence of event or causing to happen or come to crisis suddenly, unexpectedly or too soon. Knock v. Industrial Acc. Commission of California, 200 Cal. 456, 253 P. 712, 714.

PRECIPITIN TEST. Precipitins are formations in the blood of an animal induced by repeated injections into its veins of the blood-serum of an animal of another species; and their importance in diagnosis lies in the fact that when the blood-serum of an animal so treated is mixed with that of any animal of the second species (or a closely related species) and the mixture kept at a temperature of about 98 degrees for several hours, a visible precipitate will result, but not so if the second ingredient of the mixture is drawn from an animal of an entirely different species. In medico-legal practice, therefore, a suspected stain or clot having been first tested by other methods and demonstrated to be blood, the question whether it is the blood of a human being or of other origin is resolved by mixing a solution of it with a quantity of blood-serum taken from a rabbit or some other small animal which has been previously prepared by injections of human blood-serum. After treatment as above described, the presence of a precipitate will furnish strong presumptive evidence that the blood tested was of human origin. The test is not absolutely conclusive, for the reason that blood from an anthropoid ape would produce the same result, in this experiment, as human blood. But if the alternative hypothesis presented attributed the blood in question to some animal of an unrelated species (as, a dog, sheep, or horse) the precipitin test could be fully relied on, as also in the case where no precipitate resulted.

PRECIPUT. In French law. A portion of an estate or inheritance which falls to one of the coheirs over and above his equal share with the rest, and which is to be taken out before partition is made.

PRECLUDE. Estop. Morris Plan Bank of Fort Worth v. Continental Nat. Bank of Fort Worth, Tex.Civ.App., 155 S.W.2d 407, 409.

PRECLUDI NON. Lat. In pleading. The commencement of a replication to a plea in bar, by which the plaintiff "says that, by reason of anything in the said plea alleged, he ought not to be barred from having and maintaining his aforesaid action against him, the said defendant, because he says," etc. Steph.Pl. 440.

PRECOGNITION. In Scotch practice. Preliminary examination. The investigation of a criminal case, preliminary to committing the accused for trial. 2 Alis.Crim.Pr. 134.

PRECOGNOSCE. In Scotch practice. To examine beforehand. Arkley, 232.

PRECONIZATION. Proclamation.

PRECONTRACT. A contract or engagement made by a person, which is of such a nature as to preclude him from lawfully entering into another contract of the same nature. 1 Bish.Mar. & Div. §§ 112, 272.

PREDECESSOR. One who goes or has gone before; the correlative of "successor." One who has filled an office or station before the present incumbent. Applied to a body politic or corporate, in the same sense as "ancestor" is applied to a natural person. Lorillard Co. v. Peper, C.C. Mo., 65 F. 597, 598.

In Scotch law. An ancestor. 1 Kames, Eq. 371.

PREDIAL SERVITUDE. A charge laid on an estate for the use and utility of another estate belonging to another owner. Civil Code La. art. 647. See PrEedial Servitude.

PREDICATE. In logic. That which is said concerning the subject in a logical proposition; as, "The law is the perfection of common sense." "Perfection of common sense," being affirmed concerning the law, (the subject,) is the predicate or thing predicated. Wharton, Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 232.

PREDOMINANT. Something greater or superior in power and influence to others with which it is connected or compared. Matthews v. Bliss, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 53.

PRE–EMPTION. In international law. The right of pre-emption is the right of a nation to detain the merchandise of strangers passing through her territories or seas, in order to afford to her subjects the preference of purchase. 1 Chit.Com. Law, 103.

According to general modern usage the doctrine of pre-emption, as applied in time of war rests upon the distinction between articles which are contraband (q. v.) universally, and those which are contraband only under the particular circumstances of the case. The carrying of the former class entails the penalty of confiscation, either of ship or cargo or both. The latter class, while confiscable according to strict law, are sometimes merely subjected to the milder belligerent right of pre-emption, which is regarded as a fair compromise between the right of the belligerent to seize, and the claim of the neutral to export his native commodities, though immediately subservient to the purpose of hostility; 3 Phill.Int.L. 450; 1 C.Rob. 241. The right of pre-emption is said to be rather a waiver of a greater right than a right itself ; an indulgence to the neutral rather than a right of the belligerent; Ward, Contraband 196.

In ,English law. The first buying of a thing. A privilege formerly enjoyed by the crown, of buying up provisions and other necessaries, by the intervention of the king's purveyors, for the use of his royal household, at an appraised valuation, in preference to all others, and even without consent of the owner. 1 Bl.Comm. 287; Garcia v. Callender, 125 N.Y. 307, 26 N.E. 283.

In the United Itates. A privilege accorded by the government to the actual settler upon a certain limited portion of the public domain, to purchase such tract at a fixed price to the exclusion (of all other applicants. Nix v. Allen, 5 S.Ct. 70, 112 U.S. 129, 28 L.Ed. 675.

PRE-EMPTION CLAIMANT. One who has settled upon land subject to pre-emption, with the intention to acquire title to it, and has complied, or is proceeding to comply, in good faith, with the requirements of the law to perfect his right to it. Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U.S. 575, 581, 24 L. Ed. 1130.

PRE-EMPTION ENTRY. See Entry.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHT. The right given to settlers upon the public lands of the United States to purchase them at a limited price in preference to others.

PRE-EMPTIONER. One who, by settlement upon the public land, or by cultivation of a portion of it, has obtained the right to purchase a portion of the land thus settled upon or cultivated, to the exclusion of all other persons. Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 480; Doe v. Beck, 108 Ala. 71, 19 So. 802.

PREFECT. In French law. The name given to the public functionary who is charged in chief with the administration of the laws, in each department of the country. Merl. Repert. See Crespin v. U. S., 18 S.Ct. 53, 168 U.S. 208, 42 L. Ed. 438. The term is also used, in practically the same sense, in Mexico. But in New Mexico, a prefect is a probate judge.

PREFER. To bring before; to prosecute; to try; to proceed with. Thus, preferring an indictment signifies prosecuting or trying an indictment.

To give advantage, priority, or privilege; to select for first payment, as to prefer one creditor over others.

PREFERENCE. The paying or securing to one or more of his creditors, by an insolvent debtor, the whole or a part of their claim, to the exclusion of the rest. The act of an insolvent debtor who, in distributing his property or in assigning it for the benefit of his creditors, pays or secures to one or more creditors the full amount of their claims or a larger amount than they would be entitled to receive on a pro rata distribution. Citizens' State Bank of Chautauqua v. First Nat. Bank of Sedan, 98 Kan. 109, 157 P. 392, 394, L.R. A.1917A, 696. Jackson v. Coons, 285 Ky. 154, 147 S.W.2d 45, 47, 132 A.L.R. 1403. It imports the relation of existing creditors having equal equities at the time of the transfer whereby the rights of one are advanced over those of another. Adams v. City Bank & Trust Co. of Macon, Ga., C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 453, 454.

The trustee in bankruptcy, to establish a recoverable "preference" under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, must show a transfer of property or money to the creditor, during insolvency and within four months of bankruptcy, that the creditor had reasonable grounds for believing that the bankrupt was then insolvent, and that the effect of the transfer was to give the creditor a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of the same class. Walker v. Wilkinson, C.C.A.Tex., 296 F. 850, 852. There must be a parting with the bankrupt's property for the benefit of the creditor and a subsequent diminution of his estate; Continental & Commercial T. & S. Bk. v. Trust Co., 33 S.Ct. 829, 229 U.S. 435, 57 L.Ed. 1268; N. Bk. of Newport v. Bank, 32 S.Ct. 633, 225 U.S. 178, 56 L.Ed. 1042.

Also the right held by a creditor, in virtue of some lien or security, to be preferred above others (i. e., paid first) out of the debtor's assets constituting the fund for creditors. Chadbourne v. Harding, 80 Me. 580, 16 A. 248; In re Ratliff, D.C. N.C., 107 F. 80: In re Stevens, 38 Minn. 432, 38 N. W. 111.

PREFERENCE SHARE. One giving its holder a preference, either as to receipt of dividends, as to payment in case of winding up, or both. In re Schaffer Stores Co., 229 N.Y.S. 735, 739, 224 App. Div. 268.

A term used in English law to designate a new issue of shares of stock in a company, which, to facilitate the disposal of them, are accorded a priority or preference over the original shares.

PREFERENTIAL ASSIGNMENT. An assignment of property for the benefit of creditors, made by an insolvent debtor, in which it is directed that a preference (right to be paid first in full) shall be given to a creditor or creditors therein named.

PREFERENTIAL DEBTS. In bankruptcy. Those which are prior to all others; as, wages of a clerk, servant, or workman, rates due and taxes. Brett, Comm. 890.

PREFERRED. Possessing or accorded a priority, advantage, or privilege. Generally denoting a prior or superior claim or right of payment as against another thing of the same kind or class. State v. Cheraw & C. R. Co., 16 S.C. 528.

PREFERRED DEBT. A demand which has priority; which is payable in full before others are paid at all.

PREFERRED DIVIDEND. See Dividend.

PREFERRED DOCKETS. Lists of preference cases prepared by the clerks when the cases are set for trial. King v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 140 La. 843, 74 So. 168, 169.

PREFERRED STOCK. See Stock.

PREFET. In French law. A chief officer invested with the superintendence of the administration of the laws in each department. Merlin, Repert.

PREGNANCY. In medical jurisprudence. The state of a female who has within her ovary or womb a fecundated germ. Dungl. Med. Dict. The existence of the condition beginning at the moment of conception and terminating with delivery of the child. State v. Loomis, 90 N.J.Law, 216, 100 A. 160, 161.

Extra uterine or ectopic pregnancy is the development of the ovum outside of the uterine cavity, as in the Fallopian tubes or ovary. Extra uterine pregnancy commonly terminates by rupture of the sac, profuse internal hemorrhage, and death if not relieved promptly by a surgical operation.

PREGNANCY, PLEA OF. A plea which a woman capitally convicted may plead in stay of execution; for this, though it is no stay of judgment, yet operates as a respite of execution until she is delivered. Brown.

PREGNANT NEGATIVE. See Negative Pregnant.

PREJUDICE. A forejudgment; bias; preconceived opinion. A leaning towards one side of a cause for some reason other than a conviction of its justice. Tegeler v. State, 130 P. 1164, 1167, 9 Okl.Cr. 138; Taylor v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 146 Kan. 841, 73 P.2d 1102, 1103.

Of judge. That which disqualifies judge is condition of mind, which sways judgment and renders judge unable to exercise his functions impartially in particular case. Evans v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 107 Cal. App. 372, 290 P. 662, 665. It refers to mental attitude or disposition of the judge toward a party to the litigation, and not to any views that he may entertain regarding the .subject matter involved. State ex rel. Mitchell v. Sage Stores Co., 157 Kan. 622, 143 P.2d 652, 655.

Without prejudice. Where an offer or admission is made "without prejudice," or a motion is denied or a bill in equity dismissed "without prejudice," it is meant as a declaration that no rights or privileges of the party concerned are to be considered as thereby waived or lost, except in so far as may be expressly conceded or decided. See, also, Dismissal Without Prejudice.

PREJUDICIAL ERROR. Error substantially affecting appellant's legal rights and obligations. Erskine v. Upham, 56 Cal.App.2d 235, 132 P.2d 219, 228; Trepanier v. Standard Min. & Mill. Co., 58 Wyo. 29, 123 P.2d 378, 380.

PRELATE. A clergyman of a superior order, as an archbishop or a bishop, having authority over the lower clergy; a dignitary of the church. Webster.

PRELEVEMENT. Fr. In French law. A preliminary deduction; particularly, the portion or share which one member of a firm is entitled to take out of the partnership assets before a division of the property is made between the partners.

PRELIMINARY. Introductory; initiatory; preceding; temporary and provisional; as preliminary examination, injunction, articles of peace, etc.

PRELIMINARY ACT. In English admiralty practice. A document stating the time and place of a collision between vessels, the names of the vessels, and other particulars, required to be filed by each solicitor in actions for damage by such collisiQn, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order. Wharton.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OR HEARING. See Hearing.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION. See Injunction.

PRELIMINARY PROOF. In insurance. The first proof offered of a loss occurring under the policy, usually sent in to the underwriters with the notification of claim.

PREMATURE LABOR. See Miscarriage.

PREMEDITATE. To think of an act beforehand, to contrive and design; to plot or lay plans for the execution of a purpose. See Deliberate.

PREMEDITATED DESIGN. In homicide cases. The mental purpose, the formed intent, to take human life. Radej v. State, 152 Wis. 503, 140 N. W. 21, 22.

PREMEDITATEDLY. Thought of beforehand, for any length of time, however short. State v. Johnson, 92 Kan. 441, 140 P. 839, 840.

PREMEDITATION. The act of meditating in advance; deliberation upon a contemplated act; plotting or contriving; a design formed to do something before it is done. State v. Spivey, 132 N.C. 989, 43 S.E. 475; Parker v. State, 24 Wyo. 491, 161 P. 552, 554.

A prior determination to do an act, but such determination need not exist for any particular period before it is carried into effect. Commonwealth v. Dreher, 274 Pa. 325, 118 A. 215, 216.

Premeditation differs essentially from will, which ,constitutes the crime; because it supposes, besides an actual will, a deliberation, and a continued persistence.

PREMIER. A principal minister of state; the prime minister.

PREMIER SERJEANT, THE QUEEN'S. This officer, so constituted by letters patent, has preaudience over the bar after the attorney and solicitor general and queen's advocate. 3 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 274, note.

PREMISES. That which is put before; that which precedes; the foregoing statements. Thus, in logic, the two introductory propositions of the syllogism are called the "premises," and from them the conclusion is deduced. So, in pleading, the expression "in consideration of the premises" means in consideration of the matters hereinbefore stated. Alaska Imp. Co. v. Hirsch, 119 Cal. 249, 47 P. 124; Meese v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 211 F. 254, 259.

In conveyancing. That part of a deed which precedes the habendum, in which are set forth the names of the parties with their titles and additions, and in which are recited such deeds, agreements, or matters of fact as are necessary to explain the reasons upon which the present transaction is founded; and it is here, also, the consideration on which it is made is set down and the certainty of the thing granted. 2 Bl. Comm. 298. Liles v. Pitts, 145 La. 650, 82 So. 735, 738.

In equity pleading. The stating part of a bill. It contains a narrative of the facts and circumstances of the plaintiff's case, and the wrongs of which he complains, and the names of the persons by whom done and against whom he seeks redress. Story, Eq. Pl. § 27.

In estates. Lands and tenements; an estate; land and buildings thereon; the subject-matter of a conveyance. F. F. Proctor Troy Properties Co. v. Dugan Store, 181 N.Y.S. 786, 788, 191 App.Div. 685. The area of land surrounding a house, and actually or by legal construction forming one inclosure with it. Ratzell v. State, Okl.Cr.App., 228 P. 166, 168. A distinct and definite locality, and may mean a room, shop, building, or other definite area. Robinson v. State, 143 Miss. 247, 108 So. 903, 905, or a distinct portion of real estate. Ruble v. Ruble, Tex.Civ.App., 264 S.W. 1018, 1020.

The term "premises" is used in common parlance to signify land, with its appurtenances; but its usual and appropriate meaning in a conveyance is the interest or estate demised or granted by the deed. State v. French, 120 Ind. 229, 22 N.E. 108; Cooper v. Robinson, 302 Ill. 181, 134 N.E. 119, 120.

"Premises" of the employer as used in Workmen's Compensation Acts means on the property owned, leased, or controlled by the employer and so connected with the business in which the employee is engaged as to form a component or integral part of it. Werner v. Allegheny County, 153 Pa.Super. 10, 33 A.2d 451, 453.

The words "premises" and "plant" are sometimes distinguished; "premises" refers to place and territory, while "plant" includes place and territory, together with the appliances and things which go to make the facilities for the execution of the design and purposes of the enterprise. Martin v. Matson Na^{v}. Co., D.C.Wash., 244 F. 976, 977.

In insurance law. The subject-matter insured in a policy. 4 Campb. 89.

PREMIUM. A reward for an act done. Brown v. Board of Police Com'rs of City of Los Angeles, 58 Cal.App.2d 473, 136 P.2d 617, 619.

A bounty or bonus; a consideration given to invite a loan or a bargain; as the consideration paid to the assignor by the assignee of a lease, or to the transferrer by the transferee of shares of stock, etc. So stock is said to be "at a premium" when its market price exceeds its nominal or face value. Boston & M. R. R. v. U. S., C.C.A. Mass., 265 F. 578, 579. See Par.

In granting a lease, part of the rent is sometimes capitalized and paid in a lump sum at the time the lease is granted. This is called a "premium."

The sum paid or agreed to be paid by an assured to the underwriter as the consideration for the insurance. Wade v. National Bank of Commerce, 144 Minn. 187, 174 N.W. 889, 890.

Premium note. A promissory note given by the insured for part or all of the amount of the premium.

Unearned premium. That portion which must be returned to insured on cancellation of policy. /Etna Ins. Co. v. Hyde, 315 Mo. 113, 285 S.W. 65, 71.

PREMIUM PUDICITIZE. The price of chastity. A compensation for the loss of chastity, paid or promised to, or for the benefit of, a seduced female.

PREMUNLRE. See Prfemunire.

PRENDA. In Spanish law. Pledge. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 7.

PRENDER, PRENDRE. L. Fr. To take. The power or right of taking a thing without waiting for it to be offered. See A Prendre.

PRENDER DE BARON. L. Fr. In old English law. A taking of husband; marriage. An exception or plea which might be used to disable a woman from pursuing an appeal of murder against the killer of her former husband. Staundef. P. C. lib. 3, c. 59.

PRENOMEN. (Lat.) The first or Christian name of a person. See Cas. Hardw. 286; 1 Tayl. 148.

PREPARATION. For offense consists in devising or arranging means or measures necessary for its commission, while attempt is direct movement toward commission after preparations are made. People v. George, 74 Cal.App. 440, 241 P. 97, 100. State v. Quick, 199 S.C. 256, 19 S.E.2d 101, 103.

PREPARE. To provide with necessary means; to make ready; to provide with what is appropriate or necessary. Brennan v. Northern Electric Co., 72 Mont. 35, 231 P. 388, 389.

PREPARED COAL. In anthracite coal trade means sizes of coal above pea. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Salter, 104 Conn. 728, 134 A. 220, 222.

PREPENSE. Forethought; preconceived; premeditated. See Territory v. Bannigan, 1 Dak. 451, 46 N.W. 597; People v. Clark, 7 N.Y. 385.

PREPONDERANCE. Greater weight of evidence, or evidence which is more credible and convincing to the mind. Button v. Metcalf, 80 Wis. 193, 49 N.W. 809. That which best accords with reason and probability. U. S. v. McCaskill, D.C.Fla., 200 F. 332. The word "preponderance" means something more than "weight"; it denotes a superiority of weight, or outweighing. The words are not synonymous, but substantially different. There is generally a "weight" of evidence on each side in case of contested facts. But juries cannot properly act upon the weight of evidence, in favor of the one having the onus, unless it overbear, in some degree, the weight upon the other side. Mathes v. Aggler & Musser Seed Co., 178 P. 713, 715, 179 Cal. 697; Barnes v. Phillips, 184 Ind. 415, 111 N.E. 419. See, also, Weight of Evidence.

It rests with that evidence which, when fairly considered, produces the stronger impression, and has the greater weight, and is more convincing as to its truth when weighed against the evidence in opposition thereto. S. Yamamoto v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 84 Wash. 411, 146 P. 861, 863; but it does not mean greater number of witnesses. Heerdink v. Kohmescher, 94 Ind.App. 296, 180 N.E. 683, 684.

Preponderance of evidence may not be determined by the number of witnesses, but by the greater weight of all evidence, which does not necessarily mean the greater number of witnesses, but opportunity for knowledge, information possessed, and manner of testifying determines the weight of testimony. Garver v. Garver, 52 Colo. 227, 121 P. 165, 166, Ann.Cas.1913D, 674.

PREROGATIVE. An exclusive or peculiar privilege. The special power, privilege, immunity, or advantage vested in an official person, either generally, or in respect to the things of his office, or in an official body, as a court or legislature. Attorney General v. Blossom, 1 Wis. 317; Attorney General v. Eau Claire, 37 Wis. 443.

In English law. A power or will which is discretionary, and above and uncontrolled by any other will. That special pre-eminence which the king (or queen) has over and above all other persons, in right of his (or her) regal dignity. A term used to denote those rights and capacities which the sovereign enjoys alone, in contradistinction to others. 1 Bl.Comm. 239. It is sometimes applied by law writers to the thing over which the power or will is exercised, as fiscal prerogatives, meaning king's revenues; 1 Halleck, Int. L. 147.

PREROGATIVE COURT. In English law. A court established for the trial of all testamentary causes, where the deceased left bona notabilia within two different dioceses; in which case the probate of wills belonged to the archbishop of the province, by way of special prerogative. And all causes relating to the wills, administrations, or legacies of such persons were originally cognizable herein, before a judge appointed by the archbishop, called the "judge of the prerogative court," from whom an ap[P]eal lay to the privy council. 3 Bl.Comm. 66; 3 Steph.Comm. 432.

In New Jersey the prerogative court is the court of appeal from decrees of the orphans' courts in the several counties of the state. The court is held before the chancellor, under the title of the "ordinary." Flanigan v. Guggenheim Smelting Co., 63 N.J.L. 647, 44 A. 762; Robinson v. Fair, 128 U.S. 53, 9 S.Ct. 30, 32 L. Ed. 415.

PREROGATIVE LAW. That part of the common law of England which is more particularly applicable to the king. Com. Dig. tit. "Ley," A.

PREROGATIVE WRITS. In English law, the name is given to certain judicial writs issued by the courts only upon proper cause shown, never as a mere matter of right, the theory being that they involve a direct interference by the government with the liberty and property of the subject, and therefore are justified only as an exercise of the extraordinary power (prerogative) of the crown. In America, a theory has sometimes been advanced that these writs should issue only in cases publici juris and those affecting the sovereignty of the state, or its franchises or prerogatives, or the liberties of the people. But their issuance is now generally regulated by statute, and the use of the term "prerogative," in describing them, amounts only to a reference to their origin and history. These writs are the writs of mandamus, procedendo, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and certiorari. Click v. Click, 98 W. Va. 419, 127 S.E. 194, 195.

PRES. L. Fr. Near. Cy pres, so near; as near. See Cy Pres.

PRESBYTER. Lat. In civil and ecclesiastical law. An elder; a presbyter; a priest. Cod. 1, 3, 6, 20; Nov. 6.

PRESBYTERIANISM. One of the principal systems of church polity known as the "Christian Protestant Church", occupying an intermediate position between episcopacy and congregationalism. Trustees of Pencader Presbyterian Church in Pencader Hundred v. Gibson, Del., 22 A.2d 782, 788. A religious faith or doctrine, based on the Westminster Confession of Faith and the Larger and Shorter Catechisms. In re McKean's Estate, 152 Pa.Super. 613, 33 A.2d 51, 52.

PRESBYTERIAN SYSTEM. That type of church organization in which the congregation is but a unit in a larger body which governs. Doughty v. Herr, 97 Ind.App. 427, 185 N.E. 657, 658.

PRESBYTERIUM. That part of the church where divine offices are performed; formerly applied to the choir or chancel, because it was the place appropriated to the bishop, priest, and other clergy, while the laity were confined to the body of the church. Jacob.

PRESCRIBABLE. That to which a right may be acquired by prescription.

PRESCRIBE. To assert a right or title to the enjoyment of a thing, on the ground of having hitherto had the uninterrupted and immemorial enjoyment of it.

To lay down authoritatively as a guide, direction, or rule; to impose as a peremptory order; to dictate; to point; to direct; to give as a guide, direction, or rule of action; to give law. State v. Truax, 130 Wash. 69, 226 P. 259, 260, 33 A.L.R. 1206; McMahon v. Devlin, 254 N.Y. 397, 173 N.E. 560, 561.

To direct; define; mark out. Field v. Marye, 83 Va. 882, 3 S.E. 707.

In modern statutes relating to matters of an administrative nature, such as procedure, registration, etc., it is usual to indicate in general terms the nature of the proceedings to be adopted, and to leave the details to be prescribed or regulated by rules or orders to be made for that purpose in pursuance of an authority contained in the act. Sweet. Mansfield v. People, 164 Ill. 611, 45 N.E. 976.

In a medical sense prescribe means to direct, designate, or order use of a remedy. State v. Whipple, 143 Minn. 403, 173 N.W. 801, 802.

PRESCRIPTION. A direction of remedy or remedies for a disease and the manner of using them; a formula for the preparation of a drug and medicine. People v. Cohen, 94 Misc. 355, 157 N.Y.S. 591, 593.

International Law

Acquisition of sovereignty over a territory through continuous and undisputed exercise of sovereignty over it during such a period as is necessary to create under the influence of historical development the general conviction that the present condition of things is in conformity with international order. State of Arkansas v. State of Tennessee, Ark. & Tenn., 60 S.Ct. 1026, 1030, 310 U.S. 563, 84 L.Ed. 1362.

Real Property Law

The name given to a mode of acquiring title to incorporeal hereditaments by immemorial or long-continued enjoyment. Zetrouer v. Zetrouer, 89 Fla. 253, 103 So. 625, 627. Hester v. Sawyers, 41 N.M. 497, 71 P.2d 646, 649, 112 A.L.R. 536.

To create an easement by "prescription," the use must have been open, continuous, exclusive, and under claim of right for statutory period. Burk v. Diers, 102 Neb. 721, 169 N.W. 263, 264.

"Prescription" is the term usually applied to incorporeal hereditaments, while "adverse possession" is applied to lands. Hindley v. Metropolitan EL R. Co., 85 N.Y.S. 561, 42 Misc. 56.

In Louisiana, prescription is defined as a manner of acquiring the ownership of property, or discharging debts, by the effect of time, and under the conditions regulated by law. Each of these prescriptions has its special and particular definition. The prescription by which the ownership of property is acquired, is a right by which a mere possessor acquires the ownership of a thing which he possesses by the continuance of his possession during the time fixed by law. The prescription by which debts are released, is a peremptory and perpetual bar to every species of action, real or personal, when the creditor has been silent for a certain time without urging his claim. Civ. Code La. arts. 3457-3459. In this sense of the term it is very nearly equivalent to what is elsewhere expressed by "limitation of actions," or rather, the "bar of the statute of limitations."

There is a distinction between title by "limitation" and a "prescriptive title," in that the latter is based upon a presumed grant to the property or use, while the former is not, Abel v. Love, 81 Ind. App. 328, 143 N.E. 515, 520, while the distinction between a highway by prescription and one by dedication is that "prescription" is an adverse holding under color of right, while a "dedication," whether expressed or implied, rests upon the consent of the owner. Hatch Bros. Co. v. Black, 25 Wyo. 416, 171 P. 267, 270.

"Prescription" and "custom" are frequently confounded in common parlance, arising perhaps from the fact that immemorial usage was essential to both of them ; but, strictly, they materially differ from one another, in that custom is properly a local impersonal usage, such as borough-English, or postremogeniture, which is annexed to a given estate, while prescription is simply personal, as that a certain man and his ancestors, or those whose estate he enjoys, have immemorially exercised a right of pasture-common in a certain parish, and usage differs from both, for it may be either to persons or places. Again, prescription has its origin in a grant, evidenced by usage, and is allowed on account of its loss, either actual or supposed, and therefore only those things can be prescribed for which could be raised by a grant previously to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, § 2; but this principle does not necessarily hold in the case of a custom. Wharton; Olin v. Kingsbury, 168 N.Y.S. 766, 770, 181 App. Div. 348.

In General

Corporations by prescription. In English law. Those which have existed beyond the memory of man, and therefore are looked upon in law to be well created, such as the city of London.

Prescription act. The statute 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c. 71, passed to limit the period of prescription in certain cases.

Prescription in a que estate. A claim of prescription based on the immemorial enjoyment of the right claimed, by the claimant and those former owners "whose estate" he has succeeded to and holds. Donnell v. Clark, 19 Me. 182.

Time of prescription. The length of time necessary to establish a right claimed by prescription or a title by prescription. Before the act of 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c. 71, the possession required to constitute a prescription must have existed "time out of mind" or "beyond the memory of man," that is, before the reign of Richard I.; but the time of prescription, in certain cases, was much shortened by that act. 2 Steph.Comm. 35.

PRESENCE. Act, fact, or state of being in a certain place and not elsewhere, or within sight or call, at hand, or in some place that is being thought of. London v. Maryland Casualty Co., 10 Minn. 581, 299 N.W. 193, 194; the existence of a person in a particular place at a given time particularly with reference to some act done there and then. Besides actual presence, the law recognizes constructive presence, which latter may be predicated of a person who, though not on the very spot, was near enough to be accounted present by the law, or who was actively co-operating with another who was actually present. Mitchell v. Com., 33 Grat., Va., 868.

PRESENCE OF AN OFFICER. An offense is committed in "presence" or "view" of officer, within rule authorizing arrest without warrant, when officer sees act constituting it, though at distance, or when circumstances within his observation give probable cause for belief that defendant has committed offense, or when he hears disturbance created by offense and proceeds at once to scene, or if offense is continuing, or has not been fully consummated when arrest is made. Kennington-Saenger, Inc., v. Wicks, 168 Miss. 566, 151 So. 549, 551. Mantei v. State, 210 Wis. 1, 245 N.W. 683, 684.

PRESENCE OF THE COURT. A contempt is in the "presence of the court," if it is committed in the ocular view of the court, or where the court has direct knowledge of the contempt. People v. Cochrane, 307 Ill. 126, 138 N.E. 291, 293.

PRESENCE OF THE TESTATOR. Will is attested in presence of testator if witnesses are within range of any of testator's senses. In re Demaris' Estate, 166 Or. 36, 110 P.2d 571, 585, 586.

PRESENT, v. In English ecclesiastical law. To offer a clerk to the bishop of the diocese, to be instituted. 1 Bl.Comm. 389.

In criminal law. To find or represent judicially; used of the official act of a grand jury when they take notice of a crime or offense from their own knowledge or observation, without any bill of indictment laid before them. To lay before judge, magistrate, or governing body for action or consideration; submit as a petition or remonstrance for a decision or settlement to proper authorities. Haynes v. State, 108 Tex.Cr.R. 62, 299 S.W. 234, 235.

In the law of negotiable instruments. Primarily, to present is to tender or offer. Thus, to present a bill of exchange for acceptance or payment is to exhibit it to the drawee or acceptor, (or his authorized agent,) with an express or implied demand for acceptance or payment. Byles, Bills, 183, 201.

Claims are "presented" to the probate court when placed in the custody of the court, or filed or made a matter of record therein, State v. Probate Court of Hennepin County, 145 Minn. 344, 177 N.W. 354, 11 A.L.R. 242; and to present claim against city, within statute providing that claims for damages against the city must be "presented" to the city or town council and filed with the city or town clerk, means to hand to and leave with. Titus v. City of Montesano, 106 Wash. 608, 181 P. 43, 46.

PRESENT, n. A gift; a gratuity; anything presented or given.

PRESENT, adj. Now existing; at hand; relating to the present time; considered with reference to the present time.

Present conveyance. A conveyance made with the intention that it take effect at once and not at a future time. Prior v. Newsom, 144 Ark. 593, 223 S.W. 21, 22.

Present enjoyment. The immediate or present possession and use of an estate or property, as distinguished from such as is postponed to a future time.

Present estate. An estate in immediate possession; one now existing, or vested at the present time; as distinguished from a future estate, the enjoyment of which is postponed to a future time.

Present interest. One which entitles the owner to the immediate possession of the property.

Present time. A period of appreciable and generally considerable duration within which certain transactions are to take place. Corscot v. State, 178 Wis. 661, 190 N.W. 465, 468.

Present use. One which has an immediate existence, and is at once operated upon by the statute of uses.

PRESENTATION. In ecclesiastical law. The act of a patron or proprietor of a living in offering or presenting a clerk to the ordinary to be instituted in the benefice.

PRESENTATION OFFICE. The office of the lord chancellor's official, the secretary of presentations, who conducts all correspondence having reference to the twelve canonries and six hundred and fifty livings in the gift of the lord chancellor, and draws and issues the fiats of appointment. Sweet.

PRESENTATIVE ADVOWSON, See Advowson.

PRESENTEE. In ecclesiastical law. A clerk who has been presented by his patron to a bishop in order to be instituted in a church.

PRESENTER. One that presents.

PRESENTLY. Immediately; now; at once. A right which may be exercised "presently" is opposed to one in reversion or remainder.

PRESENTMENT.

Criminal Practice

The written notice taken by a grand jury of any offense, from their own knowledge or observation, without any bill of indictment laid before them at the suit of the government. 4 Bl. Comm. 301; Bennett v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 183 Mich. 200, 150 N.W. 141, 142, Ann.Cas.1916E, 223. Presentments are also made in courts-leet and courts-baron, before the stewards. Steph. Comm. 644.

The writing which contains the accusation so presented by a grand jury. U. S. v. Hill, 1 Brock. 156, Fed.Cas.No.-15,364.

In an extended sense, the term includes not only presentments properly so called, but also inquisitions of office and indictments found by a grand jury. 2 Hawk. Pl. Cr. c. 25, § 1.

An informal statement in writing, by the grand jury, representing to the court that a public offense has been committed which is triable in the county, and that there is reasonable ground for believing that a particular individual named or described therein has committed it. Eason v. State, 11 Ark. 482; State v. Kiefer, 90 Md. 165, 44 A. 1043. An accusation of crime, made by a grand jury from their own knowledge or from evidence furnished them by witnesses or by one or more of their members. In re Report of Grand Jury of Baltimore City, 152 Md. 616, 137 A. 370, 372.

The difference between a presentment and an inquisition is this : that the former is found by a grand jury authorized to inquire of offenses generally, whereas the latter is an accusation found by a jury specially returned to inquire concerning the particular offense. 2 Hawk.P1.Cr. c. 25, § 6.

An indictment differs from a presentment in that the former must be indorsed "A true bill," followed by the signature of the grand jury foreman; a presentment is to be signed by all the grand jurors, and hence does not have to be indorsed "A true bill." Martin v. State, 127 Tenn. 324, 155 S.W. 129, 130.

The distinction between a special presentment and a bill of indictment, even under the old practice, was very thin; and in Georgia even this distinction has been abolished in practice for many years. The solicitor is not now required to frame any indictment on a special presentment, but the special presentment of the grand jury is returned into court, and upon it the defendant is arraigned and tried. It has the same force and effect as a bill of indictment. The only formal difference between the two is that a prosecutor prefers a bill of indictment, and a special presentment has no prosecutor, but, in theory, originates with the grand jury (Progress Club v. State, 12 Ga.App. 174, 76 S.E. 1029, 1030). Even this difference between a bill of indictment and a special presentment no longer exists, and the finding of the grand jury is prepared by the solicitor-general and called a bill of indictment, or a special presentment, at his will. Head v. State, 32 Ga.App. 331, 123 S.E. 34.

Negotiable Instruments

The production of a bill of exchange to the drawee for his acceptance, or to the drawer or acceptor for payment; or of a promissory note to the party liable, for payment of the same.

PRESENTS. The present instrument. The phrase "these presents" is used in any legal document to designate the instrument in which the phrase itself occurs.

PRESERVATION. Keeping safe from harm; avoiding injury, destruction, or decay. This term always presupposes a real or existing danger. State ex rel. Pollock v. Becker, 289 Mo. 660, 233 S.W. 641, 649. It is not creation, but the saving of that which already exists, and implies the continuance of what previously existed. McKeon v. Central Stamping Co., C.C.A.N.J., 264 F. 385, 387.

PRESERVE. With reference to foodstuffs, to prepare in such a manner as to resist decomposition or fermentation; to prevent from spoiling by the use of preservative substances with or without the use of the agency of heat. U. S. v. Dodson, D.C.Cal., 268 F. 397, 403. The word "preserved," when applied to meat, implies that it has been so processed that its preservation is of permanent character. U. S. v. Conkey & Co., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 552, 554.

PRESIDE. To occupy the place of authority or of president, chairman, moderator, etc., to direct, control or regulate proceedings as chief officer or to preside at public meetings, to preside over the senate. Drake v. Drake, 187 Ga. 423, 1 S.E.2d 573, 575. To preside over a court is to "hold" it,—to direct, control, and govern it as the chief officer. A judge may "preside" whether sitting as a sole judge or as one of several judges. Smith v. People, 47 N.Y. 334.

PRESIDENT. One placed in authority over others; a chief officer; a presiding or managing officer; a governor, ruler, or director. The chairman, moderator, or presiding officer of a legislative or deliberative body, appointed to keep order, manage the proceedings, and govern the administrative details of their business.

The chief officer of a corporation, company, board, committee, etc., generally having the main direction and administration of their concerns. Roe v. Bank of Versailles, 167 Mo. 406, 67 S.W. 303. The term does not ordinarily include "vice president." First Nat. Bank v. C. H. Meyers & Co., Tex.Civ.App., 283 S.W. 265, 266.

The chief executive magistrate of a state or nation, particularly under a democratic form of government; or of a province, colony, or dependency,

In the United States, the word is commonly used in reference to the private as well as public character of the nation's chief executive. U. S. v. Metzdorf, D.C.Mont., 252 F. 933, 937.

In English law. A title formerly given to the king's lieutenant in a province; as the president of Wales. Cowell.

This word is also an old though corrupted form of "precedent," (q. v.,) used both as a French and English word. Le president est rare. Dyer, 136.

PRESIDENT JUDGE. A title sometimes given to the presiding judge. It was formerly used in England and is now used in the courts of common pleas in Pennsylvania. So in the old Virginia court of appeals. The lord chief justice is now permanent president of the high court of justice in England. The title president is said to have a high Norman flavor. Inderwick, King's Peace 225.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL. In English law. A great officer of state; a member of the cabinet. He attends on the sovereign, proposes business at the council-table, and reports to the sovereign the transactions there. 1 Bl. Comm. 230.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. The official title of the chief executive officer of the federal government in the United States.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS. A body of electors chosen in the different states, whose sole duty it is to elect a president and vice-president of the United States. Each state appoints, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state is entitled in congress. Const. U. S. art. 2, § 1; McPherson v. Blacker, 13 S.Ct. 3, 146 U.S. 1, 36 L.Ed. 869. The usual method of appointment is by general ballot, so that each voter in a state votes for the whole number of electors to which his state is entitled.

PRESIDING JUDGE. This term, in statutes requiring exceptions to be signed by the judge who presides at the trial, means the judge presiding at the trial of which a review is sought; hence exceptions saved at a first trial, contained in bill of exceptions signed by the judge presiding at a second trial, are not reviewable. Tucker v. Yandow, 100 Vt. 169, 135 A. 600, 601.

PRESS. In old practice. A piece or skin of parchment, several of which used to be sewed together in making up a roll or record of proceedings. 1 Bl. Comm. 183; Townsh. Pl. 486.

Metaphorically, the aggregate of publications issuing from the press, or the giving publicity to one's sentiments and opinions through the medium of printing; as in the phrase "liberty of the press."

PRESSING SEAMEN. See Impressment.

PRESSING TO DEATH. See Peine Forte et Dure.

PREST. In old English law. A duty in money to be paid by the sheriff upon his account in the exchequer, or for money left or remaining in his hands. Cowell.

PREST MONEY. A payment which binds those who receive it to be ready at all times appointed, being meant especially of soldiers. Cowell.

PRESTATION. In old English law. A presting or payment of money. Cowell. A payment or performance; the rendering of a service.

In international law. The term is sometimes used of a right by which neutral vessels may be appropriated by way of hire by a belligerent on payment of freight beforehand. In 1870 the Prussian troops sank six British vessels to obstruct navigation in the river Seine. Indemnification was subsequently made. 1 Halleck, Int. L. Baker's Ed. 520.

PRESTATION MONEY. A sum of money paid by archdeacons yearly to their bishop; also purveyance. Cowell.

PRESTIMONY, or PR2ESTIMONIA. In canon law. A fund or revenue appropriated by the founder for the subsistence of a priest, without being erected into any title or benefice, chapel, prebend, or priory. It is not subject to the ordinary; but of it the patron, and those who have a right from him, are the collators. Wharton.

PRESUMABLY. Fit to be assumed as true in advance of conclusive evidence; credibly deduced; fair to suppose; by reasonable supposition or inference; what appears to be entitled to belief without direct evidence. Kurth v. Continental Life Ins. Co., 234 N.W. 201, 202, 211 Iowa 736; Mitchell v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., 205 N.C. 726, 172 S.E. 495, 496.

PRESUME. To assume beforehand. Hickman v. Union Electric Light & Power Co., Mo.Sup., 226 S.W. 570, 576. In a more technical sense, to believe or accept upon probable evidence. It is not so strong a word as "infer";˙ Morford v. Peck, 46 Conn. 385; though often used with substantially the same meaning; State v. Schuck, 51 N.D. 875, 201 N.W. 342, 345.

PRESUMPTICO, See Prtesumptio; Presumption.

PRESUMPTION. Of fact. An inference affirmative or disaffirmative of the truth or falsehood of any proposition or fact drawn by a process of probable reasoning in the absence of actual certainty of its truth or falsehood, or until such certainty can be ascertained. Best, Pres. § 3.

An inference affirmative or disaffirmative of the existence of a disputed fact, drawn by a judicial tribunal, by a process of probable reasoning, from some one or more matters of fact, either admitted in the cause or otherwise satisfactorily established. Best, Pres. § 12. An inference as to the existence of a fact not known, arising from its connection with the facts that are known, and founded upon a knowledge of human nature and the motives which are known to influence human conduct. Hawes v. State of Georgia, 42 S.Ct. 204, 258 U.S. 1, 66 L.Ed. 431. An inference as to the existence of some fact drawn from the existence of some other fact; an inference which common sense draws from circumstances usually occurring in such cases. 1 Phil.Ev. 436; 3 B. & Ad. 890. A strong probability or reasonable supposition. In re Van Tassell's Will, 196 N.Y.S. 491, 494, 119 Misc. 478. That which may be assumed without proof or taken for granted as self-evident result of human reason and experience. Watkins v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 315 Pa. 497, 173 A. 644, 647, 95 A.L.R. 869.

A conclusion reached by means of the weight of proved circumstances. Marquet v. A2Etna Life Ins. Co., 128 Tenn. 213, 159 S.W. 733, 736, L.R.A.1915B, 749, Ann.Cas.1915B, 677.

Presumptions of fact are not the subject of fixed rules, but are merely natural presumptions, such as appear, from common experience, to arise from the particular circumstances of any case. Some of these are "founded upon a knowledge of the human character, and of the motives, passions, and feelings by which the mind is usually influenced." 1 Stark. Ev. 27. They may be said to be the conclusions drawn by the mind from the natural connection of the circumstances disclosed in each case, or, In other words, from circumstantial evidence.

Of Law. A rule of law that courts and judges shall draw a particular inference from a particular fact, or from particular evidence, unless and until the truth of such inference is disproved. Steph. Ev. 4; Lane v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 132 Mo. 4, 33 S.W. 645. A rule which, in certain cases, either forbids or dispenses with any ulterior inquiry. 1 Greenl. § 14.

A consequence which the law or the judge draws from a known fact to a fact unknown. In re Cowdry's Will, 77 Vt. 359, 60 A. 141, 142. A rule of law laid down by the judge and attaching to evidentiary facts certain procedural consequences as to the duty of production of other evidence by the opponent. If the opponent does offer evidence to the contrary, the presumption disappears, and the case stands upon the facts and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Kramer v. Nichols-Chandler Home Building & Brokerage Co., 103 Okl. 208, 229 P. 767, 768. A conclusion, which, in the absence of evidence upon the exact question, the law draws from other proof made or from facts judicially noticed or both, the burden of proof cast by it being satisfied by the presentation of evidence sufficient to convince the jury that the probabilities of truth are against the party whom the presumption relieves of the burden of proof. State ex rel. Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Ellison, 268 Mo. 239, 187 S.W. 23, 26. Presumptions of law are divided into conclusive presumptions and disputable presumptions.

A conclusive presumption, called also an "absolute" or "irrebuttable" presumption, is a rule of law determining the quantity of evidence requisite for the support of a particular averment which is not permitted to be overcome by any proof that the fact is otherwise. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 15; U. S. v. Clark, 5 Utah, 226, 14 P. 288. It is an inference which the court will draw from the proof, which no evidence, however strong, will be permitted to overturn. Lyon v. Guild, 5 Heisk., Tenn., 175, 182; Best, Pres. § 20.

A disputable presumption, called also an "inconclusive" or "rebuttable" presumption, is an inference of law which holds good until it is invalidated by proof or a stronger presumption. Best, Pres. § 29; Livingston v. Livingston, 4 Johns.Ch., N.Y., 287, 8 Am.Dec. 562.

Mixed. There are also certain mixed presumptions, or presumptions of fact recognized by law, or presumptions of mixed law and fact. These are certain presumptive inferences, which, from their strength, importance, or frequent occurrence, attract, as it were, the observation of the law. The presumption of a "lost grant" falls within this class. Best, Ev. 436. See Dickson v. Wilkinson, 3 How. 57, 11 L.Ed. 491.

Distinction. The distinctions between presumptions of law and presumptions of fact are, first, that in regard to presumptions of law a certain inference must be made whenever the facts appear which furnish the basis of the inference; while in case of other presumptions a discretion more or less extensive is vested in the tribunal as to draw.. ing the inference. 9 B. & C. 643. Second, in case. of presumptions of law, the court may draw the inference whenever the requisite facts are developed in pleading; Steph. Pl. 382; while other presumptions can be made only by the intervention of a jury. Presumptions of law are reduced to fixed rules, and form a part of the system of jurisprudence to which they belong; presumptions of fact are derived wholly and directly from the circumstances of the particular case, by means of the common experience of mankind. 2 Stark. Ev. 684; Douglass v. Mitchell's Ex'r, 35 Pa. 440.

It has been suggested as the characteristic distinction between presumptions of law and presumptions of fact, either simple or mixed, that when the former are disregarded by a jury, a new trial is granted as matter of right, but that the disregard of any of the latter, however strong and obvious, is only ground for a new trial at the discretion of the court; Chamb.Best, Ev. § 327; 1 Term 167; Turnley v. Black, 44 Ala. 159; Goggans v. Monroe, 31 Ga. 331. A presumption of law is a juridical postulate that a particular predicate is universally assignable to a particular subject. A presumption of fact is a logical argument from a fact to a fact; or, as the distinction is sometimes put, it is an argument which infers a fact otherwise doubtful from a fact which is proved. 2 Whart.Ev. § 1226; Smith v. Gardner, 36 Neb. 741, 55 N.W. 245.

Presumptions are divided into prcesumptiones juris et de jure, otherwise called "irrebuttable presumptions," (often, but not necessarily, fictitious,) which the law will not suffer to be rebutted by any counter-evidence; as, that an infant under seven years is not responsible for his actions; prcesumptiones juris tantum, which hold good in the absence of counter-evidence, but against which counter-evidence may be admitted; and prcesumptiones hominis, which are not necessarily conclusive, though no proof to the contrary be adduced. Mozley & Whiteley.

A natural presumption is that species of presumption, or process of probable reasoning, which is exercised by persons of ordinary intelligence, in inferring one fact from another, without reference to any technical rules. Otherwise called "prcesumptio hominis." Burrill, Circ. Ev. 11, 12, 22, 24.

Legitimate presumptions have been denominated "violent" or "probable," according to the amount of weight which attaches to them. Such presumptions as are drawn from inadequate grounds are termed "light" or "rash" presumptions. Brown.

Evidence and Presumptions

Presumptions are evidence or have the effect of evidence. Brill v. Brill, 38 Cal.App.2d 741, 102 P. 2d 534, 537. Westberg v. Willde, 14 Ca1.2d 360, 94 P.2d 590, 593.

Examples are disputable presumptions. Clary v. Lindley, 30 Cal.App.2d 571, 86 P.2d 920, 921; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States v. Irelan, ' C.C.A.Mont., 123 F.2d 462, 464; legal presumption, Asbury v. Goldberg, 8 Cal.App.2d 70, 47 P.2d 311, 313. Presumption against suicide, Brown v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 233 Iowa 5, 7 N.W.2d 21, 24; presumption arising from doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, Vonault v. O'Rourke, 97 Mont. 92, 33 P.2d 535, 540; presumption from facts that automobile was driven by agent acting within scope of employment, Judson v. Bee Hive Auto Service Co., 136 Or. 1, 294 P. 588, 589; presumption of due execution of will in will contest, In re Stone's Estate, 59 Cal.App.2d 263, 138 P.2d 710, 713; presumption of exercise of care for own safety, Eastman v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 51 Cal.App.2d 653, 125 P.2d 564, 570; presumption of fairness and regularity of private transactions, Ross v. Real Estate Inv. Co., 135 Cal. App. 563, 28 P.2d 52, 54.

Presumption of innocence, Williams v. State, 30 Ala.App. 495, 8 So.2d 271, 274; presumption of negligence from driving on left side of highway, Temple v. De Mirjian, 51 Cal. App.2d 559, 125 P.2d 544, 546.

Presumption of ownership arising from possession, Lane v. Whitaker, 50 Cal.App.2d 327, 123 P.2d 53, 55; presumption that insured's wound causing death was not intentionally inflicted, Brown v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 233 Iowa 5, 7 N.W.2d 21, 24; rebuttable presumption, Graybiel v. Consolidated Ass'ns, Cal.App.2d 20, 60 P.2d 164, 167.

Presumptions are not "evidence". Walters v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., 318 Pa. 382, 178 A. 499, 501; McKiver v. Theo. Hamm Brewing Co., 67 S.D. 613, 297 N.W. 445; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States v. MacDonald, C.C.A.Wash., 96 F.2d 437, 439. Examples are presumption against partial intestacy, Heffenger v. Heffenger, 89 N.H. 530, 3 A.2d 95, 97; presumption against suicide, Jefferson Standard Life Ins. Co. v. Clemmer, C.C.A.Va., 79 F.2d 724, 730, 103 A.L.R. 171; Reliance Life Ins. Co. v. Burgess, C.C.A.Mo., 112 F.2d 234, 238; presumption arising under law, Dunn v. Goldman, 11 N.J.Misc. 833, 168 A. 299, 300; presumption of continuance of condition or status, State ex rel. Northwestern Development Corporation v. Gehrz, 230 Wis. 412, 283 N.W. 827, 832; Rupp v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, Mo.App., 170 S.W.2d 123, 128; presumption of due care, Morris v. Chicago, M., St. P. & P. R. Co., 1 Wash.2d 587, 97 P.2d 119, 127; Silvia v. Caizz, 63 R.I. 172, 7 A.2d 704, 707; presumption of fact, American Alliance Ins. Co. v. Brady Transfer & Storage Co., C.C.A. Iowa, 101 F.2d 144, 149; presumption of innocence, United States v. Nimerick, C.C.A.Vt., 118 F.2d 464, 467; British America Assur. Co. of Toronto, Canada v. Bowen, C.C.A. Okl., 134 F.2d 256, 259; presumption of negligence of railroad, St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Mangum, 199 Ark. 767, 136 S.W.2d 158, 160; Carter v. Kurn, C.C.A.Ark., 127 F.2d 415, 420; presumption of ownership from registration of motor vehicle, Pioneer Mut. Compensation Co. v. Diaz, 142 Tex. 184, 177 S.W.2d 202, 204; presumption that driver failed to see automobile because he was not looking, Page v. Lockley, Tex.Civ.App., 176 S.W.2d 991, 997; presumption that employee was acting in course of employment arising from evidence of ownership of automobile causing accident, Frick v. Bickel, 115 Ind.App. 114, 54 N.E.2d 436, 440; presumption that tax assessors in making valuation have done their duty, People ex rel. Wallington Apartments v. Miller, 288 N.Y. 31, 41 N.E.2d 445, 446; statutory presumptions, Kelly v. Hudson Coal Co., 119 Pa.Super. 405, 179 A. 753, 754; Allstaedt v. Ochs, 302 Mich. 232, 4 N.W.2d 530, 532.

A presumption is a substitute for evidence, Siler v. Siler, 152 Tenn. 379, 277 S.W. 886, 887; U. S. ex rel. Scharlon v. Pulver, C.C.A.N.Y., 54 F.2d 261, 263; but is not itself evidence, being rather an aid to legal reasoning applied to particular subjects; Van Ausdall v. Van Ausdall, 48 R.I. 106, 135 A. 850, 851. It is a rule about the duty of producing evidence. Duggan v. Bay State St. Ry. Co., 230 Mass. 370, 119 N.E. 757, 760, L.R.A.1918E, 680; 4 Wigm.Ev. §§ 2490, 2491, 2511. Presumptions will serve in the place of "evidence". Bohmont v. Moore, 138 Neb. 784, 295 N.W. 419, 424. While presumptions, in tort actions, that automobile was in possession of owner at time of accident and that taxicab was being operated in usual course of cab company's business, are not "evidence," they serve as evidence in proper case until overcome by competent evidence to contrary. Van Court v. Lodge Cab Co., 198 Wash. 530, 89 P.2d 206, 211.

PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE. Conclusion drawn by law in favor of one brought to trial on criminal charge, requiring acquittal unless guilt is established by sufficient evidence. Blim V. United States, C.C.A.Ill., 68 F.2d 484, 487.

PRESUMPTION OF SURVIVORSHIP. A presumption of fact, to the effect that one person survived another, applied for the purpose of determining a question of succession or similar matter, in a case where the two persons perished in the same catastrophe, and there are no circumstances extant to show which of them actually died first, except those on which the presumption is founded, viz., differences of age, sex, strength, or physical condition.

PRESUMPTIVE. Resting on presumption; created by or arising out of presumption; inferred; assumed; supposed; as, "presumptive" damages, evidence, heir, notice, or title. See those titles.

PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE. This term has several meanings in law. 1 Wig. Evi. § 25, n. 3.

(1) Any evidenee which is not direct and positive; the proof of minor or other facts incidental to or usually connected with the fact sought to be proved which, when taken together, inferentially establish or prove the fact in question to a reasonable degree of certainty; evidence drawn by human experience from the connection of cause and effect and observation of human conduct; the proof of facts from which, with more or less certainty, according to the experience of mankind of their more or less universal connection, the existence of other facts can be deduced. In this sense the term is nearly equivalent to "circumstantial"' evidence. See 1 Starkie, Ev. 558; 2 Saund. Pl. & Ev. 673; State v. Kornstett, 62 Kan. 221, 61 P. 805, 808; Ezzard v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 7 F.2d 808, 810. Best says presumptive evidence is as original as direct, and that presumption of a fact is as good as any other proof when it is legitimate. Jones v. Granite State Fire Ins. Co., 90 Me. 40, 37 A. 326, 328. "Circumstantial evidence" is sometimes used as synonymous with presumptive evidence, but not with strict accuracy; for presumptive evidence is not necessarily and in all cases what is usually understood by circumstantial evidence. See 1 Stark.Ev. 478; Whart.Ev. 1, 2, 15. The word presumption imports an inference from facts known, based upon previous experience of the ordinary connection between the two, and, the word itself implies a certain relation between fact and inference. Circumstances, however, generally but not necessarily lead to particular inferences; for the facts may be indisputable, and yet their relation to the principal fact may be only apparent, not real; and even where the connection is real, the deduction may be erroneous. Circumstantial and presumptive evidence differ therefore as genus and species. Will, Cir.Ev. 17.

(2) Evidence which must be received and treated as true and sufficient until rebutted by other testimony; as, where a , statute provides that certain facts shall be presumptive evidence of guilt, of title, etc. State v. Mitchell, 119 N.C. 784, 25 S.E. 783; State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 80 Me. 57, 12 A. 794.

(3) Also, it means evidence that admits of explanation or contradiction by other evidence, as distinguished from conclusive evidence. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 89. "Presumptive evidence" is synonymous with prima facie evidence. State v. Simon, 163 Minn. 317,. 203 N.W. 989, 990; Watson v. Rollins, 18 Ala. App. 125, 90 So. 60, 61. See, also, Presumption; Prima Fade Evidence.

PR T. In French law. Loan. A contract by which one of the parties delivers an article to the other, to be used by the latter, on condition of his returning, after having used it, the same article in nature or an equivalent of the same species and quality. Duverger.

PRET A INTEAT. Loan at interest. A contract by which one of the parties delivers to the other a sum of money, or commodities, or other movable or fungible things, to receive for their use a profit determined in favor of the lender. Duverger.

PRAT A USAGE. Loan to use. A contract by which one of the parties delivers an article to the other, to be used by the latter, the borrower agreeing to return the specific article after having used. it. Duverger. A contract identical with the commodatum (q. v.) of the civil law.

PRtT DE CONSOMMATION. Loan for consumption. A contract by which one party delivers to the other a certain quantity of things, such as are consumed in the use, on the undertaking of the borrower to return to him an equal quantity of the same species and quality. Duverger. A contract identical with the mutuum (q. v.) of the civil law.

PRRTE—NOM. One who lends his name. Peterson v. Moresi, 191 La. 932, 186 So. 737, 739.

PRETEND. To feign or simulate; to hold that out as real which is false or baseless. Brown v. Perez, Tex.Civ.App., 25 S.W. 983; King v. U. S., C.C.A.Fla., 279 F. 103. As to the rule against the buying and selling of "any pretended right or title," see Pretensed Right or Title.

PRETENSE. See False Pretenses.

PRETENSED, or PRETENDED, TITLE STATUTE. The English statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, § 2. It enacts that no one shall sell or purchase any pretended right or title to land, unless the vendor has received the profits thereof for one whole year before such grant, or has been in actual possession of the land, or of the reversion or remainder, on pain that both purchaser and vendor shall each forfeit the value of such land to the king and the prosecutor. See 4 Broom & H. Comm. 150.

PRETENSED RIGHT or TITLE. Where one is in possession of land, and another, who is out of possession, claims and sues for it. Here the pretensed right or title is said to be in him who so claims and sues for the same. Mod. Cas. 302.

PRETENSES. Allegations sometimes made in a bill in chancery for the purpose of negativing an anticipated defense. Hunt, Eq. pt. I. c. 1.

False pretenses. See that title.

PRETENTION. In French law. The claim made to a thing which a party believes himself entitled to demand, but which is not admitted or adjudged to be his.

The words right, action, and pretention are usually joined; not that they are synonymous, for'right is something positive and certain, action is what is demanded, while pretention is sometimes not even accompanied by a demand.

PRETER LEGAL. Not agreeable to law; exceeding the limits of law; not legal.

PRETERMIT. To "pretermit" is to pass by, to omit or to disregard, e. g., failure of testator to mention his children in his will.

PRETERMITTED HEIR. A child or other descendant omitted by a testator. Where a testator unintentionally fails to mention in his will, or make provision for, a child, either living at the date of the execution of the will or born thereafter, a statute may provide that such child, or the issue of a deceased child, shall share in the estate as though the testator had died intestate. In re Price's Estate, 56 Cal.App.2d 335, 132 P.2d 485.

PRETEXT. Ostensible reason or motive assigned or assumed as a color or cover for the real reason or motive; false appearance, pretense. State v. Ball, 27 Neb. 604, 43 N.W. 398.

In international law. A reason alleged as justificatory, but which is so only in appearance, or which is even absolutely destitute of all foundation. The name of "pretexts" may likewise be applied to reasons which are in themselves true and well-founded, but, not being of sufficient importance for undertaking a war, [or other international act,] are made use of only to cover ambitious views. Vatt. Law Nat. bk. 3, c. 3, § 32.

PRETIUM. Lat. Price; cost; value; the price of an article sold.

PRETIUM AFFECTIONIS. An imaginary value put upon a thing by the fancy of the owner, and growing out of his attachment for the specific article, its associations, his sentiment for the donor, etc. Bell; The H. F. Dimock, C.C.A.Mass., 77 F. 233, 23 C.C.A. 123; Burr v. Bloomsburg, 101 N.J. Eq. 615, 138 A. 876, 878.

PRETIUM PERICULL The price of the risk, e. g. the premium paid on a policy of insurance; also the interest paid on money advanced on bottomry or respondentia.

PRETIUM SEPULCHRI. A mortuary (q. v.).

PRETIUM SUCCEDIT IN LOCUM REI. The price stands in the place of the thing sold. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 939; 2 Bulst, 312.

PRETORIAL COURT. In the colony of Maryland, a court for the trial of capital crimes, consisting of the lord proprietor or his lieutenant-general, and the council. Also called Pretorial. Murray, New English Dict.

PRETORIUM, In Scotch law. A courthouse, or hall of justice. 3 How. State Tr. 425.

PREUVE. Fr. "Evidence" in the sense of the term in English law, and of probatio in the canon and civil law. The French word evidence, Latin evidentia, is commonly restricted to the testimony of the senses. 1 Best, Evid. § 11.

PREVAIL. To be or become effective or effectual, to be in force, to obtain, to be in general use or practice, to be commonly accepted or adopted; to exist. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Gamble, 155 Fla. 678, 21 So.2d 348, 350.

PREVAILING PARTY. That one of the parties to a suit who successfully prosecutes the action or successfully defends against it, prevailing on the main issue, even though not to the extent of his original contention. Weston v. Cushing, 45 Vt. 531; Hawkins v. Nowland, 53 Mo. 329; Huggins v. Hill, Mo.Sup., 236 S.W. 1054, 1055.

The one in whose favor the decision or verdict is rendered and judgment entered. United States v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., D.C.Minn., 235 F. 951, 955; Dunne v. New York Telephone Co., 176 N.Y.S. 519, 520, 107 Misc. 439; O'Hare v. Peacock Dairies, 28 Cal.App.2d 562, 82 P.2d 1112, 1113. The party ultimately prevailing when the matter is finally set at rest. Comparri v. James Readding, Inc., 121 N.J.L. 591, 3 A.2d 802, 803. The party prevailing in interest, and not necessarily the prevailing person. Gertz v. Milwaukee Electric Ry. & Light Co., 153 Wis. 475, 140 N.W. 312, 316. To be such does not depend upon the degree of success at different stages of the suit, but whether, at the end of the suit, or other proceeding, the party who has made a claim against the other, has successfully maintained it. Bangor & P. R. Co. v. Chamberlain, 60 Me. 286. Thus, where the court grants defendant a new trial after verdict for plaintiff, defendant is the "prevailing party" on that trial, and entitled to costs, although the plaintiff again gets verdict on retrial. Klock Produce Co. v. Diamond Ice & Storage Co., 98 Wash. 676, 168 P. 476, 478.

PREVAILING PRICES. This term, as used in a contract for the sale of paper which had no market price, as it required special manufacture and came only from one source, means such prices as were set by that source in the usual course of business, without undue enlargement of cost, and with a reasonable profit in addition. New York Oversea Co. v. China, Japan & South American Trading Co., 200 N.Y.S. 449, 451, 206 App.Div. 242.

PREVARICATION. In the civil law. The acting with unfaithfulness and want of probity; deceitful, crafty, or unfaithful conduct; particularly, such as is manifested in concealing a crime. Dig. 47, 15, 6.

In English law. A collusion between an informer and a defendant, in order to a feigned prosecution. Cowell. Any secret abuse committed in a public office or private commission; willful concealment or misrepresentation of truth, by giving evasive or equivocating evidence.

PREVENT. To hinder, frustrate, prohibit, impede, or preclude; to obstruct; to intercept. Burr v. Williams, 20 Ark. 185; Orme v. Atlas Gas and Oil Co., 217 Minn. 27, 13 N.W.2d 757, 761. To stop or intercept the approach, access, or performance of a thing. Webster, Diet.; U. S. v. Souders, 27 Fed.Cas.1,269; Green v. State, 109 Ga. 536, 35 S. E. 97.

PREVENTION. In the civil law. The right of a judge to take cognizance of an action over which he has concurrent jurisdiction with another judge.

In canon law. The right which a superior person or officer has to lay hold of, claim, or transact an affair prior to an inferior one, to whom otherwise it more immediately belongs. Wharton.

PREVENTION OF CRIMES ACT. The statute 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, passed for the purpose of securing a better supervision over habitual criminals. This act provides that a person who is for a second time convicted of crime may, on his second conviction, be subjected to police supervision for a period of seven years after the expiration of the punishment awarded him. Penalties are imposed on lodging-house keepers, etc., for harboring thieves or reputed thieves. There are also provisions relating to receivers of stolen property, and dealers in old metals who purchase the same in small quantities. This act repeals the habitual criminals act of 1869, (32 & 33 Vict. c. 99.) Brown.

PREVENTIVE JUSTICE. The system of measures taken by government with reference to the direct prevention of crime. It generally consists in obliging those persons whom there is probable ground to suspect of future misbehavior to give full assurance to the public that such offense as is apprehended shall not happen, by finding pledges or securities to keep the peace, or for their good behavior. 4 Bl. Comm. 251; 4 Steph. Comm. 290; Bradley v. Malen, 37 N.D. 295, 164 N.W. 24, 25.

PREVENTIVE SERVICE. The name given in England to the coast-guard, or armed police, forming a part of the customs service, and employed in the prevention and detection of smuggling.

PREVIOUS. Antecedent; prior. Webster, Dict. Sometimes limited in meaning to "next prior to"

or "next preceding." Syracuse Say. Bank v. Brown, 42 N.Y.S.2d 156, 158, 181 Misc. 999.

PREVIOUS INTENTIONS ARE JUDGED BY SUBSEQUENT ACTS. Dumont V. Smith, 4 Denio (N.Y.) 319, 320,

PREVIOUS QUESTION. In parliamentary practice, the question whether a vote shall be taken on the main issue, or not, brought forward before the main or real question is put by the speaker and for the purpose of avoiding, if the vote is in the negative, the putting of this question. The motion is in the form "that the question be now put," and the mover and seconder vote against it. It is described in May. Parl, Prac, 277.

In the house of representatives of the United States and in many state legislatures the object of moving the previous question is to cut off debate and secure immediately a vote on the question under consideration. Hinds, Precedents in the House of Repr.

PREVIOUSLY. An adverb of time, used in comparing an act or state named with another act or state, subsequent in order of time, for the purpose of asserting the priority of the first. Lebrecht v. Wilcoxon, 40 Iowa 94.

PREVISORS, STATUTE OF. A statute of 25 Edw. III. St. 6, for the protection of spiritual patrons against the pope. Maitl. Canon L. 69.

PRICE. Something which one ordinarily accepts voluntarily in exchange for something else. Herb v. Hallowell, 304 Pa. 128, 154 A. 582, 584. The consideration given for the purchase of a thing; Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. v. McCall Bros. Planting & Mfg. Co., 140 La. 763, 73 So. 857, 858;—usually in money; Embden State Bank v. Boyle, 50 N.D. 573, 196 N.W. 820, 821.

For "Fair Market Price," see that title.

Sum of money which an article is sold for; but this is simply because property is generally sold for money, not because the word has necessarily such a restricted meaning. Among writers on political economy, who use terms with philosophical accuracy, the word "price" is not always or even generally used as denoting the moneyed equivalent of property sold. They generally treat and regard price as the equivalent or compensation, in whatever form received, for property sold. The Latin word from which "price" is derived sometimes means "reward," "value," "estimation," "equivalent." Hudson Iron Co. v. Alger, 54 N.Y. 177. Amount which a prospective seller indicates as the sum for which he is willing to sell; market value. Ara v. Rutland, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W. 993, 994. The term may be synonymous with cost, Williams v. Hybskmann, 311 Mo. 332, 278 S.W. 377, 379; and with value, Southeastern Express Co. v. Nightingale, 33 Ga.App. 515, 126 S.E. 915, as well as with consideration, though price is not always identical either with consideration, Oregon Home Builders v. Crowley, 87 Or. 517, 170 P. 718, 721; or with value, Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Parsons, 51 Kan. 408, 32 P. 1083.

"Price" within ceiling price regulations of the Office of Price Administration is the amount paid by the purchaser. Boyles v. Stapleton, D.C.Colo., 53 F.Supp. 336, 340.

PRICE CURRENT. A list or enumeration of various articles of merchandise, with their prices, the duties, if any, payable thereon, when imported or exported, with the drawbacks occasionally allowed upon their exportation, etc. Wharton.

PRICE DISCRIMINATION. Within anti-trust laws selling to one at a price and refusing to sell to another at any price by one engaged in interstate commerce, in absence of reason for refusal to sell. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, 15 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.; Shaw's v. Wilson-Jones Co., D.C.Pa., 26 F. Supp, 713, 714, PRICE EXPECTANCY. In the moving picture industry, the minimum receipts which distributors expect to realize from the exhibition of pictures;—used interchangeably with "minimum sale" and "exhibition value." Export & Import Film Co. v. B. P. Schulberg Productions, 125 Misc, 756, 211 N.Y.S. 838, 839.

PRICKING FOR SHERIFFS. In England, when the yearly list of persons nominated for the office of sheriff is submitted to the sovereign, he takes a pin, and to insure impartiality, as it is said, lets the point of it fall upon one of the three names nominated for each county, etc., and the person upon whose name it chances to fall is sheriff for the ensuing year. This is called "pricking for sheriffs." Atk. Sher. 18.

PRICKING NOTE. Where goods intended to be exported are put direct from the station of the warehouse into a ship alongside, the exporter fills up a document to authorize the receiving the goods on board. This document is called a "pricking note," from a practice of pricking holes in the paper corresponding with the number of packages counted into the ship. Hamel, Cust. 181.

PRIDE GAVEL. A rent or tribute. Tayl. Gavelk. 112.

PRIEST. A minister of a church. A person in the second order of the ministry, as distinguished from bishops and deacons.

A pastor is a permanent official of a parish, and more than a priest, who holds a position of spiritual power without reference to locality. Dupont v. Pettelier, 120 Me. 114, 113 A. 11, 13.

PRIMA_FACIE, Lat. At first sight; on the first appearance; on the face of it; so far as can be judged from the first disclosure; presumably; a fact presumed to be true unless disproved by some evidence to the contrary. State ex rel. Herbert v. Whims, 68 Ohio App. 39, 38 N.E.2d 596, 599.

PRIMA FACIE CASE. Such as will suffice until contradicted and overcome by other evidence. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Wallace, 158 Or. 210, 75 P.2d 942, 947. A case which has proceeded upon sufficient proof to that stage where it will support finding if evidence to contrary is disregarded. In re Hoagland's Estate, 126 Neb. 377, 253 N.W. 416.

A litigating party is said to have a prima facie case when the evidence in his favor is sufficiently strong for his opponent to be called on to answer it. A prima facie case, then, is one which is established by sufficient evidence, and can be overthrown only by rebutting evidence adduced on the other side. In some cases the only question to be considered is whether there is a prima facie case or no. Thus a grand jury are bound to find a true bill of indictment, if the evidence before them creates a prima facie case against the accused; and for this purpose, therefore, it is not necessary for them to hear the evidence for the defense. Mozley & Whitley. And see State v. Hardelein, 169 Mo. 579, 70 S.W. 130; State v. Lawlor, 28 Minn. 216, 9 N.W. 698.

PRIMA FACIE EVIDENCE. Evidence good and sufficient on its face; such evidence as, in the judgment of the law, is sufficient to establish a given fact, or the group or chain of facts constituting the party's claim or defense, and which if not rebutted or contradicted, will remain sufficient. State v. Burlingame, 146 Mo. 207, 48 S.W. 72.

Evidence which suffices for the proof of a particular fact until contradicted and overcome by other evidence. Dodson v. Watson, 110 Tex. 355, 220 S.W. 771, 772, 11 A.L.R. 583. Evidence which, standing alone and unexplained, would maintain the proposition and warrant the conclusion to support which it is introduced. Gilmore v. Modern Brotherhood of America, 186 Mo.App. 445, 171 S.W. 629, 632. An inference or presumption of law, affirmative or negative of a fact, in the absence of proof, or until proof can be obtained or produced to overcome the inference. People v. Thacher, 1 Thomp. & C., N.Y., 167. A litigating party is said to have a prima facie case when the evidence in his favor is sufficiently strong for his opponent to be called on to answer it. A prima facie case, then, is one which is established by sufficient evidence, and can be overthrown only by rebutting evidence adduced on the other side. Mozley & Whitley. State v. Lawlor, 28 Minn. 216, 9 N.W. 698. A "prima facie case" is one which is apparently established by evidence adduced by plaintiff in support of his case up to the time such evidence stands unexplained and uncontradicted. Morrison v. Flowers, 308 Ill. 189, 139 N.E. 10, 12. A "prima facie case" is one in which the evidence in favor of a proposition is sufficient to support a finding in its favor, if all of the evidence to the contrary be disregarded. Schallert v. Boggs, Tex.Civ.App., 204 S.W. 1061, 1062. See, also, Presumptive Evidence.

PRIMA PARS ZEQUITATIS)EQUALITAS. The radical element of equity is equality.

PRIMA TONSURA. The first mowing; a grant of a right to have the first crop of grass. 1 Chit. Pr. 181.

PRIMIE IMPRESSIONIS. A case primce impressionis (of the first impression) is a case of a new kind, to which no established principle of law or precedent directly applies, and which must be decided entirely by reason as distinguished from authority.

PRIME PRECES. Lat. In the civil law. An imperial prerogative by which the emperor exercised the right of naming to the first prebend that became vacant after his accession, in every church of the empire. 1 Bl. Comm. 381.

PRIMAGE. In mercantile law. Formerly, a small allowance or compensation payable to the master and mariners of a ship or vessel; to the former for the use of his cables and ropes to discharge the goods of the merchant; to the latter for lading and unlading in any port or haven. Abb. Shipp. 404; Peters v. Speights, 4 Md. Ch. 381; Blake v. Morgan, 3 Mart. 0. S. (La.) 381. It is sometimes called the master's hat-money.

It is no longer, however, a gratuity to the master, unless especially stipulated; but it belongs to the owners or freighters, and is nothing but an increase of the freight rate. Carr v. Austin & N. W. R. Co., C.C.Tex., 14 F. 419.

PRIMARIA ECCLESIA. The mother church. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 118.

PRIMARY. First; principal; chief; leading. First in order of time, or development, or in intention. State v. Erickson, 44 S.D. 63, 182 N.W. 315, 316, 13 A.L.R. 1189.

As to primary "Conveyance," "Election," "Obligation," and "Vein," see those titles.

PRIMARY ALLEGATION. The opening pleading in a suit in the ecclesiastical court. It is also called a "primary plea."

PRIMARY DISPOSAL OF THE SOIL. In acts of congress admitting territories as states, and providing that no laws shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil, this means the disposal of it by the United States government when it parts with its title to private persons or corporations acquiring the right to a patent or deed in accordance with law. See Oury v. Goodwin, 3 Ariz. 255, 26 P. 377; Topeka Commercial Security Co. v. McPherson, 7 Okl. 332, 54 P. 489.

PRIMARY EVIDENCE. That kind of evidence which, under every possible circumstance, affords the greatest certainty of the fact in question. Thus, a written instrument is itself the best possible evidence of its existence and contents.

Primary evidence means original or first-hand evidence; the best evidence that the nature of the case admits of ; the evidence which is required in the first instance, and which must fail before secondary evidence can be admitted. That evidence which the nature of the case or question suggests as the proper means of ascertaining the truth. See Cross v. Baskett, 17 Or. 84, 21 P. 47; Scott v. State, 3 Tex. App. 103, 104. It is the particular means of proof which is the most natural and satisfactory of which the case admits, and includes the best evidence which is available to a party and procurable under the existing situation, and all evidence falling short of such standard, and which in its nature suggests there is better evidence of the same fact, is "secondary evidence." Best v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., Mo.App., 299 S.W. 118, 120. See, also, Best Evidence.

PRIMARY POWERS. The principal authority given by a principal to his agent. It differs from "mediate powers." Story, Ag. § 58.

PRIMARY PURPOSE. That which is first in intention; which is fundamental. State v. Erickson, 44 S.D. 63, 182 N.W. 315, 317, 13 A.L.R. 1189. The principal or fixed intention with which an act or course of conduct is undertaken. Carlson v. Carpenter Contractors' Ass'n, 224 Ill.App. 430, 447.

PRIMATE. A chief ecclesiastic; an archbishop who has jurisdiction over his province, or one of several metropolitans presiding over others. Exarch comes nearest to it in the Greek church. Thus the archbishop of Canterbury is styled "Primate of all England;" the archbishop of York is "Primate of England." Wharton.

PRIME, n. In French law. The price of the risk assumed by an insurer; premium of insurance. Emerig. Traite des Assur. c. 3, § 1, nn. 1, 2.

PRIME, v. To stand first or paramount; to take precedence or priority of; to outrank; as, in the sentence "taxes prime all other liens."

PRIME COST. The true price paid for goods upon a bona fide purchase. U. S. v. Sixteen Packages, 2 Mas. 53, Fed.Cas.No.16,303.

PRIME MINISTER. The responsible head of a ministry or executive government, especially of a monarchical government. Webster, Dict. In England, he is the head of the cabinet, and usually holds the office of First Lord of the Treasury. The office was unknown to the law until 1906, when the prime minister was accorded a place in the order of precedence. Lowell, Gov. of Engl. 68. "He is the principal executive of the British constitution, and the sovereign a cog in the mechanism." Bagehot.

PRIME SERJEANT. In English law. The king's first serjeant at law.

PRIMER. A law French word, signifying first; primary.

PRIMER ELECTION. A term used to signify first choice; e. g., the right of the eldest co-parcener to first choose a purpart.

PRIMER FINE. On suing out the writ or prcecipe called a "writ of covenant," there was due to the crown, by ancient prerogative, a primer fine, or a noble for every five marks of land sued for. That was one-tenth of the annual value. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 560.

PRIMER SEISIN. See Seisin.

PRIMICERIUS. In old English law. The first of any degree of men. 1 Mon. Angl. 838.

PRIMITI1E. In English law. First fruits; the first year's whole profits of a spiritual preferment. 1 Bl. Comm. 284.

PRIMITIVE OBLIGATION. See Obligation.

PRIMO BENEFICIO. Lat. A writ directing a grant of the first benefice in the sovereign's gift. Cowell.

PRIMO EXECUTIENDA EST VERBI VIS, NE SERMONIS VITIO OBSTRUATUR ORATIO, SIVE LEX SINE ARGUMENTIS. Co. Litt. 68. The full meaning of a word should be ascertained at the outset, in order that the sense may not be lost by defect of expression, and that the law be not without reasons [or arguments].

PRIMO VENIENTI. Lat. To the one first coming. An executor anciently paid debts as they were presented, whether the assets were sufficient to meet all debts or not. Stim. Law Gloss.

PRIMOGENITURE. The state of being the first-born among several children of the same parents; seniority by birth in the same family. The superior or exclusive right possessed by the eldest son, and particularly, his right to succeed to the estate of his ancestor, in right of his seniority by birth, to the exclusion of younger sons.

PRIMOGENITUS. Lat. In old English law. A first-born or eldest son. Bract. fol. 33; 1 Ves. 290; 3 Maule & S. 25; 8 Taunt. 468.

PRIMUM DECRETUM. Lat. In the canon law. The first decree; a preliminary decree granted on the non-appearance of a defendant, by which the plaintiff was put in possession of his goods, or of the thing itself which was demanded. Gilb. Forum Rom. 32, 33. In the courts of admiralty, this name is given to a provisional decree. Bacon, Abr. The Court of Admiralty (E).

PRINCE. In a general sense, a sovereign; the ruler of a nation or state. More particularly, the son of a king or emperor, or the issue of a royal family; as princes of the blood. The chief of any body of men. Webster; The Lucy H., D.C.Fla., 235 F. 610, 612.

Prince of Wales. A title given to the eldest son of the British sovereign or to the heir apparent to the crown. He is so created by letters patent, and is also created Earl of Chester. He is Duke of Cornwall by inheritance. Mary and Elizabeth, though each, at the time, was only heiress presumptive, were created Princesses of Wales by Henry VIII.

Princes and princesses of the royal blood. In English law. The younger sons and daughters of the sovereign, and other branches of the royal family who are not in the immediate line of succession.

PRINCEPS. Lat. In the civil law. The prince; the emperor.

PRINCEPS ET RESPUBLICA EX JUSTA CAUSA POSSUNT REM MEAM AUFERRE. 12 Coke, 13. The prince and the commonwealth, for a just cause, can take away my property.

PRINCEPS LEGIBUS SOLUTUS EST. The emperor is released from the laws; is not bound by the laws. Dig. 1, 3, 31; Halifax, Anal. pre[y]. vi, vii, note.

PRINCEPS MAVULT DOMESTICOS MILITES QUAM STIPENDIARIOS BELLICIS OPPONERE CASIBUS. Co. Litt. 69. A prince, in the chances of war, had better employ domestic than stipendiary troops.

PRINCESS ROYAL. In English law. The eldest daughter of the sovereign. 3 Steph. Comm. 450.

PRINCIPAL, adj. Chief; leading; most important or considerable; primary; original. Highest in rank, authority, character, importance, or degree. Bland v. Board of Trustees of Galt Joint Union High School Dist., 67 Cal.App. 784, 228 P. 395, 397.

As to principal "Challenge," "Contract," "Obligation," "Office," and "Vein," see those titles.

Principal establishment. In the law concerning domicile, the principal domestic establishment. Mosely v. Dabezies, 142 La. 256, 76 So. 705, 706.

Principal fact. In the law of evidence. A fact sought and proposed to be proved by evidence of other facts (termed "evidentiary facts") from which it is to be deduced by inference. A fact which is the principal and ultimate object of an inquiry, and respecting the existence of which a definite belief is required to be formed. 3 Benth. Jud. Ev. 3; Burrill, Circ. Ev. 3, 119.

PRINCIPAL, n. The source of authority or right. A superintendent, as of a school district. Williams v. School Dist. No. 189, 104 Wash. 659, 177 P. 635, 636. The capital sum of a debt or obligation, as distinguished from Interest or other additions to it. Christian v. Superior Court, 122 Cal. 117, 54 P. 518. The corpus or capital of an estate in contradistinction to the income; "income" being merely the fruit of capital. Carter v. Rector, 88 Old. 12, 210 P. 1035, 1037.

Criminal Law

A chief actor or perpetrator, or an alder and abettor actually or constructively present at the commission of the crime, as distinguished from an "accessory." At common law, a principal in the first degree is he that is the actor or absolute perpetrator of the crime; and, in the second degree, he who is present, aiding and abetting the fact to be done. 4 Bl. Comm. 34. Cooney v. Burke, 11 Neb. 258, 9 N.W. 57.

Neither a principal in the first degree nor one in the second degree need be actually present when the offense is consummated, Smith v. State, 21 Tex.App. 107, 17 S.W. 552; State v. Morey, 126 Me. 323, 138 A. 474, 475; for the presence of a principal in the second degree may be merely constructive; e. g., where he stays outside and keeps watch or guard, Pierce v. State, 130 Tenn. 24, 168 S.W. 851, 855, Ann.Cas.1916B, 137. In misdemeanors, anyone participating is a principal, Boggs v. Commonwealth, 218 Ky. 782, 292 S.W. 324, 325.

All persons acting together in, commission of offense, and persons advising or agreeing to commission thereof and present when committed, though not aiding therein, are principals. Stringfellow v. State, 111 Tex.Cr.R. 504, 14 S.W.2d 1031, 1032. A criminal offender is either a principal or an accessory. A principal is either the actor (i. e., the actual perpetrator of the crime) or else is present, aiding and abetting, the fact to be done; an accessory is he who is not the chief actor in the offense, nor yet present at its performance, but is some way concerned therein, either before or after the fact committed. 1 Hale, P.C. 613, 618; People v. Ah Gee, 37 Cal.App. 1, 174 P. 371, 372. All persons concerned in the commission of crime, whether it be felony or misdemeanor, and whether they directly commit the act constituting the offense, or aid and abet in its commission, though not present, are principals. State v. Curtis, 30 Idaho 537, 165 P. 999, 1000. Some of these statutes, and other similar ones, expressly abrogate the common-law distinction between a principal and an accessory before the fact. People v. Wood, 56 Cal.App. 431, 205 P. 698. All persons are principals who are guilty of acting together in the commission of an offense. Vernon's Ann.P.C. art. 66. A principal is one who advises or agrees to the commission of an offense, and is present when it is done. Vernon's Ann.P.C. art. 69. See Pizana v. State, 81 Tex.Cr.R. 81, 193 S.W. 671, 673; Middleton v. State, 86 Tex.Cr.R. 307, 217 S.W. 1046, 1052. "Accomplice," by virtue of statute in Vernon's Ann.P.C. art. 70, means one who is not present at the commission of the offense, Serrato v. State, 74 Tex.Cr.R. 413, 171 S.W. 1133, 1144, and is practically synonymous with the common-law accessory before the fact. McKeen v. State, 7 Tex.Cr.R. 631; Strong v. State, 52 Tex.Cr.R. 13.3, 105 S.W. 785. But the ordinary meaning of "accomplice" includes all the particeps criminis, whether principals in the first or second degree or mere accessories. It means one who at common law might have been convicted either as principal or accessory before the fact. People v. Crossman, 241 N.Y. 138, 149 N.E. 330, 331.

Law of Agency

The employer or constitutor of an agent; the person who gives authority to an agent or attorney to do some act for him. Adams v. Whittlesey, 3 Conn. 567. Called also constituent or chief. Mech. Agency § 3. One, who, being competent sui juris to do any act for his own benefit or on his own account, confides it to another person to do for him. 1 Domat, b. 1, tit. 15.

Law of Guaranty and Suretyship

The person primarily liable, for whose performance of his obligation the guarantor or surety has become bound. See Rollings v. Gunter, 211 Ala. 671, 101 So. 446, 448.

Old English Law

An heir-loom, mortuary, or corse-present. Wharton.

Property Law

A term used as the correlative of "accessory" or "incident" to denote the more important or valuable subject, with which others are connected in a relation of dependence or subservience, or to which they are incident or appurtenant. Thus, it is said that the incident shall pass by the grant of the principal; but not the principal by the grant of the incident. Co. Litt. 152a.

General

Principal of the house. In, English law. The chief person in some of the inns of chancery.

Undisclosed principal. One not disclosed in the contract. Unruh v. Roemer, 135 Minn. 127, 160 N.W. 251, 252.

Vice principal. In the law of master and servant, this term means one to whom the employer has confided the entire charge of the business or of a distinct branch of it, giving him authority to superintend, direct, and control the workmen and make them obey his orders, the master himself exercising no particular oversight and giving no particular orders, or one to whom the master has delegated a duty of his own, which is a direct, personal, and absolute obligation. Durkin v. Kingston Coal Co., 171 Pa. 193, 33 A. 237, 29 L.R.A. 808, 50 Am.St.Rep. 801.

The term "vice principal," as used in the fellow-servant law, includes any servant who represents the master in the discharge of those personal or absolute duties which every master owes to his servants; such duties being often referred to as the nonassignable duties of the master, among which are, providing suitable machinery and appliances, a safe place to work, the proper inspection and repair of premises and appliances, the selection and retention of suitable servants, the establishment of proper rules and regulations, and the instruction of servants as to the kind and manner of work to be done by them. International Cotton Mills v. Webb, 22 Ga.App. 309, 96 S.E. 16; Wolverine Oil Co. v. Kingsbury, 66 Okl. 271, 168 P. 1021, 1022. To make a servant a vice principal, it is only necessary that he have authority to direct and supervise the work and to hire and discharge subordinate servants engaged in the work. Modern Order of Praetorians v. Nelson, Tex.Civ.App., 162 S.W. 17, 18; Daggett v. American Car & Foundry Co., Mo.App., 284 S.W. 855, 856. However, a servant may be a vice principal, though he has no power to employ and discharge men under him. Wilson v. Counsell, 182 Ill.App. 79, 84.

PRINCIPALIS. Lat. Principal; a principal debtor; a principal in a crime.

PRINCIPALIS DEBET SEMPER EXCUTI ANTEQUAM PERVENIATUR AD FIDEIJUSSORES. The principal should always be exhausted before coming upon the sureties. 2 Inst. 19.

PRINCIPIA DATA SEQUUNTUR CONCOMITANTIA. Given principles are followed by their concomitants.

PRINCIPIA PROBANT, NON PROBANTUR. Principles prove; they are not proved. Fundamental principles require no proof; or, in Lord Coke's words, "they ought to be approved, because they cannot be proved." 3 Coke, 50a.

PRINCIPIIS OBSTA. Withstand beginnings; oppose a thing in its early stages, if you would do so with success. Branch, Princ.

PRINCIPIORUM NON EST RATIO. There is no reasoning of principles; no argument is required to prove fundamental rules. 2 Bulst. 239.

PRINCIPIUM EST POTISSIMA PARS CUJUSQUE REI. 10 Coke, 49. The principle of anything is its most powerful part.

PRINCIPLE. A fundamental truth or doctrine, as of law; a comprehensive rule or doctrine which furnishes a basis or origin for others; a settled rule of action, procedure, or legal determination. A truth or proposition so clear that it cannot be proved or contradicted unless by a proposition which is still clearer. That which constitutes the essence of a body or its constituent parts. 8 Term 107. That which pertains to the theoretical part of a science. Hemler v. Richland Parish School Board, 142 La. 133, 76 So. 585, 587.

In patent law. The principle of a machine is the particular means of producing a given result by a mechanical contrivance. Parker v. Stiles, 5 McLean 44, 63, Fed.Cas.No.10,749. It is the modus operandi, or that which applies, modifies, or combines mechanical powers to produce a certain result; and, so far, a principle, if new in its application to a useful purpose, may be patentable. Barrett v. Hall, 1 Mason, 470, Fed.Cas.No. 1,047. The word "principles," as applied to inventions, designate those elements which in combination compose the claims. Schweyer Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Regan Safety Devices Co., C.C.A. N.Y., 4 F.2d 970, 973.

PRINT, n. A term which includes most of the forms of figures or characters or representations, colored or uncolored, that may be impressed on a yielding surface. U. S. v. Harman, D.C.Kan., 38 F. 827, 829.

PRINT, v. To stamp by direct pressure as from the face of types, plates, or blocks covered with ink or pigments, or to impress with transferred characters or delineations by the exercise of force as with a press or other mechanical agency. Acme Coal Co. v. Northrup Nat. Bank of Iola, Kan., 23 Wyo. 66, 146 P. 593, L.R.A. 1915D, 1084.

The term properly refers to the mechanical work of production, whereas "publish" pertains to the issuance from the place where printed. In re Monrovia Evening Post, 199 Cal. 263, 248 P. 1017, 1018; In re McDonald, 187 Cal. 158, 201 P. 110, 111. But a finding that a newspaper is "published" in a certain county may be deemed sufficient to show that it was "printed" in such county. McCormick v. Higgins, 190 Ill.App. 241, 261. Similarly, a requirement that matter be "printed" in a particular county may be construed as a direction that it be "published" there. In re Publication of Docket of Supreme Court, Mo. Sup., 232 S.W. 454, 455.

PRINTING. The impress of letters or characters upon paper, or upon other substance;—implying a mechanical act. Daly v. Beery, 178 N.W. 104, 106, 45 N.D. 287. The art of impressing letters; the art of making books or papers by impressing legible characters. Arthur v. Moller, 97 U.S. 365, 24 L.Ed. 1046; Le Roy v. Jamison, 15 Fed.Cas. 373; Forbes Lithograph Mfg. Co. v. Worthington, C.C.Mass., 25 F. 899, 900.

The term may include typewriting. Sunday v. Hagenbuch, 18 Pa.Co.Ct. 540, 541. Compare State v. Oakland, 69 Kan. 784, 77 P. 696. It may also include mimeographing within the meaning of the copyright statutes. Macmillan Co. v. King, D.C.Mass., 223 F. 862, 867.

Printing paper. This term does not necessarily include news print paper. Davis v. Age-Herald Pub. Co., C.C.A.Ala., 293 F. 591, 593 (taritr of an interstate carrier).

Public printing. Such as is directly ordered by the legislature, or performed by the agents of the government authorized to procure it to be done. Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1.

PRIOR. Lat. The former; earlier; preceding; preferable or preferred.

Prior petens. The person first applying.

PRIOR, n. The chief of a convent; next in dignity to an abbot.

PRIOR, adj. Earlier; elder; preceding; superior in rank, right, or time; as, a prior lien, mortgage, or judgment. See Fidelity Insurance, Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co., C.C.Va., 81 F. 439, 447.

Prior creditor. Generally, the creditor who is accorded priority in payment from the assets of his debtor. Richey v. Ferguson, 93 Kan. 152, 143 P. 497.

PRIOR LIEN. This term commonly denotes a first or superior lien, and not one necessarily antecedent in time. Titus v. United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Exploration Co., D.C.N.Y., 231 F. 205, 210.

PRIOR TEMPORE POTIOR JURE. He who is first in time is preferred in right. Co. Litt. 14a; Broom, Max. 354, 358; 2 P. Wms. 491; 1 Term 733; 9 Wheat. 24, 6 L.Ed. 23; 15 A. (Pa.) 730.

PRIORI PETENTI. To the person first applying. In probate practice, where there are several persons equally entitled to a grant of administration, (e. g., next of kin of the same degree,) the rule of the court is to make the grant priori petenti, to the first applicant. Browne, Prob. Pr. 174; Coote, Prob. Pr. 173, 180.

PRIORITY. Precedence; going before. A legal preference or precedence. When two persons have similar rights in respect of the same subject-matter, but one is entitled to exercise his right to the exclusion of the other, he is said to have priority.

In old English law. An antiquity of tenure, in comparison with one not so ancient. Cowell.

PRISAGE. An ancient hereditary revenue of the crown, consisting in the right to take a certain quantity from cargoes of wine imported into England. In Edward I.'s reign it was converted into a pecuniary duty called "butlerage." 2 Steph. Comm. 561.

PRISE, Fr. In French law. Prize; captured property. Ord. Mar. liv. 3, tit. 9. Dole v. Insurance Co., 6 Allen (Mass.) 373.

PRISEL EN AUTER LIEU. L. Fr. A taking in another place. A plea in abatement in the action of replevin. 2 Ld. Raym. 1016, 1017.

PRISON. A public building or other place for the confinement or safe custody of persons, whether as a punishment imposed by the law or otherwise in the course of the administration of justice. Sturtevant v. Com., 158 Mass. 598, 33 N.E. 648; Copeland v. Commonwealth, 214 Ky. 209, 282 S.W. 1077.

The words "prison" and "penitentiary" are used synonymously to designate institutions for the imprisonment of persons convicted of the more serious crimes, as distinguished from reformatories and county or city jails. State v. Delmonto, 110 Conn. 298, 147 A. 825, 826.

Originally it was distinguished from jail, which was a place for confinement, not for punishment, and the popular modern tendency is to use the term in contradistinction to jail, to denote particularly a state penitentiary. Copeland v. Commonwealth, 282 S.W. 1077,. 214 Ky. 209. But the term may also properly apply to a county jail. State v. Killian, 173 N.C. 792, 92 S.E. 499, 501.

As used in a statute pertaining to escapes, the word may include territory outside a state prison, where an inmate, when at work outside, is under the surveillance of prison guards. People v. Vanderburg, 67 Cal.App. 217, 227 P. 621.

PRISON BOUNDS. The limits of the territory surrounding a prison, within which an imprisoned debtor, who is out on bonds, may go at will. See Gaol.

PRISON BREAKING, or BREACH. The common-law offense of one who, being lawfully in custody, escapes from the place where he is confined, by the employment of force and violence. This offense is to be distinguished from "rescue," (q. v.,) which is a deliverance of a prisoner from lawful custody by a third person. 2 Bish. Crim. Law, § 1065.

PRISONAM FRANGENTIBUS, STATUTE DE. The English statute 1 Edw. II. St. 2, (in Rev. St. 23 Edw. I.,) whereby it is felony for a felon to break prison, but misdemeanor only for a misdemeanant to do so. 1 Hale, P. C. 612.

PRISONER. One who is deprived of his liberty; one who is against his will kept in confinement or custody. U. S. v. Curran, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 946, 950. A person restrained of his liberty upon any action, civil or criminal, or upon commandment. Cowell.

A person on trial for crime. "The prisoner at the bar." The jurors are told to "look upon the prisoner." The court, after passing sentence, gives order: to "remove the prisoner." Hairston v. Corn., 97 Va. 754, 32 S.E. 797.

PRISONER AT THE BAR. An accused person, while on trial before the court, is so called. One accused of crime, who is actually on trial, is in legal effect a "prisoner at the bar," notwithstanding he has given bond for his appearance at the trial. He is a "prisoner" if held in custody either under bond or other process of law, or when physically held under arrest, and when actually on trial he is a "prisoner at the bar." The term is as applicable to one on trial for a misdemeanor as for a felony. Allen v. State, 18 Ga.App. 1, 88 S.E. 100.

PRISONER OF WAR. One who has been captured in war while fighting in the army of the public enemy.

PRIST. L. Fr. Ready. In the old forms of oral pleading, this term expressed a tender or joinder of issue.

PRIUS VITIIS LABORAVIMUS, NUNC LEGIBUS. 4 Inst. 76. We labored first with vices, now with laws.

PRIVACY, RIGHT OF. The right to be let alone, the right of a person to be free from unwarranted publicity. Holloman v. Life Ins. Co. of Virginia, 192 S.C. 454, 7 S.E.2d 169, 171, 127 A.L.R. 110. The right of an individual (or corporation) to withhold himself and his property from public scrutiny, if he so chooses. It is said to exist only so far as its assertion is consistent with law or public policy, and in a proper case equity will interfere, if there is no remedy at law, to prevent an injury threatened by the invasion of, or infringement upon, this right from motives of curiosity, gain, or malice. Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 44 S.Ct. 336, 264 U.S. 298, 68 L.Ed. 696, 32 A.L.R. 786.

PRIVATE. Affecting or belonging to private individuals, as distinct from the public generally. Not official; not clothed with office. People v. Powell, 280 Mich. 699, 274 N.W. 372, 373, 111 A.L.R. 721.

As to private "Act," "Agent," "Bill," "Boundary," "Bridge," "Business," "Carrier," "Chapel," "Corporation," "Detective," "Dwelling House," "Easement," "Examination," "Ferry," "Nuisance," "Pond," "Property," "Prosecutor," "Rights," "Road," "Sale," "School," "Seal," "Statute," "Stream," "Trust," "Water," "War," "Way," `Wharf," and "Wrongs," see those titles.

PRIVATE BILL OFFICE. An office of the British parliament where the business of securing private acts of parliament is conducted.

PRIVATE EXAMINATION. An examination or interrogation, by a magistrate, of a married woman who is grantor in a deed or other conveyance, held out of the presence of her husband, for the purpose of ascertaining whether her will in the matter is free and unconstrained. Hadley v. Geiger, 9 N.J.L. 233.

PRIVATE INTERNATIONAL LAW. A name used by some writers to indicate that branch of the law which is now more commonly called "Conflict of Laws" (q. v.).

PRIVATE LAW. As used in contradistinction to public law, the term means all that part of the law which is administered between citizen and citizen, or which is concerned with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See Public Law.

PRIVATE PERSON. An individual who is not the incumbent of an office.

PRIVATE STREET. Literally speaking, this is an impossibility, for no way can be both private and a street. It may be one or the other, but not both. Greil v. Stollenwerck, 201 Ala. 303, 78 So. 79, 82.

PRIVATEER. A vessel owned, equipped, and armed by one or more private individuals, and duly commissioned by a belligerent power to go on cruises and make war upon the enemy, usually by preying on his commerce. A private vessel commissioned by the state by the issue of a letter of marque to its owner to carry on all hostilities by sea, presumably according to the laws of war. Formerly a 'state issued letters of marque to its own subjects, and to those of neutral states as well, but a privateersman who accepted letters of marque from both belligerents was regarded as a pirate. By the Declaration of Paris (April, 1856), privateering was abolished, but the United States, Spain, Mexico, and Venezuela did not accede to this declaration. It has been thought that the constitutional provision empowering Congress to issue letters of marque deprives it of the power to join in a permanent treaty abolishing privateering. 28 Am.L.Rev. 615; 24 Am.L.Rev. 902; 19 Law Mag. & Rev. 35.

PRIVATIO PRIESUPPONIT HABITUM. 2 Rolle, 419. A deprivation presupposes a possession.

PRIVATION. A taking away or withdrawing. Co. Litt. 239.

PRIVATIS PACTIONIBUS NON DUBIUM EST NON LIEDI JUS CIETERORUM. There is no doubt that the rights of others [third parties] cannot be prejudiced by private agreements. Dig. 2, 15, 3, pr.; Broom, Max. 697.

PRIVATORUM CONVENTIO JURI PUBLICO NON DEROGAT. The agreement of private individuals does not derogate from the public right, [law.] Dig. 50, 17, 45, 1; 9 Coke, 141; Broom, Max. 695.

PRIVATUM. Lat. Private. Privatum jus, private law. Inst. 1, 1, 4.

PRIVATUM COMMODUM PUBLICO CEDIT. Private good yields to public. The interest of an individual should give place to the public good. Jenk. Cent. p. 223, case 80.

PRIVATUM INCOMMODUM PUBLICO BONO PENSATUR. Private inconvenience is made up for by public benefit. Jenk. Cent. p. 85, case 65; Broom, Max. 7.

PRIVEMENT ENCEINTE. Fr. Pregnant privately. A term used to signify that a woman is pregnant, but not yet quick with child.

PRIVIES. Those who are partakers or have an interest in- any action or thing, or any relation to another. Harrington v. Harrington, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 701, 717; Brown v. Fidelity Union Trust Co., 126 N.J.Eq. 406, 9 A.2d 311, 326; Hamelik v. Sypek, 274 N.Y.S. 875, 152 Misc. 799. They are of six kinds:

(1) Privies of blood; such as the heir to his ancestor.

(2) Privies in representation; as executors or administrators to their deceased testator or intestate.

(3) Privies in estate ; as grantor and grantee, lessor and lessee, assignor and assignee, etc.

(4) Privies in respect to contract.

(5) Privies in respect of estate and contract; as where the lessee assigns his interest, but the contract between lessor and lessee continues, the lessor not having accepted of the assignee.

(6) Privies in law; as the lord by escheat, a tenant by the curtesy, or in dower, the incumbent of a benefice, a husband suing or defending in right of his wife, etc. Wharton; H. Weston Lumber Co. v. Lacey Lumber Co., 85 So. 193, 195, 123 Miss. 208, 10 A.L.R. 436.

"Privies," in the sense that they are bound by tire judgment, are those who acquired an interest in the subject-matter after the rendition of the judgment. Village Mills Co. v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 186 S.W. 785, 790; Central Oregon Irr. Co. v. Young, 107 Or. 39, 213 P. 782, 784. "Privies" to a judgment are those whose succession to the rights of property affected occurs after the institution of the suit and form a party to it. Gill v. Porter, 176 N.C. 451, 97 S.E. 381, 382; Lancaster v. Borkowski, 179 Wis. 1, 190 N.W. 852, 854.

PRIVIGNA. Lat. In the civil law. A step-daughter.

PRIVIGNUS. Lat. In the civil law. A son of a husband or wife by a former marriage; a step-son. Calvin.

PRIVILEGE. A particular and peculiar benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class, beyond the common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A right, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, against or beyond the course of the law. Waterloo Water Co. v. Village of Waterloo, 193 N.Y.S. 360, 362, 200 App.Div. 718; Colonial Motor Coach Corporation v. City of Oswego, 215 N.Y.S. 159, 163, 126 Misc. 829; Cope v. Flanery, 234 P. 845, 849, 70 Cal.App. 738; Bank of Commerce & Trust Co. v. Senter, 260 S.W. 144, 147, 149 Tenn. 569; State v. Betts, 24 N.J.L. 557.

An exemption from some burden or attendance, with which certain persons are indulged, from a supposition of law that the stations they fill, or the offices they are engaged in, are such as require all their time and care, and that, therefore, without this indulgence, it would be impracticable to execute such offices to that advantage which the public good requires. Dike v. State, 38 Minn. 366, 38 N.W. 95; International Trust Co. v. American L. & T. Co., 62 Minn. 501, 65 N.W. 78. State v. Gilman, 33 W.Va. 146, 10 S.E. 283, 6 L.R.A. 847. That which releases one from the performance of a duty or obligation, or exempts one from a liability which he would otherwise be required to perform, or sustain in common with all other persons. State v. Grosnickle, 189 Wis. 17, 206 N.W. 895, 896. A peculiar advantage, exemption, or immunity. Sacramento Orphanage & Children's Home v. Chambers, 25 Cal.App. 536, 144 P. 317, 319.

Civil Law

A right which the nature of a debt gives to a creditor, and which entitles him to be preferred before other creditors. Civil Code La. art. 3186. It is merely an accessory of the debt which it secures, and falls with the extinguishment of the debt. A. Baldwin & Co. v. McCain, 159 La. 966, 106 So. 459, 460. The civil-law privilege became, by adoption of the admiralty courts, the admiralty lien. Howe, Stud. Civ. L. 89; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U.S. 1, 13 S.Ct. 498, 37 L.Ed. 345.

Exclusive Privilege

See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise.

Law of Libel and Slander

An exemption from liability for the speaking or publishing of defamatory words concerning another, based on the fact that the statement was made in the performance of a duty, political, judicial, social, or personal. Privilege is either absolute or conditional. The former protects the speaker or publisher without reference to his motives or the truth or falsity of the statement. This may be claimed in respect, for instance, to statements made in legislative debates, in reports of military officers to their superiors in the line of their duty, and statements made by judges, witnesses, and jurors in trials in court. Conditional privilege (called also "qualified privilege") will protect the speaker or publisher unless actual malice and knowledge of the falsity of the statement is shown. This may be claimed where the communication related to a matter of public interest, or where it was necessary to protect one's private interest and was made to a person having an interest in the same matter. Hill v. Drainage Co., 79 Hun, 335, 29 N.Y.S. 427; Cooley v. Galyon, 109 Tenn. 1, 70 S.W. 607, 60 L.R.A. 139, 97 Am.St.Rep. 823.

"Absolute privilege" is confined to cases in which the public service or the administration of justice requires complete immunity from being called to account for language used. Taber v. Aransas Harbor Terminal Ry., Tex. Civ.App., 219 S.W. 860, 861. It is based upon the theory that the publication of defamatory matter must be protected in the interest of and for the necessities of society, even though it be both false and malicious. Light Pub. Co. v. Huntress, Tex.Civ.App., 199 S.W. 1168, 1171.

"Qualified privilege" extends to all communications made in good faith upon any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest or in reference to which he has a duty to a person having a corresponding interest or duty, although the duty be not a legal one, but of a moral or social character of imperfect obligation and it arises from the necessity of full and unrestricted communication concerning a matter in which the parties have an interest or duty. Southern Ice Co. v. Black, 136 Tenn. 391, 189 S.W. 861, 863, Ann.Cas.1917E, 695.

Maritime Law

An allowance to the master of a ship of the same general nature with primage, being compensation, or rather a gratuity, customary in certain trades, and which the law assumes to be a fair and equitable allowance, because the contract on both sides is made under the knowledge of such usage by the parties. 3 Chit. Commer. Law, 431,

Parliamentary Law

The right of a particular question, motion, ar statement to take precedence over all other business before the house and to be considered immediately, notwithstanding any consequent interference with or setting aside the rules of procedure adopted by the house. The matter may be one of "personal privilege," where it concerns one member of the house in his capacity as a legislator, or of the "privilege of the house," where it concerns the rights, immunities, or dignity of the entire body, or of "constitutional privilege," where it relates to some action to be taken or some order of proceeding expressly enjoined by the constitution.

General

Privilege from arrest. A privilege extended to certain classes of persons, either by the rules of international law, the policy of the law, or the necessities of justice or of the administration of government, whereby they are exempted from arrest on civil process, and, in some cases, on criminal charges, either permanently, as 4n the case of a foreign minister and his suite, or temporarily, as in the case of members of the legislature, parties and witnesses engaged in a particular suit, etc. 1 Kent 243; 8 R. I. 43; 2 Stra. 985; 1 M. & W. 488; Parker v. Marco, 136 N.Y. 585, 32 N.E. 989, 20 L.R.A. 45, 32 Am.St.Rep. 770.

Privilege of transit. In railroading, the right of a shipper to have a car stopped at some intermediate point, the commodity shipped unloaded and treated or changed into some other form, and then reloaded and shipped to its destination as though it had been a continuous shipment and at the same rate as originally billed. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, 47 S.D. 395, 199 N.W. 453, 454.

Privilege tax. A tax on the privilege of carrying on a business for which a license or franchise is required. Southeastern Express Co. v. City of Charlotte, 186 N.C. 668, 120 S.E. 475, 477; Gulf & Ship Island R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U.S. 66, 22 S. Ct. 26, 46 L.Ed. 86.

Privileges and immunities. Within the meaning of the 14th amendment of the United States constitution, such privileges as are fundamental, which belong to the citizens of all free governments and which have at all times been enjoyed by citizens of the United States. La Tourette v. McMaster, 104 S.C. 501, 89 S.E. 398, 399. They are only those which owe their existence to the federal government, its national character, its Constitution, or its laws. Ownbey v. Morgan, 256 U. S. 94, 41 S.Ct. 433, 65 L.Ed. 837, 17 A.L.R. 873; Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Cheek, 25 U.S. 530, 42 S.Ct. 516, 520, 66 L.Ed. 1044, 27 A.L.R. 27; Rosenthal v. New York, 33 S.Ct. 27, 226 U.S. 260, 57 L.Ed. 212, Ann.Cas.1914B, 71.

Real privilege. In English law. A privilege granted to, or concerning, a particular place or locality.

Special privilege. In constitutional law. A right, power, franchise, immunity, or privilege granted to, or vested in, a person or class of persons, to the exclusion of others, and in derogation of common right. Plattsmouth v. Nebraska Teleph. Co., 80 Neb. 460, 114 N.W. 588, 14 L.R.A., N.S., 654, 127 Am.St.Rep. 779.

Writ of privilege. A process to enforce or maintain a privilege; particularly to secure the release of a person arrested in a civil suit contrary to his privilege.

PRIVILEGED. Possessing or enjoying a privilege; exempt from burdens; entitled to priority or precedence.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS. See Communication.

PRIVILEGED COPYHOLDS. See Copyhold.

PRIVILEGED DEBTS. Those which an executor or administrator, trustee in bankruptcy, and the like, may pay in preference to others; such as funeral expenses, servants' wages, and doctors' bills during last sickness, etc.

PRIVILEGED DEED, In Scotch law. An instrument, for example, a testament, in the execution of which certain statutory formalities usually required are dispensed with, either from necessity or expediency. Ersk.Inst. 3, 2, 22; Bell.

PRIVILEGED VESSEL. That one of two vessels which, as against the other, ordinarily has the right or duty to hold her course and speed. Under International Rules, arts. 20, 22 (33 U.S.C.A. §§ 105, 107), a sailing vessel, except when the overtaking vessel, is always the privileged vessel, as against a steamer. The Buenos Aires, C.C.A. N.Y., 5 F.2d 425, affirming, D.C.N.Y., The Windrush, 286 F. 251. But the fact that a vessel is privileged does not excuse her from failing to observe the rules, inattention to signals, or failure to answer where an answer is required, or from adopting such precautions as may be necessary to avoid a collision. The West Hartland, C.C.A.Wash., 2 F. 2d 834.

PRIVILEGED VILLENAGE. In old English law. A species of villenage in which the tenants held by certain and determinate services; otherwise called "villein-socage." Bract. fol. 209. Now called "privileged copyhold," incuding the tenure in ancient demesne. 2 Bl.Comm. 99, 100.

PRIVILEGIA QUIE RE VERA SUNT IN PRZEJUDICIUM REIPUBLICIE, MAGIS TAMEN HABENT SPECIOSA FRONTISPICIA, ET BONI PUBLICI PRZETEXTUM, QUAM BONZE ET LEGALES CONCESSIONES; SED PRZETEXTU LICIT' NON DEBET ADMITTI ILLICTUM. 11 Coke, 88. Privileges which are truly in prejudice of public good have, however, a more specious front and pretext of public good than good and legal grants; but, under pretext of legality, that which is illegal ought not to be admitted.

PRIVILEGIUM. In Roman law. A special constitution by which the Roman emperor conferred on some single person some anomalous or irregular right, or imposed upon some single person some anomalous or irregular obligation, or inflicted on some single person some anomalous or irregular punishment. When such privilegia conferred anomalous rights, they were styled "favorable." When they imposed anomalous obligations, or inflicted anomalous punishments, they were styled "odious." Aust.Jur. § 748. A private law inflicting a punishment or conferring a reward. Calvinus, Lex.; Cicero, de Lege, 3, 19; pro Domo 17; Vicat, Voc.Jur.

In modern civil law. Every peculiar right or favor granted by the law, contrary to the common rule. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 197. A species of lien or claim upon an article of property, not dependent upon possession, but continuing until either satisfied or released. Such is the lien, recognized by modern maritime law, of seamen upon the ship for their wages. 2 Pars. Mar. Law, 561.

PRIVILEGIUM CLERICALE. The benefit of clergy, (q. v.).

PRIVILEGIUM EST BENEFICIUM PERSONALE, ET EXTINGUITUR CUM PERSONA. 3 Bulst. 8. A privilege is a personal benefit, and dies with the person.

PRIVILEGIUM EST QUASI PRIVATA LEX. 2 Bulst. 189. Privilege is, as it were, a private law.

PRIVILEGIUM NON VALET CONTRA REMPUBLICAM. Privilege is of no force against the commonwealth. Even necessity does not excuse, where the act to be done is against the commonwealth. Bac. Max. p. 32, in reg. 5; Broom, Max. 18; Noy, Max., 9th ed. 34.

PRIVILEGIUM, PROPERTY PROPTER. A qualified property in animals ferce naturce; e., a privilege of hunting, taking, and killing them, in exclusion of others. 2 Bl.Comm. 394; 2 Steph. Comm. 9.

PRIVITY. Mutual or successive relationship to the same rights of property. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 189; Duffy v. Blake, 91 Wash. 140, 157 P. 480, 482; Haverhill v. International Ry. Co., 217 App.Div. 521, 217 N.Y.S. 522, 523.

Thus, the executor is in privity with the testator, the heir with the ancestor, the assignee with the assignor, the donee with the donor, and the lessee with the lessor. Litchfield v. Crane, 8 S.Ct. 210, 123 U.S. 549, 31 L. Ed. 199.

Derivative interest founded on, or growing out of, contract, connection, or bond of union between parties; mutuality of interest. Hodgson v. Midwest Oil Co., C.C.A.Wyo., 17 F.2d 71, 75.

Private knowledge; joint knowledge with another of a private concern; cognizance implying a consent or concurrence. Taylor v. Ferroman Properties, 103 Fla. 960, 139 So. 149, 150.

In a strict and technical sense a judgment creditor does not occupy such a relation to his debtor as to fall within the meaning of the word "privity," for there is no succession to the property of the debtor until a sale under execution is had and the judgment creditor has become vested with the title thereof. But a majority of the courts have enlarged the meaning of the word, and consequently have held that there is privity between the two before there is an actual devolution of the title of the property owned by the debtor. Buss v. Kemp Lumber Co., 23 N.M. 567, 170 P. 54, 56, L.R.A.1918C, 1015.

Privity of blood exists between an heir and his ancestor, (privity in blood inheritable,) and between coparceners. This privity was formerly of importance in the law of descent cast. Co. Litt. 271a, 242a; 2 Inst. 516; 8 Coke, 42b.

Privity of contract is that connection or relationship which exists between two or more contracting parties. It is essential to the maintenance of an action on any contract that there should subsist a privity between the plaintiff and defendant in respect of the matter sued on. Brown.

Privity of estate is that which exists between lessor and lessee, tenant for life and remainderman or reversioner, etc., and their respective assignees, and between joint tenants and coparceners. Privity of estate is required for a release by enlargement. Sweet.

PRIVITY OR KNOWLEDGE. Under Rev.St. §1 4283-4286 (46 U.S.C.A. §1 183-186) withholding the right to limit liability if the shipowner had "privity or knowledge" of the fault which occasioned damages, privity or knowledge must be actual and not merely constructive, and must involve a personal participation of the owner in some fault or act of negligence causing or contributing to the injury suffered. The 84-H, C.C. A.N.Y., 296 F. 427, 431. The words import actual knowledge of the things causing or contributing to the loss, or knowledge or means of knowledge of a condition of things likely to produce or contribute to the loss without adopting proper means to prevent it. Petition of Canadian Pac. Ry. Co., D.C.Wash., 278 F. 180, 189.

PRIVY. A person who is in privity with another. One who is a partaker or has any part or interest in any action, matter, or thing. See Privies; Privity.

Also, a water-closet. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 175 Ky. 282, 194 S.W. 313, 314.

As an adjective, the word has practically the same meaning as "private."

PRIVY COUNCIL. In English law. The principal council of the sovereign, composed of the cabinet ministers, and other persons chosen by the king or queen as privy councillors. 2 Steph. Comm. 479, 480. The judicial committee of the privy council acts as a court of ultimate appeal in various cases.

PRIVY COUNCILLOR. A member of the privy council.

PRIVY PURSE. In English law. The income set apart for the sovereign's personal use.

PRIVY SEAL. In English law. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent, preparatory to their passing under the great seal. 2 Bl.Comm. 347. A seal which the king uses to such grants or things as pass the great seal. Co. 2d Inst. 554. A seal of the British government which is affixed to documents not requiring the great seal. Encycl. Br.

PRIVY SIGNET. In English law. The signet or seal which is first used in making out grants and letters patent, and which is always in the custody of the principal secretary of state. 2 Bl.Comm. 347.

PRIVY TOKEN. A false mark or sign, forged object, counterfeited letter, key, ring, etc., used to deceive persons, and thereby fraudulently get possession of property. St. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 1. A false privy token is a false privy document or sign, not such as is calculated to deceive men generally, but designed to defraud one or more individuals. Cheating by such false token was not indictable at common law. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1294.

PRIVY VERDICT. In practice. A verdict given privily to the judge out of court, but which was of no force unless afterwards affirmed by a public verdict given openly in court. 3 Bl.Comm. 377. Kramer v. Kister, 187 Pa. 227, 40 A. 1008, 44 L.R.A. 432. Now generally superseded by the "sealed verdict," i. e., -one written out, sealed up, and delivered to the judge or the clerk of the court.

PRIZE. Anything offered as a reward of contest; a reward offered to the person who, among several persons or among the public at large, shall first (or best) perform a certain undertaking or accomplish certain conditions.

An award or recompense for some act done; some valuable thing offered by a person for something done by others. It is distinguished from a "bet" or "wager" in that it is known before the event who is to give either the premium or the prize, and there is but one operation until the accomplishment of the act, thing, or purpose for which it is offered. People v. Cohen, 289 N.Y.S. 397, 400, 160 Misc. 10.

In admiralty law. A vessel or cargo, belonging to one of two belligerent powers, apprehended or forcibly captured at sea by a war-vessel or privateer of the other belligerent, and claimed as enemy's property, and therefore liable to appropriation and condemnation under the laws of war. 1 C.Rob.Adm. 228. The apprehension and detention at sea of a ship or other vessel, by authority of a belligerent power, either with the design of appropriating it, with the goods and effects it contains, or with that of becoming master of the whole or a part of its cargo. 1 C.Rob. 228.

Captured property regularly condemned by the sentence of a competent prize court. 1 Kent, Comm. 102.

Goods taken on land from a public enemy are called "booty" ; and the distinction between a prize and booty consists in this, that the former is taken at sea and the latter on land.

PRIZE COURTS. Courts having jurisdiction to adjudicate upon captures made at sea in time of war, and to condemn the captured property as prize if lawfully subject to that sentence. In England, the admiralty courts have jurisdiction as prize courts, distinct from the jurisdiction on the instance side. A special commission issues in time of war to the judge of the admiralty court, to enable him to hold such court. In America, the federal district courts have jurisdiction in cases of prize. 1 Kent, Comm. 101-103, 353-360. See Penhallow v. Doane, 3 Dall. 91, 1 L.Ed. 507.

PRIZE-FIGHT. A bout between two persons who fight each other by means of their fists, by consent, and who have an expectation of reward to be gained by the contest or competition, either to be won from the contestant or to be otherwise awarded, where there is an intent to inflict some degree of bodily harm on the contestant. Magness v. Isgrig, 145 Ark. 232, 225 S.W. 332, 334. An exhibition contest of pugilists for a stake or reward. Sampson v. State, 18 Okl.Cr. 191, 194 P. 2.79, 280; Fitzsimmons v. New York State Athletic Commission, Sup., 146 N.Y.S. 117, 120. It is not essential that the fight should be with the naked fist or hand. Sampson v. State, 18 Okl.Cr. 191, 194 P. 279, 280.

PRIZE GOODS. Goods which are taken on the high seas, jure belli, out of the hands of the enemy. The Adeline, 9 Cranch 244, 284, 3 L.Ed. 719.

PRIZE LAW. The system of laws and rules applicable to the capture of prize at sea; its condemnation, rights of the captors, distribution of the proceeds, etc. The Buena Ventura, D.C.Fla., 87 F. 927, 929.

PRIZE MONEY. A dividend from the proceeds of a captured vessel, etc., paid to the captors. U. S. v. Steever, 5 S.Ct. 765, 113 U.S. 747, 28 L.Ed. 1133.

PRO. For; in respect of; on account of ; in behalf of. The introductory word of many Latin phrases.

PRO AND CON. For and against. A phrase descriptive of the presentation of arguments or evidence on both sides of a disputed question.

PRO BONO ET MALO. For good and ill; for advantage and detriment.

PRO BONO PUBLICO. For the public good; for the welfare of the whole.

PRO CONFESSO. For confessed; as confessed. A term applied to a bill in equity, and the decree founded upon it, where no answer is made to it by the defendant. 1 Barb.Ch.Pr. 96; The Richmond, D.C.Del., 2 F.2d 903.

PRO CONSILIO. For counsel given. An annuity pro consilio amounts to a condition, but in a feoffment or lease for life, etc., it is the consideration, and does not amount to a condition; for the state of the land by the feoffment is executed, and the grant of the annuity is executory. Plowd. 412.

PRO CORPORE REGNI. In behalf of the body of the realm. Hale, Corn. Law, 32.

PRO DEFECTU EMPTORUM. For want (failure) of purchasers.

PRO DEFECTU EXITUS. For, or in case of, default of issue. 2 Salk. 620.

PRO DEFECTU ILEREDIS. For want of an heir.

PRO DEFECTU JUSTITIZE. For defect or want of justice. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 62, § 2.

PRO DEFENDENTE. For the defendant. Commonly abbreviated "pro def."

PRO DERELICTO. As derelict or abandoned. A species of usucaption in the civil law. Dig. 41, 7.

PRO DIGNITATE REGALI. In consideration of the royal dignity. 1 Bl.Comm. 223.

PRO DIVISO. As divided; e., in severalty.

PRO FALSO CLAMOR :E SUO. A nominal amercement of a plaintiff for his false claim, which used to be inserted in a judgment for the defendant. Obsolete.

PRO FORMA. As a matter of form. 3 East, 232; 2 Kent, Comm. 245.

The phrase "pro forma," in an appealable decree or judgment, usually means that the decision was rendered, not on a conviction that it was right, but merely to facilitate further proceedings. Cramp & Sons S. & E. Bldg. Co. v. Turbine Co., 33 Sup.Ct. 722, 228 U.S. 645, 57 L.Ed. 1003.

PRO HAC VICE. For this turn; for this one particular occasion.

PRO ILLA VICE. For that turn. 3 Wils. 233, arg.

PRO INDEFENSO. As undefended; as making no defense. A phrase in old practice. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 41, § 7.

PRO INDIVISO. As undivided; in common. The joint occupation or possession of lands. Thus, lands held by coparceners are held pro indiviso; that is, they are held undividedly, neither party being entitled to any specific portions of the land so held, but both or all having a joint interest in the undivided whole. Cowell; Bract. 1, 5.

PRO INTERESSE SUO. According to his interest; to the extent of his interest. Thus, a third party may be allowed to intervene in a suit pro interesse suo.

Examination pro interesse suo. When a person claims to be entitled to an estate or other property sequestered, whether by mortgage, judgment, lease, or otherwise, or has a title paramount to the sequestration, he should apply to the court to direct an inquiry whether the applicant has any, and what, interest in the property; and this inquiry is called an "examination pro interesse suo." Krippendorf v. Hyde, 4 S.Ct. 27, 110 U.S. 276, 28 L.Ed. 145; Hitz v. Jenks, 22 S.Ct. 598, 185 U.S. 155, 46 L.Ed. 851.

PRO POSSESSORE HABETUR QUI DOLO INJURIAVE DESIIT POSSIDERE. He is esteemed a possessor whose possession has been disturbed by fraud or injury. Off. Exec. 166.

PRO RATA. Proportionately; according to a certain rate, percentage, or proportion. According to measure, interest, or liability. Chaplin v. Griffin, 252 Pa. 271, 97 A. 409, 411, Ann.Cas.1918C, 787. According to a certain rule or proportion. 19 Am.L.Reg.N.S. 355, n. (U.S.D.C.Cal.).

Thus, the creditors (of the same class) of an insolvent estate are to be paid pro rata; that is, each is to receive a dividend bearing the same ratio to the whole amount of his claim that the aggregate of assets bears to the aggregate of debts.

PRO RE NATA. For the affair immediately in hand; for the occasion as it may arise; adapted to meet the particular occasion. Thus, a course of judicial action adopted under pressure of the exigencies of the affair in hand, rather than in conformity to established precedents, is said to be taken pro re nata.

PRO SALUTE ANIME. For the good of his soul. All prosecutions in the ecclesiastical courts are pro salute animce; hence it will not be a temporal damage founding an action for slander that the words spoken put any one in danger of such a suit. 3 Steph.Comm. (7th Ed.) 309n, 437; 4 Steph.Comm. 207.

PRO SE. For himself; in his own behalf; in person.

PRO SOCIO. For a partner; the name of an action in behalf of a partner. A title of the civil law. Dig. 17, 2; Cod. 4, 37.

PROAVUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandfather. Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fols. 67, 68. Employed in making genealogical tables.

PROBABILITY. Likelihood; appearance of reality or truth; reasonable ground of presumption; verisimilitude; consonance to reason. The likelihood of a proposition or hypothesis being true, from its conformity to reason or experience, or from superior evidence or arguments adduced in its favor. People v. O'Brien, 130 Cal. 1, 62 P. 297; Shaw v. State, 125 Ala. 80, 28 So. 390. Coppinger v. Broderick, 39 Ariz. 473, 295 P. 780, 781. Inference; assumption; presumption. Ohio Bldg. Safety Vault Co. v. Industrial Board, 277 Ill. 96, 115 N.E. 149, 154. A condition or state created when there is more evidence in favor of the existence of a given proposition than there is against it. Harris v. State, 8 Ala.App. 33, 62 So. 477, 479.

High probability rule. A rule relating to the right of insured to abandon a vessel, by virtue of which the right of abandonment does not depend upon the certainty, but upon the high probability of a total loss, either of the property, or voyage, or both. The result is to act not upon certainties, but upon probabilities; and .tf the facts present a case of extreme hazard, and of probable expense, exceeding half the value of the ship, the insured may abandon, though it should happen that she was afterwards recovered at a less expense. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Globe Na^{y}. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 236 F. 618, 635. In re Salomon's Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 814, 821, 159 Misc. 379.

PROBABLE. Having the appearance of truth; having the character of probability; appearing to be founded in reason or experience. State v. Thiele, 119 Iowa, 659, 94 N.W. 256. Having more evidence for than against; supported by evidence which inclines the mind to believe, but leaves some room for doubt; likely. Barrett v. Green River Sr. Rock Springs Live Stock Co., 28 Wyo. 379, 205 P. 742, 743. Apparently true, yet possibly false. Spadra Creek Coal Co. v. Harger, 130 Ark. 374, 197 S.W. 705.

PROBABLE CAUSE. Reasonable cause. State v. Baltes, 183 Wis. 545, 198 N.W. 282, 284. Having more evidence for than against. Ex parte Souza, 65 Cal.App. 9, 222 P. 869, 870. A reasonable ground for belief in the existence of 'facts warranting the proceedings complained of. Owens v. Graetzel, 149 Md. 689, 132 A. 265, 267. An apparent state of facts found to exist upon reasonable inquiry, (that is, such inquiry as the given case renders convenient and proper,) which would induce a reasonably intelligent and prudent man to believe, in a criminal case, that the accused person had committed the crime charged, or, in a civil case, that a cause of action existed. Brand v. Hinchman, 68 Mich. 590, 36 N.W. 664, 13 Am. St.Rep. 362; Cook v. Singer Sewing Mach. Co., 138 Cal.App. 418, 32 P.2d 430, 431.

In malicious prosecution the existence of such facts and circumstances as would excite the belief in a reasonable mind, acting on the facts within the knowledge of the prosecutor, that the person charged was guilty of the crime for which he was prosecuted. Lunsford v. Dietrich, 86 Ala. 250, 5 So. 461, 11 Am.St.Rep. 37. A reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a prudent and cautious man to believe that the accused is guilty of the offense with which he is charged. Sanders v. Palmer, N.Y., 55 F. 217, 5 C.C. A. 77. Such a state of facts and circumstances known to the prosecutor personally or by information from others as would, in the judgment of the court, lead a man of ordinary caution, acting conscientiously in the light of such facts and circumstances, to believe that the person charged is guilty. Keebey v. Stifft, 145 Ark. 8, 224 S. W. 396, 400. See, also, Galley v. Brennan, 216 N.Y. 118, 110 N.E. 179, 180. Where defendant in an action for malicious prosecution shows that before commencing the prosecution he, in good faith, consulted an attorney of good standing and made a full disclosure of all of the facts reasonably obtainable, and in good faith acted upon such advice, this of itself constitutes "probable cause." Gustason v. Speak, 85 Cal.App. 18, 258 P. 725, 726; Treloar v. Harris, 66 Ind. App. 159, 117 N.E. 975, 976.

As justifying arrest without a warrant by one believed guilty of felony or to be engaged in commission of a felony, is a belief fairly arising out of facts and circumstances known to officer that a party is engaged in commission of a crime. Day v. U. S., C.C.A.Neb., 37 F.2d 80, 81.

For search warrant means reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong to warrant cautious man in believing party is guilty of offense charged. Shore v. U. S., 49 F.2d 519, 521, 60 App.D. C. 137.

For arrest which must be shown as justification by defendants in action for false imprisonment is reasonable ground of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficient in themselves to warrant cautious man in believing accused to be guilty, but does not depend on actual state of case in point of fact, as it may turn out upon legal investigation, but on knowledge of facts which would be sufficient to induce reasonable belief in truth of accusation. Christ v. McDonald, 152 Or. 494, 52 P.2d 655, 658.

PROBABLE CONSEQUENCE. One that is more likely to follow its supposed cause than it is not to follow it. See, also, Collins v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co., 110 Tex. 577, 212 S.W. 477, 478.

PROBABLE EVIDENCE. Presumptive evidence is so called, from its foundation in probability.

PROBABLE FUTURE PAYMENTS. This expression in the Workmen's Compensation Act, providing for commutation at an amount which will equal the total sum of the probable future payments capitalized at their present value upon the basis of interest calculated at 3 per cent. per annum, means such payments as would ordinarily become payable in the natural course of events, taking into consideration the expectancy of the beneficiary. H. W. Clark Co. v. Industrial Commission, 291 Ill. 561, 126 N.E. 579, 582.

PROBABLE GROUND. As used in the Illinois Quo Warranto Act, requiring the judge to be satisfied there is probable ground for the proceeding before granting leave to file the information in quo warranto, means a reasonable ground of presumption that a charge is or may be well founded. People v. Hartquist, 311 Ill. 127, 142 N.E. 475, 476.

PROBABLE REASONING. In the law of evidence. Reasoning founded on the probability of the fact or proposition sought to be proved or shown; reasoning in which the mind exercises a discretion in deducing a conclusion from premises. Burrill.

PROBABLY. In all probability; so far as the evidence shows; presumably; likely. In re Salomon's Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 814, 820, 159 Misc. 379.

PROBANDI NECESSITAS INCUMBIT ILLI QUI AGIT. The necessity of proving lies with him who sues. Inst. 2, 20, 4. In other words, the burden of proof of a proposition is upon him who advances it affirmatively.

PROBARE. In Saxon law. To claim a thing as one's own. Jacob.

In modern law language. To Make proof, as in the term "onus probandi," the burden or duty of making proof.

PROBATE. Originally, relating to proof; afterwards, relating to the proof of wills.

The act or process of proving a will. Ross' Estate v. Abrams, Tex.Civ.App., 239 S.W. 705, 707. The proof before an ordinary, surrogate, register, or other duly authorized person that a document produced before him for official recognition and registration, and alleged to be the last will and testament of a certain deceased person, is such in reality. A judicial act or determination of a court having competent jurisdiction establishing the validity of a will. Simpson v. Anderson, 305 Ill. 172, 137 N.E. 88, 89; Peterson v. Demmer, D. C.Tex., 34 F.Supp. 697, 700.

Also, the copy of the will, made out in parchment or due form, under the seal of the ordinary or court of probate; and usually delivered to the executor or administrator of the deceased, together with a certificate of the will's having been proved.

In American law, now a general name or term used to include all matters of which probate courts have jurisdiction. Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 575, 50 N.W. 923, 28 Am.St.Rep. 382.

In the canon law, "probate" consisted of probatio, the proof of the will by the executor, and approbatio, the approbation given by the ecclesiastical judge to the proof. 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 77. McCoy v. Clayton, 119 Pa. 133, 12 A. 860; Reno v. McCully, 65 Iowa 629, 22 N.W. 902; Appeal of Dawley, 16 R.I. 694, 19 A. 248.

The term is used, particularly in Pennsylvania, but not in a strictly technical sense, to designate the proof of his claim made by a non-resident plaintiff (when the same is on book-account, promissory note, etc.) who swears to the correctness and justness of the same, and that it is due, before a notary or other officer in his own state ; also of the copy or statement of such claim filed in court, with the jurat of such notary attached. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 161.

Common and solemn form of probate. In English law, there are two kinds of probate, namely, probate in common form, and probate in solemn form. Probate in common form is granted in the registry, without any formal procedure in court, upon an ex parte application made by the executor. Probate in solemn form is in the nature of a final decree pronounced in open court, all parties interested having been duly cited. The difference between the effect of probate in common form and probate in solemn form is that probate in common form is revocable, whereas probate in solemn form is irrevocable, as against all persons who have been cited to see the proceedings, or who can be proved to have been privy to those proceedings, except in the case where a will of subsequent date is discovered, in which case probate of an earlier will, though granted in solemn form, would be revoked. Coote, Prob. Pr. (5th Ed.) 237-239; Mozley & Whitley. And see Luther v. Luther, 122 Ill. 558, 13 N.E. 166.

PROBATE BOND. One required by law to be given to the probate court or judge, as incidental to proceedings in such courts, such as the bonds of executors, administrators, and guardians. Thomas v. White, 12 Mass. 367.

PROBATE CODE. The body or system of law relating to all matters of which probate courts have jurisdiction. Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 575, 50 N.W. 923, 28 Am.St.Rep. 382.

PROBATE COURT. See Court of Probate.

PROBATE, DIVORCE, AND ADMIRALTY DIVISION. That division of the English high court of justice which exercises jurisdiction in matters formerly within the exclusive cognizance of the court of probate, the court for divorce and matrimonial causes, and the high court of admiralty. (Judicature Act 1873, § 34.) It consists of two judges, one of whom is called the "President." The existing judges are the judge of the old probate and divorce courts, who is president of the division, and the judge of the old admiralty court, and of a number of registrars. Sweet.

PROBATE DUTY. A tax laid by government on every will admitted to probate or on the gross value of the personal property of the deceased testator, and payable out of the decedent's estate.

PROBATE HOMESTEAD. See Homestead.

PROBATE JUDGE. The judge of a court of probate.

PROBATE JURISDICTION. The exercise of the ordinary, generally understood power of a probate court, which includes the establishment of wills, settlement of decedents' estates, supervision of guardianship of infants, control of their property, allotment of dower, and other powers pertaining to such subjects. Clark v. Carolina Homes, 189 N.C. 703, 128 S.E. 20, 25.

PROBATE MATTERS. Matters pertaining to the settlement of estates of deceased persons. In re Bishop's Estate, 370 Ill. 173, 18 N.E.2d 218, 219.

PROBATE PROCEEDING. A general designation of the actions and proceedings whereby the law is administered upon the various subjects within probate jurisdiction. Jackson v. Porter, 87 Okl. 112, 209 P. 430, 435. Specifically, a proceeding in rem for the determination of the disposition of decedents' property. Lillard v. Tolliver, 154 Tenn. 304, 285 S.W. 576, 578. A proceeding to contest the validity, as a will, of a paper which had been admitted to probate as such, or to have a paper probated as a will. Jackson v. Porter, 87 Okl. 112, 209 P. 430, 435.

PROBATIO. Lat. Proof ; more particularly direct, as distinguished from indirect or circumstantial evidence.

PROBATIO MORTUA. Dead proof; that is proof by inanimate objects, such as deeds or other written evidence.

PROBATIO PLENA. In the civil law. Full proof; proof by two witnesses, or a public instrument. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 25; 3 Bl. Comm. 370.

PROBATIO SEMI-PLENA. In the civil law. Half-full proof; half-proof. Proof by one witness, or a private instrument. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 25; 3 Bl.Comm. 370.

PROBATIO VIVA. Living proof; that is, proof by the mouth of living witnesses.

PROBATION. The evidence which proves a thing; the act of proving; proof. Trial; test; the time of novitiate. Used in the latter sense in the monastic orders, and sometimes in civil service laws and the like. People ex rel. Walter v. Woods, 168 App.Div. 3, 153 N.Y.S. 872.

In modern criminal administration, allowing a person convicted of some minor offense (particularly juvenile offenders) to go at large, under a suspension of sentence, during good behavior, and generally under the supervision or guardianship of a probation officer. People ex rel. Schindler v. Kaiser, 95 Misc. 681, 159 N.Y.S. 322, 325. An act of grace and clemency which may be granted by the trial court to a seemingly deserving defendant whereby such defendant may escape the extreme rigors of the penalty imposed by law for the offense of which he stands convicted. People v. Leach, 22 Cal.App.2d 525, 71 P.2d 594, 595.

PROBATION OFFICER. An officer or assistant of the court to assist in the exercise of the jurisdiction which courts of chancery have exercised from time immemorial to protect the financial, social, and moral welfare of infants within their jurisdiction, or to assist in the administration of the probation system for offenders against the criminal laws. State v. Monongalia County Court, 82 W.Va. 564, 96 S.E. 966, 968.

PROBATION SYSTEM. A 'system of administering the criminal laws, based on the effort to encourage good behavior in a convicted criminal by granting a deduction from his sentence or in case of its being his first offense, releasing him on condition that, for a stated period, he lead an orderly life.

PROBATIONER. One who is upon trial. A convicted offender who is allowed to go at large, under suspension of sentence, during good behavior.

PROBATIONES DEBENT ESSE EVIDENTES, ID EST, PERSPICUIE ET FACILES INTELLIGI. Co. Litt. 283. Proofs ought to be evident, that is, perspicuous and easily understood.

PROBATIS EXTREMIS, PRAZESUMUNTUR MEDIA. The extremes being proved, the intermediate proceedings are presumed. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 20.

PROBATIVE. In the law of evidence. Having the effect of proof; tending to prove, or actually proving.

Testimony carrying quality of proof and having fitness to induce conviction of truth, consisting of fact and reason co-operating as co-ordinate factors. Globe Indemnity Co. v. Daviess, 243 Ky. 356, 47 S.W.2d 990, 992.

PROBATIVE FACTS. In the law of evidence. Facts which actually have effect of proving facts sought; evidentiary facts. 1 Benth. Ev. 18. Matters of evidence required to prove ultimate facts. Johnson v. Inter-Southern Life Ins. Co., 244 Ky. 83, 50 S.W.2d 16.

PROBATOR. In old English law. Strictly, an accomplice in felony who to save himself confessed the fact, and charged or accused any other as principal or accessory, against whom he was bound to make good his charge. It also signified an approver, or one who undertakes to prove a crime charged upon another. Jacob. See State v. Graham, 41 N.J.L. 16, 32 Am.Rep. 174.

PROBATORY TERM. In the practice of the English admiralty courts, the space of time allowed for the taking of testimony in an action, after issue formed. It is common to both parties, and either party may examine his witnesses. 2 Brown, Civ. Law 418.

PROBATUM EST. Lat. It is tried or proved.

PROBUS ET LEGALIS HOMO. Lat. A good and lawful man. A phrase particularly applied to a juror or witness who was free from all exception, and competent in point of law to serve on juries. Cro. Eliz. 654, 751; Cro. Jac. 635; Mart. & Y. 147; Bac. Abr. Juries (A) ; 3 Bl.Comm. 102. In the plural form: probi et legales homines.

PROCEDENDO. In practice. A writ by which a cause which has been removed from an inferior to a superior court by certiorari or otherwise is sent down again to the same court, to be proceeded in there, where it appears to the superior court that it was removed on insufficient grounds. Cowell; Yates v. People, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 446; 2 W.Bla. 1060; 6 Term 365.

A writ (procedendo ad judicium) which issued out of the common-law jurisdiction of the court of chancery, when judges of any subordinate court delayed the parties for that they would not give judgment either on the one side or on the other, when they ought so to do. In such a case, a writ of procedendo ad judicium was awarded, commanding the inferior court in the sovereign's name to proceed to give judgment, but without specifying any particular judgment. Wharton. McCord v. Briggs and Turivas, 338 Ill. 158, 170 N. E. 320, 324. It was the earliest remedy for the refusal or neglect of justice on the part of the courts. In re Press Printers & Publishers, C.C.A. N.J., 12 F.2d 660, 664.

A writ by which the commission of a justice of the peace is revived, after having been suspended. 1 Bl.Comm. 353.

PROCEDENDO ON AID PRAYER. If one pray in aid of the crown in real action, and aid be granted, it shall be awarded that he sue to the sovereign in chancery, and the justices in the common pleas shall stay until this writ of procedendo de loquela come to them. So, also, on a personal action. New Nat. Brev. 154.

PROCEDURAL LAW. That which prescribes method of enforcing rights or obtaining redress for their invasion; machinery for carrying on a suit. Barker v. St. Louis County, 340 Mo. 986, 104 S.W.2d 371, 377, 378, 379.

As relating to crimes, that which provides or regulates the steps by which one who violates a criminal statute is punished. State v. Elmore, 179 La. 1057, 155 So. 896.

PROCEDURE. .The mode of proceeding by which a legal right is enforced, as distinguished from the law which gives or defines the right, and which, by means of the proceeding, the court Is to administer; the machinery, as distinguished from its product. Per Lush, L. J., in 7 Q. B. Div, 333. That which regulates the formal steps in an, action or other judicial proceeding; a form, manner, and order of conducting suits or prosecutions. Mahoning Valley Ry. Co. v. Santoro, 93 Ohio St. 53, 112 N.E. 190, 191. The judicial process for enforcing rights and dutids recognized by substantive law and for justly administering redress for infraction of them. Sims v. United Pacific Ins. Co., D.C.Idaho, 51 F.Supp. 433, 435.

This term is commonly opposed to the sum of legal principles constituting the substance of the law, and denotes the body of rules, whether of practice or of pleading, whereby rights are effectuated through the successful application of the proper remedies. It is also generally distinguished from the law of evidence. Brown; Sackheim v. Pigueron, 215 N.Y. 62, 109 N.E. 109, 111. Cochran v. Ward, 3 Ind.App. 89, 29 N.E. 795, 31 N.E. 581, 51 Am.St.Rep. 229.

Procedure is the machinery for carrying on the suit, including pleading, process, evidence, and practice, whether in the trial court or the appellate court, or in the processes by which causes are carried to appellate courts for review, or in laying the foundation for such review. Jones v. Erie R. Co., 106 Ohio St. 408, 140 N.E. 366, 367. It not only embraces practice in courts, but regulation of the conduct of the court itself wherein such practice takes place. State v. Greenwald, 186 Ind. 321, 116 N.E. 296, 297.

The law of procedure is what is now commonly termed by jurists "adjective law," (q. v.).

PROCEDURE ACTS. Three acts of parliament passed in 1852, 1854, and 1860, for the amendment of procedure at common law. Moz. & W. They have been largely superseded by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875. See Judicature Acts.

PROCEED. To carry on some series of motions and to set oneself to work and go on in a certain way and for some particular purpose. Hodson v. O'Keeffe, 71 Mont. 322, 229 P. 722, 724; To sue. Brabon v. Gladwin Light & Power Co., 201 Mich. 697, 167 N.W. 1024, 1026; Planters' Bank v. Houser, 57 Ga. 140; Iliff v. Weymouth, 40 Ohio St. 101.

PROCEEDING. In a general sense, the form and manner of conducting juridical business before a court or judicial officer; regular and orderly progress in form of law; including all possible steps in an action from its commencement to the execution of judgment. Erwin v. U. S., D.C.Ga., 37 F. 470, 488, 2 L.R.A. 229. Sometimes, merely the record history of a case. See Uhe v. Railway Co., 3 S.D. 563, 54 N.W. 601.

An act which is done by the authority or direction of the court, express or implied; an act necessary to be done in order to obtain a given end; a prescribed mode of action for carrying into effect a legal right. Green v. Board of Com'rs of Lincoln County, 126 Okl. 300, 259 P. 635, 637; Marblehead Land Co. v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 60 Cal.App. 644, 213 P. 718, 723. All the steps or measures adopted in the prosecution or defense of an action. Statter v. United States, C.C.A.Alaska, 66 F.2d 819, 822. The word may be used synonymously with "action" or "suit" to describe the entire course of an action at law or suit in equity from the issuance of the writ or filing of the bill until the entry of a final judgment, or may be used to describe any act done by authority of a court of law and every step required to be taken in any cause by either party. Gonzales v. Gonzales, 240 Mass. 159, 133 N.E. 855, 856. The proceedings of a suit embrace all matters that occur in its progress judicially. Morewood v. Hollister, 6 N.Y. 320. For illustrative cases, see Venator v. Edwards, 126 Okl. 296, 259 P. 596, 599: Dixie Guano Co. v. Alpha Process Co., 5 Boyce (Del.) 277, 92 A. 1013, 1014; State v. Kerr, 117 Me. 254, 103 A. 585, 587. It is a prescribed mode of action for carrying into effect a legal right W. S. Tyler Co. v. Rebic, 118 Ohio St. 522, 161 N.E. 790, 791.

In a more particular sense, any application to a court of justice, however made, for aid in the enforcement of rights, for relief, for redress of injuries, for damages, or for any remedial object. See Coca-Cola Co. v. City of Atlanta, 152 Ga. 558, 110 S.E. 730, 732, 23 A.L.R. 1339. People v. Raymond, 186 Ill. 407, 57 N.E. 1066.

The term is properly applicable, in a legal sense, only to judicial acts before some judicial tribunal. Nelson v. Dunn, 56 Ind.App. 645, 104 N.E. 45. Lait v. Sears, 226 Mass. 119, 115 N.E. 247, 248.

Collateral proceeding. One in which the particular question may arise or be involved incidentally, but which is not instituted for the very purpose of deciding such question; as in the rule that a judgment cannot be attacked, or a corporation's right to exist be questioned, in any collateral proceeding. Peyton v. Peyton, 28 Wash. 278, 68: P. 757.

Executory proceeding. In the law of Louisiana,. a proceeding which is resorted to in the following cases: When the creditor's right arises from an act importing a confession of judgment, and which contains a privilege or mortgage in his favor; or when the creditor demands the execution of a judgment which has been rendered by a tribunal different from that within whose jurisdiction the execution is sought. Code Prac. La. art. 732.

Legal proceedings. See Legal Proceedings..

Ordinary proceedings. Those founded on the regular and usual mode of carrying on a suit by due course at common law.

Proceedings in bankruptcy. As used in Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, §§ 23-25, 30 Stat. 552, 553 (11 U.S.C.A. §§ 74-76), this term covers questions between the alleged bankrupt or the receiver or trustee on the one hand and the general creditors as such on the other, commencing with the petition for adjudication and ending with the discharge, including matters of administration generally, and is distinguished from "controversies, at law and in equity arising in the course of bankruptcy proceedings," which involve questions between the receiver or trustee, representing the bankrupt and his general creditors as such, on the one hand, and adverse claimants, on the other, concerning property in the possession of the receiver or trustee or of the claimants, to be litigated in appropriate plenary suits, and not affecting directly administrative orders and judgments, but only the extent of the estate to be distributed ultimately among general creditors. In re Breyer Printing Co., C.C.A.Ill., 216 F. 878, 880.

The phrase "controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings" includes those matters arising in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding which are not mere steps in the ordinary administration of the bankrupt estate, but present distinct and separable issues between the trustee and adverse claimants concerning the right and title to the bankrupt's estate. Gibbons v. Goldsmith, 222 F. 826, 828, 138 C.C.A. 252.

Proceeding in error. One by way of writ of error. State v. Scott, 34 Wyo. 163, 242 P. 322, 324.

Special proceeding. This phrase has been used in the New York and other codes of procedure as a generic term for all civil remedies which are not ordinary actions. An action is an ordinary proceeding in a court of justice, by which one party prosecutes another party for the enforcement or protection of a right, the redress or prevention of a wrong, or the punishment of a public offence. Every other remedy is a special proceeding. State v. Rosenwald Bros. Co., 23 N.M. 578, 170 P. 42, 44.

Summary proceeding. Any proceeding by which a controversy is settled, case disposed of, or trial conducted, in a prompt and simple manner, without the aid of a jury, without presentment or indictment, or in other respects out of the regular course of the common law. In procedure, proceedings are said to be summary 'when they are short and simple in comparison with regular proceedings; e., in comparison with the proceedings which alone would have been applicable, either in the same or analogous cases, if summary proceedings had not been available. Sweet. And see Phillips v. Phillips, 8 N.J.L. 122.

Supplementary proceeding. A separate proceeding in an original action, in which the court where the action is pending is called upon to exercise its jurisdiction in aid of the judgment in the action. Bryant v. Bank of California, 7 Pac. 128, 130, 2 Cal.Unrep. 475. In a more particular sense, a proceeding in aid of execution, authorized by statute in some states in cases where no leviable property of the judgment debtor is found. It is a statutory equivalent in actions at law of the crew 1-tor's bill in equity, and in states where law and equity are blended, is provided as a substitute therefor. In this proceeding the judgment debtor is summoned to appear before the court (or a referee or examiner) and submit to an oral examination touching all his property and effects, and if property subject to execution and in his possession or control is thus discovered, he is ordered to deliver it up, or a receiver may be appointed. Eikerberry v. Edwards, 67 Iowa 619, 25 N.W. 832, 56 Am.Rep. 360.

PROCEEDS. Issues; income; yield; receipts; produce; money or articles or other thing of value arising or obtained by the sale of property; the sum, amount, or value of property sold or converted into money or into other property. Wharton; Blackford v. Boak, 73 Or. 61, 143 P. 1136, 1137. Thus, goods purchased with money arising from the sale of other goods, or obtained on their credit, are proceeds of such goods. 2 Pars.Marit. L. 201; Bened.Adm. 290. Proceeds does not necessarily mean cash or money. Phelps v. Harris, 25 L.Ed. 855, 101 U.S. 380.

The word when applied to the income to be derived from real estate embraces the idea of issues, rents, profits, or produce. Gorin Sa[y.] Bank v. Early, Mo.App., 260 S.W. 480, 483. It is synonymous with avails, use, and profits. In re Coughlin's Estate, 53 N.D. 188, 205 N.W. 14, 16.

PROCERES. Nobles; lords. The house of lords in England is called, in Latin, "Domus Procerum."

Formerly, the chief magistrates in cities. St. Armand, Hist. Eq. 88.

PROCÉS-VERBAL. In French law. A true relation in writing in due form of law, of what has been done and said verbally in the presence of a public officer, and what he himself does upon the occasion. It is a species of inquisition of office, and must be signed by the officer. Dalloz, Dict.; Hall v. Hall, 11 Tex. 526, 539.

A written report, which is signed, setting forth a statement of facts. This term is applied to the report proving the meeting and the resolutions passed at a meeting of shareholders, or to the report of a commission to take testimony. It can also be applied to the statement drawn up by a huissier in relation to any facts which one of the parties to a suit can be interested in proving; for instance the sale of a counterfeited object. Statements, drawn up by other competent authorities, of misdemeanors or other criminal acts, are also called by this name. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 570.

PROCESS. A series of actions, motions, or occurrences; progressive act or transaction; continuous operation; method, mode or operation, whereby a result or effect is produced; normal or actual course of procedure; regular proceeding, as, the process of vegetation or decomposition; a chemical process; processes of nature. Sokol v. Stein Fur Dyeing Co., 216 App.Div. 573, 216 N.Y.S. 167, 169; Kelley v. Coe, App.D.C., 99 F.2d 435, 441.

Patent Law

An art or method by which any particular result is produced. An act or series of acts performed upon the subject-matter to be transformed or reduced to a different state or thing. American Graphophone Co. v. Gimbel Bros. (D.C.) 234 F. 361, 368; Nestle Patent Holding Co. v. E. Frederics, Inc. (C.C.A.) 261 F. 780, 783. A means or method employed to produce a certain result or effect, or a mode of treatment of given materials to produce a desired result, either by chemical action, by the operation or application of some element or power of nature, or of one substance to another, irrespective of any machine or mechanical device; in this sense a "process" is patenthble, though, strictly speaking, it is the art and not the process which is the subject of patent. Rohm v. Martin Dennis Co., D.C.N.J., 263 F. 106, 107.

Broadly speaking, a "process" is a definite combination of new or old elements, ingredients, operations, ways, 'or means to produce a new, improved or old result, and any substantial change therein by omission, to the same or better result, or by modification or substitution, with different function, to the same or better result, is a new and patentable process. Minerals Separation v. Hyde, D.C. Mont., 207 F. 956, 960.

Mechanical process. A process involving solely the application of mechanism or mechanical principles; an aggregation of functions; not patent. able considered apart from the mechanism employed or the finished product of manufacture. Risdon Iron, etc., Works v. Medart, 15 S.Ct. 745, 158 U.S. 68, 39 L.Ed. 899; Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U.S. 780, 24 L.Ed. 139.

Practice

This word is generally defined to be the means of compelling the defendant in an action to appear in court; Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618; or a means whereby a court compels a compliance with its demands. Frank Adam Electric Co. v. Witman, 16 Ga.App. 574, 85 S.E. 819, 820. Stevens v. Associated Mortg. Co. of New Jersey, 107 N.J.Eq. 297, 152 A. 461, 462. And when actions were commenced by original writ, instead of, as at present, by writ of summons, the method of compelling the defendant to appear was by what was termed "original process," being founded on the original writ, and so called also to distinguish it from "mesne" or "intermediate" process, which was some writ or process which issued during the progress of the suit. The word "process," however, as now commonly understood, signifies those formal instruments called "writs." The word "process" is in common-law practice frequently applied to the writ of summons, which is the instrument now in use for commencing personal actions. Farmers' Implement Co. of Hallock, Minn., v. Sandberg, 132 Minn. 389, 157 N.W. 642. But in its more comprehensive signification it includes not only the writ of summons, but all other writs which may be issued during the progress of an action. Those writs which are used to carry the judgments of the courts into effect, and which are termed "writs of execution" are also commonly denominated "final process," because they usually issue at the end of a suit. Anderson v. Dewey, 91 Conn. 510, 100 A. 99, 100.

A writ, summons, or order issued in a judicial proceeding to acquire jurisdiction of a person or his property, to expedite the cause or enforce the judgment. Royal Exchange Assurance of London v. Bennettsville & C. R. Co., 95 S.C. 375, 79 S.E. 104, 105. A writ or summons issued in the course of judicial proceedings. Radovich v. French, 36 Nev. 341, 135 P. 920, 921. The term in statutes may be used with the meaning of procedure. Safford v. United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 252 F. 471, 472.

In the practice of the English privy council in ecclesiastical appeals, "process" means an official copy of the whole proceedings and proofs of the court below, which is transmitted to the registry of the court of appeal by the registrar of the court below in obedience to an order or requisition requiring him so to do, called a "monition for process," issued by the court of appeal. Macph. Jud. Com. 173.

Abuse of process. See Abuse.

Compulsory process. See Compulsory,

Executory process. In the law of Louisiana, a summary process in the nature of an order of seizure and sale, which is available when the right of the creditor arises from an act or instrument which includes or imports a confession of judgment and a privilege or lien in his favor, and also to enforce the execution of a judgment rendered in another jurisdiction. Code Prac. art. 732.

Final process. The last process in a suit; that is, writs of execution. Thus distinguished from mesne process, which includes all writs issued during the progress of a cause and before final judgment. Collier v. Blake, 16 Ga.App. 382, 85 S.E. 354. A distress warrant is final process, unless arrested by the interposition of a counter affidavit. Long v. Clark, 16 Ga.App. 355, 85 S.E. 358.

Irregular process. Sometimes defined to mean process absolutely void, and not merely erroneous and voidable; but that term is usually applied to all process not issued in strict conformity with the law, whether the defect appears upon the face of the process, or by reference to extrinsic facts, and whether such defects render the process absolutely void or only voidable. And see Bryan v. Congdon, 86 F. 221, 29 C.C.A. 670.

Judicial process. In a wide sense, this term may include all the acts of a court from the beginning to the end of its proceedings in a given cause; but more specifically it means the writ, summons, mandate, or other process which is used to inform the defendant of the institution of proceedings against him and to compel 'his appearance, in either civil or criminal cases. Blair v. Maxbass Security Bank of Maxbass, 44 N.D. 12, 176 N.W. 98, 100; In re Smith & Shuck, D.C. Iowa, 132 F. 301, 303.

Legal process. This term is sometimes used as equivalent to "lawful process." Cooley v. Davis, 34 Iowa 130. Thus, it is said that legal process means process not merely fair on its face, but in fact valid. State v. Wagoner, 123 Kan. 586, 256 P. 959, 960. But properly it means a writ, warrant, mandate, or other process issuing from a court of justice, such as an attachment, execution, injunction, etc. Grossman v. Weiss, 221 N. Y.S. 266, 267, 129 Misc. 234.

Mesne . process. As distinguished from final process, this signifies any writ or process issued between the commencement of the action and the suing out of execution. 3 Bla.Comm. 279. This is substantially the meaning of the term as used in admiralty rule 1 (29 S.Ct. xxxix; 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2071, 2073), providing that no mesne process shall issue until the libel shall be filed in the clerk's office. The City of Philadelphia, D.C.Pa., 263 F. 234, 235. "Mesne" in this connection may be defined as intermediate; intervening; the middle between two extremes. L. N. Dantzler Lumber Co. v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 119 Miss. 328, 80 So. 770, 775, 49 A.L.R. 1669. Mesne process includes the writ of summons, (although that is now the usual commencement of actions,) because anciently that was preceded by the original writ. The writ of capias ad respondendum was called "mesne" to distinguish it, on the one hand, from the original process by which a suit was formerly commenced; and, on the other, from the final process of execution. Birmingham Dry Goods Co. v. Bledsoe, 21 So. 403, 113 Ala. 418.

Original process. That by which a judicial proceeding is instituted; process to compel the appearance of the defendant. Distinguished from "mesne" process, which issues, during the progress of a suit, for some subordinate or collateral purpose; and from "final" process, which is process of execution. Appeal of Hotchkiss, 32 Conn. 353.

Process of interpleader. A means of determining the right to property claimed by each of two or more persons, which is in the possession of a third.

Process of law. See Due Process of Law.

Process roll. In practice. A roll used for the entry of process to save the statute of limitations. 1 Tidd, Pr. 161, 162.

Regular process. Such as is issued according to rule and the prescribed practice, or which emanates, lawfully and in a proper case, from a court or magistrate possessing jurisdiction.

Summary process. Such as is immediate or instantaneous, in distinction from the ordinary course, by emanating and taking effect without intermediate applications or delays. Gaines v. Travis, 8 N.Y.Leg.Obs. 49.

Trustee process. The name given in some states (particularly in New England) to the process of garnishment or foreign attachment.

Void process. Such as was issued without power in the court to award it, or which the court had not acquired jurisdiction to issue in the particular case, or which fails in some material respect to comply with the requisite form of legal process. Bryan v. Congdon, C.C.A.Kan., 86 F. 221, 223, 29 C.C.A. 670.

PROCESSION. To beat the bounds of (a parish, lands, etc.). Webster's New Int. Dict. In some of the North American colonies (and still in the states of North Carolina and Tennessee), to make a procession around a piece of land in order formally to determine its bounds. Murray's New English Dict.

The ceremony of perambulating the boundaries of a parish ("processioning," as it was commonly called in later times) is an extremely old one. Blomfield, Hist. Fritwell, quoted in Murray's New English Dict. s. v. "Processioning" (q. v.).

PROCESSIONING. A survey and inspection of boundaries periodically performed in some of the American colonies by the local authorities. It was analogous in part to the English perambulation (q. v.), and was superseded by the introduction of the practice of accurate surveying and of recording. The term is still used of some official surveys in North Carolina and Tennessee. Cent. Dict. See Code Tenn.1858, § 2020 et seq.; Rhodes v. Ange, 173 N.C. 25, 91 S.E. 356.

PROCESUM CONTINUANDO. In English practice. A writ for the continuance of process after the death of the chief justice or other justices in the commission of oyer and terminer. Reg. Orig. 128.

PROCESSUS LEGIS EST GRAVIS VEXATIO; EXECUTIO LEGIS CORONAT OPUS. The process of the law is a grievous vexation; the execution of the law crowns the work. Co.Litt. .289b. The proceedings in an action while in progress are burdensome and vexatious; the execution, being the end and object of the action, crowns the labor, or rewards it with success.

PROCHEIN. L. Fr. Next. A term somewhat used in modern law, and more frequently in the old law; as prochein ami, prochein cousin. Co. Litt. 10.

PROCHEIN AMI. (Spelled, also, prochein amy and prochein amy.) Next friend. As an infant cannot legally sue in his own name, the action must be brought by his prochein ami; that is, some friend (not being his guardian) who will appear as plaintiff in his name.

PROCHEIN AVOIDANCE. Next vacancy. A power to appoint a minister to a church when it shall next become void.

PROCHRONISM: An error in chronology, consisting in dating a thing before it happened.

PROCINCTUS. Lat. In the Roman law. A girding or_preparing for battle. Testamentum in procinctu, a will made by a soldier, while girding himself, or preparing to engage in battle. Adams, Rom.Ant. 62; Calvin.

PROCLAIM. To promulgate; to announce; to publish, by governmental authority, intelligence of public acts or transactions or other matters important to be known by the people. To give wide publicity to; to disclose. Simon v. Moore, D.C.Mo., 261 F. 638, 643.

PROCLAMATION. The act of proclaiming or publishing; a formal declaration; an avowal. Dickinson v. Page, 120 Ark. 377, 179 S.W. 1004, 1006; State v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., 128 Wash. 365, 223 P. 600, 608. The act of causing some state matters to be published or made generally known. A written or printed document in which are contained such matters, issued by proper authority. 3 Inst. 162; 1 Bl.Comm. 170.

Also, the public nomination made of any one to a high office; as, such a prince was proclaimed emperor.

In practice. The declaration made by the crier, by authority of the court, that something is about to be done.

It usually commences with the French word Oyez, do you hear, hear ye, in order to attract attention; it is particularly used on the opening of the court, and at its adjournment; it is also frequently employed to discharge persons who have been accused of crimes or misdemeanors.

In equity practice. Proclamation made by a sheriff upon a writ of attachment, summoning a defendant who has failed to appear personally to appear and answer the plaintiff's bill. 3 Bl.Comm. 444.

PROCLAMATION BY LORD OF MANOR. A proclamation made by the lord of a manor (thrice repeated) requiring the heir or devisee of a deceased copyholder to present himself, pay the fine, and be admitted to the estate; failing which appearance, the lord might seize the lands quousque (provisionally.)

PROCLAMATION OF A FINE. The notice or proclamation which was made after the engrossment of a fine of lands, and which consisted in its being openly read in court sixteen times, viz., four times in the term in which it was made, and four times in each of the three succeeding terms, which, however, was afterwards reduced to one reading in each term. Cowell. See 2 Bl.Comm. 352.

PROCLAMATION OF EXIGENTS. In old English law. When an exigent was awarded, a writ of proclamation issued, at the same time, commanding the sheriff of the county wherein the defendant dwelt to make three proclamations thereof in places the most notorious, and most likely to come to his knowledge, a month before the outlawry should take place. 3 Bl.Comm. 284.

PROCLAMATION OF REBELLION. In old Englis law. A proclamation to be made by the sheriff commanding the attendance of a person who had neglected to obey a subpoena or attachment in chancery. If he did not surrender himself after this proclamation, a commission of rebellion issued. 3 Bl.Comm. 444.

PROCLAMATION OF RECUSANTS. A proclamation whereby recusants were formerly convicted, on non-appearance at the assizes. Jacob.

PROCLAMATOR. An officer of the English court of common pleas.

PRO—CONSUL. Lat. In the Roman law. Originally a consul whose command was prolonged after his office had expired. An officer with consular authority, but without the title of "consul." The governor of a province. Calvin.

PROCREATION. The generation of children. It is said to be one of the principal ends of marriage. Inst. tit. 2, in pr.

PROCTOR. One appointed to manage the affairs of another or represent him in judgment. A procurator, proxy, or attorney. More particularly, an officer of the admiralty and ecclesiastical courts whose duties and business correspond exactly to those of an attorney at law or solicitor in chancery.

A proctor, strictly speaking, conducts the proceeding out of court, as an English solicitor does in common-law courts; while the advocate conducts those in court. But in this country the distinction is not observed. The fees of proctors are fixed by statute (see 28 U.S.C.A. § 1923).

An ecclesiastical person sent to the lower house of convocation as the representative of a cathedral, a collegiate church, or the clergy of a diocese. Also certain administrative or magisterial officers in the universities.

PROCTORS OF THE CLERGY. They who are chosen and appointed to appear for cathedral or other collegiate churches; as also for the common clergy of every diocese, to sit in the convocation house in the time of parliament. Wharton.

PROCURACY. The writing or instrument which authorizes a procurator to act. Cowell; Termes de la Ley.

PROCURADOR DEL COMUN. Sp. In Spanish law, an officer appointed to make inquiry, put a petitioner in possession of land prayed for, and execute the orders of the executive in that behalf. Lecompte v. U. S., 11 How. 115, 126, 13 L.Ed. 627.

PROCURARE. Lat. To take care of another's affairs for him, or in his behalf; to manage; to take care of or superintend.

PROCURATIO. Lat. Management of another's affairs by his direction and in his behalf; procuration; agency.

PROCURATIO EST EXHEBITIO SUMPTUUM NECESSARIORUM FACTA PRIELATES, QUI DIOCESES PERAGRANDO, ECCLESIAS SUBJECTAS VISITANT. Day. Ir. K. B. 1. Procuration is the providing necessaries for the bishops, who, in traveling through their dioceses, visit the churches subject to them.

PROCURATION. Agency; proxy; the act of constituting another one's attorney in fact. The act by which one person gives power to another to act in his place, as he could do himself. Clinton v. Hibb's Ex'x, 259 S.W. 356, 358, 202 Ky. 304, 35 A. L.R. 462. Action under a power of attorney or other constitution of agency. Indorsing a bill or note "by procuration" is doing it as proxy for another or by his authority. The use of the word procuration (usually, per procuratione, or abbreviated to per pros. or p. p.) on a promissory note by an agent is notice that the agent has but a limited authority to sign. Neg.Instr.Act. § 21.

An express procuration is one made by the express consent of the parties. An implied or tacit procuration takes place when an individual sees another managing his affairs and does not interfere to prevent it. Dig. 17, 1, 6, 2; 50, 17, 60; Code 7, 32, 2. Procurations are also divided into those which contain absolute power, or a general authority, and those which give only a limited power. Dig. 3, 3, 58; 17, 1, 60, 4.

Also, the act or offence of procuring women for lewd purposes. Odgers, C.L. 214.

In ecclesiastical law. In the plural, the term denotes certain sums of money which parish priests pay yearly to the bishops or archdeacons, ratione visitationis. Dig. 3, 39, 25; Ayliffe, Parerg. 429; 17 Viner, Abr. 544.

PROCURATION FEE, or MONEY. In English law. Brokerage or commission allowed to scriveners and solicitors for obtaining loans of money. 4 Bl.Comm. 157.

PROCURATIONEM ADVERSUS NULLA EST PRZESCRIPTIO. Da[y]. Ir. K. B. 6. There is no prescription against procuration.

PROCURATOR. In the civil law. A proctor; a person who acts for another by virtue of a procuration. Dig. 3, 3, 1.

In old English law. An agent or attorney; a bailiff or servant. A proxy of a lord in parliament.

In ecclesiastical law. One who collected the fruits of a benefice for another. An advocate of a religious house, who was to solicit the interest and plead the causes of the society. A proxy or representative of a parish church.

PROCURATOR FISCAL. In Scotch law, this is the title of the public prosecutor for each district, who institutes the preliminary inquiry into crime within his district. The office is analogous, in some respect, to that of "prosecuting attorney," "district attorney," or "state's attorney" in America.

PROCURATOR IN REM SUAM. Proctor (attorney) in his own affair, or with reference to his own property. This term is used in Scotch law to denote that a person is acting under a procuration (power of attorney) with reference to a thing which has become his own property. Ersk.Inst. 3, 5, 2.

PROCURATOR LITIS. In the civil law. One who by command of another institutes and carries on for him a suit. Vicat, Voc.Jur. Procurator is properly used of the attorney of actor (the plaintiff), defensor of the attorney of reus (the defendant). It is distinguished from advocatus, who was one who undertook the defence of persons, not things, and who was generally the patron of the person whose defence he prepared, the person himself speaking it. It is also distinguished from cognitor who conducted the cause in the presence of his principal, and generally in cases of citizenship; whereas the procurator conducted the cause in the absence of his principal. Calvinus, Lex.

PROCURATOR NEGOTIORUM. In the civil law. An attorney in fact; a manager of business affairs for another person.

PROCURATOR PROVINCL[l]E. In Roman law. A provincial officer who managed the affairs of the revenue, and had a judicial power in matters that concerned the revenue. Adams, Rom.Ant. 178.

PROCURATORES ECCLESL PAROCHIALIS. The old name for church-wardens. Paroch.Antiq. 562.

PROCURATORIUM. In old English law. The procuratory or instrument by which any person or community constituted or delegated their procurator or proctors to represent them in any judicial court or cause. Cowell.

PROCURATORY OF RESIGNATION. In Scotch law. A form of proceeding by which a vassal authorizes the feu to be returned to his superior. Bell. It is analogous to the surrender of copyholds in England.

PROCURATRIX. In old English law. A female agent or attorney in fact. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 4, § 4.

PROCURE. To initiate a proceeding; to cause a thing to be done; to instigate; to contrive, bring about, effect, or cause. Marcus v. Bernstein, 117 N.C. 31, 23 S.E. 38. Rosenbarger v. State, 154 Ind. 425, 56 N.E. 914. To persuade, induce, prevail upon, or cause. Hines v. State, 16 Ga.App. 411, 85 S.E. 452, 454. To obtain, as intoxicating liquor, for another. State v. Desmarais, 81 N.H. 199, 123 A. 582, 583. Compare, however, People v. Robertson, 284 Ill. 620, 120 N.E. 539, 541. To find or introduce;—said of a broker who obtains a customer. Low v. Paddock, Mo.App., 220 S.W. 969,. 972. To bring the seller and the buyer together so that the seller has an opportunity to sell. Fritsch v. Hess, 162 P. 70, 71, 49 Utah, 75. See, also, Miller v. Eldridge, Tex.Civ.App., 286 S.W. 999, 1000.

To "procure" an act to be done is not synonymous with, to "suffer" it to be done. 2 Ben. 196.

PROCURER. One who procures for another the gratification of his lusts; a pimp; a panderer; one who solicits trade for a prostitute or lewd woman. State v. Smith, 149 La. 700, 90 So. 28, 30. One that procures the seduction or prostitution of girls. The offense is punishable by statute in England and America. One who uses means to bring anything about, especially one who does so secretly and corruptly. U. S. v. Richmond, C.C.A. Pa., 17 F.2d 28, 30.

PROCUREUR. In French law. An attorney; one who has received a commission from another to act on his behalf. There were in France two classes of procureurs: Procureurs ad negotia, appointed by an individual to act for him in the administration of his affairs; persons invested with a power of attorney; corresponding to "attorneys in fact." Procureurs ad lites were persons appointed and authorized to act for a party in a court of justice. These corresponded to attorneys at law, (now called, in England, "solicitors of the supreme court.") The order of pro*cureurs* was abolished in 1791, and that of avous. established in their place. Mozley & Whitley.

PROCUREUR DE LA REPUBLIQUE. (Formerly procureur du roi.) In French law. A public prosecutor, with whom rests the initiation of all criminal proceedings. In the exercise of his office (which appears to include the apprehension of offenders) he is entitled to call to his assistance the public force, (posse comitatus;) and the officefs of police are auxiliary to him.

PROCUREUR GENERAL, or IMPERIAL. In French law. An officer of the imperial court, who either personally or by his deputy prosecuted every one who was accused of a crime according to the forms of French law. His functions were apparently confined to preparing the case for trial at the assizes, assisting in that trial, demanding the sentence in case of a conviction, and being present at the delivery of the sentence. He had a general superintendence over the officers of police and of the juges d'instruction, and he required from the procureur du roi a general report once in every three months. Brown.

PROCURING CAUSE. The approximate cause; the cause originating a series of events, which, without break in their continuity, result in the accomplishment of the prime object. Averill v. Hart & O'Farrell, 101 W.Va. 411, 132 S.E. 870, 875; The inducing cause. Moseley-Comstock Realty Co. v. McClelland, Mo.App., 294 S.W. 103, 106. The direct or proximate cause. Custer v. Thaxton, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 528, 529. Substantially synonymous with "efficient cause." Bagley v. Foley, 82 Wash. 222, 144 P. 25.

A broker will be regarded as the "procuring cause" of a sale, so as to be entitled to commission, if his efforts are the foundation on which the negotiations resulting in a sale are begun. Cales v. Pattison, 189 Okl. 160, 114 P.2d 457, 458.

PRODES HOMINES. A term said by Tomlins to be frequently applied in the ancient books to the barons of the realm, particularly as constituting a council or administration or government. It is probably a corruption of "probi homines."

PRODIGAL. In civil law. A person who, though of full age, is incapable of managing his affairs, and of the obligations which attend them, in consequence of his bad conduct, and for whom a curator is therefore appointed. See Prodigus.

According to the Code Napoleon, a French subject of full age, who is of extravagant habits, when adjudged to be a "prodigal," is restrained from dealing with his movables without the consent of a legal adviser.

PRODIGUS. Lat. In Roman law. A prodigal; a spendthrift; a person whose extravagant habits manifested an inability to administer his own affairs, and for whom a guardian might therefore be appointed.

PRODITION. Treason; treachery.

PRODITOR. A traitor.

PRODITORIE. Treasonably. This is a technical word formerly used in indictments for treason, when they were written in Latin. Tomlins.

PRODUCE, n. The product of natural growth, labor, or capital. Articles produced or grown from or on the soil, or found in the soil. New hoff Packing Co. v. Sharpe, 240 S.W. 1101, 1103, 146 Tenn. 293.

The produce of a farm has been held not to include beef raised and killed thereon. Philadelphia v. Davis, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 269. But See City of Higbee v. Burgin, 197 Mo. App. 682, 201 S. W. 558.

PRODUCE, v. To bring forward; to show or exhibit; to bring into view or notice; as, to present a play, including its presentation in motion pictures. Manners v. Morosco, D.C.N.Y., 254 F. 737, '740; to present testimony, In re McGuire's Will, 220 N.Y.S. 773, 776, 128 Misc. 679; to produce books or writings at a trial in obedience to a subpcena duces tecum.

To produce, for the purpose of use in a legal hearing, within the meaning of a subpoena ordering a witness to produce a public record, means more than an appearance with the document in his possession, and implies the handing of it to the tribunal for perusal, and, if that is not asked, the reading aloud of it by witness or counsel. Langley v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 46 R.I. 394, 129 A. 1, 2.

To make, originate, or yield, as gasoline. Gay OH Co. v. State, 170 Ark. 587, 280 S.W. 632, 634. To bring to the surface, as oil. Tedrow v. Shaffer, 23 Ohio App. 343, 155 N.E. 510, 511.

To yield, as revenue. Thus, sums are "produced" by taxation, not when the tax is levied, but when the sums are collected. Board of Education of Louisville v. Sea, 167 Ky. 772, 181 S.W. 670, 673.

PRODUCE BROKER. A person whose occupation it is to buy or sell agricultural or farm products. U. S. v. Simons, 1 Abb. (U.S.) 470, Fed.Cas. No.16,291.

PRODUCENT. The party calling a witness under the old system of the English ecclesiastical courts.

PRODUCER. One who produces, brings, forth, or generates. Boland v. Cecil, 150 P.2d 819, 822, 65 Cal.App.2d Supp. 832.

PRODUCING. Bring about, to cause to happen or take place, as an effect or result. Strong v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., Tex.Civ.App., 170 S.W.2d 786, 788.

PRODUCING CAUSE. Respecting broker's commission, is act which, continuing in unbroken chain of cause and effect, produces result. Schebesta v. Stewart, Tex.Civ.App., 37 S.W.2d 781, 786.

A "producing cause" of an employee's death for which compensation is sought is that cause which, in a natural and continuous sequence, produces the death, and without which death would not have occurred. Jones v. Traders & General Ins. Co., 140 Tex. 599, 169 S.W.2d 160, 162.

PRODUCT. With reference to property, proceeds; yield; income; receipts; return. Gibbs v. Barkley, Tex.Com.App., 242 S.W. 462, 465.

The "products" of a farm may include the increase of cattle on the premises. Case v. Ploutz, 154 N.Y.S. 914, 915, 90 Misc. 568.

PRODUCTIO SECTLE. In old English law. Production of suit; the production by a plaintiff of his secta or witnesses to prove the allegations of his count. 3 Bl.Comm. 295.

PRODUCTION. That which is produced or made product; fruit of labor; as the productions of the earth, comprehending all vegetables and fruits; the productions of intellect, or genius, as poems and prose compositions; the productions of art, as manufactures of every kind. Dano v. R. Co., 27 Ark. 567.

In political economy. The creation of objects which constitute wealth. The requisites of production are labor, capital, and the materials and motive forces afforded by nature. Of these, labor and the raw material of the globe are primary and indispensable. Natural motive powers may be called in to the assistance of labor, and are a help, but not an essential, of production. The remaining requisite, capital, is itself the product of labor. Its instrumentality in production is therefore, in reality, that of labor in an indirect shape. Mill, Pol. Econ. ; Wharton.

PRODUCTION FOR COMMERCE. Within Fair Labor Standards Act includes production of goods which, at time of production, employer, according to normal course of his business, intends or expects to move in interstate commerce immediately following initial sale. Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, §§ 6, 7, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 206, 207. Hill v. Jones, D.C.Ky., 59 F.Supp. 569, 572.

PRODUCTION OF SUIT. In pleading. The formula, "and therefore [or thereupon] he brings his suit," etc., with which declarations always conclude. Steph.P1. 428, 429. In old pleading, this referred to the production by the plaintiff of his secta or suit, i. e. persons prepared to confirm what he had stated in the declaration. The phrase has remained; but the practice from which it arose is obsolete. 3 Bla.Comm. 295.

PROFANE. Irreverent toward God or holy things; written or spoken; acting or acted, in manifest or implied contempt of sacred things. Town of Torrington v. Taylor, 59 Wyo. 109, 137 P.2d 621, 624; Duncan v. U. S., C.C.A.Or., 48 F.2d 128, 133. That which has not been consecrated. Dig. 11, 7, 2, 4.

PROFANE PLACE. A place which is neither sacred nor sanctified nor religious. Dig. 11, 7, 2, 4, PROFANELY. In a profane manner. In Pennsylvania, a technical word in indictments for the statutory offense of profanity. Updegraph v. Corn., 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 394.

PROFANITY. Irreverence towards sacred things; particularly, an irreverent or blasphernous use of the name of God; punishable by statute in some jurisdictions. Orf v. State, 147 Miss. 160, 113 So. 202. Cason v. Baskin, 155 Fla. 198, 20 So.2d 243, 247, 168 A.L.R. 430.

PROFECTITIUS. Lat. In the civil law. That which descends to us from our ascendants. Dig. 23, 3, 5.

PROFER. In old English law. An offer or proffer; an offer or endeavor to proceed in an action, by any man concerned to do so. A return made by a sheriff of his accounts into the exchequer; a payment made on such return. Cowell.

PROFERT IN CURIA. L. Lat: (Sometimes written profert in curiam.) He produces in' court. In old practice, these words were inserted in a declaration, as an allegation that the plaintiff was ready to produce, or did actually produce, in court, the deed or other written instrument on which his suit was founded, in order that the court might inspect the same and the defendant hear it read. The same formula was used where the defendant pleaded a written instrument.

In modern practice. An allegation formally made in a pleading, where a party alleges a deed, that he shows it in court, it being in fact retained in his own custody. Steph.P1. 67. But by virtue of the allegation, the deed is then constructively in possession of the court. 6 M. & G. 277; Tucker v. State, 11 Md. 322; Germain v. Wilgus, 67 F. 597, 14 C.C.A. 561. The profert of any recorded instrument, as letters patent, is equivalent to annexing a copy. American Bell Tel. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co., C.C.Ark., 34 F. 803. This result does not occur, however, in the case of other documents, such as a note. Waterhouse v. Sterchi B[r]os. Furniture Co., 139 Tenn. 117, 201 S.W. 150, 151.

Profert and oyer are abolished in England by the Common Law Procedure Act, 15 & 16 Viet. c. 76; and a provision exists, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, for allowing inspection of all documents in the possession or under the control of the party against whom the inspection is asked. 25 E. L. & E. 304. In many of the states profert has been abolished, and in some instances the instrument must be set forth in the pleading of the party relying upon it.

PROFESS. To make open declaration of, to make public declaration or avowal. Wristen v. Wristen, Tex.Civ.App., 119 S.W.2d 1104, 1106.

PROFESSION. A public declaration respecting something. Cod. 10, 41, 6.

A vocation, calling, occupation or employment involving labor, skill, education, special knowledge and compensation or profit, but the labor and skill involved is predominantly mental or intellectual, rather than physical or manual. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Crazy Water Co., Tex.Civ.App., 160 S.W.2d 102, 104. The method or means pursued by persons of technical or scientific training. Board of Sup'rs of Amherst County v. Boaz, 176 Va. 126, 10 S.E.2d 498, 499.

The term originally contemplated only theology, law, and medicine, but as applications of science and learning are extended to other departments of affairs, other vocations also receive the name, which implies professed attainments in special knowledge as distinguished from mere skill. Aulen v. Triumph Explosive, D.C.Md., 58 F.Supp. 4, 8.

In ecclesiastical law. The act of entering into a religious order. See 17 Vin.Abr. 545.

PROFESSIONAL. A term applied in the Immigration Law, 8 U.S.C.A. § 137c, to an alien instrumental musician who is of distinguished merit and ability or is a member of a musical organization of distinguished merit and is applying for admission as such. It is opposed to amateur, and as used in the statute refers to one who pursues an art and makes his living therefrom. U. S. ex rel. Liebmann v. Flynn, D.C.N.Y., 16 F.2d 1006, 1007; U. S. v. Commissioner of Immigration at Port of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 298 F. 449, 450.

PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYMENT. Within the meaning of a statute authorizing actions for misconduct or neglect, professional services by an attorney are not limited to litigation, but include giving advice, managing a business, devising plans, and making collections, and the employment may be recognized as professional, although including services not ordinarily classed as professional services; whether the attorney is professionally employed depending on the relations and mutual understanding of what was said and done, and on all the facts and circumstances of the particular undertaking. Case v. Ranney, 174 Mich. 673, 140 N.W. 943, 946.

PROFESSOR. Public teacher of any science or branch of learning. U. S. ex rel. Jacovides v. Day, C.C.A.N.Y., 32 F.2d 542, 543.

PROFICUA. L. Lat. In old English law. Profits; especially the "issues and profits" of an estate in land. Co.Litt. 142.

PROFILE. In civil engineering, a drawing representing the elevation of the various points on the plan of a road, or the like, above some fixed elevation. Pub.St.Mass.1882, p. 1294. A side or sectional elevation, or a drawing showing a vertical section of the ground along a surveyed line or graded work. Also, an outline or contour. Taggart v. Great Northern Ry. Co., D.C.Wash., 208 F. 455, 456. As used in Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, 18 St. 482 (43 U.S.C.A. § 934), granting rights of way through the public lands to railroads, the term, in view of regulations of the general land office, may be deemed to mean a map of alignment or of definite location. Taggart v. Great Northern Ry. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 211 F. 288, 292.

PROFIT. The advance in the price of goods sold beyond the cost of purchase. The gain made by the sale of produce or manufactures, after deducting the value of the labor, materials, rents, and all expenses, together with the interest of the capital employed. Webster. Lapham v. Tax Com'r, 244 Mass. 40, 138 N.E. 708, 710; McCready v. Bullis, 59 Cal.App. 286, 210 P. 638, 640. Gain realized from business or investment over and above expenditures. Citizens Nat. Bank v. Corl, 225 N.C. 96, 33 S.E.2d 613, 616. Fairchild v. Gray, 242 N.Y.S. 192, 196, 136 Misc. 704. An excess of the value of returns over the value of advances. The same as net profits. Crawford v. Surety Inv. Co., 91 Kan. 748, 139 P. 481, 484.

The term "profit," as applied to a corporation, has a larger meaning than "dividends," and covers benefits of any kind, the excess of value over cost, acquisition beyond expenditure, gain or advance. Booth v. Gross, Kelley & Co., 30 N.M. 465, 238 P. 829, 831, 41 A.L.R. 868. Dividends are properly declared only from profits after they have been earned. Indiana Veneer & Lumber Co. v. Hageman, 57 Ind.App. 668, 105 N.E. 253, 256. This is a word of very extended signification. In commerce, it means the advance in the price of goods sold beyond the cost of purchase. In distinction from the wages of labor, it is well understood to imply the net return to the capital of stock employed, after deducting all the expenses, including not only the wages of those employed by the capitalist, but the wages of the capitalist himself for superintending the employment of his capital or stock. Columbus Mining Co. v. Ross, 218 Ky. 98, 290 S. W. 1052, 1053, 50 A.L.R. 1394. After indemnifying the capitalist for his outlay, there commonly remains a surplus, which is his profit, the net income from his capital. 1 Mill, Polit. Econ. c. 15.

Profits have been divided by writers on political economy into gross and net,—gross profits being the whole difference between the value of advances and the value of returns made by their employment, and net profits being so much of that difference as is attributable solely to the capital employed. Malthus, Political Econ.; M'Culloch, Political Econ. 563. For judicial criticism of the expression "gross profits," see the opinion of Jesse!, M. R., 10 App.Cas. 446. See, also, Buie v. Kennedy, 164 N. C. 290, 80 S.E. 445, 446.

The benefit, advantage, or pecuniary gain accruing to the owner or occupant of land from its actual use; as in the familiar phrase "rents, issues and profits," or in the expression "mesne profits."

A devise of the rents and profits of land is equivalent to a devise of the land itself, and will carry the legal as well as the beneficial interest therein. 2 B. & Ald. 42; Earl v. Rowe, 35 Me. 414, 58 Am.Dec. 714; 1 Bro.C.C. 310.

A division sometimes made of incorporeal hereditaments. 2 Steph.Comm. 2. Profits are divided into profits a prendre and profits a rendre. See those titles, infra.

Clear profit. A net profit, or a profit above the price paid. Kreitz v. Gallenstein, 170 Ky. 16, 185 S.W. 132, 134.

Mesne profits. Intermediate profits; that is, profits which have been accruing between two given periods. Thus, after a party has recovered the land itself in an action of ejectment, he frequently brings another action for the purpose of recovering the profits which have been accruing or arising out of the land between the time when his title to the possession accrued or was raised and the time of his recovery in the action of ejectment, and such an action is thence termed an "action for mesne profits." Brown; New York, 0. & W. Ry. Co. v. Livingston, 206 App.Div. 589, 201 N.Y.S. 629, 633.

Mesne profits, action of. An action of trespass brought to recover profits derived from land, while the possession of it has been improperly withheld; that is, the yearly value of the premises. Worthington v. Hiss, 70 Md. 172, 16 A. 534; Thompson v. Bower, 60 Barb. (N.Y.) 477.

Net profits. Theoretically all profits are "net." Buie v. Kennedy, 164 N.C. 290, 80 S.E. 445, 446. But as the expression "gross profits" is sometimes used to describe the mere excess of present value over former value, or of returns from sales over prime cost, the phrase "net profits" is appropriate to describe the gain which remains after the further deduction of all expenses, charges, costs, allowance for depreciation, etc.

Paper profits. Speculative or prospective profits. Tooey v. C. L. Percival Co., 192 Iowa, 267, 182 N.W. 403, 404.

Profit a prendre. Called also "right of common." A right exercised by one man in the soil of another, accompanied with participation in the profits of the soil thereof. A right to take a part of the soil or produce of the land. Gadow v. Hunholtz, 160 Wis. 293, 151 N.W. 810, 811, Ann.Cas. 1917D, 91.

The term includes the right to take soil, gravel, minerals, and the like from another's land, Munsey v. Mills & Garitty, 115 Tex. 469, 283 S. W. 754, 759; Mathews Slate Co. of New York v. Advance Industrial Supply Co., 172 N.Y.S. 830, 832, 185 App.Div. 74; the right to take seaweed, Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 100; and to take coal or timber, Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. 206, 91 Am.Dec. 203; the right to hunt, St. Helen Shooting Club v. Mogle, 234 Mich. 60, 207 N.W. 915, 917; or fish, Turner v. Hebron, 22 A. 951, 61 Conn. 175, 14 L.R.A. 386; and the right to cut grass, Baker v. Kenney, 145 Iowa 638, 124 N.W. 901, 139 Am.St.Rep. 456; but not the right to take running water, since it is not a product of the soil. Hill v7"tord, 48 Me. 83. Profits a prendre differ from easements, in that the former are rights of profit, and the latter are mere rights of convenience without profit. Gale, Easem. 1; Hall. Bingham v. Salene, 15 Or. 208, 14 P. 523, 3 Am.St.Rep. 152; Pierce v. Keator, 70 N.Y. 422, 26 Am.Rep. 612. A profit a prendre is considered an interest or estate in the land itself, 28 C.J.S., Easements, 628, 631, § 3, whereas an easement is a privilege without profit. Walker v. Dwelle, 187 Iowa 1384, 175 N.W. 957. Saratoga State Waters Corporation v. Pratt, 227 N.Y. 429, 125 N.E. 834. 838. But a profit a prendre is sometimes spoken of as an easement, especially when appurtenant to a dominant tenement. Grubb v. Grubb, 74 Pa. 25, 33. The right can be acquired only by grant or prescription, and not by custom or parol. 28 C.J.S., Easements, 628, 633, § 3. Council v. Sanderlin, 183 N.C. 253, 111 S.E. 365, 367, 32 A. L.R. 1527.

Profit a rendre. Such as is received at the hands of and rendered by another. The term comprehends rents and services. Ham.N.P. 192.

Profit and loss. The gain or loss arising from goods bought or sold, or from carrying on any other business, the former of which, in book-keeping, is placed on the creditor's side; the latter on the debtor's side.

Surplus profits. Within the meaning of a statute prohibiting the declaration of corporate dividends other than from such profits, the excess of receipts over expenditures, or net earnings or receipts, or gross receipts, less expenses of operation. Southern California Home Builders v. Young, 45 Cal.App. 679, 188 P. 586, 591. Of a corporation, the difference over and above the capital stock, debts, and liabilities. Western & Southern Fire Ins. Co. v. Murphey, 56 Okl. 702, 156 P. 885, 890.

PROFITEERING. The acquisition of excessive profits;—usually used as a term of reproach and dishonor. Mount v. Welsh, 118 Or. 568, 247 P. 815, 822.

PROGENER. Lat. In the civil law. A grandson-in-law. Dig. 38, 10, 4, 6.

PROGRESSION. That state of a business which is neither the commencement nor the end. Some act done after the matter has commenced, and before it is completed. Plowd. 343.

PROHIBETUR NE QUIS FACIAT IN SUO QUOD NOCERE POSSIT ALIENO. It is forbidden for any one to do or' make on his own [land] what may injure another's. 9 Coke, 59a.

PROHIBIT. To forbid by law; to prevent;—not synonymous with "regulate." Simpkins v. State, 35 Okl.Cr. 143, 249 P. 168, 170; Arkansas Railroad Commission v. Independent Bus Lines, 172 Ark. 3, 285 S.W. 388, 390.

PROHIBITED DEGREES. Those degrees of relationship by consanguinity which are so close that marriage between persons related to each other in any of such degrees is forbidden by law. State v. Guiton, 51 La.Ann. 155, 24 So. 784.

PROHIBITIO DE VASTO, DIRECTA PARTI. A judicial writ which was formerly addressed to a tenant, prohibiting him from waste, pending suit. Reg.Jud. 21; Moore, 917.

PROHIBITION. Inhibition; interdiction. Talbott v. Casualty Co., 74 Md. 545, 22 A. 395, 13 L.R.A. 584.

In practice. The name of a writ issued by a superior court, directed to the judge and parties of a suit in an inferior court, commanding them to cease from the prosecution of the same, upon a suggestion that the cause originally, or some collateral matter arising therein, does not belong to that jurisdiction, but to the cognizance of some other court. 3 Bl.Comm. 112; Alexander v. Crollott, 199 U.S. 580, 26 S.Ct. 161, 50 L.Ed. 317. It is only issued in cases of extreme necessity where the grievance cannot be redressed by ordinary proceedings at law, or in equity, or by appeal. Niagara Falls Power Co. v. Halpin, 45 N.Y.S.2d 421, 424, 181 Misc. 13; State ex rel. Levy v. Savord, 143 Ohio St. 451, 55 N.E.2d 735, 736.

An extraordinary writ, issued by a superior court to an inferior court to prevent the latter from exceeding its jurisdiction, either by prohibiting it from assuming jurisdiction in a matter over which it has no control, or from going beyond its legitimate powers in a matter of which it ha's jurisdiction. State v. Medler, 19 N.M. 252, 142 P. 376, 377. An extraordinary judicial writ issuing out of a court of superior jurisdiction, directed to an inferior court or tribunal exercising judicial powers, for the purpose of preventing the inferior tribunal from usurping a jurisdiction with which it is not lawfully vested, State v. Stanfield, 11 Okl.Cr. 147, 143 P. 519, 522; from assuming or exercising jurisdiction over matters beyond its cognizance, Jackson v. Calhoun, 156 Ga. 756, 120 S.E. 114, 115; or from exceeding its jurisdiction in matters of which it has cognizance. Jackson v. Calhoun, 156 Ga. 756, 120 S.E. 114, 115.

The writ of prohibition is the counterpart of the writ of mandate. It arrests the proceedings of any tribunal, corporation, board, or person, when such proceedings are without or in excess of the jurisdiction of such tribunal, corporation, board, or person. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1102. State v. Packard, 32 N.D. 301, 155 N.W. 666, 667. Johnston v. Hunter, 50 W.Va. 52, 40 S.E. 448. State v. Evans, 88 Wis. 255, 60 N.W. 433.

Prohibition may, where the action sought to be prohibited is judicial in its nature, be exercised against public officers. State ex rel. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Harty, 276 Mo. 583, 208 S. W. 835, 838.

The term prohibition is also applied to the interdiction of making, possessing, selling or giving away, intoxicating liquors, either absolutely, or for beverage purposes, or for other than medicinal, scientific, and sacramental purpbses.

PROHIBITIVE IMPEDIMENTS. Those impediments to a marriage which are only followed by a punishment, but do not render the marriage null. Bowyer, Mod. Civil Law, 44. See Impediments.

PROJECTIO. Lat. In old English law. A throwing up of earth by the sea.

PROJET. Fr. In international law. The draft of a proposed treaty or convention.

PROJET DE LOI. A bill in a legislative body.

PROLEM ANTE MATRIMONIUM NATAM, ITA UT POST LEGITIMAM, LEX CIVILIS SUCCEDERE FACIT IN HIEREDITATE PARENTUM; SED PROLEM, QUAM MATRIMONIUM NON PARIT, SUCCEDERE NON SINIT LEX ANGLORUM. Fortesc. c. 39. The civil law permits the offspring born before marriage, provided such offspring be afterwards legitimized, to be the heirs of their parents; but the law of the English does not suffer the offspring not produced by the marriage to succeed.

PROLES. Lat. Offspring; progeny; the issue of a lawful marriage. In its enlarged sense, it signifies any children.

PROLES SEQUITUR SORTEM PATERNAM. The offspring follows the condition of the father. Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf.Ch. (N.Y.) 583, 660.

PROLETARIAT, PROLETARIATE. The class or body of proletarians. Webster, Dict. The class of unskilled laborers, without property or capital, engaged in the lower grades of work. People v. Gitlow, 234 N.Y. 132, 136 N.E. 317, 322. The class of proletarii (see the next title); the lowest stratum of the people of a country, consisting mainly of the waste of other classes, or of those fractions of the population who, by their isolation and their poverty, have no place in the established order of society.

PROLETARIUS. Lat. In Roman law. A proletary; a person of poor or mean condition; one among the common people whose fortunes were below a certain valuation; one of a class of citizens who were so poor that they could not serve the state with money, but only with their children, (proles.) Calvin.; Vicat.

PROLICIDE. In medical jurisprudence. A word used to designate the destruction of the human offspring. Jurists divide the subject into feticide, or the destruction of the fetus in utero, and infanticide, or the destruction of the new-born infant. Ry.Med.Jur. 280.

PROLIXITY. The unnecessary and superfluous statement of facts in pleading or in evidence. This will be rejected as impertinent. 7 Price, 278, note.

PROLOCUTOR. In ecclesiastical law. The president or chairman of a convocation. The speaker of the house of lords is called the prolocutor. The office belongs to the lord chancellor by prescription; 3 Steph.Comm. 347.

PROLONGATION. Time added to the duration of something; an extension of the time limited for the performance of an agreement.

PROLYTIE. In Roman law. A term applied to students of law in the fifth and last year of their course; as being in advance of the Lytm, or students of the fourth year. Calvin. They were left during this year very much to their own direction, and took the name prolytte, omnio soluti. They studied chiefly the Code and the imperial constitutions.

PROMATERTERA. Lat. In the civil law. A maternal great-aunt; the sister of one's grandmother. Inst. 3. 6. 3; Dig. 38. 10. 10. 14.

PROMATERTERA MAGNA, Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-aunt.

PROMISE. A declaration which binds the person who makes it, either in honor, conscience, or law, to do or forbear a certain specific act, and which gives to the person to whom made a right to expect or claim the performance of some particular thing. Hoskins v. Black, 190 Ky. 98, 226 S.W. 384, 385. A declaration, verbal or written, made by one person to another for a good or valuable consideration, in the nature of a covenant by which the promisor binds himself to do or forbear some act, and gives to the proniisee a legal right to demand and enforce a fulfillment. Scott v. S. H. Kress & Co., Tex.Civ.App., 191 S.W. 714, 716. An express undertaking, or agreement to carry a purpose into effect. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. v. Claiborne-Reno Co., C.C.A.Iowa, 64 F.2d 224, 89 A.L.R. 238.

While a "promise" is sometimes loosely defined as a declaration by any person of his intention to do or forbear from anything at the request or for the use of another. Finlay v. Swirsky, 103 Conn. 624, 131 A. 420, 423; Beck v. Wilkins-Ricks Co., 186 N.C. 210, 119 S.E. 235, 236; it is to be distinguished, on the one hand, from a mere declaration of intention involving no engagement or assurance as to the future. Scott v. S. H. Kress & Co., Tex.Civ.App., 191 S.W. 714, 716. And, on the other, from "agreement," which is an obligation arising upon reciprocal promises, or upon a promise founded on a consideration. Abbott.

Strictly speaking a promise is not a representation; the failure to make it good may give a cause of action, but it is not a false representation, which will authorize the rescission of a contract. Cunyus v. Guenther, 96 Ala. 564, 11 So. 649.

Fictitious promise. Sometimes called "implied promises," or "promises implied in law," occur in the case of those contracts which were invented to enable persons in certain cases to take advantage of the old rules of pleading peculiar to contracts, and which are not now of practical importance. Sweet.

Mutual promises. Promises simultaneously made by and between two parties; each promise being the consideration for the other. Anson Contr. 72; 14 M. & W. 855.

Naked promise. One given without any consideration, equivalent, or reciprocal obligation, and for that reason not enforceable at law. Arend v. Smith, 151 N.Y. 502, 45 N.E. 872.

New promise. An undertaking or promise, based upon and having relation to a former promise which, for some reason, can no longer be enforced, whereby the promisor recognizes and revives such former promise and engages to fulfill it.

Parol promise. A simple contract; a verbal promise. 2 Steph.Comm. 109.

Promise of marriage. A contract mutually entered into by a man and a woman that they will marry each other.

Promise to pay the debt of another. Within the statute of frauds, a promise to pay the debt of another is an undertaking by a person not before liable, for the purpose of securing or performing the same duty for which the party for whom the undertaking is made, continues liable. Dillaby v. Wilcox, 60 Conn. 71, 22 A. 491, 13 L.R.A. 643, 25 Am.St.Rep. 299.

PROMISEE. One to whom a promise has been made.

PROMISOR. One who makes a promise.

PROMISSOR. Lat. In the civil law. A promiser; properly the party who undertook to do a thing in answer to the interrogation of the other party, who was called the "stipulator."

PROMISSORY. Containing or consisting of a promise; in the nature of a promise; stipulating or engaging for a future act or course of conduct.

As to promissory "Oath," "Representation," and "Warranty," see those titles.

PROMISSORY ESTOPPEL. That which arises when there is a promise which promisor should reasonably expect to induce action or forbearance of a definite and substantial character on part of promisee, and which does induce such action or forbearance, and such promise is binding if injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of promise. New Eureka Amusement Co. v. Rosinsky, 126 Pa.Super. 444, 191 A. 412, 415.

To constitute "waiver without consideration," there must be promise or permission, express or implied in fact, supported only by action in reliance thereon, to excuse performance in future of condition or obligation not due at time when promise is made, or to give up defense not yet arisen, and such facts do not constitute "estoppel" because there is no misrepresentation of existing facts, but it may be called "promissory estoppel." Colbath v. H. B. Stebbins Lumber Co., 127 Me. 406, 144 A. 1, 5.

PROMISSORY NOTE. A promise or engagement, in writing, to pay a specified sum at a time therein limited, or on demand, or at sight, to a person therein named, or to his order, or bearer. Byles, Bills, 1, 4; Hall v. Farmer, 5 Denio, N.Y., 484. A written promise made by one or more to pay another, or order, or bearer, at a specified time, a specific amount of money, or other articles of value. Pryor v. American Trust & Banking Co., 15 Ga.App. 822, 84 S.E. 312, 314. An unconditional written promise, signed by the maker, to pay absolutely and at all events a sum certain in money, either to the bearer or to a person therein designated or his order, Benj. Chalm. Bills & N. art. 271; Harrison v. Beals, 111 Or. 563, 222 P. 728, 730; at a time specified therein, or at a time which must certainly arrive. Iowa State Savings Bank v. Wignall, 53 Okl. 641, 157 P. 725; Lanum v. Harrington, 267 Ill. 57, 107 N.E. 826, 828.

A written promise to pay a certain sum of money, at a future time, unconditionally. Brooks v. Owen, 112 Mo. 251, 19 S.W. 723, 20 S.W. 492. By the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act, a negotiable promissory note is defined as an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another signed by the maker engaging to pay on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time, a sum certain in money to order or to bearer. Where a note is drawn to the maker's own order, it is not complete until indorsed by him. Section 184.

PROMOTE. To contribute to growth, enlargement, or prosperity of; to forward; to further; to encourage; to advance. People v. Augustine, 232 Mich. 29, 204 N.W. 747, 749.

PROMOTER. One who promotes, urges on, encourages, incites, advances, etc. Martin v. Street Improvement Dist. No. 324 of City of Little Rock, 167 Ark. 108, 266 S.W. 941, 942. One promoting a plan by which it is hoped to insure the success of a business venture. Caskie v. State Corporation Commission, 145 Va. 459, 134 S.E. 583, 584.

Corporation Law

The persons who, for themselves or others, take the preliminary steps to the organization of a corporation. 1 Thompson on Corporations, § 81. McRee v. Quitman Oil Co., 16 Ga.App. 12, 84 S.E. 487; Alkire v. Acuff, 134 Okl. 43, 272 P. 405, 407. Those persons who first associate themselves together for the purpose of organizing the company, issuing its prospectus, procuring subscriptions to the stock, securing a charter, etc. See Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co., 20 S.Ct. 311, 176 U.S. 181, 44 L.Ed. 423.

Ecclesiastical Law

One who puts in motion an ecclesiastical tribunal, for the purpose of correcting the manners of any person who has violated the laws ecclesiastical; and one who takes such a course is said to "promote the office of the judge." See Mozley & Whiteley.

England

The term is also applied to persons or corporations at whose instance private bills are introduced into and passed through parliament, especially those who press forward bills for the taking of land for railways and other public purposes, who are then called promoters of the undertaking.

English Practice

Those persons who, in popular and penal actions, prosecute offenders in their own names and that of the king, and are thereby entitled to part of the fines and penalties for their pains. Brown.

PROMOVENT. A plaintiff in a suit of duplex querela (q. v.). 2 Prob.Div. 192.

PROMPT. To act immediately, responding on the instant. In re Peene's Will, 279 N.Y.S. 131, 155 Misc. 155.

PROMPT DELIVERY. This term means within a few days at most. Acme-Evans Co. v. Hunter, 194 Ill.App. 542, 543. Delivery as promptly as possible, all things considered. Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Callison, 120 Wash. 378, 207 P. 683, 684.

PROMPT SHIPMENT. Shipment within a reasonable time. Kelley-Clarke Co. v. Leslie, 61 Cal. App. 559, 215 P. 699, 702.

PROMPTLY. Adverbial form of the word "prompt," which means ready and quick to act as occasion demands. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 103 Kan. 1, 175 P. 97, 103. The meaning of the word depends largely on the facts in each case. Irvin v. Koehler, C.C.A.N.Y., 230 F. 795, 796; Stovall & Strickland v. McBrayer, 20 Ga.App. 93, 92 S.E. 543.

PROMULGARE. Lat. In Roman law. To make public; to make publicly known; to promulgate. To publish or make known a law after its enactment.

PROMULGATE. To publish; to announce officially; to make public as important or obligatory. Price v. Supreme Home of the Ancient Order of Pilgrims, Tex.Com.App., 285 S.W. 310, 312.

PROMULGATION. The order given to cause a law to be executed, and to make it public; it differs from publication. 1 Bl.Comm. 45; Stat. 6 Hen. VI. c. 4. In modern practice, it is usually by publishing one or more volumes of the laws and circulating them among public officials and selling them. As to the practice in England at various times, see Record Com. in 7 Sel. Essays in Anglo-Amer. L. H. 168.

As to the rules of a railway company it means made known; brought to the attention of the service affected thereby, so that a servant is bound to take notice. Wooden v. R. Co., Super., 18 N.Y.S. 768.

PROMUTUUM. Lat. In the civil law. A quasi contract, by which he who receives a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of fungible things, which have been paid to him through mistake, contracts towards the payer the obligation of returning him as much. Poth, de l'Usure, pt. 3, s. 1, a. 1.

This contract is called promutuum, because it has much resemblance to that of mutuum. This resemblance consists in this : first, that in both a sum of money or some fungible things are required; second, that in both there must be a transfer of the property in the thing ; third, that in both there must be returned the same amount or quantity of the thing received. But, though there is this general resemblance between the two, the mutuum differs essentially from the promutuum. The former is the actual contract of the parties, made expressly, but the latter is a quasi-contract, which is the effect of an error or mistake, 1 Bouvier, Inst. n. 1125.

PRONEPOS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandson. Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fol. 67.

PRONEPTIS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-granddaughter, Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fol. 67. Also, a niece's daughter. Ainsworth, Dict, PRONOTARY. First notary. See Prothonotary.

PRONOUNCE. To utter formally, officially, and solemnly; to declare or affirm; to declare aloud and in a formal manner. In this sense a court is said to "pronounce" judgment or a sentence. Griffin v. State, 12 Ga.App. 615(2), 618, 77 S.E. 1080; Sanders v. State, 18 Ga.App. 786, 90 S.E. 728.

PRONURUS. Lat. In the civil law. The wife of a grandson or great-grandson. Dig. 38, 10, 4, 6.

PROOF. The effect of evidence; the establishment of a fact by evidence. Nevling v. Com., 98 Pa. 328; Powell v. State, 101 Ga. 9, 29 S.E. 309, 65 Am.St.Rep, 277. New England Newspaper Pub. Co. v. Bonner, C.C.A.Mass., 77 F.2d 915, 916. Any fact or circumstance which leads the mind to the affirmative or negative of any proposition. Nauful v. National Loan & Exchange Bank of Columbia, 111 S.C. 309, 97 S.E. 843, 845. The conviction or persuasion of the mind of a judge or jury, by the exhibition of evidence, of the reality of a fact alleged. Ellis v. Wolfe-Shoemaker Motor Co., 227 Mo.App. 508, 55 S.W.2d 309.

"Testimony" is a more restricted term. For "Testimony," see that title.

Ayliffe defines "judicial proof" to be a clear and evident declaration or demonstration of a matter which was before doubtful, conveyed in a judicial manner by fit and proper arguments, and likewise by all other legal methods—First, by flt and proper arguments, such as conjectures, presumptions, indicia, and other adminicular ways and means; secondly, by legal methods, or methods according to law, such as witnesses, public instruments, and the like. Ayl. Par. 442.

Evidence and Proof Distinguished

"Proof" is the logically sufficient reason for assenting to the truth of a proposition advanced. In its juridical sense it is a term of wide import, and comprehends everything that may be adduced at a trial, within the legal rules, for the purpose of producing conviction in the mind of judge or jury, aside from mere argument; that is, everything that has a probative force intrinsically, and not merely as a deduction from, or combination of, original probative facts. But "evidence" is a narrower term, and includes only such kinds of proof as may be legally presented at a trial, by the act of the parties, and through the aid of such concrete facts as witnesses, records, or other documents. Thus, to urge a presumption of law in support of one's case is adducing proof, but it is not offering evidence. "Belief" is a subjective condition resulting from proof. It is a conviction of the truth of a proposition, existing in the mind, and induced by persuasion, proof, or argument addressed to the judgment.

The word "proof" seems properly to mean anything which serves, either immediately or mediately, to convince the mind of the truth or falsehood of a fact or proposition. It is also applied to the conviction generated in the mind by proof properly so called. The word "evidence" signifies, in its original sense, the state of being evident, i. e., plain, apparent, or notorious. But by an almost peculiar inflection of our language, it is applied to that which tends to render evident or to generate proof. Best, Ev. §§ 10, 11; Dupont v. Pelletier, 120 Me. 114, 113 A. 11, 12. "Evidence" differs from "proof" in that former may be false and of no probative value. State v. Howard, 162 La. 719, 111 So. 72, 75.

Proof in a strictly accurate and technical sense is the result or effect of evidence, while evidence is the medium or means by which a fact is proved or disproved, but the words "proof" and "evidence" may be used interchangeably. Walker v. State, 138 Ark. 517, 212 S.W. 319, 324; Latikos v. State, 17 Ala.App. 592, 88 So. 45, 47.

"Proof" is only link in chain of evidence relating to single thing or statement of single witness, and it is these links relating to entire proof which go to make up evidence. Cleveland Metal Bed Co. v. Kutz, 27 Ohio App. 245, 160 N.E. 725, 726.

Proof is the conclusion drawn from the evidence, Jones v. Clements, Tex.Civ.App., 41 S.W.2d 1069, 1070; it is the effect of evidence. State v. Crutcher, 231 Iowa 418, 1 N.W. 2d 195, 198. Sims v. Clayton, 193 S.C. 98, 7 S.E.2d 724, 728.

Proof is the perfection of evidence; for without evidence there is no proof, although there may be evidence which does not amount to proof : for example, if a man is found murdered at a spot where another has been seen walking but a short time before, this fact will be evidence to show that the latter was the murderer, but, standing alone, will be very far from proof of it.

"Proof," when used in a legislative enactment means competent and legal evidence, testimony conforming to fundamental rules of proof, excluding hearsay evidence, however trustworthy. Hand v. Nolan, 1 N.J.Misc. 428, 136 A. 430, 431.

No material difference between terms exists for purposes of instruction. Merrick v. United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore City, 163 Md. 641, 163 A. 816, 818.

Burden of proof. See that title.

Conclusive proof. As used in a statute providing for an action against a county for injury to cattle resulting from dipping for eradication of cattle ticks, it has been held to be equivalent to the expression, "to a moral certainty" or "beyond a reasonable doubt," meaning a higher degree of proof than by a preponderance of the evidence. Covington County v. Fite, 120 Miss. 421, 82 So. 308, 309.

Degree of proof. Refers to effect of evidence rather than medium by which truth is established, and in this sense expressions "preponderance of evidence" and "proof beyond reasonable doubt" are used. Sowle v. Sowle, 115 Neb. 795, 215 N.W. 122, 123.

Full proof. See Full.

Half proof. See Half.

Negative proof. See Positive Proof, infra.

Positive proof. Direct or affirmative proof; that which directly establishes the fact in question; as opposed to negative proof, which establishes the fact by showing that its opposite is not or cannot be true. Schrack v. McKnight, 84 Pa. 30.

Preliminary proof. See Preliminary.

Proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Such proof as precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support and which is wholly consistent with defendant's guilt and inconsistent with any other rational conclusion. State v. McDonough, 129 Conn. 483, 29 A.2d 582, 583.

Proof evident or presumption great. As used in constitutional provisions that accused shall be bailable unless for capital offenses when the "proof is evident" or "presumption great," means evidence clear and strong, and which leads well guarded, dispassionate judgment to conclusion that accused committed offense and will be punished capitally. Ex parte Coward, 145 Tex. Cr.R. 593, 170 S.W.2d 754, 755. Ex parte Goode, 123 Tex.Cr.R. 492, 59 S.W.2d 841; Ex parte Tully, 70 Fla. 1, 66 So. 296, 297.

Proof of debt. The formal establishment by a creditor of his debt or claim, in some prescribed manner, (as, by his affidavit or otherwise,) as a preliminary to its allowance, along with others, against an estate or property to be divided, such as the estate of a bankrupt or insolvent, a deceased person or a firm or company in liquidation.

Proof of spirits. Testing the strength of alcoholic spirits, also the degree of strength; as high proof, first proof, second, third, and fourth proofs. In the internal revenue law it is used in the sense of degree of strength. Louisville P. W. Co. v. Collector of Customs, C.C.A.Ky., 49 F. 561, 1 C.C.A. 371, 6 U.S.App. 53.

Proof of will. A term having the same meaning as "probate," (q. v.), and used interchangeably with it.

PROP. An upright post wedged between the roof and the floor of a mine to support the roof. Big Branch Coal Co. v. Wrenchie, 160 Ky. 668, 170 S.W. 14, 16.

PROPAGATE. To cause to spread. In re Atkinson's Will, 197 N.Y.S. 831, 832, 120 Misc.Rep. 186.

PROPATRUUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandfather's brother. Inst. 3, 6, 3; Bract. fol. 68b.

PROPATRUUS MAGNUS. In the civil law. A great-great-uncle.

PROPER. That which is fit, suitable, appropriate, adapted, correct. Knox v. Lee, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L.Ed. 287; Reasonably sufficient. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Kujawa, Tex.Civ.App., 265 S.W. 186, 187; Freedom Casket Co. v. McManus, C.C.A. Pa., 218 F. 323, 326.

Peculiar; naturally or essentially belonging to a person or thing; not common; appropriate; one's own.

PROPER CARE. That degree of care which a prudent man should use under like circumstances. Baskin v. Montgomery Ward & Co., C.C.A.N.C., 104 F.2d 531, 533.

PROPER EVIDENCE. Such evidence as may be presented under the rules established by law and recognized by the courts. The Betsey, 49 Ct.C1. 125, 131.

PROPER FEUDS. In feudal law, the original and genuine feuds held by purely military service.

PROPER INDEPENDENT ADVICE. As to donor means that he had preliminary benefit of conferring upon subject of intended gift with a person who was not only competent to inform him correctly of its legal effect, but who was so disassociated from interests of donee as to be in position to advise with donor impartially and confidentially as to consequences to donor of his proposed gift. Blume v. Blume, 90 N.J.Eq. 258, 106 A. 367, 368; Zwirtz v. Dorl, 123 Okl. 284, 253 P. 75, 77.

PROPER LOOKOUT. Duty imposed on motorist to keep such lookout requires motorist to use care, prudence, watchfulness, and attention of an ordinarily prudent person under same or similar circumstances. Pazen v. Des Moines Transp.

PROPER PARTY. As distinguished from a necessary party, is one who has an interest in the subject-matter of the litigation, which may be conveniently settled therein; one without whom a substantial decree may be made, but not a decree which shall completely settle all the questions which may be involved in the controversy and conclude the rights of all the persons who have any interest in the subject of the litigation. See Kelley v. Boettcher, C.C.A.Colo., 85 F. 55, 29 C. C.A. 14; Tatum v. Roberts, 59 Minn. 52, 60 N.W. 848.

PROPERTY. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one; in the strict legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government. Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc.Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536. The term is said to extend to every species of valuable right and interest. McAlister v. Pritchard, 230 S.W. 66, 67, 287 Mo. 494. More specifically, ownership; the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude every one else from interfering with it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 265. That dominion or indefinite right of use or disposition which one may lawfully exercise over particular things or subjects. Transcontinental Oil Co. v. Emmerson, 298 Ill. 394, 131 N.E. 645, 647, 16 A.L.R. 507. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. Barnes v. Jones, 139 Miss. 675, 103 So. 773, 775, 43 A.L.R. 673; Tatum Bros. Real Estate & Investment Co. v. Watson, 92 Fla. 278, 109 So. 623, 626. The highest right a man can have to anything; being used for that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man's courtesy. Jackson ex dem. Pearson v. Housel, 17 Johns. 281, 283.

The right of property is that sole and despotic dominion which one man claims and exercises over the external things of the world, in total exclusion of the right of any other individual in the universe. It consists in the free use, enjoyment, and disposal of all a person's acquisitions, without any control or diminution save only by the laws of the land. 1 Bl.Comm. 138; 2 Bl.Comm. 2, 15; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Washington Elec. Co., 197 Wash. 627, 86 P.2d 208, 217.

The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership, corporeal or incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal; everything that has an exchangeable value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments. Samet v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank of Baltimore, C.C.A.Md., 247 F. 669, 671; Globe Indemnity Co. v. Bruce, C.C.A. Okl., 81 F.2d 143, 150.

Absolute property. In respect to chattels personal property is said to be "absolute" where a man has, solely and exclusively, the right and also the possession of movable chattels. 2 Bl.Comm. 389. In the law of wills, a bequest or devise "to be the absolute property" of the beneficiary may pass a title in fee simple. Fackler v. Berry, 93 Va. 565, 25 S.E. 887, 57 Am.St.Rep. 819. Or it may mean that the property is to be held free from any limitation or condition or free from any control or disposition on the part of others. Wilson v. White, 133 Ind. 614, 33 N.E. 361, 19 L. R.A. 581.

Common property. A term sometimes applied to lands owned by a municipal corporation and held in trust for the common use of the inhabitants. Also property owned jointly by husband and wife under the community system. See Community.

Community property. See that title.

Ganancial property. See that title.

General property. The right and property in a thing enjoyed by the general owner. See Owner.

Literary property. See Literary.

Mixed property. Property which is personal in its essential nature, but is invested by the law with certain of the characteristics and features of real property. Heirlooms, tombstones, monuments in a church, and title-deeds to an estate are of this nature. 2 Bl.Comm. 428, 3 Barn. & Adol. 174; 4 Bing. 106; Minot v. Thompson, 106 Mass. 585.

Personal property. In broad and general sense, everything that is the subject of ownership, not coming under denomination of real estate. A right or interest in things personal, or right or interest less than a freehold in realty, or any right or interest which one has in things movable. Elkton Electric Co. v. Perkins, 145 Md. 224, 125 A. 851, 858. The term is generally applied to property of a personal or movable nature, as opposed to property of a local or immovable character, (such as land or houses,) the latter being called "real property," but is also applied to the right or interest less than a freehold which a man has in realty. Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 393, 16 L.R.A. 729; In re Bruckman's Estate, 195 Pa. 363, 45 A. 1078.

That kind of property which usually consists of things temporary and movable, but includes all subjects of property not of a freehold nature, nor descendible to the heirs at law. 2 Kent, Comm. 340.

Personal property is divisible into (1) corporeal personal property, which includes movable and tangible things, such as animals, ships, furniture, merchandise, etc.; and (2) incorporeal personal property, which consists of such rights as personal annuities, stocks, shares, patents, and copyrights. Sweet.

Private property. As protected from being taken for public uses, is such property as belongs absolutely to an individual, and of which he has the exclusive right of disposition; property of a specific, fixed and tangible nature, capable of being had in possession and transmitted to another, such as houses, lands, and chattels. Homochitto River Com'rs v. Withers, 29 Miss. 21, 64 Am.Dec. 126; Scranton v. Wheeler, 21 S.Ct. 48, 179 U.S. 141, 45 L.Ed. 126.

Property tax. In English law, this is understood to be an income tax payable in respect to landed property. In America, it is a tax imposed on property, whether real or personal, as distinguished from poll taxes, and taxes on successions, transfers, and occupations, and from license taxes. Garrett v. St. Louis, 25 Mo. 510, 69 Am.Dec. 475; In re Swift's Estate, 137 N.Y. 77, 32 N.E. 1096, 18 L.R.A. 709.

Public property. This term is commonly used as a designation of those things which are publici juris, (q. v.,) and therefore considered as being owned by "the public," the entire state or community, and not restricted to the dominion of a private person. It may also apply to any subject of property owned by a state, nation, or municipal corporation as such.

Qualified property. Property in chattels which is not in its nature permanent, but may at some times subsist and not at other times; such for example, as the property a man may have in wild animals which he has caught and keeps, and which are his only so long as he retains possession of them. 2 Bl.Comm. 389. Any ownership not absolute.

Real property. Land, and gentranywjateyer is erected or on or affixed tojand. Ldnp r v. Glenn, 37 Minn. 4, 33 N.W. 10. Also rights issuing out of am3exes1 to. and expreisable within or about land; a general term for lands, tenements, and hereditaments; property which, on the death of the owner intestate, passes to his heir. Ralston Steel Car Co. v. Ralston, 112 Ohio St. 306, 147 N.E. 513, 516, 39 A.L.R. 334. In respect to property, rf2LanciperssznaLssarespand very nearl m the civil law. Guyot, IMpert. Biens.

Separate property. See that title.

Special property. Property of a qualified, temporary, or limited nature; as distinguished from absolute, general, or unconditional property. Such is the property of a bailee in the article bailed, of a sheriff in goods temporarily in his hands under a levy, of the finder of lost goods while looking for the owner, of a person in wild animals which he has caught. Stief v. Hart, 1 N.Y. 20, 24.

PROPINQUI ET CONSANGUINEI. Lat. The nearest of kin to a deceased person.

PROPINQUIOR EXCLUDIT PROPINQUUM; PROPINQUUS REMOTUM; ET REMOTUS REMOTIOREM. Co.Litt. 10. He who is nearer excludes him who is near; he who is near, him who is remote; he who is remote, him who is remoter.

PROPINQUITY. Kindred; parentage.

PROPIOR SOBRINO, PROPIOR SOBRINA. Lat. In the civil law. The son or daughter of a great-uncle or great-aunt, paternal or maternal. Inst. 3, 6, 3.

PROPIOS, PROPRIOS. In Spanish law. Certain portions of ground laid off and reserved when a town was founded in Spanish America as the unalienable property of the town, for the purpose of erecting public buildings, markets, etc., or to be used in any other way, under the direction of the municipality, for the advancement of the revenues or the prosperity of the place. 12 Pet. 442, note.

Thus, there are solares, or house lots of a small size, upon which dwellings, shops, stores, etc., are to be built. There are suertes, or sowing grounds of a larger size, for cultivating or planting ; as gardens, vineyards, orchards, etc. There are ejidos, which are quite well described by our word "commons," and are lands used in common by the inhabitants of the place for pasture, wood, threshing ground, etc. ; and particular names are assigned to each, according to its particular use. Sometimes additional ejidos were allowed to be taken outside of the town limits. There are also propios or municipal lands, from which revenues are derived to defray the expenses of the municipal administration. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.

PROPONE. In Scotch law. To state. To propone a defense is to state or move it. 1 Karnes, Eq. pref.

In ecclesiastical and probate law. To bring forward for adjudication; to exhibit as basis of a claim; to proffer for judicial action.

PROPONENT. The propounder of a thing. Thus, the proponent of a will is the party who offers it for probate (q. v.).

PROPORTIONATE. Adjusted to something else according to certain rate of comparative relation. Hochsprung v. Stevenson, 82 Mont. 222, 266 P. 406, 408.

PROPORTUM. In old records. Purport; intention or meaning. Cowell.

PROPOSAL. An offer; something proffered. An offer, by one person to another, of terms and conditions with reference to some work or undertaking, or for the transfer of property, the acceptance whereof will make a contract between them. Eppes v. Mississippi, G. & T. R. Co., 35 Ala. 33. Signification by one person to another of his willingness to enter into a contract with him on the terms specified in the offer. Salisbury v. Credit Service, Del.Super., 199 A. 674, 681.

In English practice. A statement in writing of some special matter submitted to the consideration of a chief clerk in the court of chancery, pursuant to an order made upon an application ex parte, or a decretal order of the court. It is either for maintenance of an infant, appointment of a guardian, placing a ward of the court at the university or in the army, or apprentice to a trade; for the appointment of a receiver, the establishment of a charity, etc. Wharton.

PROPOSITIO INDEFINITA ZEQUIPOLLET VERSALL An indefinite proposition is equivalent to a general one.

PROPOSITION. A single logical sentence; also an offer to do a thing. Perry v. Dwelling House Ins. Co., 67 N.H. 291, 33 A. 731, 68 Am.St.Rep. 668.

PROPOSITUS. Lat. The person proposed; the person from whom a descent is traced.

PROPOUND. To offer; to propose. An executor or other person is said to propound a will when he takes proceedings for obtaining probate in solemn form. The term is also technically used, in England, to denote the allegations in the statement of claim, in an action for probate, by which the plaintiff alleges that the testator executed the will with proper formalities, and that he was of sound mind at the time. Sweet.

PROPRES. In French law. The term "propres" or "biens propres" as distinguished from "ae-auets" denotes all property inherited by a person, whether by devise or ab intestato, from his direct or collateral relatives, whether in the ascending or descending line; that is, in terms of the common law, property acquired by "descent" as distinguished from that acquired by "purchase."

PROPTER HONORIS RESPECTUM. On account of respect of honor or rank. See Challenge.

PROPTER IMPOTENTIAM. On account of helplessness. The term describes one of the grounds of a qualified property in wild animals, consisting in the fact of their inability to escape; as is the case with the young of such animals before they can fly or run. 2 Bl.Comm. 394.

PROPTER PRIVILEGIUM. On account of privilege. The term describes one of the grounds of a qualified property in wild animals, consisting in the special privilege of hunting, taking and killing them, in a given park or preserve, to the exclusion of other persons. 2 Bl.Comm. 394.

PRORATE. To divide, share, or distribute proportionally; to assess or apportion pro rata. Formed from the Latin phrase "pro rata," and said to be a recognized English word. Diamond Alkali Co. v. Henderson Coal Co., 287 Pa. 232, 134 A. 386, 388.

PROROGATED JURISDICTION. In Scotch law. A power conferred by consent of the parties upon a judge who would not otherwise be competent.

PROROGATION. Prolonging or putting off to another day. In English law, a prorogation is the continuance of the parliament from one session to another, as an adjournment is a continuation of the session from day to day. Wharton.

In the civil law. The giving time to do a thing beyond the term previously fixed. Dig. 2, 14, 27, 1.

PROROGUE. To direct suspension of proceedings of parliament; to terminate a session.

PROSCRIBED. In the civil law. Among the Romans, a man was said to be "proscribed" when a reward was offered for his head; but the term was more usually applied to those who were sentenced to some punishment which carried with it the consequences of civil death. Cod. 9, 49.

PROSECUTE. To follow up; to carry on an action or other judicial proceeding; to proceed against a person criminally. To "prosecute" an action is not merely to commence it, but includes following it to an ultimate conclusion. Service & Wright Lumber Co. v. Sumpter Valley Ry. Co., 81 Or. 32, 152 P. 262, 264.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY. The name of the public officer (in several states) who is appointed in each judicial district, circuit, or county, to conduct criminal prosecutions on behalf of the state or people. Holder v. State, 58 Ark. 473, 25 S.W. 279.

PROSECUTING WITNESS. The private person upon whose complaint or information a criminal accusation is founded and whose testimony is mainly relied on to secure a conviction at the trial; in a more particular sense, the person who was chiefly injured, in person or property, by the act constituting the alleged crime, (as in cases of robbery, assault, criminal negligence, bastardy, and the like,) and who instigates the prosecution and gives evidence.

PROSECUTIO LEGIS EST GRAVIS VEXATIO; EXECUTIO LEGIS CORONAT OPUS. Litigation is vexatious, but an execution crowns the work. Co.Litt. 289b.

PROSECUTION. In criminal law. A criminal action; a proceeding instituted and carried on by due course of law, before a competent tribunal, for the purpose of determining the guilt or innocence of a person charged with crime. U. S. v. Reisinger, 9 S.Ct. 99, 128 U.S. 398, 32 L.Ed. 480; Sigsbee v. State, 43 Fla. 524, 30 So. 816; People v. Ellis, 204 Mich. 157, 169 N.W. 930, 931. The continuous following up, through instrumentalities created by law, of a person accused of a public offense with a steady and fixed purpose of reaching a judicial determination of the guilt or innocence of the accused. Davenport v. State, 20 Okl. Cr. 253, 202 P. 18, 24.

The means adopted to bring a supposed offender to justice and punishment by due course of law, carried on in the name of the government. Summerour v. Fortson, 174 Ga. 862, 164 S.E. 809.

By an easy extension of its meaning "prosecution" is sometimes used to designate the state as the party proceeding in a criminal action, or the prosecutor, or counsel; as when we speak of "the evidence adduced by the prosecution."

The term is also frequently used respecting civil litigation, Eastman Marble Co. v. Vermont Marble Co., 236 Mass. 138, 128 N.E. 177, 182; and includes every step in action, from its commencement to its final determination. Ray Wong v. Earle C. Anthony, Inc., 199 Cal. 15, 247 P. 894, 895; The Brazil, C.C.A.Ill., 134 F.2d 929, 930.

Malicious prosecution. See Malicious.

PROSECUTOR. In practice. One who prosecutes another for a crime in the name of the government; one who instigates a prosecution by making affidavit charging a named person with the commission of a penal offense on which a warrant is issued or an indictment or accusation is based. State v. Snelson, 13 Okl.Cr. 88, 162 P. 444, 445; Ethridge v. State, 164 Ga. 53, 137 S.E. 784, 785. One who instigates the prosecution upon which an accused is arrested or who prefers an accusation against the party whom he suspects to be guilty. People v. Lay, 193 Mich. 476, 160 N.W. 467, 470. One who takes charge of a case and performs function of trial lawyer for the people. People v. Lee, 272 N.Y.S. 817, 151 Misc. 431.

Private prosecutor. One who sets in motion the machinery of criminal justice against a person whom he suspects or believes to be guilty of a crime, by laying an accusation before the proper authorities, and who is not himself an officer of justice. Heacock v. State, 13 Tex.App. 129; State v. Millain, 3 Nev. 425.

Prosecutor of the pleas. This name is given, in New Jersey, to the county officer who is charged with the prosecution of criminal actions, corresponding to the "district attorney" or "county attorney" in other states.

Public prosecutor. An officer of government (such as a state's attorney or district attorney) whose function is the prosecution of criminal actions, or suits partaking of the nature of criminal actions.

PROTECTIONIBUS DE. The English statute 33 Edw. I. St. 1, allowing a challenge to be entered against a protection, etc.

PROTECTIVE TARIFF. A law imposing duties on imports, with the purpose and the effect of discouraging the use of products of foreign origin, and consequently of stimulating the home production of the same or equivalent articles. R. E. Thompson, in Enc.Brit.

PROTECTOR OF SETTLEMENT. In English law. By the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74, § 32, power is given to any settlor to appoint any person or persons, not exceeding three, the "protector of the settlement." The object of such appointment is to prevent the tenant in tail from barring any subsequent estate, the consent of the protector being made necessary for that purpose.

PROTECTORATE. A state which has transferred the management of its more important international affairs to a stronger state. 1 Opp. 144; Salmond, Juris. 210. It implies only a partial loss of sovereignty, so that the protected state still retains a position in the family of nations. Moreover, the protected state remains so far independent of its protector that it is not obliged to be a party to a war carried on by the protector against a third state, nor are treaties concluded by the protector ipso facto binding upon the protected state; 1 Opp. 145-146.

The period during which Oliver Cromwell ruled in England. Also the office of protector.

PROTEST. A formal declaration made by a person interested or concerned in some act about to be done, or already performed, whereby he expresses his dissent or disapproval, or affirms the act against his will. The object of such a declaration is generally to save some right which would be lost to him if his implied assent could be made out, or to exonerate himself from some responsibility which would attach to him unless he expressly negatived his assent.

A notarial act, being a formal statement in writing made by a notary under his seal of office, at the request of the holder of a bill or note, in which it is declared that the bill or note described was on a certain day presented for payment, (or" acceptance,) and that such payment or acceptance was refused, and stating the reasons, if any, given for such refusal, whereupon the notary protests against all parties to such instrument, and declares that they will be held responsible for all loss or damage arising from its dishonor. Annvine Nat. Bank v. Kettering, 106 Pa. 531, 51 Am. Rep. 536; Dennistoun v. Stewart, 17 How. 607, 15 L.Ed. 228. It denotes also all the steps or acts accompanying dishonor necessary to charge an indorser. Townsend v. Lorain Bank, 2 Ohio St. 345; Piedmont Carolina Ry. Co. v. Shaw, C.C.A.N.C., 223 F. 973, 977; Maury v. Winlock & Toledo Logging & R. Co., 148 Wash. 572, 269 P. 815, 817.

A formal declaration made by a minority (or by certain individuals) in a legislative body that they dissent from some act or resolution of the body, usually adding the grounds of their dissent. The term, in this sense, seems to be particularly appropriate to such a proceeding in the English house of lords. Auditor General v. Board of Sup'rs, 51 N.W. 483, 89 Mich. 552.

The formal statement, usually in writing, made by a person who is called upon by public authority to pay a sum of money, in which he declares that he does not concede the legality or justice of the claim or his duty to pay it, or that he disputes the amount demanded; the object being to save his right to recover or reclaim the amount, which right would be lost by his acquiescence. Thus, taxes may be paid under "protest." Meyer v. Clark, 2 Daly (N.Y.) 509.

The name of a paper served on a collector of customs by an importer of merchandise, stating that he believes the sum charged as duty to be excessive, and that, although he pays such sum for the purpose of getting his goods out of the custom-house, he reserves the right to bring an action against the collector to recover the excess. U. S. Lian, C.C.A.N.Y., 10 F.2d 41, 42.

In maritime law. A written statement by the master of a vessel, attested by a proper judicial officer or a notary, to the effect that damage suffered by the ship on her voyage was caused by storms or other perils of the sea, without any negligence or misconduct on his own part. Marsh. Ins. 715. And see Cudworth v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 4 Rich.Law, S.C., 416, 55 Am.Dec. 692.

Notice of protest. A notice given by the holder of a bill or note to the drawer or indorser that the bill has been protested for refusal of payment or acceptance. First Nat. Bank v. Hatch, 78 Mo. 23; Roberts v. State Bank, 9 Port. (Ala.) 315.

Supra protest. In mercantile law. A term applied to an acceptance of a bill by a third person, after protest for nonacceptance by the drawee. 3 Kent, Comm. 87.

Waiver of protest. As applied to a note or bill, a waiver of protest implies not only dispensing with the formal act known as "protest," but also with that which ordinarily must precede it, viz., demand and notice of non-payment. Baker v. Scott, 29 Kan. 136, 44 Am.Rep. 628; First Nat. Bank v. Hartman, 110 Pa. 196, 2 A. 271.

PROTESTANDO. L. Lat. Protesting. The emphatic word formerly used in pleading by way of protestation. 3 Bl.Comm. 311. See Protestation.

PROTESTANTS. Those who adhered to the doctrine of Luther; so called because, in 1529, they protested against a decree of the emperor Charles V. and of the diet of Spires, and declared that they appealed to a general council. The name is now applied indiscriminately to all the sects, of whatever denomination, who have seceded from the Church of Rome. Enc.Lond. See Hale v. Everett, 53 N.H. 9, 16 Am.Rep. 82.

PROTESTATION. In pleading. The indirect affirmation or denial of the truth of some matter which cannot with propriety or safety be positively affirmed, denied, or entirely passed over. 3 Bl. Comm. 311. The exclusion of a conclusion. Co. Litt. 124.

In practice. An asseveration made by taking God to witness. A protestation is a form of as-severation which approaches very nearly to an oath. Wolff.Inst.Nat. § 375.

PROTHONOTARY. The title given to an officer who officiates as principal clerk of some courts. Vin. Abr. Trebilcox v. McAlpine, 46 Hun, N.Y., 469; Whitney v. Hopkins, 19 A. 1075, 135 Pa. 246.

PROTOCOL. A record or register. Among the Romans, protocollum was a writing at the head of the first page of the paper used by the notaries or tabelliones. Nov. 44.

In France, -,the minutes of notarial acts were formerly transcribed on registers, which were called "protocols." Toullier, Droit Civil Fr. liv. 3, t. 3, c. 6, s. 1, no. 413.

By the German law it signifies the minutes of any transaction. Encyc.Amer.

International Law

The first draft or rough minutes of an instrument or transaction; the original copy of a dispatch, treaty, or other document. Brande. A document serving- as the preliminary to, or opening of, any diplomatic transaction.

Old Scotch Practice

A book, marked by the clerk-register, and delivered to a notary on his admission, in which he was directed to insert all the instruments he had occasion to execute; to be preserved as a record. Bell.

PROTOCOLIZE. A term in Cuban law meaning to copy in the records of a notary. In re Moran's Will, 39 N.Y.S.2d 929, 934, 180 Misc. 469.

PROTOCOLO. In Spanish law. The original draft or writing of an instrument which remains in the possession of the escribano, or notary. White, New Recop. lib. 3, tit. 7, c. 5, § 2.

The term "protocolo," when applied to a single paper, means the first draft of an instrument duly executed before a notary—the matrix,—because it is the source from which must be taken copies to be delivered to interested parties as their evidence of right; and it also means a bound book in which the notary places and keeps in their order instruments executed before him, from which copies are taken for the use of parties interested. Downing v. Diaz, 80 Tex. 436, 16 S.W. 53.

PROTUTOR. Lat. In the civil law. He who, not being the tutor of a minor, has administered his property or affairs as if he had been, whether he thought himself legally invested with the authority of a tutor or not. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 630. He who marries a woman who is tutrix becomes, by the marriage, a protutor. The protutor is equally responsible with the tutor.

PROUT PATET PER RECORDUM. As appears by the record: In the Latin phraseology of pleading, this was the proper formula for making reference to a record.

PROVABLE. Susceptible of being proved. City Hall Building & Loan Ass'n of Newark v. Star Corporation, 110 N.J.L. 570, 166 A. 223, 224.

PROVE. To establish or make certain; to establish a fact or hypothesis as true by satisfactory and sufficient evidence. Blackstone Hall Co. v. Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co., 97 A. 484, 487, 39 R.I. 69.

To present a claim or demand against a bankrupt or Insolvent estate, and establish by evidence or affidavit that the same is correct and due, for the purpose of receiving a dividend on it. Tibbetts v. Trafton, 80 Me. 264, 14 A. 71; In re California Pac. IL Co., 4 Fed.Cas. 1060; In re Bigelow, 3 Fed.Cas. 343.

To establish the genuineness and due execution of a paper, propounded to the proper court or officer, as the last will and testament of a deceased person. See Probate.

PROVEN TERRITORY. In oil prospecting "proven territory" means territory so situated with reference to known producing wells as to establish the general opinion that, because of its location in relation to them, oil is contained in it. Minchew v. Morris, Tex.Civ.App., 241 S.W. 215, 217.

PROVER. In old Englsh law. A person who, on being indicted of treason or felony, and arraigned for the same, confessed the fact before plea pleaded, and appealed or accused others, his accomplices, in the same crime, in order to obtain his pardon. 4 Bl.Comm. 329, 330.

PROVIDE. To make, procure, or furnish for future use, prepare. Booth v. State, 179 Ind. 405, 100 N.E. 563, 566, L.R.A.1915B, 420, Ann.Cas. 1915D, 987. To supply; to afford; to contribute. Keith v. Rust Land & Lumber Co., 167 Wis. 528, 167 N.W. 432, 435.

PROVIDED. The word used in introducing a proviso (which see.) Ordinarily it signifies or expresses a condition; but this is not invariable, for, according to the context, it may import a covenant, or a limitation or qualification, or a restraint, modification, or exception to something which precedes. Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. 166, 18 L.Ed. 502; Robertson v. Caw, 3 Barb., N.Y., 418; Attorney General v. City of Methuen, 129 N.E. 662, 665, 236 Mass. 564.

PROVIDED BY LAW. This phrase when used in a constitution or statute generally means prescribed or provided by some statute. Lawson v. Kanawha County Court, 80 W.Va. 612, 92 S.E. 786, 789.

PROVINCE. The district into which a country has been divided; as, the province of. Canterbury, in England; the province of Languedoc, in France. A dependency or colony, as, the province of New Brunswick. Figuratively, power or .authority, as, it is the province of the court to judge of the law; that of the jury to decide on the facts. 1 Bl.Comm. 111; Tomlins.

PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTIONS. The decrees of provincial synods held under divers archbishops of Canterbury, from Stephen Langton, in the reign of Henry III., to Henry Chichele, in the reign of Henry V., and adopted also by the province of York in the reign of Henry VL Wharton.

PROVINCIAL COURTS. In English law. The several archi-episcopal courts in the two ecclesiastical provinces of England.

PROVINCIALE. A work on ecclesiastical law, by William Lyndwode, official principal to Archbishop Chichele in the reign of Edward IV. 4 Reeve, Eng.Law, c. 25, p. 117.

PROVINCIALIS. Lat. In the civil law. One who has his domicile in a province. Dig. 50, 16, 190.

PROVING OF THE TENOR. In Scotch practice. An action for proving the tenor of a lost deed. Bell.

PROVISION. Foresight of the chance of an event happening, sufficient to indicate that any present undertaking upon which its assumed realization might exert a natural and proper influence was entered upon in full contemplation of it as a future possibility. Appeal of Blake, 95 Conn. 194, 110 A. 833, 834.

In commercial law. Funds remitted by the drawer of a bill of exchange to the drawee in order to meet the bill, or property remaining in the drawee's hands or due from him to the drawer, and appropriated to that purpose.

In ecclesiastical law. A nomination by the pope to an English benefice before it became void; the term was afterwards indiscriminately applied to any right of patronage exerted or usurped by the pope.

In French law. An allowance or alimony granted by a judge to orie of the parties in a cause for his or her maintenance until a definite judgment is rendered. Dalloz.

In English history. A name given to certain statutes or acts of parliament, particularly those intended to curb the arbitrary or usurped power of the sovereign, and also to certain other ordinances or declarations having the force of law. See infra.

A term used in the reign of Henry III. to designate enactments of the King in Council, perhaps less solemn than statutes. The term "statutes" was a later term, with a changed conception of the solemnity of a statute, and is one that cannot easily be defined. It came into use in Edward I.'s reign, supplanting "provisions," which is characteristic of Henry III.'s reign, which had supplanted "assize," characteristic of the reigns of Henry II., Richard and John Maitland, 2 Sel. Essays in Anglo-Am. Leg. Hist. 80.

Provisions of Merton. Another name for the statute of Merton. See Merton, Statute of.

Provisions of Oxford. Legislative provisions (1258) forbidding the Chancellor to issue writs, other than those "of course" without the approval of the executive council, as well as the king. Certain provisions made in the Parliament of Oxford, 1258, for the purpose of securing the execution of the provisions of Magna Charta, against the invasions thereof by Henry III. The government of the country was in effect committed by these provisions to a standing committee of twenty-four, whose chief merit consisted in their representative character, and their real desire to effect an improvement in the king's government. Brown.

Provisions of Westminster. A name given to certain ordinances or declarations promulgated by the barons in A. D. 1259, for the reform of various abuses.

PROVISIONAL. Temporary; preliminary; tentative; taken or done by way of precaution or ad interim.

PROVISIONAL ASSIGNEES. In the former practice in bankruptcy in England. Assignees to whom the property of a bankrupt was assigned until the regular or permanent assignees were appointed by the creditors.

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE. A committee appointed for a temporary occasion.

PROVISIONAL COURT. A federal court with jurisdiction and powers governed by the order from which it derives its authority.

A provisional court established in conquered or occupied territory by military authorities, or the provisional government, is a federal court deriving its existence and all its powers from the federal government. 36 C.J.S., Federal Courts, § 320.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT. One temporarily established in anticipation of and to exist and continue until another (more regular or more permanent) shall be organized and instituted in its stead. Chambers v. Fisk, 22 Tex. 535.

PROVISIONAL INJUNCTION. Sometimes, though not correctly, used for interlocutory injunction.

PROVISIONAL ORDER. In English law. Under various acts of parliament, certain public bodies and departments of the government are authorized to inquire into matters which, in the ordinary course, could only be dealt with by a private act of parliament, and to make orders for their regulation. These orders have no effect unless they are confirmed by an act of parliament, and are hence called "provisional orders." Several orders may be confirmed by one act. The object of this mode of proceeding is to save the trouble and expense of promoting a number of private bills. Sweet.

PROVISIONAL REMEDY. A remedy provided for present need or for the immediate occasion; one adapted to meet a particular exigency. Particularly, a temporary process available to a plaintiff in a civil action, which secures him against loss, irreparable injury, dissipation of the property, etc., while the action is pending. Such are the remedies by injunction, appointment of a receiver, attachment, or arrest. The term is chiefly used in the codes of practice. Snavely v. Abbott Buggy Co., 36 Kan. 106, 12 P. 522.

PROVISIONAL SEIZURE. A remedy known under the law of Louisiana, and substantially the same in general nature as attachment of property in other states. Code Prac. La. 284, et seq. Set Nolte v. His Creditors, 6 Mart. N. S. (La.) 168.

PROVISIONES. Lat. In English history. Those acts of parliament which were passed to curb the arbitrary power of the crown. See Provision.

PROVISIONS. Food; victuals; articles of food for human consumption. State v. Angelo, 71 N.H. 224, 51 A. 905; Clatsop County v. Feldschau, 99 Or. 680, 196 P. 379, 380. The word does not include a mulch cow; Wilson v. McMillan, 80 Ga. 733, 6 S.E. 182; nor cotton; Butler v. Shiver, 79 Ga. 172, 4 S.E..115.

PROVISO. A condition or provision which is inserted in a deed, lease, mortgage, or contract, and on the performance or nonperformance of which the validity of the instrument frequently depends; it usually begins with the word "provided."

It always implies a condition, unless subsequent words change it to a covenant, Rich v. Atwater, 16 Conn. 419 ; but when a proviso contains the mutual words of the parties to a deed, it amounts to a covenant. 2 Co. 72 ; Cro.Eliz. 242.

The word "proviso" is generally taken for a condition, but it differs from it in several respects ; for a condition 'Is usually created by the grantor or lessor, but a proviso by the grantee or lessee. Jacob.

The mere use of technical terms which ordinarily denote a limitation or a condition subsequent is an unsafe test of the true nature of the estate granted ; the word "proviso" or "provided" itself being sometimes taken as a condition, sometimes as a limitation, and sometimes as a covenant. Stevens v. Galveston H. & S. A. Ry. Co., Tex.Com.App., 212 S. W. 639, 644.

A limitation or exception to a grant made or authority conferred, the effect of which is to declare that the one shall not operate, or the other be exercised, unless in the case provided. Clearwater Tp. v. Board of Sup'rs of Kalkaska County, 187 Mich. 516, 153 N.W. 824, 827.

A clause or part of a clause in a statute, the office of which is either to except something from the enacting clause, or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation of its extent. Cox v. Hart, 260 U.S. 427, 43 S.Ct. 154, 157, 67 L.Ed. 332; Riley Pennsylvania Oil Co. v. Symmonds, 195 Mo.App. 111, 190 S.W. 1038, 1040. Strain v. East Bay Municipal Utility Dist., 21 Cal.App.2d 281, 69 P.2d 191, 193.

A proviso is sometimes misused to introduce independent pieces of legislation. Cox v. Hart, 43 S.Ct. 154, 157, 260 U.S. 427, 67 L.Ed. 332. Its proper use, however, is to qualify what is affirmed in the body of the act, section, or paragraph preceding it, or to except something from the act, but not to enlarge the enacting clause. State Public Utilities Commission v. Early, 285 Ill. 469, 121 N.E. 63, 66; And it cannot be held to enlarge the scope of the statute ; Jordan v. Town of South Boston, 138 Va. 838, 122 S.E. 265, 267.

While a proviso is commonly found at the end of the act or section, and is usually introduced by the word "provided," that word is not necessary, the matter and not the form of the succeeding words controlling. Mackenzie v. Douglas County, 81 Or. 442, 159 P. 625, 627.

The proper use of provisoes in drafting acts is explained by Coode on Legislative Construction. The early, and, as he thinks, the correct use, is by way of taking special cases out of general enactments and providing for them. The courts have generally assumed that such was the proper mode of using a proviso. It is incorrectly used to introduce mere exceptions to the operation of the enactment where no special provision is made for the exception; these are better expressed as exceptions.

Exception and proviso distinguished. See Exception.

PROVISO EST PROVIDERE PRAESENTIA ET FUTURA, NON PR1ETERITA. Coke, 72; Vaugh. 279. A proviso is to provide for the present or future, not the past.

PROVISO, TRIAL BY. In English practice. A trial brought on by the defendant, in cases where the plaintiff, after issue joined, neglects to proceed to trial; so called from a clause in the writ to the sheriff, which directs him, in case two writs come to his hands, to execute but one of them. 3 Bl. Comm. 357. The defendant may take out a venire facias to the sheriff, which hath in it these words, Proviso quod, etc., provided that if the plaintiff shall take out any writ to that purpose, the sheriff shall summon but one jury on them both. Jacob; Old Nat. Brev. 159.

PROVISOR. In old English law. A provider, or purveyor. Spelman. Also a person nominated to be the next incumbent of a benefice (not yet vacant) by the pope. 4 Bl.Comm. 111. He that hath the care of providing things necessary; but more especially one who sued to the court of Rome for a provision. Jacob; 25 Edw. III.

PROVISORS, STATUTE OF. A statute passed in 25 Edw. III. forbidding the Pope to nominate to benefices, and declaring that the election of bishops and other dignitaries should be free, and all rights of patrons preserved. Taswell-Langmead, Engl. Constit. Hist. 322. See Pr munire.

PROVOCATION. The act of inciting another to do a particular deed. That which arouses, moves, calls forth, causes, or occasions. Manson v. State, 14 Ga.App. 837, 82 S.E. 763, 764.

Such conduct or actions on the part of one person towards another as tend to arouse rage, resentment, or fury in the latter against the former, and thereby cause him to do some illegal act against or in relation to the person offering the provocation. State v. Byrd, 52 S.C. 480, 30 S.E. 482.

"Provocation" which will reduce killing to manslaughter must be of such character as will, in mind of average reasonable man, stir resentment likely to cause violence, obscure the reason, and lead to action from passion rather than judgment. Wooten v. State, 171 Tenn. 362, 103 S.W. 2d 324, 326. There must be a state of passion without time to cool placing defendant beyond control of his reason. Commonwealth v. Geld, 282 Pa. 434, 128 A. 77, 79. Provocation carries with it the idea of some physical aggression or some assault which suddenly arouses heat and passion in the person assaulted. State v. Hollis, 108 S.C. 442, 95 S.E. 74, 76.

PROVOKE. To excite; to stimulate; to arouse. To irritate, or enrage. State v. Milosovich, 42 Nev. 263, 175 P. 139, 141.

PROVOKING A DIFFICULTY. The law on this point arises only where deceased was the attacking party, and his attack was brought about by the words or acts of accused, intended to bring on the attack, in order that advantage might be taken thereof by him to slay his adversary and escape the consequences. Carter v. State, 87 Tex.Cr.R. 200, 220 S.W. 335, 336.

PROVOST. The principal magistrate of a royal burgh in Scotland. A governing officer of certain universities or colleges. The chief dignitary of a cathedral or collegiate church.

In France, this title was formerly given to some presiding judges.

PROVOST-MARSHAL. In English law, an officer of the royal navy who had the charge of prisoners taken at sea, and sometimes also on land.

In military law, the officer acting as the head of the military police of any post, camp, city or other place in military occupation, or district under the reign of martial law. He or his assistants may, at atiy time, arrest and detain for trial, persons subject fo military law committing offenses, and may carry into execution any punishments to be inflicted in pursuance of a court martial.

PROXENETA. Lat. In the civil law. A broker; one who negotiated or arranged the terms of a contract between two parties, as between buyer and seller; one who negotiated a marriage; a match-maker. Calvin.; Dig. 50, 14, 3.

PROXIMATE. Immediate; nearest; direct, next in order. In its legal sense, closest in causal connection. Menger v. Laur, 55 N.J.L. 205, 26 A. 180, 20 L.R.A. 61. Poore v. Edgar Bros. Co., 33 Cal. App.2d 6, 90 P.2d 808 ' 810. Next in relation to cause and effect. Godfrey v. Vinson, 215 Ala. 166, 110 So. 13, 16.

PROXIMATE CAUSE. That which, in a natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient intervening cause, produces the injury, and without which the result would not have occurred. Swayne v. Connecticut Co., 86 Conn. 439, 85 A. 634, 635; Lemos v. Madden, 28 Wyo. 1, 200 P. 791, 793. That which is nearest in the order of responsible causation. Butcher v. R. Co., 37 W. Va. 180, 16 S.E. 457, 18 L.R.A. 519. That which stands next in causation to the effect, not necessarily in time or space but in causal relation. Cundiff v. City of Owensboro, 193 Ky. 168, 235 S.W. 15, 16; Carlock v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 55 Colo. 146, 133 P. 1103, 1104. The last negligent act contributory to an injury, without which such injury would not have resulted. Estep v. Price, 93 W.Va. 81, 115 S.E. 861, 863. The dominant cause. Ballagh v. Interstate Business Men's Acc. Ass'n, 176 Iowa 110, 155 N.W. 241, 244, L.R.A.1917A, 1050; The moving or producing cause. Eberhardt v. Glasco Mut. Tel. Ass'n, 91 Kan. 763, 139 P. 416, 417, Buchanan v. Hurd Creamery Co., 215 Iowa 415, 246 N.W. 41. The efficient cause; the one that necessarily sets the other causes in operation. Baltimore & 0. R. Co. v. Ranier, 84 Ind.App. 542, 149 N.E. 361, 364. The causes that are merely incidental or instruments of a superior or controlling agency are not the proximate causes and the responsible ones, though they may be nearer in time to the result. It is only when the causes are independent of each other that the nearest is, of course, to be charged with the disaster. Blythe v. Railway Co., 15 Colo. 333, 25 P. 702, 11 L.R.A. 615, 22 Am.St.Rep. 403; act or omission immediately causing or failing to prevent injury; act or omission occurring or concurring with another, which, had it not happened, injury would not have been inflicted. Herron v. Smith Bros., 116 Cal.App. 518, 2 P.2d 1012, 1013.

"Proximate cause" is distinguishable from "immediate cause." Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Cardwell, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W. 1073, 1076. The immediate cause is generally referred to in the law as the nearest cause in point of time and space, while an act or omission may be the proximate cause of an injury without being the immediate cause. Thus, where several causes combine to produce an injury, the last intervening cause is commonly referred to as the immediate cause, although some other agency more remote in time or space may, in causal relation, be the nearer to the result, and thus be the proximate responsible cause. Dunbar v. Davis, 32 Ga.App. 192, 122 S. E. 895, citing, among others, Insurance Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 117, 130, 24 L.Ed. 395; Terry Shipbuilding Corp. v. Gritflan, 112 S.E. 374, 153 Ga. 390. Moreover, there may be two or more proximate causes, but only one immediate cause. Thomas v. Chicago Embossing Co., 307 Ill. 134, 138 N.E. 285, 287; American Stone Ballast Co. v. Marshall's Adm'r, 206 Ky. 133, 266 S.W. 1051, 1052. But the two terms are sometimes used interchangeably. Wilczynski v. Milwaukee Electric Ry. & Light Co., 171 Wis. 508, 177 N.W. 876, 877; but see Wright v. Greenwood Telephone Co., 108 S.C. 84, 93 S.E. 398, 399; Knight v. Wessler, 67 Utah, 354, 248 P. 132, 133. See, also, Immediate Cause.

PROXIMATE CONSEQUENCE OR RESULT. One which succeeds naturally in the ordinary course of things. Swaim v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 187 Iowa 466, 174 N.W. 384, 386. A consequence which, in addition to being in the train of physical causation, is not entirely outside the range of expectation or probability, as viewed by ordinary men. The Mars, D.C.N.Y., 9 F.2d 183, 184. One ordinarily following from the negligence complained of, unbroken by any independent cause, which might have been reasonably foreseen. One which a prudent and experienced man, fully acquainted with all the circumstances which in fact existed, would, at time of the negligent act, have thought reasonably possible to follow, if it had occurred to his mind. Coast S. S. Co. v. Brady, C.C.A.Ala., 8 F.2d 16, 19. A mere possibility of the injury is not sufficient, where a reasonable man would not consider injury likely to result from the act as one of its ordinary and probable results.

PROXIMATE DAMAGES. See Damages.

PROXIMATELY. Directly or immediately. Kentucky Traction & Terminal Co. v. Bain, 161 Ky. 44, 170 S.W. 499, 501. Pertaining to that which in an ordinary natural sequence produces a specific result, no independent disturbing agency intervening. Weaver v. Landis, 66 Cal.App.2d 34, 151 P.2d 884, 886.

PROXIMITY. Kindred between two persons. Dig. 38, 16, 8. Quality or state of being next in time, place, causation, influence, etc.; immediate nearness. Webster, Dict.

PROXIMUS EST CUI NEMO ANTECEDIT, SUPREMUS EST QUEM NEMO SEQUITUR. He is next whom no one precedes; he is last whom no one follows. Dig. 50, 16, 92.

PROXY. (Contracted from procuracy.) A person who is substituted or deputed by another to represent him and act for him, particularly in some meeting or public body. An agent representing and acting for principal. Also the instrument containing the appointment of such person. Manson v. Curtis, 223 N.Y. 313, 119 N.E. 559, 561, Ann.Cas.1918E, 247; Cliffs Corporation v. United States, C.C.A.Ohio, 103 F.2d 77, 80.

In ecclesiastical law. A person who is appointed to manage another man's affairs in the ecclesiastical courts; a judicial proctor.

Also an annual payment made by the parochial clergy to the bishop, on visitations. Tomlins.

PRUDENCE. Carefulness, precaution, attentiveness, and good judgment, as applied to action or conduct. That degree of care required by the exigencies or circumstances under which it is to be exercised. Cronk v. Railway Co., 52 N.W. 420, 3 S.D. 93. This term, in the language of the law, is commonly associated with "care" and "diligence" and contrasted with "negligence." See those titles.

PRUDENT. Sagacious in adapting means to end, circumspect in action, or in determining any line of conduct, practically wise, judicious, careful, discreet, circumspect, sensible. Tureen v. Peoples Motorbus Co. of St. Louis, Mo.App., 97 S.W.2d 847, 848. In defining negligence, practically synonymous with cautious. Malcolm v. Mooresville Cotton Mills, 191 N.C. 727, 133 S.E. 7, 9; Hurley v. Gus Blass Co., 191 Ark. 917, 88 S.W.2d 850, 851.

PRUDENTER AGIT QUI PRZECEPTO LEGIS OBTEMPERAT. 5 Coke, 49. He acts prudently who obeys the command of the law.

PRUDENTIAL AFFAIRS. Within the meaning of a statute authorizing the making of by-laws by municipalities for the directing and managing of their prudential affairs, this term includes those matters for the necessary convenience of the inhabitants. Clarke v. City of Fall River, 219 Mass. 580, 107 N.E. 419, 421.

PRUDHOMMES, PRODES HOMMES. This word was used in early Norman times, and before, in a general sense to signify freeholders or respectable burgesses; sometimes a special body of such persons acting as magistrates or judges. Black Book of Adm. IV, 186. There were prudhommes of the sea; of merchants; of the corporation of Barcelona; and of the gild of coopers. Usually two sat.

PRYK. A kind of service of tenure. Blount says it signifies an old-fashioned spur with one point only, which the tenant, holding land by this tenure, was to find for the king. Wharton.

PSEUDO. False, counterfeit, pretended, spurious. State v. Skinner, 37 Nev. 107, 139 P. 773, 776.

PSEUDOCYESIS. In medical jurisprudence. A frequent manifestation of hysteria in women, in which the abdomen is inflated, simulating pregnancy: the patient aiding in the deception.

PSEUDOGRAPH. False writing.

PSYCHO-DIAGNOSIS. In medical jurisprudence. A method of investigating the origin and cause of any given disease or morbid condition by examination of the mental condition of the patient, the application of various psychological tests, and an inquiry into the past history of the patient, with a view to its bearing on his present psychic state.

PSYCHOLOGICAL FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact which can only be perceived mentally; such as the motive by which a person is actuated. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 130, 131.

PSYCHONEUROSIS. See Insanity.

PSYCHOPATH. Person having mental disorder. More commonly, mental disorder not amounting to insanity or taking the specific form of a psychoneurosis, but characterized by a defect of character or personality, eccentricity, emotional instability, inadequacy or perversity of conduct, under conceit and suspiciousness, or lack of common sense, social feeling, self-control, truthfulness, energy, or persistence. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Frost, C.C.A.R.I., 164 F.2d 542, 545.

Synonymous with "sociopathic personality"

PSYCHOSIS. A disease of the mind; especially, a functional mental disorder, that is, one unattended with structural changes in the brain. Davis v. State, 153 Ga. 154, 112 S.E. 280, 282. See Insanity.

PSYCHOTHERAPY. A method or system of alleviating or curing certain forms of disease, particularly diseases of the nervous system or such as are traceable to nervous disorders, by suggestion, persuasion, encouragement, the inspiration of hope or confidence, the discouragement of morbid memories, associations, or beliefs, and other similar means addressed to the mental state of the patient, without (or sometimes in conjunction with) the administration of drugs or other physical remedies.

PTOMAINE. In medical jurisprudence. An alkaloidal product of the decomposition or putrefaction of albuminous substances, as, in animal and vegetable tissues. Ptomaines are sometimes poisonous, but not invariably. Examples of poisonous ptomaines are those occurring in putrefying fish and the tyrotoxicons of decomposing milk and milk products. They are sometimes found in a less harmful form in preserved vegetable matter. Drury v. Armour & Co., 140 Ark. 371, 216 S.W. 40, 42.

PUBERTY. The earliest age at which persons are capable of begetting or bearing children. Webster, Dict.

In the civil and common law, the age at which one becomes capable of contracting marriage. It is in boys fourteen, and in girls twelve years. Ayliffe, Pand. 63; Toullier, Dr. Civ. Fr. tom. 5, p. 100; Inst. 1, 22; Dig. 1, 7, 40, 1; Code 5, 60, 3;

1 B1.Comm. 436; 2 Kent, Comm. 78; State v. Pierson, 44 Ark. 265. Otherwise called the "age of consent to marriage."

PUBLIC, n. The whole body politic, or the aggregate of the citizens of a state, district, or municipality. Knight v. Thomas, 93 Me. 494, 45 A. 499. The inhabitants of a state, county, or community. People v. Turnbull, 184 Ill.App. 151, 155; Commonwealth v. Bosworth, 257 Mass. 212, 153 N.E. 455, 457. In one sense, everybody; and accordingly the body of the people at large; the community at large, without reference to the geographical limits of any corporation like a city, town, or county; the people. In another sense the word does not mean all the people, nor most of the people, nor very many of the people of a place, but so many of them as contradistinguishes them from a few. Accordingly, it has been defined or employed as meaning the inhabitants of a particular place; all the inhabitants of a particular place; the people of the neighborhood. People v. Powell, 280 Mich. 699, 274 N.W. 372, 373, 111 A.L.R. 721; State ex rel. Maher v. Baker, 88 Ohio St. 165, 102 N.E. 732, 736. Also, a part of the inhabitants of a community. Davis v. People, 79 Colo. 642, 247 P. 801, 802.

PUBLIC, adj. Pertaining to a state, nation, or whole community; proceeding from, relating to, or affecting the whole body of people or an entire community. Open to all; notorious. Common to all or many; general; open to common use. Morgan v. Creep 46 Vt. 786, 14 Am.Rep. 640; Crane v. Waters, C.C.Mass., 10 F. 621. Belonging to the people at large; relating to or affecting the whole people of a state, nation, or community; not limited or restricted to any particular class of the community. People v. Powell, 280 Mich. 699, 274 N.W. 372, 373, 111 A.L.R. 721.

A distinction has been made between the terms "public" and "general." They are sometimes used as synonymous. The former term is applied strictly to that which concerns all the citizens and every member of the state ; while the latter includes a lesser, though still a large, portion of the community. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 128.

As to public "Accounts," "Acknowledgment," "Act," "Administrator," "Agent," "Attorney," "Auction," "Breach," "Blockade," "Boundary," "Bridge," "Business," "Capacity," "Carrier," "Chapel," "Charge," "Charity," "Company," "Corporation," "Debt," "Document," "Domain," "Easement," "Enemy," "Ferry," "Funds," "Good," "Grant," "Health," "Highway," "Holiday," "Hospital," "House," "Indecency," "Institution," "Market," "Minister," "Money," "Necessity," "Notice," "Nuisance," "Office," "Officer," "Peace," "Policy," "Pond," "Printing," "Property," "Prosecutor," "Record," "Revenue," "River," "Road," "Sale," "School," "Seal," "Sewer," "Square," "Stock," "Store," "Tax," "Things," "Thoroughfare," "Trial," "Trust," "Trustee," "Verdict," "Vessel," "War," "Works," "Worship," and "Wrongs," see those titles.

Public appointments. Public offices or stations which are to be filled by the appointment of individuals, under authority of law, instead of by election.

Public building. One of which the possession and use, as well as the property in it, are in the public. Pancoast v. Troth, 34 N.J.Law, 383. Any building held, used, or controlled exclusively for public purposes by any department or branch of government, state, county, or municipal, without reference to the ownership of the building or of the realty upon which it is situated. Shepherd v. State, 16 Ga.App. 248, 85 S.E. 83. A building belonging to or used by the public for the transaction of public or quasi public business. Lewis v. Commonwealth, 197 Ky. 449, 247 S.W. 749, 750.

Public character. An individual who asks for and desires public recognition, such as a statesman, author, artist, or inventor. Corliss v. E. W. Walker Co., C.C.Mass., 64 F. 280, 31 L.R.A. 283.

Public convenience. In a statute requiring the issuance of a certificate of public convenience and necessity by the Public Utilities Commission for the operation of a motorbus line, "convenience" is not used in its colloquial sense as synonymous with handy Qr easy of access, but in accord with its regular meaning of suitable and fitting, and "public convenience" refers to something fitting or suited to the public need. Abbott v. Public Utilities Commission, 48 R.I. 196, 136 A. 490, 491.

Public interest. Something in which the public, the community at large, has some pecuniary interest, or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected. It does not mean anything so narrow as mere curiosity, or as the interests of the particular localities, which may be affected by the matters in question. State v. Crockett, 86 Okl. 124, 206 P. 816, 817.

If by public permission one is making use of public property and he chances to be the only one with whom the public can deal with respect to the use of that property, his business is affected with a public interest which requires him to deal with the public on reasonable terms. Cooley, Const.Lim. 746. The circumstances which clothe a particular kind of business with a "public interest," as to be subject to regulation, must be such as to create a peculiarly close relation between the public and those engaged in it and raise implications of an affirmative obligation on their part to be reasonable in dealing with the public. One does not devote his property or business to a public use, or clothe it with a public interest, merely because he makes commodities for and sells to the public in common callings such as those of the butcher, baker, tailor, etc. Chas. Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations of State of Kansas, 43 S.Ct. 630, 633, 262 U.S. 522, 67 L.Ed. 1103, 27 A.L.R. 1280. A business is not affected with a public interest merely because it is large, or because the public has concern in respect of its maintenance, or derives benefit, accommodation, ease, or enjoyment from it. Tyson & Bro.-United Theatre Ticket Offices v. Banton, 47 S.Ct. 426, 273 U.S. 418, 71 L.Ed. 718, 58 A.L.R. 1236.

Public lands. The general public domain; unappropriated lands; lands belonging to the United States and which are subject to sale or other disposal under general laws, and not reserved or held back for any special governmental or public purpose. Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U.S. 763, 23 L.Ed. 769; State v. Telegraph Co., 52 La.Ann. 1411, 27 So. 796. See Lands.

Public laundry. This term, in Labor Law, N. Y. § 296 (Consol. Laws, c. 31), includes a laundry doing laundry work that is ultimately distributed to the public, and is not limited to laundry doing custom work only. Van Zandt's, Inc., v. Department of Labor of State of New York, 129 Misc. 747, 222 N.Y.S. 450, 451.

Public lavatories. Such as are open to all who may choose to use them. Irvine v. Commonwealth, 124 Va. 817, 97 S.E. 769.

The term may, however, include a washroom in a lodging house for men guests only. City of Chicago v. McGuire, 185 Ill. App. 589, 590.

Public law. That branch or department of law which is concerned with the state in its political or sovereign capacity, including constitutional and administrative law, and with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where the state is regarded as the subject of the right or object of the duty,—including criminal law and criminal procedure,—and the law of the state, considered in its quasi private personality, e., as capable of holding or exercising rights, or acquiring and dealing with property, in the character of an individual. Holl. Jur. 106, 300. That portion of law which is concerned with political conditions; that is to say, with the powers, rights, duties, capacities, and incapacities which are peculiar to political superiors, supreme and subordinate. Aust. Jur. In one sense, a designation given to international law, as distinguished from the laws of a particular nation or state. In another sense, a law or statute that applies to the people generally of the nation or state adopting or enacting it, is denominated a public law, as contradistinguished from a private law, affecting only an individual or a small number of persons. Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 773, 14 Am.Rep. 640.

Public offense. An act or omission forbidden by law, and punishable as by law provided. Ford v. State, 7 Ind.App. 567, 35 N.E. 34.

Public passage. A right, subsisting in the public, to pass over a body of water, whether the land under it be public or owned by a private person. This term is synonymous with public highway, with this difference: by the latter is understood a right to pass over the land of another; by the former is meant the right of going over the water which is on another's land. Carth. 193; Hamm. N. P. 195.

Public place. A place to which the general public has a right to resort; not necessarily a place devoted solely to the uses of the public, but a place which is in point of fact public rather than private, a place visited by many persons and usually accessible to the neighboring public. People v. Whitman, 178 App.Div. 193, 165 N.Y.S. 148, 149. Roach v. Eugene, 23 Or. 376, 31 P. 825. Any place .so situated that what passes there can be seen by any considerable number of persons, if they happen to look. Steph. Cr. L. 115. Also, a place in which the public has an interest as affecting the safety, health, morals, and welfare of the community. A place exposed to the public, and where the public gather together or pass to and fro. Lewis v. Commonwealth, 197 Ky. 449, 247 S.W. 749, 750.

Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage, are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. People v. Salem Tp. Board, 20 Mich. 485, 4 Am.Rep. 400; Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) p. 454, et seq.; Hagler v. Small, 307 Ill. 460, 138 N.E. 849, 854. The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. State v. Dixon, 66 Mont. 76, 213 P. 227, 231. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community, and not merely as individuals. Stevenson v. Port of Portland, 82 Or. 576, 162 P. 509, 511. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised to promote such public purpose or public business. Green v. Frazier, 44 N.D. 395, 176 N.W. 11, 17. See, also, City of Tombstone y. Macia, 30 Ariz. 218, 245 P. 677, 679, 46 A.L.R. 828.

Public service. A term applied in modern usage to the objects and enterprises of certain kinds of corporations, which specially serve the needs of the general public or conduce to the comfort and convenience of an entire community, such as railroad, gas, water, and electric light companies; and companies furnishing motor vehicle transportation. Harrison v. Big Four Bus Lines, 217 Ky. 119, 288 S.W. 1049. A public service or quasi public corporation is one private in its ownership, but which has an appropriate franchise from the state to provide for a necessity or convenience of the general public, incapable of being furnished by private competitive business, and dependent for its exercise on eminent domain or governmental agency. Attorney General v. Haverhill Gaslight Co., 215 Mass. 394, 101 N.E. 1061, 1063, Ann.Cas.1914C, 1266. It is one of a large class of private corporations which on account of special franchises conferred on them owe a duty to the public which they may be compelled to perform. State ex rel. Coco v. Riverside Irr. Co., 142 La. 10, 76 So. 216, 218.

Public service commission. A board or commission created by the legislature to exercise power of supervision or regulation over public utilities or public service corporations. Railroad Commission of Alabama v. Northern Alabama Ry. Co., 182 Ala. 357, 62 So. 749. Such a commission is a legal, administrative body, provided for the administration of certain matters within the police power, with power to make regulations as to certain matters when required for the public safety and convenience, and to determine facts on which existing laws shall operate. Bessette v. Goddard, 87 Vt. 77, 88 A. 1, 3. People ex rel. New York Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission,

Public, true, and notorious. The old form by which charges in the allegations in the ecclesiastical courts were described at the end of each particular.

Public use, in constitutional provisions restricting the exercise of the right to take private property in virtue of eminent domain, means a use concerning the whole community as distinguished from particular individuals. But each and every member of society need not be equally interested in such use, or be personally and directly affected by it; if the object is to satisfy a great public want or exigency, that is sufficient. Rindge Co. v. Los Angeles County, 43 S.Ct. 689, 692, 262 U.S. 700, 67 L.Ed. 1186. The term may be said to mean public usefulness, utility, or advantage, or what is productive of general benefit. Williams v. City of Norman, 85 Okl. 230, 205 P. 144, 148. But it is not synonymous with public benefit. Ferguson v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 202 Iowa, 508, 210 N.W. 604, 606. It may be limited to the inhabitants of a small or restricted locality, but must be in common, and not for a particular individual. Pocantico Water Works Co. v. Bird, 130 N.Y. 249, 29 N.E. 246. The use must be a needful one for the public, which cannot be surrendered without obvious general loss and inconvenience. Jeter v. Vinton-Roanoke Water Co., 114 Va. 769, 76 S.E. 921, 925, Ann.Cas.1914C, 1029.

In patent law, a public use is entirely different from a use by the public. Los Angeles Lime Co. v. Nye, C.C.A.Cal., 270 F. 155, 162. If an inventor allows his machine to be used by other persons generally, either with or without compensation, or if it is, with his consent, put on sale for such use, then it will be in "public use" and on public sale. David E. Kennedy v. United Cork Cos., C. C.A.N.Y., 225 F. 371, 372. Experimental use is never "public use" if conducted in good faith to test the qualities of the invention, and for no other purpose not naturally incidental. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Texas Co., D.C.Del., 251 F. 634, 651.

PUBLIC UTILITY. A business or service which is engaged in regularly supplying the public with some commodity or service which is of public consequence and need, such as electricity, gas, water, transportation, or telephone or telegraph service. Gulf States Utilities Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 46 S.W.2d 1018, 1021. Any agency, instrumentality, business industry or service which is used or conducted in such manner as to affect the community at large, that is which is not limited or restricted to any particular class of the community. State Public Utilities Commission v. Monarch Refrigerating Co., 267 Ill. 528, 108 N.E. 716, Ann.Cas. 1916A, 528. The test for determining if a concern is a public utility is whether it has held itself out as ready, able and willing to serve the public. Humbird Lumber Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, 39 Idaho, 505, 228 P. 271. The term implies a public use of an article, product, or service, carrying with it the duty of the producer or manufacturer, or one attempting to furnish the service, to serve the public and treat all persons alike, without discrimination. Highland Dairy Farms Co. v. Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., 308 Ill. 294, 139 N.E. 418, 420. It is synonymous with "public use," and refers to persons or corporations charged with the duty to supply the public with the use of property or facilities owned or furnished by them. Buder v. First Nat. Bank in St. Louis, C.C.A.Mo., 16 F.2d 990, 992. To constitute a true "public utility," the devotion to public use must be of such character that the public generally, or that part of it which has been served and which has accepted the service, has the legal right to demand that that service shall be conducted, so long as it is continued, with reasonable efficiency under reasonable charges. Richardson v. Railroad Commission of California, 191 Cal. 716, 218 P. 418, 420. The devotion to public use must be of such character that the product and service is available to the public generally and indiscriminately, or there must be the acceptance by the utility of public franchises or calling to its aid the police power of the state. Southern Ohio Power Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 110 Ohio St. 246, 143 N.E. 700, 701, 34 A.L.R. 171.

Line

Chief or primary conductors to exclusion of subsidiary transmission facilities. Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 131 N.J.L. 565, 37 A.2d 111, 112, 113; "lines" as used in sense of "mains". Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 130 N.J.L. 364, 33 A.2d 355, 356; main or principal conduit. Jersey City v. Martin, 20 N.J.Misc. 270, 26 A.2d 574, 576.

Electric company's line as referring to poles. Central States Electric Co. v. Pocahontas County, Iowa, 223 N.W. 236, 240.

Railroad or Other Carriers

A line is a series of public conveyances, as coaches, steamers, packets and the like passing to and fro between places with regularity. The word is broad enough to include line of motor freight trucks operating between fixed termini on regular schedule and route. "Stage line," "railroad line" and "automobile line" are expressions which are ordinarily understood to mean a regular line of vehicles for public use operating between distant points or between different cities. Bruce Transfer Co. v. Johnston, 227 Iowa 50, 287 N.W. 278, 280. A "line" is an operating unit under one management over a designated way or right of way. Regenhardt Const. Co. v. Southern Ry. in Kentucky, 297 Ky. 840, 181 S.W.2d 441, 444. A number of public conveyances, as carriages or vessels plying regularly under one management over a certain route, is a "line." Tuggle v. Parker, 159 Kan. 572, 156 P.2d 533, 534. Everything essential to the operation and maintenance of a railroad transportation system is a constituent part of the "line." City of Pocatello v. Ross, 51 Idaho

395, 6 P.2d 481, 482. The words "lines" and "property" are convertible terms. In re Central States Freight Corporation, C.C.A.Mich., 45 F.2d 73, 74.

Telephone or telegraph company's "lines" include not only wires and poles, but also right to have them supported by land to which they are attached. City of Fort Worth v. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., C.C.A.Tex., 80 F.2d 972, 976.

Public ways. Highways (q. v.).

Public weigher. This term in a statute refers to the official who has been elected, appointed, or qualified and holding office. Interstate Compress Co. v. Colley, 88 Okl. 42, 211 P. 413, 414.

Public welfare. The prosperity, well-being, or convenience of the public at large, or of a whole community, as distinguished from the advantage of an individual or limited class. Shaver v. Starrett, 4 Ohio St. 499. It embraces the primary social interests of safety, order, morals, economic interest, and non-material and political interests. State v. Hutchinson Ice Cream Co., 168 Iowa, 1, 147 N.W. 195, 199, L.R.A.1917B, 198. In the development of our civic life, the definition of "public welfare" has also developed until it has been held to bring within its purview regulations for the promotion of economic welfare and public convenience. Pettis v. Alpha Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Pi, 115 Neb. 525, 213 N.W. 835, 838.

PUBLICAN. In the civil law. A farmer of the public revenue; one who held a lease of some property from the public treasury. Dig. 39, 4, 1, 1; Dig. 39:4, 12, 3; Dig. 39, 4, 13.

In English law. A person authorized by license to keep a public house, and retail therein, for consumption on or off the premises where sold, all intoxicating liquors; also termed "licensed victualler." Wharton. A victualer; one who serves food or drink prepared for consumption on the premises. Friend v. Childs Dining Hall Co., 231 Mass. 65, 120 N.E. 407, 409, 5 A.L.R. 1100.

PUBLICANUS, Lat. In Roman law. A farmer of the customs; a. publican. Calvin.

PUBLICATION. To make public; to make known to people in general; to bring before public; to exhibit, display, disclose or reveal. Tiffany Productions v. Dewing, D.C.Md., 50 F.2d 911, 914. The act of publishing anything; offering it to public notice, or rendering it accessible to public scrutiny. Linley v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Anderson, 108 S.C. 372, 94 S.E. 874, 877, National Geographic Soc. v. Classified Geographic, D.C. Mass., 27 F.Supp. 655, 659. An advising of the public; a making known of something to them for a purpose. Associated Press v. International. News Service, C.C.A.N.Y., 245 F. 244, 250. It implies the means of conveying knowledge or notice. Daly v. Beery, 45 N.D. 287, 178 N.W. 104, 106.

As descriptive of the publishing of laws and ordinances, it means printing or otherwise reproducing copies of them and distributing them in such a manner as to make their contents easily accessible to the public; it forms no part of the enactment of the law. "Promulgation," on the other hand, seems to denote the proclamation or announcement of the edict or statute as a preliminary to its acquiring the force and operation of law. But the two terms are often used interchangeably. Chicago v. McCoy, 136 Ill. 344, 26 N.E. 363, 11 L.R.A. 413; For the distinction between them, see Toullier, Dr. Civ. Fr. titre Preliminaire, n. 59.

In connection with the publication of rates, the term may include both the promulgation and the distribution of the rates in printed form. City of Pittsburg v. Pittsburg Rys. Co., 259 Pa. 558, 103 A. 372, 374.

Copyright Law

The act of making public a book, writing, chart, map, etc.; that is, offering or communicating it to the public by the sale or distribution of copies. Keene v. Wheatley, 14 Fed.Cas. ISO; Jewelers' Mercantile Agency v. Jewelers' Weekly Pub. Co., 155 N.Y. 241, 49 N.E. 872, 41 L.R.A. 846, 63 Am.St.Rep. 666. As employed in the Copyright Law, means a general publication rather than a limited one. Copyright Act 1909, § 2, 17 U.S.C.A. § 2.

"Limited publication" is communication of a literary composition to a select number upon condition, express or implied, that it is not intended to be thereafter common property. To constitute "publication," within Copyright Law, there must be such a dissemination of the work of art itself among the public as to justify the belief that it took place with the intention of rendering such work common property. Copyright Law 1909, § 2, 17 U.S.C.A. a 2. Berry v. Hoffman, 125 Pa.Super. 261, 189 A. 516.

Law of Libel

The act of making the defamatory matter known publicly, of disseminating it, or communicating it to one or more persons. Wilcox v. Moon, 63 Vt. 481, 22 A. 80; Gambrill v. Schooley, 93 Md. 48, 48 A. 730, 52 L.R.A. 87, 86 Am.St.Rep. 414. The reduction of libelous matter to writing and its delivery to any one other than the person injuriously affected thereby.

The dictation to a stenographer of a libelous letter is ordinarily a publication of the libel. Nelson v. Whitten. D.C.N.Y., 272 F. 135, 139; But see Owen v. Pub. Co., 32 App.Div. 465, 53 N.Y.S. 1033. Every repetition of defamatory words is a new publication and constitutes a new cause of action.

Law of Wills

The formal declaration made by a testator at the time of signing his will that it is his last will and testament. 4 Kent, Comm. 515, and note. In re Simpson, 56 How.Prac. (N.Y.) 134; Compton v. Mitton, 12 N.J.Law, 70. The act or acts of the testator by which he manifests that it is his intention to give effect to the paper as his last will and testament; any communication indicating to the witness that the testator intends to give effect to the paper as his will, by words, sign, motion, or conduct. In re Spier's Estate, 99 Neb. 853, 157 N.W. 1014, 1016, L.R.A.1916E, 692,

Practice

In the practice of the states adopting the reformed procedure, and in some others, publication of a summons is the process of giving it currency as an advertisement in a newspaper, under the conditions prescribed by law, as a means of giving notice of the suit to a defendant upon whom personal service cannot be made.

In equity practice. The making public the depositions taken in a suit, which have previously been kept private in the office of the examiner. Publication is said to pass when the depositions are so made public, or openly shown, and copies of them given out, in order to the. hearing of the cause. 3 Bl.Comm. 450.

PUBLICI JURIS. Lat. Of public right. The word "public" in this sense means pertaining to the people, or affecting the community at large; that which concerns a multitude of people; and the word "right," as so used, means a well-founded claim; an interest; concern; advantage; benefit. State v. Lyon, 63 Okl. 285, 165 P. 419, 420.

This term, as applied to a thing or right, means that it Is open to or exercisable by all persons. It designates things which are owned by "the public;" that is, the entire state or community, and not by any private person. When a thing is common property, so that any one can make use of it who likes, it is said to be publici juris; as in the case of light, air, and public water. Sweet.

PUBLICIANA. In the civil law. The name of an action introduced by the prmtor Publicius, the object of which was to recover a thing which had been lost. Its effects were similar to those of our action of trover. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 298. See Inst. 4, 6, 4; Dig. 6, 2, 1, 16.

PUBLICIST. One versed in, or writing upon, public law, the science and principles of government, or international law.

PUBLICITY. The doing of a thing in the view of all persons who choose to be present.

PUBLICLY. Openly. Winters v. Duncan, Tex. Civ.App., 220 S.W. 219, 220. In public, well known, open, notorious, common, or general, as opposed to private, secluded, or secret. Fairchild v. U. S., C.C.A.S.D., 265 F. 584, 586.

PUBLICUM JUS. Lat. In the civil law. Public law; that law which regards the state of the commonwealth. Inst. 1, 1, 4.

PUBLISH. To make public; to circulate; to make known to people in general. U. S. v. Baltimore Post Co., D.C.Md., 2 F.2d 761, 764; In re Willow Creek, 74 Or. 592, 144 P. 505, 515. To issue; to put into circulation. In re Willow Creek, 74 Or. 592, 144 P. 505, 515. To utter; to present (a forged instrument) for payment. Smith v. State, 13 Ga.App. 663, 79 S.E. 764, 766; State v. Hobl, 108 Kan. 261, 194 P. 921, 924. To declare or assert, directly or indirectly, by words or actions, that a forged instrument is genuine. People v. Bradford, 84 Cal.App. 707, 258 P. 660, 662. An advising of the public or making known of something to the public for a purpose. Estill County v. Noland, 295 Ky. 753, 175 S.W.2d 341, 346.

To "publish" a libel is to make it known to any person other than the person libeled. Age-Herald Pub. Co. v. Huddleston, 207 Ala. 40, 92 So. 193, 197, 37 A.L.R. 898; to exhibit or expose the libelous matter. State v. Moore, 140 La. 281, 72 So. 965, 971.

To "publish" a newspaper ordinarily means to compose, print, issue, and distribute it to the public, and especially its subscribers, at and from a certain place. To "print" may therefore refer only to the mechanical work of production. In re Monrovia Evening Post, 199 Cal. 263, 248 P. 1017, 1019, and constitute a narrower term than "publish." In re Publishing Docket in Local Newspaper, 266 Mo. 48, 187 S. W. 1174, 1175.

A small settlement or gathering of people, a steady community; the term applies equally whether the settlement be a small collection of Spaniards or Indians. Pueblo of Santa Rosa v. Fall, App.D.C., 12 F.2d 332, 335.

This term "pueblo," in its original signification, means "people" or "population," but is used in the sense of the English word "town." It has the indefiniteness of that term, and, like it, is sometimes applied to a mere collection of individuals residing at a particular place, a settlement or village, as well as to a regularly organized municipality. Trenouth v. San Francisco, 100 U.S. 251, 25 L.Ed. 626.

PUER. Lat. In the civil law. A child; one of the age from seven to fourteen, including, in this sense, a girl. But it also meant a "boy," as distinguished from a "girl;" or a servant. Dy. 337b; Hob. 33.

QUZESTORES CLASSICI. Lat. In Roman law. officers entrusted with the care of the public money.

Their duties consisted in making the necessary payments from the cerarium, and receiving the public revenues. Of both they had to keep correct accounts in their tabuke publicce. Demands which any one might have on the cerarium, and outstanding debts were likewise registered by them. Fines to be paid to the public treasury were registered and exacted by them. They were likewise to provide proper accommodations for foreign ambassadors and such persons as were connected with the republic by ties of public hospitality. Lastly, they were charged with the care of the burials and monuments of distinguished men, the expenses for which had been decreed by the senate to be paid by the treasury. Their number at first was confined to two ; but this was afterwards increased as the empire became extended. There were quwstors of cities and of provinces, and questors of the army ; the latter were in fact paymasters.

QUIESTORES PARRICIDU. See Questores Parricidii.

QUESTUS. L. Lat. That estate which a man has by acquisition or purchase, in contradistinc tion to "hcereditas," which is what he has by descent. Glan. 1, 7, c. 1.

sons to whom they are granted shall not be guilty of abusing them, the opposite clause being "durante bene placito," (during the pleasure of the grantor.)

QUAMVIS ALIQUID PER SE NON SIT MALUM, TAMEN, SI SIT MALI EXEMPLI, NON EST FACIENDUM. Although a thing may not be bad in itself, yet, if it is of bad example, it is not to be done. 2 Inst. 564.

QUAMVIS LEX GENERALITER LOQUITUR, RESTRINGENDA TAMEN EST, UT, CESSANTE, RATIONE, IPSA CESSAT. Although a law speaks generally, yet it is to be restrained, so that when its reason ceases, it should cease also. 4 Inst. 330.

QUANDO ABEST PROVISIO PARTIS, ADEST PROVISIO LEGIS. When the provision of the party is wanting, the provision of the law is at hand. 6 Vin. Abr. 49; 13 C. B. 960.

QUANDO ACCIDERINT. Lat. When they shall come in.

In practice. When a defendant, executor, or administrator pleads plene administravit, the plaintiff may pray to have judgment of assets quando acciderint; Bull. N. P. 169; Bac. Abr. Executor (M). A similar judgment may be taken at plaintiff's election, in an action against an heir, on a plea of riens per descent, instead of taking issue on the plea. In either of these cases if assets afterwards come to the hands of the executor or heir a scire facias must be sued out before execution can issue, or there may be an action of debt, suggesting a devastavit; 2 Bouv. Inst. 3708. It is also sometimes termed a judgment of assets in futuro. By taking a judgment in this form the plaintiff admits that defendant has fully administered to that time; 1 Pet. C. C. 442, n; and therefore the plaintiff will not be allowed to give evidence of effects come to defendant's hands before judgment. For this reason the scire facias on a judgment of assets quando acciderint must only pray execution of such assets as have come to the defendant's hands since former judgment, and if it prays judgment of assets generally, it cannot be supported. 2 Com. Dig. Pleader (2D9).

QUANDO ALIQUID MANDATUR, MANDATUR ET OMNE PER QUOD PERVENITUR AD ILLUD. 5 Coke 116. When anything is commanded, everything by which it can be accomplished is also commanded.

QUANDO ALIQUID PER SE NON SIT MALUM, TAMEN SI SIT MALI EXEMPLII, NON EST FACIENDUM. When anything by itself is not evil, and yet may be an example for evil, it is not to be done. 2 Inst. 564.

QUANDO ALIQUID PROHIBETUR EX DIRECTO, PROHIBETUR ET PER OBLIQUUM. Co. Litt. 223. When anything is prohibited directly, it is prohibited also indirectly.

QUANDO ALIQUID PROHIBETUR, PROHIR. ETUR ET OMNE PER QUOD DEVENITUR AD ILLUD: When anything is prohibited, everything by which it is reached is prohibited also. 2 Inst. 48. That which cannot be done directly shall not be done indirectly. Broom, Max. 489.

QUANDO ALIQUIS ALIQUID CONCEDIT, CONCEDERE VIDETUR ET ID SINE QUO RES UTI NON POTEST. When a person grants anything, he is supposed to grant that also without which the thing cannot be used. When the use of a thing is granted, everything is granted by which the grantee may have and enjoy such use. 3 Kent, Comm. 421.

QUANDO CHARTA CONTINET GENERALEM CLAUSULAM, POSTEAQUE DESCENDIT AD VERBA SPECIALIA QUIE CLAUSUL1E GENERALI SUNT CONSENTANEA, INTERPRETANDA EST CHARTA SECUNDUM VERBA SPECIALIA. When a deed contains a general clause, and afterwards descends to special words which are agreeable to the general clause, the deed is to be interpreted according to the special words. 8 Coke 154b.

QUANDO DISPOSITIO REFERRI POTEST AD DUAS RES ITA QUOD SECUNDUM RELATIONEM UNAM VITIETUR ET SECUNDUM ALTERAM UTILIS SIT, TUM FACIENDA EST RELATIO AD ILLAM UT VALEAT DISPOSITIO. 6 Coke 76. When a disposition may refer to two things, so that by the former it would be vitiated, and by the latter it would be preserved, then the relation is to be made to the latter, so that the disposition may be valid.

QUANDO DIVERS! DESIDERANTUR ACTUS AD ALIQUEM STATUM PERFICIENDUM, PLUS RESPICIT LEX ACTUM ORIGINALEM. When different acts are required to the formation of any estate, the law chiefly regards the original act. When to the perfection of an estate or interest divers acts or things are requisite, the law has more regard to the original act, for that is the fundamental part on which all the others are founded. 10 Coke 49a.

QUANDO DUO JURA CONCURRUNT IN UNA PERSONA, JEQUUM EST AC SI ESSENT IN DIVERSIS. When two rights concur in one person, it is the same as if they were in two separate persons. 4 Co. 118; Broom, Max. 531.

QUANDO JUS DOMINI REGIS ET SUBDITI CONCURRUNT, JUS REGIS PRIEFERRI DEBET. 9 Coke 129. When the right of king and of subject concur, the king's right should be preferred.

QUANDO LEX ALIQUID ALICUI CONCEDIT, CONCEDERE VIDETUR ET ID SINE QUO RES IPSZE ESSE NON POTEST. 5 Coke 47. When the law gives a man anything, it gives him that also without which the thing itself cannot exist.

QUANDO LEX ALIQUID ALICUI CONCEDIT, OMNIA INCIDENTIA TACITE CONCEDUNTUR. 2 Inst. 326. When the law gives anything to any one, all incidents are tacitly given.

QUANDO LEX EST SPECIAL'S, RATIO AUTEM GENERALIS, GENERALITER LEX EST INTELLIGENDA. When a law is special, but its reason [or object] general, the law is to be understood generally. 2 Inst. 83.

QUANDO LICET ID QUOD MAJUS, VIDETUR ET LICERE ID QUOD MINUS. Shep. Touch. 429. When the greater is allowed, the less is to be understood as allowed also.

QUANDO IVIULIER NOBILIS NUPSERIT IGNOBILI, DESINIT ESSE NOBILIS NISI NOBILITAS NATIVA FUERIT. 4 Coke, 118. When a noble woman marries a man not noble, she ceases to be noble, unless her nobility was born with her.

QUANDO PLUS FIT QUAM FIERI DEBET, VIDETUR ETIAM ILLUD FIERI QUOD FACIENDUM EST. When more is done than ought to be done, that at least shall be considered as performed which should have been performed, [as, if a man, having a power to make a lease for ten years, make one for twenty years, it shall be void only for the surplus.] Broom, Max. 177; 5 Coke, 115; 8 Coke, 85a.

QUANDO QUOD AGO NON VALET UT AGO, VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. When that which I do does not have effect as I do it, let it have as much effect as it can. Vandervolgen v. Yates, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 242, 261.

QUANDO RES NON VALET UT AGO, VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. When a thing is of no effect as I do it, it shall have effect as far as [or in whatever way] it can. Cowp. 600.

QUANDO VERBA ET MENS CONGRU1LTNT, NON EST INTERPRETATION! LOCUS. When the words and the mind agree, there is no place for interpretation.

QUANDO VERBA STATUTI SUNT SPECIALIA, RATIO AUTEM GENERALIS, GENERALITER STATUTUM EST INTELLIGENDUM. When the words of a statute are special, but the reason or object of it general, the statute is to be construed generally. 10 Coke 101b.

QUANTI MINORIS. Lat. The name of an action in the civil law, (and in Louisiana,) brought by the purchaser of an article, for a reduction of the agreed price on account of defects in the thing which diminish its value.

QUANTUM DAMNIFICATUS? How much damnified? The name of an issue directed by a court of equity to be tried in a court of law, to ascertain the amount of compensation to be allowed for damage.

QUANTUM MERUIT. As much as he deserved. In pleading. The common count in an action of assumpsit for work and labor, founded on an implied assumpsit or promise on the part of the defendant to pay the plaintiff as much as he reasonably deserved to have for his labor. 3 Bl. Comm. 161; 1 Tidd, Pr. 2; Viles v. Kennebec Lumber Co., 118 Me. 148, 106 A. 431.

It refers to class of obligations imposed by law, without regard to intention or assent of parties bound, for reasons dictated by reason and justice; such obligations not being contracts though form of action is contract. Carpenter v. Josey Oil Co., C.C.A.Okl., 26 F.2d 442, 443. Amount of recovery being only the reasonable value of the services rendered regardless of any agreement as to value. Smith v. Bliss, 44 Cal.App.2d 171, 112 P.2d 30, 33.

QUANTUM TENENS DOMINO EX HOMAGIO, TANTUM DOMINUS TENENTI EX DO♦INI() DEBET PRZETER SOLAM REVERENTIAM; MUTUA DEBET ESSE DOMINII ET HOMAGII FIDELITATIS CONNEXIO. Co. Litt. 64. As much as the tenant by his homage owes to his lord, so much is the lord, by his lordship, indebted to the tenant, except reverence alone; the tie of dominion and of homage ought to be mutual.

QUANTUM VALEBANT. As much as they were worth. In pleading. The common count in an action of assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, founded on an implied assumpsit or promise, on the part of the defendant, to pay the plaintiff as much as the goods were reasonably worth. 3 Bl. Comm. 161; 1 Tidd, Pr. 2.

QUARANTINE. A period of time (theoretically forty days) during which a vessel, coming from a place where a contagious or infectious disease is prevalent, is detained by authority in the harbor of her port of destination, or at a station near it, without being permitted to land or to discharge her crew or passengers. Quarantine is said to have been first established at Venice in 1484. Baker, Quar. 3.

The space of forty days during which a widow has a right to remain in her late husband's principal mansion immediately after his death. The right of the widow is also called her "quarantine." See Davis v. Lowden, 56 N.J.Eq. 126, 38 A. 648; Falvey v. Hicks, 315 Mo. 442, 286 S.W. 385, 392.

A provision or interest given in law to the widow in her husband's estate, such as the privilege of occupying the mansion house and curtilage without charge until her dower is assigned, and technically is a dower right, or more broadly is a part of the dower estate. Amiss v. Hiteshew, 106 W.Va. 703, 147 S.E. 26, 28.

QUARE. Lat. Wherefore; for what reason; on what account. Used in the Latin form of several common-law writs.

QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT. Lat. Wherefore he broke the close. That species of the action of trespass which has for its object the recovery of damages for an unlawful entry upon another's land is termed "trespass quare clausum fregit;" "breaking a close" being the technical expression for an unlawful entry upon land. The language of the declaration in this form of action is "that the defendant, with force and arms, broke and entered the close" of the plaintiff. The phrase is often abbreviated to "qu. cl. fr." Brown.

QUARE EJECIT INFRA TERMINUM. Wherefore he ejected within the term. In old practice. A writ which lay for a lessee where he was ejected before the expiration of his term, in cases where the wrong-doer or ejector was not himself in possession of the lands, but his feoffee or another claiming under him. 3 Bl. Comm. 199, 206; Reg. Orig. 227; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 197 S.

QUARE IMPEDIT. Wherefore he hinders. In English practice. A writ or action which lies for the patron of an advowson, where he has been disturbed in his right of patronage; so called from the emphatic words of the old form, by which the disturber was summoned to answer why he hinders the plaintiff. 3 Bl.Comm. 246, 248.

QUARE INCUMBRAVIT. In English law. A writ which lay against a bishop who, within six months after the vacation of a benefice, conferred it on his clerk, while two others were contending at law for the right of presentation, calling upon him to show cause why he had incumbered the church. Reg. Orig. 32. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27.

QUARE INTRUSIT. A writ that formerly lay where the lord proffered a suitable marriage to his ward, who rejected it, and entered into the land, and married another, the value of his marriage not being satisfied to the lord. Abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24.

QUARE NON ADMISIT. In English law. A writ to recover damages against a bishop who does not admit a plaintiff's clerk. It is, however, rarely or never necessary; for it is said that a bishop, refusing to execute the writ ad admittendum clericum, or making an insufficient return to it, may be fined. Wats.Cler.Law, 302.

QUARE NON PERMITTIT. An ancient writ, which lay for one who had a right to present to a church for a turn against the proprietary. Fleta, 1. 5, c. 6.

QUARE OBSTRUXIT. Wherefore he obstructed. In old English practice. A writ which lay for one who, having a liberty to pass through his neighbor's ground, could not enjoy his right because the owner had so obstructed it. Cowell.

QUARENTENA TERRIE. A furlong. Co.Litt. 5b.

QUARREL. This word is said to extend not only to real and personal actions, but also to the causes of actions and suits; so that by the release of all "quarrels," not only actions pending, but also causes of action and suit, are released; and "quarrels," "controversies," and "debates" are in law considered as having the same meaning. Co.Litt. 8, 153; Termes de la Ley.

In an untechnical sense, it signifies an altercation, an angry dispute, an exchange of recriminations, taunts, threats or accusations between two persons. Carr v. Conyers, 84 Ga. 287, 10 S.E. 630, 20 Am.St.Rep. 357; Accident Ins. Co. v. Bennett, 90 Tenn. 256, 16 S.W. 723, 25 Am.St. Rep. 685.

QUARRY. In mining law. An open excavation where the works are visible at the surface; a place or pit where stone, slate, marble, etc., is dug out or separated from a mass of rock. Bainb. Mines, 2. See Marvel v. Merritt, 116 U.S. 11, 6 S.Ct. 207, 29 L.Ed. 550.

QUART. A liquid measure, containing one-fourth part of a gallon.

QUARTA DIVI PH. In Roman law. That portion of a testator's estate which he was required by law to leave to a child whom he had adopted and afterwards emancipated or unjustly disinherited, being one-fourth of his property. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 594.

QUARTA FALCIDIA. In Roman law. That portion of a testator's estate which, by the Falcidian law, was required to be left to the heir, amounting to at least one-fourth. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 771.

QUARTER. The fourth part of anything, especially of a year. Also a length of four inches. In England, a measure of corn, generally reckoned at eight bushels, though subject to local variations. Hospital St. Cross v. Lord Howard De Walden, 6 Term, 343. In American land law, a quarter section of land. See infra. And see McCartney v. Dennison, 101 Cal. 252, 35 P. 766. In a military sense, the usual term applied to stations, buildings, lodgings, etc., in the regular occupation of military troops. State ex rel. Charlton v. French, 44 N.M. 169, 99 P.2d 715, 727.

In the Law of War. The sparing of the life of a fallen or captured enemy on the battlefield. By the end of the seventeenth century quarter became a recognized usage of war. It is forfeited only under exceptional circumstances. 1. In case of absolute and overwhelming necessity, as where a small force is incumbered with a large number of prisoners in a savage and hostile country, and may be justified in killing them for their own self-preservation. 2. Where belligerents violate the laws of war they may be refused quarter. 3. By way of retaliation against an enemy who has denied quarter without a cause. Risley, The Law of War; Spaight, War Rights on Land, 88-95.

QUARTER CHEST OF TEA. A chest containing from 25 to 30 pounds. Japan Tea Co. v. Franklin MacVeagh & Co., 142 Minn. 152, 171 N.W. 305, 307.

QUARTER OF A YEAR. Ninety-one days. Co. Litt. 135b.

QUARTER-DAY. The four days in the year upon which, by law or custom, moneys payable in quarter-yearly installments are collectible, are called "quarter-days."

QUARTER-DOLLAR. A silver coin of the United States, of the value of twenty-five cents.

QUARTER-EAGLE. A gold coin of the United States, of the value of two and a half dollars.

QUARTER-SALES. In New York law. A species of fine on alienation, being one-fourth of the purchase money of an estate, which is stipulated to be paid back on alienation by the grantee. The expressions "tenth-sales," etc., are also used, with similar meanings. Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Groat, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 285.

QUARTER SEAL. See Seal.

QUARTER SECTION. In American land law. The quarter of a section of land according to the divisions of the government survey, laid off by dividing the section into four equal parts by north-and-south and -east-and-west lines, and containing 160 acres.

QUARTER SESSIONS. In English law. A criminal court held before two or more justices of the peace, (one of whom must be of the quorum), in every county, once in every quarter of a year. 4 Bl.Comm. 271; 4 Steph.Comm. 335.

In American law. Courts established in some of the states, to be holden four times in the year, invested with criminal jurisdiction, usually of offenses less than felony, and sometimes with the charge of certain administrative matters, such as the care of public roads and bridges.

QUARTERING. In English criminal law. The dividing a criminal's body into quarters, after execution. A part of the punishment of high treason. 4 Bl.Comm. 93.

QUARTERING SOLDIERS. The act of a government in billeting or assigning soldiers to private houses, without the consent of the owners of such houses, and requiring such owners to supply them with board or lodging or both.

QUARTERIZATION. Quartering of criminals.

QUARTERLY. Quarter yearly; once in a quarter year. Dickenson v. Cox, 118 Or. 88, 244 P. 877, 878; Leonard v. St. Clair, 27 Idaho, 568, 149 P. 1058, 1060.

QUARTERLY COURTS. A system of courts in. Kentucky possessing a limited original jurisdiction in civil cases and appellate jurisdiction from justices of the peace. Hamilton v. Spalding, 76 S.W. 517, 25 Ky.Law Rep. 847. They are not county courts, but separate and independent courts created and established by the constitution. Perry County v. McIntosh, 280 Ky. 223, 133 S.W. 2d 90, 91.

QUARTERONE. In the Spanish and French West Indies, a quadroon, that is, a person one of whose parents was white and the other a mulatto. Daniel v. Guy, 19 Ark. 131.

QUARTO DIE POST. Lat. On the fourth day after. Appearance day, in the former English practice, the defendant being allowed four days, inclusive, from the return of the writ, to make his appearance.

QUASH. To overthrow; to abate; to vacate; to annul; to make void. Spelman; 3 Bl.Comm. 303. Bosley v. Bruner, 2 Cushm. (Miss.) 462; Wilson v. Commonwealth, 157 Va. 776, 162 S.E. 1, 2.

QUASI. Lat. As if; almost as it were; analogous to. This term is used in legal phraseology to indicate that one subject resembles another, with which it is compared, in certain characteristics, but that there are intrinsic and material differences between them. Bicknell v. ,Garrett, 1 Wash.2d 564, 96 P.2d 592, 595, 126 A.L.R. 258; Cannon v. Miller, 22 Wash.2d 227, 155 P.2d 500, 503, 507, 157 A.L.R. 530. Marker v. State, 25 Ala.App. 91, 142 So. 105, 106. It is often prefixed to English words, implying mere appearance or want of reality. State v. Jeffrey, 188 Minn. 476, 247 N.W. 692, 693.

It is exclusively a term of classification. Prefixed to a term of Roman law, it implies that the conception to which it serves as an index is connected with the conception with which the comparison is instituted by a strong superficial analogy or resemblance. It negatives the notion of identity, but points out that the conceptions are sufficiently similar for one to be classed as the sequel to the other. Maine, Anc. Law, 332. Civilians use the expressions "quasi contractus," "quasi delictum," "quasi possessio," "quasi traditio," etc.

As to quasi "Affinity," "Contract," "Corporation," "Crime," "Delict," "Deposit," "Derelict," "Easement," "Entail," "Fee," "In Rem," "Municipal Corporation," "Offense," "Partners," "Personalty," "Possession," "Posthumous Child," "Purchase," "Realty," "Tenant," "Tort," "Traditio," "Trustee," and "Usufruct," see those titles.

QUASI ADMISSION. An act or utterance, usually extrajudicial, which creates an inconsistency with and discredits to a greater or lesser degree, present claim or other evidence of person creating the inconsistency, and person who enacted or uttered it may nevertheless disprove its correctness by introduction of other evidence. Sutherland v. Davis, 151 Ky. 743, 151 S.W.2d 1021, 1024.

QUASI-CONTRACTUS (Lat.). In civil law. An obligation similar in character to that of a contract, which arises not from an agreement of parties but from some relation between them, or from a voluntary act of one of them. An obligation springing from voluntary and lawful acts of parties in the absence of any agreement. Howe. Stud. Civ. L. 17L

QUASI ESTOPPEL. The principle which precludes a party from asserting, to another's disadvantage, a right inconsistent with a position previously taken by him. Philadelphia County v. Sheehan, 263 Pa. 449, 107 A. 14, 16.

A term used by Bigelow to cover a group of cases in which a party is precluded from occupying inconsistent positions, either in litigations or in ordinary dealings; Big. Est. (6th ed.) 732. Pickett v. Bank,. 32 Ark. 34.6 ; Robinson v. Pebworth, 71 Ala. 240. It is to be noted that in the cases grouped under this title the courts have generally used the simple term "estoppel" which, it has been suggested, is a questionable use of terms, since many of the cases are mere instances of ratification or acquiescence; Big. Est. 755.

"Equitable estoppel" and "estoppel in pals" are convertible terms embracing "quasi estoppel" and embody doctrine that one may not repudiate an act done or position assumed by him, where such course would work injustice to another rightfully relying thereon. Brown v. Corn Exchange Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 136 N.J.Eq. 430, 42 A.2d 474, 480.

QUASI JUDICIAL. A term applied to the action, discretion, etc., of public administrative officers, who are required to investigate facts, or ascertain the existence of facts, and draw conclusions from them, as a basis for their official action, and to exercise discretion of a judicial nature. Bair v. Struck, 29 Mont. 45, 74 P. 69, 63 L.R.A. 481; Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779, 96 N.W. 678.

The actions of the National Labor Relations Board are "quasi-judicial" in character. Thompson Products v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.6, 133 F.2d 637, 640.

QUASI JUDICIAL ACT. A judicial act performed by one not a judge. State Tax Commission of Utah v. Katsis, 90 Utah 406, 62 P.2d 120, 123, 107 A.L.R. 1477.

QUASI-TRADITIO (Lat.). In civil law. A term used to designate that a person is in the use of the property of another, which the latter suffers and does not oppose. Lec.Elem. § 396. It also signifies the act by which the right of property is ceded in a thing to a person who is in possession of it; as, if I loan a boat to Paul, and deliver it to him, and afterwards I sell him the boat, it is not requisite that he should deliver the boat to me to be again delivered to him: there is a quasi-tradition or delivery.

QUATER COUSIN. See Cousin.

QUATUOR PEDIBUS CURRIT. Lat. It runs upon four feet; it runs upon all fours. See All-Fours.

QUATUORVIRI. In Roman law. Magistrates who had the care and inspection of roads. Dig. 1, 2, 3, 30.

QUAY. A wharf for the loading or unloading of goods carried in ships. This word is sometimes spelled "key."

The popular and commercial signification of the word "quay" involves the notion of a space of ground appropriated to the public use; such use as the convenience of commerce requires. New Orleans v. U. S., 10 Pet. 662, 715, 9 L. Ed. 573.

QUE EST LE MESME, L. Fr. Which is the same. A term used in actions of trespass, etc. See Quae est Eadem.

QUE ESTATE. L. Fr. Whose estate. A term used in pleading, particularly in claiming prescription, by which it is alleged that the plaintiff and those former owners whose estate he has have immemorially exercised the right claimed. This was called "prescribing in a que estate."

QUEAN. A worthless woman; a strumpet. Obsolete.

QUEEN. A woman who possesses the sovereignty and royal power in a country under a monarchical form of government. The wife of a king.

Queen consort. In English law. The wife of a reigning king. 1 Bl.Comm. 218.

Queen dowager. In English law. The widow of a king. 1 B1.03mm. 223.

Queen-gold. A royal revenue belonging to every queen consort during her marriage with the king, and due from every person who has made a voluntary fine or offer to the king of ten marks or upwards, in consideration of any grant or privilege conferred by the crown. It is now quite obsolete. 1 Bl.Comm. 220-222.

Queen regnant. In English law. A queen who holds the crown in her own right; as the first Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, Queen Anne, and Queen Victoria. 1 Bl.Comm. 218; 2 Steph.Comm. 465.

For the titles and descriptions of various officers in the English legal system, called "Queen's Advocate," "Queen's Coroner," "Queen's Counsel," "Queen's Proctor," "Queen's Remembrancer," etc., during the reign of a female sovereign, as in the time of Queen Victoria, see, now, under King and the following titles.

QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY. A fund created by a charter of Queen Anne, (confirmed by St. 2 Ann. c. 11), for the augmentation of poor livings, consisting of all the revenue of first fruits and tenths, which was vested in trustees forever. 1 Bl.Comm. 286.

QUEEN'S BENCH. The English court of king's bench is so called during the reign of a queen. 3 Steph.Comm. 403. See King's Bench.

QUEEN'S PRISON. A jail which used to be appropriated to the debtors and criminals confined under process or by authority of the superior courts at Westminster, the high court of admiralty, and also to persons imprisoned under the bankrupt law.

QUEM REDITUM REDDIT. L. Lat. An old writ which lay where a rent-charge or other rent which was not rent service was granted by fine holding of the grantor. If the tenant would not attorn, then the grantee might have had this writ. Old Nat. Brev. 126.

QUEMADMODUM AD QUIESTIONEM FACTI NON RESPONDENT JUDICES, ITA AD QUIESTIONEM JURIS NON RESPONDENT JURATORES. In the same manner that judges do not answer to questions of fact, so jurors do not answer to questions of law. Co.Litt. 295.

QUERELA. Lat. An action preferred in any court of justice. The plaintiff was called "querens," or complainant and his brief, complaint, or declaration was called "querela." Jacob.

QUERELA CORAM REGE A CONCILIO DISCUTIENDA ET TERMINANDA. A writ by which one is called to justify a complaint of a trespass made to the king himself, before the king and his council. Reg.Orig. 124.

QUERELA INOFFICIOSI TESTAMENTI. Lat. In the civil law. A species of action allowed to a child who had been unjustly disinherited, to set aside the will, founded on the presumption of law, in such cases, that the parent was not in his right mind. Calvin.; 2 Kent, Comm. 327; Bell.

QUERENS. Lat. A plaintiff; complainant; inquirer.

QUERULOUS. Apt to find fault; habitually complaining; disposed to murmur. Expressing, or suggestive of complaint; fretful; whining. Crounse v. Booth Fisheries, 111 Neb. 6, 195 N.W. 462, 463

QUESTA. In old records. A quest; an inquest, inquisition, or inquiry, upon the oaths of an impaneled jury. Cowell.

QUESTION. A subject or point of investigation, examination or debate; theme of inquiry; problem; matter to be inquired into; as a delicate or doubtful question. Pitts v. Howe Scale Co., 110 Vt. 27, 1 A.2d 695, 697.

A method of criminal examination heretofore in use in some of the countries of continental Europe, consisting of the application of torture to the supposed criminal, by means of the rack or other engines, in order to extort from him, as the condition of his release from the torture, a confession of his own guilt or the names of his accomplices.

Evidence

An interrogation put to a witness, for the purpose of having him declare the truth of certain facts as far as he knows them.

Practice

A point on which the parties are not agreed, and which is submitted to the decision of a judge and jury.

General

Categorical question. One inviting a distinct and positive statement of fact; one which can be answered by "yes" or "no." In the plural, a series of questions, covering a particular subject-matter, arranged in a systematic and consecutive order.

Federal question. See Federal.

QUIDAM. Lat. Somebody. This term is used in the French law to designate a person whose name is not known.

QUIDQUID ENIM SIVE DOLO ET CULPA VENDITORIS ACCIDIT IN EO VENDITOR SECURUS EST. For concerning anything which occurs without deceit and wrong on the part of the vendor, the vendor is secure. Brown v. Bellows, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 198.

QUIET, v. To pacify; to render secure or unassailable by the removal of disquieting causes or disputes. This is the meaning of the word in the phrase "action to quiet title," which is a proceeding to establish the plaintiff's title to land by bringing into court an adverse claimant and there compelling him either to establish his claim or be forever after estopped from asserting it. Wright v. Mattison, 18 How. 56, 15 L.Ed. 280.

QUIET, adj. Unmolested; tranquil; free from interference or disturbance.

Covenant of quiet enjoyment. A covenant, usually inserted in leases and conveyances on the part of the grantor, promising that the tenant or grantee shall enjoy the possession of the premises in peace and without disturbance.

QUIETA NON MOVERE. Not to unsettle things which are established. Green v. Hudson River R. Co., 28 Barb. (N.Y.) 9, 22.

QUINTO EXACTUS. In old practice. Called or exacted the fifth time. A return made by the sheriff, after a defendant had been proclaimed, required, or exacted in five county courts successively, and failed to appear, upon which he was outlawed by the coroners of the county. 3 Bl. Comm. 283.

QUIRE OF DOVER. In English law. A record in the exchequer, showing the tenures for guarding and repairing Dover Castle, and determining the services of the Cinque Ports. 3 How.State Tr. 868.

QUIRITARIAN OWNERSHIP. In Roman law. Ownership held by a title recognized by the municipal law, in an object also recognized by that law, and in the strict character of a Roman citizen. "Roman law originally only recognized one kind of dominion, called, emphatically, `quiritary dominion.' Gradually, however, certain real rights arose which, though they failed to satisfy all the elements of the definition of quiritary dominion, were practically its equivalent, and received from the courts a similar protection. These real rights might fall short of quiritary dominion in three respects: (1) Either in respect of the persons in whom they resided; (2) or of the subjects to which they related; or (3) of the title by which they were acquired." In the latter case, the ownership was called "bonitarian," e., "the property of a Roman citizen, in a subject capable of quiritary property, acquired by a title not known to the civil law, but introduced by the praetor and protected by his imperium or supreme executive power;" e. g., where res mancipi had been transferred by mere tradition. Poste's Gaius' Inst. 186.

QUISQUIS EMT QUI VULT JURIS–CONSULTUS HAIIERI CONTINUET STUDIUM, VELIT A QUOCUNQUE DOCERI. Jenk. Cent. Whoever wishes to be a juris-consult, let him continually study, and desire to be taught by every one.

QUISQUIS PRZESUMITUR BONUS; ET SEMPER IN DUBIIS PRO REO RESPONDENDUM. Every one is presumed good; and in doubtful cases the resolution should be ever for the accused.

QUIT, v. To leave; remove from; surrender possession of; as when a tenant "quits" the premises or receives a "notice to quit." Schotter v. Carnegie Steel Co., 272 Pa. 437, 116 A. 358, 359.

Notice to Quit

A written notice given by a landlord to his tenant, stating that the former desires to repossess himself of the demised premises, and that the latter is required to quit and remove from the same at a time designated, either at the expiration of the term, if the tenant is in under a lease, or immediately, if the tenancy is at will or by sufferance.

QUIT, adj. Clear; discharged; free; also spoken of persons absolved or acquitted of a charge.

QUITCLAIM, v. In conveyancing. To release or relinquish a claim; to execute a deed of quitclaim. See Quitclaim, n.

QUITCLAIM, n. A release or acquittance given to one man by another, in respect of any action that he has or might have against him. Also acquitting or giving up one's claim or title. Termes de la Ley; Cowell.

Quitclaim deed. A deed of conveyance operating by way of release; that is, intended to pass any title, interest, or claim which the grantor may have in the premises, but not professing that such title is valid, nor containing any warranty or covenants for title. Cook v. Smith, 107 Tex. 119, 174 S.W. 1094, 1095, 3 A.L.R. 940; Pierson v. Bill, 133 Fla. 81, 182 So. 631, 634.

QUIT RENT. A rent paid by the tenant of the freehold, by which he goes quit and free,—that is, discharged from any other rent. 2 Bla.Com. 42.

QUITTANCE. An abbreviation of "acquittance;" a release, (q. v.).

QUO ANIMO. Lat. With what intention or motive. Used sometimes as a substantive, in lieu of the single word "animus," design or motive. "The quo animo is the real subject of inquiry." 1 Kent, Comm. 77.

QUO JURE. Lat. In old English practice. A writ which lay for one that had land in which another claimed common, to compel the latter to show by what title he claimed it. Cowell; Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 128, F.

QUO LIGATUR, EO DISSOLVITUR. 2 Rolle, 21. By the same mode by which a thing is bound, by that is it released.

QUO MINUS. Lat. A writ upon which all proceedings in the court of exchequer were formerly grounded. In it the plaintiff suggests that he is the king's debtor, and that the defendant has done him the injury or damage complained of, quo minus sufficiens existit, by which he is less able to pay the king's debt. This was originally requisite in order to give jurisdiction to the court of exchequer; but now this suggestion is a mere form. 3 Bl.Comm. 46.

Also, a writ which lay for him who had a grant of house-bote and hay-bote in another's woods, against the grantor making such waste as that the grantee could not enjoy his grant. Old Nat. Brev. 148.

QUO MODO QUID CONSTITUITUR EODEM MODO DISSOLVITUR. Jenk.Cent. 74. In the same manner by which anything is constituted by that it is dissolved.

QUO WARRANTO. In old English practice. A writ, in the nature of a writ of right for the king, against him who claimed or usurped any office, franchise, or liberty, to inquire by what authority he supported his claim, in order to determine the right. It lay also in case of non-user, or long neglect of a franchise, or misuser or abuse of it; being a writ commanding the defendant to show by what warrant he exercises such a franchise, having never had any grant of it, or having forfeited it by neglect or abuse. 3 Bl.Comm. 262.

In England, and quite generally throughout the United States, this writ has given place to an "information in the nature of a quo warranto," which, though in form a criminal proceeding, is in effect a civil remedy similar to the old writ, and is the method now usually employed for trying the title to a corporate or other franchise, or to a public or corporate office. Ames v. Kansas, 111 U.S. 449, 4 S.Ct. 437, 28 L.Ed. 482; People v. Londoner, 13 Colo. 303, 22 P. 764, 6 L.R.A. 444; An extraordinary proceeding, prerogative in nature, addressed to preventing a continued exercise of authority unlawfully asserted. Johnson v. Manhattan Ry. Co., N.Y., 53 S.Ct. 721, 289 U.S. 479, 77 L.Ed. 1331.

It is intended to prevent exercise of powers that are not conferred by law, and is not ordinarily available to regulate the manner of exercising such powers. State ex rel. Johnson v. Conservative Savings & Loan Ass'n, 143 Neb. 805, 11 N.W.2d 89, 92, 93.

QUOAD HOC. Lat. As to this; with respect to this; so far as this in particular is concerned.

A prohibition quoad hoc is a prohibition as to certain things among others. Thus, where a party was complained against in the ecclesiastical court for matters cognizable in the temporal courts, a prohibition quoad these matters issued, e., as to such matters the party was prohibited from prosecuting his suit in the ecclesiastical court. Brown.

QUOAD SACRA. Lat. As to sacred things; for religious purposes.

QUOCUMQUE MODO VELIT; QUOCUMQUE MODO POSSIT. In any way he wishes; in any way he can. Clason v. Bailey, 14 Johns., N.Y., 484, 492.

RACKETEERING. An organized conspiracy to commit the crimes of extortion or coercion, attempts to commit extortion or coercion. From the standpoint of extortion, it is the obtaining of money or property from another, with his consent, induced by the wrongful use of force or fear. The fear which constitutes the legally necessary element in extortion is induced by oral or written threats to do an unlawful injury to the property of the threatened person by means of explosives, fire, or otherwise; and to kill, kidnap, or injure him or a relative of his or some member of his family. From the standpoint of coercion, it usually takes the form of compelling by use of similar threats to person or property a person to do or abstain from doing an act which such other person has the legal right to do or abstain from doing, such as joining a so-called protective association to protect his right to conduct a business or trade. United States v. McGlone, D.C. Pa., 19 F.Supp. 285, 287.

RADICALS. A political party. The term arose in England, in 1818, when the popular leaders, Hunt, Cartwright, and others, sought to obtain a radical reform in the representative system of parliament. Bolingbroke (Disc. Parties, Let. 18) employs the term in its present accepted sense: "Such a remedy might have wrought a radical cure of the evil that threatens our constitution," etc. Wharton.

RADIUS. A straight line drawn from the centre of a circle to any point of the circumference. Its length is half the diameter of that circle, or is the space between the centre and the circumference. State v. Berard, 40 La.App. 174, 3 So. 463.

RADOUR. In French law. A term including the repairs made to a ship, and a fresh supply of furniture and victuals, munitions, and other provisions required for the voyage. Pardessus, n. 602.

RAFFLE. A kind of lottery in which several persons pay, in shares, the value of something put up as a stake, and then determine by chance (as by casting dice) which one of them shall become the sole possessor of it. Webster; Prendergast v. State, 41 Tex.Cr.R. 358, 57 S.W. 850. People v. American Art Union, 7 N.Y. 241.

RAGEMAN. A statute, so called, of justices assigned by Edward I. and his council, to go a circuit through all England, and to hear and determine all complaints of injuries done within five years next before Michaelmas, in the fourth year of his reign. Spelman. Also a rule, form, regimen, or precedent.

RAGMAN'S ROLL, or RAGIMUND'S ROLL. A roll, called from one Ragimund or Ragimont, a legate in Scotland, who, summoning all the beneficed clergymen in that kingdom, caused them on oath to give in the true value of their benefices, according to which they were afterwards taxed by the court of Rome. Wharton.

RAIL CHAIR. A device used where the ends of rails come together; it holds the separate rails firmly together and in alignment and so gives them the effect of being one continuous rail. Railroad Supply Co. v. Hart Steel Co., C.C.A.I11., 222 F. 261, 269.

RAILROAD, v. With respect to legislation, to force through legislation over the objection of a minority. Roane v. Columbian Pub. Co., 126 Wash. 416, 218 P. 213, 214.

RAILROAD, n. A road or way on which iron or steel rails are laid for wheels to run on, for the conveyance of heavy loads in cars or carriages propelled by steam or other motive power; a road or way on which iron rails are laid for transportation purposes, as incident to the possession or ownership of which important franchises and rights affecting the public are attached. A railway. New Deemer Mfg. Co. v. Kilpatrick, 129 Miss. 268, 92 So. 71, 73; Muskogee Electric Traction Co. v. Doering, 70 Okl. 21, 172 P. 793, 794, 2 A.L.R. 94. An enterprise created and operated to carry on a fixed track passengers and freight, or passengers or freight, for rates or tolls, without discrimination as to those who demand transportation. Bradley v. Degnon Contracting Co., 224 N.Y. 60, 120 N.E. 89, 91. In a strictly accurate sense, it is a generic term, and includes all kinds of railroads, whether street railways, horse car lines, cable car lines, electric trolley lines, suburban lines, interurban lines, or steam railroads engaged in general transportation. In re Columbia Ry., Gas & Electric Co., D.C.S.C., 24 F.2d 828, 831.

The term "railroad" or "railway" may in a broad sense include all structures which are necessary to operation of railroad. Smith v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 50 Mont. 539, 148 P. 393, 394.

Whether or not "railroad" includes roads operated by horse-power, electricity, cable-lines, etc., will generally depend upon the context of the statute in which it is found. The decisions on this point are at variance. Frisco Lumber Co. v. Spivey, 40 Okl. 633, 140 P. 157, 158; Morgan v. Grande Ronde Lumber Co., 76 Or. 440, 148 P. 1122, 1123.

If scope of a statute relating to railroads shows that both railroads and street railroads were within the legislative contemplation, the word "railroad" will include street railroads; but, if act was aimed at railroads proper, street railroads are excluded from its provisions. In re Columbia Ry., Gas & Electric Co., D.C.S.C., 24 F.2d 828, 831.

Railroad is usually limited to roads for heavy steam transportation and also to steam roads partially or wholly electrified or roads for heavy traffic designed originally for electric traction. The lighter electric street-car lines and the like are usually termed railways. In Great Britain and the British colonies, except Canada, all such roads, whether for heavy or light traffic, are usually called railways. Webster, Diet.

See, also, Railway.

Branch Railroad

A road connected with the main line, not as a mere incident thereto, to facilitate the business of the main line, but to do a business of its own by transporting persons and property to and from places not reached by the main line. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. East Sioux Falls Quarry Co., 33 S.D. 63, 144 N.W. 724, 726.

Railroad Car

Any vehicle constructed for operation over railroad tracks. State v. Tardiff, 111 Me. 552, 90 A. 424, L.R.A.1915A, 817.

Railroad Commission

A body of commissioners, appointed in several of the states, to regulate railway traffic within the state, with power, generally, to regulate and fix rates, see to the enforcement of police ordinances, and sometimes assess the property of railroads for taxation. Southern Pac. Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, C.C.Cal., 78 F. 236, 252.

Railroad Company

A company which is principally engaged in operating a railroad. Crowley v. Polleys Lumber Co., 92 Mont. 27, 9 P.2d 1068, 1070.

Railroad Division

A unit of management established for convenience in operation. Day v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 295 Ky. 679, 175 S.W.2d 347, 349.

Railroad Line

A regular line of railroad vehicles for public use operating between distant points or between different cities. Bruce Transfer Co. v. Johnston, 227 Iowa 50, 287 N.W. 278, 280.

Railroad Property

The property which is essential to a railroad company to enable it to discharge its functions and duties as a common carrier by rail. It includes the road bed, right of way, tracks, bridges, stations, rolling stock, and such like property. Northern Pac. It. Co. v. Walker, C.C.N.D., 47 F. 681.

Railroad Relief Funds

A term applied to funds raised by periodical contributions of corporation employees, or by them jointly with the corporation, for the purpose of providing relief to the employees in case of injury, and the payment of money to their families in case of death, in the service.

RAILWAY. In law, this term is usually of exactly equivalent import to "railroad" (q. v.). State v. Brin, 30 Minn, 522, 16 N.W. 406; Milivale

Interurban Railways

A sort of hybrid, having in some respects the characteristics of the ordinary railroad and in others those of the street railroad. Within the limits of the cities which they enter, they usually pass along the streets, and perform the ordinary functions of street railroads, stopping where desired to let passengers on or off, and serving the public need for local street travel. Outside the cities, on their way from one city or town to another, they frequently travel upon a roadway obtained from private persons, not upon a public road, and stop, as in case of ordinary railroads, only at stations established by them for that purpose. They also often convey freight as well as passengers. San Francisco and S. M. Electric Ry. Co. v. Scott, 142 Cal. 222, 75 P. 575, 576, 583.

Railway Commissioners

A body of three commissioners appointed under the English regulation of railways act, 1873, principally to enforce the provisions of the railway and canal traffic act, 1854, by compelling railway and canal companies to give reasonable facilities for traffic, to abstain from giving unreasonable preference to any company or person, and to forward through traffic at through rates. They also have the supervision of working agreements between companies. Sweet.

Railway Depot

A station at which trains stop for transaction of ordinary business of railroad company, the receiving and delivering of freight and passengers. Brenner v. Amrine, 151 Kan. 788, 100 P.2d 688, 690.

Street Railway

One constructed and operated on or along the streets of a city or town to carry persons from one point to another in such city or town, or to and from its suburbs. It is peculiarly to accommodate people in cities and towns; its tracks are ordinarily laid to conform to street grades, its cars run at short intervals, stopping at street crossings to receive and discharge passengers, and its business is confined to the carriage of passengers and not freight. Muskogee Electric Traction Co. v. Doehring, 70 Okl. 21, 172 P. 793, 795, 2 A.L.R. 94. An enterprise created and operated to carry on a fixed track passengers and freight, or passengers or freight, for rates or tolls, without discrimination as to those who demand transportation. Bradley v. Degnon Contracting Co., 224 N.Y. 60, 120 N.E. 89, 91. The term "street railroad" is used interchangeably with "street railway." Metropolitan West Side Electric Ry. Co. v. City of Chicago, 261 Ill. 624, 104 N.E. 165, 167. The term is sometimes distinguished from "railway," meaning one of those larger institutions employed in general freight and passenger traffic from one city, town, or place to another, and usually denominated "commercial railways," while a "street railway" is built upon streets and avenues for the accommodation of street traffic. Anhalt v. Waterloo, C. F. & N. Ry. Co., 166 Iowa 479, 147 N.W. 928, 931. See Railroad. "Street railway" may include both urban and interurban lines. City of Milwaukee v. Railroad Commission of Wisconsin, 169 Wis. 559, 173 N.W. 329, 330. See, also, Interurban Railways.

Trunk Railway

A commercial railway connecting towns, cities, counties, or other points within the state or in different states, which has the legal capacity, under its charter or the general law, of constructing, purchasing, and operating branch lines or feeders connecting with its main stem or trunk; the main or trunk line bearing the same relation to its branches that the trunk of a tree bears to its branches, or the main stream of a river to its tributaries. Oregon, C. & E. Ry. Co. v. Blackmer, 154 Or. 388, 59 P.2d 694, 696.

RAIN—WATER. The water which naturally falls from the clouds.

RAINY DAYS. Where a charter party (a cargo of wheat) provided that rainy days should not be counted as lay days, it excludes only rainy days on which, with reference to the facilities of the port in the way of covered docks, etc., the cargo could not be safely landed. Kerr v. Schwaner, 101 C.C.A. 285, 177 F. 659.

RAISE. To create; to infer; to create or bring to light by construction or interpretation. To cause or procure to be produced, bred or propagated. To bring together; to get together or obtain for use or service; to gather; to collect; to levy; as to raise money to raise an army. Town of Amherst v. Erie County, 256 N.Y.S. 785, 143 Misc. 540; Miller Hatcheries v. Boyer, C.C.A. Iowa, 131 F.2d 283, 287.

RAISE A PRESUMPTION. To give occasion or ground for a presumption; to be of such a character, or to be attended with such circumstances, as to justify an inference or presumption of law. Thus, a person's silence, in some instances, will "raise a presumption" of his consent to what is done.

RAISE AN ISSUE. To bring pleadings to an issue; to have the effect of producing an issue between the parties pleading in an action.

RAISE REVENUE. To levy a tax, as a means of collecting revenue; to bring together, collect, or levy revenue. The phrase does not imply an increase of revenue. Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 557.

RAISING A PROMISE. The act of the law in extracting from the facts and circumstances of a particular transaction a promise which was implicit therein, and postulating it as a ground of legal liability.

RAISING A USE. Creating, establishing, or calling into existence a use. Thus, if a man conveyed land to another in fee, without any consideration, equity would presume that he meant it to be to the use of himself, and would, therefore, raise an implied use for his benefit. Brown.

RAISING AN ACTION, in Scotland, is the institution of an action or suit.

RAISING MONEY. Realizing money by subscription, loan, or otherwise. New York & R. Cement Co. v. Davis, 173 N.Y. 235, 66 N.E. 9; New London Literary Inst. v. Prescott, 40 N.H. 333.

RAISING PORTIONS. When a landed estate is settled on an eldest son, it is generally burdened with the payment of specific sums of money in favor of his brothers and sisters. A direction to this effect is called a direction for "raising portions for younger children;" and, for this purpose, it is usual to demise or lease the estate to trustees for a term of years, upon trust to raise the required portions by a sale or mortgage of the same. Mozley & Whitley.

RAN, Sax. In Saxon and old English law. Open theft, or robbery.

RANCHO. Sp. A small collection of men or their dwellings; a hamlet. As used, however, in. Mexico and in the Spanish law formerly prevailing in California, the term signifies a ranch or large tract of land suitable for grazing purposes where horses or cattle are raised, and is distinguished from hacienda, a cultivated farm or plantation.

RANCID. Having a rank smell or taste from chemical change or decomposition. Spry v. Kiser, 179 N.C. 417, 102 S.E. 708, 709.

RAND, or RAND LIFT. In the nomenclature of the • art of building heels, the cup-shaped piece attached to the top of the heel, fitting it to the heel seat of the shoe. Brockton Heel Co. v. International Shoe Co., D.C.N.H., 19 F.2d 145.

RANGE, v. To have or extend in certain direction, to correspond in direction or line, or to trend or run. Lilly v. Marcum, 214 Ky. 514, 283 S.W. 1059, 1060.

RANGE, n. In the government survey of the United States, one of the divisions of a state, a row or tier of townships as they appear on the map.

A tract or district of land within which domestic animals in large numbers range for subsistence; an extensive grazing ground. The term is used on the great plains of the United States to designate a tract commonly of many square miles occupied by one or different proprietors and distinctively called a cattle range, stock range, or sheep range. The animals on a range are usually left to take care of themselves during the whole year without shelter, except when periodically gathered in a round-up for counting and selection, and for branding, when the herds of several proprietors run together. State v. Omaechevviaria, 27 Idaho, 797, 152 P. 280, 282; Missoula Trust & Savings Bank v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 76 Mont. 201, 245 P. 949, 951.

RANGER. In forest law. A sworn officer of the forest, whose office chiefly consists in three points: To walk daily through his charge to see, hear, and inquire as well of trespasses as trespassers in his bailiwick; to drive the beasts of the forest, both of venery and chace, out of the deafforested into the forested lands; and to present all trespassers of the forest at the next courts holden for the forest. Cowell.

RANK, n. Grade of official standing. The order or place in which certain officers are placed in the army and navy, in relation to others. Wood v. U. S., 15 Ct.C1. 158.

Rank is often used to express something different from office. It then becomes a designation or title of honor, dignity, or distinction conferred upon an officer in order to fix his relative position in reference to other officers in matters of privilege, precedence, and sometimes of command, or by which to determine his pay and emoluments. This is the case with the staff officers of the army. Wood v. U. S., 15 Ct.C1. 159.

RANK, adj. In English law. Excessive; too large in amount; as a rank modus. 2 Bl.Comm. 30.

RANKING OF CREDITORS. The Scotch term for the arrangement of the property of a debtor according to the claims of the creditors, in consequence of the nature of their respective securities. Bell. The corresponding process in England is the marshalling of securities in a suit or action for redemption or foreclosure. Paterson.

RANSOM. The money, price, or consideration paid or demanded for redemption of a captured person or persons, a payment that releases from captivity. Acts 1933, c. 16063. Keith v. State, 120 Fla. 847, 163 So. 136.

In international law. The redemption of captured property from the hands of an enemy, particularly of property captured at sea. 1 Kent, Comm. 104. A sum paid or agreed to be paid for the redemption of captured property. 1 Kent, Comm. 105.

Strictly speaking, not a recapture of the captured property. It is rather a purchase of the right of the captors at the time, be it what it may; or, more properly, it is a relinquishment of all the interest and benefit which the captors might acquire or consummate in the property, by a regular adjudication of a prize tribunal, whether it be an interest in 'rem, a lien, or a mere title to expenses. In this respect, there seems to be no difference between the case of a ransom of an enemy or a neutral. Maisonnaire v. Keating, 2 Gall. 325, Fed.Cas.No.8,978.

In old English law. A sum of money paid for the pardoning of some great offense. The distinction between ransom and amerciament is said to be that ransom was the redemption of a corporal punishment, while amerciament was a fine or penalty directly imposed, and not in lieu of another punishment. Cowell; 4 Bl.Comm. 380; U. S. v. Griffin, 6 D.C. 57. A sum of money paid for the redemption of a person from captivity or imprisonment. Thus one of the feudal "aids" was to ransom the lord's person if taken prisoner. 2 Bl.Comm. 63.

RANSOM BILL. A contract by which a captured vessel, in consideration of her release and of safe-conduct for a stipulated course and time, agrees to pay a certain sum as ransom.

RAPE. In criminal law. The unlawful carnal knowledge of a woman by a man forcibly and against her will. Gore v. State, 119 Ga. 418, 46 S.E. 671, 100 Am.St.Rep. 182; People v. Cieslak, 319 Ill. 221, 149 N.E. 815, 816. State ex rel. Moffitt v. Zupnik, Ohio App., 50 N.E.2d 427, 429. That is, without her consent and against her utmost resistance. State v. Cottengim, Mo., 12 S.W.2d 53, 57.

Hence, if she consent to the sexual intercourse, although that consent may be reluctantly given, and although there may be some force used to obtain her consent, the offense cannot be "rape." Opposition to the sexual act by mere words is not sufficient. Welch v. State, 58 Ga.App. 447, 198 S.E. 810, 811. While slightest penetration is sufficient, it must be shown that private parts of male entered at least to some extent in those of female, and emission without penetration is insufficient. Kitchen v. State, 61 Okl.Cr. 435, 69 P.2d 411, 415.

Under modern statutes which often materially change the common-law definition and create an offense commonly known as "statutory rape," where the offense consists in having sexual intercourse with a female under statutory age, the offense may be either with or without the female's consent. State v. Ellison, 19 N.M. 428, 144 P. 10, 13.

In English law. An intermediate division between a shire and a hundred; or a division of a county, containing several hundreds. 1 Bl.Comm. 116; Cowell. Apparently peculiar to the county of Sussex. See, however, Lath.

RAPE OF THE FOREST. In old English law. Trespass committed in a forest by violence. Cowell.

RAPE-REEVE, In English law. The chief officer of a rape, (q. v.) . 1 Bl.Comm. 116.

RAPINE. The felonious taking of another man's personal property, openly and by violence, against his will.

In the civil law, rapina is defined as the forcible and violent taking of another man's movable property with the criminal intent to appropriate it to the robber's own use. A prmtorian action lay for this offense, in which quadruple damages were recoverable. Gaius, lib. 3, § 209; Inst. 4, 2; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 481; Heinecc. Elem. § 1071.

RAPPORT A SUCCESSION. In French law and in Louisiana. A proceeding similar to hotchpot; the restoration to the succession of such property as the heir may have received by way of advancement from the decedent, in order that an even division may be made among all the co-heirs. Civ.Code La. art. 1227.

RAPTOR. In old English law. A ravisher. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 52, § 12,

RAPTU H1EREDIS. In old English law. A writ for taking away an heir holding in socage, of which there were two sorts: One when the heir was married; the other when he was not. Reg. Orig. 163.

RAPUIT. Lat. In old English law. Ravished. A technical word in old indictments. 2 East, 30.

RASURE. The act of scraping, scratching, or shaving the surface of a written instrument, for the purpose of removing certain letters or words from it. It is to be distinguished from "obliteration," as the latter word properly denotes the crossing out of a word or letter b[T,] drawing a line through it with ink. But the two expressions are often used interchangeably. Penny v. Corwithe, 18 Johns., N.Y. 499.

RASUS. In old English law. A rase; a measure of onions, containing twenty Hones, and each flonis twenty-five heads. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 12, § 12.

RATABLE. Proportional; proportionately rated upon a constant ratio adjusted to due relation. Glucksman v. Board of Education of City of New York, Mun.Ct., 164 N.Y.S. 351, 359. According to a measure which fixes proportions. It has no meaning unless referable to some rule or standard, and never means equality or equal division but implies unequal division as between different persons. Chenoweth v. Nordan & Morris, Tex. Civ.App., 171 S.W.2d 386, 387.

RATABLE ESTATE OR PROPERTY. Property in its quality and nature capable of being rated, e. appraised, assessed. 10 B. & S. 323; Coventry Co. v. Assessors, 16 R.I. 240, 14 A. 877; Burdick v. Pendleton, 46 R.I. 125, 125 A. 278, 279. Taxable estate; the real and personal property which the legislature designates as "taxable." Marshfield v. Middlesex, 55 Vt. 546.

RATAM REM HABERE. Lat. In the civil law. To hold a thing ratified; to ratify or confirm it. Dig. 46, 8, 12, 1.

RATE. Proportional or relative value, measure, or degree; the proportion or standard by which quantity or value is adjusted. Shropshire v. Commerce Farm Credit Co., Tex.Civ.App., 266 S.W. 612, 614.

Thus, the rate of interest is the proportion or ratio between the principal and interest. So the buildings in a town are rated for insurance purposes; i. e., classified and individually estimated with reference to their insurable qualities. In this sense also we speak of articles as being in "first-rate" or "second-rate" condition.

A fixed relation of quantity, amount or degree; also, a charge, valuation, payment or price fixed according to ratio, scale or standard; comparative price or amount of demands. E. C. Miller Cedar Lumber Co. v. United States, Cust. & Pat.App., 86 F.2d 429, 434. Webster.

Thus, we speak of the rate at which public lands are sold, rates of fare upon railroads, etc. Georgia R. & B. Co. v. Maddox, 116 Ga. 64, 42 S.E. 315; Naylor v. Board of Education of Fulton County, 216 Ky. 766, 288 S.W. 690, 692.

In connection with public utilities, a charge to the public for a service open to all and upon the same terms. State v. Spokane & I. E. R. Co., 89 Wash. 599, 154 P. 1110, 1113, L.R.A.1918C, 675;

City of Detroit v. Public Utilities Commission, 288 Mich. 267, 286 N.W. 368, 373.

As used in the interstate commerce law, it means the net cost to the shipper of the transportation of his property; that is to say, the net amount the carrier receives from the shipper and retains. Elliott v. Empire Natural Gas Co., 123 Kan. 558, 256 P. 114, 117. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Armour & Co., D.C.Ill., 26 F.Supp. 964, 967.

The term is also used as the synonym of "tax;" that is, a sum assessed by governmental authority upon persons or property, by proportional valuation, for public purposes. It is chiefly employed in this sense in England, but is there usually confined to taxes of a local nature, or those raised by the parish; such as the poor-rate, borough rate, etc.

It sometimes occurs in a connection which gives it a meaning synonymous with "assessment;" that is, the apportionment of a tax among the whole number of persons who are responsible for it, by estimating the value of the taxable property of each, and making a proportional distribution of the whole amount. Thus we speak of "rating" persons and property.

In marine insurance, the term refers to the classification or scaling of vessels based on their relative state and condition in regard to insurable qualities; thus, a vessel in the best possible condition and offering the best risk from the underwriter's standpoint, is "rated" as "A 1." Insurance Companies v. Wright, 1 Wall. 472, 17 L.Ed. 505.

Class Rate

A single rate applying to the transportation of a number of articles of the same general character. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Freeman Supply Corporation, 145 Va. 207, 133 S.E. 817, 818.

Commodity Rate

A rate which applies to the transportation of a specific commodity alone. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Freeman Supply Corporation, 145 Va. 207, 133 S.E. 817, 818.

Joint Rate

As applied to railroads, a rate prescribed to be charged for the transportation of goods or passengers over the connecting lines of two or more railroads, and to be divided among them for the service rendered by each respectively. Southern. Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Railroad Commission of Georgia, D.C.Ga., 274 F. 438, 441.

Rate of Exchange

In commercial law. The actual price at which a bill, drawn in one country upon another country, can be bought or obtained in the former country at any given time. Story, Bills, § 31.

Rate Tariff

Statement by carrier to possible shippers that it will furnish certain services under certain conditions for certain price. Union Wire Rope Corporation v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 66 F.2d 965, 966. •

Rate-tithe

In English law. When any sheep, or other cattle, are kept in a parish for less time than a year, the owner must pay tithe for them pro rata, according to the custom of the place. Fitzh.Nat. Brev. 51.

RATIFICATION. In a broad sense, the confirmation of a previous act done either by the party himself or by another; confirmation of a voidable act. Story, Ag. §§ 250, 251; 2 Kent, Comm. 237; Norton v. Shelby County, 6 S.Ct. 1121, 118 U.S. 425, 30 L.Ed. 178; Gallup v. Fox, 30 A. 756, 64 Conn. 491. The affirmance by a person of a prior act which did not bind him, but which was done or professedly done on his account, whereby the act, as to some or all persons, is given effect as if originally authorized by him. Goldfarb v. Reicher, 112 N.J.L. 413, 171 A. 149, 151; The adoption by one, as binding upon himself, of an act done in such relations that he may claim it as done for his benefit, although done under such circumstances as would not bind him except for his subsequent assent. Samstag & Hilder Bros. v. Ottenheimer & Weil, 90 Conn. 475, 97 A. 865, 867; It is equivalent to a previous authorization and relates back to time when act ratified was done, except where intervening rights of third persons are concerned. Petray v. First Nat. Bank, 92 Cal.App. 86, 267 P. 711, 713.

In the law of principal and agent, the adoption and confirmation by one person with knowledge of all material facts, of an act or contract performed or entered into in his behalf by another who at the time assumed without authority to act as his agent. Maryland Casualty Co. v. First State Bank of Dewar, 101 Okl. 71, 223 P. 701, 705; Gould v. Maine Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 114 Me. 416, 96 A. 732, 734, L.R.A.1917A, 604.

Ratification of transaction involves same elements Its making of new contract, and understanding of material facts necessary to an intelligent assent is essential to "ratification." State ex rel. Robertson v. Johnson County Bank, 18 Tenn.App. 232, 74 S.W.2d 1084, 1087.

Essence of "ratification" by principal of act of agent is manifestation of mental determination by principal to affirm the act, and this may be manifested by written word or by spoken word or by conduct, or may be inferred from known circumstances and principal's acts in relation thereto. Miller v. Chatsworth Savy. Bank, 203 Iowa, 411, 212 N.W. 722, 724.

To constitute ratification of voidable contract the act relied on must be performed with full knowledge of its consequences and with an express intention of ratifying what is known to be voidable. Coe v. Moon, 260 Ill. 76, 102 N.E. 1074, 1076; Fletcher v. A. W. Koch Co., Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 501, 503.

Express ratifications are those made in express and direct terms of assent. Implied ratifications are such as the law presumes from the acts of the principal.

Estoppel and ratification distinguished. See Estoppel.

RATIFY. To approve and sanction; to make valid; to confirm; to give sanction to. Short v. Metz Co., 165 Ky. 319, 176 S.W. 1144, 1149; Farmers' Co-op. Exch. Co. of Good Thunder v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 149 Minn. 171, 182 N.W. 1008, 1009.

Though sometimes used synonymously, from a strictly lexical standpoint, the word "adopt" should be used to apply to void transactions, while the word "ratify" should be limited to the final approval of a voidable transaction by one who theretofore had the optional right to relieve himself from its obligations. Cosden Oil & Gas Co. v. Hendrickson, 96 Okl. 206, 221 P. 86, 89.

RATIHABITIO MANDATO ZEQUIPARATUR. Ratification is equivalent to express command. Dig. 46, 3, 12, 4; Broom, Max. 867; Palmer v. Yates, 3 Sandf. (N.Y.) 151.

RATIO. Rate; proportion; degree. Reason, or understanding. Also a cause, or giving judgment therein.

RATIO DECIDENDI. The ground of decision. The point in a case which determines the judgment.

RATIO EST FORMALIS CAUSA CONSUETUDINIS. Reason is the formal cause of custom.

RATIO EST LEGIS ANIMA; MUTATA LEGIS RATIONE MUTATUR ET LEX. 7 Coke, 7. Reason is the soul of law; the reason of law being changed the law is also changed.

RATIO EST RADIUS DIVINI LUMINIS. Co. Litt. 232. Reason is a ray of the divine light.

RATIO ET AUCTORITAS, DUO CLARISSIMA MUNDI LUMINA. 4 Inst. 320. Reason and authority, the two brightest lights of the world.

RATIO IN JURE ZEQUITAS INTEGRA. Reason in law is perfect equity.

RATIO LEGIS. The reason or occasion of a law; the occasion of making a law. Bl.Law Tracts, 3.

RATIO LEGIS EST ANIMA LEGIS. Jenk.Cent. 45. The reason of law is the soul of law.

RATIO NON CLAUDITUR LOCO. Reason is not confined to any place.

RATIO POTEST ALLEGARI DEFICIENTE LEGE; SED RATIO VERA ET LEGALIS, ET NON APPARENS. Co. Litt. 191. Reason may be alleged when law is defective; but it must be true and legal reason, and not merely apparent.

RATIONABILE ESTOVERIUM. A Latin phrase equivalent to "alimony."

RATIONABILI PARTE BONORUM. A writ that lay for the wife against the executors of her husband, to have the third part of his goods after his just debts and funeral expenses had been paid. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 122.

RATIONAL DOUBT. A doubt based upon reasonable inferences such as are ordinarily drawn by ordinary men in the light of their experiences in ordinary life. Hicks v. State, 66 Ga.App. 577, 18 S.E.2d 637, 640, .66 Ga.App. 577.

RATIONALIBUS DIVISIS. An abolished writ which lay where two lords, in divers towns, had seigniories adjoining, for him who found his waste by little and little to have been encroached upon, against the other, who had encroached, thereby to rectify their bounds. Cowell.

RATIONE IMPOTENTIZE. Lat. On account of inability. A ground of qualified property in some animals ferce naturce; as in the young ones, while they are unable to fly or run. 2 Bl.Comm. 3, 4.

RATIONE MATERLE. Lat. By reason of the matter involved; in consequence of, or from the nature of, the subject-matter.

RATIONE PERSONJE. Lat. By reason of the person concerned; from the character of the person.

RATIONE PRIVILEGII. Lat. REAL LAW. At common law. The body of laws relating to real property. 'This use of the term is popular rather than technical.

In the civil law. A law which relates to specific property, whether movable or immovable.

If real law in any given case relates to immovable property, it is limited in its operation to the territory within which the property is situate, real estate being both by common and continental laws, subject exclusively to the laws of the government within whose territory it is situate. Story, Confl.L. 426.

REAL THINGS (or THINGS REAL). In common law. Such things as are permanent, fixed, and immovable, which cannot be carried out of their place; as lands and tenements. 2 Bl.Comm. 15. Things substantial and immovable, and the rights and profits annexed to or issuing out of them. 1 Steph.Comm. 156.

REALITY. In foreign law. That quality of laws which concerns property or things, (quce ad rem spectant.) Story, Confl. Laws, § 16.

REALIZE. To convert any kind of property into money; but especially to receive the returns from an investment. Weldon v. Newsom, 67 Colo. 502, 186 P. 516, 517.

REALM. A kingdom; a country. 1 Taunt. 270; 4 Camp. 289.

REALTY. A brief term for real property; also for anything which partakes of the nature of real property.

Quasi realty. Things which are fixed in contemplation of law to realty, but movable in themselves, as heir-looms, (or limbs of the inheritance,) title-deeds, court rolls, etc. Wharton.

REAPPRAISER. A person who, in certain cases, is appointed to make a revaluation or second appraisement of imported goods at the customhouse.

REAPTOWEL. See Riptowell.

REAR. The word has been held not necessarily to mean directly behind. Hinds v. Hinsdale, 80 N.H. 346, 116 A. 635, 636.

REARGUMENT. Its purpose is to demonstrate to court that there is some decision or principle of law which would have a controlling effect and which has been overlooked, or that there has been a misapprehension of facts. In re Hooker's Estate, 18 N.Y.S.2d 107, 110, 173 Misc. 515.

REASON. A faculty of the mind by which it distinguishes truth from falsehood, good from evil, and which enables the possessor to deduce inferences from facts or from propositions. Webster. Also an inducement, motive, or ground for action, as in the phrase "reasons for an appeal." Miller v. Miller, 8 Johns. (N.Y.) 77.

REASONABLE. Just; proper. Ordinary or usual. Fit and appropriate to the end in view. Parkes v. Bartlett, 236 Mich. 460, 210 N.W. 492, 494, 47 A.L.R. 1128; Having the faculty of reason; rational; governed by reason; under the influence of reason; agreeable to reason. Claussen v. State, 21 Wyo. 505, 133 P. 1055, 1056. Thinking, speaking, or acting according to the dictates of reason; not immoderate or excessive, being synonymous with rational; honest; equitable; fair; suitable; moderate; tolerable. Cass v. State, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 208, 61 S.W.2d 500.

As applied to rates of public service companies, a reasonable rate is one not so low as to be destructive of the company's property or so high, either intrinsically or because discriminatory, as to be an unjust exaction from the public. Turner v. Connecticut Co., 91 Conn. 692, 101 A. 88, 90.

As to reasonable "Aids," "Care," "Diligence," "Doubt," "Fair and Reasonable Compensation," "Fair and Reasonable Contract," "Fair and Reasonable Market Value," "Fair and Reasonable Tolls," "Fair and Reasonable Value," "Notice," "Skill," and "Time," see those titles.

REASONABLE ACT. Such as may fairly, justly, and reasonably be required of a party.

REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE. Such grounds as justify any one in suspecting another of a crime, and giving him in custody thereon. It is a suspicion founded upon circumstances sufficiently strong to warrant reasonable man in belief that charge is true. Murphy v. Murray, 74 Cal.App. 726, 241 P. 938, 940.

REASONABLE CAUSE TO BELIEVE A DEBTOR INSOLVENT. Knowledge of facts of a character calculated to induce a belief in the mind of an ordinarily intelligent and prudent business man. Putnam v. United States Trust Co., 223 Mass. 199, 111 N.E. 969, 972.

REASONABLE CERTAINTY, RULE OF. Permits recovery of damages only for such future pain and suffering as is reasonably certain to result from the injury received. Prettyman v. Topkis, 3 A.2d 708, 710, 9 W.W.Harr. (Del.) 568. To authorize recovery under such rule for permanent injury, permanency of injury must be shown with reasonable certainty, which is not mere conjecture or likelihood or even a probability of such injury. State ex rel. Kansas City Public Service Co. v. Shain, 350 Mo. 316, 165 S.W.2d 428, 430.

REASONABLE CREATURE. Under the common-law rule that murder is taking the life of a "reasonable creature" under the king's peace, with malice aforethought, the phrase means a human being, and has no reference to his mental condition, as it includes a lunatic, an idiot, and even an unborn child. State v. Jones, Walk. (Miss.) 85.

REASONABLE PART. In old English law. That share of a man's goods which. the law gave to his wife and children after his decease. 2 Bl. Comm. 492.

REASSURANCE. This is where an insurer procures the whole or a part of the sum which he has insured (i. e., contracted to pay in case of loss, death, etc.) to be insured again to him by another person. Sweet.

REATTACHMENT. A second attachment of him who was formerly attached, and dismissed the court without day, by the not coming of the justices, or some such casualty. Reg. Orig. 35.

REBATE. Discount; reducing the interest of money in consideration of prompt payment. A deduction from a stipulated premium on a policy of insurance, in pursuance of an antecedent contract. A deduction or drawback from a stipulated payment, charge, or rate, (as, a rate for the transportation of freight by a railroad,) not taken out in advance of payment, but handed back to the payer after he has paid the full stipulated sum. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 222 F. 685; New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. General Electric Co., 219 N.Y. 227, 114 N.E. 115, 117, 1 A. L.R. 1417.

REBEL. A citizen or subject who unjustly and unlawfully takes up arms against the constituted authorities of the nation, to deprive them of the supreme power, either by resisting their lawful and constitutional orders in some particular matter or to impose on them conditions. Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 3, § 328. In another sense, it signifies a refusal to obey a superior or the commands of a court.

REBELLION. Deliberate, organized resistance, by force and arms, to the laws or operations of the government, committed by a subject. Crashley v. Press Pub. Co., 74 App.Div. 118, 77 N.Y.S. 711.

In old English law, also a contempt of a court manifested by disobedience to its process, particularly of the court of chancery. If a defendant refused to appear, after attachment and proclamation, a "commission of rebellion" issued against him. 3 Bl.Comm. 444.

REBELLION, COMMISSION OF. In equity practice. A process of contempt issued on the non-appearance of a defendant.

REBELLIOUS ASSEMBLY. In English law. A gathering of twelve persons or more, intending, going about, or practicing unlawfully and of their own authority to change any laws of the realm; or to destroy the inclosure of any park or ground inclosed, banks of fish-ponds, pools, conduits, etc., to the intent the same shall remain void; or that they shall have way in any of the said grounds; or to destroy the deer in any park, fish in ponds, coneys in any warren, dovehouses, etc.; or to burn sacks of corn; or to abate rents or prices of victuals, etc., Cowell.

REBOUTER. To repel or bar. The action of the heir by the warranty of his ancestor is called "to rebut or repel." 2 Co. Litt. 247.

REBUS SIC STANTIBUS. Lat. At this point of affairs; in these circumstances. A name given to a tacit condition, said to attach to all treaties, that they shall cease to be obligatory so soon as the state of facts and conditions upon which they were founded has substantially changed. Taylor, Int. L. § 394; 1 Oppenheim, Int. L. 550; Grotius, ch. XVI, § XXV.

The change of government from a monarchy to a republic was treated as not terminating treaties, nor a successful revolution; nor an alliance of one of the treaty powers with a third power. As the result, however, of the changes in the state of Europe effected by the wars of Napoleon, all the treaties of the United States with European powers were considered as terminated, excepting only one with Spain of 1795. 5 Moore, Dig. Int. L. 335, 337, 338.

REBUT. In pleading and evidence. To defeat or take away the effect of something. Sweet.

When a plaintiff in an action produces evidence which raises a presumption of the defendant's liability, and the defendant adduces evidence which shows that the presumption is ill-founded, he is said to "rebut it." Sweet.

In the old law of real property, to repel or bar a claim. Co. Litt. 365a; Termes de la Ley.

Thus, when a person was sued for land which had been warranted to him by the plaintiff or his ancestor, and he pleaded the warranty as a defense to the action, this was called a "rebutter." Co.Litt. 365a; Termes de la Ley.

REBUT AN EQUITY. To defeat an apparent equitable right or claim, by the introduction of evidence showing that, in the particular circumstances, there is no ground for such equity to attach, or that it is overridden by a superior or countervailing equity. 2 Whart. Ev. § 973.

REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTION. In the law of evidence. A presumption which may be rebutted by evidence. Otherwise called a "disputable" presumption. A species of legal presumption which holds good until disproved. Best, Pres. § 25; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 33; Beck v. Kansas City Public Service Co., Mo.App., 48 S.W.2d 213, 215. It shifts burden of proof. Heiner v. Donnan, 52 S.Ct. 358, 362, 285 U.S. 312, 76 L.Ed. 772. And which standing alone will support a finding against contradictory evidence. Lieber v. Rigby, 34 Cal.App.2d 582, 94 P.2d 49, 50.

REBUTTAL. The introduction of rebutting evidence; the showing that statement of witnesses as to what occurred is not true; the stage of a trial at which such evidence may be introduced; also the rebutting evidence itself. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 674. State v. Monroe, 205 La. 285, 17 So.2d 331, 332.

REBUTTER. In pleading. A defendant's answer of fact to a plaintiff's surrejoinder; the third pleading in the series on the part of the defendant. Steph. Pl. 59; 3 Bl.Comm. 310.

REBUTTING EVIDENCE. Evidence given to explain, repel, counteract, or disprove facts given in evidence by the adverse party. State v. Martinez, 43 Idaho 180, 250 P. 239, 244; State v. Fourchy, 25 So. 109, 51 La.Ann. 228.

Also evidence given in opposition to a presumption of fact or a prima facie case; in this sense, it may be not only counteracting evidence, but evidence sufficient to counteract, that is, conclusive. Fain v. Cornett, 25 Ga. 186.

RECALL. A method of removal of official in which power of removal is either granted to or reserved by the people. Jones v. Harlan, Tex.Civ. App., 109 S.W.2d 251, 254.

Constitutional Law

To retire an elected officer, by a vote of the electorate. In 1911 the right to recall was provided in Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, and California. Like provisions were adopted in 1912 in Ohio, Arizona, and Nebraska. The recall of judges was adopted in Oregon in 1908; in California in 1911; in Colorado, Arizona, and Nevada in 1912.

International Law

To summon a diplomatic minister back to his home court, at the same time depriving him of his office and functions.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.3, 142 F.2d 216, 218, 219. Reshuffling of capital structure within framework of existing corporation. Helvering v. Southwest Consol. Corporation, La., 62 S.Ct. 546, 552, 315 U. S. 194, 86 L.Ed. 789.

RECAPTION. A retaking, or taking back. A species of remedy by the mere act of the party injured, (otherwise termed "reprisal,") which happens when any one has deprived another of his property in goods or chattels personal, or wrongfully detains one's wife, child, or servant. In this case, the owner of the goods, and the husband, parent, or master may lawfully claim and retake them, wherever he happens to find them, so it be not in a riotous manner, or attended with a breach of the peace. 3 Inst. 134; 3 Bl.Comm. 4; 3 Steph.Comm. 358; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 612, 10 L.Ed. 1060. It also signifies the taking a second distress of one formerly distrained during the plea grounded on the former distress.

Also a writ to recover damages for him whose goods, being distrained for rent in service, etc., are distrained again for the same cause, pending the plea in the county court, or before the justice. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 71.

RECAPTURE. The taking from an enemy, by a force friendly to the former owner, of a vessel previously taken for prize by such enemy.

RECEDITUR A PLACITIS JURIS, POTIUS QUAM INJURLE ET DELICTA MANEANT IMPUNITA. Positive rules of law [as distinguished from maxims or conclusions of reason] will be receded from, [given up or dispensed with,] rather than that crimes and wrongs should remain unpunished. Bac. Max. 55, reg. 12.

RECEIPT. Written acknowledgment of the receipt of money, or a thing of value, without containing any affirmative obligation upon either party to it; a mere admission of a fact, in writing. Krutz v. Craig, 53 Ind. 574; Stone v. Steil, 230 Mich. 249, 202 N.W. 982, 983. And being a mere acknowledgment of payment, is subject to parol explanation or contradiction. Cappel v. Evansville Oil Corporation, La.App., 195 So. 104, 105; Adams v. Camden Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 15 N.J.Misc. 48, 188 A. 913, 914.

Act of receiving; also, the fact of receiving or being received; that which is received; that which comes in, in distinction from what is expended, paid out, sent away, and the like. State v. Texas Co., 173 Tenn. 154, 116 S.W.2d 583, 584.

In old practice. Admission of a party to defend a suit, as of a wife on default of the husband in certain cases. Litt. § 668; Co. Litt. 352b.

RECEIPTOR. A name given in some of the states to a person who receives from the sheriff goods which the latter has seized under process of garnishment, on giving to the sheriff a bond conditioned to have the property forthcoming when demanded or when execution issues. Story, Bailm. § 124.

RECEIVE. To take into possession and control; accept custody of. Young v. Alexander, 123 Miss. 708, 86 So. 461; Northwestern Consol. Milling Co. v. Rosenberg, C.C.A.Pa., 287 F. 785, 788.

RECEIVER. An indifferent person between the parties to a cause, appointed by the court to receive and preserve the property or fund in litigation, and receive its rents, issues, and profits, and apply or dispose of them at the direction of the court when it does not seem reasonable that either party should hold them. Or where a party is incompetent to do so, as in the case of an infant. The remedy of the appointment of a receiver is one of the very oldest in the court of chancery, and is founded on the inadequacy of the remedy to be obtained in the court of ordinary jurisdiction. Bisp. Eq. § 576; In re Guaranty Indemnity Co., 256 Mich. 671, 240 N.W. 78. A fiduciary of the court, appointed as an incident to other proceedings wherein certain ultimate relief is prayed. In re Granada Hotel Corporation, D. C.Ill., 9 F.Supp. 909. He is a trustee or ministerial officer representing court, and all parties in interest in litigation, and property or fund intrusted to him. Dallas Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson, Tex.Civ.App., 87 S'.W.2d 307, 308. See also Receiver Pendente Lite and Receivership.

One who receives money to the use of another to render an account. Story, Eq. Jur. § 446.

In criminal law. One who receives stolen goods from thieves, and conceals them. Cowell. This was always the prevalent sense of the word in the common as well as the civil law.

RECEIVER GENERAL OF THE DUCHY OF LANCASTER. An officer of the duchy court, who collects all the revenues, fines, forfeitures, and assessments within the duchy.

RECEIVER GENERAL OF THE PUBLIC REVENUE. In English law. An officer appointed in every county to receive the taxes granted by parliament, and remit the money to the treasury.

RECEIVER OF FINES. An English officer who receives the money from persons who compound with the crown on original writs sued out of chancery. Wharton.

RECEIVERS AND TRIERS OF PETITIONS. The mode of receiving and trying petitions to parliament was formerly judicial rather than legislative, and the triers were committees of prelates, peers, and judges, and, latterly, of the members generally. Brown.

RECEIVER'S CERTIFICATE. A non-negotiable evidence of debt, or debenture, issued by authority of a court of chancery, as a first lien upon the property of a debtor corporation in the hands of a receiver. Beach, Rec. § 379.

RECEIVERS OF WRECK. Persons appointed by the English board of trade. The duties of a receiver of wreck are to take steps for the preservation of any vessel stranded or in distress within his district; to receive and take possession of all articles washed on shore from the vessel; to use force for the suppression of plunder and disorder; to institute an examination on oath with respect to the vessel; and, if necessary, to sell the vessel, cargo, or wreck. Sweet.

RECEIVER PENDENTE LITE. A person appointed to take charge of the fund or property to which the receivership extends while the case remains undecided. The title to the property is not changed by the appointment. The receiver acquires no title, but only the right of possession as the officer of the court. The title remains in those in whom it was vested when the appointment was made. The object of the appointment is to secure the property pending the litigation, so that it may be appropriated in accordance with the rights of the parties, as they May be determined by the judgment in the action. Title Guarantee & Trust Co. v. 457 Schenectady Ave., 257 N. Y.S. 413, 417, 235 App.Div. 509.

RECEIVERSHIP. An extraordinary remedy of an ancillary character; chief reason for its allowance being to husband property in litigation for benefit of person who may ultimately be found entitled thereto. Pereira v. Wulf, 83 Mont. 343, 272 P. 532, 533. See, also, Receiver.

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS. The short name usually given to the offense of receiving any property with the knowledge that it has been feloniously, or unlawfully stolen, taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, or disposed of. Sweet; Underwood v. State, 36 Okl.Cr. 21, 251 P. 507, 508; Winters v. State, 80 Tex.Cr.R. 85, 188 S.W. 982.

RECESS. In the practice of the courts, a short interval or period of time during which the court suspends business, but without adjourning. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541, 11 P. 240. In legislative practice, the interval, occurring in consequence of an adjournment, between the sessions of the same continuous legislative body; not the interval between the final adjournment of one body and the convening of another at the next regular session. Tipton v. Parker, 71 Ark. 193, 74 S.W. 298; Reynolds v. Cropsey, 241 N.Y. 389, 150 N.E. 303, 307.

RECESSION. The act of ceding back; the restoration of the title and dominion of a territory, by the government which now holds it, to the government from which it was obtained by cession or otherwise. 2 White, Recop. 516.

RECESSUS MARIS. Lat. In old English law. A going back; reliction or retreat of the sea.

RECHT. Ger. Right; justice; equity; the whole body of law; unwritten law; law; also a right.

There is much ambiguity in the use of this term, an ambiguity which it shares with the French "droit," the Italian "diritto," and the English "right." On the one hand, the term "Recht" answers to the Roman "jus," and thus indicates law in the abstract, considered as the foundation of all rights, or the complex of underlying moral principles which impart the character of justice to al: positive law, or give it an ethical content. Taken in this abstract sense, the term may be an adjective, in which case it is equivalent to the English "just," or a noun, in which case it may be paraphrased by the expressions "justice," "morality," or "equity." On the other hand, it serves to point out a right; that is, a power, privilege, faculty, or demand, inherent in one person, and incident upon another. In the latter signification "Recht" (or "droit," or "diritto," or "right") is the correlative of "duty" or "obligation." In the former sense, it may be considered as opposed to wrong, injustice, or the absence of law. The word "Recht" has the further ambiguity that it is used in contradistinction to "Gesetz," as "jus" is opposed to "lex," or the unwritten law to enacted law. See Droit; Jus; Right.

RECIDIVE. In French law. The state of an individual who having been convicted of a crime or misdemeanor, commits one again. A relapse. Dalloz.

RECIDIVIST. A habitual criminal. An incorrigible criminal. One who makes a trade of crime. McDonald, Criminology, ch. viii; People v. Rave, 364 Ill. 72, 3 N.E.2d 972, 976.

RECIPROCAL WILLS. Wills made by two or more persons in which they make reciprocal testamentary provisions in favor of each other, whether they unite in one will or each executes a separate one. In re Cawley's Estate, 136 Pa. 628, 20 A. 567, 10 L.R.A. 93.

RECIPROCITY. Mutuality. The term is used in international law to denote the relation existing between two states when each of them gives the subjects of the other certain privileges, on condition that its own subjects shall enjoy similar privileges at the hands of the latter state. Sweet.

RECITAL. The formal statement or setting forth of some matter of fact, in any deed or writing, in order to explain the reasons upon which the transaction is founded. The recitals are situated in the premises of a deed, that is, in that part of a deed between the date and the habendum, and they usually commence with the formal word "whereas." Brown.

The formal preliminary statement in a deed or other instrument, of such deeds, agreements, or matters of fact as are necessary to explain the reasons upon which the transaction is founded. 2 Bl.Comm. 298.

In pleading. The statement of matter as introductory to some positive allegation, beginning in declarations with the words, "For that whereas." Steph. Pl. 388, 389.

RECITE. To state in a written instrument facts connected with its inception, or reasons for its being made. Also to quote or set forth the words or the contents of some other instrument or document; as, to "recite" a statute. See Hart v. Baltimore & 0. R. Co., 6 W.Va. 348.

RECK. To take heed; have a care, mind, heed. Lancaster v. Carter, Tex.Com.App., 255 S.W. 392, 394.

RECKLESS. Not reeking; careless, heedless, inattentive; indifferent to consequences. According to circumstances it may mean desperately heedless, wanton or willful, or it may mean only careless, inattentive, or negligent. People v. Sweet, 130 Misc.Rep. 612, 225 N.Y.S. 182, 183.

Reckless conduct, as respects common-law manslaughter, must evince disregard of consequences under circumstances involving danger to life or safety. State v. Custer, 129 Kan. 381, 282 P. 1071, 1078, 67 A.L.R. 909.

RECKLESS DISREGARD OF RIGHTS OF OTHERS. As used in automobile guest law, mean the voluntary doing by motorist of an improper or wrongful act, or with knowledge of existing conditions, the voluntary refraining from doing a proper or prudent act when such act or failure to act evinces an entire abandonment of any care, and heedless indifference to results which may follow and the reckless taking of chance of accident happening without intent that any occur. Albert McGann Securities Co. v. Coen, 114 Ind.App. 60, 48 N.E.2d 58, 60. Gill v. Hayes, 188 Okl. 434, 108 P.2d 117, 120.

RECKLESS DRIVING. Operation of automobile manifesting reckless disregard of possible consequences and indifference to others' rights. People v. Whitby, 44 N.Y.S.2d 76, 77.

RECKLESSNESS. Rashness; heedlessness; wanton conduct. The state of mind accompanying an act, which either pays no regard to its probably or possibly injurious consequences, or which, though forseeing such consequences, persists in spite of such knowledge. Railroad Co. v. Bodemer, 139 Ill. 596, 29 N.E. 692, 32 Am.St.Rep. 218; St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Plott, 108 Ark. 292, 157 S.W. 385, 386. Conduct amounting to more than negligence. Barnard v. Heather, 135 Neb. 513, 282 N.W. 534, 537.

RECLAIM. To claim or demand back; to ask for the return or restoration of a thing; to insist upon one's right to recover that which was one's own, but was parted with conditionally or mistakenly; as, to reclaim goods which were obtained from one under false pretenses. Witson v. Succession of Staring, La.App., 175 So. 495, 498.

Feudal Law

It was used of the action of a lord pursuing, prosecuting, and recalling his vassal, who had gone to live in another place, without his permission.

International Law

The demanding of a thing or person to be delivered up or surrendered to the government or state to which either properly belongs, when, by an irregular means, it has come into the possession of another. Wharton.

Law of Property

Spoken of animals, to reduce from a wild to a tame or domestic state; to tame them. In an analogous sense, to reclaim land is to reduce marshy or swamp land to a state fit for cultivation and habitation.

Scotch Law

To appeal. The reclaiming days in Scotland are the days allowed to a party dissatisfied with the judgment of the lord ordinary to appeal therefrom to the inner house; and the petition of appeal is called the reclaiming "bill," "note," or "petition." Mozley & Whitley; Bell.

RECLAIMED ANIMALS. Those that are made tame by art, industry, or education, whereby a qualified property may be acquired in them.

RECLAIMING BILL. In Scotch law. A petition of appeal or review of a judgment of the lord ordinary or other inferior court. Bell.

RECLAMATION DISTRICT. A subdivision of a state created by legislative authority, for the purpose of reclaiming swamp, marshy, or desert lands within its boundaries and rendering them fit for habitation or cultivation, generally with funds raised by local taxation or the issue of bonds, and sometimes with authority to make rules or ordinances for the regulation of the work in hand.

RECLUSION. In French law and in Louisiana. Incarceration as a punishment for crime; a temporary, afflictive, and infamous punishment, consisting in being confined at hard labor in a penal institution, and carrying civil degradation. Phelps v. Reinach, 38 La.Ann. 551; Jurgens v. Ittman, 47 La.Ann. 367, 16 So. 952.

RECOGNITION. Ratification; confirmation; an acknowledgment that something done by another person in one's name had one's authority.

An inquiry conducted by a chosen body of men, not sitting as part of the court, into the facts in dispute in a case at law; these "recognitors" preceded the jurymen of modern times, and reported their recognition or verdict to the court. Stim. Law Gloss.

RECOGNITIONE ADN1ULLANDA PER VIM ET DURITIEM FACTA. A writ to the justices of the common bench for sending a record touching a recognizance, which the recognizor suggests was acknowledged by force and duress; that if it so appear the recognizance may be annulled. Reg. Orig. 183.

RECOGNITORS. In English law. The name by which the jurors impaneled on an assize are known. See Recognition.

The word is sometimes met in modern books, as meaning the person who enters into a recognizance, being thus another form of recognizor.

RECOGNIZANCE. An obligation of record, entered into before some court of record, or magistrate duly authorized, with condition to do some particular act; as to appear at the assizes, or criminal court, to keep the peace, to pay a debt, or the like. It resembles a bond, but differs from it in being an acknowledgment of a former debt upon record. 2 Bl.Comm. 341; Albrecht v. State, 132 Md. 150, 103 A. 443, 444; Modern Finance Co. v. Martin, 311 Mass. 509, 42 N.E.2d 533, 534.

In the practice of several of the states, a species of bail bond or security, given by the prisoner either on being bound over for trial or on his taking an appeal.

In criminal law, a person who has been found guilty of an offense may, in certain cases, be required to enter into a recognizance by which he binds himself to keep the peace for a certain period. Sweet.

In criminal cases, a "bail bond" is a contract under seal, executed by accused, and from its nature requiring sureties or bail, to whose custody he is committed, while a "recognizance" is an obligation of record, entered into before some court or magistrate authorized to take it, with condition to do some particular act, and a prisoner is often eilowed so to obligate himself to answer to the charge. State v. Bradsher, 189 N.C. 401, 127 S.E. 349, 351, 38 A.L.R. 1102.

RECOGNIZE. To try; to examine in order to determine the truth of a matter. Also to enter into a recognizance.

RECOGNIZED. Actual and publicly known. Commonwealth v. Kimball, 299 Mass. 353, 13 N.E. 2d 18, 22, 114 A.L.R. 1440.

RECOGNIZEE. He to whom one is bound in a recognizance.

RECOGNIZOR. He who enters into a recognizance.

RÈCOLEMENT. In French law. This is the process by which a witness, who has given his deposition, reads the same over and scrutinizes it, with a view to affirming his satisfaction with it as it stands, or to making such changes in it as his better recollection may suggest to him as necessary to the truth. This is necessary to the validity of the deposition. Poth. Proc. Crim. § 4, art. 4.

RECOMMEND. To advise or counsel. Kirby v. Nolte, 351 Mo. 525, 173 S.W.2d 391.

RECOMMENDATION. In feudal law. A method of converting allodial land into feudal property. The owner of the allod surrendered it to the king or a lord, doing homage, and received it back as a benefice or feud, to hold to himself and such of his heirs as he had previously nominated to the superior.

The act of one person in giving to another a favorable account of the character, responsibility, or skill of a third.

Letter of Recommendation

A writing whereby one person certifies concerning another that he is of good character, solvent, possessed of commercial credit, skilled in his trade or profession, or otherwise worthy of trust, aid, or employment. It may be addressed to an individual or to whom it may concern, and is designed to aid the person commended in obtaining credit, employment, etc. McDonald v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 187 Ill. 529, 58 N.E. 463.

RECOMMENDATORY. Precatory, advisory, or directory.

Recommendatory words in a will are such as do not express the testator's command in a peremptory form, but advise, counsel, or suggest that a certain course be pursued or disposition made.

RECOMPENSATION. In Scotland, where a party sues for a debt, and the defendant pleads compensation, i. e., set-off, the plaintiff may allege a compensation on his part; and this is called a "recompensation." Bell.

RECOMPENSE. A reward for services; remuneration for goods or other property.

RECOMPENSE OR RECOVERY IN VALUE. That part of the judgment in a "common recovery" by which the tenant is declared entitled to recover lands of equal value with those which were warranted to him and lost by the default of the vouchee. 2 Bl.Comm. 358-359.

RECONCILIATION. The renewal of amicable relations between two persons who had been at enmity or variance; usually implying forgiveness of injuries on one or both sides. It is sometimes used in the law of divorce as a term synonymous or analogous to "condonation." Martin v. Martin, 151 La-. 530, 92 So. 46, 48.

RECONDUCTION. In the civil law. A renewing of a former lease; relocation. Dig. 19, 2, 13, 11; Code Nap. arts. 1737-1740.

RECONSTRUCT. To construct again, to rebuild, either in fact or idea, or to remodel, to form again or anew as in the imagination or to restore again as an entity the thing which was lost or destroyed. City of Seattle v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 12 Wash. 2d 247, 121 P.2d 382, 386.

RECONSTRUCTION. Act of constructing again. It presupposes the nonexistence of the thing to be reconstructed, as an entity; that the thing before existing has lost its entity. McCarty v. Boulevard Com'rs of Hudson County, 91 N.J.Law, 137, 106 A. 219, 220; Miller Hatcheries v. Buckeye Incubator Co., C.C.A.Mo., 41 F.2d 619:

Also the name commonly given to the process of reorganizing, by acts of congress and executive action, the governments of the states which had passed ordinances of secession, and of re-establishing their constitutional relations to the national government, restoring their representation in congress, and effecting the necessary changes in their internal government, after the close of the civil war. Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) 48; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L.Ed. 227.

RECONTINUANCE. Used to signify that a person has recovered an incorporeal hereditament of which he had been wrongfully deprived. Thus, A. is disseised of a mannor, whereunto an advowson is appendant, an estranger [i. e., neither A. nor the disseisor] usurries to the advowson; if the disseisee [A.] enter into the mannor, the advowson is recontinued again, which was severed by the usurpation. * * * And so note a diversitie between a recontinuance and a remitter; for a remitter cannot be properly, unless there be two titles; but a recontinuance may be where there is but one. Co. Litt. 363b; Sweet.

RECONVENIRE. Lat. In the canon and civil law. To make a cross-demand upon the actor, or plaintiff. 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 14, and note, (r).

RECONVENTION. In the civil law. An action by a defendant against a plaintiff in a former action; a cross-bill or litigation.

The term is used in practice in the states of Louisiana and Texas, derived from the reconventio of the civil law. Reconvention is not identical with set-off, but more extensive. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Malin, 132 U.S. 531, 10 S.Ct. 166, 33 L.Ed. 450; Suberville v. Adams, 47 La.Ann. 68, 16 So. 652; Gimbel v. Gomprecht, 89 Tex. 497, 35 S.W. 470.

RECONVENTIONAL DEMAND. Any plea by a defendant which constitutes more than mere defense and amounts to counterclaim. Alfonso v. Ruiz, La.App., 2 So.2d 480, 483, 484.

RECONVERSION. That imaginary process by which a prior constructive conversion is annulled and the property restored in contemplation of equity to its original actual quality. Seagle v. Harris, 214 N.C. 339, 199 S.E. 271, 273.

RECONVEYANCE. It takes place where a mortgage debt is paid off, and the mortgaged property is conveyed again to the mortgagor or his representatives free from the mortgage debt. Sweet.

RECOPILACION DE INDIAS. A collection of Spanish colonial law, promulgated A. D. 1680. See Schm. Civil Law, Introd. 94.

RECORD, v. To commit to writing, to printing, to inscription, or the like, to make an official note of, to write, transcribe, or enter in a book or on parchment, for the purpose of preserving authentic evidence of, or on a wax cylinder, rubber disk, etc., for reproduction, as by a phonograph, or to register or enroll. To transcribe a document, or enter the history of an act or series of acts, in an official volume, for the purpose of giving notice of the same, of furnishing authentic evidence, and for preservation. Cady v. Purser, 131 Cal. 552, 63 P. 844, 82 Am.St.Rep. 391; Shimmel v. People, 108 Colo. 592, 121 P.2d 491, 493.

RECORD, n. A written account of some act, transaction, or instrument, drawn up, under authority of law, by a proper officer, and designed to remain as a memorial or permanent evidence of the matters to which it relates. People ex rel. Simons v. Dowling, 146 N.Y.S. 919, 920, 84 Misc. 201. A memorandum public or private, of what has been done, ordinarily applied to public records only, in which sense it is a written memorial made by a public officer. Nogueira v. State, 123 Tex.Cr.R. 449, 59 S.W.2d 831.

The act or fact of recording or being recorded, reduction to writing as evidence, also, the writing so made, a register, a family record, official contemporaneous writing, an authentic official copy of document entered in book or deposited in keeping of officer designated by law, an official contemporaneous memorandum stating the proceedings of a court or official copy of legal papers used in a case. Shimmel v. People, 108 Colo. 592, 121 P.2d 491, 493.

There are three kinds of records, viz.: (1) judicial, as an attainder; (2) ministerial, on oath, being an office or inquisition found; (3) by way of conveyance, as a deed enrolled. Wharton.

Practice

A written memorial of all the acts and proceedings in an action or suit, in a court of record. The official and authentic history of the cause, consisting in entries of each successive step in the proceedings, chronicling the various acts of the parties and of the court, couched in the formal language established by usage, terminating with the judgment rendered in the cause, and intended to remain as a perpetual and unimpeachable memorial of the proceedings and judgment. State v. Brewer, 19 Ala.App. 291, 97 So. 160, 161.

At common law, a roll of parchment upon which the proceedings and transactions of a court are entered or drawn up by its officers, and which is then deposited in its treasury in perpetuam rei memoriam. 3 Steph.Comm. 583; 3 Bl.Comm. 24. A court of record is that where the acts and judicial proceedings are enrolled in parchment for a perpetual memorial and testimony, which rolls are called the "records of the court," and are of such high and supereminent authority that their truth is not to be called in question. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 422, 94 Am.Dec. 742. O'Connell v. Hotchkiss, 44 Conn. 53; Murrah v. State, 51 Miss. 656; State v. Anders, 64 Kan. 742, 68 P. 668; Wilkinson v. Railway Co., C.C., 23 F. 562; In re Christern, 43 N.Y.Super.Ct. 531.

In the practice of appellate tribunals, the history of the proceedings on the trial of the action below, (with the pleadings, offers, objections to evidence, rulings of the court, exceptions, charge, etc.,) in so far as the same appears in the record furnished to the appellate court in the paper-books or other transcripts. Hence, derivatively, it means the aggregate of the various judicial steps taken on the trial below, in so far as they were taken, presented, or allowed in the formal and proper manner necessary to put them upon the record of the court. This is the meaning in such phrases as "no error in the record," "contents of the record," "outside the record," etc. Le Clair v. Calls Him, 106 Okl. 247, 233 P. 1087, 1091.

General

Conveyances by record. Extraordinary assurances; such as private acts of parliament and royal grants.

Courts of record. Those whose judicial acts and proceedings are enrolled in parchment, for a perpetual memorial and testimony, which rolls are called the "records of the court," and are of such high and supereminent authority that their truth is not to be called in question. Every court of record has authority to fine and imprison for contempt of its authority. 3 Broom & H. Comm. 21, 30. Page v. Turcott, 179 Tenn. 491, 167 S.W.2d 350, 354.

Debts of record. Those which appear to be due by the evidence of a court of record; such as a judgment, recognizance, etc.

Diminution of record. Incompleteness of the record sent up on appeal. See Diminution.

Face of record. See Face of Record.

False record. See False Record.

Judicial record. A precise history of suit from commencement to termination, including conclusion of law. People v. Fox, 346 Ill. 374, 178 N.E. 907, 910.

Matter of record. See Matter.

Nul tiel record. See Nul.

Of record. See that title.

Pocket record. A statute so called. Brownl. pt. 2, p. 81.

Public record. A record, memorial of some act or transaction, written evidence of something done, or document, considered as either concerning or interesting the public, affording notice or information to the public, or open to public inspection. Keefe v. Donnell, 92 Me. 151, 42 A. 345; Colnon v. Orr, 71 Cal. 43, 11 P. 814.

Record and writ clerk. Four officers of the court of chancery were designated by this title, whose duty it was to file bills brought to them for that purpose. Business was distributed among them according to the initial letter of the surname of the first plaintiff in a suit. Hunt, Eq. These officers are now transferred to the high court of justice under the judicature acts.

Record commission. The name of a board of commissioners appointed for the purpose of searching out, classifying, indexing, or publishing the public records of a state or county.

Records of a corporation. Import the transcript of its charter and by-laws, the minutes of its meetings—the books containing the accounts of its official doings and the written evidence of its contracts and business transactions. U. S. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 35 S.Ct. 363, 368, 236 U.S. 318, 59 L.Ed. 598; Maremont v. Old Colony Life Ins. Co., 189 Ill.App. 231, 232.

Record of nisi prius. In English law. An official copy or transcript of the proceedings in an action, entered on parchment and "sealed and passed," as it is termed, at the proper office; it serves as a warrant to the judge to try the cause, and is the only document at which he can judicially look for information as to the nature of the proceedings and the issues joined. Brown.

Title of record. A title to real estate, evidenced and provable by one or more conveyances or other instruments all of which are duly entered on the public land records.

Trial by record. A species of trial adopted for determining the existence or non-existence of a record. When a record is asserted by one party to exist, and the opposite party denies its existence under the form of a traverse that there is no such record remaining in court as alleged, and issue is joined thereon, this is called an "issue of nul tiel record," and in such case the court awards a trial by inspection and examination of the record. Upon this the party affirming its existence is bound to produce it in court on a day given for the purpose, and, if he fails to do so, judgment is given for his adversary. Co. Litt. 117b, 260a; 3 Bl. Comm. 331.

RECORD, ESTOPPEL BY. An estoppel founded upon matter of record; as a confession, or admission made in pleading in a court of record, which precludes the party from afterwards contesting the same fact in the same suit. Steph. Pl. 197.

It arises from or is founded upon the adjudication of a competent court. Smith v. Urquhart, 129 Fla. 742, 176 So. 787, 789. Confessions or admissions made in pleadings in a court of record, decrees, and other final determinations work estoppels. Bradner v. Howard, 75 N.Y. 417; Butterfield v. Smith, 101 U.S. 570, 25 L.Ed. 868; Denver City Irr. & Water Co. v. Middaugh, 12 Colo. 434, 21 Pac. 565, 13 Am.St.Rep. 234. An "estoppel by record" is the preclusion to deny the truth of a matter set forth in a record, whether judicial or legislative, also to deny the facts adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. v. Owen, 37 Okl. 616, 133 P. 193, 198, L.R.A.1916C, 189; Watson v. Goldsmith, 205 S.C. 215, 31 S.E.2d 317, 320.

An "estoppel by record" cannot be invoked where allegations or recitals did not conclude pleader in prior proceeding. Blackburn v. Blackburn, Tex.Civ.App., 163 S.W.2d 251, 255. It bars a second action between the same parties on an issue necessarily raised and decided in the first action. Woods v. Duval, 151 Kan. 472, 99 P.2d 804, 808. It exists only as between the same parties, or those in privity with them, in same case on same issues. Smith v. Maine, 260 N.Y.S. 425, 145 Misc. 521. The doctrine prevents a party not only from litigating again what was actually litigated iri the former case, but litigating what might have been litigated therein. Kuchenreuther v. Chicago, M. St. P. & P. R. Co., 225 Wis. 613, 275 N.W. 457.

Defense of res judicata a plea of "estoppel by record". Hull v. Hercules Powder Co., 20 N.J.Misc. 168, 26 A.2d 164, 168.

RECORDA SUNT VESTIGIA VETUSTATIS ET VERITATIS. Records are vestiges of antiquity and truth. 2 Rolle, 296.

RECORDARI FACIAS LOQUELAM. In English practice. A writ by which a suit or plaint in replevin may be removed from a county court to one of the courts of Westminster Hall. 3 Bl. Comm. 149; 3 Steph. Pl. 522, 666. So termed from the emphatic words of the old writ, by which the sheriff was commanded to cause the plaint to be recorded, and to have the record before the superior court. Reg. Orig. 5b.

RECORDATUR. In old English practice. An entry made upon a record, in order to prevent any alteration of it. 1 Ld. Raym. 211. An order or allowance that the verdict returned on the nisi prius roll be recorded.

RECORDER, v. L. Fr. In Norman law. To recite or testify on recollection what had previous.. ly passed in court. This was the duty of the judges and other principal persons who presided at the placitum; thence called "recordeurs." Steph. Pl., Append. note 11.

RECORDER, n. In old English law. A barrister or other person learned in the law, whom the mayor or other magistrate of any city or town corporate, having jurisdiction or a court of record within their precincts, associated to him for his better direction in matters of justice and proceedings according to law. Cowell.

A magistrate, in the judicial systems of some of the states, who has a criminal jurisdiction analogous to that of a police judge or other committing magistrate, and usually a limited civil jurisdiction, and sometimes authority conferred by statute in special classes of proceedings. Leigeber v. State, 17 Ala.App. 551, 86 So. 126; City of Colton v. Superior Court in and for San Bernardino County, 84 Cal.App. 303, 257 P. 909, 911.

An officer appointed to make record or enrolment of deeds and other legal instruments authorized by law to be recorded.

RECORDER OF LONDON. One of the justices of oyer and terminer, and a justice of the peace of the quorum for putting the laws in execution for the preservation of the peace and government of the city. Being the mouth of the city, he delivers the sentences and judgments of the court therein, and also certifies and records the city customs, etc. He is chosen by the lord mayor and aldermen, and attends the business of the city when summoned by the lord mayor, etc. Whart-on.

RECORDING ACTS. Statutes enacted in the-several states relative to the official recording of deeds, mortgages, bills of sale, chattel mortgages, etc., and the effect of such records as notice to creditors, purchasers, incumbrancers, and others interested.

RECORDS, EARLY ENGLISH. A record commission was appointed in 1800 by parliament, which in 37 years of service printed many records of England, Wales and Scotland. See their reports. Extracts from that on the "Statutes of the Realm" will be found in 2 Sel. Essays in Anglo. Amer. L. H. 171. See 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L.

RECORDUM. A record; a judicial record. It is used in the phrase prout patet per recordum, which is a formula employed, in pleading, for reference to a record, signifying as it appears from the record. 1 Chit. Pl. 385; Philpot v. McArthur, 10 Me. 127.

RECOUP, or RECOUPE. To deduct, defalk, discount, set off, or keep back; to withhold part of a demand.

RECOUPMENT. In practice. Defalcation or discount from a demand. A keeping back something which is due, because there is an equitable reason to withhold it. Tomlins. A right of the defendant to have a deduction from the amount of the plaintiff's damages, for the reason that the plaintiff has not complied with the cross-obligations or independent covenants arising under the same contract. Hoover Commercial Co. v. Humphrey, 107 Miss. 810, 66 So. 214, 216.

It implies that plaintiff has cause of action, but asserts that defendant has counter cause of action growing out of breach of some other part of same contract on which plaintiff's action is founded, or for some cause connected Ovith contract. Marianna Lime Products Co. v. McKay, 109 Fla. 275, 147 So. 264, 267; Storrs v. Storrs, 130 Fla. 717, 178 So. 841, 843.

It is keeping back something which is due because there is an equitable reason to withhold it; and is now uniformly applied where a man brings an action for breach of a contract between him and the defendant; and where the latter can show that some stipulation in the same contract was made by the plaintiff, which he has violated, the defendant may, if he choose, instead of suing in his turn, recoupe his damages arising from the breach committed by the plaintiff, whether they be liquidated or not. Ives v. Van Eppes, 22 Wend., N.Y., 156. And see Barber v. Chapin, 28 Vt. 413.

In speaking of matters to be shown in defense, the term "recoupment" is often used as synonymous with "reduction." The term is of French origin, and signifies cutting again, or cutting back, and, as a defense, means the cutting back on the plaintiff's claim by the defendant. Like reduction, it is of necessity limited to the amount of the plaintiff's claim. It is properly applicable to a case where the same contract imposes mutual duties and obligations on the two parties, and one seeks a remedy for the breach of duty by the second, and the second meets the demand by a claim for the breach of duty by the first. Davenport v. Hubbard, 46 Vt. 207, 14 Am. Rep. 620.

"Recoupment" differs from "set-off" in this respect : that any claim or demand the defendant may have against the plaintiff may be used as a set-off, while it is not a subject for recoupment unless it grows out of the very same transaction which furnishes the plaintiff's cause of action. The term is, as appears above, synonymous with "reduction;" but the latter is not a technical term of the law; the word "defalcation," in one of its meanings, expresses the same idea, and is used interchangeably with recoupment. Recoupment, as a remedy, corresponds to the reconvention of the civil law. Dexter-Portland Cement Co. v. Acme Supply Co., 147 Va. 758, 133 S.E. 788, 790; Lovett v. Lovett, 93 Fla. 611, 112 So. 768, 780.

"Recoupment" is the right to set off unliquidated damages, while the right of "set-off," comprehends only liquidated damages, or those capable of being ascertained by calculation. Alley v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co., Tex. Civ.App., 228 S.W. 963, 966. Recoupment is confined to matters arising out of the transaction or contract upon which suit is brought, not depending upon whether the matter be liquidated or unliquidated. J. C. Lysle Milling Co. v. North Alabama Grocery Co., 201 Ala. 222, 77 So. 748, 749. While there is a well-defined distinction between set-off and recoupment, they are each, in a sense, set-offs. Lehman v. Austin, 195 Ala. 244, 70 So. 653, 655.

RECOURSE. To recur. As to "Without Recourse," see that title.

REFARE. To bereave, take away, rob. Cowell.

REFECTION. In the civil law. Reparation; re-establishment of a building. Dig. 19, 1, 6, 1.

REFER. When a case or action involves matters of account or other intricate details which require minute examination, and for that reason are not fit to be brought before a jury, it is usual to refer the whole case, or some part of it, to the decision of an auditor or referee, and the case is then said to be referred.

Taking this word in its strict, technical use, it relates to a mode of determining questions which is distinguished from "arbitration," in that the latter word imports submission of a controversy without any lawsuit having been brought, while "reference" imports a lawsuit pending, and an issue framed or question raised which (and not the controversy itself) is sent out. Thus, arbitration is resorted to instead of any judicial proceeding ; while reference is one mode of decision employed in the course of a judicial proceeding. And "reference" is distinguished from "hearing or trial," in that these are the ordinary modes of deciding issues and questions in and by the courts with aid of juries when proper; while reference is an employment of non-judicial persons—individuals not integral parts of the court—for the decision of particular matters inconvenient to be heard in actual court. Abbott.

To point, allude, direct, or make reference to. This is the use of the word in conveyancing and in literature, where a word or sign introduced for the purpose of directing the reader's attention to another place in the deed, book, document, etc., is said to "refer" him to such other connection.

REFEREE. In practice. A person to whom a cause pending in a court is referred by the court, to take testimony, hear the parties, and report thereon to the court. Central Trust Co. of New York v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., C.C.Mo., 32 F. 684, 685. He is an officer exercising judicial powers, and is an arm of the court for a specific purpose. Segal v. Jackson, 48 N.Y.S.2d 877, 879, 183 Misc. 460.

REFEREE IN BANKRUPTCY. An officer appointed by the courts of bankruptcy under the act of 1898 (11 U.S.C.A. § 1) corresponding to the "registers in bankruptcy" under earlier statutes having administrative and quasi-judicial functions under the bankruptcy law, and who assists the court in such cases and relieves the judge of attention to matters of detail or routine, by taking charge of all administrative matters and the preparation or preliminary consideration of questions requiring judicial decision, subject at all times to the supervision and review of the court. In re Carl Dernburg & Son, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 37, 38. He is an officer of the bankruptcy court but not a judge. Fish v. East, C.C.A.Colo., 114 F.2d 177, 200. His status is substantially that of a master whose findings to extent adopted are considered findings of District Court. Stewart v. Ganey, C.C.A.Ala., 116 F.2d 1010, 1012.

REFEREES, COURT OF. In the passage of private bills through the house of commons, the practice was adopted in 1864 of the appointment of referees on such bills, consisting of the chairman of ways and means and not less than three other persons to be appointed by the speaker. The referees were formed into one or more courts, three at least being required to constitute each court, a member in every case being chairman, but receiving no salary. The referees inquired into the proposed works, etc., and reported to the house. The committees of the house on any bill might also refer any question to the referees for their decision. It was also ordered in 1864 that the referees should decide on all petitions as to the right of the petitioner to be heard, i. e., his locus standi. A court of referees was specially constituted for the adjudication of this right, called locus standi. A series of reports of the court of referees on private bills in parliament, called Locus Standi reports, has been published since 1867.

REFEREES, OFFICIAL. Officials in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice in England, created by the judicature acts. They are three in number. They try such questions and actions as may be referred to them, and act as arbitrators in certain cases.

REFERENCE. In contracts. An agreement to submit to arbitration; the act of parties in submitting their controversy to chosen referees or arbitrators.

In practice. The act of sending a cause pending in court to a referee for his examination and decision. State v. Innes, 89 Kan. 168, 130 P. 677, 680; Jones v. Jones, 188 Mo.App. 220, 175 S.W. 227, 230. See Refer.

In commercial law. The act of sending or directing one person to another, for information or advice as to the character, solvency, standing, etc., of a third person, who desires to open business relations with the first, or to obtain credit with him.

REFERENCE IN CASE OF NEED. When a person draws or indorses a bill of exchange, he sometimes adds the name of a person to whom it may be presented "in case of need;" e., in case it is dishonored by the original drawee or acceptor. Byles, Bills, 261.

REFERENCE STATUTES. Statutes which refer to other statutes and make them applicable to the subject of legislation. Their object is to incorporate into the act of which they are a part the provisions of other statutes by reference and adoption. State ex rel. School Dist. of Kansas City v. Lee, 334 Mo. 513, 66 S.W.2d 521; Van Pelt v. Hilliard, 75 Fla. 792, 78 So. 693, 698, L.R.A. 1918E, 639.

REFERENCE TO RECORD. Under the English practice, when an action is commenced, an entry of it is made in the cause-book according to the year, the initial letter of the surname of the first plaintiff, and the place of the action, in numerical order among those commenced in the same year, e. g., "1876, A. 26;" and all subsequent documents in the action (such as pleadings and affidavits) bear this mark, which is called the "reference to the record." Sweet.

REFERENDARIUS. An officer by whom the order of causes was laid before the Roman emperor, the desires of petitioners made known, and answers returned to them. Vicat, Voc. Jur.; Calvin.

REFERENDARY. In Saxon law. A master of requests; an officer to whom petitions to the king were referred. Spelman.

REFERENDO SINGULA SINGULIS. Lat. Referring individual or separate words to separate subjects; making a distributive reference of words in an instrument; a rule of construction.

REFERENDUM. In international law. A communication sent by a diplomatic representative to his home government, in regard to matters presented to him which he is unable or unwilling to decide without further instructions.

In the modern constitutional law of Switzerland and elsewhere, a method of submitting an important legislative measure to a direct vote of the whole people. Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Oregon, 32 S.Ct. 224, 223 U.S. 118, 56 L.Ed. 377; Kiernan v. Portland, 32 Sup.Ct. 231, 223 U.S. 151, 56 L.Ed. 386; Plebiscite; Initiative. Right reserved to the people to adopt or reject any act or measure which has been passed by a legislative body, and which, in most cases, would without action on the part of the electors become a law. Whitmore v. Carr, 2 Cal. App.2d 590, 38 P.2d 802, 803. City of Litchfield v. Hart, 306 Ill.App. 621, 29 N.E.2d 678, 679.

REFINANCE. To finance again or anew. In automobile parlance, signifying that notes executed for the purchase price of an automobile have been negotiated by the original vendor to some corporation dealing in that character of securities. American Indemnity Co. v. Allen, for Use and Benefit of Commerce Union Bank, 176 Tenn. 134, 138 S.W.2d 445, 446.

REFINEMENT. A term sometimes employed to describe verbiage inserted in a pleading or indictment, over and above what is necessary to be set forth; or an objection to a plea or indictment on the ground of its failing to include such superfluous matter. State v. Peak, 130 N.C. 711, 41 S.E. 887.

REFORM. To correct, rectify, amend, remodel. Instruments inter partes may be reformed, when defective, by a court of equity. By this is meant that the court, after ascertaining the real and original intention of the parties to a deed or other instrument, (which intention they failed to sufficiently express, through some error, mistake of fact, or inadvertence,) will decree that the instrument be held and construed as if it fully and technically expressed that intention. Churchill v. Meade, 92 Or. 626, 182 P. 368, 371; Gross v. Yeskel, 100 N.J.Eq. 293, 134 A. 737.

See, also, Reformation.

It is to be observed that "reform" Is seldom, if ever, used of the correction of defective pleadings, judgments, decrees or other judicial proceedings ; "amend" being the proper term for that use. Again, "amend" seems to connote the idea of improving that which may have been well enough before, while "reform" might be considered as properly applicable only to something which before was quite worthless.

REFORM ACTS. A name bestowed on the statutes 2 Wm. IV. c. 45, and 30 & 31 Viet. c. 102, passed to amend the representation of the people in England and Wales; which introduced extended amendments into the system of electing members of the house of commons.

REFORMATION. Remedy, afforded by courts of equity to the parties, to written instruments which import a legal obligation, to reform or rectify such instruments whenever they fail, through fraud or mutual mistake, to express the real agreement or intention of the parties. Greenfield v. /Etna Cas. & Sur. Co., 75 Ohio App. 122, 61 N.E.2d 226, 229. Rubinson v. North American Accident Ins. Co. of Chicago, Ill., 124 Neb. 269, 246 N.W. 349, 350.

See, also, Reform.

REFORMATORY. A place or institution in which efforts are made either to cultivate the intellect or instruct the conscience or improve the conduct where inmates voluntarily submit themselves to its instruction or discipline or are forcibly detained therein. McKinnon v. Second Judicial District Court in and for Washoe County, 35 Nev. 494, 130 P. 465, 468.

REFORMATORY SCHOOLS. In English law. Schools to which convicted juvenile offenders (under sixteen) may be sent by order of the court before which they are tried, if the offense be punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment, and the sentence be to imprisonment for ten days or more. Wharton.

REFRESHER. In English law. A further or additional fee to counsel in a long case, which may be, but is not necessarily, allowed on taxation.

REFRESHING THE MEMORY. The act of a witness who consults his documents, memoranda, or books, to bring more distinctly to his recollection the details of past events or transactions, concerning which he is testifying.

REFUND, n. That which is refunded. United States v. Wurts, Pa., 58 S.Ct. 637, 639, 303 U.S. 414, 82 L.Ed. 932.

REFUND, v. To repay or restore; to return money in restitution or repayment. Rackliff v. Greenbush, 93 Me. 99, 44 A. 375. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 180 Cal. 52, 179 P. 198, 201. United States v. Wurts, Pa., 58 S.Ct. 637, 639, 303 U.S.

414, 82 L.Ed. 932. To fund again or anew; specifically, finance, to borrow, usually by the sale of bonds, in order to pay off an existing loan with the proceeds. Street Improvement Dist. No. 315 v. Arkansas Highway Commission, 190 Ark. 1045, 83 S.W.2d 81, 82.

REFUND ANNUITY CONTRACT. A contract by which an insurance company agrees to repay to the annuitant, in installments during his life, amount paid in by him to company, and if at his death there be a balance unpaid, to pay that balance to person designated by annuitant. In re Atkins' Estate, 129 N.J.Eq. 186, 18 A.2d 45, 49.

REFUNDING BOND. A bond which replaces or pays off outstanding bond which holder surrenders in exchange for new security. Fore v. Alabama State Bridge Corporation, 242 Ala. 455, 6 So.2d 508, 512. Also a bond given to an executor by a legatee, upon receiving payment of the legacy, conditioned to refund the same, or so much of it as may be necessary, if the assets prove deficient.

REFUNDS. In the laws of the United States. Sums of money received by the government or its officers which, for any cause, are to be refunded or restored to the parties paying them; such as excessive duties or taxes, duties paid on goods destroyed by accident, duties received on goods which are re-exported, etc.

REFUSAL. The act of one who has, by law, a right and power of having or doing something of advantage, and declines it. Also, the declination of a request or detnand, or the omission to comply with some requirement of law, as the result of a positive intention to disobey. In the latter sense, the word is often coupled with "neglect," as if a party shall "neglect or refuse" to pay a tax, file an official bond, obey an order of court, etc. But "neglect" signifies a mere omission of a duty, which may happen through inattention, dilatoriness, mistake, or inability to perform, while "refusal" implies the positive denial of an application or command, or at least a mental determination not to comply. U. S. v. Krafft, C.C.A.N.J., 249 F. 919, 925; American Nat. Bank of Ardmore v. National Bank of Claremore, 119 Okl. 149, 249 P. 424, 428.

REFUSE, v. To deny, decline, reject. Burns v. Fox, 113 Ind. 206, 14 N.E. 541. Ex parte Yost, D.C.Cal., 55 F.Supp. 768, 772.

"Fail" is distinguished from "refuse" in that "refuse" involves an act of the will, while "fail" may be an act of inevitable necessity. Maestas v. American Metal Co. of New Mexico, 37 N.M. 203, 20 P.2d 924, 928.

REFUSE, n. That which is refused or rejected as useless or worthless. Worthless matter, rubbish, scum, leavings. Stern Holding Co. v. O'Connor, 119 N.J.L. 291, 196 A. 432, 433.

REGALE EPISCOPORUM. The temporal rights and privileges of a bishop. Cowell.

REGALIA. An abbreviation of "jura regalia," royal rights, or those rights which a king has by virtue of his prerogative. Hence owners of counties palatine were formerly said to have "jura regalia" in their counties as fully as the king in his palace. 1 Bl. Comm. 117. The term is sometimes used in the same sense in the Spanish law. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 566.

Some writers divide the royal prerogative into majora and minora regalia, the former including the regal dignity and power, the latter the revenue or fiscal prerogatives of the crown. 1 Bl. Comm. 117.

REGALIA FACERE. To do homage or fealty to the sovereign by a bishop when he is invested with the regalia.

REGALITY. A territorial jurisdiction in Scotland conferred by the crown. The lands were said to be given in liberam regalitatem, and the persons receiving the right were termed "lords of regality." Bell.

REGARD. In old English law. Inspection; supervision. Also a reward, fee, or perquisite.

REGARD, COURT OF. In forest law. A tribunal held every third year, for the lawing or expeditation of dogs, to prevent them from chasing deer. Cowell.

REGARD OF THE FOREST. In old English law. The oversight or inspection of it, or the office and province of the regarder, who is to go through the whole forest, and every bailiwick in it, before the holding of the sessions of the forest, or justice-seat, to see and inquire after trespassers, and for the survey of dogs. Manwood.

REGARDANT. A term which was applied, in feudal law, to a villein annexed to a manor, and having charge to do all base services within the same, and to see the same freed from all things that might annoy his lord. Such a villein regardant was thus opposed to a villein en gros, who was transferable by deed from one owner to another. Cowell; 2 Bl. Comm. 93.

A master, governor, director, or superintendent of a public institution, particularly a college or university.

In the canon law, it signifies a master or professor of a college. Dict. du Dr. Can.

REGIA DIGNITAS EST INDIVISIBILIS, ET QUIELIBET ALIA DERIVATIVA DIGNITAS EST SIMILITER INDIVISIBILIS. 4 Inst. 243. The kingly power is indivisible, and every other derivative power is similarly indivisible.

REGIA VIA. Lat. In old English law. The royal way; the king's highway. Co. Litt. 56a.

REGIAM MAJESTATEM. A collection of the ancient laws of Scotland. It is said to have been compiled by order of David I., king of Scotland, who reigned from A. D. 1124 to 1153. Hale, Com. Law, 271.

REGICIDE. The murder of a sovereign; also the person who commits such murder.

REGIDOR. In Spanish law. One of a body, never exceeding twelve, who formed a part of the ayuntamiento. The office of regidor was held for life; that is to say, during the pleasure of the supreme authority. In most places the office was purchased; in some cities, however, they were elected by persons of the district, called "capitulares." 12 Pet. 442, note.

REGIME. In French law. A system of rules or regulations.

REGIME DOTAL. The dot, being the property which the wife brings to the husband as her contribution to the support of the burdens of the marriage, and which may either extend as well to future as to present property, or be expressly confined to the present property of the wife, is subject to certain regulations which are summarized in the phrase "regime dotal." The husband has the entire administration during the marriage; but, as a rule, where the dot consists of immovables, neither the husband nor the wife, nor both of them together, can either sell or mortgage it. The dot is returnable upon the dissolution of the marriage, whether by death or otherwise. Brown.

REGIME EN COMMUNAUTE. The community of interests between husband and wife which arises upon their marriage. It is either (1) legal or (2) conventional, the former existing in the absence of any "agreement" properly so called, and arising from a mere declaration of community; the latter arising from an "agreement," properly so called. Brown.

REGIMIENTO. In Spanish law. The body of regidores, who never exceeded twelve, forming a part of the municipal council, or ayuntamiento, in every capital of a jurisdiction. 12 Pet. 442, note.

REGINA. Lat. The queen.

REGIO ASSENSU. A writ whereby the sovereign gives his assent to the election of a bishop. Reg. Orig. 294.

REGISTER, v. To record formally and exactly; to enroll; to enter precisely in a list or the like. Los Angeles County v. Craig, 38 Cal.App.2d 58, 100 P.2d 818, 820. To make correspond exactly one with another; to fit correctly in a relative position; to be in correct alignment one with another. Cover v. Schwartz, Cust. & Pat. App., 28 C.C.P.A. 831, 116 F.2d 512, 515.

REGISTER, n. An officer authorized by law to keep a record called a "register" or "registry;" as the register for the probate of wills.

REGISTERED BOND. The bonds of the United States government (and of many municipal and private corporations) are either registered or "coupon bonds." In the case of a registered bond, the name of the owner or lawful holder is entered in a register or record, and it is not negotiable or transferable except by an entry on the register, and checks or warrants are sent to the registered holder for the successive installments of interest as they fall due. A bond with interest coupons attached is transferable by mere delivery, and the coupons are payable, as due, to the person who shall present them for payment. But the bond issues of many private corporations now provide that the individual bonds "may be registered as to principal," leaving the interest coupons payable to bearer, or that they may be registered as to both principal and interest, at the option of the holder. Benwell v. New York, 55 N.J.Eq. 260, 36 A. 668; Novoprutsky v. Morris Plan Co. of Philadelphia, 319 Pa. 97, 179 A. 218, 219, 98 A.L.R. 1486.

REGISTERED TONNAGE. The registered tonnage of a vessel is the capacity or cubical contents of the ship, or the amount of weight which she will carry, as ascertained in some proper manner and entered on an official register or record. See Reck v. Phcenix Ins. Co., 54 Hun 637, 7 N.Y.S. 492; Wheaton v. Weston, D.C.Pa., 128 F. 153.

REGISTERED TRADE—MARK. A trade-mark filed in the United States patent office, with the necessary description and other statements required by the act of congress, and there duly recorded, securing its exclusive use to the person causing it to be registered. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1051.

REGISTERED VOTERS. In Virginia, this term refers to the persons whose names are placed upon the registration books provided by law as the sole record or memorial of the duly qualified voters of the state. Chalmers v. Funk, 76 Va. 719.

REGULAR. Conformable to law. Steady or uniform in course, practice, or occurrence; not subject to unexplained or irrational variation. Rooney v. City of Omaha, 104 Neb. 260, 177 N.W. 166, 167. Made according to rule, duly authorized, formed after uniform type, built or arranged according to established plan, law, or principle. Merchants' Nat. Bank of Los Angeles v. Continental Nat. Bank of Los Angeles, 98 Cal.App. 523, 277 P. 354, 361. Antonym of "casual" or "occasional." Palle v. Industrial Commission, 79 Utah 47, 7 P.2d 284, 290, 81 A.L.R. 1222.

As to regular "Clergy," "Deposit," "Election," "Indorsement," "Meeting," "Navigation," "Process," "Session," and "Term," see those titles.

REGULAR AND ESTABLISHED PLACE OF BUSINESS. Under Judicial Code, § 48 (28 U.S.C.A. §§ 1400, 1694), permitting patent infringement suits to be brought in the district in which defendant committed acts of infringement and has a regular and established place of business, a "regular" place of business is one where business is carried on regularly, and not temporarily, or for some special work or particular transaction, while an "established" place of business must be a permanent place of business, and a "regular and established place of business" is one where the same business in kind, if not in degree, as that done at the home office or principal place of business, is carried on. Winterbottom v. Casey, D.C.Mich., 283 F. 518, 521; Candas v. Agnini, D.C.N.Y., 14 F. Supp. 21, 22.

A foreign corporation may have a "regular and established place of business" although business therein is merely securing orders and forwarding them to the home office. Shelton v. Schwartz, C.C.A.I11., 131 F.2d 805, 808.

REGULAR ARMY. Professional permanent soldiery, those who have chosen the military service as a career as distinguished from "militiamen". State ex rel. McGaughey v. Grayston, 349 Mo. 700, 163 S.W.2d 335, 340. In another sense. An army which is comprised of soldiers properly organized as legitimate combatants engaged in war, commanded by a person responsible for his subordinates, having a fixed distinctive emblem, carrying arms openly, and conducting their operations in conformance with the laws and customs of war. Case v. Olson, 234 Iowa 869, 14 N.W.2d 717, 720.

REGULAR COURSE OF BUSINESS. This phrase within Compensation Acts excluding from their benefits person whose employment is not in regular course of business of employer, refers to habitual or regular occupation that party is engaged in with view of winning livelihood or some gain, excluding incidental or occasional operations arising out of transaction of that business; to normal operations which constitute business. Sgattone v. Mulholland & Gotwals, 290 Pa. 341, 138 A. 855, 857, 58 A.L.R. 1463; Passarelli v. Monacelli, 121 Pa.Super. 32, 183 A. 65, 67.

REGULAR ON ITS FACE. Process is "regular on its face" when it proceeds from a court, officer, or body having authority of law to issue process of that nature, and is legal in form and contains nothing to notify or fairly apprise any one that it is issued without authority. Pankewicz v. Jess, 27 Cal.App. 340, 149 P. 997, 998. See, also, Allen v. Cooling, 161 Minn. 10, 200 N.W. 849, 851 (promissory note).

REGULAR RATE. At which employee is employed, within Fair Labor Standards Act, means actual hourly rate of pay of employee computed by dividing his actual weekly wage by number of hours customarily worked. Missel v. Overnight Motor Transp. Co., D.C.Md., 40 F.Supp. 174, 180, 183.

REGULARITER NON VALET PACTUM DE RE MEA NON ALIENANDA. Co. Litt. 223. It is a rule that a compact not to alienate my property is not binding.

REGULARLY. At fixed and certain intervals, regular in point of time. Lamb v. Board of Auditors of Wayne County, 235 Mich. 95, 209 N.W. 195, 196. In accordance with some consistent or periodical rule or practice. Green v. Benedict, 102 Conn. 1, 128 A. 20, 21.

The power of Congress to regulate commerce is the power to enact all appropriate legislation for its protection or advancement; to adopt measures to promote its growth and insure its safety; to foster, protect, control, and restrain. Virginian Ry. Co. v. System Federation No. 40, Railway Employees Department of American Federation of Labor, C.C.A.Va., 84 F.2d 641, 650. It is also power to prescribe rule by which commerce is to be governed, and embraces prohibitory regulations. United States v. Darby, U.S.Ga., 61 S.Ct. 451, 456, 312 U.S. 100, 657, 85 L. Ed. 609, 132 A.L.R. 1430.

REGULATION. The act of regulating; a rule or order prescribed for management or government; a regulating principle; a precept. Curless v. Watson, 180 Ind. 86, 102 N.E. 497, 499. Rule of order prescribed by superior or competent authority relating to action of those under its control. State v. Miller, 33 N.M. 116, 263 P. 510, 513.

REGULATION CHARGE. Charge exacted for privilege or as condition precedent to carrying on business. Duff v. Garden City, 122 Kan. 390, 251 P. 1091, 1092.

REGULATION OF AN EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. The general rules relating to the subject on which a department acts, made by the head of the department under some act of Congress conferring power to make such regulations, and thereby give to them the force of law. State ex rel. Kaser v. Leonard, 164 Or. 579, 102 P.2d 197, 202, 129 A.L.R. 1125.

REGULUS. Lat. In Saxon law. A title sometimes given to the earl or comes, in old charters. Spelman.

REHABERE FACIAS SEISINAM. When a sheriff in the "habere facias seisinam" had delivered seisin of more than he ought, this judicial writ lay to make him restore seisin of the excess. Reg. Jud. 13, 51, 54.

REHABILITATE. To invest or clothe again with some right, authority, or dignity; to restore to a former capacity; to reinstate, to qualify again. In re Coleman, D.C.Ky., 21 F.Supp, 923, 924, 925.

In Scotch and French criminal law. To reinstate a criminal in his personal rights which he has lost by a judicial sentence. Brande.

REHABILITATION. Investing or clothing again with some right, authority, or dignity; restoring to a former capacity; reinstating; qualifying again. In re Coleman, D.C.Ky., 21 F.Supp. 923, 924, 925.

French and Scotch criminal law. The reinstatement of a criminal in his personal rights which he has lost by a judicial sentence. Brande.

Of Corporation

A retrial of issues and presumes notice to parties entitled thereto and opportunity for them to be heard. Yee v. State Board of Equalization of California, 16 Cal.App.2d 417, 60 P.2d 322, 323.

REI INTERVENTUS. Lat. Things intervening; that is, things done by one of the parties to a contract, in the faith of its validity, and with the assent of the other party, and which have so affected his situation that the other will not be allowed to repudiate his obligation, although originally it was imperfect. 1 Bell, Comm. 328, 329.

REI TURPIS NULLUM MANDATUM EST. The mandate of an immoral thing is void. Dig. 17, 1, 6, 3. A contract of mandate requiring an illegal or immoral act to be done has no legal obligation. Story, Bailm. § 158.

REIF. A robbery. Cowell.

REIMBURSE. To pay back, to make restoration, to repay that expended; to indemnify, or make whole. Los Angeles County v. Frisbie, 19 Ca1.2d 634, 122 P.2d 526; Askay v. Maloney, 92 Or. 566, 179 P. 899, 901.

REINSTATE. To reinstall; to reestablish; to place again in a former state, condition, or office; to restore to a state or position from which the object or person had been removed. Collins v. U. S., 15 Ct.C1. 22; Lowry v. /Etna Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 120 S.W.2d 505, 507.

To reinstate a policy holder or one who has allowed his policy to lapse does not mean new insurance or taking out a new policy, but does mean that the insured has been restored to all the benefits accruing to him under the policy contract, the original policy. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Jensen, 139 Okl. 130, 281 P. 561, 562.

REINSTATE A CASE. To place case again in same position as before dismissal. United States v. Green, C.C.A.Mont., 107 F.2d 19, 22.

REINSURANCE. A contract by which an insurer procures a third person to insure him against loss or liability by reason of original insurance. A contract that one insurer makes with another to protect the latter from a risk already assumed. Vial v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Society of Norwich, England, 257 Ill. 355, .100 N.E. 929, 930, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 317, Ann.Cas.1914A, 1141. It binds the reinsurer to pay to the reinsured the whole loss sustained in respect to the subject of the insurance to the extent to which he is reinsured. Sofia Bros. v. General Reinsurance Corporation, 274 N.Y.S. 565, 153 Misc. 6. Also the substitution, with the consent of the insured, of a second insurer for the first, so that the original insurer is released. People v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 179 Mich. 371, 146 N.W. 235, 236.

REISSUABLE NOTES. Bank-notes which, after having been once paid, may again be put into circulation.

REJOIN. In pleading. To answer a plaintiffs replication in an action at law, by some matter of fact.

REJOINDER. In common-law pleading. The second pleading on the part of the defendant, being his answer to the plaintiff's replication.

REJOINING GRATIS. Rejoining voluntarily, or without being required to do so by a rule to rejoin. When a defendant was under terms to rejoin gratis, he had to deliver a rejoinder, without putting the plaintiff to the necessity and expense of obtaining a rule to rejoin. 10 Mees. & W. 12; Lush, Pr. 396; Brown.

RELATE. To stand in some relation; to have bearing or concern; to pertain; refer; to bring into association with or connection with; with "to." City of Mitchell v. Western Public Service Co., 124 Neb. 248, 246 N.W. 484, 486; Siano v. Helvering, D.C.N.J., 13 F.Supp. 776, 780.

RELATED. Standing in relation; connected; allied; akin. Nowland Realty Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.7, 47 F.2d 1018, 1021.

RELATIO EST FICTIO JURIS ET INTENTA AD UNUM. Relation is a fiction of law, and intended for one thing. 3 Coke, 28.

RELATIO SEMPER FIAT UT VALEAT DISPOSITIO. Reference should always be had in such a manner that a disposition in a will may avail. 6 Coke, 76.

RELATION. A relative or kinsman; a person connected by consanguinity. In re Spier's Estate, 224 Mich. 658, 195 N.W. 430, 431; McMenamy v. Kampelmann, 273 Mo. 450, 200 S.W. 1075, 1077. See, also, Relative.

The words "relatives" and "relations," in their primary sense, are broad enough to include any one connected by blood or affinity, even to the remotest degree, but where used in wills, as defining and determining legar succession, are construed to include only those persons who are entitled to share in the estate as next of kin under the statute of distributions. In re Trickett's Estate, 197 Cal. 20, 239 P. 406, 409; Wooten's Trustee v. Hardy, 221 Ky. 338, 298 S.W. 963, 967.

The connection of two persons, or their situation with respect to each other, who are associated, whether by the law, by their own agreement, or by kinship, in some social status or union for the purposes of domestic life; as the relation of guardian and ward, husband and wife, master and servant, parent and child; so in the phrase "domestic relations."

The doctrine of "relation" is that principle by which an act done at one time is considered by a fiction of law to have been done at some antecedent period. It is usually applied where several proceedings are essential to complete a particular transaction, such as a conveyance or deed. The last proceeding which consummates the conveyance is held for certain purposes to take effect by relation as of the day when the first proceeding was had. Knapp v. AlOcander-Edgar Lumber Co., 237 U.S. 162, 35 S.Ct. 515, 517, 59 L.Ed. 894. And see U. S. v. Anderson, 194 U.S. 394, 24 S.Ct. 716, 48 L.Ed. 1035.

A recital, account, narrative of facts; information given. Thus, suits by quo warranto are entitled "on the relation of" a private person, who is called the "relator." But in this connection the word seems also to involve the idea of the suggestion, instigation, or instance of the relator.

In the civil law, the report of the facts and law in a pending case, made by the judges to the emperor, for the purpose of obtaining his opinion on the questions of law involved, in the form of an imperial rescript. This proceeding might be resorted to in cases where no law seemed applicable, or where there were great difficulties in its interpretation, until it was abolished by Justinian. Nov. 125.

RELATION NEVER DEFEATS COLLATERAL ACTS. 18 Vin.Abr. 292.

RELATION SHALL NEVER MAKE GOOD A VOID GRANT OR DEVISE OF THE PARTY. 18 Vin.Abr. 292.

RELATIONS. A term which, in its widest sense, includes all the kindred of the person spoken of. 2 Jarm. Wills, 661.

RELATIVE. A kinsman; a person connected with another by blood or affinity.

When used generically, includes persons connected by ties of affinity as well as consanguinity, and, when used with a restrictive meaning, refers to those only who are connected by blood. Appeal of Schutte, 90 Conn. 529, 97 A. 906, 907.

A person or thing having relation or connection with some other person or thing; as, relative rights, relative powers, infra. See also, Relation.

RELATIVE CONFESSION. See Confession.

RELATIVE FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact having relation to another fact; a minor fact; a circumstance.

RELATIVE POWERS. Those which relate to land; so called to distinguish them from those which are collateral to it.

RELATIVE RIGHTS. Those rights of persons which are incident to them as members of society, and standing in various relations to each other. 1 Bl.Comm. 123. Those rights of persons in private life which arise from the civil and domestic relations. 2 Kent, Comm. 1.

RELATIVE WORDS REFER TO THE NEXT ANTECEDENT, UNLESS THE SENSE BE THEREBY IMPAIRED. Noy, Max. 4; Wing. Max. 19; Broom, Max. 606; Jenk. Cent. 180.

RELATIVORUM, COGNITO UNO, COGNOSCITUR ET ALTERUM. Cro. Jac. 539. Of relatives, one being known, the other is also known.

RELATOR. An informer; the person upon whose complaint, or at whose instance certain writs are issued such as information or writ of quo warranto, and who is quasi the plaintiff in the proceeding. State ex inf. Barker v. Duncan, 265 Mo. 26, 175 S.W. 940, 942, Ann.Cas.1916D, 1.

RELATRIX. In practice. A female relator or petitioner.

RELAXARE. In old conveyancing. To release. Relaxavi, relaxasse, have released. Litt. § 445.

RELAXATIO. In old conveyancing. A release; an instrument by which a person relinquishes to another his right in anything.

RELAXATION. In old Scotch practice. Letters passing the signet by which a debtor was relaxed [released] from the horn; that is, from personal diligence. Bell.

RELEASE, v. To lease again or grant new lease. Aaron v. Woodcock, 283 Pa. 33, 128 A. 665, 666, 38 A.L.R. 1251. See Accord and Satisfaction.

RELEASE, n. The relinquishment, concession, or giving up of a right, claim, or privilege, by the person in whom it exists or to whom it accrues, to the person against whom it might have been demanded or enforced. Miller v. Estabrook, C.C.A. W.Va., 273 F. 143, 148; Coopey v. Keady, 73 Or. 66, 144 P. 99, 101.

In this sense it is a contract and must be supported by lawful and valuable consideration. Hamilton v. Edmundson, 235 Ala. 97, 177 So. 743, 746.

A discharge of a debt by act of party, as distinguished from an extinguishment which is a discharge by operation of law, and, in distinguishing release from receipt, "receipt" is evidence that an obligation has been discharged, but "release" is itself a discharge of it. Glickman v. Weston, 140 Or. 117, 11 P.2d 281, 284.

An express release is one directly made in terms by deed or other suitable means. An implied release is one which arises from acts of the creditor or owner, without any express agreement. Pothier, Obl. nn. .608, 609. A release bfj operation of law is one which, though not expressly made, the law presumes in consequence of some act of the re; leasor ; for instance, when one of several joint obligors is expressly released, the others are also released by operation of law. 3 Salk. 298; Rowley v. Stoddard, 7 Johns., N.Y., 207.

Liberation, discharge, or setting free from restraint or confinement. Thus, a man unlawfully imprisoned may obtain his release on habeas corpus. Parker v. U. S., 22 Ct.C1. 100.

The abandonment to (or by) a person called as a witness in a suit of his interest in the subject-matter of the controversy, in order to qualify him to testify, under the common-law rule.

A receipt or certificate given by a ward to the guardian, on the final settlement of the latter's accounts, or by any other beneficiary on the termination of the trust administration, relinquishing all and any further rights, claims, or demands, growing out of the trust or incident to it.

In admiralty actions, when a ship, cargo, or other property has been arrested, the owner may obtain its release by giving bail, or paying the value of the property into court. Upon this being done he obtains a release, which is a kind of writ under the seal of the court, addressed to the marshal, commanding him to release the nronerty. Sweet.

Estates

The conveyance of a man's interest or right which he hath unto a thing to another that hath the possession thereof or some estate therein. Shep. Touch. 320. The relinquishment of some right or benefit to a person who has already some interest in the tenement, and such interest as qualifies him for receiving or availing himself of the right or benefit so relinquished. Burt. Real Prop. 12; Field v. Columbet, 9 Fed.Cas. 13; Baker v. Woodward, 12 Or. 3, 6 P. 173.

A conveyance of an ulterior interest in lands or tenements to a particular tenant, or of an undivided share to a co-tenant, (the releasee being in either case in privity of estate with the releasor,) or of the right, to a person wrongfully in possession. 1 Steph.Comm. 479.

Deed of release. A deed operating by way of release; but more specifically, in those states where deeds of trust are in use instead of common-law mortgages, as a means of pledging real property as security for the payment of a debt, a "deed of release" is a conveyance in fee, executed by the trustee or trustees, to the grantor in the deed of trust, which conveys back to him the legal title to the estate, and which is to be given on satisfactory proof that he has paid the secured debt in full or otherwise complied with the terms of the deed of trust.

Release by way of enlarging an estate. A conveyance of the ulterior interest in lands to the particular tenant; as, if there be tenant for life or years, remainder to another in fee, and he in remainder releases all his right to the particular tenant and his heirs, this gives him the estate in fee 1 Steph.Comm. 480; 2 Bl.Comm. 324.

Release by way of entry and feoffment. As if there be two joint disseisors, and the disseisee releases to one of them, he shall be sole seised, and shall keep out his former companion; which is the same in effect as if the disseisee had entered and thereby put an end to the disseisin, and afterwards had enfeoffed one of the disseisors in fee. 2 Bl.Comm. 325.

Release by way of extinguishment. As if my tenant for life makes a lease to A. for life, remainder to B. and his heirs, and I release to A., this extinguishes my right to the reversion, and shall inure to the advantage of B.'s remainder, as well as of A.'s particular estate. 2 Bl.Comm. 325.

Release by way of passing a right. As if a man be disseised and releaseth to his disseisor all his right, hereby the disseisor acquires a new right, which changes the quality of his estate, and renders that lawful which before was tortious or wrongful. 2 Bl.Comm. 325.

Release by way of passing an estate. As, where one of two coparceners releases all her right to the other, this passes the fee-simple of the whole. 2 Bl.Comm. 324, 325.

Release of dower. The relinquishment by a married woman of her expectant dower interest or estate in a particular parcel of realty belonging to her husband, as, by joining with him in a conveyance of it to a third person.

Release to uses. The conveyance by a deed of release to one party to the use of another is so termed. Thus, when a conveyance of lands was effected, by those instruments of assurance termed a lease and release, from A. to B. and his heirs, to the use of C. and his heirs, in such case C. at once took the whole fee-simple in such lands; B. by the operation of the statute of uses, being made a mere conduit-pipe for conveying the estate to C. Brown.

RELEASEE. The person to whom a release is made.

RELEASER, or RELEASOR. The maker of a release.

RELEGATIO. Lat. A kind of banishment known to the civil law, which differed from "deportatio" in leaving to the person his rights of citizenship.

RELEGATION. In old English law. Banishment for a time only. Co. Litt. 133.

RELEVANCY. Applicability to the issue joined. That quality of evidence which renders it properly applicable in determining the truth and falsity of the matters in issue between the parties to a suit. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 49. Two facts are said to be relevant to each other when so related that according to the common course of events, one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other. Steph.Dig.Ev. art. 1. Katz v. Delohery Hat Co., 97 Conn. 665, 112 A. 88, 93; Barnett v. State, 104 Ohio St. 298, 135 N.E. 647, 650, 27 A. L.R. 351.

Relevancy is that which conduces to the proof of a pertinent hypothesis; a pertinent hypothesis being one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue. Whart.Ev. § 20; Hampton v. State, 126 Tex.Cr.R. 211, 70 S.W.2d 1001.

In Scotch law, the relevancy is the justice or sufficiency in law of the allegations of a party. A plea to the relevancy is therefore analogous to the demurrer of the English courts.

A distinction is sometimes taken between "logical" relevancy and "legal" relevancy, the former being judged merely by the standards of ordinary logic or the general laws of reasoning, the latter by the strict and artificial rules of the law with reference to the admissibility of evidence. Hoag v. Wright, 54 N.Y.S. 658, 34 App.Div. 260.

Relevant evidence is such evidence as relates to, or bears directly upon, the point or fact in issue, and proves or has a tendency to prove the proposition alleged; evidence which conduces to prove a pertinent theory in a case. State v. O'Neil, 13 Or. 183, 9 P. 286; Moran v. Abbey, 58 Cal. 163, 168. 1 Whart.Ev. § 20. It does not mean evidence addressed with positive directness to the point but that which according to the common course of events either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present or future existence or nonexistence of the other. Seller v. Jenkins, 97 Ind. 430, 438 (quoting Steph.Ev. art. 1, and Best, Principles of Ev. 257, n.). See, also, Relevancy.

Relevancy of evidence does not depend upon the conclusiveness of the testimony offered, but upon its legitimate tendency to establish a controverted fact. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 24 S.Ct. 563, 194 U.S. 25, 48 L. Ed. 860; State v. Upson:162 Minn. 9, 201 N.W. 913, 915.

RELEVANT. Applying to the matter in question; affording something to the purpose.

Fact is relevant to another fact when, according to common course of events, existence of one taken alone or in connection with the other fact renders existence of the other certain or more probable. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Downs, Tex.Civ.App., 70 S.W.2d 318, 322.

In Scotch law, good in law, legally sufficient; as, a "relevant" plea or defense.

RELEVANT EVIDENCE. See Evidence.

RELIABLE. Trustworthy, 'worthy of confidence. Quinn v. Daly, 300 Ill. 273, 133 N.E. 290, 291.

RELICT. The survivor of a pair of married people, whether the survivor is the husband or the wife; it means the relict of the united pair, (or of the marriage union,) not the relict of the deceased individual. Spitler v. Heeter, 42 Ohio St. 101.

RELICTA VERIFICATIONE. (Lat. his pleading being abandoned). A confession of judgment made after plea pleaded; viz., a cognovit actionem accompanied by a withdrawal of the plea.

RELICTION. An increase of the land by the permanent withdrawal or retrocession of the sea or a river. Hammond v. Shepard, 186 Ill. 235, 57 N.E. 867, 78 Am.St.Rep. 274. Conkey v. Knudsen, 141 Neb. 517, 4 N.W.2d 290, 295.

RELIEF. The assistance or support, pecuniary or otherwise, granted to indigent persons by the proper administrators of the poor-laws.

Also wages paid in cash or in kind for public work because of need. In re Matruski, 8 N.Y.S. 2d 471, 480, 169 Misc. 316.

Deliverance from oppression, wrong, or injustice.

In this sense it is used as a general designation of the assistance, redress, or benefit which a complainant seeks at the hands of a court, particularly in equity. It may be thus used of such remedies as specific performance, or the reformation or rescission of a contract; but it does not seem appropriate to the awarding of money damages.

In feudal law. A sum payable by the new tenant, the duty being incident to every feudal tenure, by way of fine or composition with the lord for taking up the estate which was lapsed or fallen in by the death of the last tenant. At one time the amount was arbitrary, but afterwards the relief of a knight's fee became fixed at one hundred shillings. 2 Bl.Comm. 65.

RELIEF ASSOCIATION, See Railroad Relief Funds.

RELIEVE. To give ease, comfort, or consolation to; to give aid, help, or succor to; alleviate, assuage, ease, mitigate; succor, assist, aid, help; support, sustain; lighten, diminish. Brollier v. Van Alstine, 236 Mo.App. 1233, 163 S.W.2d 109, 115.

In feudal law, to depend; thus, the seigniory of a tenant in capite relieves of the crown, meaning that the tenant holds of the crown. The term is not common in English writers. Sweet.

RELIGIO SEQUITUR PATREM. The father's religion is prima facie the infant's religion. Religion will follow the father. [1902] 1 Ch. 688.

RELIGION. Man's relation to Divinity, to reverence, worship, obedience, and submission to mandates and precepts of supernatural or superior beings. In its broadest sense includes all forms of belief in the existence of superior beings exercising power over human beings by volition, imposing rules of conduct, with future rewards and punishments. McMasters v. State, 21 Okl. Cr. 318, 207 P. 566, 568, 29 A.L.R. 292.

One's views of his relations to his Creator and to the obligations they impose of reverence for his being and character, and of obedience to his will. It is often confounded with cultus or form of worship of a particular sect, but is distinguishable from the latter. People ex rel. Fish v. Sandstrom, 3 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 1007, 167 Misc. 436.

Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as source of all being and principle of all government of things. Nikulnikoff v. Archbishop, etc., of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 255 N.Y.S. 653, 663, 142 Misc. 894.

As used in constitutional provisions forbidding the "establishment of religion," the term means a particular system of faith and worship recognized and practised by a particular church, sect, or denomination. Reynolds v. U. S., 98 U.S. 149, 25 L. Ed. 244; Board of Education v. Minor, 23 Ohio St. 241, 13 Am.Rep. 233

RELIGION, OFFENSES AGAINST. In English law. RELINQUISH. To abandon, to give up, to surrender, to renounce some right or thing. Masser v. London Operating Co., 106 Fla. 474, 145 So. 79, 84; Roy v. Salisbury, Cal.App., 121 P.2d 109, 117.

RELINQUISHMENT. A forsaking, abandoning, renouncing, or giving over a right. Wisconsin-Texas Oil Co. v. Clutter, Tex.Civ.App., 258 S.W. 265, 268.

RELIQUA. The remainder or debt which a person finds himself debtor in upon the balancing or liquidation of an account. Hence reliquary, the debtor of a reliqua; as also a person who only pays piece-meal. Enc.Lond.

RELIQUES. Remains; such as the bones, etc., of saints, preserved with great veneration as sacred memorials. They have been forbidden to be used or brought into England. St. 3 Jac. I. c. 26.

RELOCATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A renewal of a lease on its determination. It may be either express or tacit; the latter is when the tenant holds over with the knowledge and without objection of the landlord. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 412.

RELOCATION. In Scotch law. A reletting or renewal of a lease; a tacit relocation is permitting a tenant to hold over without any new agreement.

In mining law. A new or fresh location of an abandoned or forfeited mining claim by a stranger, or by the original locator when he wishes to change the boundaries or to correct mistakes in the original location.

REMAINDER. The remnant of an estate in land, depending upon a particular prior estate created at the same time and by the same instrument, and limited to arise immediately on the determination of that estate, and not in abridgement of it. 4 Kent, Comm. 197; Bean v. Atkins, 87 Vt. 376, 89 A. 643, 646; Pinnell v. Dowtin, 224 N.C. 493, 31 S.E.2d 467, 469.

An estate limited to take effect and be enjoyed after another estate is determined. As, if a man seised in fee-simple grants lands to A. for twenty years, and, after the determination of the said term, then to B. and his heirs forever, here A. is tenant for years, remainder to B. in fee. 2 Bl.Comm. 164.

An estate in reversion is the residue of an estate, usually the fee left in the grantor and his heirs after the determination of a particular estate which he has granted out of it. The rights of the reversioner are the same as those of a vested remainderman in fee. Sayward v. Sayward, 7 Me. 213, 22 Am.Dec. 191; Glenn v. Holt, Tex.Civ.App., 229 S. W. 684, 685.

In wills. The terms rest, residue, and remainder of estate are usually and ordinarily understood as meaning that part of the estate which is left after all of the other provisions of the will have been satisfied. In re Vail's Estate, 223 Iowa 551, 273 N.W. 107, 110.

Contingent Remainder

An estate in remainder which is limited to take effect either to a dubious and uncertain person, or upon a dubious and uncertain event, by which no present or particular interest passes to the remainder-man, so that the particular estate may chance to be determined and the remainder never take effect. 2 Bl.Comm. 169. A remainder limited so as to depend upon an event or condition which may never happen or be performed, or which may not happen or be performed till after the determination of the preceding estate. Fearne, Rem. 3; Thompson v. Adams, 205 Ill. 552, 69 N.E. 1; Griswold v. Greer, 18 Ga. 545; Price v. Sisson, 13 N.J. Eq. 168.

Cross-Remainder

Where land is devised or conveyed to two or more persons as tenants in common, or where different parts of the same land are given to such persons in severalty, with such limitations that, upon the determination of the particular estate of either, his share is to pass to the other, to the entire exclusion of the ultimate remainder-man or reversioner until all the particular estates shall be exhausted, the remainders so limited are called "cross-remainders." In wills, such remainders may arise by implication; but, in deeds, only by express limitation. 2 Bl.Comm. 381; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 233; 1 Prest.Est. 94.

Executed Remainder

A remainder which vests a present interest in the tenant, though the enjoyment is postponed to the future. 2 Bl.Comm. 168; Fearne, Rem. 31; Hudson v. Wadsworth, 8 Conn. 359.

Executory Remainder

A contingent remainder; one which exists where the estate is limited to take effect either to a dubious and uncertain person or upon a dubious and uncertain event. Temple v. Scott, 143 Ill. 290, 32 N.E. 366.

Vested Remainder

An estate by which a present interest passes to the party, though to be enjoyed in futuro, and by which the estate is invariably fixed to remain to a determinate person after the particular estate has been spent. Pinnell v. Dowtin, 224 N.C. 493, 31 S.E.2d 467, 469. One limited to a certain person at a certain time or upon the happening of a necessary event. ·Etna Life Ins. Co. v. Hoppin, 214 F. 928, 933, 131 C.C.A. 224.

REMAINDER TO A PERSON NOT OF A CAPACITY TO TAKE AT THE TIME OP APPOINTING IT, IS VOID. Plowd. 27.

REMAINDER VESTED SUBJECT TO BEING DIVESTED. A remainder given to one person, with proviso that it shall go to another under certain contingencies. In re Barnes' Estate, 279 N.Y.S. 117, 155 Misc. 320.

REMAINDERMAN. One who is entitled to the remainder of the estate after a particular estate carved out of it has expired. In re Mawhinney's Will, 261 N.Y.S. 334, 146 Misc. 30.

REMAND. To send back.

Cause

The sending the cause back to the same court out of which it came, for purpose of having some action on it there.

Prisoner

After a preliminary or partial hearing before a court or magistrate, is to send him back to custody, to be kept until the hearing is resumed or the trial comes on. Ex parte Chalfant, 81 W.Va. 93, 93 S.E. 1032, 1033.

When a prisoner is brought before a judge on habeas corpus, for the purpose of obtaining liberty, the judge hears the case, and either discharges him or remands him.

REMANENT PRO DEFECTU EMPTORUM. In practice. The return made by the sheriff to a writ of execution when he has not been able to sell the property seized, that the same remains unsold for want of buyers.

REMANENTIA. In old English law. A remainder. Spelman. A perpetuity, or perpetual estate. Glan. lib. 7, c. 1.

REMANET. A remnant; that which remains. Thus the causes of which the trial is deferred from one term to another, or from one sitting to another, are termed "remanets." 1 Archb.Pr. 375.

REMEDIAL. Affording a remedy; giving the means of obtaining redress. Of the nature of a remedy; intended to remedy wrongs or abuses, abate faults, or supply defects. Pertaining to or affecting the remedy, as distinguished from that which affects or modifies the right.

REMEDIAL ACTION. One which is brought to obtain compensation or indemnity. Cummings v. Board of Education of Oklahoma City, 190 Okl. 533, 125 P.2d 989, 994.

REMEDIAL STATUTE. One that intends to afford a private remedy to a person injured by the wrongful act. That is designed to correct an existing law, redress an existing grievance, or introduce regulations conducive to the public good. In re School Dist. No. 6, Paris and Wyoming Tps., Kent County, 284 Mich. 132, 278 N.W. 792, 797; Bowles v. Trowbridge, D.C.Cal., 60 F.Supp. 48, 49.

A statute giving a party a mode of remedy for a wrong, where he had none, or a different one, before. 1 Chit.B1. 86, 87, notes; In re Ungaro's Will, 88 N.J.Eq. 25, 102 A. 244, 246; Cherry v. Kennedy, 144 Tenn. 320, 232 S.W. 661, 662.

The underlying test to be applied in determining whether a statute is penal or remedial is whether it primarily seeks to impose an arbitrary, deterring punishment upon any who might commit a wrong against the public by a violation of the requirements of the statute, or whether the purpose is to measure and define the damages which may accrue to an individual or class of individuals, as just and reasonable compensation for a possible loss having a causal connection with the breach of the legal obligation owing under the statute to such individual or class. Southern Ry. Co. v. Melton, 133 Ga. 277, 291, 307, 65 S.E. 665. In re Engel's Estate, 250 N.Y.S. 648, 653, 140 Misc. 276. Remedial statutes are those which are made to supply such defects, and abridge such superfluities, in the common law, as arise either from the general imperfection of all human laws, from change of time and circumstances, from the mistakes and unadvised determinations of unlearned (or even learned) judges, or from any other cause whatsoever. 1 B1.Comm. 86; Falls v. Key, Tex.Civ.App., 278 S.W. 893, 896; Columbus Trust Co. v. Upper Hudson Electric & R. Co., Sup., 190 N.Y.S. 737, 739. These remedial statutes are themselves divided into enlarging statutes, by which the common law is made more comprehensive and extended than it was before, and into restraining statutes, by which it is narrowed down to that which is just and proper. A remedial statute is one which not only remedies defects in, the common law but defects in civil jurisprudence generally. M. H. Vestal Co. v. Robertson, 277 Ill. 425, 115 N.E. 629, 631; MacDonald v. Hamilton B. Wills & Co., 199 App. Div. 203, 191 N.Y.S. 566, 568.

REMEDIES FOR RIGHTS ARE EVER FAVORABLY EXTENDED. 18 Vin.Abr. 521.

REMEDY. The means by which a right is enforced or the violation of a right is prevented, redressed, or compensated. Remedies are of four kinds: (1) By act of the party injured, the principal of which are defense, recaption, distress, entry, abatement, and seizure; (2) by operation of law, as in the case of retainer and remitter; (3) by agreement between the parties, e. g., by accord and satisfaction and arbitration; and (4) by judicial remedy, e. g., action or suit. Sweet. Berry v. M. F. Donovan & Sons, 120 Me. 45'7,115 A. 250, 252, 25 A.L.R. 1021; California Prune & Apricot Growers' Ass'n v. Catz American Co., C.C.A.Cal., 60 F.2d 788, 790, 85 A.L.R. 1117.

The means employed to enforce a right or redress an injury, as distinguished from right, which is a well founded or acknowledged claim. Chelentis v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 38 S.Ct. 501, 503, 247 U.S. 372, 62 L.Ed. 1171.

Strictly speaking, "remedy" is no part of the action, but is the result thereof, the object for which the action is presented, the end to which all the litigation is directed. Mathews v. Sniggs, 75 Okl. 108, 182 P. 703, 707.

Remedies for the redress of injuries are either public, by indictment, when the injury to the individual or to his property affects the public, or private, when 'the tort is only injurious to the individual.

That which relieves or cures a disease, including a medicine or remedial treatment. United States v. Natura Co., D.C.Cal., 250 F. 925, 926.

Also a certain allowance to the master of the mint, for deviation from the standard weight and fineness of coins. Enc. Lond.

Adequate Remedy

See Adequate.

REMISE DE LA DETTE. In French law. The release of a debt.

REMISSION. In civil law. A release of a debt. It is conventional, when it is expressly granted to the debtor by a creditor having a capacity to alienate; or tacit, when the creditor voluntarily surrenders to his debtor the original title, under private signature constituting the obligation. Civ.Code La. art. 2199. Hall v. Allen Mfg. Co., 133 La. 1079, 63 So. 591, 592.

Forgiveness or condonation of an offense or injury.

At common law. The act by which a forfeiture or penalty is forgiven. United States v. Morris, 10 Wheat. 246, 6 L.Ed. 314.

REMISSIUS IMPERANTI MELIUS rARETUR. 3 Inst. 233. A man commanding not too strictly is better obeyed.

REMISSNESS. The doing of the act in question in a tardy, negligent, or careless manner; but term does not apply to the entire omission or forbearance of the act. Baldwin v. United States Tel. Co., 6 Abb.Prac.N.S., N.Y., 423.

REMIT. To send or transmit; as to remit money. Potter v. Morland, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 388; Hollowell v. Life Ins. Co., 35 S.E. 616, 126 N.C. 398. To send back, as to remit a check. Colvin v. Acc. Ass'n, 66 Hun, 543, 21 N.Y.S. 734. To give up; to annul; to relinquish; as to remit a fine. People ex rel. Cropsey v. Court of Special Sessions of City of New York, 156 N.Y.S. 61, 62, 170 App.Div. 575.

REMITMENT. The act of sending back to custody; an annulment. Wharton.

REMITTANCE. Money sent by one person to another, either in specie, bill of exchange, check, or otherwise.

REMITTEE. A person to whom a remittance is made. Story, Bailm. § 75.

REMITTER. The relation back of a later defective title to an earlier valid title. Remitter occurs where he who has the true property or jus proprietatis in lands, but is out of possession thereof, and has no right to enter without recovering possession in an action, has afterwards the freehold cast upon him by some subsequent and of course defective title. In this ,case he is remitted, or sent back by operation of law, to his ancient and more certain title. 3 Bl.Comm. 19.

REMITTIT DAMNA. Lat. An entry on the record, by which the plaintiff declares that he remits a part of the damages which have been awarded him.

REMITTITUR DAMNA. Lat. In practice. An entry made on record, in cases where a jury has given greater damages than a plaintiff has declared for, remitting the excess. 2 Tidd, Pr. 896.

REMITTITUR OF RECORD. The returning or sending back by a court of appeal of the record and proceedings in a cause, after its decision thereon, to the court whence the appeal came, in order that the cause may be tried anew, (where it is so ordered,) or that judgment may be entered in accordance with the decision on appeal, or execution be issued, or any other necessary action be taken in the court below.

REMITTOR. A person who makes a remittance to another.

REMNANT RULE. The rule that width of lot, frontage of which is not specified on plat specifying frontage of all other lots in same block, is length of block, minus total width of other lots. Routh v. Williams, 141 Fla. 334, 193 So. 71, 73.

REMODEL. To model, shape, form, fashion, afresh, or to recast; to model anew; to reconstruct, to reform, reshape, reconstruct, to make over in a somewhat different way. Board of Com'rs of Guadalupe County v. State, 43 N.M. 409, 94 P.2d 515, 520.

REMONSTRANCE. Expostulation; showing of reasons against something proposed; a representation made to a court or legislative body wherein certain persons unite in urging that a contemplated measure be not adopted or passed. Girvin v. Simon, 59 P. 945, 127 Cal. 491; In re Mercer County License Applications, 3 Pa.Co.Ct. R. 45.

REMOTE. At a distance; afar off; inconsiderable; slight. Newsome v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 20 Ala.App. 349, 102 So. 61, 64.

REMOTE CAUSE. In the law of negligence with respect to injury or accident. A cause which would not according to experience of Mankind, lead to the event which happened. Miles v. Southeastern Motor Truck Lines, 295 Ky. 156, 173 S.W.2d 990, 994. One where the effect is uncertain, vague, or indeterminate, and where the effect does not necessarily follow. Jaggers v. Southeastern Greyhound Lines, D.C.Tenn., 34 F.Supp. 667, 669. A cause operating mediately through other causes to produce effect. Newsome v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 20 Ala.App. 349, 102 So. 61, 64. Improbable cause. Fitzgerald v. Pennsylvania R. R., 184 A. 299, 301, 121 Pa.Super. 461; Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Harrell, 21 Tenn.App. 353, 110 S.W.2d 1032, 1038.

To determine whether a given cause is a "proximate cause" or a "remote cause," it must be determined whether the facts constitute a succession of events, so linked together that they become a natural whole, or whether chain of events is so broken that they become independent, and final result cannot be said to be the natural and probable consequence of the primary cause, the negligence of defendants. Fitzgerald v. Pennsylvania R. R., 121 Pa.Super. 461, 184 A. 299.

REMOTE DAMAGE. See Damages.

REMOTE POSSIBILITY. In the law of estates, a double possibility, or a limitation dependent on two or more facts or events both or all of which are contingent and uncertain; as, for example, the limitation of an estate to a given man provided that he shall marry a certain woman and that she shall then die and he shall marry another.

REMOTENESS. Want of close connection between a wrong and the injury which prevents the party injured from claiming compensation from the wrongdoer. Wharton.

REMOTENESS OF EVIDENCE. When the fact or facts proposed to be established as a foundation from which indirect evidence may be drawn, by way of inference, have not a visible, plain, or necessary connection with the proposition eventually to be proved, such evidence is rejected for "remoteness." See 2 Whart.Ev. § 1226, note.

REMOTO IMPEDIMENTO, EMERGIT ACTIO. The impediment being removed, the action rises. When a bar to an action is removed, the action rises up into its original efficacy. Shep.Touch. 150; Wing. 20.

REMOVAL. In a broad sense, the transfer of a person or thing from one place to another. Durrett v. Woods, 155 La. 533, 99 So. 430, 431.

As used in statutes relative to removal from state is often limited to such absence from state as amounts to a change of residence. Smithers v. Smithers, 145 La. 752, 82 So. 879, 880.

REMOVAL FROM OFFICE. Deprivation of office by act of competent superior officer acting within scope of authority. Attorney General ex rel. O'Hara v. Montgomery, 275 Mich. 504, 267 N. W. 550, 553.

"Suspension" is the temporary forced removal from the exercise of office; "removal" is the dismissal from office. Murley v, Township of Raritan, 117 N.J.L. 357, 168 A. 739, 740.

REMOVAL OF CAUSES. The transfer of a cause from one court to another. State ex rel. McNeal v. Avoyelles Parish School Board, 199 La. 859, 7 So.2d 165, 166. Commonly used of the transfer of the jurisdiction and cognizance of an action commenced but not finally determined, with all further proceedings therein, from one trial court to another trial court. More particularly, the transfer of a cause, before trial or final hearing thereof, from a state court to the United States District Court, under the acts of congress in that behalf.

REMOVAL OF PAUPER. The actual transfer of a pauper, by order of a court having jurisdiction, from a poor district in which he has no settlement, but upon which he has become a charge, to the district of his domicile or settlement.

REMOVAL, ORDER OF. An order of court directing the removal of a pauper from the poor district upon which he has illegally become a charge to the district in which he has his settlement. Also an order made by the court a quo, directing the transfer of a cause therein depending, with all future proceedings in such cause, to another court.

REMOVAL TO AVOID TAX. Within a statute relating to forfeiture, some transfer of the thing involved from some definite place of manufacture, production, origin, or the like to some other place, whereat or wherefrom collection of tax on it might be less easily effected. U. S. v. One Buick Automobile, D.C.Cal., 300 F. 584, 588; U. S. v. Mangano, C.C.A.Neb., 299 F. 492, 493.

REMOVAL WITHOUT PROPER CAUSE. Of persons in the classified civil service, includes a removal for reasons which are insufficient, frivolous, or irrelevant, and a removal grounded upon evidence which to fair-minded persons appears inadequate to justify the conclusion reached but falling short of an exercise of bad faith. Murray v. Justices of Municipal Court of City of Boston, 233 Mass. 186, 123 N.E. 682, 683. See "Cause."

REMOVER. In practice. A transfer of a suit or cause out of one court into another, which is effected by writ of error, certiorari, and the like. 11 Coke, 41.

REMOVING CLOUD FROM TITLE. Acts or proceedings necessary to render title marketable. Johnston v. Cox, 114 Fla. 243, 154 So. 206.

REMUNERATION. Reward; recompense; salary. Dig. 17, 1, 7.

A quid pro quo. If a man gives his services, whatever consideration he gets for giving his services seems to me a remuneration for them. Consequently, I think, if a person was in the receipt of a payment, or in the receipt of a percentage, or any kind of payment which would not be an actual money payment, the amount he would receive annually in respect of this would be "remuneration." 1 Q.B. Div. 663, 664.

RENANT, or RENIANT. In old English law. Denying. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 2.

RENCOUNTER. A sudden hostile collision, as with an enemy; an unexpected encounter or meeting, as of travelers; a contest or debate; a sudden meeting as opposed to a duel which is deliberate. Mulligan v. State, 18 Ga.App. 464, 89 S.E. 541, 544.

RENDER, v. To give up; to yield; to return; to surrender. Also to pay or perform; used of rents, services, and the like.

Render an account. Is to present it. Yarbrough v. Armour & Co., 31 Ala.App. 287, 15 So.2d 281, 283.

Render judgment. To pronounce, state, declare, or announce the judgment of the court in a given case or on a given state of facts; not used with reference to judgments by confession, and not synonymous with "entering," "docketing," or "recording" the judgment.

The rendition of a judgment is the judicial act of the court in pronouncing the sentence of the law, while the entry of a judgment is a ministerial act, which consists in spreading upon the record a statement of the final conclusion reached by the court in the matter, thus furnishing external and incontestable evidence of the sentence given and designed to stand as a perpetual memorial of its action. Schuster v. Rader, 13 Colo. 329, 22 P. 505; Farmers' State Bank v. Bales, 64 Neb. 870, 90 N.W. 945; Winstead v. Evans, Tex.Civ.App., 33 S.W. 580; Welch v. Kroger Grocery Co., 177 So. 41, 42, 180 Miss. 89.

Render verdict. To agree on and to report the verdict in due form. S. W. Little Coal Co. v. O'Brien, 63 Ind.App. 504, 113 N.E. 465, 470. To return the written verdict into court and hand it to the trial judge. Kramm v. Stockton Electric R. Co., 22 Cal.App. 737, 136 P. 523, 533.

RENDER, n. In feudal law, used in connection with rents and heriots. Goods subject to rent or heriot-service were said to lie in render, when the lord might not only seize the identical goods, but might also distrain for them. Cowell.

RENDEZVOUS. Fr. A place appointed for meeting. Especially used of places appointed for the assembling of troops, the coming together of the ships of a fleet, or the meeting of vessels and their convoy.

RENEGADE. One who has changed his profession of faith or opinion; one who has deserted his church or party.

RENEW. To make new again; to restore to freshness; to make new spiritually; to regenerate; to begin again; to recommence; to resume; to restore to existence; to revive; to reestablish; to recreate; to replace; to grant or obtain an extension of. Rayburn v. Guntersville Realty Co., 228 Ala. 662, 154 So. 812, 93 A.L.R. 1055; F. Chafee's Sons v. Blanchard's Estate, 105 Vt. 389, 165 A. 912, 913.

RENEWAL. The act of renewing or reviving. A revival or rehabilitation of an expiring subject; that which is made anew or re-established; in law, meaning an obligation on which time of payment is extended; the substitution of a new right or obligation for another of the same nature, a change of something old to something new; to grant or obtain extension of, to continue in force for a fresh period; as commonly used with reference to notes and bonds importing a postponement of maturity of obligations dealt with; an extension of time in which that obligation may be discharged; an obligation being "renewed" when the same obligation is carried forward by the new paper or undertaking, whatever it may be. Campbell River Timber Co. v. Vierhus, C.C.A.Wash., 86 F.2d 673, 675, 108 A.L.R. 763.

There is clear distinction between stipulation to "renew" lease for additional term and one to "extend," in that stipulation to renew requires making of new lease, while one to extend does not. Sanders v. Wender, 205 Ky. 422, 265 S. W. 939, 941.

RENOUNCE. To make an affirmative declaration of abandonment. Continental Bank & Trust Co. of New York v. Fulton Realty Co., 10 N.J.Misc. 1105, 162 A. 560, 563. To reject; cast off; repudiate; disclaim; forsake; abandon; divest one's self of a right, power, or privilege. Usually it implies an affirmative act of disclaimer or disavowal.

RENOUNCING PROBATE. In English practice. Refusing to take upon one's self the office of executor or executrix. Refusing to take out probate under a will wherein one has been appointed executor or executrix. Holthouse.

RENOVARE. Lat. In old English law. To renew. Annuatim renovare, to renew annually. A phrase applied to profits which are taken and the product renewed again. Amb. 131.

RENT. Consideration paid for use or occupation of property. Whiting Paper Co. v. Holyoke Water Power Co., 276 Mass. 542, 177 N.E. 574, 575. Compensation or return of value given at stated times for the possession of lands and tenements corporeal. A sum of money or other consideration, issuing yearly out of lands and tenements corporal; something which a tenant renders out of the profits of the land which he enjoys; a compensation or return, being in the nature of an acknowledgment or recompense given for the possession of some corporeal inheritance. 2 Bl.Comm. 41; In re Perlmutter's Will, 282 N.Y.S. 282, 156 Misc. 571.

Also the payment of royalty under a mineral lease. Robinson v. Horton, 197 La. 919, 2 So.2d 647, 649; Miller v. Carr, 137 Fla. 114, 188 So. 103, 106, 107.

In Louisiana. The contract of rent of lands is a contract by which one of the parties conveys and cedes to the other a tract of land, or any other immovable property, and stipulates that the latter shall hold it as owner, but reserving to the former an annual rent of a certain sum of money, or of a certain quantity of fruits, which the other party binds himself to pay him. It is of the essence of this conveyance that it be made in perpetuity. If it be made for a limited time, it is a lease. Civ.Code La. arts. 2779, 2780.

As used in Emergency Price Control Act authorizing recovery of either $50 or treble damages for overcharge of rent, means each separate payment made by tenant to landlord at a specified time for use of landlord's premises, and does not mean a single right to all the payments made on a series of occasions in return for a continuous estate conveyed by landlord. Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, § 205 (e), 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix § 925 (e). Gilbert v. Thierry, D.C.Mass., 58 F. Supp. 235, 240.

Fair rent. See Fair Rent.

Fee farm rent. A rent charge issuing out of an estate in fee; a perpetual rent reserved on a conveyance of land in fee simple.

Ground rent. See Ground.

Quit rent. Certain established rents of the freeholders and ancient copyholders of manors were so called, because by their payment the tenant was free and "quit" of all other services.

Rack rent. A rent of the full annual value of the tenement or near it. 2 Bl.Comm. 43.

Rent-charge. This arises where the owner of the rent has no future interest or reversion in the land. It is usually created by deed or will, and is accompanied with powers of distress and entry.

Rent-roll. A list of rents payable to a particular person or public body.

Rent seck. Barren rent; a rent reserved by deed, but without any clause of distress. 2 Bl. Comm. 42; 3 Kent, Comm. 461. Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 114 Misc. 590, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 232.

Rent-service. This consisted of fealty, together with a certain rent, and was the only kind of rent originally known to the common law. It was so called because it was given as a compensation for the services to which the land was originally liable. Brown.

Rents of assize. The certain and determined rents of the freeholders and ancient copyholders of manors. Apparently so called because they were assized or made certain, and so distinguished from a redditus mobilis, which was a variable or fluctuating rent. 3 Cruise, Dig. 314; Brown.

Rents resolute. Rents anciently payable to the crown from the lands of abbeys and religious houses; and after their dissolution, notwithstanding that the lands were demised to others, yet the rents were still reserved and made payable again to the crown. Cowell.

RENT MUST BE RESERVED TO HIM FROM WHOM THE STATE OF THE LAND MOVETH. Co.Litt. 143.

RENTAGE. Rent.

RENTAL. (Said to be corrupted from "rent-roll.") In English law. A roll on which the rents of a manor are registered or set down, and by which the lord's bailiff collects the same. It contains the lands and tenements let to each tenant, the names of the tenants, and other particulars. Cunningham; Holthouse.

Payment received periodically for the use of property; rent.. Friedbar Realty Corporation v. Sanford, 119 Misc. 621, 198 N.Y.S. 38, 39.

Net Rental

When used with reference to real property, means a rental over and above all expenses. Perkins v. Kirby, 39 R.I. 343, 97 A. 884, 887.

Rental Bolls

In Scotch law. When the tithes (tiends) have been liquidated and settled for so many bolls of corn yearly. Bell.

Rental-Rights

In English law. A species of lease usually granted at a low rent and for life. Tenants under such leases were called "rentalers" or "kindly tenants."

Rental Value

The value of land for use for purpose for which it is adapted in the hands of a prudent occupant, In re Acquiring Lands for an Alley, 147 Minn. 211, 179 N.W. 907, 909. Fair rental value of land, but not the conjectural or probable profits thereof. Maddox v. _yocum, 109 Ind.App. 416, 31 N.E.2d 652, 655.

RENTE. In French law. The annual return which represents the revenue of a capital or of an immovable alienated. The constitution of rente is a contract by which one of the parties lends to the other a capital which he agrees not to recall, in consideration of the borrower's paying an annual interest. It is this interest which is called "rente." Duverger. The word is therefore nearly synonymous with the English "annuity."

RENTE FONCIERE. A rent which issues out of land, and it is of its essence that it be perpetual, for, if it be made but for a limited time, it is a lease. It may, however, be extinguished. Civ. Code La. art. 2780.

RENTE VIAGERE. That species of rente, the duration of which depends upon the contingency of the death of one or more persons indicated in the contract. The uncertainty of the time at which such death may happen causes the rente viagére to be included in the number of aleatory contracts. Duverger. Civ.Code La. art. 2793 defines the contract of annuity as that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon.

RENTES. In French law. Government funds. Wharton.

RENTIER. In French law. A fundholder, a person having an income from personal property. Wharton.

RENTS, ISSUES AND PROFITS. The profits arising from property generally. Rents collected by party in possession, the net profits. Phrase does not apply to rental value or value of use and occupation. People v. Gustafson, 53 Cal.App.2d 230, 127 P.2d 627, 632.

RENUNCIATION. The act by which a person abandons a right acquired without transferring it to another. McCormick v. Engstrom, 119 Kan. 698, 241 P. 685, 688.

Under the Negotiable Instruments Law the unilateral act of the holder, usually, without consideration, whereby he expresses the intention of abandoning his rights on the instrument or against one or more parties thereto. McGlynn v. Granstrom, 169 Minn. 164, 210 N.W. 892, 893. See Renounce.

RENVOI. The act of a state in summarily reconducting foreign vagabonds, criminals, etc., to the frontiers of their own state. A doctrine under which the court in resorting to a foreign law adopts the rules of the foreign law as to conflict of laws, which rules may in turn refer the court back to the law of the forum. 31 Harvard Law Rev. 523, 27 Yale Law Journal 509 and In re Tallmadge, 109 Misc. 696, 181 N.Y.S. 336, 341. Also the rule that, in a suit by a nonresident upon a cause arising locally, his capacity to sue is determined by looking to law of his domicile rather than to local law. Gray v. Gray, 87 N.H. 82, 174 A. 508, 511, 94 A.L.R. 1404.

REO ABSENTE. Lat. The defendant being absent; in the absence of the defendant.

REOPENING A CASE. Is to permit the introduction of new evidence and, practically to permit a new trial.

REORGANIZATION. Act or process of organizing again or anew. People ex rel. Barrett v. Halsted Street State Bank, 295 Ill.App. 193, 14 N.E.2d 872, 876.

As applied to corporations. The carrying out, by proper agreements and legal proceedings, of a business plan for winding up the affairs of or foreclosing a mortgage or mortgages upon the property of, insolvent corporations, more frequently railroad companies. It is usually accomplished by the judicial sale of the corporate property and franchises, and the formation by the purchasers of a new corporation. The property and franchises are thereupon vested in the new corporation and its stock and bonds are divided among such of the parties interested in the old company as are parties to the reorganization plan.

In reorganization of corporation, substantially all assets of old corporation are transferred to new, and stockholders hold same proportion of stock in new corporation. Hurst v. D. P. Davis Properties, C.C.A.Fla., 69 F.2d 333, 335.

REPAIR. To mend, remedy, restore, renovate, to restore to a sound or good state after decay, injury, dilapidation, or partial destruction. Mozingo v. Wellsburg Electric Light, Heat & Power Co., 131 S.E. 717, 718, 101 W.Va. 79; Board of Education of Hancock County v. Moorehead, 105 Ohio St. 237, 136 N.E. 913, 914; Weiss v. Mitchell, Tex. Civ.App., 58 S.W.2d 165, 166.

The word "repair" contemplates an existing structure or thing which has become imperfect, and means to supply in the original existing structure that which is lost or destroyed, and thereby restore it to the condition in which it originally existed, as near as may be. Childers v. Speer, 63 Ga.App. 848, 12 S.E.2d 439, 440.

REPAIRS. Restoration to soundness; reparation; work done to property to keep it in good order.

Necessary repairs. For which the master of a ship may lawfully bind the owner are such as are reasonably fit and proper for the ship under the circumstances, and not merely such as are absolutely indispensable for the safety of the ship or the accomplishment of the voyage. The Fortitude, 3 Sumn. 327, F.Cas.No.4,953; Webster v. Seekamp, 4 Barn. & Ald. 352.

REPARATION. The redress of an injury; amends for a wrong inflicted. Jablonowski v. Modern Cap Mfg. Co., 312 Mo. 173, 279 S.W. 89, 95.

REPARATIONE FACIENDA. For making repairs. The name of an old writ which lay in various cases; as if, for instance, there were three tenants in common of a mill or house which had fallen into decay, and one of the three was willing to repair it, and the other two not; in such case the party who was willing to repair might have this writ against the others. Cowell; Fitzh.Nat. Brev. 127.

REPARTIAMENTO. In Spanish law, a judicial proceeding for the partition of property held in common. Steinbach v. Moore, 30 Cal. 505.

REPATRIATION, The regaining nationality after expatriation.

Cleveland Ry. Co. v. City of Cleveland, 97 Ohio St. 122, 119 N.E. 202, 203.

REPAY. To pay back; refund; restore; return. Harlan Coal & Land Co. v. King Harlan Mining Co., 192 Ky. 111, 232 S.W. 650, 654.

REPEAL. The abrogation or annulling of a previously existing law by the enactment of a subsequent statute which declares that the former law shall be revoked and abrogated, (which is called "express" repeal), or which contains provisions so contrary to or irreconcilable with those of the earlier law that only one of the two statutes can stand in force, (called "implied" repeal.) Oakland Pa^{y}. Co. v. Hilton, 69 Cal. 479, 11 P. 3; Pacific Milling & Elevator Co. v. City of Portland, 65 Or. 49, 133 P. 72, 78, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 363. For "Express Repeal", see that title.

"Repeal" of a law means its complete abrogation by the enactment of a subsequent statute, whereas the "amendment" of a statute means an alteration in the law already existing, leaving some part of the original still standing. State ex inf. Crain ex rel. Peebles v. Moore, 339 Mo. 492, 99 S.W.2d 17, 19.

REPEATERS. Persons who commit crime and are sentenced, and then commit another and are sentenced again. Opolich v. Fluckey, D.C.Ga., 47 F.2d 950.

REPELLITUR EXCEPTIONE CEDENDARUM ACTIONUM. He is defeated by the plea that the actions have been assigned. Cheesebrough v. Millard, 1 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 409, 414.

REPERTORY. In French law. The inventory or minutes which notaries make of all contracts which take place before them. Merl. Repert.

REPETITION. In the civil law. A demand or action for the restoration of money paid under mistake, or goods delivered by mistake or on an unperformed condition. Dig. 12, 6. See Solutio Indebiti.

In Scotch law. The act of reading over a witness' deposition, in order that he may adhere to it or correct it at his choice. The same as recolement (q. v.) in the French law. 2 Benth.Jud.Ev. 239.

REPETITUM NAMIUM. A repeated, second, or reciprocal distress; withernam. 3 Bl.Comm. 148.

REPETUNDJE, or PECUNLE REPETUNDAZE. In Roman law. The terms used to designate such sums 'of money as the socii of the Roman state, or individuals, claimed to recover from magi& tratus, judices, or publici curatores, which they had improperly taken or received in the provincice, or in the urbs Roma, either in the discharge of their jurisdictio, or in their capacity of judices, or in respect of any other public function. Sometimes the word "repetundce" was used to express the illegal act for which compensation was sought. Wharton.

REPETUNDARUM CRIMEN. In Roman law. The crime of bribery or extortion in a magistrate, or person in any public office. Calvin.

REPLACE. To place again, to restore to a former condition. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Franklin County, 387 Ill. 301, 56 N.E.2d 775, 779.

REPLEAD. To plead anew; to file new pleadings.

REPLEADER. When, after issue has been joined in an action, and a verdict given thereon, the pleading is found (on examination) to have miscarried and failed to effect its proper object, viz., of raising an apt and material question between the parties, the court will, on motion of the unsuccessful party, award a repleader; that is, will order the parties to plead de novo for the purpose of obtaining a better issue. Brown.

Judgment of Repleader

A judgment allowed by the court to do justice between the parties where defect is in form or manner of stating the right, and the issue joined is on an immaterial point, so that court cannot tell for whom to give judgment. 1 Chit.P1. 687, 688. On the award of a repleader, the parties must recommence their pleadings at the point where the immaterial issue originated. This judgment is interlocutory, quod partes replacitent.

REPLEGIARE. To replevy; to redeem a thing detained or taken by another by putting in legal sureties.

REPLEGIARE DE AVERIIS. Replevin of cattle. A writ brought by one whose cattle were distrained, or put in the pound, upon any cause by another, upon surety given to the sheriff to prosecute or answer the action in law. Cowell.

REPLEGIARI FACIAS. You cause to be replevied. In old English law. The original writ in the action of replevin; superseded by the statute of Marlbridge, c. 21. 3 Bl.Comm. 146.

REPLETION. In canon law. Where the revenue of a benefice is sufficient to fill or occupy the whole right or title of the graduate who holds it. Wharton.

REPLEVIABLE, or REPLEVISABLE. Property is said to be repleviable or replevisable when proceedings in replevin may be resorted to for the purpose of trying the right to such property.

REPLEVIN. A personal action ex delicto brought to recover possession of goods unlawfully taken, (generally, but not only, applicable to the taking of goods distrained for rent,) the validity of which taking it is the mode of contesting, if the party from whom the goods were taken wishes to have them back in specie, whereas, if he prefer to have damages instead, the validity may be contested by action of trespass or unlawful distress. The word means a redelivery to the owner of the pledge or thing taken in distress. Wharton; Sinnott v. Feiock, 165 N.Y. 444, 59 N.E. 265, 53 L.R.A. 565, 80 Am.St.Rep. 736; Healey v. Humphrey, 81 F. 990, 27 C.C.A. 39. A local action to be brought where property is taken or where property is detained, unless statute regulates matter. Miles v. Securities Inv. Co., 171 Tenn. 417, 104 S.W.2d 823. A possessory action, and a plaintiff cannot recover on the weakness of defendant's title, but must recover on the strength of his own title. Hannibal Inv. Co. v. Schmidt, Mo.App., 113 S.W.2d 1048, 1052. Cardinal question in a replevin action is plaintiff's right to immediate possession of the property at the commencement of the action. Warren v. Driscoll, 178 Minn. 344, 227 N.W. 199, 200.

Personal Replevin

A species of action to replevy a man out of prison or out of the custody of any private person. It took the place of the old writ de homine replegiando; but, as a means of examining into the legality of an imprisonment, it is now superseded by the writ of habeas corpus.

Replevin Bond

A bond executed to indemnify the officer who executed a writ of replevin and to indemnify the defendant or person from whose custody the property was taken for such damages as he may sustain. Imel v. Van Deren, 8 Colo. 90, 5 P. 803.

REPLEVISH. In old English law. To let one to mainprise upon surety. Cowell.

REPLEVISOR. The plaintiff in an action of replevin.

REPLEVY. In reference to the action of replevin, to redeliver goods which have been distrained, to the original possessor of them, on his pledging or giving security to prosecute an action against the distrainor for the purpose of trying the legality of the distress. Also the bailing or liberating a man from prison on his finding bail to answer for his forthcoming at a future time. Brown.

REPLIANT, or REPLICANT. A litigant who replies or files or delivers a replication.

REPLICARE. Lat. In the civil law and old English pleading. To reply; to answer a defendant's plea.

REPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law and old English pleading. The plaintiff's answer to the defendant's exception or plea; corresponding with and giving name to the replication in modern pleading. Inst. 4, 14, pr.

• REPLICATION. In pleading. A reply made by the plaintiff in an action to the defendant's plea, or in a suit in chancery to the defendant's answer.

General and Special

In equity practice, a general replication is a general denial of the truth of defendant's plea or answer, and of the sufficiency of the matter alleged in it to bar the plaintiff's suit, and an assertion of the truth and sufficiency of the bill. A special replication is occasioned by the defendant's introducing new matter into his plea or answer, which makes it necessary for the plaintiff to put in issue some additional fact on his part in avoidance of such new matter. James v. Lawson, 103 W.Va. 165, 136 S.E. 851, 853.

REPLY. In its general sense, that what the plaintiff, petitioner, or other person who has instituted a proceeding says in answer to the defendant's case. Sweet. Its office is to join issue or avoid new matter in answer, and not to aid complaint by supplying omission or adding new ground of relief. Teisinger v. Hardy, 91 Mont. 9, 5 P.2d 219, 220.

On trial or argument. When a case is tried or argued in court, the speech or argument of the plaintiff in answer to that of the defendant. Under the practice of the chancery and common-law courts, to reply is to file or deliver a replication, (q. v.). Under codes of reformed procedure, the name of the pleading which corresponds to "replication" in common-law or equity practice.

Frivolous or sham reply. For the distinction between these two kinds of replies, see Frivolous.

REPONE. In Scotch practice. To replace; to restore to a former state or right. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 351.

REPORT. An official or formal statement of facts or proceedings.

The formal statement in writing made to a court by a master in chancery, a clerk, or referee, as the result of his inquiries into some matter referred to him by the court.

A "report" of a public official is distinguished from a "return" of such official, in that "return" is typically concerned with something done or observed by officer, while "report" embodies result of officer's investigation not originally occurring within his personal knowledge. E. K. Hardison Seed Co. V. Jones, C.C.A.6, 149 F.2d 252, 257.

The name is also applied (usually in the plural) to the published volumes, appearing periodically, containing accounts of the various cases argued and determined in the courts with the decisions thereon.

Lord Coke defines "report" to be "a public relation, or a bringing again to memory cases judicially argued, debated, resolved, or adjudged in any of the king's courts of justice, together with such causes and reasons as were delivered by the judges of the same." Co.Litt. 293.

REPORT FOR INDUCTION. Within the Selective Service Act, to present one's self not only at the appointed place but also in readiness to go through the process which constitutes induction into the army. 'Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, 50 U.S.C.A. Appendix § 301 et seq. Smith v. U. S., C.C.A.S.C., 148 F.2d 288, 290.

REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE. That communication which the chairman of the committee makes to the house at the close of the investigation upon which it has been engaged. Brown.

REPORT OFFICE. A department of the English court of chancery. The suitors' account there is discontinued by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, § 36.

REPORTER. A person who reports the decisions upon questions of law in the cases adjudged in the several courts of law and equity. Wharton.

REPORTS, THE. The name given, par excellence, to Lord Coke's Reports, from 14 Eliz. to 13 Jac. I., which are cited as "Rep." or "Coke." They are divided into thirteen parts, and the modern editions are in six volumes, including the index.

REPOSITION OF THE FOREST. In old English law. An act whereby certain forest grounds, being made purlieu upon view, were by a second view laid to the forest again, put back into the forest. Manwood; Cowell.

REPOSITORIUM. A storehouse or place wherein things are kept; a warehouse. Cro.Car. 555.

REPRESENT. To appear in the character of; personate; to exhibit; to expose before the eyes. To represent a thing is to produce it publicly. Dig. 10, 4, 2, 3; In re Matthews, 57 Idaho, 75, 62 P.2d 578, 580, 111 A.L.R. 13. To represent a person is to stand in his place; to supply his place; to act as his substitute. Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429, 1 P. 703; Seibert v. Dunn, 216 N.Y. 237, 110 N.E. 447, 449.

REPRESENTATION. Any conduct capable of being turned into a statement of fact. Scandrett v. Greenhouse, 244 Wis. 108, 11 N.W.2d 510, 512.

Contracts

A statement express or implied made by one of two contracting parties to the other, before or at the time of making the contract, in regard to some past or existing fact, circumstance, or state of facts pertinent to the contract, which is influential in bringing about the agreement. Fernandina Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Peters, D.C. Fla., 283 F. 621, 627; Kiser v. Richardson, 91 Kan. 812, 139 P. 373, Ann.Cas.1915D, 539.

Insurance

A collateral statement, either by writing not inserted in the policy or by parol, of such facts or circumstances, relative to the proposed adventure, as are necessary to be communicated to the underwriters, to enable them to form a just estimate of the risks. 1 Marsh.Ins. 450; Myers v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 83 W.Va. 390, 98 S.E. 424, 426. The allegation of any facts, by the applicant to the insurer, or vice versa, preliminary to making the contract, and directly bearing upon it, having a plain and evident tendency to induce the making of the policy. The statements may or may not be in writing, and may be either express or by obvious implication. Augusta Insurance & Banking Co. of Georgia v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348.

In relation to the contract of insurance, there is an important distinction between a representation and a warranty. The former, which precedes the contract of insurance, and is no part of it, need be only materially true ; the latter is a part of the contract, and must be exactly and literally fulfilled, or else the contract is broken and inoperative. Glendale Woolen Co. v. Protection Ins. Co., 21 Conn. 19, 54 Am. Dec. 309.

Law of Distribution and Descent

The principle upon which the issue of a deceased person take or inherit the share of an estate which their immediate ancestor would have taken or inherited, if living; the taking or inheriting per stirpes. 2 Bl.Comm. 217, 517; In re Paterson's Estate, Cal.App., 76 P.2d 138, 143.

Scotch Law

The name of a plea or statement presented to a lord ordinary of the court of session, when his judgment is brought under review.

General

False representation. See False Representation.

Material representation. In life insurance. One that would influence a prudent insurer in determining whether or not to accept the risk, or in fixing the amount of the premium in the event of such acceptance. Empire Life Ins. Co. v. Jones, 14 Ga.App. 647, 82 S.E. 62, 66. Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Abbot, C.C.A.Mass., 247 F. 833, 857.

Misrepresentation. An intentional false statement respecting a matter of fact, made by one of the parties to a contract, which is material to the contract and influential in producing it.

Promissory representation. A term used chiefly in insurance, and meaning a representation made by the assured concerning what is to happen during the term of the insurance, stated as a matter of expectation or even of contract, and amounting to a promise to be performed after the contract has come into existence. New Jersey Rubber Co. v. Commercial Union Assur. Co., 64 N.J.L. 580, 46 A. 777.

REPRESENTATION OF PERSONS. A fiction of the law, the effect of which is to put the representative in the place, degree, or right of the person represented. Civ.Code La. art. 894.

REPRESENTATION, ESTOPPEL BY. It arises when one by acts, representations, admissions, or silence when he ought to speak out, intentionally or through culpable negligence induces another to believe certain facts to exist and such other rightfully relies and acts on such belief, so that he will be prejudiced if the former is permitted to deny the existence of such facts. Carter v.

Curlew Creamery Co., 16 Wash.2d 476, 134 P.2d 66, '73. It differs from estoppel by record, deed, or contract, in that it is not based on agreement of parties or finding of fact which may not be disputed, and is not mutual, but applies to only one party. Bank of Canton & Trust Co. v. Clark, 198 N.C. 169, 151 S.E. 102, 104.

It is the effect of voluntary conduct of a party whereby he is absolutely precluded, from asserting rights which might perhaps have otherwise existed. Strand v. State, 16 Wash.2d 107, 132 P.2d 1011, 1015.

It is species of "equitable estoppel" or estoppel by matter in pais. Frumin v. Chazen, 153 Tenn. 1, 282 S.W. 199, 201. See, also, Equitable Estoppel and In Pais, Estoppel In.

Elements or essentials of such estoppel include change of position for the worse, Carter v. Curlew Creamery Co., 134 P.2d 66, 73, 16 Wash.2d 476; Campbell v. Salyer, 290 Ky. 493, 161 S.W.2d 596, 599; detriment or injury or prejudice to party claiming estoppel, Blaisdell Automobile Co. v. Nelson, 130 Me. 167, 154 A. 184, 186; Abbott v. Bean, 295 Mass. 268, 3 N.E.2d 762, 768; express or implied representations, Sandifer v. Sandifer's Heirs, La.App., 195 So. 118, 124; false representation, Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Sawyer, 176 Okl. 446, 56 P.2d 418, 420; Cushing v. United States, D.C.Mass., 18 F.Supp. 83, 85; ignorance of facts by party claiming estoppel, United States v. Dickinson, C.C.A.Mass., 95 F.2d 65, 68; Cain v. Rea, 159 Va. 446, 166 S.E. 478, 483, 85 A.L.R. 945; inducement to action by party claiming estoppel, Rhoads v. Rhoads, 342 Mo. 934, 119 S. W. 2d 247, 252; intent that other party should act on representation or gross and culpable negligence of party sought to be estopped, Cain v. Rea, 159 Va. 446, 166 S.E. 478, 483, 85 A.L.R. 945; Cleaveland v. Malden Sa[y]. Bank, 291 Mass. 295, 197 N.E. 14, 15; knowledge, actual or constructive, of facts by person estopped, Rhoads v. Rhoads, 342 Mo. 934, 119 S.W.2d 247, 252; misleading of person claiming estoppel, Campbell v. Salyer, 290 Ky. 493, 161 S.W.2d 596, 599; Bosen v. Larrabee, 91 N.H. 492, 23 A.2d 331, 332; reliance of one party on conduct of other party, Ouellette v. City of New York Ins. Co., 133 Me. 149, 174 A. 462, 464; Mosley v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., 45 N.M. 230, 114 P.2d 740, 751.

The doctrine ordinarily applies only to representations as to past or present facts. In re Watson's Estate, 30 N.Y. S.2d 577, 586, 177 Misc. 308.

REPRESENTATIVE. One who represents or stands in the place of another. Lee v. Dill, 39 Barb. (N.Y.) 520; Staples v. Lewis, 71 Conn. 288, 41 A. 815.

The definition of a "person" liable for treble damages for overcharges of commodity prices under the Emergency Price Control Act, means the legal successor or representative, such as a receiver, liquidator, executor, administrator, guardian or tutor, but not an agent. Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, § 302(h), 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix, § 942 (h). Husers v. Papania, La.App., 22 So.2d 755, 757.

In constitutional law, a person chosen by the people to represent their several interests in a legislative body. Macrum v. Board of Sup'rs of Suffolk County, 252 N.Y.S. 546, 143 Misc. 358.

Legal Representative

See that title.

Personal Representatives

Executors and administrators of person deceased; but it may have a wider meaning, according to the intention of the person using it, and may include heirs, next of kin, descendants, assignees, grantees, receivers, and trustees in insolvency. In re Wilcox & Howe Co., 70 Conn. 220, 39 A. 163; Shiya v. Erickson, 156 Misc. 738, 282 N.Y.S. 812. See, also, Real Representative, infra.

Real Representative

He who represents or stands in the place of another, with respect to his real property, is so termed, in contradistinction to him who stands in the place of another, with regard to his personal property, and who is termed the "personal representative." Thus the heir is the real representative of his deceased ancestor. Brown.

Representative Action or Suits

See Class or Representative Action.

Representative Democracy

A form of government where the powers of the sovereignty are delegated to a body of men, elected from time to time, who exercise them for the benefit of the whole nation. 1 Bouv.Inst. no. 31.

Representative Peers

Those who, at the commencement of every new parliament, are elected to represent Scotland and Ireland in' the British house of lords; sixteen for the former and twenty-eight for the latter country. Brown.

REPRIEVE. In criminal law. The withdrawing of a sentence of death for an interval of time, whereby the execution is suspended. 4 B1.Comm. 394. Sterling v. Drake, 29 Ohio St. 460, 23 Am. Rep. 762; Gore v. Humphries, 163 Ga. 106, 135 S. E. 481, 485.

Also the withdrawing of any sentence for a period of time. Ex parte Dormitzer, 119 Or. 336, 249 P. 639, 640.

It does no more than stay the execution of a sentence for a time, and it is ordinarily an act of clemency extended to a prisoner to afford him an opportunity to procure some amelioration of the sentence imposed. Palka v. Walker, 124 Conn. 121, 198 A. 265, 267. It cannot be granted until after sentence. State ex rel. Gordon v. Zangerle, 136 Ohio St. 371, 26 N.E.2d 190, 194.

REPRIMAND. A public and formal censure or severe reproof, administered to a person in fault by his superior officer or by a body to which he belongs. Thus, a member of a legislative body may be reprimanded by the presiding officer, in pursuance of a vote of censure, for improper conduct in the house. So a military officer, in some cases, is punished by a reprimand administered by his commanding officer, or by the secretary of war.

REPRISALS. The forcible taking by one nation of a thing that belonged to another, in return or satisfaction for an injury committed by the latter on the former. Vattel, b. 2, c. 18, s. 342.

General Reprisals

Take place by virtue of commissions delivered to officers and citizens of the aggrieved state, directing them to take the persons and property belonging to the offending state wherever found.

Negative Reprisals

Take place when a nation refuses to fulfil a perfect obligation which it has contracted, or to permit another state to enjoy a right which it justly claims.

Positive Reprisals

Consist in seizing the persons and effects belonging to the other nation, in order to obtain satisfaction.

Special Reprisals

Such as are granted in times of peace to particular individuals who have suffered an injury from the citizens or subjects of the other nation.

REPRISES. In English law. Deductions and duties which are yearly paid out of a manor and lands, as rent-charge, rent seck, pensions, corrodies, annuities, etc., so that, when the clear yearly value of a manor is spoken of, it is said to be so much per annum ultra reprisas,—besides all reprises. Cowell. Delaware & H. Canal CO. v. Von Storch, 196 Pa. 102, 46 A. 375.

REPROBATA PECUNIA LIBERAT SOLVENTEM. Money refused [the refusal of money tendered] releases him who pays, [or tenders it.] 9 Coke, 79a.

REPROBATION. In ecclesiastical law. The interposition of objections or exceptions; as to the competency of witnesses, to the due execution of instruments offered in evidence and the like.

REPROBATOR, ACTION OF. In Scotch law. An action or proceeding intended to convict a, witness of perjury, to which the witness must be made a party. Bell.

REP-SILVER. In old records. Money paid by servile tenants for exemption from the customary duty of reaping for the lord. Cowell.

REPUBLIC. A commonwealth; that form of government in which the administration of affairs is open to all the citizens. In another sense, it signifies the state, independently of its form of government. 1 Toullier 28 and n., 202, note; State v. Harris, 2 Bailey (S.C.) 599; Co.Litt. 303.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT. A government in the republican form; a government of the people; a government by representatives chosen by the people. In re Duncan, 11 S.Ct. 573, 139 U.S. 449, 35 L.Ed. 219; Kadderly v. Portland, 44 Or. 118, 74 P. 710.

REPUBLICATION. The re-execution or re-establishment by a testator of a will which he had once revoked. A second publication of a will, either expressly or by construction. For "Express Republication," see that title.

REPUDIATE. To put away, reject, disclaim, or renounce a right, duty, obligation, or privilege.

REPUDIATION. Rejection; disclaimer; renunciation; the rejection or refusal of an offered or available right or privilege, or of a duty or relation. Iowa State Say. Bank v. Black, 59 N.W. 283, 91 Iowa, 490; Daley v. Saving Ass'n, 178 Mass. 13, 59 N.E. 452.

Repudiation of contract is in nature of anticipatory breach before performance is due, but does not operate as anticipatory breach unless promisee elects to treat repudiation as breach, and brings suit for damages. Such repudiation is but act or declaration in advance of any actual breach and consists usually of absolute and unequivocal declaration or act amounting to declaration on part of promisor to promisee that he will not make performance on future day at which contract calls for performance. Robinson v. Raquet, 1 Cal.App.2d 533, 36 P.2d 821, 825.

The refusal on the part of a state or government to pay its debts, or its declaration that its obligations, previously contracted, are no longer regarded by it as of binding force.

In the civil law. The casting off or putting away of a woman betrothed; also, but less usually, of a wife; divorcement.

In ecclesiastical law. The refusal to accept a benefice which has been conferred upon the party repudiating.

REPUDIUM. Lat. In Roman law. A breaking off of the contract of espousals, or of a marriage intended to be solemnized. Sometimes translated "divorce;" but this was not the proper sense. Dig. 50, 16, 191.

REPUGNANCY. An inconsistency, opposition, or contrariety between two or more clauses of the same deed, contract, or statute, or between two or more material allegations of the same pleading, or any two writings. Lehman v. U. S., C.C. A.N.Y., 127 F. 45, 61 C.C.A. 577; Swan v. U. S., 9 P. 931, 3 Wyo. 151; Hansen v. Bacher, Tex.Com. App., 299 S.W. 225, 226.

REPUGNANT. That which is contrary to what is stated before, or insensible. A repugnant condition is void. Groenendyk v. Fowler, 204 Iowa, 598, 215 N.W. 718, 720.

REPUTABLE. Worthy of repute or distinction, held in esteem, honorable, praiseworthy. Illinois State Board of Dental Examiners v. People, 123 Ill. 245, 13 N.E. 201.

REPUTABLE CITIZEN. One who is well spoken of by his neighbors and hence presumably of good character. H. L. Shaffer & Co. v. Prosser, 99 Colo. 335, 62 P.2d 1161, 1163.

REPUTATIO EST VULGARIS OPINIO UBI NON EST VERITAS. ET VULGARIS OPINIO EST DUPLEX, SCIL.: OPINIO VULGARIS ORTA INTER GRAVES ET DISCRETOS HOMINES, ET QUIE VULTUM VERITATIS HABET; ET OPINIO TANTUM ORTA INTER LEVES ET VULGARES HOMINES, ABSQUE SPECIE VERITATIS. Reputation is common opinion where there is not truth. And common opinion is of two kinds, to-wit: Common reputation arising among grave and sensible men, and which has the appearance of truth; and mere opinion arising among foolish and ignorant men, without any appearance of truth. 4 Coke, 107.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, the character imputed to a person in the neighborhood where he lives. State v. Baldanzo, 106 N.J.L. 498, 148 A. 725, 726, 67 A.L.R. 1207. General opinion, good or bad, held of a person by those of the community in which he yesides. State v. Kiziah, 217 N.C. 399, 8 S.E.2d 474, 477; Citizens Bank of Morehead v. Hunt, 287 Ky. 646, 154 S.W. 2d 730, 731; it is necessarily based upon hearsay. Stewart v. State, 148 Tex.Cr.App. 480, 188 S.W. 2d 167, 170.

"Character" is made up of the things an individual actually is and does whereas ."reputation" is what people think an individual is and what they say about him. McNaulty v. State, 138 Tex.Cr.R. 317, 135 S.W.2d 987, 989; James v. State, ex rel. Loser, 24 Tenn. App. 453, 145 S.W.2d 1026, 1033.

In the law of evidence, matters 6f public and general interest, such as the boundaries of counties or towns, rights of common, claims of highway, etc., are allowed to be proved by general reputation; e. g., by the declaration of deceased persons made ante litem motam, by old documents, etc., notwithstanding the general rule against secondary evidence. Best, Ev. 632.

REPUTED. Accepted by general, vulgar, or public opinion. Thus, land may be reputed part of a manor, though not really so, and a certain district may be reputed a parish or a manor, or be a parish or a manor in reputation, although it is in reality no parish or manor at all. Brown; Lowell Hardware Co. v. May, 59 Colo. 475, 149 P. 831, 833.

REPUTED OWNER. See Owner.

REQUEST, v. To ask for something or for permission or authority to do, see, hear, etc., something; to solicit; and is synonymous with beg, entreat, and beseech. Artificial Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Martin, 102 Ind.App. 74, 198 N.E. 446, 449.

In its ordinary or natural meaning when used in a will, is precatory and not mandatory. Byars v. Byars, 143 Tex. 10, 182 S.W.2d 363, 364, 366.

REQUEST, n. An asking or petition; the expression of a desire to some person for something to be granted or done; particularly for the payment of a debt or performance of a contract; also direction or command in law of wills. Beakey v. Knutson, 90 Or. 574, 174 P. 1149, 1150; Hurley-Tobin Co. v. White, 84 N.J.Eq. 60, 188, 94 A. 52, 53. For "Express Request," see that title.

The two words, "request" and "require," as used in notices to creditors to present claims against an estate, are of the same origin, and virtually synonymous. Prentice v. Whitney, 8 Hun, N.Y., 300.

Pleading

The statement in the plaintiff's declaration that the particular payment or performance, the failure of which constitutes the cause of action, was duly requested or demanded of the defendant.

General

Request, letters of. In English law. Many suits are brought before the Dean of the Arches as original judge, the cognizance of which properly belongs to inferior jurisdictions within the province, but in respect of which the inferior judge has waived his jurisdiction under a certain form of proceeding known ih the canon law by the denomination of "letters of request." 3 Steph. Comm. 306.

Request note. In English law. A note requesting permission to remove dutiable goods from one place to another without paying the excise.

Requests, courts of. See Courts of Requests.

Special request. A request actually made, at a particular time and place. This term is used in contradistinction to a general request, which need not state the time when nor place where made. 3 Bouv.Inst. no. 2843.

REQUIRE. To direct, order, demand, instruct, command, claim, compel, request, need, exact. Beakey v. Knutson, 90 Or. 574, 174 P. 1149, 1150. Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Page, 65 Okl. 101, 164 P. 116, 117, L.R.A.1918C, 1; State ex rel. Frohmiller v. Hendrix, 59 Ariz. 184, 124 P.2d 768, 773.

REQUIREMENT CONTRACT. A contract in writing whereby one agrees to buy, for a sufficient consideration, all the merchandise of a designated type which the buyer may require for use in his own established business. Such contract is not void for uncertainty. Fuchs v. United Motor Stage Co., 135 Ohio St. 509, 21 N.E.2d 669, 672.

REQUISITION. A demand in writing, or formal request or requirement. Atwood v. Charlton, 21 RI. 568, 45 A. 580.

The taking or seizure of property by government. Benedict v. U. S., D.C.N.Y., 271 F. 714.

In international law. The formal demand by one government upon another, or by the governor of one of the United States upon the governor of a sister state, of the surrender of a fugitive criminal.

In Scotch law. A demand made by a creditor that a debt be paid or an obligation fulfilled. Bell.

REQUISITIONS ON TITLE, in English conveyancing, are written inquiries made by the solicitor of an intending purchaser of land, or of any estate or interest therein, and addressed to the vendor's solicitor, in respect of some apparent insufficiency in the abstract of title. Mozley & Whitley.

REREFIEFS. In Scotch law. Inferior fiefs; portions of a fief or feud granted out to inferior tenants. 2 Bl.Comm. 57.

RERUM ORDO CONFUNDITUR SI UNICUIQUE JURISDICTIO NON SERVETUR. 4 Inst. Proem. The order of things is confounded if every one preserve not his jurisdiction.

RERUM PROGRESSUS OSTENDUNT MULTA, QUAZE IN INITIO PRIECAVERI SEU PRIEVIDERI NON POSSUNT. 6 Coke, 40. The progress of events shows many things which, at the beginning, could not be guarded against or foreseen.

RERUM SUARUM QUILIBET EST MODERATOR ET ARBITER. Every one is the regulator and disposer of his own property. Co.Litt. 223a.

RES. Lat. In the civil law. A thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. Inst. 2, 1, pr. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. 3 Inst. 182- Bract. fol. 7b. By "res," according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to "persona," which is regarded as a subject of rights. "Res," therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 146. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes, that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions. Inst. 1, 2, 12.

In modern usage, the term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as the object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is "the res." And proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In Personam; In Rem.) "Res" may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled "In re _____

Classification

Things (res) have been variously divided and classified in law, e. g., in the following ways: (1) Corporeal and incorporeal things; (2) movables and immovables; (3) res mancipi and res nec mancipi; (4) things real and things personal; (5) things in possession and choses (i. e., things) in action; (6) fungible things and things not fungible, (fungibiles vel non fungibiles;) and (7) res singulce (i. e., individual objects) and universitates rerum, (i. e., aggregates of things.) Also persons are for some purposes and in certain respects regarded as things. Brown.

General

Res accessoria. In the civil law. An accessory thing; that which belongs to a principal thing, or is in connection with it.

Res adiratee. The gist of the old action for res adiratce was the fact that the plaintiff had lost his goods, that they had come into the hands of the defendant, and that the defendant, on request, refused to give them up. 3 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 275.

Res adjudicata. A common but indefensible misspelling of res judicata. The latter term designates a point or question or subject-matter which was in controversy or dispute and has been authoritatively and finally settled by the decision of a court; that issuable fact once legally determined is conclusive as between parties in same action or subsequent proceeding. Tiffany Production of California v. Superior Court of California for Los Angeles County, 131 Cal.App. 729, 22 P. 2d 275.

Res adjudicata (if there be such a term) could only mean an article or subject of property "awarded to" a. given person by the judgment of a court, which might perhaps be the case in replevin and similar actions.

Res caduca. In the civil law. A fallen or escheated thing; an escheat. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 9, no. 60.

Res communes. In the civil law. Things common to all; that is, those things which are used and enjoyed by every one, even in single parts, but can never be exclusively acquired as a whole, e. g., light and air. Inst. 2, 1, 1; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 169.

Res controversa. In the civil law. A matter controverted; a matter in controversy; a point in question; a question for determination. Calvin.

Res coronae. In old English law. Things of the crown; such as ancient manors, homages of the king, liberties, etc. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 6, § 3.

Res corporales. In the civil law. Corporeal things; things which can be touched, or are perceptible to the senses. Dig. 1, 8, 1, 1; inst. 2, 2; Bract. fols. 7b, 10b, 13b.

Res derelicta. Abandoned property; property thrown away or forsaken by the owner, so as to become open to the acquisition of the first taker or occupant. Rhodes v. Whitehead, 27 Tex. 313, 84 Am.Dec. 631.

Res fungibiles. In the civil law. Fungible things, things of such a nature that they can be replaced by equal quantities and qualities when returning a loan or delivering goods purchased, for example, so many bushels of wheat or so many dollars; but a particular horse or a particular jewel would not be of this character.

Res furtivie. In Scotch law. Goods which have been stolen. Bell.

Res gestoe. Things done. McClory v. Schneider, Tex.Civ.App., 51 S.W.2d 738, 741. Those circumstances which are the automatic and undesigned incidents of a particular litigated act, which may be separated from act by lapse of time more or less appreciable, and which are admissible when illustrative of such act. The whole of the transaction under investigation and every part of it. Res gestEe is considered as an exception to the hearsay rule. In its operation it renders acts and declarations which constitute a part of the things done and said admissible in evidence, even though they would otherwise come within the rule excluding hearsay evidence or self-serving declarations. The rule is extended to include, not only declarations by the parties to the suit, but includes statements made by bystanders and strangers, under certain circumstances. Edwards v. West Texas Hospital, Tex.Civ.App., 89 S.W.2d 801, 809; Slayback Van Order Co. v. Eiben, 177 A. 671, 673, 115 N.J.L. 17. For evidence to be admissible as res gestfe, there must be an act in itself admissible in the case independently of the declaration that accompanies it; a declaration uttered simultaneously, or almost simultaneously, with the occurrence of the act; and the explanation of the act by what is said when it happens. Staley v. Royal Pines Park, 202 N.C. 155, 162 S.E. 202, 203.

Test as to whether declaration is part of res Best a depends on whether declaration was facts talking through party or party talking about facts. Batchelor v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 196 N.C. 84, 144 S.E. 542, 544, 60 A.L.R. 1091.

"Res gestae", while often spoken of as an exception to the hearsay rule, is generally not such in fact but ordinarily it relates to statements which because of their intimate relation to facts become a part of those facts and are therefore admitted as such. Industrial Commission of Colorado v. Fotis, 112 Colo. 423, 149 P.2d 657, 659.

Res habiles. In the civil law, things which are prescriptible; things to which a lawful title may be acquired by ordinary prescription.

Res immobiles. In the civil law. Immovable things; including land and that which is connected therewith, either by nature or art, such as trees and buildings. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 160.

Res incorporales. In the civil law. Incorporeal things; things which cannot be touched; such as those things which consist in right. Inst. 2, 2; Bract. fols. 7b, 10b. Such things as the mind alone can perceive.

Res integra. A whole thing; a new or unopened thing. The term is applied to those points of law which have not been decided, which are untouched by dictum or decision. 3 Mer. 269.

Res inter alios acta. A thing done between others, or between third parties or strangers. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Schmitz, 211 Ill. 446, 71 N.E. 1050.

Res ipsa loquitur. The thing speaks for itself. Rebuttable presumption that defendant was negligent, which arises upon proof that instrumentality causing injury was in defendant's exclusive control, and that the accident was one which ordinarily does not happen in absence of negligence. Sliwowski v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., '94 Conn. 303, 108 A. 805, 807; Poth v. Dexter Horton Estate, 140 Wash. 272, 248 P. 374, 375; Pearson v. Butts, 224 Iowa 376, 276 N.W. 65, 67.

Res judicata. A matter adjudged; a thing judicially acted upon or decided; a thing or matter settled by judgment. A phrase of the civil law, constantly quoted in the books. Epstein v. Soskin, 86 Misc.Rep. 94, 148 N.Y.S. 323, 324; Rule that final judgment or decree on merits by court of competent jurisdiction is conclusive of rights of parties or their privies in all later suits on points and matters determined in former suit. American S. S. Co. v. Wickwire Spencer Steel Co., D.C.N.Y., 8 F.Supp. 562, 566. And to be applicable, requires identity in thing sued for as well as identity of cause of action, of persons and parties to action, and of quality in persons for or against whom claim is made. Freudenreich v. Mayor and Council of Borough of Fairview, 114 N.J.L. 290, 176 A. 162, 163. The sum and substance of the whole rule is that a matter once judicially decided is finally decided. Massie v. Paul, 263 Ky. 183, 92 S. W.2d 11, 14. See, also, Res Adjudicata, supra.

Estoppel and res judicata distinguished. See Estoppel.

Res litigiosa. In Roman law, things which are in litigation; property or rights which constitute the subject-matter of a pending action.

Res mancipi. See Mancipi Res.

Res mobiles. In the civil law. Movable things; things which may be transported from one place to another, without injury to their substance and form. Things corresponding with the chattels personal of the common law. 2 Kent, Comm. 347.

Res nova. A new matter; a new case; a question not before decided.

Res nullius. The property of nobody. A thing which has no owner, either because a former owner has finally abandoned it, or because it has never been appropriated by any person, or because (in the Roman law) it is not susceptible of private ownership.

Res periit domino. A phrase used to express that, when a thing is lost or destroyed, it is lost to the person who was the owner of it at the time. Broom, Max. 238.

Res privates. In the civil law. Things the property of one or more individuals. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 157.

Res publica. Things belonging to the public; public property; such as the sea, navigable rivers, highways, etc.

Res quotidiana. Every-day matters; familiar points or questions.

Res religiosm. Things pertaining to religion. In Roman law, especially, burial-places, which were regarded as sacred, and could not be the subjects of commerce.

Res sacra. In the civil law. Sacred things. Things consecrated by the pontiffs to the service of God; such as sacred edifices, and gifts or offerings. Inst. 2, 1, 8. Chalices, crosses, censers. Bract. fol. 8.

Res sancta. In the civil law. Holy things; such as the walls and gates of a city. Inst. 2, 1, 10. Walls were said to be holy, because any offense against them was punished capitally. Bract. fol. 8.

Res universitatis. In the civil law. Things belonging to a community, (as, to a municipality,) the use and enjoyment of which, according to their proper purpose, is free to every member of the community, but which cannot be appropriated to the exclusive use of any individual; such as the public buildings, streets, etc. Inst. 2, 1, 6; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 770.

RES ACCENDENT LUMINA REBUS. One thing throws light upon others. Odgen v. Gibbons, 4 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 149.

RES ACCESSORIA SEQUITUR REM PRINCIPALEM. Broom, Max. 491. The accessory follows the principal.

RES DENOMINATUR' A PRINCIPALI PARTE. 9 Coke, 47. The thing is named from its principal part.

RES EST MISERA UBI JUS EST VAGUM ET INCERTUM. 2 Salk. 512. It is a wretched state of things when law is vague and mutable.

RES GENERALEM HABET SIGNIFICATIONEM QUIA TAM CORPOREA QUAM INCORPOREA CUJUSCUNQUE SUNT GENERIS, NATURIE, SIVE SPECIE!, COMPREHENDIT. 3 Inst. 182. The word "thing" has a general signification, because it comprehends corporeal and incorporeal objects, of whatever nature, sort, or species.

RES INTER ALIOS ACTA ALTERI NOCERE NON DEBET. Things done between strangers ought not to injure those who are not parties to them. Co.Litt. 132; Broom, Max. 954, 967.

RES INTER ALIOS JUDICATIE NULLUM ALIOS PRIEJUDICIUM FACIUNT. Matters adjudged in a cause do not prejudice those who were not parties to it. Dig. 44, 2, 1.

RES QUIE INTRA PRIESIDIA PERDUCTIE NONDUM SUNT, QUANQUAM AB HOSTIBUS OCCUPATZE, IDEO POSTLIMINII NON EGENT, QUIA DOMINUM NONDUM MUTURUNT EX GENTIUM JURE. Things which have not yet been introduced within the enemy's lines, although held by the enemy, do not need the fiction of postliminy on this account, because their ownership by, the law of nations has not yet changed. Gro, de Jure B. 1. 3, c. 9, § 16; Id. 1. 3, c. 6, § 3.

RES SACRA NON RECIPIT IESTIMATIONEM. A sacred thing does not admit of valuation: Dig. 1, 8, 9, 5.

RES SUA NEMINI SERVIT. 4 Macq.H.L.Cas. 151. No one can have a servitude over his own property.

RES TRANSIT CUM SUO ONERE. The thing passes with its burden. Where a thing has been incumbered by mortgage, the incumbrance follows it wherever it goes. Bract, fols. 47b, 48.

RESALE. Where a person who has sold goods or other property to a purchaser sells them again to some one else. Sometimes a vendor reserves the right of reselling if the purchaser commits default in payment of the purchase money, and in some cases (e. g., on a sale of perishable articles) the vendor may do so without having reserved the right. Sweet.

RESCEIT. In old English practice. An admission or receiving a third person to plead his right in a cause formerly commenced between two others; as, in an action by tenant for life or years, he in the reversion might come in and pray to be received to defend the land, and to plead with the demandant. Cowell.

RESCEIT OF HOMAGE. The lord's receiving homage of his tenant at his admission to the land. Kitch. 148.

RESCIND. To abrogate, annul, avoid, or cancel a contract; particularly, nullifying a contract by the act of a party. Vaughn v. Fey, 47 Cal.App. 485, 190 P. 1041, 1042; Pearson v. Brown, 27 Cal. App. 125, 148 P. 956, 958. To declare a contract void in its inception and to put an end to it as though it never were. Russell v. Stephens, 191 Wash. 314, 71 P.2d 30, 31. Not merely to terminate it and release parties from further obligations to each other but to abrogate it from the beginning and restore parties to relative positions which they would have occupied had no contract ever been made. Wall v. Zynda, 283 Mich. 260, 278 N.W. 66, 68, 114 A.L.R. 1521; Sylvania Industrial Corporation v. Lilienfeld's Estate, C.C.A.Va., 132 F.2d 887, 892, 145 A.L.R. 612.

RESCISSIO. Lat. In the civil law. An annulling; avoiding, or making void; abrogation; rescission. Cod. 4, 44.

In Spanish law, nullity is divided into absolute and relative. The former is that which arises from a law, whether civil or criminal, the principal motive for which is the public interest; and the latter is that which affects only certain individuals. "Nullity" is not to be confounded with "rescission." Nullity takes place when the act is affected by a radical vice, which prevents it from producing any effect; as where an act is in con traventioR of the laws or of good morals, or where it has been executed by a person who cannot be supposed to have any will, as a child under the age of seven years, or a madman, (un nino demente.) Rescission is where an act, valid in appearance, nevertheless conceals a defect, which may make it null, if demanded by any of the parties; as, for example, mistake, force, fraud, deceit, want of sufficient age, etc. Nullity relates generally to public order, and cannot therefore be made good either by ratification or prescription; so that the tribunals ought, for this reason alone, to decide that the null act can have no effect, without stopping to inquire whether the parties to it have or have not received any injury. Rescission, on the contrary, may be made good by ratification or by the silence of the parties ; and neither of the parties can demand it, unless he can prove that he has received some prejudice or sustained some damage by the act. Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 281, citing Escriche.

RESCISSION OF CONTRACT. Annulling or abrogation or unmaking of contract and the placing of the parties to it in status quo. Sessions v. Meadows, 13 Cal.App.2d 748, 57 P.2d 548, 549. Runde v. O'Brian, 214 Iowa 921, 243 N.W. 594, 595. It necessarily involves a repudiation of the contract and a refusal of the moving party to be further bound by it. Wall v. Zynda, 283 Mich. 260, 278 N.W. 66, 68, 114 A.L.R. 1521.

RESCISSORY ACTION. In Scotch law. One to rescind or annul a deed or contract.

RESCOUS. Rescue. The taking back by force goods which had been taken under a distress, or the violently taking away a man who is under arrest, and setting him at liberty, or otherwise procuring his escape, are both so denominated. This was also the name of a writ which lay in cases of rescue. Co.Litt. 160; 3 Bl.Comm. 146; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 100; 6 Mees. & W. 564.

RESCRIPT. In canon law. A term including any form of apostolical letter emanating from the pope. The answer of the pope in writing. Dict. Droit Can.

At common law. A counterpart, duplicate, or copy.

In American law. A written order from the court to the clerk, giving directions concerning the further disposition of a case. Pub.St.Mass. p. 1295. The written statement by an appellate court of its decision in a case, with the reasons therefor, sent down to the trial court.

In the civil law. A species of imperial constitutions, being the answers of the prince in individual cases, chiefly given in response to inquiries by parties in relation to litigated suits, or to inquiries by the judges, and which became rules for future litigated or doubtful legal questions. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 46.

RESCRIPTION. In French law. A letter by which one requests some one to pay a certain sum of money, or to account for him to a third person for it. Poth. Cont. de Change, no. 225.

RESCRIPTUM. Lat. In the civil law. A species of imperial constitution, in the form of an answer to some application or petition; a rescript. Calvin.

RESCUE. At common law. Forcibly and knowingly freeing another from arrest or imprisonment without any effort by prisoner to free himself. Merrill v. State, 42 Ariz. 341, 26 P.2d 110. The unlawfully or forcibly taking back goods which have been taken under a distress for rent, damage feasant, etc. Hamlin v. Mack, 33 Mich. 108.

In admiralty and maritime law. The deliverance of property taken as prize, out of the hands of the captors, either when the captured party retake it by their own efforts, or when, pending the pursuit or struggle, the party about to be overpowered receive reinforcements, and so escape capture.

RESCUE DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine, one injured in voluntary attempt to rescue a person whose life is imperiled by negligence of another may recover from the negligent person if the attempted rescue be not an act of extreme recklessness. Rovinski v. Rowe, C.C.A.Mich., 131 F.2d 687, 692, 693.

RESCUSSOR. In old English law. A rescuer; one who commits a rescous. Cro.Jac. 419; Cowell.

RESCYT. L. Fr. Resceit; receipt; the receiving or harboring a felon, after the commission of a crime. Britt. c. 23.

RESEALING WRIT. In English law. The second sealing of a writ by a master so as to continue it, or to cure it of an irregularity.

RESERVANDO. Reserving. In old conveyancing. An apt word of reserving a rent. Co.Litt. 47a.

RESERVATIO NON DEBET ESSE DE PROFICUIS IPSIS, QUIA EA CONCEDUNTUR, SED DE REDITU NOVO EXTRA PROFICUA. A reservation ought not to be of the profits themselves, because they are granted, but from the new rent, apart from the profits. Co.Litt. 142.

RESERVATION. A clause in a deed or other instrument of conveyance by which the grantor creates, and reserves to himself, some right, interest, or profit in the estate granted, which had no previous existence as such, but is first called into being by the instrument reserving it; such as rent, or an easement. In re Narragansett Indians, 20 R.I. 715, 40 A. 347; Smith v. Cornell University, 21 Misc. 220, 45 N.Y.S. 640; Johnson v. Peck, 90 Utah 544, 63 P.2d 251.

For exception and reservation distinguished, see Exception.

Public Land Laws of the United States

A reservation is a tract of land, more or less considerable in extent, which is by public authority withdrawn from sale or settlement, and appropriated to specific public uses; such as parks, military posts, Indian lands, etc. Jackson v. Wilcox, 2 Ill. 344; Meehan v. Jones, C.C.Minn., 70 F. 455.

Practice

The reservation of a point of law is the act of the trial court in setting it aside for future consideration, allowing the trial to proceed meanwhile as if the question had been settled one way, but subject to alteration of the judgment in case the court in banc should decide it differently.

RESERVE, v. To keep back, to retain, to keep in store for future or special use, and to retain or hold over to a future time. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Strong Mfg. Co., C.C.A.6, 124 F. 2d 360, 363.

RESERVE, n. In insurance law. A sum of money, variously computed or estimated, which, with accretions from interest, is set aside as a fund with which to mature or liquidate by payment or reinsurance with other companies future unaccrued and contingent claims, and claims accrued but contingent and indefinite as to amount or time of payment. Royal Highlanders v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 138 F.2d 240, 242, 244.

RESERVED LAND. Public land that has been withheld or kept back from sale or disposition. Donley v. Van Horn, 49 Cal.App. 383, 193 P. 514, 516.

RESET. The receiving or harboring an outlawed person. Cowell.

Reset of Theft

In Scotch law. The receiving and keeping stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen, with a design of feloniously retaining them from the real owner. Alis. Crim. Law, 328.

RESETTER. In Scotch law. A receiver of stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen.

RESETTLEMENT. The reopening of an order or decree for the purpose of including therein some recital or provision which should have been included and was initially omitted through inadvertence. In re Bartlett's Will, 299 N.Y.S. 316, 317, 164 Misc. 524.

RESIANCE. Residence, abode, or continuance.

RESIANT. In old English law. Continually dwelling or abiding in a place; resident; a resident. Kitchin, 33; Cowell.

RESIANT ROLLS. Those containing the resiants in a tithing, etc., which are to be called over by the steward on holding courts leet.

RESIDE. Live, dwell, abide, sojourn, stay, remain, lodge. Western-Knapp Engineering Co. v. Gilbank, C.C.A.Cal., 129 F.2d 135, 136.

RESIDENCE. A factual place of abode. Living in a particular locality. Reese v. Reese, 179 Misc. 665, 40 N.Y.S.2d 468, 472; Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 175 Or. 585, 155 P.2d 293, 295. It requires only bodily presence as an inhabitant of a place. In re Campbell's Guardianship, 216 Minn. 113, 11 N.W.2d 786, 789.

As "domicile" and "residence" are usually in the same place, they are frequently used as if they had the same meaning, but they are not identical terms, for a person may have two places of residence, as in the city and country, but only one domicile. Residence means living in a particular locality, but domicile means living in that locality with intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Residence simply requires bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place, while domicile requires bodily presence in that place and also an intention to make it one's domicile. In re Riley's Will, 266 N.Y.S. 209, 148 Misc. 588. "Residence" demands less intimate local ties than "domicile," but "domicile" allows absence for indefinite period if intent to return remains. Immigration Act 1917, § 3, 8 U.S.C.A. § 136 (e, p). Transatlantica Italiana v. Elting, C.C.A.N.Y., 74 F.2d, 732, 733. But see, Ward v. Ward, 115 W.Va. 429, 176 S.E. 708, 709; Southwestern Greyhound Lines v. Craig, 182 Okl. 610, 80 P.2d 221, 224; holding that residence and domicile are synonymous terms. "Residence" has a meaning dependent on context and purpose of statute. In re Jones, 341 Pa. 329, 19 A.2d 280, 282. Words "residence" and "domicile"- may have an identical or variable meaning depending on subject-matter and context of statute. Kemp v. Kemp, 16 N.Y.S.2d 26, 34, 172 Misc. 738.

Legal residence. See Legal.

RESIDENT. One who has his residence in a place. See Residence.

Also a tenant, who was obliged to reside on his lord's land, and not to depart from the same; called, also, "homme levant et couchant," and in Normandy, "resseant du fief."

RESIDENT FREEHOLDER. A person who resides in the particular place (town, city, county, etc.) and who owns an estate in lands therein amounting at least to a freehold interest. Campbell v. Moran, 71 Neb. 615, 99 N.W. 499.

RESIDENT MINISTER. In international law. A public minister who resides at a foreign court. Resident ministers are ranked in the third class of public ministers. Wheat. Int. Law, 264, 267.

RESIDUAL. Relating to the residue; relating to the part remaining.

RESIDUARY. Pertaining to the residue; constituting the residue; giving or bequeathing the residue; receiving or entitled to the residue. In re Kent's Will, 169 App.Div. 388, 155 N.Y.S. 894, 897.

RESIDUARY ACCOUNT. In English practice. The account which every executor and administrator, after paying the debts and particular legacies of the deceased, and before paying over the residuum, must pass before the board of inland revenue. Mozley & Whitley.

RESIDUARY BEQUEST. A bequest of all of testator's estate not otherwise effectually disposed of. In re Dolan's Estate, Sur., 21 N.Y.S.2d 464 466.

RESIDUARY CLAUSE. Clause in will by which that part of property is disposed of which remains after satisfying bequests and devises. Sanborn v. Sanborn, 14 N.J.Misc. 260, 184 A. 400, 402.

RESIDUARY DEVISE AND DEVISEE. See Devise.

RESIDUARY ESTATE. That which remains after debts and expenses of administration, legacies, and devises have been satisfied. Nichols v. Swickard, 211 Iowa 957, 234 N.W. 846, 847. It consists of all that has not been legally disposed of by will, other than by residuary clause. In re Cushman's Estate, 257 N.Y.S. 582, 586, 143 Misc. 432.

RESIDUARY LEGACY. See Legacy.

RESIDUARY LEGATEE. See Legatee.

RESIDUE. The surplus of a testator's estate remaining after all the debts and particular legacies have been discharged. 2 Bl.Comm. 514; In re Hamlin, 185 App.Div. 153, 172 N.Y.S. 787, 790; In re Brown v. Hilleary, 147 Or. 185, 32 P.2d 584, 587.

RESIDUUM. That which remains after any process of separation or deduction; a residue or balance. That which remains of a decedent's estate, after debts have been paid and legacies deducted. United States Trust Co. v. Black, 30 N.Y.S. 453, 9 Misc. 653.

RESIGNATIO EST JURIS PROPRII SPONTANEA REFUTATIO. Resignation is a spontaneous relinquishment of one's own right. Godb. 284.

RESIGNATION. Formal renouncement or relinquishment of an office. Steingruber v. City of San Antonio, Tex.Com.App., 220 S.W. 77, 78. It must be made with intention of relinquishing the office accompanied by act of relinquishment. Patten v. Miller, 190 Ga. 123, 8 S.E.2d 757, 770; Sadler v. Jester, D.C.Tex., 46 F.Supp. 737, 740.

In ecclesiastical law. Where a parson, vicar, or other beneficed clergyman voluntarily gives up and surrenders his charge and preferment to those from whom he received the same. It is usually done by an instrument attested by a notary. Phillim.Ecc.Law, 517.

In Scotch law. The return of a fee into the hands of the superior. Bell.

RESIGNATION BOND. A bond or other engagement in writing taken by a patron from the clergyman presented by him to a living, to resign the benefice at a future period. This is allowable in certain cases under St. 9 Geo. IV. c. 94, passed in 1828. 2 Steph.Comm. 721.

RESIGNEE. One in favor of whom a resignation is made. 1 Bell, Comm. 125n.

RESILIENCY. In patent law. That quality, as of a metal, which causes it to spring back to its form, inherent in properly tempered metal. Besser v. Merillat Culvert Core Co., D.C.Iowa, 226 F. 783, 786.

RESILIRE. Lat. In old English law. To draw back from a contract before it is made binding. Bract. fol. 38.

RESIST. To oppose. This word properly describes an opposition by direct action and quasi forcible means. Powell v. State, 152 Ga. 81, 108 S.E. 464, 465; McAlpine v. State, 19 Ala.App. 391, 97 So. 612, 613.

RESISTANCE. The act of resisting opposition; the employment of forcible means to prevent the execution of an endeavor in which force is employed; standing against; obstructing. U. S. v. Jose, C.C.Wash., 63 F. 954; U. S. v. Huff, C.C. Tenn., 13 F. 639.

RESISTING AN OFFICER. In criminal law, the offense of obstructing, opposing, and endeavoring to prevent (with or without actual force) a peace officer in the execution of a writ or in the lawful discharge of his duty while making an arrest or otherwise enforcing the peace. Jones v. State, 60 Ala. 99.

RESOLUCION. In Spanish colonial law. An opinion formed by some superior authority on matters referred to its decision, and forwarded to inferior authorities for their instruction and government. Schm. Civil Law, 93, note 1.

RESOLUTION. A formal expression of the opinion or will of an official body or a public assembly, adopted by vote; as a legislative resolution. Scudder v. Smith, 331 Pa. 165, 200 A. 601, 604.

Civil Law

The cancellation or annulling, by the act of parties or judgment of a court, of an existing contract which was valid and binding, in consequence of some cause or matter arising after the making of the agreement, and not in consequence of any inherent vice or defect, which, invalidating the contract from the beginning, would be ground for rescission. 7 Toullier, no. 551.

Legislative Practice

The term is usually employed to denote the adoption of a motion, the subject-matter of which would not properly constitute a statute; such as a mere expression of opinion; an alteration of the rules; a vote of thanks or of censure, etc. McDowell v. People, 68 N.E. 379, 204 Ill. 499; Conley v. Texas Division of United Daughters of the Confederacy, Tex.Civ.App., 164 S.W. 24, 26.

The chief distinction between a "resolution" and a "law" is that the former is used whenever the legislative body passing it wishes merely to express an opinion as to some given matter or thing and is only to have a temporary effect on such particular thing, while by a "law" it is intended to permanently direct and control matters applying to persons or things in general. Ex parte Hague, 104 N.J.Eq. 31, 144 A. 546, 559.

Joint resolution. A resolution adopted by both houses of congress or a legislature. When such a resolution has been approved by the president or passed with his approval, it has the effect of a law. 6 Op.Atty.Gen. 680.

The distinction between a joint resolution and a concurrent resolution of congress, is that the former requires the approval of the president while the latter does not. Rep. Sen. Jud. Corn. Jan. 1897.

If a resolution originating in one house of the Legislature is passed by that house and is then sent to the other for its concurrence, and is passed by it, signed by the presiding officer of each house and approved by the Governor, it is a "joint resolution" as that term is used in the Constitution and the joint rules of the Legislature. Oklahoma News Co. v. Ryan, 101 Okl. 151, 224 P. 969, 971.

Practice

A solemn judgment or decision of a court.

This word is frequently used in this sense by Coke and some of the more ancient reporters.

RESOLUTIVE. In Scotch conveyancing. Having the quality or effect of resolving or extinguishing a right. Bell.

RESOLUTO JURE CONCEDENTIS RESOLVITUR JUS CONCESSUM. The right of the grantor being extinguished, the right granted is extinguished. Mackeld. Rom. Law, 179; Broom, Max. 467.

RESOLUTORY CONDITION. See Condition.

RESORT, v. To go back; as, it resorted to the line of the mother. Hale, Com.Law, c. 11. To frequent; to go, repair, betake one's self, especially to go frequently, customarily, or usually. State v. Poggmeyer, 91 Kan. 633, 138 P. 593, 594.

RESORT, n. A place of frequent assembly, a haunt. U. S. ex rel. Dobra v. Lindsey, D.C.Tex., 51 F.2d 141, 142.

Court of last resort. A court whose decision is final and without appeal in reference to the particular case.

RESOURCES. Money or any property that can be converted into supplies; means of raising money or supplies; capabilities of raising wealth or to supply necessary wants; available means or capability of any kind. Shelby County v. Tennessee Centennial Exposition Co., 96 Tenn. 653, 36 S.W. 694, 33 L.R.A. 717. Cerenzia v. Department of Social Security of Washington, 18 Wash.2d 230, 138 P.2d 868, 871.

RESPECTIVE. Relating to particular persons or things, each to each; particular; several; as, their respective homes. Sandford v. Stagg, 106 N.J.Eq. 71, 150 A. 187, 188.

RESPECTU COMPUTI VICECOMITIS HABENDO. A writ for respiting a sheriff's account addressed to the treasurer and barons of the exchequer. Reg. Orig. 139.

RESPECTUS. In old English and Scotch law. Respite; delay; continuance of time; postponement.

RESPICIENDUM EST JUDICANTI NE QUID AUT DURIUS AUT REMISSIUS CONSTITUATUR QUAM CAUSA DEPOSCIT; NEC ENIM AUT SEVERITATIS AUT CLEMENTINE GLORIA AFFECTANDA EST. The judge must see that no order be made or judgment given or sentence passed either more harshly or more mildly than the case requires; he must not seek renown, either as a severe or as a tender-hearted judge.

RESPITE. The temporary suspension of the execution of a sentence, a reprieve; a delay, forbearance, or continuation of time. 4 Bl.Comm. 394; State v. District Court of Eighteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Blaine County, 73 Mont. 541, 237 P. 525, 527.

Continuance. In English practice, a jury is said, on the record, to be "respited" till the next term. 3 Bl.Comm. 354.

In the civil law. An act by which a debtor, who is unable to satisfy his debts at the moment, transacts (compromises) with his creditors, and obtains from them time or delay for the payment of the sums which he owes to them. The respite is either voluntary or forced. It is voluntary when all the creditors consent to the proposal, which the debtor makes, to pay in a limited time the whole or a part of the debt. It is forced when a part of the creditors refuse to accept the debtor's proposal, and when the latter is obliged to compel them by judicial authority to consent to what the others have determined, in the cases directed by law.

RESPITE OF APPEAL. Adjourning an appeal to some future time. Brown.

RESPITE OF HOMAGE. To dispense with the performance of homage by tenants who held their lands in consideration of performing homage to their lords. Cowell.

RESPOND. 1. To make or file an answer to a bill, libel, or appeal, in the character of a respondent, (q. v.).

2. To be liable or answerable; to make satisfaction or amends; as, to "respond in damages."

RESPONDE BOOK. In Scotch practice. A book kept by the directors of chancery, in which are entered all non-entry and relief duties payable by heirs who take precepts from chancery. Bell.

RESPONDEAT OUSTER. Upon an issue in law arising upon a dilatory plea, the form of judgment for the plaintiff is that the defendant answer over, which is thence called a judgment of "respondeat ouster." This not being a final judgment, the pleading is resumed, and the action proceeds. Steph.Pl. 115; 3 Bl.Comm. 303; Bauer v. Roth, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 91.

RESPONDEAT RAPTOR, QUI IGNORARE NON POTUIT QUOD PUPILLUM ALIENUM ABDUXIT. Hob. 99. Let the ravisher answer, for he cannot be ignorant that he has taken away another's ward.

RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. Let the master answer. This maxim means that a master is liable in certain cases for the wrongful acts of his servant, and a principal for those of his agent. Broom, Max. 843. Southern Paramount Pictures Co. v. Gaulding, 24 Ga.App. 478, 101 S.E. 311; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pittinger, C.C.A.N.J., 293 F. 853, 855. Under this doctrine master is responsible for want of care on servant's part toward those to whom master owes duty to use care, provided failure of servant to use such care occurred in course of his employment. Shell Petroleum Corporation v. Magnolia Pipe Line Co., Tex.Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 829, 832. Doctrine applies only when relation of master and servant existed between defendant and wrongdoer at time of injury sued for, in respect to very transaction from which it arose. James v. J. S. Williams & Son, 177 La. 1033, 150 So. 9, 11. Hence doctrine is inapplicable where injury occurs while servant is acting outside legitimate scope of authority. Rogers v. Town of Black Mountain, 224 N.C. 119, 29 S.E.2d 203, 205. But if deviation be only slight or incidental, employer may still be liable. Klotsch v. P. F. Collier & Son Corporation, 349 Mo. 40, 159 S.W. 2d 589, 593, 595; Adams v. South Carolina Power Co., 200 S.C. 438, 21 S.E.2d 17, 19, 20.

Doctrine does not apply in relation between state officers and their subordinates, unless superior participates in or directs act. People v. Standard Accident Ins. Co., 42 Cal.App.2d 409, 108 P.2d 923, 925.

Municipalities are exempt from doctrine when officers are acting in exercise of governmental functions. Lemieux v. City of St. Albans, 112 Vt. 512, 28 A.2d 373, 374.

RESPONDENT. In equity practice. The party who makes an answer to a bill or other proceeding in chancery. State ex inf. Barker v. Duncan, 265 Mo. 26, 175 S.W. 940, 942, Ann.Cas.1916D, 1.

In admiralty. The party upon whom a libel in admiralty is served. Brown.

In appellate practice. The party who contends against an appeal. Brown. Brower v. Wellis, 6 Ind.App. 323, 33 N.E. 672.

In the civil law. One who answers or is security for another; a fidejussor. Dig. 2, 8, 6.

RESPONDENTIA. The hypothecation of the cargo or goods on board a ship as security for the repayment of a loan, the term "bottomry" being confined to hypothecations of the ship herself; but now the term "respondentia" is seldom used, and the expression "bottomry" is generally employed, whether the vessel or her cargo or both be the security. Maude & P. Shipp. 433; Smith, Merc. Law, 416. See Maitland v. The Atlantic, 16 F. Cas. 522.

A contract by which a Cargo, or some part thereof, is hypothecated as security for a loan, the repayment of which is dependent on maritime risks.

RESPONDERE NON DEBET. Lat. In pleading. The prayer of a plea where the defendant insists that he ought not to answer, as when he claims a privilege; for example, as being a member of congress or a foreign ambassador. 1 Chit.Pl. 433.

RESPONSA PRUDENTITJM. Lat. Answers of jurists; responses given upon cases or questions of law referred to them, by certain learned Roman jurists, who, though not magistrates, were authorized to render such opinions. These responsa constituted one of the most important sources of the earlier Roman law, and were of great value in developing its scientific accuracy. They held much the same place of authority as our modern precedents and reports.

RESPONSALIS. In Old English Law. One who appeared for another.

In ecclesiastical law. A proctor.

RESPONSALIS AD LUCRANDUM VEL PETENDUM. He who appears and answers for another in court at a day assigned; a proctor, attorney, or deputy. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 169.

RESPONSIBILITY. The obligation to answer for an act done, and to repair any injury it may have caused.

RESPONSIBILITY OF EVICTION. In a lease the burden of expelling by legal process those in possession, if they wrongfully withhold it. Muller v. Bernstein, 198 Ill.App. 104, 106.

RESPONSIBLE. Liable, legally accountable or answerable. The Mary F. Barrett, C.C.A.Pa., 279 F. 329, 334; Middendorf, Williams & Co. v. Alexander Milburn Co., 113 A. 348, 354, 137 Md. 583. Able to pay a sum for which he is or may become liable, or to discharge an obligation which he may be under. People v. Kent, 160 Ill. 655, 43 N.E. 760.

RESPONSIBLE CAUSE. So as to relieve defendant from liability for injuries. A cause which is the culpable act of a human being who is legally responsible for such act. State, to Use of Schiller, v. Hecht Co., 165 Md. 415, 169 A. 311, 313.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT. This term generally designates that species of governmental system in which the responsibility for public measures or acts of state rests upon the ministry or executive council, who are under an obligation to resign when disapprobation of their course is expressed by a vote of want of confidence, in the legislative assembly, or by the defeat of an important measure advocated by them.

RESPONSIO UNIUS NON OMNINO AUDIATUR. The answer of one witness shall not be heard at all. A maxim of the Roman law of evidence. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 260.

RESPONSIVE. Answering; constituting or comprising a complete answer. A "responsive allegation" is one which directly answers the allegation it is intended to meet. Picture Plays Theater Co. of Tampa v. Williams, 75 Fla. 556, 78 So. 674, 677, 1 A.L.R. 1.

RESSEISER. The taking of lands into the hands of the crown, where a general livery or ouster le main was formerly misused.

REST, v. In the trial of an action, a party is said to "rest," or "rest his case," when he intimates that he has produced all the evidence he intends to offer at that stage, and submits the case, either finally, or subject to his right to afterwards offer rebutting evidence.

REST, n. Repose, cessation or intermission of motion, exertion or labor; freedom from activity; quiet. Corrugating Machinery Corporation v. Progressive Corrugated Paper Machinery Co., D. C.N.Y., 47 F.2d 273, 275. Also residue (which title see).

RESTAMPING WRIT. Passing it a second time through the proper office, whereupon it receives a new stamp. 1 Chit. Arch. Pr. 212.

RESTAUR, or RESTOR. The remedy or recourse which marine underwriters have against each other, according to the date of their assurances, or against the master, if the loss arise through his default, as through ill loading, want of caulking, or want of having the vessel tight; also the remedy or recourse a person has against his guarantor or other person who is to indemnify him from any damage sustained. Enc. Lond.

RESTAURANT. An establishment where refreshments or meals may be obtained by the public. Donahue v. Conant, 102 Vt. 108, 146 A. 417, 419. It includes cafes, lunchrooms, dairy lunch rooms, cafeterias, tea rooms, waffle houses, fountain lunches, sandwich shops and many others. People, on Complaint of Canniano, v. Kupas, 13 N.Y. S.2d 488, 490, 171 Misc. 480.

RESTITUTIO IN INTEGRUM. Lat. In the civil law. Restoration or restitution to the previous condition. This was effected by the praetor on equitable grounds, at the prayer of an injured party, by rescinding or annulling a contract or transaction valid by the strict law, or annulling a change in the legal condition produced by an omission, and restoring the parties to their previous situation or legal relations. Dig. 4, 1; Mackeld. Rom. Law, 1 220.

The restoration of a cause to its first state, on petition of the party who was cast, in order to have a second hearing. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 49.

RESTITUTION. Act of restoring; restoration; restoration of anything to its rightful owner; the act of making good or giving equivalent for any loss, damage or injury; and indemnification. State v. Barnett, 110 Vt. 221, 3 A.2d 521, 525, 526.

Equity

Restoration of both parties to their original condition, (when practicable,) upon the rescission of a contract for fraud or similar cause.

Maritime Law

The placing back or restoring articles which have been lost by jettison: This is done, when remainder of the cargo has been saved, at the general charge of the owners of the cargo. Stevens, Av. pt. 1, c. 1, 1, art. 1, n. 8.

Practice

The return of something to the owner of it or to the person entitled to it, upon the reversal or setting aside of the judgment or order of court under which it was taken from him. Haebler v. Myers, 132 N.Y. 363, 30 N.E. 963, 15 L.R.A. 588, 28 Am.St.Rep. 589; Holloway v. People's Water Co., 100 Kan. 414, 167 P. 265, 269, 2 A.L.R. 161.

If, after money has been levied under a writ of execution, the judgment be reversed by writ of error, or set aside, the party against whom the execution was sued out shall have restitution. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1033; 1 Burrill, Pr. 292. So, on conviction of a felon, immediate restitution of such of the goods stolen as are brought into court will be ordered to be made to the several prosecutors. 4 Steph. Comm. 434.

General

Restitution of conjugal rights. In English ecclesiastical law. A species of matrimonial cause or suit which is brought whenever either a . husband or wife is guilty of the injury of subtraction, or lives separate from the other without any sufficient reason; in which case the ecclesiastical jurisdiction will compel them to come together again, if either be weak enough to desire it, contrary to the inclination of the other. 3 Bl. Comm. 94.

Restitution of minors. In Scotch law. Relief obtained by minor on attaining majority against a deed previously executed by him. Bell.

Restitution of stolen goods. At common law there was no restitution of goods upon an indictment, because it was at the suit of the crown only, therefore the party was compelled to bring an appeal of robbery in order to have his goods again; but a writ of restitution was granted by 21 Hen. VIII. c. 11, and it became the practice of the crown to order, without any writ, immediate restitution of such goods.

Writ of restitution. See that title.

RESTITUTIONE EXTRACT! AB ECCLESIA. A writ to restore a man to the church, which he had recovered for his sanctuary, being suspected of felony. Reg. Orig. 69.

RESTITUTIONE TEMPORALIUM. A writ addressed to the sheriff, to restore the temporalities of a bishopric to the bishop elected and confirmed. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 169.

RESTRAIN. To limit, confine, abridge, narrow down, restrict, obstruct, impede, hinder, stay, destroy. U. S. v. Keystone Watch Case Co., D.C. Pa., 218 F. 502, 515. To prohibit from action; to put compulsion upon; to restrict; to hold or press back. To enjoin, (in equity.)

RESTRAINING ORDER. An order in the nature of an injunction. See Order.

RESTRAINING POWERS. Restrictions or limitations imposed upon the exercise of a power by the donor thereof.

RESTRAINING STATUTE. A statute which restrains the common law, where it is too lax and luxuriant. 1 Bl. Comm. 87. Statutes restraining the powers of corporations in regard to leases have been so called in England. 2 Bl. Comm. 319, 320.

RESTRAINT. Confinement, abridgment, or limitation. Prohibition of action; holding or pressing back from action. Hindrance, confinement, or restriction of liberty. Obstruction, hindrance or destruction of trade or commerce.

RESTRAINT OF PRINCES AND RULERS. In marine and war risk policies, operation of sovereign power by exercise of vis major, in its sovereign capacity, controlling and divesting for the time, the authority of owner over ship, and clause applies only to acts done in exercise of sovereign power. Baker Castor Oil Co. v. Insurance Co. of North' America, D.C.N.Y., 60 F.Supp. 32, 35.

Where the "restraint of princes" clause or similar language is found in the contract, a reasonable apprehension of capture or destruction of the ship or cargo will justify nonperformance of the agreement to carry. The George .T. Goulandris, D.C.Me., 36 F.Supp. 827, 830, 834.

RESTRAINT OF MARRIAGE. A contract, covenant, bond, or devise. When conditions unreasonably hamper or restrict the party's freedom to marry, or his choice, or unduly postpone the time of his marriage. "General restraint," as used in the rule invalidating contracts in general restraint of marriage, means restraint binding a competent person not to marry any one at any time. Barnes v. Hobson, Tex.Civ.App., 250 S.W. 238, 242.

RESTRAINT OF TRADE. Contracts or combinations which tend or are designed to eliminate or stifle competition, effect a monopoly, artificially maintain prices, or otherwise hamper or obstruct the course of trade and commerce as it would be carried on if left to the control of natural and economic forces. U. S. v. Reading Co., 40 S.Ct. 425, 429, 253 U.S. 26, 64 L.Ed. 760; U. S. v. Patten, 33 S.Ct. 141, 144, 145, 226 U.S. 525, 57 L.Ed. 333, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 325.

With reference to contracts between individuals, a restraint of trade is said to be "general" or "special." A contract which forbids a person to employ his talents, industry, or capital in any undertaking within the limits of the state or country is in "general" restraint of trafie; if it forbids him to employ himself in a designated trade or business, either for a limited time or within a prescribed, area or district, it is in "special" restraint of trade. Holbrook v. Waters, 9 How. Prac. (N.Y.) 337.

"Restraint of trade" at which the Sherman Anti-Trust Act is aimed, are only those which are comparable to restraints deemed illegal at common law. United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Ass'n, D.C.Ga., 51 F.Supp. 712, 714.

RESTRAINT ON ALIENATION. Restriction of the power of aliening property. See Perpetuity.

In English practice, as applied to counsel, a notice given to a counsel by an attorney on behalf of the plaintiff or defendant in an action, in order to secure his services as advocate when the cause comes on for trial. Holthouse. Blackman v. Webb, 38 Kan. 668, 17 P. 464.

In old English usage. A servant, not menial or familiar,—that is, not continually dwelling in the house of his master, but only wearing his livery, and attending sometimes upon special occasions. Cowell.

RESTRICT. To restrain within bounds; to limit; to confine. State ex rel. Lucey v. Terry, Del.Super., 196 A. 163, 167.

RESTRICTED LANDS. Lands the alienation of which is subject to restrictions imposed by Congress to protect the Indians from their own supposed incompetency. 25 U.S.C.A. § 331 note. Kenny v. Miles, 39 S.Ct. 417, 418, 250 U.S. 58, 63 L.Ed. 841.

RESTRICTION. In the case of land registered under the English land transfer act, 1875, an entry on the register made on the application of the registered proprietor of the land, the effect of which is to prevent the transfer of the land or the creation of any charge upon it, unless notice of the application for a transfer or charge is sent by post to a certain address, or unless the consent of a certain person or persons to the transfer or charge is obtained, or unless some other thing is done. Sweet.

RESTRICTIVE INDORSEMENT. An indorsement so worded as to restrict the further negotiability of the instrument. Thus, "Pay the contents to J. S. only," or "to J. S. for my use," are restrictive indorsements, and put an end to the negotiability of the paper. 1 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 698.

RESTS, n. Periodical balancings of an account, (particularly in mortgage and trust accounts,) made for the purpose of converting interest into principal, and charging the party liable thereon with compound interest. Mozley & Whiteley.

RESULT, v. To proceed, to spring, or arise, as a consequence, effect, or conclusion; to come out, or have an issue; to terminate; to end. Abbott v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 89 N.H. 149, 195 A. 413, 414.

In law, a thing is said to result when, after having been ineffectually or only partially disposed of, it comes back to its former owner or his representatives. Sweet.

RESULT, n. That which results, the conclusion or end to which any course or condition of thing leads, or which is obtained by any process or operation; consequence or effect. Reese v. Dempsey, 48 N.M. 485, 153 P.2d 127, 131.

RESULTING TRUST. See Trust,

RESULTING USE. See Use.

RESUMMONS. In practice. A second summons. The calling a person a second time to answer an action, where the first summons is defeated upon any occasion; as the death of a party, or the like. Cowell.

RESUMPTION. In old English law. The taking again into the king's hands such lands or tenements as before, upon false suggestion, or other error, he had delivered to the heir, or granted by letters patent to any man. Cowell.

RESURRENDER. Where copyhold land has been mortgaged by surrender, and the mortgagee has been admitted, then, on the mortgage debt being paid off, the mortgagor is entitled to have the land reconveyed to him, by the mortgagee surrendering it to the lord to his use. This is called a resurrender. 2 Da^{Y}.Conv. 1332n.

RETAIL. To sell by small quantities, in broken lots or parcels, not in bulk, to sell direct to consumer. Corn. v. Kimball, 7 Mete. (Mass.) 308; Kentucky Consumers' Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 233 S.W. 892, 893, 192 Ky. 437; Department of Treasury of Indiana v. Ridgely, 211 Ind. 9, 4 N.E. 2d 557, 562, 108 A.L.R. 1067; Guess v. Montague, D.C.S.C., 51 F.Supp. 61, 64, 65.

RETAILER OF MERCHANDISE. A merchant who buys articles in gross or merchandise in large quantities, and sells the same by single articles or in small quantities. Byran v. City of Sparks, 36 Nev. 573, 137 P. 522, 523.

RETAIN. To continue to hold, have, use, recognize, etc., and to keep. Kimbell Trust & Savings Bank v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 333 Ill. 318, 164 N.E. 661, 662.

In practice. To engage the services of an attorney or counsellor to manage a cause. See Retainer.

RETAINER. The act of withholding what one has in one's own hands by virtue of some right.

Act of the client in employing his attorney or counsel, and also denotes the fee which the client pays when he retains the attorney to act for him, and thereby prevents him from acting for his adversary. Bright v. Turner, 205 Ky. 188, 265 S.W. 627, 628; Devany v. City of South Norfolk, 143 Va. 768, 129 S.E. 672, 674.

General Retainer

Of an attorney or solicitor merely gives a right to expect professional service when requested, but none which is not requested. It binds the person retained not to take a fee from another against his retainer, but to do nothing except what he is asked to do, and for this he is to be distinctly paid. Rhode Island Excl. Bank v. Hawkins, 6 R.I. 206.

Right of Retainer

The right which the executor or administrator of a deceased person has to retain out of the assets sufficient to pay any debt due to him from the deceased in priority to the other creditors whose debts are of equal degree. 3 Steph.Comm. 263. In re Smith's Estate, 179 Wash. 417, 38 P. 2d 244, 245.

Special Retainer

An engagement or retainer of an attorney or solicitor for a special and designated purpose; as, to prepare and try a particular case. Agnew v. Walden, 84 Ala. 502, 4 So. 672.

RETENEMENTUM. In old English law. Restraint; detainment; withholding.

RETENTION. In Scotch law. A species of lien; the right to retain possession of a chattel until the lienor is satisfied of his claim upon the article itself or its owner.

RETINENTIA. A retinue, or persons retained by a prince or nobleman. Cowell.

RETIRE. As applied to bills of exchange, this word is ambiguous. It is commonly used of an indorser who takes up a bill by handing the amount to a transferee, after which the indorser holds the instrument with all his remedies intact. But it is sometimes used of an acceptor, by whom, when a bill is taken up or retired at maturity, it is in effect paid, and all the remedies on it extinguished. Byles, Bills, 215. Empire Security Co. v. Berry, 211 Ill.App. 278.

To withdraw from active service as an officer of the army or navy; to separate, withdraw, or remove. State v. Love, 95 Neb. 573, 145 N.W. 1010, 1013, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1078.

RETROCESSION. In the civil law. When the assignee of heritable rights conveys his rights back to the cedent. Ersk. Inst. 3, 5, 1.

RETROSPECTIVE. Looking backward; contemplating what is past; having reference to a state of things existing before the act in question. Walker County Fertilizer Co. v. Napier, 184 Ga. 861, 193 S.E. 770, 773.

RETROSPECTIVE LAW. A law which looks backward or contemplates the past; one which is made to affect acts or facts occurring, or rights accruing, before it came into force. Every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disability in respect to transactions or considerations already past. See Ex Post Facto. Clearwater Tp. v. Board of Sup'rs of Kalkaska County, 187 Mich. 516, 153 N.W. 824, 826; People ex rel. Albright v. Board of Trustees of Firemen's Pension Fund of and for City and County of Denver, Colo., 103 Colo. 1, 82 P.2d 765, 771, 118 A.L.R. 984.

RETURN. To bring, carry, or send back; to place in the custody of; to restore; to re-deliver; to send back. Tuttle v. City of Boston, 215 Mass. 57, 102 N.E. 350; Johnson v. Curlee Clothing Co., 240 P. 632, 633, 112 Okl. 220.

The act of a sheriff, constable, or other ministerial officer, in delivering back to the court a writ, notice, or other paper, which he was required to serve or execute, with a brief account of his doings under the mandate, the time and mode of service or execution, or his failure to accomplish it, as the case may be. Also the indorsement made by the officer upon the writ or other paper, stating what he has done under it, the time and mode of service, etc. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Railway Employees' Department,

American Federation of Labor, Federated Shop Crafts, System Federation No. 17, D.C.Conn., 288 F. 588, 591; Smith v. Drake, 174 Ark. 715, 297 S. W. 817.

The report made by the court, body of magistrates, returning board, or other authority charged with the official counting of the votes cast at an election.

In English practice, the election of a member of parliament.

Fair Return

See Fair Return.

False Return

A return to a writ, in which the officer charged with it falsely reports that he served it, when he did not, or makes some other false or incorrect statement, whereby injury results to a person interested. State v. Jenkins, 70 S.W. 152, 170 Mo. 16. In taxation, a return that is incorrect, Du Pont v. Graham, D.C.Del., 283 F. 300, 302, although made in good faith under a mistake of law. Eliot Nat. Bank v. Gill, D.C.Mass., 210 F. 933, 937. Under some statutes, in order to render a return a false return, there must appear, if not a design to mislead or deceive on the part of the taxpayer, at least culpable negligence. Fouts v. State, 149 N.E. 551, 555, 113 Ohio St. 450.

General Return-day

The day for the general return of all writs of summons, subpoena, etc., running to a particular term of the court.

Return-book

The book containing the list of members returned to the house of commons. May, Parl. Pr.

Return-day

The day named in a writ or process, upon which the officer is required to return it. Perry v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Ga., 2 F.2d 250, 251; Wilkinson v. La Combe, 59 Mont. 518, 197 P. 836, 837.

Day on which votes cast are counted and the official result is declared. Landrum v. Centennial Rural High School Dist. No. 2, Tex.Civ.App., 134 S.W.2d 353, 354.

Return Irreplevisable

A writ allowed by the statute of Westm. 2, c. 2, to a defendant who had had judgment upon verdict or demurrer in an action of replevin, or after the plaintiff had, on a writ of second deliverance, become a second time nonsuit in such action. By this writ the goods were returned to the defendant, and the plaintiff was restrained from suing out a fresh replevin. Previously to this statute, an unsuccessful plaintiff might bring actions of replevin in infinitum, in reference to the same matter. 3 Bl.Comm. 150.

Return of Premium

The repayment of the whole or a ratable part of the premium paid for a policy of insurance, upon the cancellation of the contract before the time fixed for its expiration. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 177 Cal. 540, 171 P. 313, 315; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States v. Johnson, 53 Cal.App.2d 49, 127 P.2d 95. For special meaning in mutual insurance, see: New York Life Ins. Co. v. Chaves, 21 N.M. 264, 153 P. 303.

Return Unsatisfied

As used in Bankruptcy Act is not equivalent to a return of no property found, but means that the debtor has no property available subject to writ for satisfaction of judgment. In re Toms, C.C.A.Mich., 101 F.2d 617, 619.

Return of Writs

In practice. A short account, in writing, made by the sheriff, or other ministerial officer, of the manner in which he has executed a writ. Steph. Pl. 24.

RETURNABLE. In practice. To be returned; requiring a return. When a writ is said to be "returnable" on a certain day, it is meant that on that day the officer must return it.

RETURNING BOARD. This is the official title in some of the states of the board of canvassers of elections.

RETURNING FROM TRANSPORTATION. Coming back to England before the term of punishment is determined.

RETURNING OFFICER. The official who conducts a parliamentary election in England. The sheriff in counties, and the mayor in boroughs. Wharton.

RETURNUM IRREPLEGIABILE. A judicial writ addressed to the sheriff for the final restitution or return of cattle to the owner when unjustly taken or distrained, and so found by verdict. It is granted after a nonsuit in a second deliverance. Reg. Jud. 27.

REUS. Lat. In the civil and canon law. The defendant in an action or suit.

A person judicially accused of a crime; a person criminally proceeded against. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 13, no. 7.

A party to a suit, whether plaintiff or defendant; a litigant. This was the ancient sense of the word. Calvin.

A party to a contract. Reus stipulandi, a party stipulating; the party who asked the question in the form prescribed for stipulations. Reus promittendi, a party promising; the party who answered the question.

REUS EXCIPIENDO FIT ACTOR. The defendant, by excepting or pleading, becomes a plaintiff; that is, where, instead of simply denying the plaintiff's action, he sets up some new matter in defense, he is bound to establish it by proof, just as a plaintiff is bound to.prove his cause of action. Bounier, Tr. des Preuves, §§ 152, 320; Best, Ev. p. 294, § 252.

REUS LIESZE MAJESTATIS PUNITUR UT PEREAT UNUS NE PEREANT OMNES. A traitor is punished that one may die lest all perish. 4 Coke, 124.

REVE. In old English law. The bailiff of a franchise or manor; an officer in parishes within forests, who marks the commonable cattle. Cowell.

REVE MOTE. In Saxon law. The court of the reve, reeve, or shire reeve. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 6.

REVEL. To behave in a noisy, boisterous manner, like a bacchanal. In re Began, 12 R.I. 309.

REVELAND. The land which in Domesday is said to have been "thane-land," and afterwards converted into "reveland." It seems to have been land which, having reverted to the king after the death of the thane, who had it for life, was not granted out to any by the king, but rested in charge upon the account of the reve or bailiff of the manor. Spel. Feuds, c. 24.

REVELS. Sports of dancing, masking, etc., formerly used in princes' courts, the inns of court, and noblemen's houses, commonly performed by night. There was an officer to order and supervise them, who was entitled the "master of the revels." Cowell.

REVENDICATION. To reclaim or to demand the restoration of; to "reclaim" being to claim something back, which is in the possession of another, but which belongs to the claimant. Witson v. Succession of Staring, La.App., 175 So. 495, 498.

In civil law. The right of a vendor to reclaim goods sold out of the possession of the purchaser, where the price was not paid. Story, Confl. Laws, § 401. Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 520; Ellis v. Davis, 3 S.Ct. 327, 109 U.S. 485, 27 L.Ed. 1006.

REVENDICATION ACTION. In civil law. One by which a man demands a restoration of a thing of which he claims to be the owner. Cooney v. Blythe Co., La.App., 200 So. 517, 519.

REVENUE. Return, yield, as of land, profit, that which returns or comes back from an investment, the annual or periodical rents, profits, inter. res t or issues of any species of property, real or personal, income. Willoughby v. Willoughby, 66 R.I. 430, 19 A.2d 857, 860.

Also the income of an individual or private corporation. Humphrey v. Lang, 169 N.C. 601, 86 S.E. 526, 527, L.R.A.1916B, 626.

As applied to the income of a government, a broad and general term, including all public moneys which the state collects and receives, from whatever source and in whatever manner. Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 295; State ex rel. Thompson v. Board of Regents for Northeast Missouri State Teachers' College, 305 Mo. 57, 264 S.W. 698, 700. The income which a state collects and receives into its treasury, and is appropriated for the payment of its expenses. Public Market Co. of Portland v. City of Portland, 171 Or. 522, 130 P.2d 624, 644.

Land Revenues

See that title.

Public Revenue

The revenue of the government of the state or nation; sometimes, perhaps, that of a municipality.

Revenue Bills

Those that levy taxes in the strict sense of the word. Hart v. Board of Com'rs of Burke County, 192 N.C. 161, 134 S.E. 403, 404.

Revenue Law

Any law which provides for the assessment and collection of a tax to defray the expenses of the government. Such legislation is commonly referred to under the general term "revenue measures," and those measures include all the laws by which the government provides means for meeting its expenditures. The Nashville, 17 Fed.Cas. 1178; Twin City Nat. Bank v. Nebeker, 3 App. D.C. 190; Ard v. People, 66 Colo. 480, 182 P. 892, 893; Colorado Nat. Life Assur. Co. v. Clayton, 54 Colo. 256, 130 P. 330, 332. For "Loss," see that title.

Revenue Side of the Exchequer

That jurisdiction of the court of exchequer, or of the exchequer division of the high court of justice, by which it ascertains and enforces the proprietary rights of the crown against the subjects of the realm. The practice in revenue cases is not affected by the orders and rules under the judicature act of 1875. Mozley & Whitley.

REVERSAL. The annulling or making void a judgment on account of some error or irregularity. Usually spoken of the action of an appellate court.

International Law

A declaration by which a sovereign promises that he will observe a certain order or certain conditions, which have been once established, notwithstanding any changes that might otherwise cause a deviation therefrom. Bouvier.

REVERSE. To overthrow, vacate, set aside, make void, annul, repeal, or revoke, as to reverse a judgment, sentence or decree, or to change to the contrary or to a former condition. Department of Water and Power of City of Los Angeles v. Inyo Chemical Co., Cal.App., 100 P.2d 822, 826. Securities and Exchange Commission v. C. M. Joiner Leasing Corporation, D.C.Tex., 53 F.Supp. 714, 715.

REVERSER. In Scotch law. The proprietor of an estate who grants a wadset (or mortgage) of his lands, and who has a right, on repayment of the money advanced to him, to be replaced in his right. Bell.

REVERSIBLE ERROR. See Error.

REVERSIO. L. Lat. In old English law. The returning of land to the donor. Fleta, lib. 3, cc. 10, 12.

REVERSIO TER/LE EST TANQUAM TERRA REVERTENS IN POSSESSIONE DONATOR!, SIVE HJEREDIBUS SUIS POST DONUM FINITIM. Co. Litt. 142. A reversion of land is, as it were, the return of the land to the possession of the donor or his heirs after the termination of the estate granted.

REVERSION, or ESTATE IN REVERSION. The residue of an estate left by operation of law in the grantor or his heirs, or in the heirs of a testator, commencing in possession on the determination of a particular estate granted or devised. Strong v. Shatto, 45 Cal.App. 29, 187 P. 159, 162; Vantage Mining Co. v. Baker, 170 Mo.App. 457, 155 S.W. 466, 467.

Any future interest left in a transferor or his successor. Miller v. Dierken, 153 Pa.Super. 389, 33 A.2d 804, 805. It is a vested interest or estate, in as much as person entitled to it has a fixed right to future enjoyment. State ex rel. Tozer v. Probate Court of Washington County, 102 Minn. 268, 113 N.W. 888, 893.

The term reversion has two meanings, first, as designating the estate left in the grantor during the continuance of a particular estate and also the residue left in grantor or his heirs after termination of particular estate. Davidson v. Davidson, 350 Mo. 639, 167 S.W.2d 641, 642. Miller v. C. I. R., C.C.A.6, 147 F.2d 189, 193.

It differs from a remainder in that it arises by act of the law, whereas a remainder is by act of the parties. A reversion, moreover, is the remnant left in the grantor, whilst a remainder is the remnant of the whole estate disposed of, after a preceding part of the same has been given away. Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 Va. 463, 155 S. E. 802, 806, 77 A.L.R. 324.

Scotch Law

A right of redeeming landed property which has been either mortgaged or adjudicated to secure the payment of a debt. In the former case, the reversion is called "conventional;" in the latter case, it is called "legal ;" and the period of seven years allowed for redemption is called the "legal." Bell; Paterson.

Legal reversion. In Scotch law. The period within which a proprietor is at liberty to redeem /and adjudged from him for debt.

REVERSIONARY. That which is to be enjoyed in reversion.

REVERSIONARY INTEREST. The interest which a person has in the reversion of lands or other property. A right to the future enjoyment of property, at present in the possession or occupation of another. Holthouse. See, also, Reversion.

REVERSIONARY LEASE. One to take effect in futuro. A second lease, to commence after the expiration of a former lease. Wharton.

REVERSIONER. A person who is entitled to an estate in reversion. By an extension of its meaning, one who is entitled to any future estate or any property in expectancy.

REV ERT. To turn back, to return to. Reichard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 231 Iowa 563, 1 N.W. 2d 721, 727.

With respect to property to go back to and lodge in former owner, who parted with it by creating estate in another which has expired, or to his heirs. Petition of Smith, 291 Pa. 129, 139 A. 832, 835.

In a loose way the term "revert to" is sometimes used in a will as the equivalent of "go to," and, where the language of a will so indicates, it will be construed as used to designate the person to whom the testator wished the land to be given. Mastellar v. Atkinson, 94 Kan. 279, 146 P. 367, 368, Ann.Cas.1917B, 502; In re Owens' Will, 164 Wis. 260, 159 N.W. 906, 907.

REVERTER. Reversion. A possibility of reverter is that species of reversionary interest which exists when the grant is so limited that it may possibly terminate. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 63. See Formedon in the Reverter.

REVEST. To vest again. A seisin is said to revest, where it is acquired a second time by the party out of whom it has been divested. 1 Rop. Husb. & Wife, 353. Opposed to "divest." The words "revest" and "divest" are also applicable to the mere right or title, as opposed to the possession. Brown.

REVESTIRE. In old European law. To return or resign an investiture, seisin, or possession that has been received; to reinvest; to re-enfeoff. Spelman.

REVIEW. To re-examine judicially. A reconsideration; second view or examination; revision; consideration for purposes of correction. Used especially of the examination of a cause by an appellate court; and of a second investigation of a proposed public road by a jury of viewers. Swan v. Justices of Superior Court, 222 Mass. 542, 111 N.E. 386, 389; State v. Griffiths, 137 Wash. 448, 242 P. 969, 970.

Bill of Review

In equity practice. A bill, in the nature of a writ of error, filed to procure an examination and alteration or reversal of a decree made upon a former bill, which decree has been signed and enrolled. Story, Eq. Pl. § 403.

Commission of Review

In English ecclesiastical law. A commission formerly sometimes granted, in extraordinary cases, to revise the sentence of the court of delegates, when it was apprehended they had been led into a material error. 3 Bl.Comm. 67.

Court of Review

In England. A court established by 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 56, for the adjudicating upon such matters in bankruptcy as before were within the jurisdiction of the lord chancellor. It was abolished in 1847.

Reviewing Taxation

The re-taxing or re-examining an attorney's bill of costs by the master. The courts sometimes order the masters to review their taxation, when, on being applied to for that purpose, it appears that items have been allowed or disallowed on some erroneous principle, or under some mistaken impression. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 55.

REVILING CHURCH ORDINANCES. An offense against religion punishable in England by fine and imprisonment. 4 Steph.Comm. 208.

REVISE. To review, re-examine for correction; to go over a thing for the purpose of amending, correcting, rearranging, or otherwise improving it; as, to revise statutes, or a judgment. American Indemnity Co. v. City of Austin, 112 Tex. 239, 246 S.W. 1019, 1023; State ex rel. Taylor v. Scofield, 184 Wash. 250, 50 P.2d 896, 897.

REVISED STATUTES. A body of statutes which have been revised, collected, arranged in order, and re-enacted as a whole. This is the legal title of the collections of compiled laws of several of the states, and also of the United States. Such a volume is usually cited as "Rev. Stat.," "Rev. St.," or "R. S."

REVISING ASSESSORS. In English law. Two officers elected by the burgesses of non-parliamentary municipal boroughs for the purpose of assisting the mayor in revising the parish burgess lists. Wharton.

REVISING BARRISTERS' COURTS. In English law. Courts held in the autumn throughout the country, to revise the list of voters for county and borough members of parliament.

Abolished by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, which repealed the statutes under which they existed. Wharton.

REVISION. A re-examination or careful reading over for correction or improvement. State Road Commission of West Virginia v. West Virginia Bridge Commission, 112 W.Va. 514, 166 S.E. 11, 13.

REVISION OF STATUTES. Is more than a restatement of the substance thereof in different language, but implies a re-examination of them, and may constitute a restatement of the law in a corrected or improved form, in which case the statement may be with or without material change, end is substituted for and displaces and repeals the former law as it stood relating to the subjects within its purview. Maclean v. Brodigan, 41 Nev. 468, 172 P. 375; Elite Laundry Co. v. Dunn, 126 W.Va. 858, 30 S.E.2d 454, 458.

REVIVAL. The process of renewing the operative force of a judgment which has remained dormant or unexecuted for so long a time that execution cannot be issued upon it without new process to reanimate it. Havens v. Sea Shore Land Co., 57 N.J.Eq. 142, 41 A. 755.

The act of renewing the legal force of a contract or obligation, which had ceased to be sufficient foundation for an action, on account of the running of the statute of limitations, by giving a new promise or acknowledgment of it.

REVIVE. To renew, revivify; to make one's self liable for a debt barred by the statute of limitations by acknowledging it; or for a matrimonial offense, once condoned, by committing another. Police Jury of Caddo Parish v. City of Shreveport, 137 La. 1032, 69 So. 828, 831; Maclean v. Brodigan, 41 Nev. 468, 172 P. 375.

REVIVOR, BILL OF. In equity practice. A bill filed for the purpose of reviving or calling into operation the proceedings in a suit when, from some circumstance, (as the death of the plaintiff,) the suit had abated.

REVIVOR, WRIT OF. In English practice. Where it became necessary to revive a judgment, by lapse of time, or change by death, etc., of the parties entitled or liable to execution, the party alleging himself to be entitled to execution might sue out a writ of revivor in the form given in the act, or apply to the court for leave to enter a suggestion upon the roll that it appeared that he was entitle.d to have and issue execution of the judgment, such leave to be granted by the court or a judge upon a rule to show cause, or a summons, to be served according to the then present practice.

REVOCABLE. Susceptible of being revoked.

REVOCATION. The recall of some power, authority, or thing granted, or a destroying or making void of some deed that had existence until the act of revocation made it void. It may be either general, of all acts and things done before; or special, to revoke a particular thing. 5 Coke, 90. Ford v. Greenawalt, 292 Ill. 121, 126 N.E. 555, 556; O'Hagan v. Kracke, 300 N.Y.S. 351, 361, 165 Misc. 4.

Revocation by act of the party is an intentional or voluntary revocation. The principal instances occur in the case of authorities and powers of attorney and wills.

A revocation in law, or constructive revocation, is produced by a rule of law, irrespectively of the intention of the parties. Thus, a power of attorney is in general revoked by the death of the principal. Sweet.

REVOCATION OF PROBATE. Is where probate of a will, having been granted, is afterwards recalled by the court of probate, on proof of a subsequent will, or other sufficient cause.

REVOCATION OF WILL. The recalling, annulling or rendering inoperative an existing will, by some subsequent act of the testator, which may be by the making of a new will inconsistent with the terms of the first, or by destroying the old will, or by disposing of the property to which it related, or otherwise. Boudinot v. Bradford, 2 Dall. 268, 1 L.Ed. 375. Cutler v. Cutler, 130 N.C. 1, 40 S.E. 689, 57 L.R.A. 209, 89 Am.St.Rep. 854.

REVOCATIONE PARLIAMENT!. An ancient writ for recalling a parliament. 4 Inst. 44.

REVOCATUR. Lat. It is recalled. This is the term, in English practice, appropriate to signify that a judgment is annulled or set aside for error in fact; if for error in law, it is then said to be reversed.

REVOKE. To annul or make void by recalling or taking back, cancel, rescind, repeal, reverse. O'Hagan v. Kracke, 300 N.Y.S. 351, 362, 165 Misc. 4.

REVOLT. The endeavor of the crew of a vessel, or any one or more of them, to overthrow the legitimate authority of her commander, with intent to remove him from his command, or against his will to take possession of the vessel by assuming the government and navigation of her, or by transferring their obedience from the lawful commander to some other person. United States v. Kelly, 11 Wheat. 417, 6 L.Ed. 508; Hamilton v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 268 F. 15, 18.

REVOLUTION. A complete overthrow of the established government in any country or state by those who were previously subject to it. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 227, 232.

REVOLUTIONARY, adj. Pertaining to or connected with, characterized by, or of nature of, revolution. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 227, 233.

REVOLUTIONARY, n. One who instigates or favors revolution or one taking part therein. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 227, 233.

REWARD. A recompense or premium offered or bestowed by government or an individual in return for special or extraordinary services to be performed, or for special attainments or achievements, or for some act resulting to the benefit of the public; as, a reward for useful inventions, fox the discovery and apprehension of criminals, for the restoration of lost property. Kinn v. First Nat. Bank, 95 N.W. 969, 118 Wis. 537, 99 Am.St. Rep. 1012.

That which is offered or given for some service or attainment; sum of money paid or taken for (loing, or forbearing to do, some act. Kirk v. Smith, 48 Mont. 489, 138 P. 1088, 1089.

REWME. In old records. Realm, or kingdom.

REX. Lat. The king. The king regarded as the party prosecuting in a criminal action; as in the form of entitling such actions, "Rex v. Doe."

REX DEBET ESSE SUB LEGE QUIA LEX FACIT REGEM. The king ought to be under the law, because the law makes the king. 1 Bl. Comm. 239.

REX EST LEGALIS ET POLITICUS. Lane, 27. The king is both a legal and political person.

REX EST LEX VIVENS. Jenk. Cent. 17. The king is the living law.

REX EST MAJOR SINGULIS, MINOR UNIVERSIS. Bract. 1. 1, c. 8. The king is greater than any single person, less than all.

REX HOC SOLUM NON POTEST FACERE QUOD NON POTEST INJUSTE AGERE. 11 Coke, 72. The king can do everything but an injustice.

REX NON DEBIT ESSE SUB HOMINE, SED SUB DEO ET SUT LEGE, QUIA LEX FACIT REGEM. Bract. fol. 5. The king ought to be under no man, but under God and the law, because the law makes a king. Broom, Max. 47.

REX NON POTEST FALLERE NEC FALLI. The king cannot deceive or be deceived. Grounds & Rud. of Law 438.

REX NON POTEST PECCARE. The king cannot do wrong; the king can do no wrong. 2 Rolle, 304. An ancient and fundamental principle of the English constitution. Jenk. Cent. p. 9, case 16; 1 Bl. Comm. 246.

REX 'NUNQUAM MORITUR. The king never dies. Broom, Max. 50; Branch, Max. (5th Ed.) 197; 1 Bl. Comm. 249.

RHANDIR. A part in the division of Wales before the Conquest; every township comprehended four gavels, and every gavel had four rhandirs, and four houses or tenements constituted every rhandir. Tayl. Hist. Ga^{y}. 69.

RHODIAN LAWS. The earliest code or collection of maritime laws. It was formulated by the people of the island of Rhodes, who, by their commercial prosperity and the superiority of their navies, had acquired the sovereignty of the seas. Its date is very uncertain, but is supposed (by Kent and others) to be about 900 B. C. Nothing of it is now extant except the article on jettison, which has been preserved in the Roman collections or Pandects (Dig. 14, 2; 3 Kent, Comm. 232, 233 "Lex Rhodia de Jactu.") The Lex Rhodia de Jactu provided that when the goods of an owner are thrown overboard for the safety of the ship or of the property of other owners, he becomes entitled to a ratable contribution. It has been adopted into the law of all civilized nations. Campbell, Rom. L. 137. Another code, under the same name, was published in more modern times, but is generally considered, by the best authorities, to be spurious. Schomberg, Mar. Laws Rhodes, 37, 38; 3 Kent, Comm. 3, 4; Azuni, Mar. Law, 265-296.

RIAL. A piece of gold coin current for 10s., in the reign of Henry VI., at which time there were half-rials and quarter-rials or rial-farthings. In the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's reign, golden rials were coined at 15s. a piece; and in the time of James L there were rose-rials of gold at 30s. and spur-rials at 15s. Lown. Essay Coins, 38.

RIBAUD. A rogue; vagrant; whoremonger; a person given to all manner of wickedness. Cowell.

RIBBONMEN. Associations or secret societies formed in Ireland, having for their object the dispossession of landlords by murder and fire-raising. Wharton.

RICHARD ROE, otherwise TROUBLESOME. The casual ejector and fictitious defendant in ejectment, whose services are no longer invoked.

RICOHOME. Span. In Spanish law. A nobleman; a count or baron. 1 White, Recop. 36.

RIDER. A schedule or small piece of parchment annexed to some part of a roll or record. It is frequently familiarly used for any kind of a schedule or writing annexed to a document which cannot well be incorporated in the body of such document. Thus, in passing bills through a legislature, when a new clause is added after the bill has passed through committee, such new clause is termed a "rider." Brown. Cowell; Blount; 2 Tidd, Pr. 730; Com. v. Barnett, 48 A. 976, 199 Pa. 161, 55 L.R.A. 882. An additional paper attached to, and forming a part of, an insurance policy. Hukle v. Great American Ins. Co., 245 N.Y.S. 240, 242, 230 App.Div. 477.

RIDER-ROLL. Rider, which title see.

RIDGLING. A half-castrated horse. Brisco v. State, 4 Tex.App. 221, 30 Am.Rep. 162.

RIDING ARMED. In English law. The offense of riding or going armed with dangerous or unusual weapons is a misdemeanor tending to dis. turb the public peace by terrifying the good people of the land. 4 Steph. Comm. 357.

The Statute of Northampton, St. 2 Edw. III, c. 3, enacted in 1328, which made this an indictable offense, was in affirmance of the common law, and probably became a part of the common law of the American colonies. 68 C.J. p. 5, n. 35.

RIDING CLERK. In English law. One of the six clerks in chancery who, in his turn for one year, kept the controlment books of all grants that passed the great seal. The six clerks were superseded by the clerks of records and writs.

RIDINGS, (corrupted from trithings.) The names of the parts or divisions of Yorkshire, which, of course, are three only, viz., East Riding, North Riding, and West Riding.

RIEN. L. Fr. Nothing. It appears in a few law French phrases.

RIEN CULP. In old pleading. Not guilty.

RIEN DIT. In old pleading. Says nothing, (nil dicit.)

RIEN LUY DOIT. In old pleading. Owes him nothing. The plea of nil debet.

RIENS EN ARRIERE. Nothing in arrear. A plea in an action of debt for arrearages of account. Cowell.

RIENS LOUR DEUST. Not their debt. The old form of the plea of nil debet. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 332.

RIENS PASSA PER LE FAIT. Nothing passed by the deed. A plea by which a party might avoid the operation of a deed, which had been enrolled or acknowledged in court; the plea of non est factum, not being allowed in such case.

RIENS PER DESCENT. Nothing by descent. The plea of an heir, where he is sued for his ancestor's debt, and has no land from him by descent, or assets in his hands. Cro. Car. 151; 1 Tidd, Pr. 645; 2 Tidd, Pr. 937.

RIER COUNTY. In old English law. After-county; i. e., after the end of the county court. A time and place appointed by the sheriff for the receipt of the king's money after the end of his county, or county court. Cowell.

RIFFLARE. To take away anything by force.

RIFLETUM. A coppice or thicket. Cowell.

RIGA. In old European law. A species of service and tribute rendered to their lords by agricultural tenants. Supposed by Spelman to be derived from the name of a certain portion of land, called, in England, a "rig" or "ridge," an elevated piece of ground, formed out of several furrows. Burrill.

RIGGING THE MARKET. A term of the stock-exchange, denoting the practice of inflating the price of given stocks, or enhancing their quoted value, by a system of pretended purchases, designed to give the air of an unusual demand for such stocks. L. R. 13 Eq. 447.

RIGHT. As a noun, and taken in an abstract sense, justice, ethical correctness, or consonance with the rules of law or the principles of morals. In this signification it answers to one meaning of the Latin "jus," and serves to indicate law in the abstract, considered as the foundation of all rights, or the complex of underlying moral principles which impart the character of justice to all positive law, or give it an ethical content.

As a noun, and taken in a concrete sense, a power, privilege, faculty, or demand, inherent in one person and incident upon another. "Rights" are defined generally as "powers of free action." And the primal rights pertaining to men are undoubtedly enjoyed by human beings purely as such, being grounded in personality, and existing antecedently to their recognition by positive law. But leaving the abstract moral sphere, and giving to the term a juristic content, a "right" is well defined as "a capacity residing in one man of controlling, with the assent and assistance of the state, the actions of others." Holl. Jur. 69.

The noun substantive "a right" signifies that which jurists denominate a "faculty ;" that which resides in a determinate person, by virtue of a given law, and which avails against a person (or answers to a duty lying on a person) other than the person in whom it resides. And the noun substantive "rights" is the plural of the noun. substantive "a right." But the expression "right," when it is used as an adjective, is equivalent to the adjective

"just." as the adverb "rightly" is equivalent to the adverb "justly." And, when used as the abstract name corresponding to the adjective "right," the noun substantive "right" is synonymoms with the noun substantive "justice." Aust.Jur. § 264, not.

In a narrower signification, an interest or title in an object of property; a just and legal claim to hold, use, or enjoy it, or to convey or donate it, as he may please. See Co. Litt. 345a.

The term "right," in civil society, is defined to mean that which a man is entitled to have, or to do, or to receive from others within the limits prescribed by law. Atehison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 40, 29 Am.Rep. 356.

That which one person ought to have or receive from another, it being withheld from him, or not in his possession. In this sense "right" has the force of "claim," and is properly expressed by the Latin "jus." Lord Coke considers this to be the proper signification of the word, especially in writs and pleadings, where an estate is turned to a right; as by discontinuance, disseisin, etc. Co. Litt. 345a.

See, also, Droit; Jus; Recht.

Classification

Rights may be described as perfect or imperfect, according as their action or scope is clear, settled, and determinate, or is vague and unfixed.

Rights are either in personam or in rem. A. right in personam is one which imposes an obligation on a definite person. A right in rem is one which imposes an obligation on persons generally; 1. e., either on all the world or on all the world except certain determinate persons. Thus, if I am entitled to exclude all persons from a given piece of land, I have a right in rem in respect of that land; and, if there are one or more persons, A., B., and C., whom I am not entitled to exclude from it, my right is still a right in rem. Sweet.

Rights may also be described as either primary .or secondary. Primary rights are those which can be created without reference to rights already existing. Secondary rights can only arise for the purpose of protecting or enforcing primary rights. They are either preventive (protective) or remedial (reparative.) Sweet.

Preventive or protective secondary rights exist in order to prevent the infringement or loss of primary rights. They are judicial when they require the assistance -of a court of law for their enforcement, and extrajudicial when they are capable of being exercised by the party himself. Remedial or reparative secondary rights are also eitheir judicial or extrajudicial. They may further be divided into (1) rights of restitution or restoration, which entitle the person injured to be replaced in his original position; (2) rights of enforcement, which entitle the person injured to the performance of an act by the person bound; and (3) rights of satisfaction or compensation. Sweet.

With respect to the ownership of external objects of property, rights may be classed as absolute and qualified. An absolute right gives to -the person in whom it inheres the uncontrolled dominion over the object at all times and for all purposes. A qualified right gives the possessor a right to the object for certain purposes or under certain circumstances only. Such is the right of a bailee to recover the article bailed when it has been unlawfully taken from him by a stranger.

Rights are also either legal or equitable. The former is the case where the person seeking to enforce the right for his own benefit has the legal title and a remedy at law. The latter are such as are enforceable only in equity; as, at the suit of cestui que trust.

Constitutional Law

There is also a classification of rights, with respect to the constitution of civil society. Thus, according to Blackstone, "the rights of persons, considered in their natural capacities, are of two sorts,—absolute and relative; absolute, which are such as appertain and belong to particular men, merely as individuals or single persons; relative, which are incident to them as members of society, and standing in various relations to each other." 1 Bl. Comm. 123. Johnson v. Johnson, 32 Ala. 637; People v. Berberrich, 20 Barb, (N. Y.) 224.

Rights are also classified in constitutional law as natural, civil, and political, to which there is sometimes added the class of "personal rights."

Natural rights are those which grow out of the nature of man and depend upon personality, as distinguished from such as are created by law and depend upon civilized society; or they are those which are plainly assured by natural law (Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 519, 44 Am.Dec. 217) ; or those which, by fair deduction from the present physical, moral, social, and religious characteristics of man, he must be invested with, and which he ought to have realized for him in a jural society, in order to fulfill the ends to which his nature calls him. 1 Woolsey, Polit. Science, p. 26. Such are the rights of life, liberty, privacy, and good reputation. See Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) 523.

Civil rights are such as belong to every citizen of the state or country, or, in a wider sense, to all its inhabitants, and are not connected with the organization or administration of government. They include the rights of property, marriage, protection by the laws, freedom of contract, trial by jury, etc. Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817, 99 N.W. 681. Or, as otherwise defined, civil rights are rights appertaining to a person in virtue of his citizenship in a state or community. Rights capable of being enforced or redressed in a civil action. Also a term applied to certain rights secured to citizens of the United States by the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments to the constitution, and by various acts of congress made in pursuance thereof. State of Iowa v. Railroad Co., C.C.Iowa, 37 F. 498, 3 L.R.A. 554; State v. Powers, 51 N.J.L. 432, 17 A. 969.

Political rights consist in the power to participate, directly or indirectly, in the establishment or administration of government, such as the right of citizenship, that of suffrage, the right to hold public office, and the right of petition. Black Const. Law (3d Ed.) 524; Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817, 99 N.W. 681.

Personal rights is a term of rather vague import, but generally it may be said to mean the right of personal security, comprising those of life, limb, body, health, reputation, and the right of personal liberty.

As an Adjective

The term "right" means just, morally correct, consonant with ethical principles or rules of positive law. It is the opposite of wrong, unjust, illegal.

Old English Law

The term denoted an accusation or charge of crime. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 66 F.

Other Compound and Descriptive Terms

Base right. In Scotch law, a subordinate right; the right of a subvassal in the lands held by him. Bell.

Bill of rights. See Bill.

Common right. See Common.

Declaration of rights. See Bill of Rights, under Bill.

Existing right. See Existing Right.

Marital rights. See Marital.

Mere right. In the law of real estate, the mere right of property in land; the right of a proprietor, but without possession or even the right of possession; the abstract right of property.

Private rights. Those rights which appertain to a particular individual or individuals, and relate either tc the person, or to personal or real property. 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 3.

The term "private right," as used with reference to the right of a person to injunctive relief, is used as a mere distinguishing term from "public right," and not as meaning any particular monopolistic right. Long v. Southern Express Co., D.C.Fla., 201 F. 441, 444. "Private rights" of a municipal corporation, as effecting the running of the statute of limitations, are such as only that part of the municipality included within the corporate limits of a municipality are interested in. Board of Com'rs of Woodward County v. Willett, 49 Okl. 254, 152 P. 365, 366, L.R.A. 1916E, 92.

Real right. In Scotch law. That which entitles him who is vested with it to possess the subject as his own, and, if in the possession of another, to demand from him its actual possession. Real rights affect the subject itself; personal are founded in obligation. Erskine, Inst. 3, 1, 2.

Right heir. See Heir.

Riparian rights. See Riparian.

Vested rights. See Vested.

Writ of right. A procedure for the recovery of real property after not more than sixty years' adverse possession; the highest writ in the law, sometimes called, to distinguish it from others of the droitural class, the "writ of right proper." Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27. 3 Steph. Comm. 392.

Writ of right close. An abolished writ which lay for tenants in ancient demesne, and others of a similar nature, to try the right of their lands and tenements in the court of the lord exclusively. 1 Steph. Comm. 224.

RIGHT AND WRONG TEST. Under "this test" if, at the time of committing an act, the party was laboring under such a defect of reason from disease of the mind as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or if he did know the nature and quality thereof, that he did not know that he was doing what was wrong, he should not be held responsible under the criminal law. State v. Wallace, 170 Or. 60, 131 P.2d 222, 229, 230.

RIGHT IN ACTION. This is a phrase frequently used in place of chose in action, and having an identical meaning.

RIGHT IN COURT. See Rectus in Curia.

RIGHT OF ACTION. The right to bring suit; a legal right to maintain an action, growing out of a given transaction or state of facts and based thereon. Hibbard v. Clark, 56 N.H. 155, 22 Am. Rep. 442; Webster v. County Com'rs, 63 Me. 29.

By the old writers the phrase is commonly used to denote that a person has lost a right of entry, and has nothing but a right of action left. Co.Litt. 363b.

RIGHT OF DISCUSSION. In Scotch law. The right which the cautioner (surety) has to insist that the creditor shall do his best to compel the performance of the contract by the principal debtor, before he shall be called upon. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF DIVISION. In Scotch law. The right which each of several cautioners (sureties) has to refuse to answer for more than his own share of the debt. To entitle the cautioner to this right the other cautioners must be solvent, and there must be no words in the bond to exclude it. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF ENTRY. The right of taking or resuming possession of land by entering on it in a peaceable manner.

RIGHT OF HABITATION. In Louisiana. The right to occupy another man's house as a dwelling, without paying rent or other compensation. Civ.Code La. art. 627.

RIGHT OF LOCAL SELF–GOVERNMENT. Power of citizens to govern themselves, as to matters purely local in nature, through officers of their own selection. City of Ardmore v. Excise Board of Carter County, 155 Oki. 126, 8 P.2d 2, 11.

RIGHT OF POSSESSION. Which may reside in one man, while another has the actual possession, being the right to enter and turn out such actual occupant; e. g., the right of a disseisee. An apparent right of possession is one which may be defeated by a better; an actual right of possession, one which will stand the test against all opponents. 2 Bl. Comm. 196; Cahill v. Pine Creek Oil Co., 38 Okl. 568, 134 P. 64, 65.

RIGHT OF PRIVACY. See Privacy.

RIGHT OF PROPERTY. The mere right of property in land; the abstract right which remains to the owner after he has lost the right of possession, and to recover which the writ of right was given. United with possession, and the right of possession, this right constitutes a complete title to lands, tenements, and hereditaments. 2 Bl. Comm. 197.

RIGHT OF REDEMPTION. The right to disencumber property or to free it from a claim or lien; specifically, the right (granted by statute only) to free property from the incumbrance of a foreclosure or other judicial sale, or to recover the title passing thereby, by paying what is due, with interest, costs, etc. Not to be confounded with the "equity of redemption," which exists independently of statute but must be exercised before sale. Mayer v. Farmers' Bank, 44 Iowa 216; Millett v. Mullen, 95 Me. 400, 49 A. 871. Western Land & Cattle Co. v. National Bank of Arizona at Phoenix, 28 Ariz. 270, 236 P. 725, 726.

RIGHT OF RELIEF. In Scotch law. The right of a cautioner (surety) to demand reimbursement from the principal debtor when he has been compelled to pay the debt. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF REPRESENTATION AND PERFORMANCE. By the acts 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 15, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, the author of a play, opera, or musical composition, or his assignee, has the sole right of representing or causing it to be represented in public at any place in the British dominions during the same period as the copyright in the work exists. The right is distinct from the copyright, and requires to be separately registered. Sweet.

RIGHT OF SEARCH. In international law. The right of one vessel, on the high seas, to stop a vessel of another nationality and examine her papers and (in some cases) her cargo. Thus, in time of war, a vessel of either belligerent has the right to search a neutral ship, encountered at sea, to ascertain whether the latter is carrying contraband goods.

RIGHT OF WAY. The right of passage or of way is a servitude imposed by law or by convention, and by virtue of which one has a right to pass on foot, or horseback, or in a vehicle, to drive beasts of burden or carts, through the estate of another. When this servitude results from the law, the exercise of it is confined to the wants of the person who has it. When it is the result of a contract, its extent and the mode of using it is regulated by the contract. Civ.Code La. art. 722.

"Right of way," in its strict meaning, is the right of passage over another man's ground; and in its legal and generally accepted meaning, in reference to a railway, it is a mere easement in the lands of others, obtained by lawful condemnation to public use or by purchase. It would be using the term in an unusual sense, by applying it to an absolute purchase of the fee-simple of lands to be used for a railway or any other kind of a way. Williams v. Western Union Ry. Co., 50 Wis. 76, 5 N.W. 482. And see Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 P. 879; Stuyvesant v. Woodruff. 21 N.J.L. 136, 57 Am. Dec. 156.

"Right of way" has a twofold significance, being sometimes used to mean the mere intangible right to cross, a right of crossing, a right of way, and often used to otherwise indicate that strip of land which a railroad appropriates to its own use, and upon which it builds its roadbed. Marion, B. & E. Traction Co. v. Simmons, 180 Ind. 289, 102 N.E. 132.

The "right of way" is a space of conventional width for one or more railroad tracks, while a "railroad yard" might be extended indefinitely. City of New York v. New York & H. R. Co., Sup., 169 N.Y.S. 12, 14.

RIGHT PATENT. An obsolete writ, which was brought for lands and tenements, and not for an advowson, or common, and lay only for an estate in fee-simple, and not for him who had a, lesser estate; as tenant in tail, tenant in frank marriage, or tenant for life. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 1.

RIGHT TO BEGIN. On the hearing or trial of a cause, or the argument of a demurrer, petition, etc., the right to begin is the right of first addressing the court or jury. The right to begin is frequently of importance, as the counsel who begins has also the right of replying or having the last word after the counsel on the opposite side has addressed the court or jury. Sweet.

RIGHT TO REDEEM. Right of redemption, which title see.

RIGHTS OF PERSONS. Rights which concern and are annexed to the persons of men. 1 Bl. Comm. 122.

RIGHTS OF THINGS. Such as a man may acquire over external objects, or things unconnected with his person. 1 Bl. Comm. 122.

RIGHTS, PETITION OF. See Petition.

RIGOR JURIS. Lat. Strictness of law. Latch, 150. Distinguished from gratia curice, favor of the court.

RIGOR MORTIS. In medical jurisprudence. Cadaveric rigidity; a rigidity or stiffening of the muscular tissue and joints of the body, which sets in at a greater or less interval after death, but usually within a few hours, and which is one of the recognized tests of death.

RING. A clique; an exclusive combination of persons for illegitimate or selfish purposes; as to control elections or political affairs, distribute offices, obtain contracts, control the market or the stock-exchange, etc. Schomberg v. Walker, 132 Cal. 224, 64 P. 290.

RING—DROPPING. In criminal law. A phrase applied in England to a trick frequently practised in committing larcenies.

It is difficult to define it; it will be sufficiently exemplified by the following cases. The prisoner, with some accomplices, being in company with the prosecutor, pretended to find a valuable ring wrapped up in a paper, appearing to be a jeweller's receipt for "a rich brilliant diamond ring." They offered to leave the ring with the prosecutor if he would deposit some money and his watch as a security. The prosecutor, having accordingly laid down his watch and money on a table, was beckoned out of the room by one of the confederates, while the others took away his watch and money. This was held to amount to a larceny; 1 Leach 273. In another case, under similar circumstances, the prisoner procured from the prosecutor twenty guineas, promising to return them the next morning, and leaving the false jewel with him. This ,was also held to be larceny; 1 Leach 314; 2 East, Pl.Cr. 679.

RINGING THE CHANGES. A larceny effected by tendering a large bill or coin in payment of a small purchase and after correct change has been given, asking for other change and repeating the request until in the confusion of mind created by so many operations, more money is obtained than the thief is entitled to. Howell v. State, 28 Ala. App. 249, 182 So. 96, 97.

RINGING UP. A custom among commission merchants and brokers (not unlike the clearing-house system) by which they exchange contracts for sale against contracts for purchase, or reciprocally cancel such contracts, adjust differences of price between themselves, and surrender margins. Samuels v. Oliver, 130 Ill. 73, 22 N.E. 499; U. S. v. New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange, 44 S.Ct. 225, 226, 263 U.S. 611, 68 L.Ed. 475.

RINGS—GIVING. In English practice. A custom observed by serjeants at law, on being called to that degree or order. The rings are given to the judges, and bear certain mottoes, selected by the serjeant about to take the degree. Brown.

RIOT. In criminal law. A tumultuous disturbance of the peace by three persons or more, assembling together of their own authority, with an intent mutually to assist each other against any who shall oppose them, in the execution of some enterprise of a private nature, and afterwards actually executing the same in a violent and turbulent manner, to the terror of the people, whether the act intended were of itself lawful or unlawful. Hawk. P. C. c. 65, § 1. State v. Stalcup, 23 N.C. 30, 35 Am.Dec. 732. Symonds v. State, 66 Okl.Cr. 49, 89 P.2d 970, 973.

When three or more persons together, and in a violent or tumultuous manner, assemble together to do an unlawful act, or together do a lawful act in an unlawful, violent, or tumultuous manner, to the disturbance of others, they are guilty of a riot. Any use of force or violence, disturbing the public peace, or any threat to use such force or violence, if accompanied by immediate power of execution, by two or more persons acting together, and without authority of law, is a riot.

RIOT ACT. A celebrated English statute, which provides that, if any twelve persons or more are unlawfully assembled and disturbing the peace, any sheriff, under-sheriff, justice of the peace, or mayor may, by proclamation, command them to disperse, (which is familiarly called "reading the riot act,") and that if they refuse to obey, and remain together for the space of one hour after such proclamation, they are all guilty of felony. The act is 1 Geo. I, St. 2, c. 5.

RIOTER. One who encourages, promotes, or takes part in riots. Symonds v. State, 66 Okl.Cr. 49, 89 P.2d 970, 974.

RIOTOSE. L. Lat. Riotously. A formal and essential word in old indictments for riots. 2 Strange, 834.

RIOTOUS ASSEMBLY. In English criminal law. The unlawful assembling of twelve persons or more, to the disturbance of the peace, and not dispersing upon proclamation. 4 Bl. Comm. 142; 4 Steph. Comm. 273. And see Madisonville v. Bishop, 113 Ky. 106, 67 S.W. 269, 57 L.R.A. 130.

RIOTOUSLY. A technical word, properly used in indictments for riot. It of itself implies force and violence. 2 Chit. Crim. Law, 489.

RIPA. Lat. The banks of a river, or the place beyond which the waters do not in their natural course overflow.

RIPARIA. A medieval Latin word, which Lord Coke takes to mean water running between two banks; in other places it is rendered "bank."

RIPARIAN. Belonging or relating to the bank of a river; of or on the bank. Land lying beyond the natural watershed of a stream is not "riparian." Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 58 P. 442, 77 Am.St.Rep. 158. Town of Gordonsville v. Zinn, 129 Va. 542, 106 S.E. 508, 513, 14 A.L.R. 318.

The term is sometimes used as relating to the shore of the sea or other tidal water, or of a lake or other considerable body of water not having the character of a watercourse. But this is not accurate. The proper word to be employed in such connections is "littoral."

RIPARIAN NATIONS. In international law. Those who possess opposite banks or different parts of banks of one and the same river.

RIPARIAN OWNER. A riparian proprietor; one who, owns land on the bank of a river. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 Mont. 152, 201 P. 702, 703. See, also, Littoral.

RIPARIAN PROPRIETOR. An owner of land, bounded generally upon a stream of water, and as such having a qualified property in the soil to the thread of the stream with the privileges annexed thereto by law. Potomac Steamboat Co. v. Upper Potomac Steamboat Co., 3 S.Ct. 445, 109 U.S. 672, 27 L.Ed. 1070.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS. The rights of the owners of lands on the banks of watercourses, relating to the water, its use, ownership of soil under the stream, accretions, etc. Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 128 Ala. 335, 30 So. 645, 64 L.R.A. 333, 86 Am.St.Rep. 143.

Generally speaking such rights are : (1) Use of water for general purposes, as bathing and domestic use; (2) to wharf out to navigability ; (3) access to navigable waters. Hilt v. Weber, 252 Mich. 198, 233 N.W. 159, 168, 71 A.L.R. 1238.

RIPARIAN WATER. Water which is below the highest line of normal flow of the river, or stream, as distinguished from flood water. Humphreys-Mexia Co. v. Arseneaux, 116 Tex. 603, 297 S.W. 225, 229, 53 A.L.R. 1147; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S.W. 458, 468.

RIPARUM USUS PUBLICUS EST JURE GENTIUM, SICUT IPSIUS FLUMINIS. The use of river-banks is by the law of nations public, like that of the stream itself. Dig. 1, 8, 5, pr.; Fleta, 1. 3, c. 1, § 5.

RIPE FOR JUDGMENT. A suit, when it is so far advanced, by verdict, default, confession, the determination of all pending motions, or other disposition of preliminary or disputed matters, that nothing remains for the court but to render the appropriate judgment. Hosmer v. Hoitt, 161 Mass. 173, 36 N.E. 835.

RIPTOWELL, or REAPTOWEL. A gratuity or reward given to tenants after they had reaped their lord's corn, or done other customary duties. Cowell.

RIPUARIAN LAW. An ancient code of laws by which the Ripuarii, a tribe of Franks who occupied the country upon the Rhine, the Meuse, and the Scheldt, were governed. They were first reduced to writing by Theodoric, king of Austrasia, and completed by Dagobert. Spelman.

RIPUARIAN PROPRIETORS. Owners of lands bounded by a river or watercourse.

RISCUS. L. Lat. In the civil law. A chest for the keeping of clothing. Calvin.

RISING OF COURT. Properly the final adjournment of the court for the term, though the term is also sometimes used to express the cessation of judicial business for the day or for a recess; it is the opposite of "sitting" or "session." State v. Weaver, 11 Neb. 163, 8 N.W. 385.

RISK. In insurance law; the danger or hazard of a loss of the property insured; the casualty contemplated in a contract of insurance; the degree of hazard; a specified contingency or peril; and, colloquially, the specific house, factory, ship, etc., covered by the policy. People ex rel. Daily Credit Service Corporation v. May, 147 N.Y.S. 487, 489, 162 App.Div. 215; Old Colony Trust Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.1, 102 F.2d 380, 382.

Assumption of risk. See that title.

Obvious risk. See Obvious.

Perceivable risk. See Perceivable.

RISK INCIDENT TO EMPLOYMENT. Within Workmen's Compensation Acts, one growing out of or connected with what workman must do in fulfilling his contract of service, and may be either ordinary risk, directly connected with employment, or extraordinary risk indirectly connected with employment because of its special nature. Belyus v. Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., 115 N.J.L. 43, 178 A. 181, 184. Olson Drilling Co. v. Industrial Commission, 386 Ill. 402, 54 N.E.2d 452, 454.

RISK OF NAVIGATION. Not the equivalent of "perils of navigation," but is of more comprehensive import than the latter. Pitcher v. Hennessey, 48 N.Y. 419.

RISTOURNE. Fr. In insurance law; the dissolution of a policy or contract of insurance for any cause. Emerig. Traite des Assur. c. 16.

RITE. Lat. Duly and formally; legally; properly; technically.

RIVAGE. In French law. The shore, as of the sea.

In English law. A toll anciently paid to the crotvn for the passage of boats or vessels on certain rivers. Cowell.

RIVEARE. To have the liberty of a river for fishing and fowling. Cowell.

RIVER. A natural stream of water, of greater volume than a creek or rivulet, flowing in a more or less permanent bed or channel, between defined banks or walls, with a current which may either be continuous in one direction or affected by the ebb and flow of the tide. Alabama v. Georgia, 23 How. 513, 16 L.Ed. 556; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S.W. 458, 467.

Rivers are public or private; and of public rivers some are navigable and others not. The common-law distinction is that navigable rivers are those only wherein the tide ebbs and flows. But, in modern usage, any river is navigable which affords passage to ships and vessels, irrespective of its being affected by the tide.

Public river. A river capable in its natural state of some useful service to the public because of its existence as such, navigability being not the sole test. St. Regis Paper Co. v. New Hampshire Water Resources Board, 92 N.H. 164, 26 A.2d 832, 838.

RIVER BANKS. The boundaries which confine the water to its channel throughout the entire width when stream is carrying its maximum quantity of water. Mammoth Gold Dredging Co. v. Forbes, 39 Cal.App.2d 739, 104 P.2d 131, 137.

RIXA. Lat. In the civil law. A quarrel; a strife of words. Calvin.

RIXATRIX. In old English law. A scold; a scolding or quarrelsome woman. 4 Bl. Comm. 168.

ROAD. A highway; an open way or public passage; a line of travel or communication extending from one town or place to another; a strip of land appropriated and used for purposes of travel and communication between different places. Shannon v. Martin, 164 Ga. 872, 139 S.E. 671, 672, 54 A.L.R. 1246; San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Rys. v. Alameda County, 66 Cal.App. 77, 225 P. 304, 305. For "Farm-To-Market Roads," see that title.

In maritime law. An open passage of the sea that receives its denomination commonly from some part adjacent, which, though it lie out at sea, yet, in respect of the situation of the land adjacent, and the depth and wideness of the place, is a safe place for the common riding or anchoring of ships; as Dover road, Kirkley road, etc. Hale de Jure Mar. pt. 2, c. 2; The Cuzco, D.C. Wash., 225 F. 169, 176.

Law of the road. Custom or practice which has become crystallized into accepted system of rules regulating travel on highways. Short v. Robinson, 280 Ky. 707, 134 S.W.2d 594, 596. It relates to safety of travel, and is adjustment of rights of travelers using highway at same time. Cofran v. Griffin, 85 N.H. 29, 153 A. 817, 818.

In its specific application, the phrase "law of the road" refers to the rule which requires that vehicles meeting shall turn to the right in passing, or keep to the right of the middle of the highway. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., §§ 636, 891.

Private road. This term has various meanings: (1) A road, the soil of which belongs to the owner of the land which it traverses, but which is burdened with a right of way. Morgan v. Livingston, 6 Mart. 0. S. (La.) 231. (2) A neighborhood way, not commonly used by others than the people of the neighborhood, though it may be used by any one having occasion. State v. Mobley, 1 McMul. (S.C.) 44. (3) A road intended for the use of one or more private individuals, and not wanted nor intended for general public use, which may be opened across the lands of other persons by statutory authority in some states. Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 P. 915. (4) A road which is only open for the benefit of certain individuals to go from and to their homes for the service of their lands and for the use of some estates exclusively.

Public road. A highway; a road or way established and adopted (or accepted as a dedication) by the proper authorities for the use of the general public, and over which every person has a right to pass and to use it for all purposes of travel or transportation to which it is adapted and devoted. State ex rel. Clay County v. Hackmann, 270 Mo. 658, 195 S.W. 706, 708; Schier v. State, 96 Ohio St. 245, 117 N.E. 229.

ROAD DISTRICTS. Public or quasi municipal corporations organized or authorized by statutory authority in many of the states for the special purpose of establishing, maintaining, and caring for public roads and highways within their limits, sometimes invested with powers of local taxation, and generally having elective officers styled "overseers" or "commissioners" of roads. Farmer v. Myles, 106 La. 333, 30 So. 858; San Bernardino County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 137 Cal. 659, 70 P. 782; Madden v. Lancaster County, C.C.A. Neb., 65 F. 191, 12 C.C.A. 566.

ROAD HOG. As applied to automobilists means that they selfishly occupy portions of the road which belong to others. Blue's Truck Line v. Harwell, 59 Ga.App. 305, 200 S.E. 500, 502.

ROAD TAX. A tax for the maintenance and repair of the public roads within the particular jurisdiction, levied either in money or in the form of so many days' labor on the public roads exacted of all the inhabitants of the district. See Lewin v. State, 77 Ala. 46.

ROADBED. The whole material laid in place and ready for travel. Menut & Parks Co. v. Cray, 114 Vt. 41, 39 A.2d 342, 345, 156 A.L.R. 404.

ROADSTEAD. In maritime law. A known general station for ships, notoriously used as such, and distinguished by the name; and not any spot where an anchor will find bottom and fix itself. 1 C. Rob. Adm. 232.

ROB. To take personalty in possession of another from his person or his presence, feToniously and against his will, by violence or by putting him in fear. People v. Flohr, 30 Cal.App.2d 576, 86 P. 2d 862, 864.

ROBBATOR. In old English law. A robber. Robbatores et burglatores, robbers and burglars. Bract. fol. 115b.

ROBBER. One who commits a robbery. The term is not in law synonymous with "thief," but applies only to one who steals with force or open violence. De Rothschild v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 7 Exch. 742; The Manitoba, D.C.N.Y., 104 F. 151.

ROBBERY. Felonious taking of personal property in the possession of another, from his person or immediate presence, and against his will, accomplished by means of force or fear. 1 Hawk. P. C. 25; 4 Bl. Comm. 243; United States v. Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. 209, F.Cas.No.15,494; Armstrong v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 217, 227 S.W. 162, 163; Robards v. State, 37 Okl.Cr. 371, 259 P. 166, 168. Where a person, either with violence or with threats of injury, and putting the person robbed in fear, takes and carries away a thing which is on the body, or in the immediate presence of the person from whom it is taken, under such circumstances that, in the absence of violence or threats, the act committed would be a theft. Steph. Crim. Dig. 208; 2 Russ. Crimes, 78. And see, further, State v. Osborne, 116 Iowa 479, 89 N.W. 1077. Thomas v. State, 91 Ala. 34, 9 So. 81.

Generally speaking, the elements of "robbery" are the taking of personal property or money from the person or presence of another by actual or constructive force without his consent and with the animus furandi or intent to steal. Robbery may thus be said to be a compound larceny, composed of the crime of larceny from the person with the aggravation of force, actual or constructive, used in the taking. Williams v. Mayo, 126 Fla. 871, 172 So. 86, 87.

Highway Robbery. The crime of robbery committed upon or near a public highway. State v. Brown, 113 N.C. 645, 18 S.E. 51; Anderson v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 247 P. 507, 510, 77 Cal.App. 641; The felonious and forcible taking of property from the person of another on a highway. State v. Holt, 192 N.C. 490, 135 S.E. 324, 325. It differs from robbery in general only in the place where it is committed. Robbery by hold-up originally applied to the stopping and robbery of traveling parties, but the term has acquired a broader meaning. It has come to be applied to robbery in general, by the use of force or putting in fear. Duluth St. Ry. Co. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 136 Minn. 299, 161 N.W. 595, 596, L.R.A. 1917D, 684. In England, by St. 23 Hen. VIII. c. 1, this was made felony without benefit of clergy, while robbery committed elsewhere was less severely punished. The distinction was abolished by St. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9, and in this country it has never prevailed generally.

ROBE. Fr. A word anciently used by sailors for the cargo of a ship. The Italian "roba" had the same meaning.

ROBERDSMEN. In old English law. Persons who, in the reign of Richard I., committed great outrages on the borders of England and Scotland. Said to have been the followers of Robert Hood, or Robin Hood. 4 Bl. Comm. 246.

ROD. A lineal measure of sixteen feet and a half, otherwise called a "perch."

ROD KNIGHTS. In feudal law. Certain servitors who held their land by serving their lords on horseback. Cowell.

ROD LICENSE. In Canadian law, a license, granted on payment of a tax or fee, permitting the licensee to angle for fish (particularly salmon) which are otherwise protected or preserved.

ROGARE. Lat. In Roman law. To ask or solicit. Rogare legem, to ask for the adoption of a law, i. e., to propose it for enactment, to bring in a bill. In a derivative sense, to vote for a law so proposed; to adopt or enact it.

ROGATIO. Lat. In Roman law. An asking for a law; a proposal of a law for adoption or passage. Derivatively, a law passed by such a form.

ROGATIO TESTIUM. This in making a nuncupative will, is where the testator formally calls upon the persons present to bear witness that he has declared his will. Williams' Ex'rs, 116; Browne, Prob. Pr. 59.

ROGATION WEEK. In English ecclesiastical law. The second week before Whitsunday, thus called from three fasts observed therein, the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, called "Rogation days," because of the extraordinary prayers then made for the fruits of the earth, or as a preparation for the devotion of Holy Thursday. Wharton.

ROGATIONES, QUIESTIONES, ET POSITIONES DEBENT ESSE SIMPLICES. Hob. 143. Demands, questions, and claims ought to be simple.

ROGATOR. Lat. In Roman law. The proposer of a law or rogation.

ROGATORY LETTERS. A commission from one judge to another requesting him to examine a witness. See Letter.

ROGO. Lat. In Roman law. I ask; I request. A precatory expression often used in wills. Dig. 30, 108, 13, 14.

ROGUE. In English criminal law. An idle and disorderly person; a trickster; a wandering beggar; a vagrant or vagabond. 4 Bl. Comm. 169.

ROLE D'EQUIPAGE, In French mercantile law. The list of a ship's crew; a muster roll.

ROLL, n. A schedule of parchment which may be turned up with the hand in the form of a pipe or tube. Jacob.

A schedule or sheet of parchment on which legal proceedings are entered. Brown.

In English practice, there were formerly a great variety of these rolls, appropriated to the different proceedings; such as the warrant of attorney roll, the process roll, the recognizance roll, the imparlance roll, the plea roll, the issue roll, the judgment roll, the scire facias roll, and the roil of proceedings on writs of error. 2 Tidd, Pr. 729, 730.

In modern practice, the term is sometimes used to denote a record of the proceedings of a court or public office.

Thus, in English practice, the roll of parchment on which the issue is entered is termed the "Issue roll." So the rolls of a manor, wherein the names, rents, and services of the tenants are copied and enrolled, are termed the "court rolls." There are also various other rolls ; as those which contain the records of the court of chancery, those which contain the registers of the proceedings of old parliaments, called "rolls of parliament," etc. Brown.

Assessment Roll

In taxation, the list or roll of taxable persons and property, completed, verified, and deposited by the assessors. Bank v. Genoa, 28 Misc. 71, 59 N.Y.S. 829; Adams v. Brennan, 72 Miss. 894, 18 So. 482.

Judgment Roll

In English practice. A roll of parchment containing the entries of the proceedings in an action at law to the entry of judgment inclusive, and which is filed in the treasury of the court. 1 Arch. Pr. K. B. 227, 228; 2 Tidd, Pr. 931; Pettis v. Johnston, 78 Okl. 277, 190 P. 681, 700. A record made of the issue roll (q, v.), which, after final judgment has been given in the cause, assumes this name. Steph. Pl. Andr. ed. § 97; 3 Chitty, Stat. 514; Freem. Judg. § 75. The Judicature Act of 1875 requires every judgment to be entered in a book by the proper officer.

It has been abolished, as such, in New Jersey; Jennings v. Philadelphia & R. Co., C.C.N.J., 23 F. 569, 571. There is said to be hopeless confusion in the cases in this country as to what constitutes the judgment roll. All the cases agree that the complaint, the summons and, most of them, the return on the summons, the affidavit for publication in case of constructive service, and papers of that sort are included therein; Terry v. Gibson, 23 Colo.App. 273, 128 P. 1127, 1128, citing many cases, and also 1 Gr. Evid. 511, and Freem.Judg. § 78; Madsen v. Hodson, 69 Utah 527, 256 P. 792, 793. See the title Roll.

Master of the Rolls

See Master.

Oblate Rolls

See that title.

Rolls of Parliament

The manuscript registers of the proceedings of old parliaments; in these rolls are likewise a great many decisions of difficult points of law, which were frequently, in former times, referred to the determination of this supreme court by the judges of both benches, etc.

Rolls of the Exchequer

There are several in this court relating to the revenue of the country.

Rolls of the Temple

In English law. In each of the two Temples is a roll called the "calves-head roll," wherein every bencher, barrister, and student is taxed yearly; also meals to the cook and other officers of the houses, in consideration of a dinner of calves-head, provided in Easter term. Orig. Jur. 199.

Rolls Office of the Chancery

In English law. An office in Chancery Lane, London, which contains rolls and records of the high court of chancery, the master whereof is the second person in the chancery, etc. The rolls court was there held, the master of the rolls sitting as judge; and that judge still sits there as a judge of the chancery division of the high court of justice. Wharton.

Tax Roll

A schedule or list of the persons and property subject to the payment of a particular tax, with the amounts severally due, prepared and authenticated in proper form to warrant the collecting officers to proceed with the enforcement of the tax. Babcock v. Beaver Creek Tp., 64 Mich. 601, 31 N. W. 423; Smith v. Scully, 66 Kan. 139, 71 P. 249.

ROLL, v. To rob. Lasecki v. State, 190 Wis. 274, 208 N.W. 868, 869. Long v. State, 141 S.W.2d 349, 350, 139 Tex.Cr.R. 536.

ROLLING. En route; on way to destination; in transit. Sales of goods are often made "rolling" f. o. b. a designated place. Vaccaro Bros. & Co. v. Farris, 92 W.Va. 655, 115 S.E. 830, 831.

ROLLING STOCK. The portable or movable apparatus and machinery of a railroad, particularly such as moves on the road, viz., engines, cars, tenders, coaches, and trucks. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Flathead County, 61 Mont. 263, 202 P. 198, 200; Black Diamond Coal Mining Co. v. Glover Mach. Works, 212 Ala. 654, 103 So. 853, 854.

ROLLING STOCK PROTECTION ACT. The act of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 50, passed to protect the rolling stock of railways from distress or sale in certain cases.

ROMA PEDITIE. Lat. Pilgrims that traveled to Rome on foot.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHARITIES ACT. The statute 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, providing a method for enjoying estates given upon trust for Roman Catholics, but invalidated by reason of certain of the trusts being superstitious or otherwise illegal. 3 Steph. Comm. 76.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The juristic personality of the Roman Catholic Church, with the right to sue and to take and hold property has been recognized by all systems of European law from the fourth century. It was formally recognized between Spain and the Papacy and by Spanish laws from the beginning of the settlements in the Indies, also by our treaty with Spain in 1898, whereby its property rights were solemnly safeguarded. Municipality of Ponce v. Roman Catholic Church in Porto Rico, 28 S.Ct. 737, 210 U.S. 296, 52 L.Ed. 1068. To the same effect as to the Philippines; Santos v. Roman Catholic Church, 29 S.Ct. 338, 212 U.S. 463, 53 L.Ed. 599.

ROMAN LAW. In a general sense, comprehends all the laws which prevailed among the Romans, without regard to the time of their origin, including the collections of Justinian.

In a more restricted sense, the Germans understand by this term merely the law of Justinian, as adopted by them. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 18.

In England and America, it appears to be customary to use the phrase, indifferently with "the civil law," to designate the whole system of Roman jurisprudence, including the Corpus Juris Civilis; or, if any distinction is drawn, the expression "civil law" denotes the system of jurisprudence obtaining in those countries of continental Europe which have derived their juridical notions and principles from the Justinian collection, while "Roman law" is reserved as the proper appellation of the body of law developed under the government of Rome from the earliest times to the fall of the empire.

ROME-SCOT, or ROME-PENNY. Peter-pence, (q. v.). Cowell.

ROMNEY MARSH. A tract of land in the county of Kent, England, containing twenty-four thousand acres, governed by certain ancient and equitable laws of sewers, composed by Henry de Bathe, a venerable judge in the reign of King Henry III.; from which laws all commissioners of sewers in England may receive light and direction. 3 Bl.Comm. 73, note t; 4 Inst. 276.

ROOD OF LAND. The fourth part of an acre in square measure, or one thousand two hundred and ten square yards.

ROOM. A space for occupancy or use inclosed on all sides, as in building or apartment, frequently named for use to which it is put as bedroom, dining room, toolroom. Featherstone v. Dessert, 173 Wash. 264, 22 P.2d 1050.

ROOMER. A lodger, one who rents a room or rooms in a house. Atlantic City v. Le Beck, 125 N.J.L. 373, 15 A.2d 653, 654.

ROOT OF DESCENT. The same as "stock of descent."

ROOT OF TITLE. The document with which an abstract of title properly commences. Sweet.

ROYALTY BONUS. The consideration for oil and gas lease over and above the usual royalty of one-eighth. Sheppard v. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co., Tex.Civ.App., 125 S.W.2d 643, 648.

RUBRIC. The directions in the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England are so called, being, in the authorized version of 1662, printed in red letters.

RUBRIC OF A STATUTE. Its title, which was anciently printed in red letters. It serves to show the object of the legislature, and thence affords the means of interpreting the body of the act; hence the phrase, of an argument, "a rubro ad' nigrum." Wharton.

RUDENESS. Roughness; incivility; violence. Touching another with rudeness may constitute a battery.

RUINA. Lat. In the civil law. Ruin, the falling of a house. Dig. 47, 9.

RULE, v. To command or require by a rule of court; as, to rule the sheriff to return the writ, to rule the defendant to plead. To settle or decide a point of law arising upon a trial at nisi pries; and, when it is said of a judge presiding at such a trial that he "ruled" so and so, it is meant that he laid down, settled, or decided such and such to be the law.

RULE, n. An established standard, guide, or regulation; a principle or regulation set up by authority, prescribing or directing action or forbearance; as, the rules of a legislative body, of a company, court, public office, of the law, of ethics. A regulation made by a court of justice or public office with reference to the conduct of business therein.

An order made by a court, at the instance of one of the parties to a suit, commanding a ministerial officer, or the opposite party, to do some act, or to show cause why some act should not be_ done. It is usually upon some interlocutory matter, and has not the force or solemnity of a decree or judgment.

A rule of law. Thus, we speak of the rule against perpetuities; the rule in Shelley's Case, etc.

Cross-Rules

These were rules where each of the opposite litigants obtained a rule nisi, as the plaintiff to increase the damages, and the defendant to enter a nonsuit. Wharton.

General Rules

General or standing orders of a court, in relation to practice, etc.

Rule Absolute

One which commands the subject-matter of the rule to be forthwith enforced. It is usual, when the party has failed to show sufficient cause against a rule nisi, to "make the rule absolute," i. e., imperative and final.

Rule Against Perpetuities

See that title.

Rule—Day

In practice. The day on which a rule is returnable, or on which the act or duty enjoined by a rule is to be performed. Cook v. Cook, 18 Fla. 637.

Rule Discharged

A term indicating that the court has refused to take the action sought by the rule, or has decided that the cause shown against the rule is deemed sufficient.

Rule in Shelley's Case

See Shelley's Case, Rule in.

Rule Nisi

A rule which will become imperative and final !unless cause be shown against it. This rule commands the party to show cause why he should not be compelled to do the act required, or why the object of the rule should not be enforced.

Rule of 1756

A rule of international law, first practically established in 1756, by which neutrals, in time of war, are prohibited from carrying on with a belligerent power a trade which is not open to them in time of peace. 1 Kent, Comm. 82.

Rule of Apportionment

Rule that, where subdivided tract contains more or less than aggregate amount called for, excess or deficiency is apportioned among several tracts. Geiger v. Uhl, 204 Ind. 135, 180 N.E. 10, 12.

Rules of Course

Rules of course are rules which courts authorize their officers to grant without formal application to a judge. Such rules were technically termed in English practice, "side bar rules", because formerly they were moved for by the attorneys at the side bar in court. Brown.

Rules of Court

The rules for regulating the practice of the different courts, which the judges are empowered to frame and put in force as occasion may require. Brown; Goodlett v. Charles, 14 Rich. Law (S. C.) 49.

Rule of Four

The Supreme Court's practice of granting certiorari on vote of four Justices. Rogers v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., Ill., Mo., N.Y., Ohio, 77 S.Ct. 459, 478, 357 U.S. 521, 1 L.Ed.2d 515.

Rule of Kent

Where realty is given by will absolutely to one person, with gift over to another of such portion as may remain undisposed of by first taker at his death, gift over is void, as repugnant to absolute property first given. Andrews v. Andrews, 116 S.E.2d 436, 440, 253 N.C. 139.

Rule of Law

A legal principle, of general application, sanctioned by the recognition of authorities, and usually expressed in the form of a maxim or logical proposition. Called a "rule," because in doubtful or unforeseen cases it is a guide or norm for their decision. Toullier, tit. prel. no. 17.

Rule of Lenity

Where the intention of Congress is not clear from the act itself and reasonable minds might differ as to its intention, the court will adopt the less harsh meaning. U. S. v. Callanan, D.C.Mo., 173 F.Supp. 98, 100.

Rules of Practice

Certain orders made by the courts for the purpose of regulating the practice in actions and other proceedings before them.

Rule of Presumption

Rule changes one of burdens of proof, that is, it declares that main fact will be inferred or assumed from some other fact until evidence to contrary is introduced. Barrett v. U. S., C.A.Ga., 322 F.2d 292, 294.

Rules of Procedure

Rules made by a legislative body concerning the mode and manner of conducting its business. Heiskell v. Baltimore, 65 Md. 125, 4 A. 116, 57 Am. Rep. 308.

Rule of Property

A settled rule or principle, resting usually on precedents or a course of decisions, regulating the ownership or devolution of property. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Adams, 81 Miss. 90, 32 So. 937.

Rule of the Road

The popular English name for the regulations governing the navigation of vessels in public waters, with a view to preventing collisions. Sweet.

Rule to Plead

A rule of court, taken by a plaintiff as of course, requiring the defendant to plead within a given time, on pain of having judgment taken against him by default.

Rule to Show Cause

A rule commanding the party to appear and show cause why he should not be compelled to do the act required, or why the object of the rule should not be enforced; a rule nisi, (q. v.).

Special Rule

Rules granted without any motion in court, or when the motion is only assumed to have been made, and is not actually made, are called "common" rules; while the rules granted upon motion actually made to the court in term, or upon a judge's order in vacation, are termed "special" rules. Brown. The term may also be understood as opposed to "general" rule; in which case it means a particular direction, in a matter of practice, made for the purposes of a particular case.

RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. Principle that no interest in property is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than 21 years, plus period of gestation, after some life or lives in being at time of creation of interest. Perkins v. Iglehart, 183 Md. 520, 39 A.2d 672, 676. Bliven v. Borden, 56 R.I. 283, 185 A. 239, 244. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Bassett, 85 S.W.2d 569, 575, 337 Mo. 604, 101 A.L.R. 1266.

Some states modified this common law principle by statute.

See, also, Perpetuity.

RULES. In American practice. This term is sometimes used, by metonymy, to denote a time or season in the judicial year when motions may be made and rules taken, as special terms or argument-days, or even the vacations, as distinguished from the regular terms of the courts for the trial of causes; and, by a further extension of its meaning, it may denote proceedings in an action taken out of court. Thus, "an irregularity committed at rules may be corrected at the next term of the court." Southall's Adm'r v. Exchange Bank, 12 Grat. (Va.) 312.

RULES OF A PRISON. Certain limits without the walls, within which all prisoners in custody in civil actions were allowed to live, upon giving sufficient security to the marshal not to escape.

RULES OF THE KING'S BENCH PRISON. In English practice. Certain limits beyond the walls of the prison, within which all prisoners in custody in civil actions were allowed to live, upon giving security by bond, with two sufficient sureties, to the marshal, not to escape, and paying him a certain percentage on the amount of the debts for which they were detained. Holthouse.

RUMOR. Flying or popular report; a current story passing from one person to another without any known authority for the truth of it. Webster. It is not generally admissible in evidence. Smith v. Moore, 74 Vt. 81, 52 A. 320; Gaffney v. Royal Neighbors of America, 31 Idaho 549, 174 P. 1014, 1017; State v. Vettere, 76 Mont. 574, 248 P. 179, 183.

RUN, v. To have currency or legal validity in a prescribed territory; as, the writ runs throughout the county.

To have applicability or legal effect during a prescribed period of time; as, the statute of limitations has run against the claim.

To follow or accompany; to be attached to another thing in pursuing a prescribed course or direction; as, the covenant runs with the land.

To conduct, manage, carry on. State v. Kamuda, 98 Vt. 466, 129 A. 306, 308.

RUN, n. In American law. A watercourse of small size. Webb v. Bedford, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 354.

RUNCARIA. In old records. Land full of brambles and briars. 1 Inst. 5a.

RUNCINUS. In old English law. A load-horse; a sumpter-horse or cart-horse.

RUNDLET, or RUNLET. A measure of wine, oil, etc., containing eighteen gallons and a half. Cowell.

RUNNING ACCOUNT. An open unsettled account, as distinguished from a stated and liquidated account. "Running accounts" mean mutual accounts and reciprocal demands between the parties, which accounts and demands remain open and unsettled. Brackenridge v. Baltzell, 1 Ind. 335; Badger Lumber Co. v. W. F. Lyons Ice & Power Co., 174 Mo.App. 414, 160 S.W. 49, 52; Hollingsworth v. Allen, 176 N.C. 629, 97 S.E. 625.

RUNNING A SWITCH. In railroad parlance, going through a switch not properly aligned for the movement made. Benton v. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co., Mo., 182 S.W.2d 61, 63.

RUNNING AT LARGE. This term is applied to wandering or straying animals. Dixon v. Lewis, 94 Conn. 548, 109 A. 809, 810; Uebele v. State, 21 Ohio App. 459, 153 N.E. 215, 216; Finley v. Barker, 219 Mich. 442, 189 N.W. 197, 200.

RUNNING DAYS. Days counted in their regular succession on the calendar, including Sundays and holidays. Brown v. Johnson, 10 Mees. & W. 334; Crowell v. Barreda, 16 Gray (Mass.) 472; Davis v. Pendergast, 7 F.Cas. 162.

RUNNING LEASE. In old books. A lease which provided that the tenancy should not be confined to any portion of the land granted, and allowed the tenant the use of all the land he could clear, to distinguish it from one confined to a particular division, circumscribed by metes and bounds, within a larger tract. Cowan v. Hatcher, Tenn.Ch. App., 59 S.W. 691.

RUNNING LOOSE. As applied to an engine. Running forward without cars attached to it. Testerman v. Hines, 88 W.Va. 547, 107 S.E. 201.

RUNNING OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A metaphorical expression, by which is meant that the time mentioned in the statute of limitations is considered as passing. United States v. Markowitz, D.C.Cal., 34 F.Supp. 827, 829.

RUNNING POLICY. One which contemplates successive insurances, and which provides that the object of the policy may be from time to time defined, especially as to the subjects of insurance, by additional statements or indorsements. Corporation of London Assurance v. Paterson, 106 Ga. 538, 32 S.E. 650.

RUNNING WITH THE LAND. A covenant is said to run with the land when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of that land. Brown.

RUNNING WITH THE REVERSION. A covenant is said to run with the reversion when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of that reversion. Brown.

RUNRIG LANDS. Lands in Scotland where the ridges of a field belong alternatively to different proprietors. Anciently this kind of possession was advantageous in giving a united interest to tenants to resist inroads. By the act of 1695, c. 23, a division of these lands was authorized, with the exception of lands belonging to corporations. Wharton.

RUPEE. A silver coin of India, rated at 2s. for the current, and 2s. 3d. for the Bombay, rupee.

RUPTUINI. Lat. In the civil law. Broken. A term applied to a will. Inst. 2, 17, 3.

RURAL DEANERY. The circuit of an archdeacon's and rural dean's jurisdictions. Every rural deanery is divided into parishes. See 1 Steph. Comm. 117.

RURAL DEANS. In English ecclesiastical law. Very ancient officers of the church, almost grown out of use, until about the middle of the present century, about which time they were generally revived, whose deaneries are as an ecclesiastical division of the diocese or archdeaconry. They are deputies of the bishop, planted all round his diocese, to inspect the conduct of the parochial clergy, to inquire into and report dilapidations, and to examine candidates for confirmation, armed in minuter matters with an inferior degree of judicial and coercive authority. Wharton.

RURAL SERVITUDE. In the civil law. A servitude annexed to a rural estate, (prcedium rusticum.)

RUSE DE GUERRE. Fr. A trick in war; a stratagem.

RUSTICI. Lat. In feudal law. Natives of a conquered country.

In old English law. Inferior country tenants, churls, or chorls, who held cottages and lands by the services of plowing, and other labors of agriculture, for the 19rd. Cowell.

RUSTICUM FORUM. Lat. A rude, unlearned, or unlettered tribunal; a term sometimes applied to arbitrators selected by the parties to settle a dispute. Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 2 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 339; Dickinson v. Chesapeake & 0. R. Co., 7 W.Va. 429.

RUSTICUM JUDICIUM. Lat. In maritime law. A rough or rude judgment or decision. A judgment in admiralty dividing the damages caused by a collision between the two ships. 3 Kent, Comm. 231; Story, Bailm. § 608a. The Victory, C.C.A. Va., 68 F. 400, 15 C.C.A. 490.

RUSTLER. Cattle thief. Galeppi v. C. Swanston and Son, 107 Cal.App. 30, 290 P. 116, 119.

RUTA. Lat. In the civil law. Things extracted from land; as sand, chalk, coal, and such other matters.

RUTA ET CJESA. In the civil law. Things dug, (as sand and lime,) and things cut, (as wood, coal, etc.) Dig. 19, 1, 17, 6. Words used in conveyancing.

RYOT. In India. A peasant, subject, or tenant of house or land. Wharton.

RYOT-TENURE. A system of land-tenure, where the government takes the place of landowners and collects the rent by means of tax gatherers. The farming is done by poor peasants, (ryots), who find the capital, so far as there is any, and also do the work. The system exists in Turkey, Egypt, Persia, and other Eastern countries, and in a modified form in British India. After slavery, it is accounted the worst of all systems, because the government can fix the rent at what it pleases, and it is difficult to distinguish between rent and taxes.

S

S. As an abbreviation, this letter stands for "section," "statute," and various other words of which it is the initial.

S. B. An abbreviation for "senate bill."

S. B. A. Small Business Administration.

S. C. An abbreviation for "same case." Inserted between two citations, it indicates that the same case is reported in both places. It is also an abbreviation for "supreme court," and for "select cases;" also for "South Carolina."

S. D. An abbreviation for "southern district."

S/D B/L. The abbreviation "S/D B/L" in a contract of sale means sight draft—bill of lading attached. Attalla Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Goddard, 207 Ala. 287, 92 So. 794, 796.

SACRA. Lat. In Roman law. The right to participate in the sacred rites of the city. Butl.Hor. Jur. 27.

SACRAMENTALES. L. Lat. In feudal law. Compurgators; persons who came to purge a defendant by their oath that they believed him innocent.

SACRAMENTI ACTIO. Lat. In the older practice of the Roman law, this was one of the forms of legis actio, consisting in the deposit of a stake or juridical wager. See Sacramentum, SACRAMENTUM. Lat.

Roman Law

An oath, as being a very sacred thing; more particularly, the oath taken by soldiers to be true to their general and their country. Ainsw. Lex.

In one of the formal methods of beginning an action at law (legis actiones) known to the early Roman jurisprudence, the sacramentum was a sum of money deposited in court by each of the litigating parties, as a kind of wager or forfeit, to abide the result of the suit. The successful party received back his stake; the losing party forfeited his, and it was paid into the public treasury, to be expended for sacred objects, (in sacris rebus,) whence the name. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 203.

Common Law

An oath. Cowell.

SACRAMENTUM DECISIONIS. The voluntary or decisive oath of the civil law, where one of the parties to a suit, not being able to prove his case, offers to refer the decision of the cause to the oath of his adversary, who is bound to accept or make the same offer on his part, or the whole is considered as confessed by him. 3 Bl.Comm. 342.

SACRAMENTUM FIDELITATIS. In old English law. The oath of fealty. Reg. Orig. 303.

SACRAMENTUM HABET IN SE TRES COMITES,—VERITATEM, JUSTITIAM, ET JUDICIUM; VERITAS HABENDA EST IN JURATO; JUSTITIA ET JUSTICIUM IN JUDICE. An oath has in it three component parts,—truth, justice, and judgment; truth in the party swearing; justice and judgment in the judge administering the oath. 3 Inst. 160.

SACRAMENTUM SI FATUUM FUERIT, LICET FALSUM, TAMEN NON COMMITTIT PERJURIUM. 2 Inst. 167. A foolish oath, though false, makes not perjury.

SAFE. A metal receptacle for the preservation of valuables.

SAFE-CONDUCT. A guaranty or security granted by the king under the great seal to a stranger, for his safe coming into and passing out of the kingdom. Cowell.

One of the papers usually carried by vessels in time of war, and necessary to the safety of neutral merchantmen. It is in the nature of a license to the vessel to proceed on a designated voyage, and commonly contains the name of the master, the name, description, and nationality of the ship, the voyage intended, and other matters.

A distinction is sometimes made between a passport, conferring a general permission to travel in the territory belonging to, or occupied by, the belligerent, and a safe-conduct, conferring permission upon an enemy subject or others to proceed to a particular place for a defined object. II Opp. § 218.

SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY. A company which maintains vaults for the deposit and safe-keeping of valuables in which compartments or boxes are rented to customers who have exclusive access thereto, subject to the oversight and under the rules and regulations of the company.

SAFE LIMIT OF SPEED. As regards limitation on speed of automobiles at crossings, the limit at which one may discern the approaching train and stop before he is in the danger zone. Horton v. New York Cent. R. Co., 200 N.Y.S. 365, 366, 205 App.Div. 763.

SAFE LOADING PLACE. A place where a vessel can be rendered safe for loading by reasonable measures of precaution. 14 Q.B.D. 105; 54 L.J. Q.B. 121.

SAFE PLACE TO WORK. In the law of master and servant, a place in which the master has eliminated all danger which the exercise of reasonable care by the master would remove or guard against. Melody v. Des Moines Union Ry. Co., 161 Iowa, 695, 141 N.W. 438, 439; Buick v. Olds Motor Works, 175 Mich. 640, 141 N.W. 680, 683, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 883.

Master's duty to provide a "safe place" to work includes places to and from which the employee might be required or expected to go. High Splint Coal Co. v. Ramey's Adm'x, 271 Ky. 532, 112 S.W.2d 1007, 1008.

The rule of furnishing of a "safe place to work" is generally applicable in cases of master and servant or in cases where work is being done on property, vessel, or otherwise, of owner. The Ellenor, D.C.Fla., 39 F.Supp. 576, 580.

SAILING. When a vessel quits her moorings, in complete readiness for sea, and it is the actual and real intention of the master to proceed on the voyage, and she is afterwards stopped by head winds and comes to anchor, still intending to proceed as soon as wind and weather will permit, this is a sailing on the voyage within the terms of a policy of insurance. Bowen v. Hope Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 278, 32 Am.Dec. 213.

SAILING INSTRUCTIONS. Written or printed directions, delivered by the commanding officer of a convoy to the several masters of the ships under his care, by which they are enabled to understand and answer his signals, to know the place of rendezvous appointed for the fleet in case of dispersion by storm, by an enemy, or otherwise. Without sailing instructions no vessel can have the protection and benefit of convoy. Marsh. Ins. 368.

SAILORS. Seamen; mariners.

SAINT MARTIN LE GRAND, COURT OF. An ancient court in London, of local importance, formerly held in the church from which it took its name.

SAINT SIMONISM. An elaborate form of noncommunistic socialism. It is a scheme which does not contemplate an equal, but an unequal, division of the produce. It does not propose that all should be occupied alike, but differently, according to their vocation or capacity; the function of each being assigned, like grades in a regiment, by the choice of the directing authority, and the remuneration being by salary, proportioned to the importance, in the eyes of that authority, of the function itself, and the merits of the person who fulfills it. 1 Mill.PorEcon. 258.

SAIO. In Gothic law. The ministerial officer of a court or magistrate, who brought parties into court and executed the orders of his superior. Spelman.

SAISIE. Fr. In French law. A judicial seizure or sequestration of property, of which there are several varieties. See infra.

SAISIE-ARRET. An attachment of property in the possession of a third person.

SAISIE-EXECUTION. A writ resembling that of fieri facias; defined as that species of execution by which a creditor places under the hand of justice (custody of the law) his debtor's movable property liable to seizure, in order to have it sold, so that he may obtain payment of his debt out of the proceeds. Dalloz, Diet.

SAISIE-FORAINE. A permission given by the proper judicial officer to authorize a creditor to seize the property of his debtor in the district which the former inhabits. Dalloz, Diet. It has the effect of an attachment of property, which is applied to the payment of the debt due.

SAISIE-GAGERIE. A conservatory act of execution, by which the owner or principal lessor of a house or farm causes the furniture of the house or farm leased, and on which he has a lien, to be seized; similar to the distress of the common law. Dalloz, Dict.

SAISIE-IMMOBILILRE. The proceeding by which a creditor places under the hand of justice (custody of the law) the immovable property of his debtor, in order that the same may be sold, and that he may obtain payment of his debt out of the proceeds. Dalloz, Diet.

SAKE. In old English law. A lord's right of amercing his tenants in his court. Keilw. 145.

Acquittance of suit at county courts and hundred courts. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 47, § 7.

SALABLE. "Merchantable," fit for sale in usual course of trade, at usual selling prices. Foote v. Wilson, 104 Kan. 191, 178 P. 430; Stevens Tank & Tower Co. v. Berlin Mills Co., 112 Me. 336, 92 A. 180, 181.

SALABLE VALUE. Usual selling price at place where property is situated when its value is to be ascertained. Fort Worth & D. N. Ry. Co. v. Sugg, Tex.Civ.App., 68 S.W.2d 570, 572.

SALADINE TENTH. A tax imposed in England and France, in 1188, by Pope Innocent III., to raise a fund for the crusade undertaken by Richard I. of England and Philip Augustus of France, against Saladin, sultan of Egypt, then going to besiege Jerusalem. By this tax every person who did not enter himself a crusader was obliged to pay a tenth of his yearly revenue and of the value of all his movables, except his wearing apparel, books, and arms. The Carthusians, Bernardines, and some other religious persons were exempt. Gibbon remarks that when the necessity for this tax no longer existed, the church still clung to it as too lucrative to be abandoned, and thus arose the tithing of ecclesiastical benefices for the pope or other sovereigns. Enc.Lond.

SALARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. An allowance of provisions. A stipend, wages, or compensation for services. An annual allowance or compensation. Calvin.

SALARY. A reward or recompense for services performed.

In a more limited sense a fixed periodical compensation paid for services rendered; a stated compensation, amounting to so much by the year, month, or other fixed period, to be paid to public officers and persons in some private employments, for the performance of official duties or the rendering of services of a particular kind, more or less definitely described, involving professional knowledge or skill, or at least employment above the grade of menial or mechanical labor. State v. Speed, 183 Mo. 186, 81 S.W. 1260. A fixed, annual, periodical amount payable for services and depending upon the time of employment and not the amount of services rendered. In re Information to Discipline Certain Attorneys of Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, 351 Ill. 206, 184 N.E. 332, 359. It is synonymous with "wages," except that "salary" is sometimes understood to relate to compensation for official or other services, as distinguished from "wages," which is the compensation for labor. Walsh v. City of Bridgeport, 88 Conn. 528, 91 A. 969, 972, Ann.Cas.1917B, 318. See, also, Fee.

For "Executive Salaries," see that title.

SALE. A contract between two parties, called, respectively, the "seller" (or vendor) and the "buyer," (or purchaser,) by which the former, in consideration of the payment or promise of payment of a certain price in money, transfers to the latter the title and the possession of property. Pard. Droit Commer. § 6; 2 Kent, Comm. 363; Poth. Cont. Sale, § 1; Butler v. Thomson, 92 U.S. 414, 23 L.Ed. 684. In re Frank's Estate, 277 N.Y. S. 573, 154 Misc. 472.

A contract whereby property is transferred from one person to another for a consideration of value, implying the passing of the general and absolute title, as distinguished from a special interest falling short of complete ownership. Arnold v. North American Chemical Co., 232 Mass. 196, 122 N.E. 283, 284; Faulkner v. Town of South Boston, 141 Va. 517, 127 S.E. 380, 381.

An agreement by which one gives a thing for a price in current money, and the other gives the price in order to have the thing itself. Three circumstances concur to the perfection of the contract, to-wit, the thing sold, the price, and the consent. Civ.Code La. art. 2439.

To constitute a "sale," there must be parties standing to each other in the relation of buyer and seller, their minds must assent to the same proposition, and a consideration must pass. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Freihofer, C.C.A.3, 102 F.2d 787, 789, 790, 125 A.L.R. 761.

"Sale" consists of two separate and distinct elements : First, contract of sale which is completed when offer is made and accepted and, second, delivery of property which may precede, be accompanied by, or follow, payment of price as may have been agreed on between parties. Inland Refining Co. v. Langworthy, 112 Okl. 280, 240 P. 627, 629.

An essential element of a "sale" is the money price which must either be fixed by agreement or capable oT being ascertained therefrom. Puryear-Meyer Grocer Co. v. Cardwell Bank, Mo.App., 4 S.W.2d 489, 490.

"Sale," as applied to relation between landowner and real estate broker working to secure purchaser of land, means procuring purchaser able, ready and willing to buy on terms fixed by seller. T. W. Sandford & Co. v. Waring, 201 Ky. 169, 256 S.W. 9, 10.

Synonyms

The contract of "sale" is distinguished from "barter" (which applies only to goods) and "exchange," (which is used of both land and goods,) in that both the latter terms denote a commutation of property for property; i. e., the price or consideration is always paid in money if the transaction is a sale, but, if it is a barter or exchange, it is paid in specific property susceptible of valuation. Westfall v. Ellis, 141 Minn. 377, 170 N.W. 339, 341; J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Loomis, 31 N.D. 27, 153 N.W. 479, 481. "Sale" differs from "gift" in that the latter transaction involves no return or recompense for the thing transferred. But an onerous gift sometimes approaches the nature of a sale, at least where the charge it imposes is a payment of money. "Sale" is also to be discriminated from "bailment;" and the difference is to be found in the fact that the contract of bailment always contemplates the return to the bailor of the specific article delivered, either in its original form or in a modified or altered form, or the return of an article which, though not identical, is of the same class, and is equivalent. But sale never involves the return of the article itself, but only a consideration in money. This contract differs also from "accord and satisfaction;" because in the latter the object of transferring the property is to compromise and settle a claim, while the object of a sale is the price given.

The cardinal difference between the relation of seller and buyer and that of principal and factor is that in a "sale" title passes to the buyer, while in a "consignment" by principal to factor title remains in principal, and only possession passes to factor. McGaw v. Hanway, 120 Md. 197, 87 A. 666, 667, Ann.Cas.1915A, 601, and a "sale" is distinguished from a mortgage, in that the former is a transfer of the absolute property in the goods for a price, whereas a mortgage is at most a conditional sale of property as security for the payment of a debt or performance of some other obligation, subject to the condition that on performance title shall revest in the mortgagor. Waldrep v. Exchange State Bank of Keifer, 81 Okl. 162, 197 P. 509, 511, 14 A.L.R. 747.

An abandonment must be made without any desire that any other person shall acquire the thing abandoned, since if it is made for a consideration it is a "sale" or "barter," and if made without consideration, but with an intention that some other person shall become the possessor, it is a "gift." Del Giorgio v. Powers, 81 P.2d 1006, 1014, 27 Cal.App.2d 668.

General

Absolute and conditional sales. An absolute sale is one where the property in chattels passes to the buyer upon the completion of the bargain. Truax v. Parvis, 7 Houst. (Del.) 330, 32 A. 227. A conditional sale is one in which the transfer of title is made to depend on the performance of a condition, usually the payment of the price; it is a purchase for a price paid or to be paid, to become absolute on a particular event, or a purchase accompanied by an agreement to resell upon particular terms. Poindexter v. McCannon, 16 N.C. 373, 18 Am.Dec. 591; Crimp v. McCormick Const. Co., Ill., 18 C.C.A. 595, 72 F. 366.

Conditional sales are distinguishable from mortgages in that a mortgage assumes the continued existence of a debt and is given as security therefor. Turner v. Kerr, 44 Mo. 429; Crane v. Bonnell, 2 N.J.Eq. 264; Weathersly v. Weathersly, 40 Miss. 462, 90 Am.Dec. 344; Lamborn v. Denison State Bank, 115 Kan. 415, 223 P. 293, 294.

Bill of sale. See Bill.

Cash sale. A transaction whereby payment is to be in full on receipt of the goods. Bernzweig v. Hyman Levin Co., Sup., 172 N.Y.S. 437, 438. A sale where title is not to pass until the price is paid, or where title has passed, but possession is not to be delivered until payment is made. E. L. Welch Co. v. Lahart Elevator Co., 122 Minn. 432, 142 N.W. 828, 830.

Exclusive sale. With respect to a broker. An agreement by the owner that he will not sell the property during the life of the contract to any purchaser not procured by the broker in question. Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 723, 724, 24 A.L.R. 1530, but see contra Roberts v. Harrington, 168 Wis. 217, 169 N.W. 603, 10 A.L.R. 810.

Executed and executory sales. An executed sale is one which is final and complete in all its particulars and details, nothing remaining to be done by either party to effect an absolute transfer of the subject-matter of the sale. Fogel v. Brubaker, 15 A. 692, 122 Pa. 7; Martin v. John Clay & Co., Mo.App., 167 S.W.2d 407, 411. An executory sale is one which has been definitely agreed on as to terms and conditions, but which has not yet been carried into full effect in respect to some of its terms or details, as where it remains to determine the price, quantity, or identity of the thing sold, or to pay installments of purchase-money, or to effect a delivery. McFadden v. Henderson, 29 So. 640, 128 Ala. 221; Fogel v. Brubaker, 15 A. 692, 122 Pa. 7; Smith v. Barron County Sup'rs, 44 Wis. 691.

Execution sale. See Execution Sale.

Fair sale. See Fair Sale.

Forced sale. A sale made without the consent or concurrence of the owner of the property, but by virtue of judicial process, such as a writ of execution or an order under a decree of foreclosure.

Fraudulent sale. One made for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of the owner of the property, by covering up or removing from their reach and converting into cash property which would be subject to the satisfaction of their claims.

Judicial sale. One made under the process of a court having competent authority to order it, by an officer duly appointed and commissioned to sell, as distinguished from a sale by an owner in virtue of his right of property. Union Trading Co. v. Drach, 58 Colo. 550, 146 P. 767, 770. Chapman v. Guaranty State Bank, Tex.Com.App., 267 S.W. 690, 693.

Memorandum sale. That form of conditional sale in which the goods are placed in the possession of the vendee subject to his approval, the title remaining in the seller until they are either accepted or rejected by the vendee.

Private sale. One negotiated and concluded privately between buyer and seller, and not made by advertisement and public outcry or auction. Barcello v. Hapgood, 118 N.C. 712, 24 S.E. 124.

Public sale. A sale made in pursuance of a notice, by auction or public outcry. Union & Mercantile Trust Co. v. Harnwell, 158 Ark. 295, 250 S. W. 321, 323.

Sale and return. A species of contract by which the seller (usually a manufacturer or wholesaler) delivers a quantity of goods to the buyer, on the understanding that, if the latter should desire to retain or use or resell any portion of such goods, he will consider such part as having been sold to him, and will pay their price, and the balance he will return to the seller, or hold them, as bailee, subject to his order. Sturm v. Boker, 14 S.Ct. 99, 150 U.S. 312, 37 L.Ed. 1093; Haskins v. Dern, 19 Utah, 89, 56 P. 953; Hickman v. Shimp, 109 Pa. 16; G. A. Soden & Co. v. T. J. Wilkinson & Son, 100 So. 182, 184, 135 Miss. 665.

Under "contract of sale and return" title vests immediately in buyer, who has privilege of rescinding sale, and until privilege is exercised title remains in him. Rio Grande Oil Co. v. Miller Rubber Co. of New York, 31 Ariz. 84, 250 P. 564.

Sale by sample. A sales contract in which it is the understanding of both parties that the goods exhibited constitute the standard with which the goods not exhibited correspond and to which deliveries should conform. M. C. Kiser Co. v. Branan, 31 Ga.App. 241, 120 S.E. 427, 429.

Sale in gross. A sale by the tract, without regard to quantity; it is in that sense a contract of hazard. Miller v. Moore, 45 Cal.App. 283, 187 P. 763, 764; Cox v. Collins, 205 Ala. 491, 88 So. 440, 441.

Sale-note. A memorandum of the subject and terms of a sale, given by a broker or factor to the seller, who bailed him the goods for that purpose, and to the buyer, who dealt with him. Also called "bought and sold notes."

Sale on approval. A species of conditional sale, which is to become absolute only in case the buyer, on trial, approves or is satisfied with the article sold. The approval, however, need not be express; it may be inferred from his keeping the goods beyond a reasonable time. Benj.Sales, § 911; Warren v. Russell, 143 Ark. 516, 220 S.W. 831.

Sale on credit. A sale of property accompanied by delivery of possession, but where payment of the price is deferred to a future day. In re Heinze's Estate, 224 N.Y. 1, 120 N.E. 63, 64.

Sale per aversionem. In the civil law, a sale where the goods are taken in bulk, or not by weight or measure, and for a single price, or where a piece of land is sold for a gross sum, to be paid for the whole premises, and not at a fixed price by the acre or foot. State v. Buck, 46 La. Ann. 656, 15 So. 531.

Sale with all faults. On what is called a "sale with all faults," unless the seller fraudulently and inconsistently represents the article sold to be faultless, or contrives to conceal any fault from the purchaser, the latter must take the article for better or worse. 3 Camp. 154; Brown.

Sale with right of redemption. A sale in which vendor reserves right to take back property by returning price paid. Glover v. Abney, 160 La. 175, 106 So. 735, 739.

Sheriff's sale. A sale of property, conducted by a sheriff, or sheriff's deputy, in virtue of his authority as an officer holding process. Anderson, L. Dict.; Batchelder v. Carter, 2 Vt. 172, 19 Am. Dec. 707.

Tax-sale. A sale of land for unpaid taxes; a sale of property, by authority of law, for the collection of a tax assessed upon it, or upon its owner, which remains unpaid.

Voluntary sale. One made freely, without constraint, by the owner of the thing sold. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 974.

SALESMAN. One whose occupation is to sell, as goods, merchandise, land, securities, transportation, etc., either in a store or within a given territory; specifically, a commercial traveler. In re Herbert Candy Co., D.C.Pa., 43 F.Supp. 588, 590.

SALET. In old English law. A headpiece; a steel cap or morion. Cowell.

SALFORD HUNDRED COURT OF RECORD. An inferior and local court of record having jurisdiction in personal actions where the debt or damage sought to be recovered does not exceed £50, if the cause of action arise within the hundred of Salford. St. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 130; 2 Exch.Div. 346.

SALIC LAW. A body of law framed by the Salian Franks, a Teutonic race who settled in Gaul about the beginning of the fifth century.

It is the most ancient of the barbarian Codes. It is said to have been compiled about the year 420. It embraced the laws and customs of the Salian Franks. It is of great historical value, in connection with the origins of feudalism and similar subjects. Its most celebrated provision was one which excluded women from the inheritance of landed estates, by an extension of which law females were always excluded from succession to the crown of France. Hence this provision, by itself, is often referred to as the "Salic Law."

In French jurisprudence. The name is frequently applied to that fundamental law of France which excluded females from succession to the crown. Supposed to have been derived from the sixty-second title of the Salic Law, "De Alode." Brande.

SALINE LAND. Land having salt deposits. To fourteen states congress has granted all the salt springs within them; to twelve, a limited grant of them was made. Eighteen states have received no such grant. Montello Salt Co. v. Utah, 31 S. Ct. 706, 221 U.S. 452, 55 L.Ed. 810, Ann.Cas.1912D, 633.

SALMANNUS. A sale-man, found in the Salic Law in the fifth century, who was a third person called in to complete the transfer of property. 12 Harv.L.Rev. 445, Law in Science, etc., by 0. W. Holmes, Jr.

SALOON. A place of refreshment. Hinton v. State, 137 Tex.Cr.R. 352, 129 S.W.2d 670, 673. An apartment for a specified public use. Clinton v. Grusendorf, 80 Iowa 117, 45 N.W. 408. In common parlance, a place where intoxicating liquors are sold and consumed. Gibbs v. Arras Bros., 222 N.Y. 332, 118 N.E. 857, 858, L.R.A.1918F, 826, Ann. Cas.1918D, 1141.

SALOON-KEEPER. This expression has a definite meaning, namely, a retailer of cigars, liquors, etc. Cahill v. Campbell, 105 Mass. 40.

SALT DUTY IN LONDON. A custom in the city of London called "granage," formerly payable to the lord mayor, etc., for salt brought to the port of London, being the twentieth part. Wharton.

SALT SILVER. One penny paid at the feast day of St. Martin, by the tenants of some manors, as a commutation for the service of carrying their lord's salt from market to his larder. Paroch.Antiq. 496.

SALUS. Lat. Health; prosperity; safety.

SALUS POPULI SUPREMA LEX. The welfare of the people is the supreme law. Bac. Max. reg. 12; Broom, Max. 1-10; Montesq. Esprit des Lois, lib. 26, c. 23; 13 Coke, 139; Lingo Lumber Co. v. Hayes, Tex.Civ.App., 64 S.W.2d 835, 839.

SALUS REIPUBLICIE SUPREMA LEX. The welfare of the state is the supreme law. Inhabitants of Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71.

SALUS UBI MULTI CONSILIARII. 4 Inst. 1. Where there are many counselors, there is safety.

SALUTE. A gold coin stamped by Henry V. in France, after his conquests there, whereon the arms of England and France were stamped quarterly. Cowell.

In the army and navy an honor paid to a distinguished personage, when troops or squadrons meet, when officers are buried, or to celebrate an event or show respect to a flag and on many other ceremonial occasions. Cent. Dict.

SALVA GARDIA. L. Lat. Safeguard. Reg. Orig. 26.

SALVAGE. In maritime law. A compensation allowed to persons by whose assistance a ship or its cargo has been saved, in whole or in part, from impending danger, or recovered from actual loss, in cases of shipwreck, derelict, or recapture. 3 Kent, Comm. 245; Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 7 S.Ct. 336, 119 U.S. 625, 30 L.Ed. 501; J. M. Guffey Petroleum Co. v. Borison, C.C.A.Tex., 211 F. 594, 601.

Elements necessary to valid "salvage" are marine peril, with service voluntarily rendered, when not required as existing duty, or from a special contract, and success in whole or in part, and that service rendered contributed to such success. Robert R. Sizer & Co. v. Chiarello Bros., D. C.N.Y., 32 F.2d 333, 335.

In the older books of the law, (and sometimes in modern writings,) the term is also used to denote the goods or property saved.

Equitable Salvage

By analogy, the term "salvage" is sometimes also used in cases which have nothing to do with maritime perils, but in which property has been preserved from loss by the last of several advances by different persons. In such a case, the .person making the last advance is frequently entitled to priority over the others, on the ground that, without his advance, the property would have been lost altogether. This right, which is sometimes called that of "equitable salvage," and is in the nature of a lien, is chiefly of importance with reference to payments made to prevent leases or policies of insurance from being forfeited, or to prevent mines and similar undertakings from being stopped or injured. 1 Fish.Mortg. 149; 3 Ch. Div. 411; L.R. 14 Eq. 4; 7 Ch.Div. 825.

Salvage Charges

This term includes all the expenses and costs incurred in the work of saving and preserving the property which was in danger. The salvage charges ultimately fall upon the insurers.

Salvage Loss

That kind of loss which it is presumed would, but for certain services rendered and exertions made, have become a total loss. In the language of marine underwriters, this term means the difference between the amount of salvage, after deducting the charges, and the original value of the property insured. Koons v. La Fonciere Cornpagnie, D.C.Cal., 71 F. 981.

Salvage Service

A service voluntarily rendered to a vessel in need of assistance, and is designed to relieve her from distress or danger, either present or to be reasonably apprehended and for which a salvage reward is allowed by the maritime law. The Emanuel Stavroudis, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d 214, 216.

It is distinguished from "towage service," in that the latter is rendered for the mere purpose of expediting a vessel's voyage, without reference to any circumstances of danger, though the service in each case may be rendered in the same way. The Emanuel Stavroudis, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d 214, 216.

SALVIAN INTERDICT. See Interdictum Salvianum.

SALVO. Lat. Saving; excepting; without prejudice to. Salvo me et hceredibus meis, except me and my heirs. Salvo jure cujuslibet, without prejudice to the rights of any one.

SALVOR. A person who, without any particular relation to a ship in distress, proffers useful service, and gives it as a volunteer adventurer, without any pre-existing covenant that connected him with the duty of employing himself for the preservation of that ship. The Clara, 23 Wall. 16, 23 L.Ed. 150; The Dumper, C.C.A.N.Y., 129 F. 99, 63 C.C.A. 600; Central Stockyard Co. v. Mears, 85 N.Y.S. 795, 89 App.Div. 452.

SALVUS PLEGIUS. L. Lat. A safe pledge; called, also, "certus plegius," a sure pledge. Bract. fol. 160b.

SAME. The word "same" does not always mean "identical," not different or other. It frequently means of the kind or species, not the specific thing. Crapo v. Brown, 40 Iowa 487, 493. When preceded by the definite article, meaning the one just referred to. In re Conner's Estate, 318 Pa. 150, 178 A. 15, 17.

SAME INVENTION. Within reissue statute, whatever invention was described in original letters patent, and appears therein to have been intended to be secured thereby. 35 U.S.C.A. § 64; Morgan v. Drake, Cust. & Pat.App., 36 F.2d 511, 512. It is not to be determined by the claims of the original patent but from the description and such other evidence as the commissioner may deem relevant. Detrola Radio & Television Corporation v. Hazeltine Corporation, C.C.A.Mich., 117 F.2d 238, 241.

SAME OFFENSE. As used in Constitution, providing that no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, does not signify the same offense eo nomine, but the same criminal act, transaction, or omission. State v. Shaver, 197 Iowa 1028, 198 N.W. 329, 336.

SAMPLE. A specimen; a small quantity of any commodity, presented for inspection or examination as evidence of the quality of the whole; as a sample of cloth or of wheat.

SAMPLE, SALE BY. A sale at which only a sample of the goods sold is exhibited to the buyer. See "Sale."

SANATORIUM. A health retreat, or institution for the treatment of disease or care of invalids. People v. Gold, Sp.Sess., 6 N.Y.S.2d 264, 268.

SANZE MENTIS. Lat. In old English law. Of sound mind. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 7, § 1.

SANCTIO. Lat. In the civil law. That part of a law by which a penalty was ordained against those who should violate it. Inst. 2, 1, 10.

SANCTION, v. To assent, concur, confirm, or ratify. U. S. v. Tillinghast, D.C.R.I., 55 F.2d 279, 283.

SANCTION, n. In the original sense of the word, a penalty or punishment provided as a means of enforcing obedience to a law. In jurisprudence, a law is said to have a sanction when there is a state which will intervene if it is disobeyed or disregarded. Therefore international law has no legal sanction. Sweet.

In a more general sense, a conditional evil annexed to a law to produce obedience to that law; and, in a still wider sense, an authorization of anything. Occasionally, "sanction" is used (e. g., in Roman law) to denote a statute, the part (penal clause) being used to denote the whole. Brown.

The vindicatory part of a law, or that part which ordains or denounces a penalty for its violation. 1 Bl.Comm, 56.

SANCTUARY. In old English law. A consecrated place which had certain privileges annexed to it, and to which offenders were accustomed to resort for refuge, because they could not be arrested there, nor the laws be executed.

SANDBAG. A tube of strong, flexible material filled with sand, by which a heavy blow may be struck which leaves little or no mark on the skin. Cent. Diet. It is included in the general term sap (q. v.).

SAND—GAVEL. In old English law. A payment due to the lord of the manor of Rodley, in the county of Gloucester, for liberty granted to the tenants to dig sand for their common use. Cowell.

SANE. Of natural and normal mental condition; healthy in mind.

One who knows the difference between right and wrong, and appreciates the consequences of his acts. State v. Migues, 194 La. 1081, 195 So. 545, 547. Stout v. State, 142 Tex.Civ.R. 537, 155 S.W.2d 374, 377.

SANE MEMORY. Sound mind, memory, and understanding. This is one of the essential elements in the capacity of contracting; and the absence of it in lunatics and idiots, and its immaturity in infants, is the cause of their respective incapacities or partial incapacities to bind themselves. The like circumstance is their ground of exemption in cases of crime. Brown.

SANG, or SANG. In old French. Blood.

SANGUINE, or MURREY. An heraldic term for "blood-color," called, in the arms of princes, "dragon's tail," and, in those of lords, "sardonyx.' It is a tincture of very infrequent occurrence, and not recognized by some writers. In engraving, it is denoted by numerous lines in saltire. Wharton.

SANGUINEM EMERE. Lat. In feudal law. A redemption by villeins, of their blood or tenure, in order to become freemen.

SANGUINIS CONJUNCTIO BENEVOLENTIA DEVINCIT HOMINES ET CARITATE. A tie of blood overcomes men through benevolence and family affection. Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 1, 13, 9 Am.Dec. 256.

SANGUIS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Blood; consanguinity.

SASSE. In old English law. A kind of wear with flood-gates, most commonly in cut rivers, for the shutting up and letting out of water, as occasion required, for the more ready passing of boats and barges to and fro; a lock; a turnpike; a sluice. Cowell.

SASSONS. The corruption of Saxons. A name of contempt formerly given to the English, while they affected to be called "Angles;" they are still so called by the Welsh.

SATIS LIQUET. See Liquet.

SATISDARE. Lat. In the civil law. To guaranty the obligation of a principal.

SATISDATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Security given by a party to an action, as by a defendant, to pay what might be adjudged against him. Inst. 4, 11; 3 Bl.Comm. 291.

SATISFACTION. Act of satisfying; the state of being satisfied. Seago v. New York Cent. R. Co., 349 Mo. 1249; 164 S.W.2d 336, 341. The discharge of an obligation by paying a party what is due to him, (as on a mortgage, lien, or contract,) or what is awarded to him, by the judgment of a court or otherwise. Thus, a judgment is satisfied by the payment of the amount due to the party who has recovered such judgment, or by his levying the amount. Bryant v. Fairfield, 51 Me. 152; Armour Bros. Banking Co. v. Addington, 37 S.W. 100, 1 Ind.T. 304. The execution or carrying into effect of an accord. Barber v. Mallon, Mo.App., 168 S.W.2d 177, 179; R. J. Bearings Corporation v. Warr, 192 Oki. 133, 134 P.2d 355, 357.

Practice

An entry made on the record, by which a party in whose favor a judgment was rendered declares that he has been satisfied and paid.

Equity

The doctrine of satisfaction in equity is somewhat analogous to performance in equity, but differs from it in this respect: that satisfaction is always something given either in whole or in part as a substitute or equivalent for something else, and not (as in performance) something that may be construed as the identical thing covenanted to be done. Brown.

SATISFACTION, CONTRACTS TO. A class of contracts in which one party agrees to perform his promise to the satisfaction of the other. A contract for construction work "to the entire satisfaction of the owners" imports that the construction be to the satisfaction of a reasonable man and not to the personal satisfaction of owners. Waite v. C. E. Shoemaker & Co., 50 Mont. 264, 146 P. 736, 742.

SATISFACTION PIECE. In practice. A memorandum in writing, entitled in a cause, stating that satisfaction is acknowledged between the parties, plaintiff and defendant. Upon this being duly acknowledged and filed in the office where the record of the judgment is, the judgment becomes satisfied, and the defendant discharged from it. 1 Archb.Pr. 722.

SATISFACTION SHOULD BE MADE TO THAT FUND WHICH HAS SUSTAINED THE LOSS. 4 Bouv. Inst. no. 3731.

SATISFACTORY. Where a contract provides that it is to be performed in a manner "satisfactory" to one of the parties, the provision must be construed as meaning that the performance must be such that the party, as a reasonable person, should be satisfied with it. Hoff v. L. Gould & Co., 198 Ill. App. 499, 501.

SATISFACTORY EVIDENCE. Such evidence as is sufficient to produce a belief that the thing is true; credible evidence; such evidence as, in respect to its amount or weight, is adequate or sufficient to justify the court or jury in adopting the conclusion in support of which it is adduced. Walker. v. Collins, C.C.A.Kan., 59 F. 74, 8 C.C.A. 1; U. S. v. Lee Huen, D.C.N.Y., 118 F 457.

"Satisfactory evidence," which is sometimes called "sufficient evidence," means that amount of proof which ordinarily satisfies an unprejudiced mind beyond a reasonable doubt. Thayer v. Boyle, 30 Me. 475, 481 (citing 1 Greenl. Ev. § 2) ; State v. Moss, 95 Or. 616, 188 P. 702, 704. See, also, Sufficient Evidence.

SATISFIED TERM. A term of years in land is thus called when the purpose for which it was created has been satisfied or executed before the expiration of the set period.

SATISFIED TERMS ACT. The statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, passed to abolish satisfied outstanding terms of years in land. By this act, terms which shall henceforth become attendant upon the inheritance, either by express declaration or construction of law, are to cease and determine. This, in effect, abolishes outstanding terms. 1 Steph.Comm. 380-382; Williams, Real Prop. pt. 4, c. 1.

SATISFY. To answer or discharge, as a claim, debt, legal demand or the like. Swaner v. Union Mortg. Co., 99 Utah 298, 105 P.2d 342, 345. To comply actually and fully with a demand; to extinguish, by payment or performance.

To convince, as to satisfy a jury. Lawrence v. Goodwill, 44 Cal.App. 440, 186 P. 781, 785.

SATIUS EST PETERE FONTES QUAM SECTAR! RIVULOS. Lofft, 606. It is better to seek the source than to follow the streamlets.

SAUNKEFIN. L. Fr. End of blood; failure of the direct line in successions. Spelman; Cowell.

SAUVAGINE. L. Fr. Wild animals.

SAUVEMENT. L. Fr. Safely. Sauvement gardes, safely kept. Britt. c. 87.

SAVE. To except, reserve, or exempt; as where a statute "saves" vested rights. To toll, or suspend the running or operation of; as to "save" the statute of limitations.

SAVER DEFAULT. L. Fr. In old English prac, tice. To excuse a default. Termes de la Ley.

SAVING. Preservation from danger or loss; economy in outlay; prevention of waste; something laid up or kept from becoming expended or lost; a reservation. Oklahoma Tax Commission v. Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother, 186 Okl. 339, 97 P.2d 888, 892.

SAVING CLAUSE. In a statute an exception of a special thing out of the general things mentioned in the statute. Ordinarily a restriction in a repealing act, which is intended to save rights, pending proceedings, penalties, etc., from the annihilation which would result from an unrestricted repeal. State v. St. Louis, 174 Mo. 125, 73 S.W. 623, 61 L.R.A. 593; Bass v. Albright, Tex.Civ.App., 59 S.W.2d 891, 894.

SAVING THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A creditor is said to "save the statute of limitations" when he saves or preserves his debt from being barred by the operation of the statute. Thus, in the case of a simple contract debt, if a creditor commence an action for its recovery within six years from the time when the cause of action accrued, he will be in time to save the statute. Brown.

SAVINGS BANK. See Bank.

SAVINGS BANK TRUST. See Trust.

SAVOUR. To partake the nature of; to bear affinity to.

SAVOY. One of the old privileged places, or sanctuaries. 4 Steph.Comm. 227n.

SAW LOG. A log of convenient length and otherwise suitable for being manufactured into lumber. Ladnier v. Ingram Day Lumber Co., 135 Miss. 632, 100 So. 369, 370.

SAXON LAGE. The laws of the West Saxons. Cowell.

SAY ABOUT. This phrase, like "more or less," is frequently introduced into conveyances or contracts of sale, to indicate that the quantity of the subject-matter is uncertain, and is only estimated, and to guard the vendor against the implication of having warranted the quantity.

SAYER. In Hindu law. Variable imposts distinct from land, rents, or revenues; consisting of customs, tolls, licenses, duties on goods; also taxes on houses, shops, bazaars, etc. Wharton.

SC. An abbreviation for "scilicet," that is to say.

SCAMNL In old European law. The judges or assessors of the judges in the court held by the count. Assistants or associates of the count; officers under the count. The permanent selected judges of the Franks. Judges among the Germans, Franks, and Lombards, who were held in peculiar esteem. Spelman.

SCACCARIUM. A chequered cloth resembling a chess-board which covered the table in the exchequer, and on which, when certain of the king's accounts were made up, the sums were marked and scored with counters. Hence the court of exchequer, or curia scaccarii, derived its name. 3 Bl. Comm. 44.

SCALAM. At the scale; the old way of paying money into the exchequer. Cowell.

SCALE. In early American law. To adjust, graduate, or value according to a scale. Walden v. Payne, 2 Wash. (Va.) 5, 6.

SCALE TOLERANCE. Nominal variation between different scales in respect of the mass or "weight" of the same goods. Smith v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 202 Iowa, 292, 209 N.W. 465, 466.

SCALER. An expert employed to determine the number of board feet and the percentage of unsound timber in logs. Connecticut Valley Lumber Co. v. Stone, C.C.A.Vt., 212 F. 713, 715.

SCALING LAWS. A term used to signify statutes establishing the process of adjusting the difference in value between depreciated paper money and specie. Such statutes were rendered necessary by the depreciation of paper money necessarily following the establishment of American independence. And, more recently, to discharge those debts which were made payable in Confederate money. The statutes are now obsolete.

SCALPINGS. See Wheat Scalpings.

SCAMNUM CADUCUM. In old records, the cucking-stool, (q. v.). Cowell.

SCANDAL. Defamatory reports or rumors; aspersion or slanderous talk, uttered recklessly or maliciously.

Pleading

With reference to necessity of keeping court records free from scandal, an unnecessary statement which bears cruelly upon an individual's moral character, or statement of anything contrary to good manners, or unbecoming court's dignity to hear or which charges some person with a crime not necessary to be shown in the cause. Nadeau v. Texas Co., 104 Mont. 558, 69 P.2d 593, 595, 111 A.L.R. 874; Huffman v. State, 183 Ind. 698, 109 N.E. 401, 402.

SCANDALOUS MATTER. In pleading. Scandal, which title see.

SCANDALUM MAGNATUM. In English law. Scandal or slander of great men or nobles. Words spoken in derogation of a peer, a judge, or other great officer of the realm, for which an action lies, though it is now rarely resorted to. 3 BL Comm. 123; 3 Steph.Comm. 473. This offense has not existed in America since the formation of the United States. State v. Shepherd, 177 Mo. 205, 76 S.W. 79, 99 Am.St.Rep. 624.

SCHISM-BILL. In English law. The name of an act passed in the reign of Queen Anne, which restrained Protestant dissenters from educating their own children, and forbade all tutors and schoolmasters to be present at any conventicle or dissenting place of worship. The queen died on the day when this act was to have taken effect, (August 1, 1714,) and it was repealed in the fifth year of Geo. I. Wharton.

SCHOOL. An institution or place for instruction or education. Bastendorf v. Arndt, 290 Mich. 423, 287 N.W. 579, 580, 124 A.L.R. 445. An institution of learning of a lower grade, below a college or a university. A place of primary instruction. The term generally refers to the common or public schools, maintained at the expense of the public. Alexander v. Phillips, 31 Ariz. 503, 254 R 1056, 1058, 52 A.L.R. 244.

Common Schools

Schools maintained at the public expense and administered by a bureau of the state, district, or municipal government, for the gratuitous education of the children of all citizens without distinction. Board of Education of City of Sapulpa v. Corey, 63 Okl. 178, 163 P. 949, 953; State v. O'Dell, 187 Ind. 84, 118 N.E. 529, 530.

Consolidated School District

A common school district where two or more existing schools have consolidated into one single district. Trustees of Walton School v. Board of Sup'rs of Covington County, 115 Miss. 117, 75 So. 833, 834; Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 110.

District School

A common or public school for the education at public expense of the children residing within a given district; a public school maintained by a "school district." See infra.

Grade School

A school in which the pupils are classified according to progress and taught by different teachers so that a rural school under one teacher is not included within the exception, although various pupils in various stages of progress are classified. Board of County Com'rs of Laramie County v. State, 24 Wyo. 364, 158 P. 801, 804.

High School

A school in which higher branches of learning are taught than in the common schools. Thurman-Watts v. Board of Education of City of Coffeyville, 115 Kan. 328, 222 P. 123, 125. A school in which such instruction is given as will prepare the students to enter a college or university. Whitlock v. State, 30 Neb. 815, 47 N.W. 284.

Normal School

A training school for teachers; one in which instruction is given in the theory and practice of teaching; particularly, in the system of schools generally established throughout the United States, a school for the training and instruction of those who are already teachers in the public schools or those who desire and expect to become such. Board of Regents v. Painter, 102 Mo. 464, 14 S.W. 938, 10 L.R.A. 493

Private School

One maintained by private individuals or corporations, not at public expense, and open only to pupils selected and admitted by the proprietors or governors, or to pupils of a certain class or possessing certain qualifications, (racial, religious, or otherwise,) and generally supported, in part at least, by tuition fees or charges Quigley v. State, 5 Ohio Cir.Ct.R. 638.

Public Schools

Schools established under the laws of the state (and usually regulated in matters of detail by the local authorities), in the various districts, counties, or towns, maintained at the public expense by taxation, and open with or without charge to the children of all the residents of the town or other district. St. Joseph's Church v. Assessors of Taxes, 12 R.I. 19, 34 Am.Rep. 597. Litchman v. Shannon, 90 Wash. 186, 155 P. 783, 784. Schools belonging to the public and established and conducted under public authority; not schools owned and conducted by private parties, though they may be open to the public generally and though tuition may be free. Gerke v. Purcell, 25 Ohio St. 229.

School Board

A board of municipal officers charged with the administration of the affairs of the public schools. They are commonly organized under the general laws of the state, and fall within the class of quasi corporations, sometimes coterminous with a county or borough, but not necessarily so. The members of the school board are sometimes termed "school directors," or the official style may be "the board of school directors." The circuit of their territorial jurisdiction is called a "school district," and each school district is usually a separate taxing district for school purposes.

School Directors

See School Board.

School District

A public and quasi municipal corporation, organized by legislative authority or direction, comprising a defined territory, for the erection, rhaintenance, government, and support of the public schools within its territory in accordance with and in subordination to the general school laws of the state, invested, for these purposes only, with powers of local self-government and generally of local taxation, and administered by a board of officers, usually elected by the voters of the district, who are variously styled "school directors," or "trustees," "commissioners," or "supervisors" of schools. Hamilton v. San Diego County, 108 Cal. 273, 41 P. 305; Duff v. School Dist. of Perry Tp., 281 Pa. 87, 126 A. 202.

School Lands

Public lands of a state set apart by the state (or by congress in a territory) to create, by the proceeds of their sale, a fund for the establishment and maintenance of public schools.

School-Master

One employed in teaching a school.

SCHOOL PURPOSES. This term in constitutional provision limiting rates of taxation covers ordinary expenses of maintaining and operating schools. Peter v. Kaufmann, 327 Mo. 915, 38 S.W. 2d 1062, 1067.

SCHOUT. In Dutch law. An officer of a court whose functions somewhat resemble those of a sheriff.

SCI. FA. An abbreviation for "scire facias," (q. v.).

SCIENDUM. Lat. In English law. The name given to a clause inserted in the record by which it is made known that the justice here in court, in this same term, delivered a writ thereupon to the deputy-sheriff of the county aforesaid, to be executed in due form of law. Lee, Dict. "Record."

SCIENDUM EST. Lat. It is to be known; be it remarked. In the books of the civil law, this phrase is often found at the beginning of a chapter or paragraph, by way of introduction to some explanation, or directing attention to some particular rule.

SCIENTER. Lat. Knowingly. The term is used in pleading to signify an allegation (or that part of the declaration or indictment which contains it) setting out the defendant's previous knowledge of the cause which led to the injury complained of, or rather his previous knowledge of a state of facts which it was his duty to guard against, and his omission to do which has led to the injury complained of. The insertion of such an allegation is called "laying the action (or indictment) with a scienter." And the term is frequently used to signify the defendant's guilty knowledge. People v. Gould, 237 Mich. 156, 211 N.W. 346, 348. Horton v. Tyree, 104 W.Va. 238, 139 S.E. 737, 738.

SCIENTI ET VOLENTI NON FIT INJURIA. Bract. fol. 20. An injury is not done to one who knows and wills it.

SCIENTIA SCIOLORUM EST MIXTA IGNORANTIA. 8 Coke, 159. The knowledge of smatterers is diluted ignorance.

SCIENTIA UTRIMQUE PAR PARES CONTRAHENTES FACIT. Equal knowledge on both sides makes contracting parties equal. 3 Burrows, 1905. An insured need not mention what the underwriter knows, or what he ought to know. Broom, Max. 772.

SCILICET. Lat. To-wit; that is to say. A word used in pleadings and other instruments, as introductory to a more particular statement of matters previously mentioned in general terms. Hob. 171, 172.

SCINTILLA. Lat. A spark; a remaining particle; the least particle.

SCINTILLA JURIS. In real property law. A spark of right or interest. By this figurative expression was denoted the small particle of interest which, by a fiction of law, was supposed to remain in a feoffee to uses, sufficient to support contingent uses afterwards coming into existence, and thereby enable the statute of uses (27 Hen. VIII. c. 10) to execute them. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 125; 4 Kent, Comm. 238.

SCINTILLA OF EVIDENCE. A spark of evidence. Cunningham v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 4 Utah, 206, 7 P. 795, 797. A metaphorical expression to describe a very insignificant or trifling item or particle of evidence; used in the statement of the common-law rule that if there is any evidence at all in a case, even a mere scintilla, tending to support a material issue, the case cannot be taken from the jury, but must be left to their decision. Offutt v. World's Columbian Exposition, 175 El. 472, 51 N.E. 651.

Any material evidence that, if true, would tend to establish issue in mind of reasonable juror. Thackston v. Shelton, 178 S.C. 240, 182 S.E. 436; Lancaster v. South Carolina Power Co., 181 S.C. 244, 186 S.E. 911, 913. Something of substance and relevant consequence and not vague, uncertain, or irrelevant matter not carrying quality of proof or having fitness to induce conviction. City of Houston v. Scanlan, 120 Tex. 264, 37 S.W.2d 718. Wigginton's Adm'r v. Louisville Ry. Co., 256 Ky. 287, 75 S.W.2d 1046, 1051, courts differ as to what constitutes a "scintilla," and some courts do not accept the rule. Sobolovitz v. Lubric Oil Co., 107 Ohio St. 204, 140 N.E. 634, 635.

It is the duty of trial court to instruct a verdict, though there is slight testimony, if its probative force is so weak that it only raises suspicion of existence of facts sought to be established, since such testimony falls short of being "evidence". Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co. v. Wells, Tex. Civ.App., 151 S.W.2d 927, 929.

Suggestions, if any, from evidence did not amount to "evidence". Cooksey v. McGuire, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 480, 483.

SCIRE DEBES CUM QUO CONTRAHIS. You ought to know with whom you deal. 11 Mees. & W. 405, 632; 13 Mees. & W. 171.

SCIRE ET SCIRE DEBERE)EQUIPARANTUR IN JURE. To know a thing, and to be bound to know it, are regarded in law as equivalent. Tray. Leg. Max. 551.

SCIRE FACIAS. Lat. In practice. A judicial writ, founded upon some matter of record, such as a judgment or recognizance and requiring the person against whom it is brought to show cause why the party bringing it should not have advantage of such record, or (in the case of a scire facias to repeal letters patent) why the record should not be annulled and vacated. 2 Archb.Pr. K.B. 86; Pub. St. Mass. p. 1295. The name is used to designate both the writ and the whole proceeding. City of St. Louis v. Miller, 235 Mo. App. 987, 145 S.W.2d 504, 505.

The most common application of this writ is as a process to revive a judgment, after the lapse of a certain time, or on a change of parties, or otherwise to have execution of the judgment, in which cases it is merely a continuation of the original action. It is used more rarely as a mode of proceeding against special bail on their recognizance, and as a means of repealing letters patent, in which cases it is an original proceeding. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 86. American Ry. Express Co. v. F. S. Royster Guano Co., 141 Va. 602, 126 S.E. 678, 679.

SCIRE FACIAS AD AUDIENDUM ERRORES. The name of a writ which is sued out after the plaintiff in error has assigned his errors. Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 20.

SCIRE FACIAS AD DISPROBANDUM DEBITUM. The name of a writ in use in Pennsylvania, which lies by a defendant in foreign attachment against the plaintiff, in order to enable him, within a year and a day next ensuing the time of payment to the plaintiff in the attachment, to disprove or avoid the debt recovered against him. Bouvier.

SCIRE FACIAS AD REHABENDAM TERRAM. Lies to enable a judgment debtor to recover back his lands taken under an elegit when the judgment creditor has satisfied or been paid the amount of his judgment. Chit. 692; Fost. on Sci.Fa. 58.

SCIRE FACIAS FOR THE CROWN. In English law. The summary proceeding by extent is only resorted to when a crown debtor is insolvent, or there is good ground for supposing that the debt may be lost by delay.' In ordinary cases where a debt or duty appears by record to be owing to the crown, the process for the crown is a writ of sci. fa. quare executionem non; but should the defendant become insolvent pending this writ, the crown may abandon the proceeding and resort to an extent. Wharton.

SCIRE FACIAS QUARE RESTITUTIONEM NON. This writ lies where execution on a judgment has been levied, but the money has not been paid over to the plaintiff, and the judgment is afterwards reversed in error or on appeal; in such a case a scire facias is necessary before a writ of restitution can issue. Chit. 582; Fost. on Sci. Fa. 64.

SCIRE FACIAS SUR MORTGAGE. A writ issued upon the default of a mortgagor to make payments or observe conditions, requiring him to show cause why the mortgage should not be foreclosed, and the mortgaged property taken and sold in execution.

SCIRE FACIAS SUR MUNICIPAL CLAIM. A writ of scire facias, authorized to be issued in Pennsylvania, as a means of enforcing payment of a municipal claim (q. v.) out of the real estate upon which such claim is a lien.

SCIRE FECI. Lat. In practice. The name given to the sheriff's return to a writ of scire facias that he has caused notice to be given to the party or parties against whom the writ was issued. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 98, 99.

SCIRE FIERI INQUIRY. In English law. The name of a writ formerly used to recover the amount of a judgment from an executor.

SCIRE LEGES NON HOC EST VERBA EARUM TENERE, SED VIM AC POTESTATEM. To know the laws is not to observe their mere words, but their force and power; [that is, the essential meaning in which their efficacy resides.] Dig. 1, 3, 17; 1 Kent, Comm. 462.

SCIRE PROPRIE EST REM RATIONE ET PER CAUSAM COGNOSCERE. To know properly is to know a thing in its reason, and by its cause. We are truly said to know anything, where we know the true cause thereof. Co.Litt. 183b.

SCIREWYTE. In old English law. A tax or prestation paid to the sheriff for holding the assizes or county courts. Cowell.

SCISSIO. Lat. In old English law. A cutting. Scissio auricularum, cropping of the ears. An old punishment. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 38, § 10.

SCITE, or SITE. The sitting or standing on any place; the seat or situation of a capital messuage, or the ground whereon it stands: Jacob.

SCOLD. A troublesome and angry woman, who, by brawling and wrangling among her neighbors, breaks the public peace, increases discord, and becomes a public nuisance to the neighborhood. 4 Steph.Comm. 276.

Common 'Scold

One who, by the practice of frequent scolding, disturbs the neighborhood. Bish. Crim. Law, § 147. A quarrelsome, brawling, vituperative person. Baker v. State, 53 N.J.Law, 45, 20 A. 858.

SCOPE.

Of Authority

Includes not only actual authorization conferred upon agent by his principal, but also that which has apparently or impliedly been delegated to agent. Angerosa v. White Co., 290 N.Y.S. 204, 208, 248 App.Div. 425.

Of a Patent

The boundaries or limits of the invention protected by the patent, which are not matters of metes and bounds and can never be defined in the definite sense employed in thinking of physical things, but must be determined by methods based upon established principles of patent law. Smith v. Mid-Continent Inv. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 106 F.2d 622, 624.

SCORN, v. To hold in extreme contempt, to reject as unworthy of regard; to despise, to contemn, to disdain. U. S. v. Strong, D.C.Wash., 263 F. 789, 796.

SCOT. In old English law. A tax, or tribute; one's share of a contribution.

SCOT AND LOT. In English law. The name of a customary contribution, laid upon all subjects according to their ability. Brown.

SCOT AND LOT VOTERS. In English law. Voters in certain boroughs entitled to the franchise in virtue of their paying this contribution. 2 Steph.Comm. 360.

SCOTAL. In old English law. An extortionate practice by officers of the forest who kept alehouses, and compelled the people to drink at their houses for fear of their displeasure. Prohibited by the charter of the forest, c. 7. Wharton.

See Charta de foresta.

SCOTCH MARRIAGES. See Gretna Green.

SCOTCH PEERS. Peers of the kindom of Scotland; of these sixteen are elected to parliament by the rest and represent the whole body. They are elected for one parliament only.

SCOTS. In English law. Assessments by commissioners of sewers.

SCOTTARE. To pay scot, tax, or customary dues. Cowell.

SCOUNDREL. An opprobrious epithet, implying rascality, villainy, or a want of honor or integrity. In slander, this word is not actionable per se. 2 Bouv.Inst. 2250.

SCRAMBLING POSSESSION. See Possession.

SCRATCHING THE TICKET. Where partisan voters support and vote for one or more of nominees of opposite political party. Swindall v. State Election Board, 168 Okl. 97, 32 P.2d 691, 696.

SCRAWL. Scroll, which title see.

SCREWBALL. Either a peculiar or eccentric person like crackbrain, crackpot, crank, nut, or a stupid or insane person like batty, bug-house, dippy, etc., but it does not connote opprobrium or reprehensibility. Kennedy v. Crouch, Md., 62 A.2d 582, 587.

SCRIBA. Lat. A scribe; a secretary. Scriba regis, a king's secretary; a chancellor. Spelman.

SCRIBERE EST AGERE. To write is to act. Treasonable words set down in writing amount to overt acts of treason. 2 Rolle, 89; 4 Bl.Comm. 80; Broom, Max. 312, 967.

SCRIP. Certificates of ownership, either absolute or conditional, of shares in a public company, corporate profits, etc. An acknowledgment by the projectors of a company or the issuers of a loan that the person named therein (or more commonly the holder for the time being of the certificate) is entitled to a certain specified number of shares, debentures, bonds, etc. It is usually given in exchange for the letter of allotment, and in its turn is given up for the shares, debentures, or bonds which it represents. Scrip certificate. Lindl. Partn. 127; Sweet.

The term has also been applied in the United States to warrants or other like orders drawn on a municipal treasury (City of Alma v. Guaranty Say. Bank, C.C.A.8, 60 F. 207, 8 C.C.A. 564,) to certificates showing the holder to be entitled to a certain portion or allotment of public or state lands, Wait v. State Land Office Com'r, 87 Mich. 353, 49 N.W. 600, and to the fractional paper currency issued by the United. States during the period of the Civil War.

SCRIP DIVIDEND. See Dividend.

SCRIPT. Where instruments are executed in part and counterpart, the original or principal is so. called.

English Probate Practice

A will, codicil, draft of will or codicil, or written instructions for the same. If the will is destroyed, a copy or any paper embodying its contents becomes a script, even though not made under the direction of the testator. Browne, Prob. Pr. 280.

SCRIPTIE OBLIGATIONES SCRIPTIS TOLLUNTUR, ET NUDI CONSENSUS OBLIGATIO CONTRARIO CONSENSU DISSOLVITUR. Written obligations are superseded by writings, and an obligation of naked assent is dissolved by assent to the contrary.

SCRIPTORIUM. In old records. A place in monasteries, where writing was done. Spelman.

SCRIPTUM. Lat. A writing; something written. Fleta, L 2, c. 60, § 25.

SCRIPTUM INDENTATUM. A writing indented; an indenture or deed.

SCRIPTUM OBLIGATORIUM. A writing obligatory. The technical name of a bond in old pleadings. Any writing under seal.

CRFVENER. A writer; scribe; conveyancer. One whose occupation is to draw contracts, write deeds and mortgages, and prepare other species of written instruments.

Also an agent to whom property is intrusted by others for the purpose of lending it out at an interest payable to his principal, and for a commission or bonus for himself, whereby he gains his livelihood.

Money Scrivener

A money broker. The name was also formerly applied in England to a person (generally an attorney or solicitor) whose business was to find investments for the money of his clients, and see to perfecting the securities, and who was often intrusted with the custody of the securities and the collection of the interest and principal. Williams v. Walker, 2 Sandf.Ch. (N.Y.) 325.

SCROLL. A mark intended to supply the place of a seal, made with a pen or other instrument of writing. Mitch. R. E. and Cony. 454, 455.

A paper or parchment containing some writing, and rolled up so as to conceal it.

SCROOP'S INN. An obsolete law society, also called "Serjeants' Place," opposite to St. Andrew's Church, Holborn, London.

SCRUET-ROLL. In old practice. A species of roll or record, on which the bail on habeas corpus was entered.

SCRUTATOR. Lat. In old English law. A searcher or bailiff of a river; a water-bailiff, whose business was to look to the king's rights, as to his wrecks, his flotsam, jetsam, water-strays, royal fishes. Hale, de Jure Mar. par. 1, c. 5.

SCURRILOUS. The low and indecent language of the meaner sort of people, low indecency or abuse; mean; foul; vile, synonymous with vulgar; foul or foul-mouthed. U. S. v. Strong, D.C. Wash., 263 F. 789. 7%; U. S. v. Ault, D.C.Wash., 263 F. 800, 810.

SCUSSUS. In old European law. Shaken or beaten out; threshed, as grain. Spelman.

SCUTAGE. In feudal law. A tax or contribution raised by those that held lands by knight's service, towards furnishing the king's army, at the rate of one, two or three marks for every knight's fee.

A pecuniary composition or commutation made by a tenant by knight-service in lieu of actual service. 2 Bl.Comm. 74.

A pecuniary aid or tribute originally reserved by particular lords, instead or in lieu of personal service, varying in amount according to the expenditure which the lord had to incur in his personal attendance upon the king in his wars. Wright, Ten. 121-134.

SCUTAGIO HABENDO. A writ that anciently lay against tenants by knight's service to serve in the wars, or send sufficient persons, or pay a certain sum. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 83.

SCUTE, A French coin of gold, coined A.D. 1427, of the value of 3s. 4d.

SCUTELLA. A scuttle; anything of a flat or broad shape like a shield. Cowell.

SCUTELLA ELEEMOSYNARIA. An alms-basket.

SCUTIFER. In old records. Esquire; the same as "armiger." Spelman.

SCUTUM ARMORUM. A shield or coat of arms. Cowell.

SCYRA. In old English law. Shire; county; the inhabitants of a county.

SCYREGEMOTE. In Saxon law. The meeting or court of the shire. This was the most important court in the Saxon polity, having jurisdiction of both ecclesiastical and secular causes. Its meetings were held twice in the year. Its Latin name was "curia comitatis."

SE DEFENDENDO. Lat. In defending himself; in self-defense. Homicide committed se defendendo is excusable.

SEA. The ocean; the great mass of water which surrounds the land. Snowdon v. Guion, 50 N.Y. Super.Ct. 143. In marine insurance "sea" includes not only the high seas but the bays, inlets, and rivers as high up as the tide ebbs and flows. Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Charles Clarke & Co., Tex. Civ.App., 157 S.W. 291, 293.

Beyond Sea

In England, this phrase means beyond the limits of the British Isles; in America, outside the limits of the United States or of the particular state, as the case may be.

High Seas

The ocean; public waters. According to the English doctrine, the high sea begins at the distance of three miles from the coast of any country; according to the American view, at low-water mark, except in the case of small harbors and roadsteads inclosed within the fauces terrce. U. S. v. Grush, 26 F.Cas. 50; U. S. v. Rodgers, 14 S.Ct. 109, 150 U.S. 249, 37 L.Ed. 1071. The open ocean outside of the fauces terrce, as distinguished from arms of the sea; the waters of the ocean without the boundary of any county. Any waters on the sea-coast which are without the boundaries of low-water mark.

Main Sea

The open, uninclosed ocean; or that portion of the sea which is without the fauces terrce on the sea-coast, in contradistinction to that which is surrounded or inclosed between narrow headlands or promontories. U. S. v. Grush, 26 F.Cas. 48; U. S. v. Rodgers, 14 S.Ct. 109, 150 U.S. 249, 37 L.Ed. 1071.

Sea-Batteries

Assaults by masters in the merchant service upon seamen at sea.

Sea-Bed

All that portion of land under the sea that lies beyond the sea-shore.

Sea-Brief

Sea-Letter, which title see.

Sea-Greens

In the Scotch law. Grounds overflowed by the sea in spring tides. Bell.

Sea-Laws

Laws relating to the sea, as the laws of Oleron, etc.

Sea-Letter

A species of manifest, containing a description of the ship's cargo, with the port from which it comes and the port of destination. This is one of the documents necessary to be carried by all neutral vessels, in the merchant service, in time of war, as an evidence of their nationality. 4 Kent, Comm. 157; Sleght v. Hartshorne, 2 Johns. (N.Y.) 540.

The last sea letter was issued at the Port of New York in 1806, and the use of sea letters was discontinued by proclamation of President Madison in 1815. 46 U.S.C.A. §§ 61, 62, note. The words "sea letter," however, are still carried in those sections of the Code, but in 1948 were eliminated from the criminal code as obsolete. 18 U.S.C. A. § 507, note.

Sea-,Reeve

An officer in maritime towns and places who took care of the maritime rights of the lord of the manor, and watched the shore, and collected wrecks for the lord. Tomlins.

Sea-Rovers

Pirates and robbers at sea.

Sea-Shore

The margin of the sea in its usual and ordinary state. When the tide is out, low-water mark is the margin of the sea; and, when the sea is full, the margin is high-water mark. The sea-shore is therefore all the ground between the ordinary high-water mark and low-water mark. It cannot be considered as including any ground always covered 'by the sea, for then it would have no definite limit on the sea-board. Neither can it include any part of the upland, for the same reason. Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of New York, 46 S.Ct. 357, 362, 271 U.S. 65, 70 L.Ed. 838; That space of land over which the waters of the sea are spread in the highest water during the winter season. Civ.Code La. art. 442.

Seaworthy, Seaworthiness

See those titles.

SEAL. An impression upon wax, wafer, or some other tenacious substance capable of being impressed. Solon v. Williamsburgh Sa[y]. Bank, 114 N.Y. 132, 21 N.E. 168.

A particular sign, made to attest in the most formal manner, the execution of an instrument.

Merlin defines a seal to be a plate of metal with a flat surface, on which is engraved the arms of a prince or nation, or private individual, or other device, with which an impression may be made on wax or other substance on paper or parchment in order to authenticate them. The impression thus made is also called a "seal." Repert. mot "Sceau."

"Seals" serve as an authentication of an instrument and also as the badge of a specialty. Caruthers V. Peninsular Life Ins. Co., 150 Fla. 467, 7 So.2d 841, 842.

Common Seal

A seal adopted and used by a corporation for authenticating its corporate acts and executing legal instruments.

Corporate Seal

The official or common seal of an incorporated company or association.

Great Seal

In English law. A seal by virtue of which a great part of the royal authority is exercised. The office of the lord chancellor, or lord keeper, is created by the delivery of the great seal into his custody. There is one great seal for all public acts of state which concern the United Kingdom. Mozley & Whiteley. In American law, the United States and also each of the states has and uses a seal, always carefully described by law, and sometimes officially called the "great" seal, though in some instances known simply as "the seal o,f the United States," or "the seal of the state."

Private Seal

The seal (however made) of a private person or corporation, as distinguished from a seal employed by a state or government or any of its bureaus or departments.

Privy Seal

In English law. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent, preparatory to their passing under the great seal. 2 Bl.Comm. 347.

Public Seal

A seal belonging to and used by one of the bureaus or departments of government, for authenticating or attesting documents, process, or records. An impression made of some device, by means of a piece of metal or other hard substance, kept and used by public authority. Kirksey v. Bates, 7 Port. (Ala.) 534, 31 Am.Dec. 722.

Quarter Seal

In Scotch law. A seal kept by the director of the chancery; in shape and impression the fourth part of the great seal, and called in statutes the "testimonial" of the great seal. Bell.

Seal Days

In English practice. Motion days in the court of chancery, so called because every motion had to be stamped with the seal, which did not lie in court in the ordinary sittings out of term. Wharton.

Seal Office

In English practice. An office for the sealing of judicial writs.

Seal-Paper

In English law. A document issued by the lord chancellor, previously to the commencement of the sittings, detailing the business to be done for each day in his court, and in the courts of the lords justices and vice-chancellors. The master of the rolls in like manner issued a seal-paper in respect of the business to be heard before him. Smith, Ch.Pr. 9.

SEALED. Authenticated by a seal; executed by the affixing of a seal. Also fastened up in any manner so as to be closed against inspection of the contents.

SEALED AND DELIVERED. These words, fol. rowed by the signatures of the witnesses, constitute the usual formula for the attestation of conveyances.

SEALED INSTRUMENT. An instrument of writing to which the party to be bound has affixed not only his name, but also his seal, or (in those jurisdictions where it is allowed) a scroll. Leonor v. Ingenio Porvenir C. por A., Sup., 34 N.Y.S.2d 705, 709. And instrument must contain recital to effect that it is given under seal. Marshall v. Walker, 50 Ga.App. 551, 178 S.E. 760.

SEALED VERDICT. When the jury have agreed upon a verdict, if the court is not in session at the time, they are permitted (usually) to put their written finding in a sealed envelope, and then separate. This verdict they return when the court again convenes. The verdict thus returned has the same effect, and must be treated in the same manner, as if returned in open court before any separation of the jury had taken place. Sutliff v. Gilbert, 8 Ohio, 408; Young v. Seymour, 4 Neb. 89. But see Spielter v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co., 249 N.Y.S. 358, 365, 232 App.Div. 104, holding that it is mere agreement reached by jurors, and does not become final until it is read into record and jurors discharged.

SEALING. In matters of succession, the placing, by the proper officer, of seals on the effects of a succession for the purpose of preserving them, and for the interest of third persons. The seals are affixed by order of the judge having jurisdiction. Civ.Code La. art. 1075.

SEALING UP. Where a party to an action has been ordered to produce a document part of which is either irrelevant to the matters in question or is privileged from production, he may, by leave of the court, seal up that part, if he makes an affidavit stating that it is irrelevant or privileged. Daniell, Ch. Pr. 1681. The sealing up is generally done by fastening pieces of paper over the part with gum or wafers. Sweet.

SEALS. In Louisiana. Seals are placed upon the effects of a deceased person, in certain cases, by a public officer, as a method of taking official custody of the succession. See Sealing.

SEAMEN. Sailors; mariners; persons whose business is navigating ships, or who are connected with the ship as such and in some capacity assist in its conduct, maintenance or service. Commonly exclusive of the officers of a ship. The Hurricane, D.C.Pa., 2 F.2d 70, 72; City of Los Angeles v. United Dredging Co., C.C.A.Cal., 14 F 2d 364, 366; The Lillian, D.C.Me., 16 F.2d 146, 148. One whose occupation is to navigate vessels upon the sea including all those on board whose labor contributes to the accomplishment of the main object in which the vessel is engaged. Osland v. Star Fish & Oyster Co., C.C.A.Ala., 107 F.2d 113, 114. One whose duties are maritime in character and are rendered on a vessel in navigable waters. Helena Glendale Ferry Co. v. Walling, C.C.A.Ark. 132 F.2d 616, 619, 620.

A vessel must be in motion or capable of motion and regarded legally as in motion in order that those employed in its use may be regarded as "seamen". Spinner v. Waterways Fuel & Dock Co., 70 Ohio App. 121, 41 N.E. 2d 144, 145, 146.

SEANCE. In French law. A session; as of some public body.

SEARCH.

Criminal Law

An examination of a man's house or other buildings or premises, or of his person, with a view to the discovery of contraband or illicit or stolen property, or some evidence of guilt to be used in the prosecution of a criminal action for some crime or offense with which he is charged. Elliott v. State, 173 Tenn. 203, 116 S.W.2d 1009, 1011. A prying into hidden places for that which is concealed and it is not a search to observe that which is open to view. People v. Exum, 382 Ill. 204, 47 N.E.2d 56, 59.

International Law

The right of search is the right on the part of ships of war to visit and search merchant vessels during war, in order to ascertain whether the ship or cargo is liable to seizure. Resistance to visitation and search by a neutral vessel makes the vessel and cargo liable to confiscation. Numerous treaties regulate the manner in which the right of search must be exercised. Man. Int. Law, 433; Sweet.

Practice

An examination of the official books and dockets, made in the process of investigating a title to land, for the purpose of discovering if there are any mortgages, judgments, tax-liens, or other incumbrances upon it.

General

Unlawful search. Within constitutional immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures, an examination or inspection without authority of law of premises or person with view to discovery of stolen, contraband, or illicit property, or for some evidence of guilt to be used in prosecution of criminal action. Const.U.S. Amend. 4. Bush v. State, 64 Okl.Cr. 161, 77 P.2d 1184, 1187.

Unreasonable search and seizure. At common law, a search which is unreasonably oppressive in its general invasion of the liberty of the citizen. McClannan v. Chaplain, 136 Va. 1, 116 S.E. 495, 498. An examination or inspection, without authority of law, of one's premises or person with a view to the discovery of stolen contraband or illicit property or for some evidence of guilt to be used in prosecution for crime. Graham v. State, 31 Okl.Cr. 125, 237 P. 462, 464. One which is not lawful. United States v. Snyder, D.C.W.Va., 278 F. 650, 658; Hays v. State, 38 Okl.Cr. 331, 261 P. 232, 234.

SEARCH-WARRANT. An order in writing, issued by a justice or other magistrate, in the name of the state, directed to a sheriff, constable, or other officer, commanding him to search a specified house, shop, or other premises, for personal property alleged to have been stolen, or for unlawful goods, and to bring the same, when found, before the magistrate, and usually also the body of the person occupying the premises, to be dealt with according to law. People v. Lavendowsky, 329 Ill. 223, 160 N.E. 582, 585.

SEARCHER. In English law. An officer of the customs, whose duty it is to examine and search all ships outward bound, to ascertain whether they have any prohibited or uncustomed goods on board. Wharton. Jacob.

SEASHORE. That portion of land adjacent to the sea which is alternately covered and left dry by the ordinary flux and reflux of the tides. Wood v. Maitland, 8 N.Y.S.2d 146, 151, 169 Misc. 484. See, also, Sea.

SEASONAL EMPLOYMENT. As used in compensation laws, as basis for determining amount of compensation, refers to occupations which can be carried on only at certain seasons or' fairly definite portions of the year, and does not include such occupations as may be carried on throughout entire year. Hiestand v. Ristau, 135 Neb. 881, 284 N.W. 756, 760. Pryor v. Brickley, Del., 5 A.2d 242, 244, 1 Terry 5.

SEATED LAND. Land that is occupied, cultivated, improved, reclaimed, farmed, or used as a place of residence. Residence without cultivation, or cultivation without residence, or both together, impart to land the character of being seated. The term is used, as opposed to "unseated land," in Pennsylvania tax laws. Earley v. Euwer, 102 Pa. 340; Coal Co. v. Fales, 55 Pa. 98.

SEAWAN. The name used by the Algonquin Indians for the shell beads (or wampum) which passed among the Indians as money. Webster.

SEAWORTHINESS. In marine insurance. A warranty of seaworthiness means that the vessel is competent to resist the ordinary attacks of wind and weather, and is competently equipped and manned for the voyage, with a sufficient crew, and with sufficient means to sustain them, and with a captain of general good character and nautical skill. 3 Kent, Comm. 287.

A warranty of seaworthiness extends not only to the condition of the structure of the ship itself, but requires that it be properly laden, and provided with a competent master, a sufficient number of competent officers and seamen, and the requisite appurtenances and equipments, such as ballast, cables and anchors, cordage and sails, food, water, fuel, and lights, and other necessary or proper stores and implements for the voyage. See, also, Seaworthy.

"Seaworthiness" involves no more than reasonable fitness for purpose of a voyage. In re Gravel Products Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 24 F.2d 702, 703.

SEAWORTHY. This adjective, applied to a vessel, signifies that she is properly constructed, prepared, manned, equipped, and provided, for the voyage intended. See Seaworthiness.

The term "seaworthy" is somewhat equivocal. In its more literal sense, it signifies capable of navigating the sea; but, more exactly, it implies a condition to be and remain in safety, in the condition she is in, whether at sea, in port, or on a railway, stripped and under repairs. If, when the policy attaches, she is in a suitable place, and capable, when repaired and equipped, of navigating the sea, she is seaworthy. But where a vessel is warranted seaworthy for a specified voyage, the place and usual length being given, something more is implied than mere physical strength and capacity; she must be suitably officered and manned, supplied with provisions and water, and furnished with charts and instruments, and, especially in time of war, with documents necessary to her security against hostile capture. The term "seaworthy," as used in the law and practice of insurance, does not mean, as the term would seem to imply, capable of going to sea or of being navigated on the sea; it imports something very different, and much more, viz., that she is sound, staunch, and strong, in all respects, and equipped, furnished, and provided with officers and men, provisions and documents, for a certain service. In a policy for a definite voyage, the term "seaworthy" means "sufficient for such a vessel and voyage." Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Watson, C.C.A.Va., 19 F.2d 832, 833; The Newport, C.C.A.Cal., 7 F.2d 452, 453.

SEBASTOMANIA. See Insanity.

SECK. A want of remedy by distress. Litt. § 218. See Rent. Want of present fruit or profit, as in the case of the reversion without rent or other service, except fealty. Co.Litt. 151b, n. 5.

SECOND. This term, as used in law, may denote either sequence in point of time or inferiority or postponement in respect to rank, lien, order, or privilege.

As to second "Cousin," "Deliverance," "Distress," "Mortgage," and "Surcharge," see those titles. As to "Secondhand Evidence," see Evidence. As to "Second of Exchange," see First.

SECOND LIEN. One which takes, rank immediately after a first lien on the same property and is next entitled to satisfaction out of the proceeds.

SECONDARY, n. In English practice. An officer of the courts of king's bench and common pleas; so called because he was second or next to the chief officer. In the king's bench he was called "Master of the King's Bench Office," and was a deputy of the prothonotary or chief clerk. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 11, 12. By St. 7 Wm. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 30, the office of secondary was abolished.

An officer who is next to the chief officer. Also an officer of the corporation of London, before whom inquiries to assess damages are held, as before sheriffs in counties. Wharton.

SECONDARY, adj. Of a subsequent, subordinate, or inferior kind or class; generally opposed to "primary."

As to secondary "Conveyances," "Easement," "Franchise," "Meaning," "Use," and "Vein," see those titles.

SECONDARY BOYCOTT. Any combination if its purpose and effect are to coerce' customers or patrons, or suppliers through fear of loss or bodily harm, to withhold or withdraw their business relations from employer who is under attack. Wright v. Teamsters' Union Local No. 690, 33 Wash. 905, 207 P.2d 662, 665.

SECONDARY EVIDENCE. That which is inferior to primary. Thus, a copy of an instrument, or oral evidence of its contents, is secondary evidence of the instrument and contents. It is that species of evidence which becomes admissible, as being the next best, when the primary or [P]est evidence of the fact in question is lost or inaccessible; as when a witness details orally the contents of an instrument which is lost or destroyed. Williams v. Davis, 56 Tex. 253; Baucum v. George, 65 Ala. 259; Roberts v. Dixon, 50 Kan. 436, 31 P. 1083.

SECONDARY LIABILITY. A liability which does not attach until or except upon the fulfillment of certain conditions; as that of a surety, or that of an accommodation indorser.

SECOND-HAND EVIDENCE. Evidence which has passed through one or more media before reaching the witness; hearsay evidence.

SECONDS. In criminal law. Those persons who assist, direct, and support others engaged in fighting a duel.

SECRET. Concealed; hidden; not made public; particularly, in law, kept from the knowledge or notice of persons liable to be affected by the act, transaction, deed, or other thing spoken of.

Webster defines "secrete" as "to deposit in a place of hiding, to hide, to conceal" ; and defines the adjective "secret" as "hidden, concealed" ; and the noun as "something studiously concealed, a thing kept from general knowledge, what is not revealed." The Century Dictionary defines the verb "secrete" as "to make or keep secret, hide, conceal, remove from observation, or the knowledge of others" ; and defines the adjective "secret" as "set or kept apart, hidden, concealed" ; and the noun as "something studiously hidden or concealed, a thing kept from general knowledge, what is not or should not be revealed." Something known only to one or a few and ,kept from others. Ferrell v. State, 68 Tex.Cr.R. 487, 152 S. W. 901, 903; Kaumagraph Co. v. Stampagraph Co., 235 N.Y. 1, 138 N.E. 485, 487; Rubner v. Gursky, Sup., 21 N.Y.S.2d 558, 561.

As to secret "Committee," "Equity," "Partnership," and "Trust," see those titles.

SECRET LIEN. A lien reserved by the vendor of chattels, who has delivered them to the vendee, to secure the payment of the price, which is concealed from all third persons.

SECRET SERVICE. A branch of government service concerned with the detection of counterfeiting and other offenses, civil or political, committed or threatened by persons who operate in secrecy. It is under the charge of the treasury department. Its rules and regulations, promulgated by the department, are laws within R. S. U. S. § 753 (28 U.S.C.A. § 2241), authorizing the issuance by a federal court of the writ of habeas corpus in case of a prisoner in custody for an act done in pursuance of a law of the United States; U. S. ex rel. Flynn v. Fuellhart, C.C.Pa., 106 F. 911.

SECRETARY. An official scribe, amanuensis, or writer, or person employed to write letters, dispatches, orders, public or private papers, records, and the like. Mauritz v. Schwind, Tex.Civ.App., 101 S.W.2d 1085, 1090.

Of a corporation or association, an officer charged with the direction and management of that part of the business of the company which is concerned with keeping the records, the official correspondence, with giving and receiving notices, countersigning documents, etc.

Also a name given to several of the heads of executive departments in the government of the United States; as the "Secretary of War," "Secretary of the Interior," etc. It is also the style of some of the members of the English cabinet; as the "Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs." There are also secretaries of embassies and legations.

SECRETARY OF DECREES AND INJUNCTIONS. An officer of the English court of chancery. The office was abolished by St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, § 23.

SECRETARY OF EMBASSY. A diplomatic officer appointed as secretary or assistant to an ambassador or minister plenipotentiary.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION. An officer employed to attend a foreign mission and to perform certain duties as clerk.

SECRETARY OF STATE. In American law. Title of the chief of the executive bureau of the United States called the "Department of State." He is a member of the cabinet, and is charged with the general administration of the international and diplomatic affairs of the government. In many of the state governments there is an executive officer bearing the same title and exercising important functions. In English law. The secretaries of state are cabinet ministers attending the sovereign for the receipt and dispatch of letters, grants, petitions, and many of the most important affairs of the kingdom, both foreign and domestic. There are five principal secretaries,—one for the home department, another for foreign affairs, a third for the colonies, a fourth for war, and a fifth for India. Wharton.

SECRETE. To conceal or hide away. Particularly, to put property out of the reach of creditors, either by corporally hiding it, or putting the title in another's name, or otherwise hindering creditors from levying on it or attaching it. Guile v. McNanny, 14 Minn. 522 (Gil. 391) 100 Am.Dec. 244; Sturz v. Fischer, 36 N.Y.S. 894, 15 Misc. 410.

SECRETS OF STATE. The production in court of documents containing secrets of state will not be compelled if it would be injurious to the public interest and if the officer in custody of them claims the privilege. Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 838, per Pollock, C. B. This is said to include confidential communications made by servants of the Crown to each other. 21 Q. B. D. 512. The question of their production is to be decided by the head of the department having custody of them and not by the court. 5 H. & N. 838; [19001 1 Ch. 347; 13 Low. Can. 33 (where the cases were fully considered). Appeal of Hartranft, 85 Pa. 433, 27 Am.Rep. 667 (in which Agnew, C. J., vigorously dissented), where a ruling in the trial of Aaron Burr was cited as a precedent. That it is for the judge to pass on the question, see Wigm. Evid. § 2376. In 21 Q. B. D. 515, Field, J., said that if he were sitting, he should consider himself entitled to examine the documents privately, and ascertain the real motive of the refusal to produce.

SECT. As applied to religious bodies. A party or body of persons who unite in holding certain special doctrines or opinions concerning religion, which distinguish them from others holding the same general religious belief. Gerhardt v. Heid, 66 N.D. 444, 267 N.W. 127.

SECTA. In old English law. Suit; attendance at court; the plaintiff's suit or following, i. e., the witnesses whom he was required, in the ancient practice, to bring with him and produce in court, for the purpose of confirming his claim, before the defendant was put to the necessity of answering the declaration. 3 Bl. Comm. 295, 344; Bract. fol. 214a. A survival from this proceeding is seen in the formula still used at the end of declarations, "and therefore he brings his suit," (et inde producit sectam.) This word, in its secondary meaning, signifies suit in the courts; lawsuit.

SECTA AD CURIAM. A writ that lay against him who refused to perform his suit either to the county court or the court-baron. Cowell.

SECTA AD FURNUM. In old English law. Suit due to a man's public oven or bake-house. 3 Bl. Comm. 235.

SECTA AD JUSTICIAM FACIENDAM. In old English law. A service which a man is bound to perform by his fee.

SECTA AD MOLENDINUM. A writ which lay for the owner of a mill against the inhabitants of a place where such mill is situated, for not doing suit to the plaintiff's mill; that is, for not having their corn ground at it. Brown.

SECTA AD TORRALE. In old English law. Suit due to a man's kiln or malthouse. 3 Bl. Comm. 235.

SECTA CURVE. In old English law. Suit of court; attendance at court. The service, incumbent upon feudal tenants, of attending the lord at his court, both to form a jury when required, and also to answer for their own actions when complained of.

SECTA EST PUGNA CIVILIS; SICUT ACTORES ARMANTUR ACTIONIBUS, ET, QUASI, GLADIIS ACCINGUNTUR, ITA REI MUNIUNTUR EXCEPTIONIBUS, ET DEFENDUNTUR, QUASI, CLYPEIS. Hob. 20. A suit is a civil warfare; for as the plaintiffs are armed with actions, and, as it were, girded with swords, so the defendants are fortified with pleas, and are defended, as it were, by shields.

SECTA FACIENDA PER ILLAM QUPE HABET ENICIAM PARTEM. A writ to compel the heir, who has the elder's part of the co-heirs, to perform suit and services for all the coparceners. Reg. Orig. 177.

SECTA QUE SCRIPTO NITITUR A SCRIPTO VARIARI NON DEBET. Jenk. Cent. 65. A suit which is based upon a writing ought not to vary from the writing.

SECTA REGALIS. A suit so called by which all persons were bound twice in the year to attend in the sheriff's tourn, in order that they might be informed of things relating to the public peace. It was so called because the sheriff's tourn was the king's leet, and it was held in order that the people might be bound by oath to bear true allegiance to the king. Cowell.

SECTA UNICA TANTUM FACIENDA PRO PLURIBUS H.AEREDITATIBUS. A writ for an heir who was distrained by the lord to do more suits than one, that he should be allowed to do one suit only in respect of the land of divers heirs descended to him. Cowell.

SECTARIAN. Denominational; devoted to, peculiar to, pertaining to, or promotive of, the interest of a sect, or sects; in a broader sense, used to describe the activities of the followers of one faith as related to those of adherents of another. The term is most comprehensive in scope. Gerhardt v. Heid, 66 N.D. 444, 267 N.W. 127, 130.

See, also, Sect.

SECTATORES. Suitors of court who, among the Saxons, gave their judgment or verdict in civil suits upon the matter of fact and law. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 22.

SECTION. In text-books, codes, statutes, and other juridical writings, the smallest distinct and numbered subdivisions are commonly called "sections," sometimes "articles," and occasionally "paragraphs." Ex parte Pea River Power Co., 207 Ala. 6, 91 So. 920.

SECTION OF LAND. In American land law. A division or parcel of land, on the government survey, comprising one square mile or 640 acres. Each "township" (six miles square) is divided by straight lines into thirty;six sections, and these are again divided into half-sections and quarter-sections. South Florida Farms Co. v. Goodno, 84 Fla. 532, 94 So. 672, 675.

The general and proper acceptation of the terms "section," "half," and "quarter section," as well as their construction by the general land department, denotes the land in the sectional and subdivisional lines, and not the exact quantity which a perfect admeasurement of an unobstructed surface would declare. Brown v. Hardin, 21 Ark. 327.

SECTIS NON FACIENDIS. A writ which lay for a dowress, or one in wardship, to be free from suit of court. Cowell.

SECTORES. Lat. In Roman law. Purchasers at auction, or public sales.

SECULAR. Not spiritual; not ecclesiastical; relating to affairs of the present world. State v. Smith, 19 Okl.Cr. 184, 198 P. 879, 881.

SECULAR BUSINESS. As used in Sunday laws, this term includes all forms of activity in the business affairs of life, the prosecution of a trade or employment, and commercial dealings, such as the making of promissory notes, lending money, and the like. Lovejoy v. Whipple, 18 Vt. 383, 46 Am.Dec. 157.

SECULAR CLERGY. In ecclesiastical law, the parochial clergy, who perform their ministry in, seculo (in the world), and who are thus distinguished from the monastic or "regular" clergy. Steph. Comm. 681, note.

SECUNDUM. Lat. In the civil and common law. According to. Occurring in many phrases of familiar use, as follows:

SECUNDUM 1EQUUM ET BONUM. According to what is just and right.

SECUNDUM ALLEGATA ET PROBATA. According to what is alleged and proved; according to the allegations and proofs. 15 East, 81; Cloutman v. Tunison, 1 Sumn. 375, F.Cas.No.2,907.

SECUNDUM ARTEM. According to the art, trade, business, or science.

SECUNDUM BONOS MORES. According to good usages; according to established custom; regularly; orderly.

SECURITY COUNCIL. The executive body of the United Nations, charged with the duty of preventing or stopping wars by diplomatic, economic or military action. It is composed of five permanent members and six additional members elected at stated intervals.

SECURITY DEPOSIT. Money deposited by tenant with landlord as security for full and faithful performance by tenant of terms of lease. Bowles v. Westbrook Defense Homes, D.C.Conn., 61 F. Supp, 172, 173.

SECURIUS EXPEDIUNTUR NEGOTIA COMMISSA PLURIBUS, ET PLUS VIDENT OCULI QUAM OCULUS. 4 Coke, 46a. Matters intrusted to several are more securely dispatched, and eyes see more than eye, [i. e., "two heads are better than one."]

SECUS. Lat. Otherwise; to the contrary. This word is used in the books to indicate the converse of a foregoing proposition, or the rule applicable to a different state of facts, or an exception to a rule before stated.

SED NON ALLOCATUR. Lat. But it is not allowed. A phrase used in the old reports, to signify that the court disagreed with the arguments of counsel.

SED PER CURIAM. Lat. But by the court. This phrase is used in the reports to introduce a statement made by the court, on the argument, at variance with the propositions advanced by counsel, or the opinion of the whole court, where that is different from the opinion of a single judge immediately before quoted.

SED QUIERE. Lat. But inquire; examine this further. A remark indicating, briefly, that the particular statement or rule laid down is doubted or challenged in respect to its correctness.

SED VIDE. Lat. But see. This remark, followed by a citation, directs the reader's attention to an authority or a statement which conflicts with or contradicts the statement or principle laid down.

SEDATO ANIMO. Lat. With settled purpose. 5 Mod. 291.

SEDE PLENA. Lat. The see being filled. A phrase used when a bishop's see is not vacant.

SEDENTE CURIA. Lat. The court sitting; during the sitting of the court.

SEDERUNT, ACTS OF. In Scotch law. Certain ancient ordinances of the court of session, conferring upon the courts power to establish general rules of practice. Bell.

SEDES. Lat. A see; the dignity of a bishop. 3 Steph. Comm. 65.

SEDGE FLAT. A tract of land below high-water mark. Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 421.

SEDITION. An insurrectionary movement tending towards treason, but wanting an overt act; attempts made by meetings or speeches, or by publications, to disturb the tranquillity of the state. Arizona Pub. Co. v. Harris, 181 P. 373, 375, 20 Ariz. 446.

The distinction between "sedition" and "treason" consists in this : that though the ultimate object of sedition is a violation of the public peace, or at least such a course of measures as evidently engenders it, yet it does not aim at direct a'nd open violence against the laws or the subversion of the constitution. Alis.Crim.Law, 580.

In Scotch law. The raising commotions or disturbances in the state. It is a revolt against legitimate authority. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 14.

In English law. The offense of publishing, verbally or otherwise, any words or document with the intention of exciting disaffection, hatred, or contempt against the sovereign, or the government and constitution of the kingdom, or either house of parliament, or the administration of justice, or of exciting his majesty's subjects to attempt, otherwise than by lawful means, the alteration of any matter in church or state, or of exciting feelings of ill will and hostility between different classes of his majesty's subjects. Sweet. State v. Shepherd, 177 Mo. 205, 76 S.W. 79, 99 Am. St.Rep. 624.

SEDITIOUS LIBEL. In English law. A written or printed document containing seditious matter or published with a seditious intention, the latter term being defined as "an intention to bring into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection against, the king or the government and constitution as by law established, or either house of parliament, or the administration of justice, or to excite British subjects to attempt otherwise than by lawful means the alteration of any matter in church or state by law established, or to promote feelings of ill will and hostility between different classes." Dicey, Const. (4th Ed.) 231, 232. See Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) p. 654.

SEDUCE. To induce to surrender chastity. State v. Howard, 264 Mo. 386, 175 S.W. 58, 59. To lead away or astray. Mosley v. Lynn, 172 Ga. 193, 157 S.E. 450, 452. See, also, Seduction.

SEDUCING TO LEAVE SERVICE. An injury for which a master may have an action on the case.

SEDUCTION. The act of seducing. Act of man enticing woman to have unlawful intercourse with him by means of persuasion, solicitation, promises, bribes, or other means without employment of force. Van De Velde v. Colle, 8 N.J.Misc. 782, 152 A. 645, 646.

At common law seduction is recognized merely as creating a civil liability, and actions for seduction are based solely upon relation of master and servant and no one but those entitled to services can maintain action. Under statutory provisions in many states the woman is now permitted to recover for her own seduction.

In many states seduction has been made a criminal offense. Previous chaste character of the woman at time of seduction is essential under some statutes.

SEE. The circuit of a bishop's jurisdiction; or his office or dignity, as being bishop of a given diocese.

SEEN. This word, when written by the drawee on a bill of exchange, amounts to an acceptance by the law merchant. Barnet v. Smith, 30 N.H. 256, 64 Am.Dec. 290; Peterson v. Hubbard, 28 Mich. 197.

SEIGNIOR, in its general signification, means "lord," but in law it is particularly applied to the lord of a fee or of a manor; and the fee, dominions, or manor of a seignior is thence termed a "seigniory," i. e., a lordship. He who is a lord, but of no manor, and therefore unable to keep a court, is termed a "seignior in gross." Kitch. 206; Cowell.

Seignior or Seigneur. Among the feudists, this name signified lord of the fee. Fitzh.N.B. 23. Seigneur is still used in French Canada. The most extended signification of this word includes not only a lord or peer of parliament, but is applied to the owner or proprietor of a thing, hence the owner of a hawk, and the master of a fishing vessel, is called a seigneur. 37 Edw. III, c. 19; Barrington, Stat. 258.

SEIGNIORAGE. A royalty or prerogative of the sovereign, whereby an allowance of gold and silver, brought in the mass to be exchanged for coin, is claimed. Cowell. Mintage; the charge for coining bullion into money at the mint.

SEIGNIORESS. A female superior.

SEIGNIORY. In English law. A lordship; a manor. The rights of a lord, as such, in lands. Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 231, 114 Misc.Rep. 590.

SEISED IN DEMESNE AS OF FEE. This is the strict technical expression used to describe the ownership in "an estate in fee-simple in possession in a corporeal hereditament." The word "seised" is used to express the "seisin" or owner's possession of a freehold property; the phrase "in demesne," or "in his demesne," (in dominico suo) signifies that he is seised as owner of the land itself, and not merely of the seigniory or services; and the concluding words, "as of fee," import that he is seised of an estate of inheritance in fee-simple. Where the subject is incorporeal, or the estate expectant on a precedent freehold, the words "in his demesne" are omitted. (Co. Litt. 17a; Fleta, 1. 5, c. 5, § 18; Bract. 1. 4, tr. 5, c. 2, § 2.) Brown.

SEISI. In old English law. Seised; possessed.

SEISIN. The completion of the feudal investiture, by which the tenant was admitted into the feud, and performed the rights of homage and fealty. Stearns, Real Act. 2. Possession with an intent on the part of him who holds it to claim a freehold interest. Deshong v. Deshong, 186 Pa. 227, 40 A. 402, 65 Am.St.Rep. 855. Right to immediate possession according to the nature of the estate. Williams v. Swango, 365 Ill. 549, 7 N.E.2d 306, 309.

Upon the introduction of the feudal law into England, the word "seisin" was applied only to the possession of an estate of freehold, in contradistinction to that precarious kind of possession by which tenants in villeinage held their lands, which was considered to be the possession of those in whom the freehold continued. The word still retains its original signification, being applied exclusively to the possession of land of a freehold tenure, it being inaccurate to use the word as expressive of the possession of leaseholds or terms of years, or even of copyholds. Brown.

Under our law, the word "seisin" has no accurately defined technical meaning. At common law, it imported a feudal investiture of title by actual possession. With us it has the force of possession under some legal title or right to hold. This possession, so far as possession alone is involved, may be shown by parol; but, if it is intended to show possession under a legal title, then the title must be shown by proper conveyance for that purpose. Ford v. Garner, 49 Ala. 603.

Every person in whom a seisin is required by any of the provisions of this chapter shall be deemed to have been seised, if he may have had any right, title, or interest in the inheritance. G.S.N.C. §1 29-1, rule 12.

Actual Seisin

Possession of the freehold by the pedis positio of one's self or one's tenant or agent, or by construction of law, as in the case of a state grant or a conveyance under the statutes of uses, or (probably) of grant or devise where there is no actual adverse possession; it means actual possession as distinguished from constructive possession or possession in law. Carr v. Anderson, 6 App.Div. 6, 39 N.Y.S. 746.

Constructive Seisin

Seisin in law where there is no seisin in fact; as where the state issues a patent to a person who never takes any sort of possession of the lands granted, he has constructive seisin of all the land in his grant, though another person is at the time in actual possession. Garrett v. Ramsey, 26 W.Va. 351.

See Covenant.

Equitable Seisin

A seisin which is analogous to legal seisin; that is, seisin of an equitable estate in land. Thus a mortgagor is said to have equitable seisin of the land by receipt of the rents. Sweet.

Livery of Seisin

Delivery of possession; called, by the feudists, "investiture."

Primer Seisin

In English law. The right which the king had, when any of his tenants died seised of a knight's fee, to receive of the heir, provided he were of full age, one whole year's profits of the lands, if they were in immediate possession; and half a year's profits, if the lands were in reversion, expectant on an estate for life. 2 Bl. Comm. 66.

Quasi Seisin

A, term applied to the possession which a copyholder has of the land to which he has been admitted. The freehold in copyhold lands being in the lord, the copyholder cannot have seisin of them in the proper sense of the word, but he has a customary or quasi seisin analogous to that of a freeholder. Williams, Seis. 126; Sweet.

Seisin in Deed

Actual possession of the freehold; the same as actual seisin or seisin in fact. Roetzel v. Beal, 196 Ark. 5, 116 S.W.2d 591, 593.

Seisin in Fact

Possession with intent on the part of him who holds it to claim a freehold interest; the same as actual seisin. Seim v. O'Grady, 42 W.Va. 77, 24 S.E. 994; Savage v. Savage, 19 Or. 112, 23 P. 890, 20 Am.St.Rep. 795.

Seisin in Law

A right of immediate possession according to the nature of the estate. Martin v. Trail, 142 Mo. 85, 43 S.W. 655; Savage v. Savage, 19 Or. 112, 23 P. 890, 20 Am.St.Rep. 795. As the old doctrine of corporeal investiture is no longer in force, the delivery of a deed gives seisin in law. Watkins v. Nugen, 118 Ga. 372, 45 S.E. 262.

Seisin Ox

In Scotch law. A perquisite formerly due to the sheriff when he gave possession to an heir holding crown lands. It was long since converted into a payment in money, proportioned to the value of the estate. Bell.

SEISINA. L. Lat. Seisin.

SEISINA FACIT STIPITEM. Seisin makes the stock. 2 BL Comm. 209; Broom, Max. 525, 528.

SEISINA HABENDA. A writ for delivery of seisin to the lord, of lands and tenements, after the sovereign, in right of his prerogative, had had the year, day, and waste on a felony committed, etc. Reg. Orig. 165.

SEIZE. To put in possession, invest with fee simple, be seized of or in, be legal possessor of, or be holder in fee simple. Hanley v. Stewart, 155 Pa. Super. 535, 39 A.2d 323, 326.

SEIZIN. See Seisin.

SEIZING OF HERIOTS. Taking the best beast, etc., where an heriot is due, on the death of the tenant. 2 Bl. Comm. 422.

SEIZURE. To take possession of forcibly, to grasp, to snatch, or to put in possession. Hardie v. State, 140 Tex.Cr.R. 368, 144 S.W.2d 571, 575.

Law of Copyholds

Seizure is where the lord of copyhold lands takes possession of them in default of a tenant. It is either seizure quousque or absolute seizure.

Practice

The act performed by an officer of the law, under the authority and exigence of a writ, in taking into the custody of the law the property, real or personal, of a person against whom the judgment of a competent court has passed, condemning him to pay a certain sum of money, in order that such property may be sold, by authority and due course of law, to satisfy the judgment. Or the act of taking possession of goods in consequence of a violation of public law. Carey v. Insurance Co., 54 N.W. 18, 84 Wis. 80, 20 L.R.A. 267, 36 Am.St. Rep. 907.

Seizure, even though hostile, is not necessarily capture, though such is its usual and probable result. The ultimate act or adjudication of the state, by which the seizure has been made, assigns the proper and conclusive quality and denomination to the original proceeding. A condemnation asserts a capture ab inittio; an award of restitution pronounces upon the act as having been not a valid act of capture, but an act of temporary seizure only. Appleton v. Crowninshield, 3 Mass. 443.

SEIZURE QUOUSQUE. Where the heir on the death of his ancestor postpones claiming admittance from the lord, the lord may, after a reasonable time, and after due proclamation at three successive courts, seize the tenement into his hands quousque, e. until an heir appears and claims admittance; Jenks, Mod. Land L. 208.

SELDA. A shop, shed, or stall in a market; a wood of sallows or willows; also a sawpit. Co. Litt. 4.

SELECT. To take by preference from among others; to pick out; to cull. Clarke v. Commonwealth, 159 Va. 908, 166 S.E. 541, 543.

SELECT COUNCIL. The name given, in some states, to the upper house or branch of the council of a city.

SELECTI JUDICES. Lat. In Roman law. Judges who were selected very much like our juries. They were returned by the praetor, drawn by lot, subject to be challenged, and sworn. 3 Bl. Comm. 366.

SELECTMEN. The name of certain municipal officers, in the New England states, elected by the towns to transact their general public business, and possessing certain executive powers. Felch v. Weare, 69 N.H. 617, 45 A. 591.

SELF-DEALING. Basically relates to transac. tions wherein a trustee, acting for himself and also as "trustee," a relation which demands strict fidelity to others, seeks to consummate a deal wherein self-interest is opposed to duty. Cestui que trust has in such case the election to affirm or disaffirm, unless countervailing equities have intervened. First Nat. Bank v. Basham, 238 Ala. 500, 191 So. 873, 876, 877, 878, 125 A.L.R. 656; In re Binder's Estate, 137 Ohio St. 26, 27 N.E.2d 939, 947, 129 A.L.R. 130.

SELF-DEFENSE. The protection of one's person or property against some injury attempted by another. The right of such protection. An excuse for the use of force in resisting an attack on the person, and especially for killing an assailant. Whart. Crim. Law, §§ 1019, 1026. The right of a man to repel force by force even to the taking of life in defense of his person, property or habitation, or of a member of his family, against any one who manifests, intends, attempts or endeavors by violence or surprise, to commit a forcible felony. State v. Patterson, 45 Vt. 308, 12 Am.Rep. 200; Logue v. Com., 38 Pa. 265, 80 Am. Dec. 481. Essential elements of "self-defense" are that defendant does not provoke difficulty and that there must be impending peril without convenient or reasonable mode of escape. Hayes v. State, 225 Ala. 253, 142 So. 675, 677. The law of "self-defense" justifies an act done in the reasonable belief of immediate danger, and, if an injury was done by defendant in justifiable self-defense, he can never be punished criminally nor held responsible for damages in a civil action. Baltimore Transit Co. v. Faulkner, 179 Md. 598, 20 A.2d 485, 487.

Accused is not justified in pursuing and killing attacker when danger of death or serious bodily injury has passed. People v. Keys, 62 Cal.App.2d 903, 145 P.2d 589, 596.

SELF-EXECUTING CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISION. Immediately effective without the necessity of ancillary legislation. Cleary v. Kincaid, 23 Idaho, 789, 131 P. 1117, 1118; Stange v. City of Cleveland, 94 Ohio St. 377, 114 N.E. 261, 262.

Constitutional provision is "self-executing" if it supplies sufficient rule by which right given may be enjoyed or duty imposed enforced; constitutional provision is not "self-executing" when it merely indicates principles without laying down- rules giving them force of law. Zachary v. City of Wagoner, 146 Okl. 268, 292 P. 345, 348; State v. Perrault, 34 N.M. 438, 283 P. 902, 903.

SELF-EXECUTING JUDGMENTS. Those requiring no affirmative action of the court or action under process issued by the court to execute them. /Etna Casualty & Surety Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Board of Sup'rs of Warren County, 160 Va. 11, 168 S.E. 617, 629.

SELF-MURDER, SELF-DESTRUCTION, or SELF-SLAUGHTER. See Felo de Se; Suicide.

SELION OF LAND. In old English law. A ridge of ground rising between two furrows, containing no certain quantity, but sometimes more and sometimes less. Termes de la Ley.

SELL. To dispose of by sale (q. v.).

SELLER. One who sells anything; the party who transfers property in the contract of sale. The correlative is "buyer," or "purchaser." Though these terms are not inapplicable to the persons concerned in a transfer of real estate, it is more customary to use "vendor" and "purchaser," or "vendee" in that case.

SELLETTE (Fr.). A kind of woollen seat set up in criminal courts in France, on which they placed the accused to undergo his last interrogatory when the conclusions of the counsel for the prosecution went against him with regard to capital punishment or at least penal corporal punishment. It implied moral degradation and was therefore limited to persons accused of crimes entailing corporal punishment. Ord. Cr. de 1670, Tibre IV, art. 21. Abolished by Edict of May 1, 1788. Called a "stool of repentance."

SELLING PUBLIC OFFICES. Buying or selling any office in the gift of the crown, or making any ivegotiation relating thereto, was deemed a misdemeanor under stats. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16, and 49 Geo. III. c. 126, 2 Steph. Com., 11th ed. 631.

SELLING STOCKS SHORT. Selling stocks customer does not possess, customer borrowing the number of shares he has sold from some third person to deliver to his vendee expecting to be able to buy the stocks later at a lower figure and return them to the person from whom he borrowed them. Henderson v. Usher, 125 Fla. 709, 170 So. 846, 851.

SEMAYNE'S CASE. This case decided, in 1604, that "every man's house [meaning his dwelling-house only] is his castle," and that an officer executing civil process may not break open outer doors in general, but only inner doors, but that (after request made) he may break open even outer doors to find goods of another wrongfully in the house. Brown. It is reported in 5 Coke, 91.

SEMBLE. L. Fr. It seems; it would appear. This expression is often used in the reports to preface a statement by the court upon a point of law which is not directly decided, when such statement is intended as an intimation of what the decision would be if the point were necessary to be passed upon. It is also used to introduce a suggestion by the reporter, or his understanding of the point decided when it is not free from obscurity.

SEMEL CIVIS SEMPER CIVIS. Once a citizen always a citizen. Tray. Lat. Max. 555.

SEMEL MALUS SEMPER PRIESUMITUR ESSE MALUS IN EODEM GENERE. Whoever is once bad is presumed to be so always in the same kind of affairs. Cro. Car. 317.

SEMESTRIA. Lat. In the civil law. The collected decisions of the emperors in their councils.

SENORIO. In Spanish law. Dominion or property.

SENSUS. Lat. Sense, meaning, signification. Malo sensu, in an evil or derogatory sense. Mitiori sensu, in a milder, less severe, or less stringent sense. Sensu honesto, in an honest sense; to interpret words sensu honest() is to take them so as not to impute impropriety to the persons concerned.

SENSUS VERBORUM EST ANIMA LEGIS. 5 Coke, 2. The meaning of the words is the spirit of the law.

SENSUS VERBORUM EST DUPLEX,—MITIS ET ASPER; ET VERBA SEMPER ACCIPIENDA SUNT IN MITIORI SENSU. 4 Coke, 13. The meaning of words is twofold,—mild and harsh; and words are always to be received in their milder sense.

SENSUS VERBORUM EX CAUSA DICENDI AC. CIPIENDUS EST; ET SERMONES SEMPER ACCIPIENDI SUNT SECUNDUM SUBJECTAM MATERIAM. The sense of words is to be taken from the occasion of speaking them; and discourses are always to be interpreted according to the subject-matter. 4 Coke, 13b. See 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

SENTENCE. The judgment formally pronounced by the court or judge upon the defendant after his conviction in a criminal prosecution, awarding the punishment to be inflicted. Judgment formally declaring to accused legal consequences of guilt which he has confessed or of which he has been convicted. The word is properly confined to this meaning. In civil cases, the terms "judgment," "decision," "award," "finding," etc., are used. Archer v. Snook, D.C.Ga., 10 F.2d 567, 569; Hart v. Norman, 92 Misc. 185; 155 N.Y.S 238, 240; State v. Woodbury, 133 Kan. 1, 298 P. 794.

Cumulative sentences. Separate sentences (each additional to the others) imposed upon a defendant who has been convicted upon an indictment containing several counts, each of such counts charging a distinct offense, or who is under conviction at the same time for several distinct offenses; one of such sentences being made to begin at the expiration of another. Carter v. McClaughry, 22 S.Ct. 181, 183 U.S. 365, 46 L.Ed. 236.

Ecclesiastical sentence. In ecclesiastical procedure, analogous to "judgment" (q. v.) in an ordinary action. A" definite sentence is one which puts an end to the suit, and regards the principal matter in question. An interlocutory sentence determines only some incidental matter in the proceedings. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1260.

Excessive sentence. See Excessive Sentence.

Final sentence. One which puts an end to a case. Distinguished from interlocutory.

Indeterminate sentence. A form of sentence to imprisonment upon conviction of crime, now authorized by statute in several states, which, instead of fixing rigidly the duration of the imprisonment, declares that it shall be for a period "not less than" so many years "nor more than" so many years, or not less than the minimum period prescribed by statute as the punishment for the particular offense nor more than the maximum period, the exact length of the term being afterwards fixed, within the limits assigned by the court or the statute, by an executive authority, (the governor, board of pardons, etc.,) on consideration of the previous record of the convict, his behavior while in prison or while out on parole, the apparent prospect of reformation and other such considerations.

Interlocutory sentence. In the civil law. A sentence on some indirect question arising from the principal cause. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, ch. 9, no. 40.

Sentence of death recorded. In English practice. The recording of a sentence of death, not actually pronounced, on the understanding that it will not be executed. Such a record has the same effect as if the judgment had been pronounced and the offender reprieved by the court. Mozley & Whitley. The practice is now disused.

Simple sentence. (In rhetoric.) See Simple.

Suspension of sentence. This term may mean either a withholding or postponing the sentencing of a prisoner after the conviction, or a postponing of the execution of the sentence after it has been pronounced. In the latter case, it may, for reasons addressing themselves to the discretion of the court, be indefinite as to time, or during the good behavior of the prisoner. See People v. Webster, 14 Misc. 617, 36 N.Y.S. 745; In re Buchanan, 146 N.Y. 264, 40 N.E. 883.

SENTENCES TO RUN CONCURRENTLY. Merely means that accused is given privilege of serving each day a portion of each sentence. Nishimoto v. Nagle, C.C.A.Cal., 44 F.2d 304, 305.

SENTENTIA. Lat. In the civil law. (1) Sense; import; as distinguished from mere words (2) The deliberate expression of one's will or intention. (3) The sentence of a judge or court.

SENTENTIA A NON JUDICE LATA NEMINI DEBET NOCERE. A sentence pronounced by one who is not a judge should not harm any one. Fleta, 1. 6, c. 6, § 7.

SENTENTIA CONTRA, MATRIMONIUM NUMQUAM TRANSIT IN REM JUDICATAM. 7 Coke, 43. A sentence against marriage never becomes a matter finally adjudged, e., res judicata.

SENTENTIA FACIT JUS, ET LEGIS INTERPRETATIO LEGIS VIM OBTINET. Ellesm. Post., N. 55. Judgment creates right, and the interpretation of the law has the force of law.

SENTENTIA FACIT JUS, ET RES JUDICATA PRO VERITATE ACCIPITUR. Ellesm. Post. N. 55. Judgment creates right, and what is adjudicated is taken for truth.

SENTENTIA INTERLOCUTORIA REVOCARI POTEST, DEFINITIVA NON POTEST. Bac. Max. 20. An interlocutory judgment may be recalled, but not a final.

SENTENTIA NON FERTUR DE REBUS NON LIQUIDIS. Sentence is not given upon matters that are not clear. Jenk. Cent. p. 7, case 9.

SEPARABLE. Capable of being separated, disjoined, or divided. In re Babcock, 27 C.C.P.A. 1097, 110 F.2d 665, 667.

SEPARABLE CONTROVERSY. As to removal of causes from state courts to federal courts, this phrase means a separate and distinct cause of action existing in the suit, on which a separate and distinct suit might properly have been brought and complete relief afforded as to such cause of action; or the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that, in one of the parts, a controversy will be presented, wholly between citizens of different states, which can be fully determined without the presence of any of the other parties to the suit as it has been begun. Fraser v. Jennison, 1 S.Ct. 171, 106 U.S. 191, 27 L. Ed. 131; Gudger v. Western N. C. R. Co., C.C.N. C., 21 F. 81; Steed v. Henry, 180 S.W. 508, 509, 120 Ark. 583; Harrison v. Harrison, D.C.Miss., 5 F.2d 1001, 1003; Mace v. Mayfield, D.C.S.C., 10 F.2d 231, 232. It requires two or more causes of action, one of which is wholly between citizens of different states. Johnson v. Marsh, D.C.Neb., 49 F.Supp. 137, 139, 141, 143.

SEPARALITER. Lat. Separately. Used in indictments to indicate that two or more defendants were charged separately, and not jointly, with the commission of the offense in question. State v. Edwards, 60 Mo. 490.

SEPARATE, v. To disunite, divide, disconnect, or sever. Webster; Faucett v. Hensley, 35 Ohio App. 16, 171 N.E. 352, 353.

SEPARATE, adj. Individual; distinct; particular; disconnected. Generally used in law as opposed to "joint," though the more usual antithesis of the latter term is "several." Either of these words implies division, distribution, disconnection, or aloofness. Merrill v. Pepperdine, 9 Ind.App. 416, 36 N.E. 921.

As to separate "Acknowledgment" and "Covenant," see those titles.

SEPARATE ACTION. As opposed to a joint action, an action brought for himself alone by each of several complainants who are all concerned in the same transaction, but cannot legally join in the suit.

SEPARATE DEMISE IN EJECTMENT. A demise in a declaration in ejectment used to be termed a "separate demise" when made by the lessor separately or individually, as distinguished from a demise made jointly by two or more persons, which was termed a "joint demise." No such demise, either separate or joint, is now necessary in this action. Brown.

SEPARATE ESTATE. The individual property of one of two persons who stand in a social or business relation, as distinguished from that which they own jointly or are jointly interested in. Thus, "separate estate," within the meaning of the bankrupt law, is that in which each partner is separately interested at the time of the bankruptcy. The term can only be applied to such property as belonged to one or more of the partners, to the exclusion of the rest. In re Lowe, 11 Nat. Bankr. Rep. 221, F.Cas.No.8,564. The separate estate of a married woman is that which belongs to her, and over which her husband has no right in equity. It may consist of lands or chattels. Williams v. King, 29 F.Cas. 1,369.

SEPARATE EXAMINATION. The interrogation of a married woman, who appears before an officer for the purpose of acknowledging a deed or other instrument, conducted by such officer in private or out of the hearing of her husband, in order to ascertain if she acts of her own will and without compulsion or constraint of the husband. Also the examination of a witness in private or apart from, and out of the hearing of, the other witnesses in the same cause.

SEPARATE MAINTENANCE. Allowance granted to a wife for support of herself and children while she is living apart from her husband. Cohn v. Cohn, 4 Wash.2d 322, 103 P.2d 366, 367.

Alimony in its strict sense is confined to an allowance made to a wife who is legally separated or divorced from husband, but in many jurisdictions courts have authority to make an allowance to a wife who is living separate and apart, from her husband without being legally separated or divorced, and this allowance is often called "separate maintenance." Dyer v. Dyer, 212 N.C. 620, 194 S.E. 278.

SEPARATE PROPERTY. Property owned by married person in his or her own right during marriage. In re Morgan's Estate, 203 Cal. 569, 265 P. 241, 245. See, also, Separate Estate.

Of a married woman. That which she owns in her own right, which is liable only for her own debts, and which she can encumber and dispose of at her own will.

"Separate property" continues to be such as long as it can clearly be traced and identified, and its rents, issues, and profits remain separate property. True v. United States, D.C.Wash., 51 F.Supp. 720, 723, 726.

SEPARATE TRIAL. The separate and individual trial of each of several persons jointly accused of a crime.

SEPARATIM. Lat. In old conveyancing. Severally. A word which made a several covenant. 5 Coke, 23a.

SEPARATION. In matrimonial law. A cessation of cohabitation of husband and wife by mutual agreement, or, in the case of "judicial separation," under the decree of a court. Woodruff v. Woodruff, 215 N.C. 685, 3 S.E.2d 5, 6, SEPARATION A MENSA ET THORO. A partial dissolution of the marriage relation.

SEPARATION OF PATRIMONY. In Louisiana probate law. The creditors of the succession may demand, in every case and against every creditor of the heir, a separation of the property of the succession from that of the heir. This is what is called the "separation of patrimony." The object of a separation of patrimony is to prevent property out of which a particular class of creditors have a right to be paid from being confounded with other property, and by that means made liable to the debts of another class of creditors. Civ.Code La. art. 1444.

SEPARATION ORDER. In England, where a husband is convicted of an aggravated assault upon his wife, the court or magistrate may order that the wife shall be no longer bound to cohabit with him. Such an order has the same effect as a judicial decree of separation on the ground of cruelty. It may also provide for the payment of a weekly sum by the husband to the wife and for the custody of the children. Sweet.

SEPARATISTS. Seceders from the Church of England. They, like Quakers, solemnly affirm, instead of taking the usual oath, before they give evidence.

SEPES. Lat. In old English law. A hedge or inclosure. The inclosure of a trench or canal. Dig. 43, 21, 4.

SEPTENNIAL ACT. In English law. The statute 1 Geo. I. St. 2, c. 38. The act by which a parliament has continuance for seven years, and no longer, unless sooner dissolved; as it always has, in fact, been since the passing of the act. Wharton.

SEPTUAGESIMA. In ecclesiastical law. The third Sunday before Quadragesima Sunday, being about the seventieth day before Easter.

SEPTUM. Lat. In old English law. An inclosure or close. Cowell.

Roman law. An inclosure; an inclosed place where the people voted; otherwise called "ovile."

SEPTUNX. Lat. In Roman law. A division of the as, containing seven uncice, or duodecimal parts; the proportion of seven-twelfths. Tayl. Civil Law, 492.

SEPULCHRE. A grave or tomb. The place of interment of a dead human body. The violation of sepulchres is a misdemeanor at common law.

SEPULTURA. Lat. An offering to the priest for the burial of a dead body.

SEQUAMUR VESTIGIA PATRUM NOSTRORUM. Jenk. Cent. Let us follow the footsteps of our fathers.

SEQUATUR SUB SUO PERICULO. In old English practice. A writ which issued where a sheriff had returned nihil, upon a summoneas ad warrantizandum, and after an alias and pluries had been issued. So called because the tenant lost his lands without any recovery in value, unless upon that writ he brought the vouchee into court. Rosc. Real Act. 268; Cowell.

SEQUELA. L. Lat. In old English law. Suit., process or prosecution. Sequela causce, the process of a cause. Cowell.

SEQUELA CURLE. Suit of court. Cowell.

SEQUELA VILLANORUM. The family retinue and appurtenances to the goods and chattels of villeins, which were at the absolute disposal of the lord. Par. Antiq. 216.

SEQUELS. Small allowances of meal, or manufactured victual, made to the servants at a mill where corn was ground, by tenure, in Scotland. Wharton.

SEQUESTER, v.

Civil Law

To renounce or disclaim, etc. As when a widow came into court and disclaimed having anything to do with her deceased husband's estate, she was said to sequester. The word more commonly signifies the act of taking in execution under a writ of sequestration. Brown.

To deposit a thing which is the subject of a controversy in the hands of a third person, to hold for the contending parties.

To take a thing which is the subject of a controversy out of the possession of the contending parties, and deposit it in the hands of a third person. Calvin.

English Ecclesiastical Practice

To gather and take care of the fruits and profits of a vacant benefice, for the benefit of the next incumbent.

Equity Practice

To take possession of the property of a defendant, and hold it in the custody of the court, until he purges himself of a contempt.

International Law

To confiscate; to appropriate private property to public use; to seize the property of the private citizens of a hostile power, as when a belligerent nation sequesters debts due from its own subjects to the enemy. 1 Kent, Comm. 62.

SEQUESTER, n. Lat. In the civil law. A person with whom two or more contending parties deposited the subject-matter of the controversy.

SEQUESTRARI FACIAS. In English ecclesiastical practice. A process in the nature of a levari facias, commanding the bishop to enter into the rectory and parish church, and to take and sequester the same, and hold them until, of the rents, tithes, and profits thereof, and of the other ecclesiastical goods of a defendant, he have levied the plaintiff's debt. 3 Bl. Comm. 418; 2 Archb. Pr. 1284.

SEQUESTRATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The separating or setting aside of a thing in controversy, from the possession of both parties that contend for it. It is two-fold,—voluntary, done by consent of all parties; and necessary, when a judge orders it. Brown.

SEQUESTRATION.

Contracts

A species of deposit which two or more persons, engaged in litigation about anything, make of the thing in contest with an indifferent person who binds himself to restore it, when the issue is decided, to the party to whom it is adjudged to belong. Civ. Code La. art. 2973.

Equity Practice

A writ authorizing the taking into the custody of the law of the real and personal estate (or rents, issues, and profits) of a defendant who is in contempt, and holding the same until he shall comply. It is sometimes directed to the sheriff, but more commonly to four commissioners nominated by the complainant. 3 Bl. Comm. 444; Ryan v. Kingsbery, 88 Ga. 361, 14 S.E. 596.

English Ecclesiastical Law

The act of the ordinary in disposing of the goods and chattels of one deceased, whose estate no one will meddle with. Cowell. Or, in other words, the taking possession of the property of a deceased person, where there is no one to claim it.

Also, where a benefice becomes vacant, a sequestration is usually granted by the bishop to the church-wardens, who manage all the profits and expenses of the benefice, plow and sow the glebe, receive tithes, and provide for the necessary cure of souls. Sweet.

International Law

The seizure of the property of an individual, and the appropriation of it to the use of the government.

Louisiana

A mandate of the court, ordering the sheriff, in certain cases, to take in his possession, and to keep, a thing of which another person has the possession, until after the decision of a suit, in order that it be delivered to him who shall be adjudged entitled to have the property or possession of that thing. This is what is properly called a "judicial sequestration." Code Prac. La. art. 269; American Nat. Bank v. Childs, 49 La.Ann. 1359, 22 So. 384.

Mayor's Court

In the mayor's court of London, "an attachment of the property of a person in a warehouse or other place belonging to and abandoned by him. It has the same object as the ordinary attachment, viz., to compel the appearance of the defendant to an action," and, in default, to satisfy the plaintiff's debt by appraisement and execution.

SEQUESTRATOR. One to whom a sequestration is made. One appointed or chosen to perform a sequestration, or execute a writ of sequestration.

SEQUESTRO HABENDO. In English ecclesiastical law. A judicial writ for the discharging a sequestration of the profits of a church benefice, granted by the bishop at the sovereign's command, thereby to compel the parson to appear at the suit of another. Upon his appearance, the parson may have this writ for the release of the sequestration. Reg. Jud. 36.

SEQUI DEBET POTENTIA JUSTITIAM NON PRZECEDERE. 2 Inst. 454. Power should follow justice, not precede it.

SERF. In the feudal polity, a class of persons whose social condition was servile, and who were bound to labor and onerous duties at the will of their lords. They differed from slaves only in that they were bound to their native soil, instead of being the absolute property of a master.

SERGEANT. In military law. A non-commissioned officer, of whom there are several in each company of infantry, troop of cavalry, etc. The term is also used in the organization of a municipal police force.

Sergeant at arms. See Serjeant.

Sergeant at law. See Serjeant.

Town sergeant. In several states, an officer having the powers and duties of a chief constable or head of the police department of a town or village.

SERIATELY. In series, or following one after another. In re Flint, 32 C.C.P.A. 1116, 150 F.2d 126, 131.

SERIATIM. Lat. Severally; separately; individually; one by one.

SERIOUS. Important; weighty; momentous, grave, great, as in the phrases "serious bodily harm," "serious personal injury," etc. Ward v. State, 70 Tex.Cr.R. 393, 159 S.W. 272, 282; McKee v. State, 93 Tex.Cr.R. 217, 246 S.W. 1035, 1036.

SERIOUS AND WILFUL MISCONDUCT. In Workmen's Compensation Law. The intentional doing of something with the knowledge that it is likely to result in a serious injury, or with a wanton and reckless disregard of its probable consequences. McAdoo v. Industrial Accident Commission, 40 Cal.App. 570, 181 P. 400, 401.

SERIOUS ILLNESS. In life insurance. An illness that permanently or materially impairs, or is likely to permanently or materially impair, the h"alth of the applicant. Not every illness is serious. An illness may be alarming at the time, or thought to be serious by the one afflicted, and yet not be serious in the sense of that term as used in insurance contracts. An illness that is ternporary in its duration, and entirely passes away, and is not attended, nor likely to be attended, by a permanent or material impairment of the health or constitution, is not a serious illness. It is not sufficient that the illness was thought serious at the time it occurred, or that it might have resulted in permanently impairing the health. Fishbeck v. New York Life Ins. Co., 179 Wis. 369, 192 N.W. 170, 175; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks, Tex.Civ. App., 198 S.W. 616, 622.

SERJEANT. The same word etymologically with "sergeant," but the latter spelling is more commonly employed in the designation of military and police officers, (see Sergeant,) while the former is preferred when the term is used to describe certain grades of legal practitioners and certain officers of legislative bodies. See infra.

Common Serjeant

A judicial officer attached to the corporation of the city of London, who assists the recorder in disposing of the criminal business at the Old Bailey sessions, or central criminal court. Brown.

Serjeant at Arms

An executive officer appointed by, and attending on, a legislative body, whose principal duties are to execute its warrants, preserve order, and arrest offenders.

Serjeant at Law

A barrister of the common-law courts of high standing, and of much the same rank as a doctor of law is in the ecclesiastical courts. These serjeants seem to have derived their title from the old knights templar, (among whom there existed a peculiar class under the denomination of "frêres sergens," or "fratres servientes,") and to have continued as a separate fraternity from a very early period in the history of the legal profession. The barristers who first assumed the old monastic title were those who practiced in the court of common pleas, and until a recent period (the 25th of April, 1834, 9 & 10 Viet. c. 54) the serjeants at law always had the exclusive privilege of practice in that court. Every judge of a common-law court, previous to his elevation to the bench, used to be created a serjeant at law; but since the judicature act this is no longer necessary. Brown.

Serjeant of the Mace

In English law. An officer who attends the lord mayor of London, and the chief magistrates of other corporate towns. Holthouse.

Serjeants' Inn

The inn to which the serjeants at law belonged, near Chancery lane; formerly called "Faryndon Inn."

SERJEANTIA IDEM EST QUOD SERVITIUM. Co.Litt. 105. Serjeanty is the same as service.

SERJEANTY. A species of tenure by knight service, which was due to the king only, and was distinguished into grand and petit serjeanty. The tenant holding by grand serjeanty was bound, instead of attending the king generally in his wars, to do some honorary service to the king in person, as to carry his banner or sword, or to be his butler, champion, or other officer at his coronation. Petit serjeanty differed from grand serjeanty, in that the service rendered to the king was not of a personal nature, but consisted in rendering him annually some small implement of war, as a bow, sword, arrow, lance, or the like. Cowell; Brown.

SERMENT. In old English law. Oath; an oath.

SERMO INDEX ANIMI. 5 Coke, 118. Speech is an index of the mind.

SERMO RELATUS AD PERSONAM INTELLIGI DEBET DE CONDITIONE PERSONZE. Language which is referred to a person ought to be understood of the condition of the person. 4 Coke, 16.

SERMONES SEMPER ACCIPIENDI SUNT SECUNDUM SUBJECTAM MATERIAM, ET CONDITIONEM PERSONARUM. 4 Coke, 14. Language is always to be understood according to its subject-matter, and the condition of the persons.

SERPENT—VENOM REACTION. A test for insanity by means of the breaking up of the red corpuscles of the blood of the suspected person on the injection of the venom of cobras or other serpents; recently employed in judicial proceedings in some European countries and in Japan.

SERRATED. Notched on the edge; cut in notches like the teeth of a saw. This was anciently the method of trimming the top or edge of a deed of indenture. See Indent, v.

SERVAGE. In feudal law, where a tenant, besides payment of a certain rent, found one or more workmen for his lord's service. Tomlins.

SERVANDA EST CONSUETUDO LOCI UBI CAUSA AGITUR. The custom of the place where the action is brought is to be observed. Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190, 219, 8 Am. Dec. 478.

SERVANT. One employed to perform service in master's affairs, whose physical conduct in performance of the service is controlled or is subject to right to control by the master. Brenner v. Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 236 Mo.App. 524, 158 S.W.2d 171, 174, 175; Reiling v. Missouri Ins. Co., 236 Mo.App. 164, 153 S.W.2d 79. A person in the employ of another and subject to his control as to what work shall be done and the means by which it shall be accomplished. Pantell v. Shriver Allison Co., 61 Ohio App. 119, 22 N.E.2d 497, 499. One who is employed to render personal service to another otherwise than in the pursuit of an independent calling, and who, in such service, remains entirely under control and direction of employer. Henley v. State, 59 Ga.App. 595, 2 S.E.2d 139, 142. A person of whatever rank or position in employ and subject to direction or control of another in any department of labor or business. Saums v. Parfet, 270 Mich. 165, 258 N.W. 235, 237. For "Family," see that title.

The term is often given special meanings by statutes and like other words is greatly influenced by context in wills and other documents. Hand v. Cole, 88 Tenn. 400, 12 S.W. 922, 7 L.R.A. 96; In re Thompson's Estate, 126 Misc. Rep. 91, 213 N.Y. S. 426, 429.

SERVE. In Scotch practice. To render a verdict or decision in favor of a person claiming to be an heir; to declare the fact of his heirship judicially. A jury are said to serve a claimant heir, when they find him to be heir, upon the evidence submitted to them. Bell.

As to serving papers, etc., see Service of Process.

SERVI. Lat. Slaves.

Old English law. Bondmen; servile tenants. Cowell.

Old European law. Persons over whom their masters had absolute dominion.

SERVI REDEMPTIONE. Criminal slaves in the time of Henry L 1 Kemble, Sax. 197, (1849).

SERVICE. Has a variety of meanings, dependent upon the context or the sense in which used. Central Power & Light Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W.2d 920, 925. For "Family," see that title.

Contracts

The being employed to serve another; duty or labor to be rendered by one person to another, the former being bound to submit his will to the direction and control of the latter. Cameron v. State Theater Co., 256 Mass. 466, 152 N.E. 880, 881; Ludwig v. Pacific Fire Ins. Co. of New York, 204 N.Y.S. 465, 466, 123 Misc. 189. The act of serving; the labor performed or the duties required. State ex rel. King v. Board of Trustees of Firemen's Pension Fund of Kansas City, 192 Mo.App. 583, 184 S.W. 929, 930. Occupation, condition, or status of a servant, etc. Performance of labor for benefit of another, or at another's command; attendance of an inferior, hired helper, slave, eth. Claxton v. Johnson County, 194 Ga. 43, 20 S.E.2d 606, 610.

"Service" and "employment" generally imply that the employer, or person to whom the service is due, both selects and compensates the employee, or person rendering the service. Ledvinka v. Home Ins. Co. of New York, 139 Md. 434, 115 A. 596, 597, 19 A.L.R. 167.

The term is used also for employment in one of the offices, departments, or agencies of the government; as in the phrases "civil service," "public service," "military service," etc. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1 in Yuma County, 63 Colo. 159, 165 P. 260, 263; Miller v. Illinois Bankers' Life Ass'n, 138 Ark. 442, 212 S.W. 310, 311, 7 A.L.R. 378.

Domestic Relations

The "services" of a wife, for the loss of which, occasioned by an injury to the wife, the husband may recover in an action against the tort-feasor, include whatever of aid, assistance, comfort, and society the wife would be expected to render to or bestow upon her husband in the circumstances in which they were situated. Thompson v. Aultman & Taylor Mach. Co., 96 Kan. 259, 150 P. 587, and in all the relations of domestic life, Little Rock Gas & Fuel Co. v. Coppedge, 116 Ark. 334, 172 S.W. 885, 889.

Feudal Law

The consideration which the feudal tenants were bound to render to the lord in recompense for the lands they held of him. The services, in respect of their quality, were either free or base services, and, in respect of their quantity and the time of exacting them, were either certain or uncertain. 2 Bl. Comm. 60.

Practice

The exhibition or delivery of a writ, notice, injunction, etc., by an authorized person, to a person who is thereby officially notified of some action or proceeding in which he is concerned, and is thereby advised or warned of some action or step which he is commanded to take or to forbear. U. S. v. McMahon, 17 S.Ct. 28, 164 U.S. 81, 41 L.Ed. 357; In re Tengwall Co., C.C.A.I11., 201 F. 82, 84; Martin v. Hawkins, Tex.Civ.App., 238 S.W. 991.

General

Civil service. See that title.

Constructive service of process. Any form of service other than actual personal service; notification of an action or of some proceeding therein, given to a person affected by sending it to him in the mails or causing it to be published in a newspaper.

Personal service. Of a writ or notice is made by delivering it to the person named, in person, Georgia Casualty Co. v. McClure, Tex.Civ.App., 239 S.W. 644, 647; or handing him a copy and informing him of the nature and terms of the original. Leaving a copy at his place of abode is not personal service. Moyer v. Cook, 12 Wis. 336. But where a person named in a summons is of unsound mind, service upon the guardian of such person may be deemed "personal service." Pattison v. Grand Trust & Savings Co., 195 Ind. 313, 144 N.E. 26, 29. Some courts hold to the view that the mailing of a notice is not personal service. State ex rel. Schuhart, 296 Mo. 156, 246 S.W. 196, 200, but others, interpreting the term as it is found in statutes,. take a contrary view, United States ex rel. Proctor Mfg. Co. v. Illinois Surety Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 228 F. 304, 305; Hood v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, Tex.Civ.App., 260 S.W. 243, 245 (registered mail) ; Kramm v. Stockton Electric R. Co., 22 Cal.App. 737, 136 P. 523, 527 (express).

Public utilities. The furnishing of water, heat, light and power, etc. by them. Claxton v. Johnson County, 194 Ga. 43, 20 S.E.2d 606, 610.

Salvage service. See Salvage.

Secular service. Worldly employment or service, as contrasted with spiritual or ecclesiastical.

Service by publication. Service of a summons or other process upon an absent or nonresident defendant, by publishing the same as an advertisement in a designated newspaper, with such other efforts to give him actual notice as the particular statute may prescribe.

Service of an heir. An old form of Scotch law, fixing the right and character of an heir to the estate of his ancestor. Bell.

Service of process. The service of writs, summonses, rules, etc., signifies the delivering to or leaving them with the party to whom or with whom they ought to be delivered or left; and, when they are so delivered, they are then said to have been served. Usually a copy only is served and the original is shown. Brown.

Special service. In Scotch law. That form of service by which the heir is served to the ancestor who was feudally vested in the lands. Bell.

Substituted service. Any form of service of process other than personal service, such as service by mail or by publication in a newspaper; service of a writ or notice on some person other than the one directly concerned, for example, his attorney of record, who has authority to represent him or to accept service for him.

SERVICE ESTABLISHMENT. Within Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. An establishment which has ordinary characteristics of retail establishments except that services instead of goods are sold. An establishment the principal activity of which is to furnish service to the consuming public, and includes barber shops, beauty parlors, shoe shining parlors, clothes pressing clubs, laundries and automobile repair shops. Fleming v. A. B. Kirschbaum Co., C.C.A.Pa., 124 F.2d 567, 572.

SERVITUDE.

The Condition of being Bound to Service

The state of a person who is subjected, voluntarily or otherwise, to another person as his servant. Shilling v. State, 143 Miss. 709, 109 So. 737, 739.

A Charge or Burden

A charge or burden resting upon one estate for the benefit or advantage of another; a species of incorporeal right derived from the civil law (see Servitus) and closely corresponding to the "easement" of the common-law, except that "servitude" rather has relation to the burden or the estate burdened, while "easement" refers to the benefit or advantage or the estate to which it accrues. Rowe v. Nally, 81 Md. 367, 32 A. 198; Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 P. 308.

The term "servitude," in its original and popular sense, signifies the duty of service, or rather the condition of one who is liable to the performance of services. The word, however, in its legal sense, is applied figuratively to things. When the freedom of ownership in land is fettered or restricted, by reason of some person, other than the owner thereof, having some right therein, the land is said to "serve" such person. The restricted condition of the ownership or the right which forms the subject-matter of the restriction is termed a "servitude," and the land so burdened with another's right is termed a "servient tenement," while the land belonging to the person enjoying the right is called the "dominant tenement." The word "servitude" may be said to have both a positive and a negative signification; in the former sense denoting the restrictive right belonging to the entitled party; in the latter, the restrictive duty entailed upon the proprietor or possessor of the servient land. Brown.

Classification

All servitudes which affect lands may be divided into two kinds,—personal and real. Personal servitudes are those attached to the person for whose benefit they are established, and terminate with his life. This kind of servitude is of three sorts,—usufruct, use, and habitation. Real servitudes, which are also called "predial" or "landed" servitudes, are those which the owner of an estate enjoys on a neighboring estate for the benefit of his own estate. They are called "predial" or "landed" servitudes because, being established for the benefit of an estate, they are rather due to the estate than to the owner personally. Frost-Johnson Lumber Co. v. Sailing's Heirs, 150 La. 756, 91 So. 207, 245; Tide-Water Pipe Co.. v. Bell, 280 Pa. 104, 124 A. 351, 354, 40 A.L.R.‘ 1516.

Real servitudes are divided, in the civil law, into rural and urban servitudes. Rural servitudes are such as are established for the benefit of a landed estate; such, for example, as a right of way over the servient tenement, or of access to a spring, a coal-mine, a sand-pit, or a wood that is upon it. Urban servitudes are such as are established for the benefit of one building over another. (But the buildings need not be in the city, as the name would apparently imply.) They are such as the right of support, or of view, or of drip or sewer, or the like. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 316, et seq.

Servitudes are also classed as positive and negative. A positive servitude is one which obliges the owner of the servient estate to permit or suffer something to be done on his property by another. A negative servitude is one which does not bind the servient proprietor to permit something to be done upon his property by another, but merely restrains him from making a certain use of his property which would impair the easement enjoyed by the dominant tenement. Rowe v. Nally, 81 Md. 367, 32 A. 198.

Penal servitude. In English criminal law, a punishment which consists in keeping the offender in confinement and compelling him to labor.

Involuntary servitude. See Involuntary.

SERVITUS. Lat. In the civil law. Slavery; bondage; the state of service. An institution of SERVITUS EST CONSTITUTIO JURE GENTIUM QUA QUIS DOMINO ALIENO CONTRA NATURAM SUBJICITUR. Slavery is an institution by the law of nations, by which a man is subjected to the dominion of another, contrary to nature. Inst. 1, 3, 2; Co. Litt. 116.

SERVITUS FUMI IMMITTENDI. The servitude or right of leading off smoke or vapor through the chimney or over the ground of one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 5, 8, 5-7.

SERVITUS ITINERIS. The servitude or privilege of walking, riding, and being carried over another's ground. Inst. 2, 3, pr. A species of right of way.

SERVITUS LUMINUM. The servitude of lights; the right of making or having windows or other openings in a wall belonging to another, or in a common wall, in order to obtain light for one's building. Dig. 8, 2, 4.

SERVITUS NE LUMINIBUS OFFICIATUR. A servitude not to hinder lights; the right of having one's lights or windows unobstructed or darkened by a neighbor's building, etc. Inst. 2, 3, 4.

SERVITUS NE PROSPECTUS OFFENDATUR. A servitude not to obstruct one's prospect, i. e., not to intercept the view from one's house. Dig. 8, 2, 15.

SERVITUS ONERIS FERENDL The servitude of bearing weight; the right to let one's building rest upon the building, wall, or pillars of one's neighbor. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317.

SERVITUS PASCENDI. The servitude of pasturing; the right of pasturing one's cattle on another's ground; otherwise called "jus pascendi." Inst. 2, 3, 2.

SERVITUS PECORIS AD AQUAM ADPULSAM. A right of driving one's cattle on a neighbor's land to water.

SERVITUS PILED!! RUSTIC!. The servitude of a rural or country estate; a rural servitude. Inst. 2, 3, pr., and 3.

SERVITUS PILED!! URBAN!. The servitude of an urban or city estate; an urban servitude. Inst. 2, 3, 1.

SERVITUS PR1EDIORUM. A prandial servitude; a service, burden, or charge upon one estate for the benefit of another. Inst. 2, 3, 3.

SERVITUS PROJICIENDI. The servitude of projecting; the right of building a projection from one's house in the open space belonging to one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS PROSPECTUS. A right of prospect. This may be either to give one a free prospect over his neighbor's land or to prevent a neighbor from having a prospect over one's own land. Dig. 8, 2, 15; Domat, 1, 1, 6.

SERVITUS STILLICIDII. The right of drip; the right of having the water drip from the eaves of one's house upon the house or ground of one's neighbor. Inst. 2, 3, 1, 4; Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS TIGNI IMMITTENDI. The servitude of letting in a beam; the right of inserting beams in a neighbor's wall. Inst. 2, 3, 1, 4; Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS VIZE. The servitude or right of way; the right of walking, riding, and driving over another's land. Inst. 2, 3, pr.

SERVUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. A slave; a bondman. Inst. 1, 3, pr.; Bract. fol. 4b.

Servos a manu. (Lat. Literally, a servant by hand, or with the hand.) A scribe, secretary. Harper's Lat. Dict., citing Suet. Caes. 74 (i. e., the biography of Julius Caesar by Suetonius Tranquillus). This phrase was also written a manu servos, and eventually gave rise to the word amanuensis, derived from a manu, plus ensis, and taking the place of a manu servos. Cent. Dict. s. v. "amanuensis."

SESS. In English law. A tax, rate, or assessment.

SESSIO. Lat. In old English law. A sitting; a session. Sessio parliamenti, the sitting of parliament. Cowell.

SESSION. The sitting of a court, Legislature, council, commission, etc., for the transaction of its proper business. Hence, the period of time, within any one day, during which such body is assembled in form, and engaged in the transaction of business, or, in a more extended sense, the whole space of time from its first assembling to its prorogation or adjournment sine die. Rails v. Wyand, 40 Okl. 323, 138 P. 158, 162.

Session of court is time during term in which court sits for transaction of business, after judge arrives and opens court. Carpenter v. City of Birmingham, 221 Ala. 368, 128 So. 899, 900.

Synonyms

Strictly speaking, the word "session," as applied to a court of justice, is not synonymous with the word "term." The "session" of a court is the time during which it actually sits for the transaction of judicial business, and hence terminates each day with the rising of the court. A "term" of court is the period fixed by law, usually embracing many days or weeks, during which it shall be open for the transaction of judicial business and during which it may hold sessions from day to day. But this distinction is not always observed, many authorities using the two words interchangeably. Muse v. Harris, 122 Okl. 250, 254 P. 72, 73; State v. City of Victoria, 97 Kan. 638, 156 P. 705, 708; Nation v. Savely, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 35.

General

Court of session. The supreme civil court of Scotland, instituted A. D. 1532, consisting of thirteen (formerly fifteen) judges, viz., the lord president, the lord justice clerk, and eleven ordinary lords..

General sessions. A court of record, in England, held by two or more justices of the peace, for the execution of the authority given them by the commission of the peace and certain statutes. General sessions held at certain times in the four quarters of the year pursuant to St. 2 Hen. V. are properly called "quarter sessions," (q. v.,) but intermediate general sessions may also be held. Sweet.

Great session of Wales. A court which was abolished by St. 1 Wm. IV. c. 70. The proceedings now issue out of the courts at Westminster, and two of the judges of the superior courts hold the circuits in Wales and Cheshire, as in other English counties. Wharton.

Joint session. In parliamentary practice, a meeting together and commingling of the two houses of a legislative body, sitting and acting together as one body, instead of separately in their respective houses. Snow v. Hudson, 56 Kan. 378, 43 P. 262.

Petty sessions. In English law. A special or petty session is sometimes kept in corporations and counties at large by a few justices, for dispatching smaller business in the neighborhood between the times of the general sessions; as for licensing alehouses, passing the accounts of the parish officers, etc. Brown.

Quarter sessions. See that title.

Regular session. An ordinary, general, or stated session, (as of a legislative body,) as distinguished from a special or extra session.

Session laws. The name commonly given to the body of laws enacted by a state Legislature at one of its annual or biennial sessions. So called to distinguish them from the "compiled laws" or "revised statutes" of the state.

Session of the peace. In English law. A sitting of justices of the peace for the exercise of their powers. There are four kinds,—petty, special, quarter, and general sessions.

Sessional orders. Certain resolutions which are agreed to by both houses at the commencement of every session of the English parliament, and have relation to the business and convenience thereof; but they are not intended to continue in force beyond the session in which they are adopted. They are principally of use as directing the order of business. Brown.

Sessions. A sitting of justices in court upon their commission, or by virtue of their appointment, and most commonly for the trial of criminal cases. The title of several courts in England and the United States, chiefly those of criminal jurisdiction. Burrill.

Special sessions. In English law. A meeting of two or more justices of the peace held for a special purpose, (such as the licensing of alehouses,) either as required by statute or when specially convoked, which can only be convened after notice to all the other magistrates of the division, to give them an opportunity of attending. Stone, J. Pr. 52, 55.

SET. This word appears to be nearly synonymous with "lease." A lease of mines is frequently termed a "mining set." Brown.

SET ASIDE. A judgment, decree, award, or any proceedings is to cancel, annul, or revoke them at the instance of a party unjustly or irregularly affected by them. Brandt v. Brandt, 40 Or. 477, 67 P. 508.

SET DOWN. A cause for trial or hearing at a given term is to enter its title in the calendar, list, or docket of causes which are to be brought on at that term.

SET OF EXCHANGE. In mercantile law. Foreign bills are usually drawn in duplicate or triplicate, the several parts being called respectively "first of exchange," "second of exchange," etc., and these parts together constitute a "set of exchange." Any one of them being paid, the others become void.

SET OUT. In pleading. To recite or narrate facts or circumstances; to allege or aver; to describe or to incorporate; as, to set out a deed or contract. First Nc,t.:. Bank v. Engelbercht, 58 Neb. 639, 79 N.W. 556; Powder Valley State Bank v. Hudelson, 74 Or. 191, 144 P. 494, 497.

SET UP. To bring forward or allege, as something relied upon or deemed sufficient; to propose or interpose, by way of defense, explanation, or justification; as, to set up the statute of limitations, i. e., offer and rely upon it as a defense to a claim.

SETI. As used in mining laws, lease. Brown.

SET—OFF. A counter demand which defendant holds against plaintiff, arising out of a transaction extrinsic of plaintiff's cause of action. Delco Light Co. v. John Le Roy Hutchinson Properties, 128 So. 831, 99 Fla. 410. Counter-demand must be liquidated or capable of liquidation and grow out of a contract or judgment. Marks V. Spitz, D.C. Mass., 4 F.R.D. 348, 350. A money demand independent of and unconnected with plaintiff's cause of action. Otto v. Lincoln Say. Bank of Brooklyn, 51 N.Y.S.2d 561, 563, 268 App.Div. 400. Only a counter demand upon which defendant at commencement of action might have maintained independent suit. Armstrong v. Marr, 120 Neb. 182, 231 N.W. 758. It generally admits plaintiff's cause of action. Cook v. Soden, 12 N.J.Misc. 337, 171 A. 558, 559.

"Set-off", both at law and in equity, is that right which exists between two parties, each of whom under an independent contract owes an ascertained amount to the other, to set off his respective debt by way of mutual deduction, so that in any action brought for the larger debt the residue only, after such deduction, shall be recovered. John Wills, Inc., v. Citizens Nat. Bank of Netcong, 125 N.J.L. 546, 16 A.2d 804, 806.

A set-off was unknown to the common law; according to which mutual debts were distinct, and inextinguishable except by actual payment, release or agreement. Scarano v. Scarano, 132 N.J.Eq. 362, 28 A.2d 425, 429, 430. A defendant who had a demand against plaintiff was compelled to bring a separate suit or resort to an equity court to have his claim set off. The English statute 2 Geo. II, c. 22, which has been generally adopted in the United States, with some modifications, in cases of mutual debts, however, allowed the defendant to set his debt against the other, either by pleading it in bar, or giving it in evidence, where proper notice had been given of such intention, under the general issue. The statute being made for the benefit of defendant, is not compulsory. The defendant, may waive his right, and bring a cross action against plaintiff. Himes v. Barnitz, 8 Watts, Pa., 39; 2 Camp. 594; Hinckly v. Walters, 9 Watts, Pa., 179; Branham v. Johnson, 62 Md. 259.

Independent of statute the right of set-off is of equitable origin and hence power to allow set-offs is inherent in equity courts and courts of equity sometimes allow set-offs where, for some technical reason, it could not be allowed at law under statute. Colton v. Dovers' Perpetual Building and Loan Ass'n, 90 Md. 85, 45 A. 23, 26, 46 L.R.A. 388, 78 Am.St. Rep. 431; Scarano v. Scarano, 132 N.J.Eq. 362, 28 A.2d 425, 429, 430.

It 'differs from counterclaim, in that a "counterclaim" arises out of the same transaction described in the complaint, while a "set-off" is independent thereof. Savings Bank of New London v. Santaniello, 130 Conn. 206, 33 A.2d 126, 128.

For the distinction between set-off and recoupment, see Recoupment.

"Set-off" differs from a "lien," inasmuch as the former belongs exclusively to the remedy, and is merely a right to insist, if the party think proper to do so, when sued by his creditor on a counter-demand, which can only be enforced through the medium of judicial proceedings; while the latter is, in effect, a substitute for a suit. 2 Op.Attys. Gen. 677.

SETTER. In Scotch law. The granter of a tack or lease. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

SETTLE. A word of equivocal meaning; meaning different things in different connections, and the particular sense in which it is used may be explained by the context or the surrounding circumstances. Accordingly, the term may be employed as meaning to agree, to approve, to arrange, to ascertain, to liquidate, to come to or reach an agreement, to determine, to establish, to fix, to free from uncertainty, to place, or to regulate. Edwards v. Edwards, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W. 2d 657, 661; Kocher v. Ricketts, 71 Ohio App. 8, 47 N.E.2d 657, 659.

Parties are said to settle an account when they go over its items and ascertain and agree upon the balance due from one to the other. And, when the party indebted pays such balance, he is also said to settle it. M. Zimmerman Co. v. Goldberg, 69 Pa.Super.Ct. 254, 255; State Bank of Stratford v. Young, 159 Iowa, 375, 140 N.W. 376, 380.

Settle a bill of exceptions. To approve it. Kocher v. Ricketts, 71 Ohio App. 8, 47 N.E.2d 657, 659.

When the bill of exceptions prepared for an appeal is not accepted as correct by the respondent, it is settled (i. e., adjusted and finally made conformable to the truth) by being taken before the judge who presided at the trial, and by him put into a form agreeing with his minutes and his recollection. Green v. Commonwealth, 181 Ky. 253, 204 S.W. 82, 83.

Settle a document. To make it right in form and in substance. Documents of difficulty or complexity, such as mining leases, settlements by will or deed, partnership agreements, etc., are generally settled by counsel. Sweet.

Settle property. To limit it, or the income of it, to several persons in succession, so that the person for the time being in the possession or enjoyment of it has no power to deprive the others of their right of future enjoyment. Sweet.

Settle up. A term, colloquial rather than legal, which is applied to the final collection, adjustment, and distribution of the estate of a decedent, a bankrupt, or an insolvent corporation. It includes the processes of collecting the property, paying debts and charges, and turning over the balance to those entitled to receive it.

Settled estate. See Estate.

Settled insanity. Habitual insanity. Community Loan & Investment Corporation v. Bowden, 64 Ga.App. 175, 12 S.E.2d 421, 423.

Settling day. The day on which transactions for the "account" are made up on the English stock-exchange. In consols they are monthly; in other investments, twice in the month.

Settling interrogatories. The determination by the court of objections to interrogatories and cross-interrogatories prepared to be used in taking a deposition.

Settling issues. In English practice. Arranging or determining the form of the issues in a cause. Where, in any action, it appears to the judge that the statement of claim or defense or reply does not sufficiently disclose the issues of fact between the parties, he may direct the parties to prepare issues; and such issues shall, if the parties differ, be settled by the judge. Judicature Act 1875, schedule, art. 19.

SETTLEMENT. Act or process of adjusting or determining; an adjusting; an adjustment between persons concerning their dealings or difficulties; an agreement by which parties having disputed matters between them reach or ascertain what is coming from one to the other; arrangement of difficulties; composure of doubts or differences; determination by agreement; and liquidation. Sowers v. Robertson, 144 Kan. 273, 58 P.2d 1105, 1107. Payment or satisfaction. Ledbetter v. Hall, 191 Ark. 791, 87 S.W.2d 996, 999. In legal parlance, implies meeting of minds of parties to transaction or controversy. Ezmirlian v. Otto, 139 Cal.App. 486, 34 P.2d 774, 778.

See, also, Settle.

Contracts

Adjustment or liquidation of mutual accounts; the act by which parties who have been dealing together arrange their accounts and strike a balance. Also full and final payment or discharge of an account. Bauer v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 51 N.D. 1, 198 N.W. 546, 550; Michael v. Donohoe, 86 W.Va. 34, 102 S.E. 803, 805.

Conveyancing

A disposition of property by deed, usually through the medium of a trustee, by which its enjoyment is limited to several persons in succession, as a wife, children, or other relatives.

Poor Laws

A right acquired by a person, by continued residence for a given length of time in a town or district, to claim aid or relief under the poor-laws in case of his becoming a pauper. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 560, certiorari denied 38 S.Ct. 427, 247 U.S. 508, 62 L. Ed. 1241; Inhabitants of Trenton v. City of Brewer, 134 Me. 295, 186 A. 612, 614.

Settlement once acquired is not necessarily lost or defeated by a voluntary absence for the purpose of obtaining work. State ex rel. Heydenreich v. Lyons, 374 Ill. 557, 30 N.E.2d 46, 51.

Probate Practice

The settlement of an estate consists in its administration by the executor or administrator carried so far that all debts and legacies have been paid and the individual shares of distributees in the corpus of the estate, or the residuary portion, as the case may be, definitely ascertained and determined, and accounts filed and passed, so that nothing remains but to make final distribution. Appeal of Mathews, 72 Conn. 555, 45 A. 170; Pearce v. Pearce, 199 Ala. 491, 74 So. 952, 957.

Public Transactions and Accounts

Administrative determination of the amount due. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., 36 S.Ct. 321, 323, 240 U.S. 214, 60 L.Ed. 609; Illinois Surety Co. v. United States, C.C.A.S.C., 215 F. 334, 336; United States, for Use of R. Haas Electric & Mfg. Co., v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., C.C.A.7, 254 F. 958, 959; U. S., to Use of Crellin, v. George F. Pawling & Co., C.C.A.3, 297 F. 65, 68.

General

Act of settlement. The statute 12 & 13 Wm. III. c. 2, by which the crown of England was limited to the house of Hanover, and some new provisions were added at the same time for the better securing the religion, laws, and liberties.

Deed of settlement. A deed made for the purpose of settling property, i. e., arranging the mode and extent of the enjoyment thereof. The party who settles property is called the "settlor;" and usually his wife and children or his creditors or his near relations are the beneficiaries taking interests under the settlement. Brown.

Equity of settlement. The equitable right of a wife, when her husband sues in equity for the reduction of her equitable estate to his own possession, to have the whole or a portion of such estate settled upon herself and her children. Also a similar right now recognized by the equity courts as directly to be asserted against the husband. Also called the "wife's equity."

Family settlement. See Family Settlement.

Final settlement. This term, as applied to the administration of an estate, is usually understood to have reference to the order of court approving the account which closes the business of the estate, and which finally discharges the executor or administrator from the duties of his trust. Roberts v. Spencer, 112 Ind. 85, 13 N.E. 129.

Strict settlement. This phrase was formerly used to denote a settlement whereby land was limited to a parent for life, and after his death to his first and other sons or children in tail, with trustees interposed to preserve contingent remainders. 1 Steph. Comm. 332, 333. In England, a settlement to the use of the settlor for life, and after his death to the use that his widow may receive a rent charge (or jointure), subject to these life interests, to trustees for a long term of years in trust to raise by mortgage on the term a sum of money for the portions for his younger children, and subject thereto to the use of his first and other sons successively and the heirs male of their bodies, with the ultimate remainder in default of issue to the settlor in fee simple.

Voluntary settlement. A settlement of property upon a wife or other beneficiary, made gratuitously or without valuable consideration.

SETTLER. A person who, for the purpose of acquiring a pre-emption right, has gone upon the land in question, and is actually resident there. Hume v. Gracy, 86 Tex. 671, 27 S.W. 584; McIntyre v. Sherwood, 82 Cal. 139, 22 P. 937.

SETTLOR. The grantor or donor in a deed of settlement.

Also one who creates trust. Ulmer v. Fulton, 129 Ohio St. 323, 195 N.E. 557, 564, 97 A.L.R. 1170. One who furnishes the consideration for the creation of a trust, though in form the trust is created by another. Lehman v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.2, 109 F.2d 99, 100.

SEVER. To separate, as one from another; to cut off from something; to divide; to part in any way, especially by violence, as by cutting, rending, etc.; as, to sever the head from the body; to cut or break open or apart; to divide into parts; to cut through; to disjoin; as, to sever the arm or leg. Muse v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 193 La. 605, 192 So. 72, 74, 125 A.L.R. 1075. In practice. To insist upon a plea distinct from that of other co-defendants.

SEVERABLE. Admitting of severance or separation, capable of being divided; separable; capable of being severed from other things to which it was joined, and yet maintaining a complete and independent existence. State ex rel. Dolman v. Dickey, 288 Mo. 92, 231 S.W. 582, 585; Lawson v. Muse, 180 Mo.App. 35, 165 S.W. 396, 397.

SEVERABLE CONTRACT. See Contract.

SEVERABLE STATUTE. A statute if after an invalid portion of it has been stricken out, that which remains is self-sustaining and capable of separate enforcement without regard to the stricken portion, in which case that which remains should be sustained. Rutenberg v. City of Philadelphia, 329 Pa. 26, 196 A. 73, 79.

SEVERAL. More than two, often used to designate a number greater than one. First Nat. Trust & Savings Bank of San Diego v. Industrial Accident Commission, 2 P.2d 347, 351, 213 Cal. 322, 78 A.L.R. 1324. Each particular, or a small number, singly taken. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Marshall County, 161 Tenn. 236, 30 S.W.2d 268. Separate; individual; independent; severable. In this sense the word is distinguished from "joint." Also exclusive; individual; appropriated. In this sense it is opposed to "common." Townsend v. Roof, 210 Mo.App. 293, 237 S.W. 189, 190; L. L. Satler Lumber Co. v. Exler, 239 Pa. 135, 86 A. 793, 798.

As to several "Counts," "Covenant," "Demise," "Fishery," "Tail," and "Tenancy," see those titles.

SEVERAL ACTIONS. Where a separate and distinct action is brought against each of two or more persons who are all liable to the plaintiff in respect to the same subject-matter, the actions are said to be "several." If all the persons are joined as defendants in one and the same action, it is called a "joint" action.

SEVERAL INHERITANCE. An inheritance conveyed so as to descend to two persons severally, by moieties, etc.

SEVERAL ISSUES. This occurs where there is more than one issue involved in a case. 3 Steph. Comm. 560.

SEVERALLY. Distinctly, separately, apart from others. State Nat. Bk. v. Reilly, 124 Ill. 471, 14 N. E. 657. When applied to a number of persons the expression severally liable usually implies that each one is liable alone. Pruyn v. Black, 21 N.Y. 301.

SEVERALTY. A state of separation. An estate in severalty is one that is held by a person in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him, in point of interest, during his estate therein. 2 Bl.Comm. 179.

The term "severalty" is especially applied, in England, to the case of adjoining meadows undivided from each other, but belonging, either permanently or in what are called "shifting severalties," to separate owners, and held in severalty until the crops have been carried, when the whole is thrown open as pasture for the cattle of all the owners, and in some cases for the cattle of other persons as well; each owner is called a "severalty owner," and his rights of pasture are called "severalty rights," as opposed to the rights of persons not owners. Cooke, -Lncl.Acts, 47, 163n.

SEVERALTY, ESTATE IN. An estate which is held by the tenant in his own right only, without any other being joined or connected with him in point of interest during the continuance of his estate. 2 Bl.Comm. 179.

SEVERANCE. Act of severing, or state of being severed; partition; separation. Muse v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 193 La. 605, 192 So. 72, 74, 125 A.L.R. 1075.

Pleading

Separation; division. The separation by defendants in their pleas; the adoption, by several defendants, of separate pleas, instead of joining in the same plea. Steph.Pl. 257.

Property

The destruction of any one of the unities of a joint tenancy. It is so called because the estate is no longer a joint tenancy, but is severed. Cutting of the crops, such as corn, grass, etc., or the separating of anything from the realty. Brown.

SEVERANCE DAMAGE. Any element of value arising out of relation of condemned portion to tract of which it was a part. It is to be included in owner's compensation. U. S. v. Miller, 63 S. Ct. 276, 281, 317 U.S. 369, 87 L.Ed. 336, 147 A.L.R. 55.

SEVERE. Sharp, grave, distressing, violent, extreme, torture, rigorous, difficult to be endured. Traders & General Ins. Co. v. Crouch, Tex.Civ. App., 113 S.W.2d 650, 652.

SEVERE ILLNESS. Within life policy. An illness as has, or ordinarily does have, a permanent, detrimental effect upon the physical system. Boos v. Life Ins. Co., 64 N.Y. 236; Pickens v. Security Ben. Ass'n, 231 P. 1016, 1019, 117 Kan. 475, 40 A.L.R. 654.

SEWAGE. Refuse and foul matter, solid or liquid, carried off by sewer. Borough of Wilkinsburg v. School Dist. of Borough of Wilkinsburg, 298 Pa. 193, 148 A. 77, 80.

SEWAGE SYSTEM. A system of sewers for the drainage of foul waters of a community. Pioneer Real Estate Co. v. City of Portland, 247 P. 319, 321, 119 Or. 1,

SEWARD, or SEAWARD. One who guards the sea-coast; custos

SEWER. A fresh-water trench or little river, encompassed with banks on both sides, to drain off surplus water into the sea. Cowell. Properly, a trench artificially made for the purpose of carrying water into the sea, (or a river or pond.) Crabb, Real Prop. § 113; Bennett v. New Bedford, 110 Mass. 433.

In its modern and more usual sense, an artificial (usually under-ground or covered) channel used for the drainage of two or more separate buildings. State Board of Health v. Jersey City, 55 N.J.Eq. 116, 35 A. 835; Aldrich v. Paine, 106 Iowa 461, 76 N.W. 812.

"Sewers" differ from "drains" only in that the former are in cities, and generally covered over, while the latter are in rural communities, and open. Pioneer Real Estate Co. v. City of Portland, 119 Or. 1, 247 P. 319, 321. See, also, Barton v. Drainage Dist. No. 30, 174 Ark. 173, 294 S. W. 418, 419.

Commissioners of Sewers

In English law. The court of commissioners of sewers is a temporary tribunal erected by virtue of a commission under the great seal. Its jurisdiction is to overlook the repairs of sea-banks and sea-walls, and the cleansing of public rivers, streams, ditches, and other conduits whereby any waters are carried off, and is confined to such county or particular district as the commission expressly names. Brown.

Public Sewer

One which serves the public and connects with and receives the discharges from district sewers. Schwabe v. Moore, 187 Mo.App. 74, 172 S.W. 1157, 1159.

Sewer Outlet

As used in a statute, that portion of a sewer which serves no other purpose than to connect the sewer system with the point of discharge. Mogaard v. Robinson, 48 N.D. 859, 187 N.W. 142, 143.

Trunk Sewer

One which bears the same relation to a system of sewers that the trunk of a tree bears to its branches. Rush v. Grandy, 66 Mont. 222, 213 P. 242, 243.

SEX. The sum of the peculiarities of structure and function that distinguish a male from a female organism; the character of being male or female. Webster, Dict.

SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY. In ecclesiastical law. The second Sunday before Lent, being about the sixtieth day before Easter.

SEXHINDENI. In Saxon law. The middle thanes, valued at 600s.

SEXTANS. Lat. In Roman law. A subdivision of the as, containing two uncice; the proportion of two-twelfths, or one-sixth. 2 Bl.Comm. 462, note.

SEXTARY. In old records. An ancient measure of liquids, and of dry commodities; a quarter or seam. Spelman.

SEXTERY LANDS. Lands given to a church or religious house for maintenance of a sexton or sacristan. Cowell.

SEXTON. An attendant or care-taker in a church building, usually with care of the attached burying ground.

SEXTUS DECRETALIUM. Lat. The sixth (book) of the decretals; the sext, or sixth decretal. So called because appended, in the body of the canon law, to the five books of the decretals of Gregory IX.; it consists of a collection of supplementary decretals, and was published A. D. 1298. Butl. Hor. Jur. 172; 1 Bl.Comm. 82.

SEXUAL DISEASES. Synonymous with venereal diseases. State v. Hollinshead, 77 Or. 473, 151 P. 710, 711.

SEXUAL INSTINCT, INVERSION AND PERVERSION OF. See Insanity; Pederasty; Sodomy.

SEXUAL INTERCOURSE. Carnal copulation of male and female, implying actual penetration of the organs of the latter. Williams v. State, 92 Fla. 125, 109 So. 305, 306.

SHACK. In English law. The straying and escaping of cattle out of the lands of their owners into other uninclosed land; an intercommoning of cattle. 2 H.B1. 416.

It sometimes happens that a number of adjacent fields, though held in severalty, i. e., by separate owners, and cultivated separately, are, after the crop on each parcel has been carried in, thrown open as pasture to the cattle of all the owners. "Arable lands cultivated on this plan are called 'shack fields,' and the right of each owner of a part to feed cattle over the whole during the autumn and winter is known in law as 'common of shack,' a right which is distinct in its nature from common because of vicinage, though sometimes said to be nearly identical with it." Elton, Commons, 30; Sweet.

SHAFT. An opening in the ground or in structures. Franklin v. Webber, 93 Or. 151, 182 P. 819, 820.

SHALL. As used in statutes, contracts, or the like, this word is generally imperative or mandatory. McDunn v. Roundy, 191 Iowa, 976, 181 N. W. 453, 454; Bay State St. Ry. Co. v. City of Woburn, 232 Mass. 201, 122 N.E. 268; U. S. v. Two Hundred and Sixty-Seven Twenty-Dollar Gold Pieces, D.C.Wash., 255 F. 217, 218; Baer v. Gore, 79 W.Va. 50, 90 S.E. 530, 531, L.R.A.1917B, 723.

In common or ordinary parlance, and in its ordinary signification, the term "shall" is a word of command, and one which has always or which must be given a compulsory meaning; as denoting obligation. It has a peremptory meaning, and it is generally imperative or mandatory. It has the invariable significance of excluding the idea of discretion, and has the significance of operating to impose a duty which may be enforced, particularly if public policy is in favor of this meaning, or when addressed to public officials, or where a public interest is involved, or where the public or persons have rights which ought to be exercised or enforced, unless a contrary intent appears. People v. O'Rourke, 124 Cal. App. 752, 13 P.2d 989, 992.

But it may be construed as merely permissive or directory, (as equivalent to "may,") to carry out the legislative intention and in cases where no right or benefit to any one depends on its being taken in the imperative sense, and where no public or private right is impaired by its interpretation in the other sense. Spaulding & Kimball v. ;Etna Chemical Co., 98 Vt. 169, 126 A. 588, 589; Wisdom v. Board of Sup'rs of Polk County, 236 Iowa 669, 19 N.W.2d 602, 607, 608. Also, as against the government, it is to be construed as "may," unless a contrary intention is manifest. Cairo & Fulton R. Co. v. Hecht, 95 U.S. 170, 24 L.Ed. 423.

Although the word usually denotes an obligation, it also implies an element of futurity. Cunningham v. Long, 125 Me. 494, 135 A. 198, 200; Hemsley v. McKim, 119 Md. 431, 87 A. 506, 511.

SHAM. False;-said of a pleading. Germofert Mfg. Co. v. Castles, 97 S.C. 389, 81 S.E. 665, 666; Segerstrom v. Holland Piano Mfg. Co., 160 Minn. 95, 199 N.W. 897, 898. A sham pleading is therefore one good in form, but false in fact. Bollen v. Woodhams, 68 Colo. 322, 190 P. 427.

For sham "Answer," "Plea," and "Reply," see those titles.

SHANGHAI. To drug, intoxicate, or render insensible and ship as a sailor,-usually to secure advance money or a premium. Webster, Diet.

Under federal law, procuring or inducing, or attempting to do so, by force, or threats, or by representations which one knows or believes to be untrue, or while the person is intoxicated or under the influence of any drug, to go on board of any vessel, or 'agree to do so, to perform service or labor thereon, such vessel being engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, on the high seas or any navigable water of the United States, or knowingly to detain on board such vessel such person, so procured or induced, or knowingly aiding or abetting such things, is an offense. See 18 U.S. C. A. § 2194.

SHARE, v. To partake; enjoy with others; have a portion of. Cook v. Worthington, 116 Ark. 328, 173 S.W. 395, 396; People v. Sigers, 217 Mich. 578, 187 N.W. 373, 374.

SHARE, n. A part or definite portion of a thing owned by a number of persons in common and contemplates something owned in common by two or more persons and has reference to that part of the undivided interest which belongs to some one of them. In re Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Co., 157 Misc. 240, 283 N.Y.S. 623, 639.

In the law of corporations and joint-stock companies, a definite portion of the capital of a company.

See, also, Share of Corporate Stock.

SHARE AND SHARE ALIKE. In equal shares or proportions. Jenne v. Jenne, 271 Ill. 526, 111 N.E. 540, 543; Rogers v. Burress, 199 Ky. 766, 251 S.W. 980, 98L The words commonly indicate per capita division; Burton v. Cahill, 192 N.C. 505, 135 S.E. 332, 335; and they may be applied to a division between classes as well as to a division among individuals; Laisure v. Richards, 56 Ind. App. 301, 103 N.E. 679, 682; Tucker v. Nugent, 117 Me. 10, 102 A. 307, 310.

SHARE CERTIFICATE. An instrument under the seal of the company, certifying that the person therein named is entitled to a certain number ox shares; it is prima facie evidence of his title thereto. Frank Gilbert Paper Co. v. Prankard, 204 App.Div. 83, 198 N.Y.S. 25, 28; Furr v. Chapman, Tex.Com.App., 286 S.W. 171, 172.

SHARE OF CORPORATE STOCK. A proportional part of certain rights in the management and profits of a corporation during its existence, and in the assets upon dissolution, and evidence of the stockholder's ratable share in the distribution of the assets on the winding up of the corporation's business. Department of Treasury of Indiana v. Crowder, 214 Ind. 252, 15 N.E.2d 89, 91; Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Scatena, C.C.A.9, 85 F. 729, 732.

SHARE-WARRANT TO BEARER. A warrant or certificate under the seal of the company, stating that the bearer of the warrant is entitled to a certain number or amount of fully paid up shares or stock. Coupons for payment of dividends may be annexed to it. Delivery of the share-warrant operates as a transfer of the shares or stock. Sweet.

SHAREHOLDER. Strictly, a person who has agreed to become a member of a corporation or company, and with respect to whom all the required formalities have been gone through; e. g., signing of deed of settlement, registration, or the like. A shareholder by estoppel is a person who has acted and been treated as a shareholder, and consequently has the same liabilities as if he were an ordinary shareholder. Lind;. Partn. 130. Beal v. Essex Sa^{y}. Bank, C.C.A.Mass., 67 F. 816, 15 C. C.A. 128; State v. Mitchell, 104 Tenn. 336, 58 S.W. 365.

SHARP. A "sharp" clause in a mortgage or other security (or the whole instrument described as "sharp") is one which empowers the creditor to take prompt and summary action upon default in payment or breach of other conditions.

SHARPING CORN. A customary gift of corn, which, at every Christmas, the farmers in some parts of England give to their smith for sharpening their plow-irons, harrow-tines, _etc. Blount.

SHASTER. In Hindu law. The instrument of government or instruction; any book of instructions, particularly containing Divine ordinances. Wharton.

SHAVE. Sometimes used to denote the act of obtaining the property of another by oppression and extortion. Also used in an innocent sense to denote the buying of existing notes and other securities for money, at a discount. Hence to charge a man with using money for shaving is not libelous per se. Trentham v. Moore, 111 Tenn. 346, 76 S.W. 904.

SHAW. In old English law. A wood. Co.Litt. 4b.

SHAWATORES. Soldiers. Cowell.

SHEADING. A riding, tithing, or division in the Isle of Man, where the whole island is divided nto six sheadings, in each of which there is a coroner or chief constable appointed by a delivery of a rod at the Tinewald court or annual convention. King, Isle of Man, 7.

SHEEP. A term which ordinarily includes rams, ewes, and lambs. Panhandle & 'S. F. Ry. Co. v. Bell, Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 1097, 1101. But in the Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 29, § 25, making it a felony to steal any "ram, ewe, sheep, or lamb," the word "sheep" should be used in indictments only when it is intended to refer to a wether more than a year old. Rex v. Birket, 4 Car. & P. 216.

SHEEP-HEAVES. Small plots of pasture, in England, often in the middle of the waste of a manor, of which the soil may or may not be in the lord, but the pasture is private property, and leased or sold as such. They principally occur in the northern counties, (Cooke, Incl. Acts, 44,) and seem to be corporeal hereditaments, (Elton, Commons, 35,) although they are sometimes classed with rights of common, but erroneously, the right being an exclusive right of pasture. Sweet.

SHEEP-SILVER. A service turned into money, which was paid in respect that anciently the tenants used to wash the lord's sheep. Wharton.

SHEEP-SKIN. A deed; so called from the parchment it was written on.

SHEEP-WALK. Right of. Fold-course (q. v.) Elton, Commons, 44.

SHEETING. In a technical sense, a form of pile driving, being the lining of timber to a caisson or cofferdam formed of sheet piles or piles with flanking between them. Mazzarisi v. Ward & Tully, 156 N.Y.S. 964, 170 App.Div. 868.

SHELL SHOCK. Not a distinct type of nervous disorder, but a condition produced on certain organisms by sudden fear, or by highly exciting causes; it is a form of neurosis; it is not settled, general insanity, but a functional nervous disease, and not due to organic changes. People v. Gilberg, 197 Cal. 306, 240 P. 1000, 1002. See, also, Shock.

SHELLEY'S CASE, RULE IN. "When the ancestor, by any gift or conveyance, taketh an estate of freehold, and in the same gift or conveyance an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately, to his heirs in fee or in tail, 'the heirs' are words of limitation of the estate, and not words of purchase." 1 Coke, 104; Winchell v. Winchell, 259 Ill. 471, 102 N.E. 823, 824; Gordon v. Cadwalader, 164 Cal. 509, 130 P. 18, 19; McHatton's Estate v. Peale's Estate, Tex.Civ.App., 248 S.W. 103, 105.

This rule is expressed by Chancellor Kent as follows : "Where a person takes an estate of freehold, legally or equitably, under a deed, will, or other writing, and in the same instrument there is a limitation by way of remainder, either with or without the interposition of another estate, of any interest of the same legal or equitable quality to his heirs, or heirs of his body, as a class of persons to take in succession from generation to generation, the limitation to the heirs entitles the ancestor to the whole estate." In re Thorne's Estate, 344 Pa. 503, 25 A.2d 811, 819.

Intimately connected with the quantity of estate which a tenant may hold in realty is the antique feudal doctrine generally known as the "Rule in Shelley's Case," which is reported by Lord Coke in 1 Coke, 93b (23 Eliz. in C.B.). This rule was not first laid down or established in that case, but was then simply admitted in argument as a well-founded and settled rule of law, and has always since been quoted as the "Rule in Shelley's Case." Wharton. The rule was adopted as a part of the common law of this country, and in many of the states still prevails. It has been abolished in most of them.

SHELTER. In a statute relating to the provision of food, clothing, and shelter for one's children, a home with proper environments, as well as protection from the weather. Hummel v. State, 73 Ind. App. 12, 126 N.E. 444, 446.

SHEREFFE. The body of the lordship of Cardiff in South Wales, excluding the members of it. Powel, Hist. Wales, 123.

SHERIFF.

American Law

The chief executive and administrative officer of a county, being chosen by popular election. His principal duties are in aid of the criminal courts and civil courts of record; such as serving process, summoning juries, executing judgments, holding judicial sales and the like. He is also the chief conservator of the peace within his territorial jurisdiction. Harston v. Langston, Tex.Civ. App., 292 S.W. 648, 650. When used in statutes, the term may include a deputy sheriff. Lanier v. Town of Greenville, 174 N.C. 311, 93 S.E. 850, 853.

English Law

The principal officer in every county, who has the transacting of the public business of the county. He is an officer of great antiquity, and was also called the "shire-reeve," "reeve," or "bailiff." He is called in Latin "vice-comes," as being the deputy of the earl or comes, to whom anciently the custody of the shire was committed. The duties of the sheriff principally consist in executing writs, precepts, warrants from justices of the peace for the apprehension of offenders, etc. Brown.

Scotch Law

The office of sheriff differs somewhat from the same office under the English law, being, from ancient times, an office of important judicial power, as well as ministerial. The sheriff exercises a jurisdiction of considerable extent, both of civil and criminal character, which is, in a proper sense, judicial, in addition to powers resembling those of an English sheriff. Tomlins; Bell,

General

Deputy sheriff. See Deputy.

High sheriff. One holding the office of sheriff, as distinguished from his deputies or assistants or under sheriffs.

Pocket sheriff. In English law. A sheriff appointed by the sole authority of the crown, without the usual form of nomination by the judges in the exchequer. 1 Bl.Comm. 342; 3 Steph.Comm. 23.

SHERIFF CLERK. The clerk of the sheriff's court in Scotland,

SHERIFF DEPUTE. In Scotch law. The principal sheriff of a county, who is also a judge.

SHERIFF-GELD. A rent formerly paid by a sheriff, and it is prayed that the sheriff in his account may be discharged thereof. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. III.

SHERIFF-TOOTH. In English law. A tenure by the service of providing entertainment for the sheriff at his county courts. An ancient tax on land in Derbyshire. A common tax formerly levied for the sheriff's diet. Cowell; Wharton.

SHERIFF'S COURT. The court held before the sheriff's deputy, that is, the undersheriff, and wherein actions are brought for recovery of debts under £20. Writs of inquiry are also brought here to be executed. The sheriff's court for the county of Middlesex is that wherein damages are assessed in proper cases after trial at Westminster. Brown.

SHERIFF'S COURT IN LONDON. A tribunal having cognizance of personal actions under the London (city) Small Debts Act of 1852. See 3 Steph.Comm., 11th ed. 30, n., 301, 449, note (1) ; 3 Bla.Comm. 80, note (j).

The "Sheriffs Court of the City of London" was the name by which the City of London Court was known prior to the County Courts Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, § 35. Its procedure was, theretofore, regulated by Acts and Rules peculiar to itself ; but by the above enactment, re-enacted by section 185 of the County Courts Act, 1888, it becomes to all intents and purposes a county court. Wharton.

SHERIFF'S JURY. In practice. A jury composed of no determinate number, but which may be more or less than twelve, summoned by the sheriff for the purposes of an inquisition or inquest of office. 3 Bl.Comm. 258.

SHERIFF'S OFFICERS. Bailiffs, who are either bailiffs of hundreds or bound-bailiffs.

SHERIFF'S SALE. See Sale.

SHERIFF'S TOURN. A court of record in England, formerly held twice every year, within a month after Easter and Michaelmas, before the sheriff, in different parts of the county. It was, indeed, only the turn or rotation of the sheriff to keep a court-leet in each respective hundred. This was the great court-leet of the county, as the county court is the court-baron; for out of this, for the ease of the sheriff, was taken the court-leet or view of frank-pledge. 4 Bl.Comm. 273. It was obsolete in Coke's time, but was not abolished till 1887. It had a limited criminal jurisdiction.

SHERIFFALTY, or SHRIEVALTY. The time of a man's being sheriff. Cowell. The term of a sheriff's office. Also, the office itself.

SHERIFFWICK. The jurisdiction of a sheriff. Called, in modern law, "bailiwick." The office of a sheriff.

SHERRERIE. A word used by the authorities of the Roman Church, to specify contemptuously the technical parts of the law, as administered by non-clerical lawyers. Wharton.

SHEWER. In the practice of the English high court, when a view by a jury is ordered, persons are named by the court to show the property to be viewed, and are hence called "shewers." There is usually a shewer on behalf of each party. Archb.Pr. 339, et seq.

SHEWING. In English law. To be quit of attachment in a court, in plaints shewed and not avowed. Obsolete.

SHIFT MARRIAGE. When a man died having debts which his widow was unable to pay, she was obliged, if she contracted a second marriage, to leave her clothes in the hands of the creditors, and to go through the ceremony in her shift. Gradually, however, the ceremony was mitigated by the bridegroom lending her clothes for the occasion. Said by Lecky, Hist. of Eng. 18th Cent., IV, p. 23, to be a curious relic of a standard of commercial integrity which had long since passed away.

SHIFTING. Changing; varying; passing from one person to another by substitution.

SHIFTING CLAUSE. In a settlement, a clause by which some other mode of devolution is substituted for that primarily prescribed. Examples of shifting clauses are: The ordinary name and arms clause, and the clause of less frequent occurrence by which a settled estate is destined as the foundation of a second family, in the event of the elder branch becoming otherwise enriched. These shifting clauses take effect under the statute of uses. Sweet.

SHIFTING RISK. In insurance, a risk created by a contract of insurance on a stock of merchandise, or other similar property, which is kept for sale, or is subject to change in items by purchase and sale; the policy being conditioned to cover the goods in the stock at any and all times and not to be affected by changes in its composition. Farmers' etc., Ins. Ass'n v. Kryder, 5 Ind.App. 430, 31 N.E. 851, 51 Am.St.Rep. 284.

SHIFTING SEVERALTY. See Severalty.

SHIFTING STOCK OF MERCHANDISE. A stock of merchandise subject to change from time to time, in the course of trade by purchases, sales, or other transactions. Laderburg v. Miller, C.C.A. Va., 210 F. 614, 617.

SHIFTING THE BURDEN OF PROOF. Transferring it from one party to the other, or from one side of the case to the other, when he upon whom it rested originally has made out a prima facie case or defense by evidence, of such a character that it then becomes incumbent upon the other to rebut it by contradictory or defensive evidence.

SHIFTING USE, See Use,

SHILLING. In English law. The name of an English coin, of the value of one-twentieth part of a pound. This denomination of money was also used in America, in colonial times, but was not everywhere of uniform value.

SHIN-PLASTER. Formerly, a jocose term for a bank-note greatly depreciated in value; also for paper money of a denomination less than a dollar. Webster, Dict. See Madison Ins. Co. v. Forsythe, 2 Ind. 483.

SHINNEY. A local name for a homemade whisky. State v. McClinton, 94 So. 141, 142, 152 La. 632.

SHINTO. State religion of Japan.

SHIP, v. To put on board a ship; to send by ship. Harrison v. Fortlage, 16 S.Ct. 488, 490, 161 U.S. 57, 40 L.Ed. 616. To place (goods) on board of a vessel for the purchaser or consignee, to be transported at his risk. Krauter v. Menchacatorre, 202 App.Div. 200, 195 N.Y.S. 361, 363.

In a broader sense, to transport. Burton v. State, 135 Ark. 612, 206 S.W. 51, 52. To deliver to a common carrier for transportation. State v. Bayer, 93 Ohio St. 72, 112 N.E. 197, 198; Horner v. Daily, 77 Ind.App. 378, 133 N.E. 585, 587. To send away, to get rid of. Bird v. State, 131 Tenn. 518, 175 S.W. 554, 556, Ann.Cas.1917A, 634. To send by established mode of transportation, as to "carry," "convey," or "transport," which are synonymous and defined, respectively, as "to bear or cause to be borne as from one place to another," "to transport from one place to another," and "to carry or convey from one place to another." Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Petroleum Refining Co., D.C.Ky., 39 F.2d 629, 630.

SHIP, n. A vessel of any kind employed in navigation. In a more restricted and more technical sense, a three-masted vessel navigated with sails. U. S. v. Kelly, 4 Wash.C.C. 528, F.Cas.No.15,516.

Nautical men apply the term "ship" to distinguish a vessel having three masts, each consisting of a lower mast, a topmast, and a topgallant mast, with their appropriate rigging. In familiar language, it is usually employed to distinguish any large vessel, however rigged. Tomlins; Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U.S. 625, 7 S.Ct. 336, 30 L.Ed. 501; Swan v. U. S., 19 Ct.C1. 62; The St. Louis, D.C.Ky., 48 F. 312; Wood v. Two Barges, C.C.La., 46 F. 204, as to what is not a ship.

An agreement to construct an ocean going ship is performed by the construction of an ocean going barge suitable for a cargo carrying steamer, since the hull and spars constitute the ship. Bell v. First Nat. Bank of Rockport, Tex.Civ.App., 226 S.W. 1107.

Ex Ship

These words in a contract of sale are not restricted to any particular ship, and by the usage of merchants simply denote that the property in the goods shall pass to the buyer upon their leaving the ship's tackle, and that he shall be liable for all subsequent charges of landing. They do not constitute a condition of the contract but are inserted for the benefit of the seller. Harrison v. Fortlage, 16 S.Ct. 488, 161 U.S. 57, 40 L.Ed. 616.

General Ship

Where a ship is not chartered wholly to one person, but the owner offers her generally to carry the goods of all comers, or where, if chartered to one person, he offers her to several subfreighters for the conveyance of their goods, she is called a "general" ship, as opposed to a "chartered" one. Brown. One which is employed by the charterer or owner on a particular voyage, and is hired to a number of persons, unconnected with each other to convey their respective goods to the place of destination. Alexander Eccles & Co. v. Strachan Shipping Co., D.C.Ga., 21 F.2d 653, 655; Ward v. Green, 6 Cow., N.Y., 173, 16 Am.Dec. 437.

Ship-Breaking

In Scotch law. The offense of breaking into a ship. Arkley, 461.

Ship-Broker

An agent for the transaction of business between ship-owners and charterers or those who ship cargoes. Little Rock v. Barton, 33 Ark. 444.

Ship-Chandlery

A term of extensive import, and includes everything necessary to furnish and equip a vessel, so as to render her seaworthy for the intended voyage.

Not only stores, stoves, hardware, and crockery have been held to be within the term, but muskets and other arms also, the voyage being round Cape Horn to California, in the course of which voyage arms are sometimes carried for safety. Weaver v. The S. G. Owens, Pa., 29 F.Cas. 17,310; 29 F.Cas. 489.

Ship-Channel

In rivers, harbors, etc., the channel in which the water is deep enough for vessels of large size, usually marked out in harbors by buoys. The Oliver, D.C.Va., 22 F. 848.

Ship-Damage

In the charter-parties with the English East India Company, these words occur. Their meaning is, damage from negligence, insufficiency, or bad stowage in the ship. Abb. Shipp. 204.

Ship-Master

The captain or master of a merchant ship, appointed and put in command by the owner, and having general control of the vessel and cargo, with power to bind the owner by his lawful acts and engagements in the management of the ship.

Ship-Money

In English law. An imposition formerly levied on port-towns and other places for fitting out ships; revived by Charles I., and abolished in the same reign. 17 Car. I. c. 14.

Ship's-Bill

The copy of the bill of lading retained by the master. It is not authoritative as to the terms of the contract of affreightment; the bill delivered to the shipper must control, if the two do not agree. The Thames, 14 Wall. 98, 20 L.Ed. 804.

Ship's Company

A term embracing all the officers of the ship, as well as the mariners or common seamen, but not a passenger. U. S. v. Libby, 26 F.Cas. 928; U. S. v. Winn, 28 F.Cas. 735.

Ship's Husband

In maritime law. A person appointed by the several part-owners of a ship, and usually one of their number, to manage the concerns of the ship for the common benefit. Generally understood to be the general agent of the owners in regard to all the affairs of the ship in the home port. Story, Ag. § 35; 3 Kent, Comm. 151; Webster v. The Andes, 18 Ohio 187; Muldon v. Whitlock, 1 Cow., N.Y., 307, 13 Am.Dec. 533; 1 Y. & C. 326; Gould v. Stanton, 16 Conn. 12. He cannot insure or bind the owners for premiums. Hewett v. Buck, 17 Me. 147, 35 Am.Dec. 243; 2 Maule & S. 485; Foster v. Ins. Co., 11 Pick., Mass., 85; 5 Burr. 2627.

Ship's Papers

The papers which must be carried by a vessel on a voyage, in order to furnish evidence of her national character, the nature and destination of the cargo, and of compliance with the navigation laws. The ship's papers are of two sorts: Those required by the law of a particular country; such as the certificate of registry, license, charter-party, bills of lading and of health, required by the law of England to be on board all British ships. These required by the law of nations to be on board neutral ships, to vindicate their title to that character; these are the pass port, sea-brief, or sea-letter, proofs of property, the muster-roll or role d'equipage, the charter-party, the bills of lading and invoices, the log-book or ship's journal, and the bill of health. 1 March. Ins. c. 9, § 6. See, also, Grace v. Browne, C.C.A.N.Y., 86 F. 155.

SHIPMENT. The delivery of the goods within the time required on some vessel, destined to the particular port, which the seller has reason to suppose will sail within a reasonable time. It does not mean a clearance of the vessel as well as putting the goods on board where there is nothing to indicate that the seller was expected to exercise any control over the clearance of the vessel or of her subsequent management. Ledon v. Havemeyer, 121 N.Y. 179, 24 N.E. 297, 8 L.R.A. 245. See L.R. 2 App.Cas. 455; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 453, 5 Am.Dec. 63; Lamborn & Co. v. Log Cabin Products Co., D.C.Minn., 291 F. 435, 438.

The delivery of goods to a carrier and his issuance of a bill of lading therefor. Goldenberg v. Cutler, 189 App.Div. 489, 178 N.Y.S. 522, 523.

A "shipment" does not consist in loading alone, but consists in complete delivery of goods by the shipper to the carrier for transportation, and shipment is not made until the shipper has parted with all control over the goods and nothing remains to be done by him to complete delivery. National Importing & Trading Co. v. E. A. Bear & Co., 324 Ill. 346, 155 N.E. 343, 346.

The transportation of goods. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Carolina Portland Cement Co., C.C.A.S.C., 16 F.2d 760, 761.

Also, the property which is the subject of transportation. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Carolina Portland Cement Co., C.C.A.S.C., 16 F.2d 760, 761. An order. Young v. Flickinger, 75 Cal.App. 171, 242 P. 516, 517. A consignment of goods as delivered by the carrier. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kittanning Iron & Steel Mfg. Co., 263 Pa. 205, 106 A. 207, 208.

SHIPPER. A Dutch word, signifying the master of a ship. It is mentioned in some statutes, and is now generally called "skipper." Tomlins.

One who ships goods; one who puts goods on board of a vessel, for carriage to another place during her voyage and for delivery there, by charter-party or otherwise. One who signs a bill of lading as "shipper," unless the coVrary appears, is presumably the consignor. New Y-ork Cent. R. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., 3 N.J.M. 1137, 131 A. 111, 114.

Under federal statutes, one is a "shipper" who, although a consignee, exercises such direct control over shipments of commodities consigned to him by another as enables him, by his own act, to procure for himself discriminations in respect to transportation service. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., D.C.N.J., 254 F. 335, 346. Thus, a forwarder of freight, who sends in his own name all the freight he can over a carrier, which, in consideration of the business thus obtained, pays him a commission or salary calculated on the freight moneys received by the carrier from him, is a "shipper," and the payment in form of commission or salary or otherwise is a "rebate" or concession in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 6, 24 Stat. 380 (49 U.S.C.A. § 6), and Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847, § 1, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 587, § 2 (49 U.S.C.A. § 41). U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 222 F. 685, 686.

SHIPPER'S ORDER. In bills of lading, is well understood and means that the title remains in the shipper until he orders a delivery of the goods. B. W. McMahan & Co. v. State Nat. Bank of Shawnee, Tex.Civ.App., 160 S.W. 403, 404; Bennett v. Dickinson, 106 Kan. 95, 186 P. 1005.

SHIPPING. Ships in general; ships or vessels of any kind intended for navigation. Relating to ships; as, shipping interests, shipping affairs, shipping business, shipping concerns. Putting on board a ship or vessel, or receiving on board a ship or vessel. Webster, Dict.; Worcester, Dict.

Law of Shipping

A comprehensive term for all that part of the maritime law which relates to ships and the persons employed in or about them. It embraces such subjects as the building and equipment of vessels, their registration and nationality, their ownership and inspection, their employment, (including charter-parties, freight, demurrage, towage, and salvage,) and their sale, transfer, and mortgage; also, the employment, rights, powers, and duties of masters and mariners; and the law relating to ship-brokers, ship-agents, pilots, etc.

SHIPPING ARTICLES. A written agreement between the master of a vessel and the mariners, specifying the voyage or term for which the latter are shipped, and the rate of wages. See 46 U.S. C.A. § 564.

SHIPPING COMMISSIONER. An ,officer of the United States, appointed by the several circuit courts, within their respective jurisdictions, for each port of entry (the same being also a port of ocean navigation), which, in the judgment of such court, may require the same; his duties being to supervise the engagement and discharge of seamen; to see that men engaged as seamen report on board at the proper time; to facilitate the apprenticing of persons to the marine service; and other similar duties, such as may be required by law. 46 U.S.C.A. §§ 541-549 and notes.

SHIPWRECK. The demolition or shattering of a vessel, caused by her driving ashore or on rocks and shoals in the midseas, or by the violence of winds and waves in tempests. 2 Arn.Ins. p. 734, SHIRE, A Saxon word which signified a division; it was made up of an indefinite number of hundreds—later called a county (Comitatus). 1 Steph.Com. 76.

English Law

A county. So called because every county or shire is divided arid parted by certain metes and bounds from another. Co.Litt. 50a.

General

Knights of the shire. See that title.

Shire-clerk. He that keeps the county court.

Shire-gemot, scire-gemote, scir-gemot. (From the Saxon scir or scyre, county, shire, and gemote, a court, an assembly.) Variants of scyregemote (q. v.). See, also, Shire-mote, infra.

Shire-man, or scyre-man. Before the Conquest, the judge of the county, by whom trials for land, etc., were determined, Tomlins; Mozley & Whitley.

Shire-mote. The assize of the shire, or the assembly of the people, was so called by the Saxons. It was nearly if not exactly, the same as the scyregemote, and in most respects corresponded with what were afterwards called the "county courts." Brown.

Shire-reeve (spelled, also, Shire rieve, or Shire reve). In Saxon law. The reeve or bailiff of the shire. The viscount of the Anglo-Normans, and the sheriff of later times. Co.Litt. 168a.

SHOCK. A sudden agitation of the physical or mental sensibilities. Provident Life and Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 295.

Mental Shock

A sudden agitation of the mind; startling emotion, as the shock of a painful discovery, a shock of grief or joy. Provident Life and Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 295.

Physical Shock

A blow, impact, collision, concussion, or violent shake or jar, or a violent collision of bodies, or the concussion caused by it; a sudden striking or dashing together or against something. Provident Life and Accident Ins. Co. v, Campbell, 18 Tenn. App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 295.

Medical Jurisprudence

A sudden depression of the vital forces of the entire body, or a part of it, marking some profound impression produced upon the nervous system, as by severe injury, a surgical operation, profound emotion, or the like, or a prostration of the bodily functions, as from sudden injury or mental disturbance. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 295.

SHOOFAA, In Mohammedan law. Pre-emption, or a power of possessing property which has been sold, by paying a sum equal to that paid by the purchaser. Wharton.

SHOOT. To strike with something shot; to hit, wound, or kill, with a missile discharged from a weapon; and the missile meant in such cases is the arrow, bullet, or ball, intended to be discharged and to strike the object aimed at. A person cannot be said to have been shot who was not hit by bullet or ball, but only powder burned by the weapon discharged. State v. Manuel, 153 La. 7, 95 So. 263, 264. The term generally implies the use of firearms. Shumake v. State, 90 Fla. 133, 105 So. 314, 315.

SHOP. A building in which goods and merchandise are sold at retail, or where mechanics work, and sometimes keep their products for sale. State v. Morgan, 98 N.C. 641, 3 S.E. 927; State v. O'Connell, 26 Ind. 2'67; State v. Sprague, 149 Mo. 409, 50 S.W. 901; Corn. v. Riggs, 14 Gray, Mass., 378, 77 Am.Dec. 333; Richards v. Ins. Co., 60 Mich. 426, 27 N.W. 586. There must be some structure of a more or less permanent character. 6 B. & S. 303.

The term is properly applied to a place of manufacture or repair, such as a roundhouse, Koecher v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 122 Minn. 458, 142 N.W. 874, 876, or a building used for repairing automobiles and for the sale of automobile parts, gas, and oil, State v. Garon, 161 La. 867, 109 So. 530, 532. But it is not strictly applicable to a garage, State v. Garon, 158 La. 1014, 105 So. 47, 48, nor to a restaurant, even though the restaurant also engages in the sale of cigars, Debenham v. Short, Tex.Civ. App., 199 S. W. 1147.

The word "shop" in its popular as well as legal meaning is not confined to a workshop, but is a word of various significance, and "store" and "workshop" are both included in it and do not exhaust its meaning. A place kept and used for the sale of goods may be rightly denominated a "shop". Commonwealth v. Moriarty, 311 Mass. 116, 40 N.E.2d 307, 308.

SHOP RIGHT. In patent law. The right of an employer to use employee's invention in employer's business without payment of royalty. Ashland Oil & Refining Co. v. Dorton, 300 Ky. 385, 189 S.W.2d 394.

It cannot come into existence unless the inventor was an employee of the one claiming the right at the time when the invention was made and reduced to practice. Crom v. Cement Gun Co., D.C.Del., 46 F.Supp. 403, 405.

SHOPA. In old records, a shop. Cowell.

SHOP-BOOK RULE. An exception to the hearsay evidence rule, permitting the introduction in evidence of books of original entry made in the usual course of business, and introduced from proper custody and upon general authentication. Clayton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 96 Utah 331, 85 P.2d 819, 822, 120 A.L.R. 1117.

SHOP-BOOKS. Books of original entry kept by trademen, shop-keepers, mechanics, and the like, in which are entered their accounts and charges for goods sold, work done, etc., commonly called "account-books," or "books of account." The term does not include the stubs of a check book and entries thereon, McWhorter v. Tyson, 203 Ala. 509, 83 So. 330, 333, nor the book and entries of an express messenger, Rhoades v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. R., 227 Mass. 138, 116 N.E. 244, 245.

SHOPKEEPER. Whether a person who buys and sells commodities as a business is a merchant or a shopkeeper depends on the extent, and not on the character, of his business; if his business is large he is a "merchant," and if it is small he is a "shopkeeper." White Mountain Fur Co. v. Town of Whitefield, 77 N.H. 340, 91 A. 870, 871.

SHORE. Land on the margin of the sea, a lake, or a river,—especially a large river, in which the water ebbs and flows. Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 349; Bell v. Gough, 23 N.J.L. 683.

Strictly and technically, lands adjacent to the sea or other tidal waters; the lands adjoining navigable waters, where the tide flows and reflows, which at high tides are submerged, and at low tides are bare. Shively v. Bowlby, 14 S.Ct. 548, 152 U.S. 1, 38 L.Ed. 331; Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 400, 16 Am.Rep. 46; Axline v. Shaw, 35 Fla. 305, 17 So. 411, 28 L.R.A. 391. The space bounded by the high and low water marks. La Porte v. Menacon, 220 Mich. 684, 190 N.W. 655, 656; Sinford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Borax Consolidated v. City of Los Angeles, Cal., 56 S.Ct. 23, 296 U.S. 101, 80 L.Ed. 9. And this is also true even though the lands may lie along nonnavigable bodies of water. Hunter v. Van Keuren, 130 Misc. 599, 224 N.Y.S. 153, 160.

Sea-shore is that space of land over which the waters of the sea spread in the highest water, during the winter season. Civ.Code La. art. 451.

Under the civil law the "shore line" boundary of lands adjoining navigable waters is the line marked by the highest tide. Dincans v. Keeran, Tex.Civ.App., 192 S.W. 603, 604.

In connection with salvage, "shore" means the land on which the waters have deposited things which are the subject of salvage, whether below or above ordinary high-water mark. The Gulfport, D.C.Ala., 243 F. 676, 680.

SHORE LANDS. Those lands lying between the lines of high and low water mark. State v. Sturtevant, 76 Wash. 158, 135 P. 1035, 1036. Lands bordering on the shores of navigable lakes and rivers below the line of ordinary high water. Rem. & Bal.Code, Wash., § 6641 (Rem.Rev.Stat. § 7833).

SHORT. Not long; of brief length; brief; not coming up to a measure, standard, requirement, or the like. Webster, Dict.

A term of common use in the stock and produce markets. To say that one is "short," in the vernacular of the exchanges, implies only that one has less of a commodity than may be necessary to meet demands and obligations. It does not imply that commodity cannot or will not be supplied upon demand. Thomas v. McShan, 99 Okl. 88, 225 P. 713, 714.

SHORT CAUSE. A cause which is not likely to occupy a great portion of the time of the court, and which may be entered on the list of "short causes," upon the application of one of the parties, and will then be heard more speedily than it would be in its regular order. This practice obtains in the English chancery and in some of the American states. The time allowed for the hearing varies in the different courts.

SHORT ENTRY. A custom of bankers of entering on the customer's pass-book the amount of notes deposited for collection, in such a manner that the amount is not carried to the latter's general balance until the notes are paid. Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12; Blaine v. Bourne, 11 R.I. 121, 23 Am.Rep. 429.

SHORT LEASE. A term applied colloquially, but without much precision, to a lease for a short term, (as a month or a year,) as distinguished from one running for a long period.

SHORT NOTICE. In practice. Notice of less than the ordinary time; generally of half that time. 2 Tidd, Pr. 757. In English Practice, four days' notice of trial. Wharton, Law Diet. Notice *of trial. 1 Cr. & M. 499.

SHORT RATE. Cancellation of insurance policy. Where insurance policy is mutually rescinded by both parties and new policy contract, identical with original, save for shortened term and lessened earned premium, is re-issued and substituted for original contract. Keehn v. Hi-Grade Coal & Fuel Co., 23 N.J.Misc. 102, 41 A.2d 525, 532.

SHORT SALE. A contract for sale of shares of stock which the seller does not own, or certificates for which are not within his control, so as to be available for delivery at the time when, under rules of the exchange, delivery must be made. Provost v. U. S., 46 S.Ct. 152, 153, 269 U.S. 443, 70 L.Ed. 352; Chandler v. Prince, 221 Mass. 495, 109 N.E. 374, 378. In a "short sale" the broker may make a delivery of bonds or stock, charging the price thereof to the customer, and the account is carried until the customer orders the broker to repurchase the bonds, and an adjustment is made between the broker and customer on the difference between the selling and purchasing price. Brown v. Carpenter, 182 App.Div. 650, 168 N.Y.S. 921, 923.

SHORT SUMMONS. A process, authorized in some of the states, to be issued against an absconding, fraudulent, or nonresident debtor, which is returnable within a less number of days than an ordinary writ of summons.

SHORTFORD. An old custom of the city of Exeter, similar to that of gavelet in London, which was a mode of foreclosing the right of a tenant by the chief lord of the fee, in cases of non-payment of rent. Cowell.

SHORTLY AFTER. In point of time, a relative term, meaning in a short or brief time or manner; soon; presently; quickly. Chittenden County Trust Co. v. Hurd, 93 Vt. 71, 106 A. 564, 565.

SHOT. A projectile, particularly a solid ball or bullet that is not intended to fit the bore of a piece; also such prejectiles collectively. Green v. Commonwealth, 122 Va. 862, 94 S.E. 940, 941.

SHOTGUN. A smooth-bore gun, often double-barreled, and now almost universally breach-loading, designed for firing shots at short range and killing small game, especially birds. Henderson v. State, 75 Fla. 464, 78 So. 427, 428.

SHOULD. The past tense of shall, St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Brown, 45 Old. 143, 144 P. 1075, 1080, ordinarily implying duty or obligation; Scarborough v. Walton, 36 Ga.App. 428, 136 S.E. 830. Kippenbrock v. Wabash R. Co., 270 Mo. 479, 194 S. W. 50, 51; although usually no more than an obligation of propriety or expediency, or a moral obligation, thereby distinguishing it from "ought," U. S. v. Stickrath, D.C.Ohio, 242 F. 151, 153. It is not normally synonymous with "may", Williams v. Mt. Vernon Car Mfg. Co., 197 Ill.App. 271, 272; Elliott v. Mayes, 196 Ill.App. 605, 606; and although often interchangeable with the word "would," Barnett v. Savannah Electric Co., 15 Ga.App. 270, 82 S.E. 910, 911, it does not ordinarily express certainty as "will" sometimes does. Hubbard v. Turner Department Store Co., 220 Mo.App. 95, 278 S.W. 1060, 1061.

SHOW, n. Something that one views or at which one looks and at the same time hears. Longwell v. Kansas City, 199 Mo.App. 480, 203 S.W. 657, 659.

SHOW, v. To make apparent or clear by evidence; to prove. Coyle v. Com., 104 Pa. 133. It may be equivalent to the words "reasonably satisfy," Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co. v. Cohill, 196 Ala. 278, 72 So. 126, but is not synonymous with "state"; Chapin v. State, 107 Tex.Cr. R. 477, 296 S.W. 1095, 1099; Chumbley v. Courtney, 181 Iowa, 482, 164 N.W. 945, 946.

Although the words "show" and "indicate" are sometimes interchangeable in popular use, they are not always so. To "show" is to make apparent or clear by evidence, to prove; while an "Indication" may be merely a symptom; that which points to or gives direction to the mind. Coyle v. Corn., 104 Pa. 133. "Show" means to point out, or make known by evidence. Commonwealth v. Delfino, 259 Pa. 272, 102 A. 949, 952.

SHOW CAUSE. Against a rule nisi, an order, decree, execution, etc., is to appear as directed, and present to the court such reasons and considerations as one has to offer why it should not be confirmed, take effect, be executed, or as the case may be.

SHOWER. One who accompanies a jury to the scene to call the attention of the jurors to specific objects to be noted. Snyder v. Mass., 54 S.Ct. 330.

SHRUB. A low, small plant, the branches of which grow directly from the earth without any supporting trunk, or stem. Clay v. Tel. Cable Co., 70 Miss. 406, 11 So. 658.

SHUT DOWN. To stop work;—usually said of a factory, etc. Webster, Dict.

Thus, within the meaning of an insurance policy, a saw mill which has stopped running for the winter is shut down, though men are employed about the premises and the machinery has not been dismantled. McKenzie v. Ins. Co., 112 Cal. 548, 44 P. 922.

SHY. To start suddenly aside through fright or suspicion; said especially of horses. San Antonio Machine & Supply Co. v. McKinley, Tex.Civ.App., 239 S.W. 340, 342.

SHYSTER. A trickish knave; one who carries on any business, especially a legal business, in a dishonest way. Gribble v. Press Co., 34 Minn. 343, 25 N.W. 710; Nolan v. Standard Pub. Co., 67 Mont. 212, 216 P. 571, 574. An unscrupulous practitioner who disgraces his profession by doing mean work, and resorts to sharp practice to do it. Bailey v. Kalamazoo Pub. Co., 40 Mich. 251.

SI A JURE DISCEDAS, VAGUS ERIS, ET ERUNT OMNIA OMNIBUS INCERTA. If you depart from the law, you will go astray, and all things will be uncertain to everybody. Co.Litt. 227b.

SI ACTIO. Lat. The conclusion of a plea to an action when the defendant demands judgment, if the plaintiff ought to have his action, etc. Obsolete.

SI ALICUJUS REI SOCIETAS SIT ET FINIS NEGOTIO IMPOSITUS EST, FINITUR SOCIETAS. If there is a partnership in any matter, and the business is ended, the partnership ceases. Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns, N.Y., 438, 489.

SI ALIQUID EX SOLEMNIBUS DEFICIAT, CUM AEQUITAS POSCIT, SUBVENIENDUM EST. If any one of certain required forms be wanting, where equity requires, it will be aided. The want of some of a neutral vessel's papers is strong presumptive evidence against the ship's neutrality, yet the want of any one of them is not absolutely conclusive. 1 Kent, Comm. 157.

SI ALIQUID SAPIT. Lat. If he knows anything; if he is not altogether devoid of reason.

SI ASSUETIS MEDERI POSSIS, NOVA NON SUNT TENTANDA. If you can be relieved by accustomed remedies, new ones should not be tried. If an old wall can be repaired, a new one should not be made. 10 Coke, 142b.

SI CONSTET DE PERSONA. Lat. If it be certain who is the person meant.

SI CONTINGAT. Lat. If it happen. Words of condition in old conveyances. 10 Coke, 42a.

SI DUO IN TESTAMENTO PUGNANTIA REPERIENTUR, ULTIMUM EST RATUM. If two conflicting provisions are found in a will, the last is observed. Lofft 251.

SI FECERIT TE SECURUM. Lat. If he make you secure. In practice. The initial and emphatic words of that description of original writ which directs the sheriff to cause the defendant to appear in court, without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gives the sheriff security effectually to prosecute his claim. 3 Bl.Comm. 274.

SI INGRATUM DIXERIS, OMNIA DIXERIS. If you affirm that one is ungrateful, in that you include every charge. A Roman maxim. Tray. Lat. Max.

SI ITA EST. Lat. If it be so. Emphatic words in the old writ of mandamus to a judge, commanding him, if the fact alleged be truly stated, (si ita est,) to affix his seal to a bill of exceptions. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 192, 8 L.Ed. 92.

SI JUDICAS, COGNOSCE. If you judge, understand.

SI MELIORES SUNT QUOS DUCIT AMOR, PLURES SUNT QUOS CORRIGIT TIMOR. If those are better who are led by love, those are the greater number who are corrected by fear. Co.Litt. 392.

SI NON APPAREAT QUID ACTUM EST, ERIT CONSEQUENS UT ID SEQUAMUR QUOD IN REGIONE IN QUA ACTUM EST FREQUENTATUR. If it does not appear what was agreed upon, the consequence will be that we must follow that which is the usage of the place where the agreement was made. Dig. 50, 17, 34.

SI NON WINES. Lat. In English practice. A writ of w---ociation of justices whereby, if all in commissit,ii cannot meet at the day assigned, it is allowed that two or more may proceed with the business. Cowell; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 111 C.

SI NULLA SIT CONJECTURA QUIS DUCAT ALIO, VERBA INTELLIGENDA SUNT EX PROPRIETATE, NON GRAMMATICA SED POPULAR! EX USU. If there be no inference which leads to a different result, words are to be understood according to their proper meaning, not in a grammatical, but in a popular and ordinary, sense, 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

SI PARET. Lat. If it appears. In Roman law. Words used in the formula by which the praetor appointed a judge, and instructed him how to decide the cause.

SI PLURES CONDITIONES ASCRIPTIE FUERUNT DONATIONI CONJUNCTIM, OMNIBUS EST PARENDUM; ET AD VERITATEM COPULATIVE REQVIRITUR QUOD UTRAQUE PARS SIT VERA, SI DIVISIM, QUILIBET VEL ALTERI EORUM SATIS EST OBTEMPERARE; ET IN DISJUNCTIVIS, SUFFICIT ALTERAM PARTEM ESSE VERAM. If several conditions are conjunctively written in a gift, the whole of them must be complied with; and with respect to their truth, it is necessary that every part be true, taken jointly; if the conditions are separate, it is sufficient to comply with either one or other of them; and being disjunctive, that one or the other be true. Co.Litt. 225.

SI PLURES SINT FIDEJUSSORES, QUOTQUOT ERUNT NUMERO, SINGULI IN SOLIDUM TENENTUR. If there are more sureties than one, how many soever they shall be, they shall each be held for the whole. Inst. 3, 20, 4.

SI PRIUS. Lat. In old practice. If before. Formal words in the old writs for summoning juries. Fleta, 1. 2, c. 65, § 12.

SI QUID UNIVERSITATI DEBETUR SINGULIS NON DEBETUR, NEC QUOD DEBET UNIVERSITAS SINGULI DEBENT. If anything be owing to an entire body [or to a corporation], it is not owing to the individual members; nor do the individuals owe that which is owing by the entire body. Dig. 3, 4, 7, 1; 1 Bla.Comm. 484; Lindl. Part. *5.

SI QUIDEM IN NOMINE, COGNOMINE, PRZENOMINE LEGATARII TESTATOR ERRAVERIT, CUM DE PERSONA CONSTAT, NIHILOMINUS VALET LEGATUM. Although a testator may have mistaken the nomen, cognomen, or prcenomen of a legatee, yet, if it be certain who is the person meant, the legacy is valid. Inst. 2, 20, 29; Broom, Max. 645; 2 Domat b. 2, 1, s. 6, §§ 10, 19.

SI QUIS. Lat. In the civil law. If any one. Formal words in the pmtorian edicts. The word "quis," though masculine in form was held to include women. Dig. 50, 16, 1.

SI QUIS CUM TOTUM PETIISSET PARTEM PETAT, EXCEPTIO REI JUDICAT1E VOCET. If a party, when he should have sued for an entire claim, sues only for a part, the judgment is res judicata against another suit. 2 Mart. O. S. (La.) 83.

SI A TUTELA REMOVENDUS EST. Jenk.Cent. 39. If a guardian do fraud to his ward, he shall be removed from his guardianship.

SI QUIS CUSTOS FRAUDEM PUPILLO FECERSI QUIS PRZEGNANTEM UXOREM RELIQUIT, NON VIDETUR SINE LIBERIS DECESSISSE. If a man dies, leaving his wife pregnant, he shall not be considered to have died without children. A rule of the civil law.

SI QUIS, UNUM PERCUSSERIT, CUM ALIUM PERCUTERE VELLET, IN FELONIA TENETUR.. 3 Inst. 5L If a man kill one, meaning to kill another, he is held guilty of felony.

SI RECOGNOSCAT. Lat. If he acknowledge. In old practice. A writ which lay for a creditor against his debtor for money numbered (pecunia numerata) or counted; that is, a specific sum of money, which the debtor had acknowledged in the county court, to owe him, as received in pecuniis numeratis. Cowell.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITER)E PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SIB. Sax. A relative or kinsman. Used in the Scotch tongue, but not now in English.

SIC. Lat. Thus; so; in such manner.

SIC ENIM DEBERE QUEM MELIOREM AGRUM SUUM FACERE NE VICINI DETERIOREM FACIAT. Every one ought so to improve his land as not to injure his neighbor's. 3 Kent, Comm. 441. A rule of the Roman law.

SIC INTERPRETANDUM EST UT VERBA ACCIPIANTUR CUM EFFECTU. 3 Inst. 80. [A statute] is to be so interpreted that the words may be taken with effect.

SIC SUBSCRIBITUR. Lat. In Scotch practice. So it is subscribed. Formal words at the end of depositions, immediately preceding the signature. 1 How. State Tr. 1379.

SIC UTERE TUO UT ALIENUM NON LIEDAS. Use your own property in such a manner as not to injure that of another. 9 Coke, 59; 1 Bl.Comm. 306; Broom, Max. 268, 365; Webb, Poll. Torts 153; 2 Bouv.Inst. n. 2379; 5 Exch. 797; 12 Q.B. 739; 4 A. & E. 384; 17 Mass. 334; 4 McCord., S.C., 472. Various comments have been made on this maxim: "Mere verbiage"; El. B. & E. 643. "No help to decision"; L. R. 2 Q.B. 247. "Utterly useless as a legal maxim"; 9 N.Y. 445. It is a mere begging of the question; it assumes the very point in controversy. 13 Lea 507. See 2 Aust.Jurisp. 795, 829.

SICH. A little current of water, which is dry in summer; a water furrow or gutter. Cowell.

SICIUS. A sort of money current among the ancient English, of the value of 2d.

SICK. Affected with disease, ill, indisposed. State v. Douglas, 124 Kan. 482, 260 P. 655, 657. See Sickness.

SICKNESS. Disease; malady; any morbid condition of the body (including insanity) which, for the time being, hinders or prevents the organs from normally discharging their several functions. L. R. 8 Q. B. 295. Any affection of the body which deprives it temporarily of the power to fulfill its usual functions, Martin v. Waycross Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 18 Ga.App. 226, 89 S.E. 495, 496, including injury, Doody v. Davie, 77 Cal. App. 310, 246 P. 339, 340; contra, Poole v. Imperial Mut. Life & Health Ins. Co., 188 N.C. 468, 125 S.E. 8. See, also, Beaudoin v. La Societe St. Jean Baptiste de Bienfaisance de Biddeford, 116 Me. 428, 102 A. 234, 235, L.R.A.1918B, 641, limiting the term to those disabilities which are the natural results of disease arising from a pathological condition, and Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Wiggins, C.C.A.Or., 15 F.2d 646, 648, defining sickness as a condition interfering with one's usual avocations.

Illness; an ailment of such a character as to affect the general soundness and health; not a mere temporary indisposition, which does not tend to undermine and weaken the constitution. National Live Stock Ins. Co. v. Bartlow, 60 Ind.App. 233, 110 N.E. 224, 225.

In construing a sickness indemnity policy, there may be said to be three degrees of sickness : First, when the patient is confined to his bed; second, when he is confined to the house, but not to his bed; and, third, when he is too sick to work, but not confined to the house. Rocci v. Massachusetts Ace. Co., 226 Mass. 545, 116 N.E. 477, 479.

SICUT ALIAS. Lat. As at another time, or heretofore. This was a second writ sent out when the first was not executed. Cowell.

SICUT ME DEUS ADJUVET. Lat. So help me God. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 18, § 4.

SICUT NATURA NIL FACIT PER SALTUM, ITA NEC LEX. Co.Litt. 238. In the same way as nature does nothing by a bound, so neither does the law.

SIDDI. In the Orient, a name for marihuana. See Mariguana.

SIDE. The margin, edge, verge, or border of a surface; any one of the bounding lines of the surface. Parkman v. Freeman, 121 Me. 341, 117 A. 301, 302.

"Side" may be used in a generic sense so as to include the "front," but it also has a specific meaning which distinguishes it from "front." The word "front" as applied to a house is always specific and speaking of the "side line" of a house as "fronting" toward the street is incorrect. Howland v. Andrus, 81 N.J.Eq. 175, 86 A. 391, 393. The front of a lot is that portion opposite the rear of the lot and facing on the street, and the side is that portion adjacent to the lot or lots on either side of it. Turney v. Shriver, 269 Ill. 164, 109 N.E. 708, 709.

The party or parties collectively to a lawsuit considered in relation to his or their opponents, i. e., the plaintiff side, or the defendant side. Carr v. Davis, 159 Minn. 485, 199 N.W. 237, 239.

A province or field of jurisdiction;—said of courts. Thus, the same court is sometimes said to have different sides. An admiralty court may have an "instance side," distinct from its powers as a prize court; the "crown side," (criminal jurisdiction) is to be distinguished from the "plea side," (civil jurisdiction;) the same court may have an "equity side" and a "law side."

SIDE-BAR RULES. In English practice. There are some rules which the courts authorize their officers to grant as a matter of course without formal application being made to them in open court, and these are technically termed "side-bar rules," because formerly they were moved for by the attorneys at the side bar in court; such, for instance, was the rule to plead, which was an order or command of the court requiring a defendant to plead within a specified number of days. Such also were the rules to reply, to rejoin, and many others, the granting of which depended upon settled rules of practice rather than upon the discretion of the courts, all of which have been rendered unnecessary by statutory changes. Brown, voc. "Rule."

SIDE-KICKER. A coined expression without any standing in lexicology, which the court, as a matter of common knowledge, can say is not an uncommon vernacular or colloquial expression which may with equal propriety express a social relationship between the parties to whom it is applied, or convey the idea that they are business partners or have business interests in common. Spoon v. Sheldon, 27 Cal.App. 765, 151 P. 150, 152.

SIDE LINES. In commercial usage, lines of goods sold or businesses followed in addition to one's principal articles or occupation. Merrimac Mfg. Co. v. Bibb, 124 Ark. 189, 186 S.W. 817, Ann. Cas.1918C, 951. In mining law, the side lines of a mining claim are those which measure the extent of the claim on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface. They are not necessarily the side lines as laid down on the ground or on a map or plat; for if the claim, in its longer dimension, crosses the vein, instead of following it, the platted side lines will be treated in law as the end lines, and vice versa. Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co., 7 S.Ct. 1356, 122 U.S. 478, 30 L.Ed. 1140; Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., 18 S.Ct. 895, 171 U.S. 55, 43 L.Ed. 72.

SIDE REPORTS. A term sometimes applied to unofficial volumes or series of reports, as contrasted with those prepared by the official reporter of the court, or to collections of cases omitted from the official reports.

SIDESMEN. In ecclesiastical law. These were originally persons whom, in the ancient episcopal synods, the bishops were wont to summon out of each parish to give information of the disorders of the clergy and people, and to report heretics. In process of time they became standing officers, under the title of "synodsmen," "sidesmen," or "questmen." The whole of their duties seems now to have devolved by custom upon the church-wardens of a parish. 1 Burn. Ecc.Law, 399.

SIDEWALK. That part of a public street or highway designed for the use of pedestrians, City of Birmingham v. Shirley, 209 Ala. 305, 96 So. 214, 215; being exclusively reserved for them, and constructed somewhat differently than other portions of the street used by animals and vehicles generally, Central Life Assur. Soc. of the United States v. City of Des Moines, 185 Iowa 573, 171 N.W. 31, 32. That part of the street of a municipality which has been set apart and used for pedestrians, as distinguished from that portion set apart and used for animals and vehicles. Graham. v. Albert Lea, 48 Minn. 201, 50 N.W. 1108; McCormick v. Allegheny County, 263 Pa. 146, 106 A. 203, 204. A way for foot passengers, or a public way especially intended for pedestrians. Russo v. City of Pueblo, 63 Colo. 519, 168 P. 649, 650. A walk for foot passengers at the side of a street or road. Kohlhof v. Chicago, 192 Ill. 249, 61 N.E. 446, 85 Am.St.Rep. 335; Challiss v. Parker, 11 Kan. 391; State v. Berdetta, 73 Ind. 185, 38 Am.Rep. 117; Pequignot v. Detroit, C.C.Mich., 16 F. 212.

Generally the sidewalk is included with the gutters and roadway in the general term street. In re Burmeister, 76 N.Y. 174; Warner v. Knox, 50 Wis. 429, 7 N.W. 372; Wiles v. Hoss, 114 Ind. 371, 16 N.E. 800. But in many cases of municipal ordinances and contracts the word street is held not to include sidewalks. Barry v. City of Cloverport, 175 Ky. 548, 194 S. W. 818, 819. See, also, James v. City of Newberg, 101 Or. 616, 201 P. 212.

SIEN. An obsolete form of the word "scion," meaning offspring or descendant. Co.Litt. 123a.

SIERVO. Span. In Spanish law. A slave. Las Partidas, pt. 4, tit. 21, 1. 1.

SIETE PARTIDAS. Span. Seven parts. See Las Partidas.

SIGHT. The power of seeing; the faculty of vision or of perceiving objects; or the act of seeing, and perception of objects through the eyes. Locomotive Engineers' Mute Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Meeks, 157 Miss. 97, 127 So. 699, 703.

Presentment. Bills of exchange are frequently drawn payable at sight or certain number of days or months after sight.

When a bill of exchange is expressed to be payable "at sight," it means on presentment to the drawee. Campbell v. French, 6 Term, 212.

After sight in a bill means after acceptance; in a note, after exhibition to the maker. Dan.Neg.Instr. § 619. A bill drawn payable a certain number of days after sight, acceptance waived, must be presented to fix the time at which the bill is to become due, and the term of the bill begins to run from the date of present. 4 Montreal L. Rep. 249.

SIGHT DRAFTS OR BILLS. Those payable at sight.

SIGIL. In old English law, a seal, or a contracted or abbreviated signature used as a seal.

SIGILLUM. Lat. In old English law. A seal; originally and properly a seal impressed upon wax.

SIGILLUM EST CERA IMPRESSA, QUIA CERA SINE IMPRESSIONE NON EST SIGILLUM. A seal is a piece of wax impressed, because wax without an impression is not a seal. 3 Inst. 169.

SIGLA. Lat. In Roman law. Marks or signs of abbreviation used in writing. Cod. 1, 17, 11, 13.

SIGN. To affix one's name to a writing or instrument, for the purpose of authenticating it, or to give it effect as one's act. McCall v. Textile Industrial Institute, 189 N.C. 775, 128 S.E. 349, 353. To attach a name or cause it to be attached to a writing by any of the known methods of impressing a name on paper. In re Covington Lumber Co., D.C.Wash., 225 F. 444, 446. To affix a signature to; to ratify by hand or seal; to subscribe in one's own handwriting. Webster, Dict.; Knox's Estate, 131 Pa. 230, 18 A. 1021, 6 L.R.A. 353, 17 Am.St.Rep. 798; In re Manchester's Estate, 174 Cal. 417, 163 P. 358, 359, L.R.A.1917D, 629, Ann.Cas. 1918B, 227. See, also, Miner v. Larney, 87 N.J.L. 40, 94 A. 26, 28.

To make any mark, as upon a document, in token of knowledge, approval, acceptance, or obligation. In re Manchester's Estate, 174 Cal. 417, 163 P. 358, 360, L.R.A.1917D, 62,9, Ann.Cas.1918B, 227; Weiner v. Mullaney, 59 Cal.App.2d 620, 140 P.2d 704, 712. See, also, Pugh v. Jackson, 154 Ky. 772, 159 S.W. 600; and In re Kimmel's Estate, 278 Pa. 435, 123 A. 405, 406, 31 A.L.R. 678, with which compare In re Brennan's Estate, 244 Pa. 574, 91 A. 220, 222. See Signature.

To "sign" is merely to write one's name on paper, or declare assent or attestation by some sign or mark, and does not, like "subscribe," require that one should write at the bottom of the instrument signed. Sheehan v. Kearney, 82 Miss. 688, 21 So. 41, 35 L.R.A. 102; Robins v. Coryell, 27 Barb., N.Y., 560; James v. Patten, 6 N.Y. 9, 55 Am. Dec. 376; In re Phelan's Estate, 82 N.J.Eq. 316, 87 A. 625, 626. But compare in re Manchester's Estate, 174 Cal. 417, 163 P. 358, 359, L.R.A.1917D, 629, Ann.Cas.1918B, 227.

The word "subscribed" is more restricted than the word "signature." The word "signature" in its origin involves merely a sign, the word "subscribed" involves a writing. The signing of a written instrument has a much broader and more extended meaning than attaching one's written signature to it implies. When a person attaches his name or causes it to be attached to a writing by any of the known methods of impressing his name upon paper with the intention of signing it he is regarded as having "signed" in writing. Hagen v. Gresby, 34 N.D. 349, 159 N.W. 3, 5, L.R.A.1917B, 281.

Signing Judgment

In English practice. The signature or allowance of the proper officer of a court, obtained by the party entitled to judgment in an action, expressing generally that judgment is given in his favor, and which stands in the place of its actual delivery by the judges themselves. Steph.P1. 110, 111; French v. Pease, 10 Kan. 54. In American practice. A signing of the judgment record itself, which is done by the proper officer, on the margin of the record, opposite the entry of the judgment. 1 Burrill, Pr. 268.

SIGN MANUAL. An autograph signature; specifically, the official signature of a sovereign, chief magistrate, or the like, to an official document, as letters patent, to give validity. Webster, Diet.; Wharton, Law Diet.

English Law

The signature of the king to grants or letters patent, inscribed at the top. 2 Sharsw. Bla.Comm. 347*. The sign manual is not good unless countersigned, etc.; 9 Mod. 54. There is this difference between what the sovereign does under the sign manual and what he or she does under the great seal, viz., that the former is done as a personal act of the sovereign; the latter as an act of state. Brown.

SIGNA. The plural of signum (q. v.).

SIGNAL. A means of communication, as between vessels at sea or between a vessel and the shore. The international code of signals for the use of all nations assigns arbitrary meanings to different arrangements of flags or displays of lights.

SIGNATORIUS ANNULUS. Lat. In the civil law. A signet-ring; a seal-ring. Dig. 50, 16, 74.

SIGNATORY. A term used in diplomacy to indicate a nation which is a party to a treaty.

SIGNATURE. The act of putting down a man's name at the end of an instrument to attest its validity, the name thus written. A "signature" may be written by hand, printed, stamped, typewritten, engraved, photographed, or cut from one instrument and attached to another, and a signature lithographed on an instrument by a party is sufficient for the purpose of signing it; it being immaterial with what kind of instrument a signature is made. Smith v. Greenville County, 188 S.C. 349, 199 S.E. 416, 419. Maricopa County v. Osborn, 60 Ariz. 290, 136 P.2d 270, 274. And whatever mark, symbol, or device one may choose to employ as representative of himself is sufficient. Griffith v. Bonawitz, 73 Neb. 622, 103 N.W. 327, 339. See Sign.

Ecclesiastical Law

The name of a sort of rescript, without seal, containing the supplication, the signature of the pope or his delegate, and the grant of a pardon.

Where one who cannot write directs another to sign for him in his presence, it will be valid with or without a mark. Just v. Wise Tp., 42 Mich. 573, 4 N.W. 298.

The "signature" to a deed may be made either by the grantor affixing his own signature, or by adopting one written for him, or by making his mark, or impressing some other sign or symbol on the paper by which the signature, though written by another for him, may be identified. Lee v. Parker, 171 N.C. 144, 88 S.E. 217, 221.

SIGNET. A seal commonly used for the sign manual of the sovereign. Wharton. In Scotland, a seal by which royal warrants connected with the administration of justice were formerly authenticated.

SIGNIFICATION. In French law. The notice given of a decree, sentence, or other judicial act.

SIGNIFICAVIT. In ecclesiastical law. When this word is used alone, it means the bishop's certificate to the court of chancery in order to obtain the writ of excommunication; but, where the words "writ of significavit" are used, the meaning is the same as "writ de excommunicato capiendo." Shelf. Mar. & Div. 502. Obsolete.

SIGNIFY. To make known by signs or words; express; communicate; announce; declare. State v. Klein, 94 Wash. 212, 162 P. 52, 53.

SIGNING JUDGMENT. See Sign,

SIGNUM. Lat.

Roman and Civil Law

A sign; a mark; a seal. The seal of an instrument. Calvin.

A species of proof. By "signa" were meant those species of indicia which come more immediately under the cognizance of the senses; such as stains of blood on the person of one accused of murder, indications of terror at being charged with the offense, and the like. Best, Pres. 13, note f.

Saxon Law

The sign of a cross prefixed as a sign of assent and approbation to a charter or deed.

SILENCE. The state of a person who does not speak, or of one who refrains from speaking. In the law of estoppel, "silence" implies knowledge and an opportunity to act upon it. Pence v. Langdon, 99 U.S. 581, 25 L.Ed. 420; Stewart v. Wyoming Cattle Ranch Co., 9 S.Ct. 101, 128 U.S. 383, 32 L. Ed. 439; Chicora Fertilizer Co. v. Dunan, 91 Md. 1.44, 46 A. 347, 50 L.R.A. 401.

SILENCE, ESTOPPEL BY. It arises where person is under duty to another to speak or failure to speak is inconsistent with honest dealings. In re McArdle's Estate, 250 N.Y.S. 276, 287, 140 Misc. 257; Jones v. Kentucky Glycerine Co., 226 Ky. 676, 11 S.W.2d 713, 716; Tanenbaum Textile Co. v. Schlanger, 287 N.Y. 400, 40 N.E.2d 225, 227.

An agreement inferred from silence rests upon principle of "estoppel." Letres v. Washington Co-op. Chick Ass'n, ,8 Wash.2d 64, 111 P.2d 594, 596. Silence, to work "estoppel", must amount to bad faith. Wise v: United States, D.C.Ky., 38 F.Supp. 130, 134.

Elements or essentials of such estoppel include change of position to prejudice of person claiming estoppel, Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 Mont. 206, 76 P.2d 87, 91. Damages if the estoppel is denied, James v. Nelson, C.C.A.Alaska, -90 F.2d 910, 917; duty and opportunity to speak. Codd v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 14 Wash.2d 600, 128 P.2d 968, .971, 151 A.L.R. 316; Merry v. Garibaldi, 48 Cal.App.2d 397, 119 P.2d 768, 771. Ignorant of facts by person claiming estoppel, Cushing v. United States, D.C.Mass., 18 F.Supp. 83, 85; Nelson v. Chicago Mill & Lumber Corporation, C.C.A. Ark., 76 F.2d 17, 100 A.L.R. 87; inducing person claiming estoppel to alter his position, Brauch v. Freking, 219 Iowa 556, 258 N.W. 892; Truax, State ex rel. v. Burrows, 136 Neb. 691, 287 N.W. 178, 179; knowledge of facts and of rights by person estopped, Harvey v. Richard, 200 La. 97, 7 So.2d 674, 677; Consolidated Freight Lines v. Groenen, 10 Wash.2d 672, 117 P.2d 966, 968, 137 A.L.R. 1072; misleading of party claiming estoppel, Ridgill v. Clarendon County, 192 S.C. 321, 6 S.E.2d 766, 768; Lincoln v. Bennett, Tex.Civ.App., 135 S.W.2d 632, 636; reliance upon silence of party sought to be estopped, Mosley v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., 45 N.M. 230, 114 P.2d 740, 751. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Talley, C.C.A.Iowa, 72 F.2d 715, 718; willful or culpable silence in absence of duty to speak. Lencioni v. Fidelity Trust & Savings Bank of Fresno, 95 Cal.App. 490, 273 P. 103, 106; Utah State Building Commission for Use and Benefit of Mountain States Supply Co. v. Great American Indemnity Co., 105 Utah 11, 140 P.2d 763, 771, 772.

SILENCE SHOWS CONSENT. 6 Barb. (N.Y.) 28, 35.

SILENT LEGES INTER ARMA. The power of law is suspended during war. Bacon; 4 Inst. 70.

SILENTIARIUS. In English law. One of the privy council; also an usher, who sees good rule and silence kept in court. Wharton.

SILK. Fine, soft thread produced by various species of caterpillars, etc. Lowder v. Union Transfer Co. of San Francisco, 79 Cal.App. 598, 250 P. 703, 704.

Under a statute referring to silk in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, any fabric which contains silk will not necessarily be included. See 28 L.J.C.P. 265; 33 L.J. Ex. 187.

SILK GOWN, Used especially of the gowns worn in England by king's counsel; hence, "to take silk" means to attain the rank of king's counsel. Mozley & Whitley.

SILVA. Lat. In the civil law. Wood; a wood.

SILVA CIEDUA. In the civil law. That kind of wood which was kept for the purpose of being cut.

In English law. Underwood; coppice wood. 2 Inst. 642; Cowell. All small wood and under timber, and likewise timber when cut down, under twenty years' growth; titheable wood. 3 Salk. 347. See, also, Sylva Cledua.

SILVER. Coin made of silver; silver money; money (in general). Webster, Diet.; Cook v. State, 130 Ark. 90, 196 S.W. 922, 924.

SILVER SALT. A name applied commercially to anthraquinone sulphoacid, a coal tar product. Newport Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 115, 116.

SIMILAR. Nearly corresponding; resembling in many respects; somewhat like; having a general likeness. Scott v. State, 107 Ohio St. 475, 141 N.E. 19, 23; Greenbaum v. De Jong, 166 N.Y.S. 1042, 1044; People v. Standard Home Co., 59 Colo. 355, 148 P. 869.

Also, sometimes, exactly like; identical; exactly corresponding (at least in all essential partiedlars). Fletcher v. Interstate Chemical Co., 94 N.J.Law, 332, 110 A. 709; Stowell v. Blanchard, 122 Me. 368, 119 A. 866, 868; Commercial Nat. Bank of Checotah v. Phillips, 61 Okl. 179, 160 P. 920, 921. Thus, a statutory provision in relation to "previous conviction of a similar offense" may mean conviction of an offense identical in kind. Com. v. Fontain, 127 Mass. 454.

SIMILAR DESCRIPTION. Such words as used in a tariff act import that the goods are similar in product and adapted to similar uses; not necessarily that they have been produced by similar methods of manufacture. Greenleaf v. Goodrich, 1 Hask. 586, F.Cas. No. 5,778.

SIMILITER. Lat. In pleading. Likewise; the like. The name of the short formula used either at the end of pleadings or by itself, expressive of the acceptance of an issue of fact tendered by the opposite party; otherwise termed a "joinder in issue." Steph.Pl. 57, 237. See Solomons v. Chesley, 57 N.H. 163; 2 Saund. 319b; Shaw v. Redmond, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 32. The plaintiff's reply, that, as the defendant has put himself upon the country, he, the plaintiff, does the like. It occurs only when the plea has the conclusion to the country, and its effect is to join the plaintiff in the issue thus tendered by the defendant. Co.Litt. 126a.

SIMILITUDO LEGALIS EST CASUUM DIVERSORUM INTER SE COLLATORUM SIMILIS RATIO; QUOD IN UNO SIMILIUM VALET, VALEBIT IN ALTERO. DISSIMILIUM, DISSDIILIS EST RATIO. Legal similarity is a similar reason which governs various cases when compared with each other; for what avails in one similar case will avail in the other. Of things dissimilar, the reason is dissimilar. Co.Litt. 191; Benj.Sales 379.

SIMONIA EST VOLUNTAS SIVE DESIDERIUM EMENDI VEL VENDENDI SPIRITUALIA VEL SPIRITUALIBUS ADHIERENTIA. CONTRACTUS EX TURPI CAUSA ET CONTRA BONOS MORES. Hob. 167. Simony is the will or desire of buying or selling spiritualities, or things pertaining thereto. It is a contract founded on a bad cause, and against morality.

SIMONY. In English ecclesiastical law. The corrupt presentation of any one to an ecclesiastical benefice for money, gift, or reward. 2 Bl.Comm. 278. An unlawful contract for presenting a clergyman to a benefice. The buying or selling of ecclesiastical preferments or of things pertaining to the ecclesiastical order. Hob. 167. See State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 58 N.W. 728, 24 L.R.A. 68.

An unlawful agreement to receive a temporal reward for something holy or spiritual. Code 1, 3, 31; Ayliffe, Parerg. 496.

Giving or receiving any material advantage in return for spiritual promotion, whether such advantage be actually received or only stipulated for. Jenks, Mod.Land L. 220.

SIMPLA. Lat. In the civil law. The single value of a thing. Dig. 21, 2, 37, 2.

SIMPLE. Pure; unmixed; not compounded; not aggravated; not evidenced by sealed writing or record.

As to simple "Assault," "Average," "Battery," "Blockade," "Bond," "Confession," "Contract," "Contract Debt," "Deposit," "Imprisonment," "Interest," "Larceny," "Obligation," "Tool," "Trust," and "Warrandice," see those titles.

SIMPLE SENTENCE. In rhetoric, one in which only one principal statement is made, even though there be adverbial phrases modifying the predicate. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson, Tex. Civ.App., 201 S.W. 247, 251.

SIMPLEX. Lat. Simple; single; pure; unqualified.

Charta Simplex

A deed-poll or single deed. Jacob, Law Diet.

Simplex Beneficium

In ecclesiastical law. A minor dignity in a cathedral or collegiate church, or any other ecclesiastical benefice, as distinguished from a cure of souls. It may therefore be held with any parochial cure, without coming under the prohibitions against pluralities. Wharton.

Simplex Dictum

In old English practice. Simple averment; mere assertion without proof.

Simplex Justitiarius

In old records. Simple justice. A name sometimes given to a puisne justice. Cowell.

Simplex Loquela

In old English practice. Simple speech; the mere declaration or plaint of a plaintiff.

Simplex Obligatio

A single obligation; a bond without a condition. 2 Bl.Comm. 340.

Simplex Peregrinatio

In old English law. Simple pilgrimage. Fleta, l. 4, c. 2, § 2.

SIMPLEX COMMENDATIO NON OBLIGAT. Mere recommendation [of an article] does not bind, [the vendor of it.] Dig. 4, 3, 37; 2 Kent, Comm. 485; Broom, Max. 781; 4 Taunt. 488; 16 Q.B. 282, 283; Cro.Jac. 4; 2 Allen, Mass., 214; 5 Johns, N.Y., 354; 4 Barb., N.Y., 95.

SIMPLEX ET PURA DONATIO DICI POTERIT, UBI NULLA EST ADJECTA CONDITIO NEC MODUS. A gift is said to be pure and simple when no condition or qualification is annexed. Bract. 1.

SIMPLICITA EST LEGIBUS AMICA; ET NIMIA SUBTILITAS IN JURE REPROBATUR. 4 Coke, 8. Simplicity is favorable to the laws; and too much subtlety in law is to be reprobated.

SIMPLICITER. Lat. Simply; without ceremony; in a summary manner.

Directly; immediately; as distinguished from inferentially or indirectly.

By itself; by its own force; per se.

SIMUL CUM. Lat. Together with. In actions of tort and in prosecutions, where several persons united in committing the act complained of, some of whom are known and others not, it is usual to allege in the declaration or indictment that the persons therein named did the injury in question, "together with (simul cum) other persons unknown." In cases of riots, it is usual to charge that A B, together with others unknown, did the act complained of. 2 Chitty, Cr.Law 488; 2 Salk. 593.

When a party sued with another pleads separately, the plea is generally entitled in the name of the person pleading, adding, "sued with _____," naming the other party. When this occurred, it was, in the old phraseology, called pleading with a simul cum.

SIMUL ET SEMEL. Lat. Together and at one time.

SIMULATE. To assume the mere appearance of, without the reality; to assume the signs or indications of, falsely; to counterfeit; feign; imitate; pretend. Harryman v. Harryman, 93 Kan. 223, 144 P. 262, 265, Ann.Cas.1915B, 369. To engage, usually with the co-operation or connivance of another person, in an act or series of acts, which are apparently transacted in good faith, and intended to be followed by their ordinary legal consequences, but which in reality conceal a fraudulent purpose of the party to gain thereby some advantage to which he is not entitled, or to injure, delay, or defraud others. See Cartwright v. Bamberger, 90 Ala. 405, 8 So. 264.

SIMULATED CONTRACT. One which, though clothed in concrete form, has no existence in fact.

It may at any time and at the demand of any person in interest be declared a sham and may be ignored by creditors of the apparent vendor. Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. v. Louisiana Ave. Realty Co., 143 La. 962, 79 So. 554, 556.

SIMULATED FACT. In the law of evidence. A fabricated fact; an appearance given to things by human device, with a view to deceive and mislead. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 131.

SIMULATED JUDGMENT. One which is apparently rendered in good faith, upon an actual debt, and intended to be collected by the usual process of law, but which in reality is entered by the fraudulent contrivance of the parties, for the purpose of giving to one of them an advantage to which he is not entitled, or of defrauding or delaying third persons.

SIMULATED SALE. One which has all the appearance of an actual sale in good faith, intended to transfer the ownership of property for a consideration, but which in reality covers a collusive design of the parties to put the property beyond the reach of creditors, or proceeds from some other fraudulent purpose. Moran v. Johnson, La. App., 151 So. 139, 140.

It results when parties execute a formal act of sale of a thing for which no price is paid or is intended to be paid, and such sale has no legal effect and no title is transferred thereby. If there exists an actual consideration for transfer evidenced by alleged act of sale, no matter how inadequate it be, the transaction is not a "simulated sale", and, even though it be charged to be in fraud of vendor's creditors, such transfer cannot be set aside as a simulation although it may be subject to annulment on the ground of fraud or the giving of undue preference. Caster v. Miller, D.C.La., 39 F.Supp. 120, 123.

SIMULATIO LATENS. Lat. A species of feigned disease, in which disease is actually present, but where the symptoms are falsely aggravated, and greater sickness is pretended than really exists. Beck, Med.Jur. 3.

SIMULATION. Assumption of appearance which was feigned, false, deceptive, or counterfeit. United States v. Peppa, D.C.Cal., 13 F.Supp. 669, 670.

In the civil law. Misrepresentation or concealment of the truth; as where parties pretend to perform a transaction different from that in which they really are engaged. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 181. A feigned, pretended act, one which assumes the appearance without the reality and, being entirely without effect, it is held not to have existed, and, for that reason, it may be disregarded or attacked collaterally by any interested person. Freeman v. Woods, La.App., 1 So.2d 134, 136.

In French law, Collusion; a fraudulent arrangement between two or more persons to give a false or deceptive appearance to a transaction in which they engage.

SIMULTANEOUS. A word of comparison meaning that two or more occurrences or happenings are identical in time. Brush.Electric Co. v. Western Electric Co., C.C.I11., 69 F. 240, 244.

The word "simultaneous," as used in a patent claim, does not imply absolute synchronism from beginning to end, but has some elasticity. Events may be substantially or relatively simultaneous, although not absolutely so. Westinghouse Mach. Co. v. C. & G. Cooper Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 245 F. 463, 468.

SINCE. This word's proper signification is "after," Keller v. Keller, 121 Kan. 520, 247 P. 433, 435, 49 A.L.R. 113, and in its apparent sense it includes the whole period between the event and the present time. Jones v. Bank, 79 Me. 195, 9 A. 22. "Since" a day named, does not necessarily include that day. Monroe v. Acworth, 41 N.H. 201.

SINDERESIS. "A natural power of the soul, set in the highest part thereof, moving and stirring it to good, and abhorring evil. And therefore sinderesis never sinneth nor erreth. And this sinderesis our Lord put in man, to the intent that the order of things should be observed. And therefore sinderesis is called by some men the 'law of reason,' for it ministereth the principles of the law of reason, the which be in every man by nature, in that he is a reasonable creature," Doct. & Stud. 39.

SINE. Lat. Without.

SINE ANIMO REVERTENDI. Without the intention of returning. 1 Kent, Comm. 78.

SINE ASSENSU CAPITULI. Without the consent of the chapter. In old English practice. A writ which lay where a dean, bishop, prebendary, abbot, prior, or master of a hospital aliened the lands holden in the right of his house, abbey, or priory, without the consent of the chapter; in which cases his successor might have this writ. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 194, I; Cowell.

SINE CONSIDERATIONE CURVE. Without the judgment of the court. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 47, § 13.

SINE DECRETO. Without authority of a judge. 2 Kames, Eq. 115.

SINE DIE. Without day; without assigning a day for a further meeting or hearing.

Hence, a final adjournment; final dismissal of a cause. Quod eat sine die, that he go without day; the old form of a judgment for the defendant, i. e., a judgment discharging the defendant from any further appearance in court.

SINE HOC QUOD. Without this, that. A technical phrase in old pleading, of the same import with the phrase "absque hoc quod."

SINE NUMERO. Without stint or limit. A term applied to common. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 19, § 8.

SINE PROLE. Without issue. Used in genealogical tables, and often abbreviated into "s. p."

SINE QUA NON. Without which not. That without which the thing cannot be. An indispensable requisite or condition.

SINE POSSESSIONE USUCAPIO PROCEDERE NON POTEST. There can be no prescription without possession.

SINECURE. In ecclesiastical law. When a rector of a parish neither resides nor performs duty at his benefice, but has a vicar under him endowed and charged with the cure thereof, this is termed a "sinecure." Brown.

An ecclesiastical benefice without cure of souls.

In popular usage, the term denotes an office which yields a revenue to the incumbent, but makes little or no demand upon his time or attention.

SINGLE. One only; being a unit; alone; one which is abstracted from others. State ex rel. Nelson v. Board of Com'rs of Yellowstone County, 111 Mont. 395, 109 P.2d 1106, 1107.

Unitary; detached; individual; affecting only one person; containing only one part, article, condition, or covenant. State v. Patch, 64 Mont. 565, 210 P. 748, 750. Unmarried. In re Rudman's Estate, 244 Pa. 248, 90 A. 566, 567. The term is applicable to a widow; Crum v. Brock, 136 Miss. 858, 101 So. 704, 705, 12 L.J.W.C. 74; and occasionally even to a married woman living apart from her husband; 12 Q.B.D. 681.

Sometimes, principal; dominating. Attorney General v. Marx, 203 Mich. 331, 168 N.W. 1005, 1006.

As to single "Adultery," "Bill," "Bond," "Cornbat," "Demise," "Entry," "Escheat," "Obligation," "Original," and "Tract," see those titles.

SINGLE CREDITOR. One having a lien only on a single fund;—distinguished from double creditor, who is one having a lien on two funds. Newby v. Fox, 90 Kan. 317, 133 P. 890, 47 L.R.A.,N.S., 302.

SINGLE JUROR CHARGE. The charge that, if there is any juror who is not reasonably satisfied from the evidence that plaintiff should recover a verdict against the defendant, jury cannot find against defendant. Greyhound Corp. v. Brown, 113 So.2d 916, 919, 269 Ala. 520; Southern Ry. Co. v. Stallings, 107 So.2d 873, 884, 268 Ala. 463.

SINGULAR. Each; as in the expression "all and singular." Also, individual. In grammar, the singular is used to express only one. In law, the singular frequently includes the plural. Under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 21, § 4, words in acts of parliament importing the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa, unless the contrary is expressly provided. Whart. Lex.

As to singular "Successor," and "Title," see those titles.

SINGULI IN SOLIDUM TENENTUR. Each is bound for the whole. 6 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 242, 252.

SINKING FUND. See Fund.

SIPESSOCUA. In old English law. A franchise, liberty, or hundred.

SIST, v. In Scotch practice. To stay proceedings. Bell.

SIST, n. In Scotch practice. A stay or suspension of proceedings; an order for a stay of proceedings. Bell.

SISTER. A woman who has the same father and mother with another, or has one of them only. In the first case, she is called sister, simply; in the second, half-sister. Wood v. Mitchell, 61 How. Prac., N.Y., 48. The word is the correlative of "brother."

SISTER IN LAW. Sister of one's spouse; wife of one's brother.

SIT. To hold court; to do any act of a judicial nature. Russell v. Crook County Court, 75 Or. 168, 146 P. 806, 808. To hold a session, as of a court, grand jury, legislative body, etc. To be formally organized and proceeding with the transaction of business. Allen v. State, 102 Ga. 619, 29 S.E. 470.

SITE. A plot of ground suitable or set apart for some specific use. Victoria v. Our Lord's Church, 22 B.C. 174, 175. A seat or ground plot. Miller v. Alliance Ins. Co. of Boston, C.C.N.Y., 7 F. 649, 651. The term does not of itself necessarily mean a place or tract of land fixed by definite boundaries. Petersburg School Dist. of Nelson County v. Peterson, 14 N.D. 344, 103 N.W. 756, 758. See, also, Scite.

SITHCUNDMAM. In Saxon law. The high constable of a hundred.

SITIO GANADO MAYOR. (Sometimes written, also, sitio de ganado mayor.) Sp. In Spanish and Mexican land law, a tract of land in the form of a square, each side of which measures 5,000 varas; the distance from the center of each sitio to each of its sides should be measured directly to the cardinal points of the compass, and should be 2,500 varas. U. S. v. Cameron, 3 Ariz. 100, 21 P. 177. Equivalent to 4338.464 acres. Ainsa v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 544, 161 U.S. 219, 40 L.Ed. 673. A square league. U. S. v. Sutherland, 19 How. 363, 364, 15 L.Ed. 666.

SITIO DE GANADO MENOR, or sheep ranch, is equivalent to 1928.133 acres. Ainsa v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 544, 161 U.S. 219, 40 L.Ed. 673.

SITTING. In English law. The part of the year in which judicial business is transacted. A session or term of court; usually plural. People v. Higgins, 173 Misc. 96, 16 N.Y.S.2d 302, 310.

SITTINGS AFTER TERM. Sittings in Banc after term were held by authority of the St. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 32. The courts were at liberty to transact business at their sittings as in term-time, but the custom was to dispose only of cases standing for argument or judgment. Wharton.

SITTINGS IN BANK, OR BANC. The sittings which the respective superior courts of common law hold during every term for the purpose of hearing and determining the various matters of law agreed before them.

They are so called in contradistinction to the sittings at nisi prius which are held for purpose of trying issues of fact.

In America, the practice is essentially the same, all the judges, or a majority of them usually, sitting in banc and but one holding the court for jury trials; and the term has the same application here as in England.

SITTINGS IN CAMERA. See Chambers.

SITUATE. To give a specific position to; fi a site for; to place in certain position; sub' t definite conditions or circumstances; (rare) having a fixed place or a relative position; (archaic) residing; dwelling. Century Ins. Co. v. Glidden Buick Corporation, 174 Misc. 149, 20 N.Y.S.2d 108, 112.

SITUATION. State of being placed; posture. Jones v. Tuck, 48 N.C. 202, 205. Position as regards conditions and circumstances; state; condition. Bellomy v. Bruce, 303 Ill.App. 349, 25 N. E.2d 428, 433.

SITUATION OF DANGER. Within the meaning of the last clear chance rule as applicable to a plaintiff operating a moving vehicle is reached only when plaintiff, in moving toward path of an on-coming train or vehicle has reached a position from which he cannot escape by ordinary care, and it is not enough that plaintiff was merely approaching a position of danger. Johnson v. Sacramento Northern Ry., 54 Cal.App.2d 528, 129 P. 2d 503, 506.

SITUS. Lat. Situation; location. Smith v. Bank, 5 Pet. 524, 8 L.Ed. 212; Heston v. Finley, 118 Kan. 717, 236 P. 841, 843; Avery v. Interstate Grocery Co., 118 Okl. 268, 248 P. 340, 341, 52 A.L.R. 528. Site; position; the place where a thing is considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 393, 16 L.R.A. 729; Bullock v. Guilford, 59 Vt. 516, 9 A. 360; Fenton v. Edwards, 126 Cal. 43, 58 P. 320, 46 L.R.A. 832, 77 Am.St.Rep. 141.

It imports fixedness of location. In its natural signification the term is applicable only to landed estates which are really fixed and immovable. Conventionally, it is applied to personal property as annexing it to the individual to whom it belongs; its situs being primarily in legal contemplation where the owner happens to be at any time. It is the exception that personal property has any other situs than that of the person of its owner. Zanes v. Mercantile Bank & Trust Co. of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 49 S.W.2d 922, 926.

Generally, personal property has its taxable "situs" in that state where owner of it is domiciled. Smith v. Lummus, 149 Fla. 660, 6 So.2d 625, 627, 628.

"Situs" of a trust means place of performance of active duties of trustee. Campbell v. Albers, 313 Ill.App. 152, 39 N.E.2d 672, 676.

SIVE TOTA RES EVINCATUR, SIVE PARS, HABET REGRESSUM EMPTOR IN VENDITOREM. The purchaser who has been evicted in whole or in part has an action against the vendor. Dig. 21, 2, 1; Broom, Max. 768.

SIX ACTS, THE. The acts passed in 1819, for the pacification of England, are so called. They, in effect, prohibited the training of persons to arms; authorized general searches and seizure of arms; prohibited meetings of more than fifty persons for the discussion of public grievances; repressed with heavy penalties and confiscations seditious and blasphemous libels; and checked pamphleteering by extending the newspaper stamp duty to political pamphlets. Brown.

SIX ARTICLES, LAWS OF. A celebrated act entitled "An act for abolishing diversity of opinion," (31 Hen. VIII, c. 14,) enforcing conformity under the severest penalties on six of the strongest points in the Roman Catholic religion: Transubstantiation, communion in one kind, the celibacy of the clergy, monastic vows, the sacrifice of the mass, and auricular confession. 4 Steph.Com. 183; 4 Reeve, Eng.Law, 378. Repealed by 1 Eliz. c. 1.

SIX CLERKS. In English practice. Officers of the court of chancery, who received and filed all bills, answers, replications, and other papers, signed office copies of pleadings, examined and signed dockets of decrees, etc., and had the care of all records in their office. Holthouse; 3 Bl. Comm. 443. They were abolished by St. 5 Vict. c. 5.

SIX-DAY LICENSE. In English law. A liquor license, containing a condition that the premises in respect of which the license is granted shall be closed during the whole of Sunday, granted under section 49 of the licensing act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94.)

SIXHINDI. Servants of the same nature as rod knights, (q. v.) Anc. Inst. Eng.

SKELETON BILL. One drawn, indorsed, or accepted in blank.

SKELETON BILL OF EXCEPTIONS. A bill of exceptions containing calls for the insertion by the clerk of the necessary documents. Padgett v. Gulfport Fertilizer Co., 11 Ala.App. 366, 66 So. 866, 867.

SKID, n. A simple contrivance used for handling heavy articles under many conditions. Beckman v. Anheuser Busch Brewing Ass'n, 98 Mo.App. 555, 72 S.W. 710, 711.

SKID, v. As used in connection with operation of motor vehicle on roadway means that car slips sideways on road and rear wheels fail to grip roadway. Correira v. Boston Motor Tours, 270 Mass. 88, 169 N.E. 775, 776.

SKILL. Practical and familiar knowledge of the principles and processes of an art, science, or trade, combined with the ability to apply them in practice in a proper and approved manner and with readiness and dexterity. Akridge v. Noble, 114 Ga. 949, 41 S.E. 78; Haworth v. Severs Mfg. Co., 87 Iowa 765, 51 N.W. 68.

Reasonable Skill

Such skill as is ordinarily possessed and exercised by persons of common capacity, engaged in the same business or employment. Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Metc., Mass., 26.

SKILLED WITNESSES. One possessing knowledge and experience as to particular subject which are not acquired by ordinary persons. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Little, 189 Ark. 640, 74 S.W.2d 777, 780.

Such witness is allowed to give evidence on matters of opinion and abstract fact.

SKINPOP. An intramuscular injection or narcotic drug. Broadway Angels, Inc., v. Wilson, 125 N.Y.S.2d 546, 548, 282 App.Div. 643.

SLACKER. A person who was derelict in the performance of his duty toward his country in the world war. Dimmitt v. Breakey, C.C.A.Tex., 267 F. 792; Choctaw Coal & Mining Co. v. Lillich, 204 Ala. 533, 86 So. 383, 385, 11 A.L.R. 1014.

SLADE. In old records. A long, flat, and narrow piece or strip of ground. Paroch. Antiq. 465.

SLAINS. See Letters of Slains.

SLANDER. The speaking of base and defamatory words tending to prejudice another in his reputation, office, trade, business, or means of livelihood. Little Stores v. Isenberg, 26 Tenn.App. 357, 172 S.W.2d 13, 16. Harbison v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 327 Mo. 440, 37 S.W.2d 609, 616. Oral defamation; the speaking of false and malicious words concerning another, whereby injury results to his reputation. Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U.S. 227, 23 L.Ed. 308; Fredrickson v. Johnson, 60 Minn. 337, 62 N.W. 388; Johnston v. Savings Trust Co. of St. Louis, Mo., 66 S.W.2d 113, 114; Lloyd v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.7, 55 F.2d 842, 844. An essential element of "slander" is that slanderous words be spoken in presence of another than person slandered, and publication is always material and issuable fact in action for slander. Tucker v. Pure Oil Co. of Carolinas, 191 S.C. 60, 3 S.E.2d 547, 549. Hence an oral defamation, heard only by one who does not understand the language in which it is spoken, is not "slander". Allen v. American Indemnity Co., 63 Ga. App. 894, 12 S.E.2d 127, 128.

"Libel" and "slander" are both methods of defamation; the former being expressed by print, writing, pictures, or signs; the latter by oral expressions. Ajouelo v. Auto-Soler Co., 61 Ga.App. 216, 6 S.E.2d 415, 418.

SLANDER OF TITLE. A false and malicious statement, oral or written, made in disparagement of a person's title to real or personal property, or of some right of his causing him special damage. Reliable Mfg. Co. v. Vaughan Novelty Mfg. Co., 294 Ill.App. 601, 13 N.E.2d 518; Cawrse v. Signal Oil Co., 164 Or, 666, 103 P.2d 729, 730, 129 A.L.R. 174. "Malice" as essential element of "slander of title" purports an intention to vex, injure or annoy another person. Cawrse v. Signal Oil Co., 164 Or. 666, 103 P.2d 729, 730, 129 A.L.R. 174.

An action for "slander of title" is maintainable only by one who possesses an estate or interest in the property. Allison v. Berry, 316 Ill.App. 261, 44 N.E.2d 929, 934.

SLANDERER. One who maliciously and without reason imputes a crime or fault to another of which he is innocent. See Slander.

SLANDEROUS PER SE. Slanderous in itself. Words falsely spoken of another are slanderous per se only when they impute the commission of a crime involving moral turpitude, impute the existence of a loathsome and infectious disease, impute unfitness to perform the duties of an office or employment, prejudice in a profession or trade, or tend to disinherit him. Smallwood v. York, 163 Ky. 139, 173 S.W. 380, 381, L.R.A.1915D, 578; Nelson v. Rosenberg, 135 Neb. 34, 280 N.W. 229. Words which are slanderous without proof of special damages. Simons v. Harris, 215 Iowa 479, 245 N.W. 875, 876.

To constitute slander "per se," the published statement must be susceptible of but one meaning. Tucker v. Wallace, 90 Mont. 359, 3 P.2d 404, 405.

SLAVE. A person who is wholly subject to the will of another; one who has no freedom of action, but whose person and services are wholly under the control of another. Webster; Anderson v. Salant, 38 R.I. 463, 96 A. 425, 428, L.R.A.1916D, 651.

One who is under the power of a master, and who belongs to him; so that the master may sell and dispose of his person, of his industry, and of his labor, without his being able to do anything, have anything, or acquire anything, but what must belong to his master. Civ.Code La. 1838, art. 35.

SOCA. A seigniory or lordship, enfranchised by the king, with liberty of holding a court of his socmen or socagers; e., his tenants.

SOCAGE. A species of tenure, in England, whereby the tenant held certain lands in consideration of certain inferior services of husbandry to be performed by him to the lord of the fee. In its most general and extensive signification, a tenure by any certain and determinate service. And in this sense it is by the ancient writers constantly put in opposition to tenure by chivalry or knight-service, where the render was precarious and uncertain. Socage is of two sorts,—free socage, where the services are not only certain, but honorable; and villein socage, where the services, though certain, are of baser nature. Such as hold by the former tenure are also called in Glanvil and other authors by the name of *"liberi sokeman*ni," or tenants in free socage. By the statute 12 Car. 2, c. 24, all the tenures by knight-service were, with one or two immaterial exceptions, converted into free and common socage. Cowell; Bract. 1. 2, c. 35; 2 B1.Comm. 79; Flata, lib. 3, c. 14, § 9; Litt. § 117; Glan. 1. 3, c. 7.

SOCER. Lat. In the civil law. A wife's father; a father-in-law. Calvin.

SOCIAL CLUBS. Within federal statute imposing tax on dues and initiation fees of such clubs, clubs whose social features are a material part of their activities and necessary to their existence, and not merely incidental. Transportation Club of San Francisco v. United States, Ct.C1., 17 F.Supp. 201, 205.

SOCIAL CONTRACT, or COMPACT. In political philosophy, a term applied to the theory of the origin of society associated chiefly with the names of Hobbes, Locke and Rousseau, though it can be traced back to the Greek Sophists. Rousseau (Contract Social) held that in the pre-social state man was unwarlike and timid. Laws resulted from the combination of men who agreed, for mutual protection, to surrender individual freedom of action. Government must therefore rest on the consent of the governed. Encycl. Br.

SOCIAL INSURANCE. Covers insurance referred to under the head: Unemployment, old age pensions, mothers' and orphans' pensions, sickness, etc. Smythe v. Home Life & Accident Ins. Co., 134 La. 368, 64 So. 142, 143.

SOCIAL SETTLEMENT. The term as applied to organizations engaged in charitable or philanthropic work, implies a fixed locality to be benefited by supplying moral, physical, and educational help to the poor and needy. In re Young Women's Christian Ass'n, Sup., 141 N.Y.S. 260, 261.

SOCIALISM. Any theory or system of social organization which would abolish, entirely or in great part, the individual effort and competition on which modern society rests, and substitute for it co-operative action, would introduce a more perfect and equal distribution of the products of labor, and would make land and capital, as the instruments and means of production, the joint possession of the members of the community.

SOCIDA. In civil law. The name of a contract by which one man delivers to another, either for a small recompense or for a part of the profits, certain animals on condition that if any of them perish they shall be replaced by the bailee or he shall pay their value.

A contract of hiring, with the condition that the bailee takes upon him the risk of the loss of the thing hired. Wolff § 638.

SOCIEDAD. In Spanish law. Partnership. Schm. Civil Law, 153, 154.

SOCIEDAD ANONIMA. In Spanish and Mexican law. A business corporation. "By the corporate name, the shareholders' names are unknown to the world; and, so far as their connection with the ʸorporationis concerned, their own names may be said to be anonymous, that is, nameless. Hence the derivation of the term 'anonymous' as applied to a body of persons associated together in the form of a company to transact any given business under a company name which does not disclose any of their own." Hall, Mex. Law, § 749.

SOCIEDAD DE GANANCIALES. A Cuban law. It exists between husband and wife and is literally an association for profit. The underlying purpose of such associations is that the spouses may each contribute to a common stock, the wife her dowry, the husband his capital, the gains from those as well as from their joint labors, to be shared equally. On dissolution of the association, ordinarily by death, the distribution is as follows: First the wife gets back her dowry and "parapherna"; second, the debts of the "sociedad" are paid; and the husband's contribution, "capital," is returned. The remainder is profits, "gananciales," and is divided equally between the spouses after restoring any losses to their contributed property. Sanchez v. Bowers, C.C.A.N.Y., 70 F.2d 715, 716, 718.

SOCIETAS. Lat. In the civil law. Partnership; a partnership; the contract of partnership. Inst. 3, 26. A contract by which the goods or labor of two or more are united in a common stock, for the sake of sharing in the gain. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 18, no. 12.

SOCIETAS LEONINA. That kind of society or partnership by which the entire profits belong to some of the partners, in exclusion of the rest. So called in allusion to the fable of the lion, who, having entered into partnership with other animals for the purpose of hunting, appropriated all the prey to himself. Wharton.

SOCIETAS NAVALIS. A naval partnership; an ,association of vessels; a number of ships pursuing their voyage in company, for purposes of mutual protection.

SOCIETE. Fr. In French law. Partnership. See Commendam.

SOCIETE ANONYME. In French law originally a partnership conducted in the name of one of the members; the others were strictly secret partners. To creditors of the firm they came into no relation and under no liability. An association where the liability of all the partners is limited. It had in England until lately no other name than that of "chartered company," meaning thereby a joint-stock company whose shareholders, by a charter from the crown, or a special enactment of the legislature, stood exempted from any liability for the debts of the concern, beyond the amount ,of their subscriptions. 2 Mill, Pol. Econ. 485.

SOCIETE D'ACQUETS. A written contract between husband and wife to regard as community property only those things which are acquired during the marriage.

SOCIETE EN COMMANDITE. In Louisiana. A partnership formed by a contract by which one person or partnership agrees to furnish another person or partnership a certain amount, either in property or money, to be employed by the person or partnership to whom it is furnished, in his or their own name or firm, on condition of receiving a share in the profits, in the proportion determined by the contract, and of being liable to losses and expenses to the amount furnished and no more. Civ.Code La. art. 2839.

SOCIETE EN NOM COLLECTIF. A partnership in which all the members are jointly and severally liable.

SOCIETE EN PARTICIPATION. A joint adventure.

SOCIETE PAR ACTIONS. A joint stock company.

SOCIETY. An association or company of persons (generally unincorporated) united together by mutual consent, in order to deliberate, determine, and act jointly for some common purpose. In a wider sense, the community or public; the people in general. Gilmer v. Stone, 7 S.Ct. 689, 120 U.S. 586, 30 L.Ed. 734.

Within rule that husband is entitled to damages for loss of wife's "society" through wrongful injury means such capacities for usefulness, aid, and comfort as a wife as she possessed at the time of the injuries. Homan v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 335 Mo. 30, 70 S.W.2d 869.

Civil society—usually, a state, nation, or body politic. Rutherforth, Inst. c. 1, 2.

SOCII MEI SOCIUS MEUS SOCIUS NON EST. The partner of my partner is not my partner. Dig. 50, 17, 47, 1.

SOCIOPATHIC PERSONALITY. See Psychopath.

SOCIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A partner.

SOCMAN. A socager.

Free Socmen. In old English law. Tenants in free socage. Glanv. Lib. 3, c. 7; 2 Bl.Comm. 79.

SOCMANRY. Free tenure by socage.

SOCNA. A privilege, liberty, or franchise. Cowell.

SOCOME. A custom of grinding corn at the lord's mill. Cowell. Bond-socome is where the tenants are bound to it. Blount.

SODOMITE. One who has been guilty of sodomy.

SODOMY. A carnal copulation by human beings with each other against nature, or with a beast. Strum v. State, 168 Ark. 1012, 272 S.W. 359. State v. Young, 140 Or. 228, 13 P.2d 604, 607.

This term is often defined in statutes and judicial decisions as meaning "the crime against nature," the "crimen innominatum," or as carnal copulation, against the order of nature, by man with man, or, in the same unnatural manner, with woman or with a beast. See Code Ga.1882, § 4352 (Penn.Code 1910, § 373) ; Honselman v. People, 168 111. 172, 48 N.E. 304. But, strictly speaking, it should be used only as equivalent to "pederasty," that is, the sexual act as performed by a man upon the person of another man or a boy by penetration of the anus. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am.Dec. 331. The term might also, without any great violence to its original meaning, be so extended as to cover the same act when performed in the same manner by a man upon the person of a woman. Another possible method of unilateral sexual connection, by penetration of the mouth (penem in orem alii immittere, vel penem alii in orem recipere) is not properly called "sodomy," but "fellation." That this does not constitute sodomy within the meaning of a statute is held in Com. v. Poindexter, Ky., 118 S.W. 943; Lewis v. State, 36 Tex. Cr.R. 37, 35 S.W. 372, 61 Am.St.Rep. 831; but a greater number of jurisdictions hold otherwise. See State v. Farris, 189 Iowa, 505, 178 N.W. 361, 362 ; Glover v. State, 179 Ind. 459, 101 N.E. 629, 630, L.R.A.,N.S., 473; White v. State, 136 Ga. 158. 71 S.E. 135; State v. Start, 65 Or. 178, 132 P. 512, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 266. On the other hand bestiality is the carnal copulation of a human being with a brute, or animal of the sub-human orders of the opposite sex. It is not identical with sodomy, nor is it a form of sodomy, though the two terms are often confused in legal writings and sometimes in statutes. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am.Dec. 331. Buggery is a term rarely used in statutes, but apparently including both sodomy (in the widest sense) and bestiality as above defined. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am.Dec. 331; Com. v. J., 21 Pa.Co. et. R. 625.

SOFT DRINK PARLOR. A place where soft drinks are sold and drunk on premises. People v. De Geovanni, 326 Ill. 230, 157 N.E. 195, 197.

SOIL. The surface, or suface-covering of the land, not including minerals beneath it or grass or plants growing upon it. But in a wider (and more usual) sense, the term is equivalent to "land," and includes all that is below, upon, or above the surface.

SOIT. Fr. Let it be; be it so. A term used in several law; French phrases employed in English law, particularly as expressive of the will or assent of the sovereign in formal communications with parliament or with private suitors.

SOIT BAILE AUX COMMONS. Let it be delivered to the commons. The form of indorsement on a bill when sent to the house of commons. Dyer, 93a.

SOIT BAILE AUX SEIGNEURS. Let it be delivered to the lords. The form of indorsement on a bill in parliament when sent to the house of lords. Hob. 111a.

SOLARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A rent paid for the ground, where a person built on the public land. A ground rent. Spelman; Calvin.

SOLATIUM. Compensation. Damages allowed for injury to the feelings.

SOLD. See "Sale."

SOLD NOTE. A note given by a broker, who has effected a sale of merchandise, to the buyer, stating the fact of sale, quantity, price, etc. Story, Ag. § 28; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 83.

SOLDIER. A military man; a private in the army.

Prior to induction a selectee is subject to Selective Training Act but is not yet a "soldier". Billings v. Truesdell, Kan., 64 S.Ct. 737, 741, 321 U.S. 542, 88 L.Ed. 917.

A member of the Women's Army Corps is a "soldier in the military service." United States v. Willaims, D.C.N.Y., 59 F.Supp. 300, 301.

SOLE. Single; individual; separate; the opposite of joint; as a sole tenant. Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Williams, Tex.Civ.App., 275 S.W. 415, 419.

Comprising Only one person; the opposite of aggregate; as a sole corporation.

Unmarried; as a feme sole. See the nouns.

SOLE ACTOR DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine a principal is charged with the knowledge of his agent. It contemplates that agent must have ostensibly endeavored to benefit his principal, and even though he did not do so and his acts were for his personal benefit, possibly through defalcation, the third party who obligated himself must have been under the impression that he was dealing with the principal. General American Life Ins. Co. v. Anderson, D.C.Ky., 46 F.Supp. 189, 195, 196, 198. It is based on the presumption that by reason of the relationship between an agent and his principal the principal is presumed to have been told everything the agent has "done and presumed to have known of his actions and promises. Federal Deposit Ins. Corporation v. Pendleton, D. C.Ky., 29 F.Supp. 779, 782, 783.

SOLE AND UNCONDITIONAL OWNER. See Owner.

SOLEMN. Formal; in regular form; with all the forms of a proceeding. As to solemn "Form," see Probate. As to solemn "Oath" and "War," see the nouns.

SOLEMN OCCASION. Within constitutional provision empowering the Legislature to require the opinion of the Justices on important questions of law means occasion when such questions of law are necessary to be determined by the body making the inquiry in the exercise of the power intrusted to it by the Constitution or laws. In re Opinion of the Justices, 217 Mass. 607, 105 N.E. 440, 441.

SOLEMNES LEGUM FORMULIE. Lat. In the civil law. Solemn forms of laws; forms of forensic proceedings and of transacting legal acts. One of the sources of the unwritten law of Rome. Butl. Hor. Jur. 47.

SOLEMNITAS ATTACHIAMENTORUM. In old English practice. Solemnity or formality of attachments. The issuing of attachments in a certain formal and regular order. Bract. fols. 439, 440; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 480.

SOLEMNITATES JURIS SUNT OBSERVANDIE. The solemnities of law are to be observed. Jenk. Cent. 13.

SOLEMNITY. A rite or ceremony; the formality established by law to render a contract, agreement, or other act valid.

SOLEMNIZE. A marriage, means no more than to enter into a marriage contract, with due publication, before third persons, for the purpose of giving it notoriety and certainty; which may be before any persons, relatives, friTuls, or strangers, competent to testify to the facts. See Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 410, 27 Am.Rep. 359; Pearson v. Howey, 11 N.J.L. 19; Bowman v. Bowman, 24 Ill.App. 172.

SOLICIT. To appeal for something; to apply to for obtaining something; to ask earnestly; to .sk for the purpose of receiving; to endeavor to obtain by asking or pleading; to entreat, implore, or importune; to make petition to; to plead for; to try to obtain; and though the word implies a serious request, it requires no particular degree of importunity, entreaty, imploration, or supplication. People v. Phillips, 70 Cal.App.2d 449, 160 P. 2d 872, 874. To tempt a person; to lure on, especially into evil. People v. Rice, 383 Ill. 584, 50 N.E. 2d 711, 713. To awake or excite to action, or to invite. In re Winthrop, 135 Wash. 135, 237 P. 3, 4; Briody v. De Kimpe, 91 N.J.Law, 206, 102 A. 688, 689. The term implies personal petition and importunity addressed to a particular individual to do some particular thing. Golden & Co. v. Justice's Court of Woodland Tp., Yolo County, 23 Cal.App. 778, 140 P. 49, 58.

SOLICITATION. Asking; enticing; urgent request. Any action which the relation of the parties justifies in construing into a serious request. State v. Underwood, 79 Or. 338, 155 P. 194. Thus "solicitation of chastity" is the asking or urging a woman to surrender her chastity. State v. Render, 203 Iowa 329, 210 N.W. 911; People v. Murray, 307 Ill. 349, 138 N.E. 649, 653. The word is also used in such phrases as "solicitation to larceny," to bribery, etc.

SOLICITOR. In English law. A legal practitioner in the court of chancery. The words "solicitor" and "attorney" are commonly used indiscriminately, although they are not precisely the same, an attorney being a practitioner in the courts of common law, a solicitor, a practitioner in the courts of equity. Most attorneys take out a certificate to practice in the courts of chancery, and therefore become solicitors also, and, on the other hand, most, if not all, solicitors take out a certificate to practice in the courts of common law, and therefore become attorneys also. Brown.

SOLICITOR GENERAL. In English law. One of the principal law officers of the crown, associated in his duties with the attorney general, holding office by patent during the pleasure of the sovereign, and having a right of preaudience in the courts. 3 Bl. Comm. 27. In American law, an officer of the department of justice, next in rank and authority to the attorney general, whose principal assistant he is. His chief function is to represent the United States in all cases in the supreme court and the court of claims in which the government is interested or to which it is a party, and to discharge the duties of the attorney general in the absence or disability of that officer or when there is a vacancy in the office. Rev.St.U.S. §§ 347, 359 (5 U.S.C.A. §§ 293, 309).

SOLICITOR OF THE SUPREME COURT. The solicitors before the supreme courts, in Scotland, are a body of solicitors entitled to practice in the court of session, etc. Their charter of incorporation bears date August 10, 1797.

SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY. An officer of the United States attached to the department of justice, having general charge of the law business appertaining to the treasury.

SOLIDARITY. In the civil law, when several persons bind themselves towards another for the same sum, at the same time, and in the same contract; and so obligate themselves that -each may be compelled to pay the whole debt, and that payment made by one of them exonerates the others towards the creditor; and the obligation thus contracted is one, in solido, although one of the debtors be obliged differently from the others to the payment of one and the same thing; as if the one be but conditionally bound, while the engagement of the others is pure and simple, or if the one is allowed a term which is not granted to the others. Rex Credit Co. v. Long, La.App., 159 So. 359, 360.

SOLIDARY. A term of civil-law origin, signifying that the right or interest spoken of is joint or common. A "solidary obligation" corresponds to a "joint and several" obligation in the common law; that is, one for which several debtors are bound in such wise that each is liable for the entire amount, and not merely for his proportionate share. But in the civil law the term also includes the case where there are several creditors, as against a common debtor, each of whom is entitled to receive the entire debt and give an acquittance for it.

SOLIDUM. Lat. In the civil law. A whole; an entire or undivided thing.

SOLIDUS LEGALIS. A coin equal to 13s. 4d. of the present standard. 4 Steph. Comm. 119n. Originally the "solidus" was a gold coin of the Byzantine Empire, but in medieval times the term was applied to several varieties of coins, or as descriptive of a money of account, and is supposed to be the root from which "shilling" is derived.

SOLINUM. In old English law. Two plowlands, and somewhat less than a half. Co. Litt. 5a.

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT. In a general sense, the separate confinement of a prisoner, with only occasional access of any other person, and that only at the discretion of the jailer; in a stricter sense, the complete isolation of a prisoner from all human society, and his confinement in a cell so arranged that he has no direct intercourse with or sight of any human being, and no employment or instruction. See Medley, Petitioner, 10 S.Ct. 384, 134 U.S. 160, 33 L.Ed. 835.

SOLO CEDIT QUOD SOLO IMPLANTATUR. That which is planted in the soil belongs to the soil. The proprietor of the soil becomes also the proprietor of the seed, the plant, and the tree, as soon as these have taken root. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 275.

SOLO CEDIT QUOD SOLO INJEDIFICATUR. That which is built upon the soil belongs to the soil. The proprietor of the soil becomes also proprietor of the building erected upon it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 275.

SOLUM PROVINCIALE. Lat. In Roman law. The solum italicum (an extension of the old Ager Romanus) admitted full ownership, and of the application to it of usucapio; whereas the solum provinciale (an extension of the old Ager Publicus) admitted of a possessory title only, and of longi temporis possessio only. Justinian abolished all distinctions between the two, sinking the italicum to the level of the provinciale. Brown.

SOLUM REX HOC NON FACERE POTEST, QUOD NON POTEST INJUSTE AGERE. 11 Coke, 72. This alone the king cannot do, he cannot act unjustly.

SOLUS DEUS FACIT HZEREDEM, NON HOMO. Co. Litt. 5. God alone makes the heir, not man.

SOLUTIO. Lat. In civil law. Payment, satisfaction, or release; any species of discharge of an obligation accepted as satisfactory by the creditor. The term refers not so much to the counting out of money as to the substance of the obligation. Dig. 46, 3, 54; Id. 50, 16, 176.

SOLUTIO INDEBITI. In the civil law. Payment of what was not due. From the payment of what was not due arises an obligation quasi ex contractu. When one has erroneously given or performed something to or for another, for which he was in no wise bound, he may redemand it, as if he had only lent it. The term "solutio indebiti" is here used in a very wide sense, and includes also the case where one performed labor for another, or assumed to pay a debt for which he was not bound, or relinquished a right or released a debt, under the impression that he was legally bound to do so. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 500.

SOLUTIO PRETII EMPTIONIS LOCO HABETUR. The payment of the price [of a thing] is held to be in place of a purchase, [operates as a purchase.] Jenk. Cent. p. 56, case 2; 2 Kent. Comm. 387.

A place where something is found or whence it is taken or derived. Jackling v. State Tax Commission, 40 N.M. 241, 58 P.2d 1167, 1171.

The source of income. Place where it is produced. Union Electric Co. v. Coale, 347 Mo. 175, 146 S.W.2d 631, 635.

SOURCES OF THE LAW. The origins from which particular positive laws derive their authority and coercive force. Such are constitutions, treaties, statutes, usages, and customs.

In another sense, the authoritative or reliable works, records, documents, edicts, etc., to which we are to look for an understanding of what constitutes the law. Such, for example, with reference to the Roman law, are the compilations of Justinian and the treatise of Gaius; and such, with reference to the common law, are especially the ancient reports and the works of such writers as Bracton, Littleton, Coke, Fleta, and others.

SOUS. Fr. Under.

SOUS SEING PRIVE. Fr. In French law. Under private signature; under the private signature of the parties. A contract or instrument thus signed is distinguished from an "authentic act," which is formally concluded before a notary or judge. Civil Code La. art. 2240.

SOUTH SEA FUND. The produce of the taxes appropriated to pay the interest of such part of the English national debt as was advanced by the South Sea Company and its annuitants. The holders of South Sea annuities have been paid off, or have received other stock in lieu thereof. 2 Steph.Comm. 578.

SOVEREIGN. A person, body, or state in which independent and supreme authority is vested; a chief ruler with supreme power; a king or other ruler with limited power.

In English law. A gold coin of Great Britain, of the value of a pound sterling.

SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY OF STATE FROM LIABILITY. Exists when the state is engaged in a governmental function. Manion v. State, 303 Mich. 1, 5 N.W.2d 527, 528.

SOVEREIGN PEOPLE. The political body, consisting of the entire number of citizens and qualified electors, who, in their collective capacity, possess the powers of sovereignty and exercise them through their chosen representatives. See Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 404, 15 L.Ed. 691.

SOVEREIGN POWER or SOVEREIGN PREROGATIVE. That power in a state to which none other is superior or equal, and which includes all the specific powers necessary to accomplish the legitimate ends and purposes of government. See Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 309; Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 17 N.W. 389, 46 Am.Rep. 637; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush., Mass., 81; 'Etna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Bramwell, D.C.Or., 12 F.2d 307, 309.

SOVEREIGN RIGHT. A right which the state alone, or some of its governmental agencies, can possess, and which it possesses in the character of a sovereign, for the common benefit, and to enable it to carry out its proper functions; distinguished from such "proprietary" rights as a state, like any private person, may have in property or demands which it owns. See St. Paul v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 387, 48 N.W. 17.

SOVEREIGN STATES. States whose subjects or citizens are in the habit of obedience to them, and which are not themselves subject to any other (or paramount) state in any respect. The state is said to be semi-sovereign only, and not sovereign, when in any respect or respects it is liable to be controlled (like certain of the states in India) by a paramount government, (e. g., by the British empire.) Brown. In the intercourse of nations, certain states have a position of entire independence of others, and can perform all those acts which it is possible for any state to perform in this particular sphere. These same states have also entire power of self-government; that is, of independence upon all other states as far as their own territory and citizens not living abroad are concerned. -No foreign power or law can have control except by convention. This power of independent action in external and internal relations constitutes complete sovereignty. Wools. Pol. Science, I. 204.

SOVEREIGNTY. The supreme, absolute, and uncontrollable power by which any independent state is governed; supreme political authority; paramount control of the constitution and frame of government and its administration; the self-sufficient source of political power, from which all specific political powers are derived; the international independence of a state, combined with the right and power of regulating its internal affairs without foreign dictation; also a political society, or state, which is sovereign and independent. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 455, 1 L.Ed. 440; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Cold., Tenn., 325; Moore v. Shaw, 17 Cal. 218, 79 Am.Dec. 123; State v. Dixon, 66 Mont. 76, 213 P. 227.

The power to do everything in a state without accountability,—to make laws, to execute and to apply them, to impose and collect taxes and levy contributions, to make war or peace, to form treaties of alliance or of commerce with foreign nations, and the like. Story, Const. § 207.

"Sovereignty" in government is that public authority which directs or orders what is to be done by each member associated in relation to the end of the association. It is the supreme power by which any citizen is governed and is the person or body of persons in the state to whom there is politically no superior. The necessary existence of the state and that right and power which necessarily follow is "sovereignty." By "sovereignty" in its largest sense is meant supreme, absolute, uncontrollable power, the absolute right to govern. The word which by itself comes nearest to being the definition of "sovereignty" is will or volition as applied to political affairs. City of Bisbee v. Cochise County, 52 Ariz. 1, 78 P.2d 982, 986.

SOVERTIE. In old Scotch law. Surety. Skene.

SOWLEGROVE. February; so called in South Wales. Cowell.

SOWMING AND ROWMING. In Scotch law. Terms used to express the form by which the number of cattle brought upon a common by those having a servitude of pasturage may be justly proportioned to the rights of the different persons possessed of the servitude. Beli.

SOWNE. In old English law. To be leviable. An old exchequer term applied to sheriff's returns. 4 Inst. 101; Cowell; Spelman.

SPADARIUS. Lat. A sword-bearer. Blount.

SPADONES. Lat. In the civil law. Impotent persons. Those who, on account of their temperament or some accident they have suffered, are unable to procreate. Inst. 1, 11, 9; Dig. 1, 7, 2, 1.

SPARSDI. Lat. Here and there; scattered; at intervals. For instance, trespass to realty by cutting timber sparsim (here and there) through a tract.

SPATIE PLACITUM. In old English law. A court for the speedy execution of justice upon military delinquents. Cowell.

SPEAK. In practice. To argue. "The case was ordered to be spoke to again." 10 Mod. 107. See Imparlance; Speaking with Prosecutor.

SPEAKER. The official designation of the president or chairman of certain legislative bodies, particularly of the house of representatives in the congress of the United States, of one or both branches of several of the state legislatures, and of the two houses of the British parliament.

The term "speaker," as used in reference to oither of the houses of parliament, signifies the functionary acting as chairman. In the commons his duties are to put questions, to preserve order, and to see that the privileges of the house are not infringed; and, in the event of the numbers being even on a division, he has the privilege of giving the casting vote. The speaker of the lords is the lord chancellor or the lord keeper of the great seal of England, or, if he be absent, the lords may choose their own speaker. The duties of the speaker of the lords are principally confined to putting questions, and the lord chancellor has no more to do with preserving order than any other peer. Brown.

SPEAKING DEMURRER. See Demurrer.

SPEAKING ORDER. See Order.

SPEAKING WITH PROSECUTOR. A method of compounding an offense, allowed in the English practice, where the court permits a defendant convicted of a misdemeanor to speak with the prosecutor before judgment is pronounced; if the prosecutor declares himself satisfied, the court may inflict a trivial punishment. 4 Steph.Comm. 261.

SPECIAL. Relating to or designating a species, kind, individual, thing, or sort; designed for a particular purpose; confined to a particular purpose, object, person, or class. Unusual, extraordinary. National Cash Register Co. v. Wall, 58 Mont. 60, 190 P. 135; Steele-Smith Dry Goods Co. v. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co., 15 Ala. App. 271, 73 So. 215; People ex rel. City of New York v. Deyo, 158 App.Div. 319, 143 N.Y.S. 334, 335; State ex rel. and to use of Vaught v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 270 Mo. 251, 192 S.W. 990, 995.

As to special "Acceptance," "Administration," "Agent," "Allocatur," "Allowances," "Appearance," "Assessment," "Assumpsit," "Bail," "Bailiff," "Bastard," "Benefit," "Calendar," "Charge," "Constable," "Contract," "Count," "Covenant," "Custom," "Damage," "Demurrer," "Deposit," "Deputy," "Election," "Finding," "Guaranty," "Guardian," "Imparlance," "Indorsement," "Indorsement of Writ," "Injunction," "Insurance," "Issue," "Jury," "Legacy," "Letter of Credit," "License," "Limitation," "Malice," "Master," "Meeting," "Mortgage," "Motion," "Non Est Factum," "Occupant," "Owner," "Partner," "Partnership," "Plea," "Pleader," "Pleading," "Power," "Privilege," "Proceeding," "Property," "Request," "Replication," "Restraint of Trade," "Retainer," "Rule," "Service," "Sessions," "Statute," "Stock," "Tail," "Term," "Terms," "Traverse," "Trust," "Verdict," and "Warranty," see those titles.

SPECIAL ACT. A private statute; an act which operates only upon particular persons or private concerns. 1 Bl.Comm. 86; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U.S. 454, 26 L.Ed. 405.

SPECIAL CASE. In English practice. When a trial at nisi prius appears to the judge to turn on a point of law, the jury may find a general verdict, subject to the opinion of the court above, upon what is termed a "special case" to be made; that is, upon a written statement of all the facts of the case drawn up for the opinion of the court in bane, by the counsel and attorneys on either side, under correction of the judge at nisi prius. The party for whom the general verdict is so given is in such case not entitled to judgment till the court in banc has decided on the special case; and, according to the result of that decision, the verdict is ultimately entered either for him or his adversary. Brown.

SPECIAL CLAIM. In English law. A claim not enumerated in the orders of April 22, 1850, which required the leave of the court of chancery to file it. Such claims are abolished.

SPECIAL COMMISSION. In English law. An extraordinary commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, issued by the crown to the judges when it is necessary that offenses should be immediately tried and punished. Wharton.

SPECIAL ERRORS. Special pleas in error are such as, instead of joining in error, allege some extraneous matter as a ground of defeating the writ of error, e. g., a release of errors, expiration of the time within which error might be brought, or the like. To these, the plaintiff in error may either reply or demur.

SPECIAL EXAMINER. In English law. Some person, not one of the examiners of the court of chancery, appointed to take evidence in a particular suit. This may be done when the state of business in the examiner's office is such that it is impossible to obtain an appointment at a conveniently early day, or when the witnesses may be unable to come to London. Hunt. Eq. pt. I. c. 5, § 2.

SPECIAL EXCEPTION. An objection to the form in which a cause of action is stated. Cochran v. People's Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 271 S.W. 433, 434.

SPECIAL EXECUTION. A copy of a judgment with a direction to the sheriff indorsed thereon to execute it. Crombie v. Little, 47 Minn. 581, 50 N.W. 823. One that directs a levy upon some special property. Oklahoma Salvage & Supply Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 122 Oki. 128, 251 P. 1006, 1007.

SPECIAL EXECUTOR. One whose power and office are limited, either in respect to the time or place of their exercise, or restricted to a particular portion of the decedent's estate.

One only empowered by will to take charge of a limited portion of the estate, or such part as may lie in one place, or to carry on the administration only to a prescribed point.

SPECIAL FACTS RULE. In corporation law, as respects director's duty of disclosure when dealing with stockholders, is that where special circumstances or facts are present which make it inequitable for the director to withhold information from the stockholder, the duty to disclose arises, and concealment is fraud. Taylor v. Wright, 69 Cal.App.2d 371, 159 P.2d 980, 985.

SPECIAL JURISDICTION. A court authorized to take cognizance of only some few kinds of causes or proceedings expressly designated by statute is called a "court of special jurisdiction."

SPECIAL LAW. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 120; Sargent v. Union School Dist., 63 N.H. 528, 2 A. 641; Dodge v. Youngblood, Tex.Civ.App., 202 S.W. 116, 118; Ex parte Crane, 27 Idaho 671, 151 P. 1006, 1011, L.R.A.1918A, 942; State v. Daniel, 87 Fla. 270, 99 So. 804, 809. A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. State v. Johnson, 170 N. C. 685, 86 S.E. 788, 792,

A law is not special and local in a constitutional sense, if it affects all persons in like circumstances in the same manner. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Bledsoe, C.C. A.Okl., 7 F.2d 364, 366. Whether an act be local or special is determined by the generality with which it affects the people as a whole, rather than the extent of territory over which it is operative, and, if it equally affects all people coming within its operation, it is not local or special. State ex rel. Garvey v. Buckner, 308 Mo. 390, 272 S.W. 940, 942. In taxation cases, courts make no distinction between "special law" and "local law." Bozarth v. Egg Harbor City, 85 N.J.Law, 412, 89 A. 920, 921. The phrases "special act" and "private act" mean the same thing. Federal Trust Co. v. East Hartford Fire Dist., C.C.A.Conn., 283 F. 95, 98

SPECIAL LIEN. A special lien is in the nature of a particular lien, being a lien upon particular property; a lien which the holder can enforce only as security for the performance of a particular act or obligation and of obligations incidental thereto. Green v. Coast Line R. Co., 97 Ga. 15, 24 S.E. 814, 33 L.R.A. 806, 54 Am.St.Rep. 379; Civ. Code Cal. § 2875; Marks v. Baum Bldg. Co., 73 Okl. 264, 175 P. 818, 822.

SPECIAL MATTER. Under a plea of the general issue, the defendant is allowed to give special matter in evidence, usually after notice to the plaintiff of the nature of such matter, thus sparing him the necessity of pleading it specially. 3 Bl.Comm. 306.

SPECIAL PAPER. A list kept in the English courts of common law, and now in the king's bench, common pleas, and exchequer divisions of the high court, in which list demurrers, special cases, etc., to be argued are set down. It is distinguished from the new trial paper, peremptory paper, crown paper, revenue paper, etc., according to the practice of the particular division. Wharton.

SPECIAL PLACE. In Negotiable Instruments. A bank, office, or any other place of business, house or residence, usually occupied by people for business, social, or other purposes, without reference to its location, whether within or without a city, town, or village as distinguished from the city, town or village. O'Connor v. Kirby Inv. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 554, 556; Maddock v. McDonald, 111 Or. 448, 227 P. 463, 464; Corbett v. Ulsaker Printing Co., 49 N.D. 103, 190 N.W. 75, 76, 24 A.L.R. 1047; Harrison v. Beals, 111 Or. 563, 222 P. 728, 731; Moore v. Knemeyer, Tex.Civ.App., 271 S.W. 653, 654.

SPECIAL REGISTRATION. In election laws. Registration for particular election only which does not entitle elector to vote at any succeeding election. Cowart v. City of Waycross, 159 Ga. 589, 126 S.E. 476, 479.

SPECIALIA GENERALIBUS DEROGANT. Special words derogate from general words. A special provision as to a particular subject-matter is to be preferred to general language, which might have governed in the absence of such special provision. L.R. 1 C.P. 546.

SPECIALIST. In stock exchange. Broker who remains at one post of exchange where particular stocks are dealt in and executes orders of other brokers, for which he receives commission; one who specializes in limited group of stocks. In re Brown, 242 N.Y. 1, 150 N.E. 581, 585, 44 A.L.R. 510; People ex rel. Berdan v. Goldfogle, 213 App. Div. 702, 211 N.Y.S. 107.

SPECIALTY. A contract under seal. Furst v. Brady, 375 Ill. 425, 31 N.E.2d 606, 609, 133 A.L.R. 558.

A writing sealed and delivered, containing some agreement. A writing sealed and delivered, which is given as a security for the payment of a debt, in which such debt is particularly specified. Bac. Abr. "Obligation," A.

A corporate seal is not necessary to the contract of a corporation, and hence it is generally deemed that the affixing of a corporate seal to an instrument not required to be executed with that formality indicates that the instrument was intended to be a "specialty", bat there is an exception if it appears from the instrument itself that the instrument was not intended to be a specialty. Caruthers v. Peninsular Life Ins. Co., 150 Fla. 467, 7 So.2d 841, 842.

SPECIALTY DEBT. A debt due or acknowledged to be due by deed or instrument under seal. 2 Bl. Comm. 465.

SPECIE. Coin of the precious metals, of a certain weight and fineness, and bearing the stamp of the government, denoting its value as currency. Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 695, 20 L.Ed. 460; Walkup v. Houston, 65 N.C. 501;. Henry v. Bank of Salina, 5 Hill, N.Y., 536.

When spoken of a contract, the expression "performance in specie" means strictly, or according to the exact terms. As applied to things, it signifies individuality or identity. Thus, on a bequest of a specific picture, the legatee would be said to be entitled to the delivery of the picture in specie; i. e., of the very thing. Whether a thing is due in genere or in specie depends, in each case, on the will of the transacting parties. Brown.

SPECIES. Lat. In the civil law. Form; figure; fashion or shape. A form or shape given to materials.

SPECIES FACTI. In Scotch law. The particular criminal act charged against a person.

SPECIFIC. Precisely formulated or restricted; definite; explicit; of an exact or particular nature. People v. Thomas, 25 Ca1.2d 880, 156 P.2d 7, 17. Having a certain form or designation; observing a certain form; particular; precise; tending to specify, or to make particular, definite, limited or precise. Republic Casualty Co. v. Scandinavian-American Bank, D.C.Wash., 2 F.2d 113, 114; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. South & N. A. R. Co., 184 Ala. 66, 62 So. 788, 793.

As to specific "Denial," "Devise," "Legacy," and "Performance," see those titles.

SPECIFICALLY. In a specific manner; explicitly, particularly, definitely. Straton v. Hodgkins, 109 W.Va. 536, 155 S.E. 902.

SPECIFICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Literally, a making of form; a giving of form to materials. That mode of acquiring property through which a person, by transforming a thing belonging to another, especially by working up his materials into a new species, becomes proprietor of the same. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 271.

SPECIFICATION. As used in the law relating to patents, machinery and in building contracts, a particular or detailed statement of the various elements involved. Gilbert v. U. S., 1 Ct.C1. 34; State v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 262, 18 N.W. 85; Wilson v. Coon, C.C.N.Y., 6 F. 614; State Bank of Freeport v. Cape Girardeau & C. R. Co., 172 MO.App. 662, 155 S.W. 1111, 1113; R. J. Waddell Inv. Co, v. Hall, 255 Mo. 675, 164 S.W. 541, 544.

Law of Personal Property

The acquisition of title to a thing by working it into new forms or species from the raw material; corresponding to the specificatio of the Roman law. See Lampton v. Preston, 1 J. J. Marsh, Ky., 462, 19 Am.Dec. 104.

Right by "specification" can only be acquired when, without the accession of any other material that of another person, which has been used by the operator innocently, has been converted by him into something specifically different in the inherent and characteristic qualities, which identify it. Such is the conversion of corn into meal, of grapes into wine, etc. Bozeman Mortuary Ass'n v. Fairchild, 253 Ky. 74, 68 S.W.2d 756, 92 A.L.R. 419.

Military Law

The clear and particular description of the charges preferred against a person accused of a military offense. Tytler, Mil. Law, 109; Carter v. McClaughry, 22 S.Ct. 181, 183 U.S. 365, 46 L.Ed. 236.

Practice

A detailed and particular enumeration of several points or matters urged or relied on by a party to a suit or proceeding; as, a "specification of errors," or a "specification of grounds of opposition to a bankrupt's discharge." See Railway Co. v. McArthur, 96 Tex. 65, 70 S.W. 317; In re Glass, D.C.Tenn., 119 F. 514; Frank v. Ruzicka, 45 S.D. 49, 185 N.W. 371, 372.

SPECIFY. To mention specifically; to state in full and explicit terms; to point out; to tell or state precisely or in detail; to particularize, or to distinguish by words one thing from another. Independent Highway Dist. No. 2 of Ada County v. Ada County, 24 Idaho 416, 134 P. 542, 545; Roche Valley Land Co. v. Barth, 67 Mont. 353, 215 P. 654, 655; Aleksich v. Industrial Accident Fund, 116 Mont. 127, 151 P.2d 1016, 1021.

SPECIMEN. A sample; a part of something intended to exhibit the kind and quality of the whole. People v. Freeman, 1 Idaho 322.

SPECULATION. Buying or selling with expectation of profiting by a rise or fall in price; also engaging in hazardous business transactions for the chance of unusually large profit. Clucas v. Bank of Montclair, 110 N.J.L. 394, 166 A. 311, 313, 394, 88 A.L.R. 302.

SPECULATIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

SPECULUM. Lat. Mirror or looking-glass. The title of several of the most ancient lawbooks or compilations. One of the ancient Icelandic books is styled "Speculum Regale."

SPEEDY EXECUTION. An execution which, by the direction of the judge at nisi prius, issues forthwith, or on some early day fixed upon by the judge for that purpose after the trial of the action. Brown.

SPEEDY REMEDY. One which, having in mind the subject-matter involved, can be pursued with expedition and without essential detriment to the party aggrieved. State v. District Court of Thirteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Yellowstone County, 50 Mont. 289, 146 P. 743, 745, Ann.Cas.1917C, 164.

SPEEDY TRIAL. In criminal law. As secured by constitutional guaranties, a trial conducted according to fixed rules, regulations, and proceedings of law, free from unreasonable delay. People v. Hall, 64 N.Y.S. 433, 51 App.Div. 57; Nixon v. State, 2 Smedes & M., Miss., 507, 41 Am.Dec. 601; Hicks v. Boyne, 236 Mich. 689, 211 N.W. 35; Arrowsmith v. State, 131 Tenn. 480, 175 S.W. 545, 547, L.R.A.1915E, 363; State v. Clark, 86 Or. 464, 168 P. 944, 946. A trial as soon after indictment as prosecution can with reasonable diligence prepare for it. People v. Molinari, 23 Cal.App.2d Supp. 761, 67 P.2d 767, 770.

It does not mean trial immediately after defendant's apprehension and indictment, but trial consistent with court's business. People v. Wilson, 356 Ill. 256, 190 N.E. 270, 272.

SPELLING. The formation of words by letters; orthography. Incorrect spelling does not vitiate a written instrument if the intention clearly appears.

SPEND. To consume by using in any manner, to use up, to exhaust, distribute, as to expend money or any other possession. Levenson v. Wolfson, 42 Ohio App. 332, 182 N.E. 116.

SPENDTHRIFT. One who spends money profusely and improvidently; a prodigal; one who lavishes or wastes his estate. Taylor v. Koenigstein, 128 Neb. 809, 260 N.W. 544.

In some jurisdictions, under statutes, a person who by excessive drinking, gaming, idleness, or debauchery of any kind shall so spend, waste, or lessen his estate as to expose himself or his family to want or suffering, or expose the town to charge or expense for the support of himself or family. Rev.St.Maine, c. 67, § 4, cl. 2 (Rev.St.1930, c. 80, § 4, cl. 2) ; Pub. Laws N.H,1926, c. 291, § 4; G.L.Mass., c. 201, § 8; Smith-Hurd Rev.St.I11.1931, c. 86, § 53; Young v. Young, 87 Me. 44, 22 A. 782; Morey's Appeal, 57 N.H. 54; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick., Mass., 152, 161; In re Bishop, 149 Ill.App. 491, 498.

Every person who is liable to be put under guardianship on account of excessive drinking, gaming, idleness, or debauchery. Comp. Laws Mich.1929, § 15777; G.L.Vt. 3651.

SPENDTHRIFT TRUST. A trust created to provide a fund for the maintenance of a beneficiary, and at the same time to secure it against his improvidence or incapacity. In re Nicholson's Estate, 104 Colo. 561, 93 P.2d 880, 883. One which provides a fund for benefit of another than settlor, secures it against beneficiary's own improvidence, and places it beyond his creditors' reach. Greenwich Trust Co. v. Tyson, 129 Conn. 211, 27 A.2d 166, 171, 172. Provisions against alienation of the trust fund by the voluntary act of the beneficiary or by his creditors are the usual incidents. Estes v. Estes, Tex.Civ.App., 255 S.W. 649, 650; Newcomb v. Masters, 287 Ill. 26, 122 N.E. 85, 87; Plitt v. Yakel, 129 Md. 464, 99 A. 669, 670; Keating v. Keating, 182 Iowa 1056, 165 N.W. 74, 79; Graham v. More, Mo., 189 S.W. 1186, 1188; Newell v. Tubbs, 103 Colo. 224, 84 P.2d 820, 821.

To constitute valid "spendthrift trust," legal title must be vested in trustee; gift must be only of income to a beneficiary, taking no estate, having no power of alienation, right to possession, nor beneficial interest in property save qualified right to support and equitable interest in income; and trust must be active one. Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638, 640.

SPERATE. That of which there is hope. Thus a debt which one may hope to recover may be called "sperate," in opposition to "desperate." See 1 Chit. Pr. 520.

SPES ACCRESCENDI. Lat. Hope of surviving. 3 Atk. 762; 2 Kent, Comm. 424.

SPES EST VIGILANTIS SOMNIUM. Hope is the dream of the vigilant. 4 Inst. 203.

SPES IMPUNITATIS CONTINUUM AFFECTUM TRIBUIT DELINQUENDI. The hope of impunity holds out a continual temptation to crime. 3 Inst. 236.

SPES RECUPERANDI. Lat. The hope of recovery or recapture; the chance of retaking property captured at sea, which prevents the captors from acquiring complete ownership of the property until they have definitely precluded it by effectual measures. 1 Kent, Comm. 101.

SPIGURNEL. The sealer of the royal writs.

SPINNING HOUSE. A house of correction to which the authorities of Oxford and Cambridge may send persons (mostly women of frivolous character) not members of the University who are found consorting with the students, to the detriment of their morals. 4 Steph. Comm. 264.

SPINSTER. The addition given, in legal proceedings, and in conveyancing, to a woman who never has been married.

SPIRITUAL. Relating to religious or ecclesiastical persons or affairs, as distinguished from "secular" or lay, worldly, or business matters. Johnson v. State, 107 Miss. 196, 65 So. 218, 220, 51 L.R.A., N.S., 1183.

As to spiritual "Corporation," "Courts," and "Lords," see those titles.

SPIRITUALITIES OF A BISHOP. Those profits which a bishop receives in his ecclesiastical character, as the dues arising from his ordaining and instituting priests, and such like, in contradistinction to those profits which he acquires in his temporal capacity as a baron and lord of parliament, and which are termed his "temporalities," consisting of certain lands, revenues, and lay fees, etc. Cowell

SPIRITUALITY OF BENEFICES. In ecclesiastical law. The tithes of land, etc. Wharton.

SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS. Inflammable liquids produced by distillation, and forming an article of commerce. Blankenship v. State, 93 Ga. 814, 21 S.E. 130; State v. Munger, 15 Vt. 293; Allred v. State, 89 Ala. 112, 8 So. 56; State v. Dennison, 85 W.Va. 261, 101 S.E. 458, 459; Shaneyfelt v. State, 8 Ala.App. 370, 62 So. 331, 332; Billing v. State, 99 Tex.Cr.R. 653, 271 S.W. 607.

The phrase "spirituous liquor," in a penal statute, cannot be extended beyond its exact literal sense. Spirit is the name of an inflammable liquor produced by distillation. Wine is the fermented juice of the grape, or a preparation of other vegetables by fermentation; hence the term does not include wine. State v. Moore, 5 Blackf., Ind., 118.

SPITAL, or SPITTLE. A charitable foundation; a hospital for diseased people; a hospital. Cowell.

SPITE FENCE. A fence of no beneficial use to person erecting and maintaining it on his land and maintained solely for purpose of annoying owner of adjoining land. Burris v. Creech, 220 N.C. 302, 17 S.E.2d 123. A high and unsightly fence erected to annoy a neighbor or adjoining landowner by obstructing his air, light or view. Kuzniak v. Kozminski, 107 Mich. 444, 65 N.W. 275, 61 Am.St.Rep. 344; Wood, Nuis., 2d Ed., § 6.

SPLIT SENTENCE. One where penalty of fine and imprisonment, as provided by statute, is imposed and imprisonment part is suspended and fine part enforced. Cote v. Cummings, 126 Me. 330, 138 A. 547, 552.

SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION. Dividing a single cause of action, claim, or demand into two or more parts, and bringing suit for one of such parts only. The plaintiff who does this is bound by his first judgment, and can recover no more. 2 Black, Judgm. § 734. Birdville Independent School Dist. v. Deen, Tex.Civ.App., 114 S.W.2d 628, 632. Commencement of an action for only a part of the cause of action. Silber v. James Drug Stores, 124 N.J.L. 401, 11 A.2d 756, 758. Floyd v. C. I. T. Corporation, 191 S.C. 518, 5 S.E.2d 299, 301.

There is no "splitting of causes" where demand which is subject of second action was not due at time of the first action. Glavich v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 44 Cal.App.2d 517, 112 P.2d 774, 778.

The rule against "splitting causes of action" does not mean that plaintiff cannot sue for less than is his due but means merely that if he does so he may be precluded from maintaining another action for the remainder of the same demand. Scientific & Hospital Supply Corporation v. Board of Education of City of New York, 16 N.Y.S.2d 91, 93, 172 Misc. 770.

The rule against "splitting cause of action" applies only when several actions are between same parties. Warnecke v. Foley, 234 Iowa 348, 11 N.W.2d 457, 459.

SPOLIATION.

An injury done by one clerk or incumbent to another, in taking the fruits of his benefice without any right to them, but under a pretended title. 3 Bl. Comm. 90, 91.

The name of a suit sued out in the spiritual court to recover for the fruits of the church or for the church itself. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 85.

Torts

Destruction of a thing by the act of a stranger, as the erasure or alteration of a writing by the act of a stranger. This has not the effect tp destroy its character or legal effect. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 566; Medlin v. Platt County, 8 Mo. 239, 40 Am. Dec. 135; Edwards v. Thompson, 99 Wash. 188, 169 P. 327, 328; Knox v. Horne, Tex.Civ.App., 200 S. W. 259, 260; Cooper v. Hembree, 194 Okl. 465, 152 P:2d 695, 697.

SPOLIATOR. Lat. A spoiler or destroyer. It is a maxim of law, bearing chiefly on evidence, but also upon the value generally of the thing destroyed, that everything most to his disadvantage is to be presumed against the destroyer, (spoliator,) contra spoliatorem omnia prcesumuntur. 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 315.

SPOLIATUS DEBET ANTE OMNIA RESTITUI. A party despoiled [forcibly deprived of possession] ought first of all to be restored. 2 Inst. 714; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 18.

SPOLIATUS EPISCOPUS ANTE OMNIA DEBET RESTITUI. A bishop despoiled of his see ought, above all, to be restored. See 14 L. Q. R. 27.

SPOLIUM. Lat. In the civil and common law. A thing violently or unlawfully taken from another.

SPONDEO. Lat. In the civil law. I undertake; I engage. Inst. 3, 16, 1.

SPONDET PERITIAM ARTIS. He promises the skill of his art; he engages to do the work in a skillful or workmanlike manner. 2 Kent, Comm. 588. Applied to the engagements of workman for hire. Story, Bailm. § 428.

SPONSALIA, STIPULATIO SPONSALITIA. Lat. In the civil law. Espousal; bethrothal; a reciprocal promise of future marriage.

SPONSIO. Lat. In the civil law. An engagement or undertaking; particularly such as was made in the form of an answer to a formal interrogatory by the other party. Calvin.

An engagement to pay a certain sum of money to the successful party in a cause. Calvin.

SPONSIO JUDICIALIS. In Roman law. A judicial wager corresponding in some respects to the "feigned issue" of modern practice.

SPONSIO LUDICRA. A trifling or ludicrous engagement, such as a court will not sustain an action for. 1 Kames, Eq. Introd. 34. An informal undertaking, or one made without the usual formula of interrogation. Calvin.

SPONSIONS. In international law. Agreements or engagements made by certain public officers (as generals or admirals in time of war) in behalf of their governments, either without authority or in excess of the authority under which they purport to be made, and which therefore require an express or tacit ratification.

SPONSOR. A surety; one who makes a promise or gives security for another, particularly a godfather in baptism.

In the civil law. One who intervenes for another voluntarily and without being requested.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION. The ignition of a body by the internal development of heat without the action of an external agent. Eckman Chemical Co. v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 107 Neb. 268, 185 N.W. 444, 446.

SPONTANEOUS EXCLAMATION. Within res gestae rule, a statement or exclamation made immediately after some exciting occasion by a participant or spectator and asserting the circumstances of that occasion as it is observed by him. Riley v. State, 50 Ariz. 442, 73 P.2d 96, 101.

SPONTE OBLATA. Lat. A free gift or present to the crown.

SPONTE VIRUM MULIER FUGIENS ET ADULTERA FACTA, DOTE SUA CAREAT, NISI SPONSI SPONTE RETRACTA. Co. Litt. 32b. Let a woman leaving her husband of her own accord, and committing adultery, lose her dower, unless taken back by her husband of his own accord.

SPORTING. HOUSE. A house of ill-fame. Johnson v. People, 202 Ill. 53, 66 N.E. 877, 881. A house frequented by sportsmen, betting men, gamblers, and the like, but not necessarily a house kept for unlawful sports or practices. White v. Western, Assur. Co. of Toronto, 52 Minn. 352, 54 N.W. 195.

SPORTULA. Lat. In Roman law. A largess, dole, or present; a pecuniary donation; an official perquisite; something over and above the ordinary fee allowed by law. Inst. 4, 6, 24.

SPOUSALS. In old English law. Mutual promises to marry.

SPOT A FREIGHT CAR. To place it at a precise spot where it is to be loaded or unloaded, such as a freight house, a team track, or a shipper's warehouse. Union Pac. It Co. v. Anderson, 167 Or. 687, 120 P.2d 578, 585.

SPOUSE. One's wife or husband. Rosell v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 164 Or. 173, 95 P.2d 726, 729.

SPOUSE-BREACH. In old English law. Adultery. Cowell.

SPRING. A fountain of water; an issue of water from the earth, or the basin of water at the place of its issue. Webster. A natural chasm in which water has collected, and from which it either is lost by percolation or rises in a defined channel. Furner v. Seabury, 135 N.Y. 50, 31 N.E. 1004; Bloodgood v. Ayers, 108 N.Y. 405, 15 N.E. 433, 2 Am.St.Rep. 443; Proprietors of Mills v. Braintree Water Supply Co., 149 Mass. 478, 21 N.E. 761, 4 L.R.A. 272; Harrison v. Chaboya, 198 Cal. 473, 245 P. 1087, 1088.

SPRING-BRANCH. In American land law. A branch of a stream, flowing from a spring. Wootton v. Redd's Ex'r, 12 Grat. (Va.) 196.

SPRINGING USE. See Use.

SPUILZIE. In Scotch law. The taking away or meddling with movables in another's possession, without the consent of the owner or authority of law. Bell.

SPUR TRACK. A short track leading from a line of railway and connected with it at one end only, and not an adjunct usual or necessary to the operation of main line trains and cars. Simons Brick Co. v. City of Los Angeles, 182 Cal. 230, 187 P. 1066, 1067; Detroit & M. Ry. Co. v. Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co., D.C.Mich., 286 F. 540, 547; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Commerce Commission, 315 Ill. 461, 146 N.E. 606, 610; Menasha Woodenware Co. v. Railroad Commission of Wisconsin, 167 Wis. 19, 166 N.W. 435, 438.

SPURIOUS BANK-BILL. A bill which may be a legitimate impression from the genuine plate, but it must have the signatures of persons not the officers of the bank whence it purports to have issued, or else the names of fictitious persons. It may also be an illegitimate impression from a genuine plate, or an impression from a counterfeit plate, but it must have such signatures or names as indicated. A bill, therefore, may be both counterfeit and forged, or both counterfeit and spurious, but it cannot be both forged and spurious. Kirby v. State, 1 Ohio St. 187.

SPURIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A bastard; the offspring of promiscuous cohabitation.

SPY. A person sent into an enemy's camp to inspect their works, ascertain their strength and their intentions, watch their movements, and secretly communicate intelligence to the proper officer. By the laws of war among all civilized nations, a spy is punished with death. Webster. See Vattel, 3, 179; U. S. ex rel. Wessels v. McDonald, D.C.N.Y., 1920, 265 F. 754; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 44, 18 L.Ed. 281 (argument of counsel).

SQUARE. As used to designate a certain portion of land within the limits of a city or town, this term may be synonymous with "block," that is, the smallest subdivision which is bounded on all sides by principal streets, or it may denote a space (more or less rectangular) not built upon, and set apart for public passage, use, recreation, or ornamentation, in the nature of a "park" but smaller. State v. Natal, 42 La.Ann. 612, 7 South. 781; Rowzee v. Pierce, 75 Miss. 846, 23 South. 307, 40 L.R.A. 402, 65 Am.St.Rep. 625; City of St. Louis v. Pope, 344 Mo. 479, 126 S.W.2d 1201, 1213.

Public Square

In its popular import, the phrase refers almost exclusively to ground occupied by a courthouse owned by a county, Logansport v. Dunn, 8 Ind. 378; but it may be used as synonymous with park; Church of Hoboken v. Council of Hoboken, 33 N. J.L. 13, 97 Am.Dec. 696; Woodward v. City of Des Moines, 182 Iowa 1102, 165 N.W. 313, 314.

Square Block

Territory bounded by four streets. People ex rel. Beinert v. Miller, 100 Misc. 318, 165 N.Y.S. 602, 607; Bernfeld v. Freedenberg, 125 Misc. 645, 211 N.Y.S. 692.

SQUATTER. In American 'law. One who settles on another's land, particularly on public lands, without legal authority. O'Donnell v. McIntyre, 16 Abb. N. C., N.Y., 84; Parkersburg Industrial Co. v. Schultz, 43 W.Va. 470, 27 S.E. 255. A person entering upon lands, not claiming in good faith the right to do so by virtue of any title of his own or by virtue of some agreement with another whom he believes to hold the title. Mayor and .Council of City of Forsyth v. Hooks, 182 Ga. 78, 184 S.E. 724, 728.

A squatter can never gain prescriptive title to land regardless of how long he holds possession, since his possession is never considered as "adverse possession". Conway v. Shuck, 203 Ark. 559, 157 S.W.2d 777, 778.

SQUIRE. A contraction of "esquire."

SS. An abbreviation used in that part of a record, pleading, or affidavit, called the "statement of the venue." Commonly translated or read, "to-wit," and supposed to be a contraction of "scilicet."

Also in ecclesiastical documents, particularly records of early councils, "ss" is used as an abbreviation for subscripsi. Occasionally, in Law French, it stands for sans, "without," e. g., "faire feoffment ss son baron." Bendloe, p. 180.

STAB. A wound inflicted by a thrust with a pointed weapon. State v. Cody, 18 Or. 506, 23 P. 891; Ward v. State, 56 Ga. 410.

STABILIA. A writ called by that name, founded on a custom in Normandy, that where a man in power claimed lands in the possession of an inferior, he petitioned the prince that it might be put into his hands till the right was decided, whereupon he had this writ. Wharton.

STABILIZE. To keep steady, fixed, as distinguished from fluctuating, shifting. McCanless v. Klein, 182 Tenn. 563, 188 S.W.2d 745, 748.

STABILIZE PRICES. Holding prices steady against any and all increases. Philadelphia Coke Co. v. Bowles, Em.App., 139 F.2d 349, 353.

STABIT PLUESUMPTIO DONEC PROBETUR IN CONTRARIUM. A presumption will stand good till the contrary is proved. Hob. 297; Broom, Max. 949.

STABLE. House, shed, or building for beasts to lodge and feed in. Culp v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 303 Pa. %57, 154 A. 479, 480.

STABLE-STAND. In forest law. One of the four evidences or presumptions whereby a man was convicted of an intent to steal the king's deer in the forest. This was when a man was found at his standing in the forest with a cross-bow or long-bow bent, ready to shoot at any deer, or else standing close by a tree with grey-hounds in a leash, ready to slip. Cowell; Manwood.

STABULARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A stable-keeper. Dig. 4, 9, 4, 1.

STACHIA. In old records. A dam or head made to stop a water-course. Cowell.

STAFF-HERDING. The following of cattle within a forest.

STAGE LINE. A regular line of vehicles for public use operating between distant points or between different cities. Bruce Transfer Co. v. Johnston, 227 Iowa 50, 287 N.W. 278, 280.

STAGE-RIGHT. A word which it has been attempted to introduce as a substitute for "the right of representation and performance," but it can hardly be said to be an accepted term of English or American law. Sweet.

STAGIARIUS. A resident.. Cowell.

STAGNUM. In old English law. A pool, or pond. Co. Litt. 5a; Johnson v. Rayner, 6 Gray (Mass.) 110.

STAKE. A deposit made to answer an event, as on a wager. Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228, 49 N. W. 862; Pompano Horse Club v. State, 93 Fla. 415, 111 So. 801, 813, 52 A.L.R. 51. Something deposited by two persons with the third on condition that it is to be delivered to the one who shall become entitled to it by the happening of a specified contingency. Baxter v. Deneen, 98 Md. 181, 57 A. 601, 607, 64 L.R.A. 949, 1 Ann.Cas. 147.

STAKEHOLDER. A person with whom money is deposited pending the decision of a bet or wager; (q. v.) . Sweet. Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 95 Mo.App. 477, 75 S.W. 691; Martin v. Francis, 173 Ky. 529, 191 S.W. 259, 262, L.R.A. 1918F, 966, Ann. Cas.1918E, 289. His function is to receive the sums wagered and hold them against the determining event, whether that event be a horse race or otherwise, and then pay them over to the winner. Also a third person chosen by two or more persons to keep in deposit property the right or possession of which is contested between them, and to be delivered to the one who shall establish his right to it. State v. Dudley, 127 N.J.L. 127, 21 A.2d 209, 210.

STALE, n. In Saxon law. Larceny. Wharton.

STALE DEMAND, or CLAIM. A demand or claim that has long remained unasserted, one that is first asserted after an unexplained delay which is so long as to render it difficult or impossible for the court to ascertain the truth of the matters in controversy and do justice between the parties, or as to create a presumption against the existence or validity of the claim, or a presumption that the claim has been abandoned or satisfied. Luschen v. Stanton, 192 Okl. 454, 137 P.2d 567, 572. It implies a greater lapse of time than is necessary to "laches." Bell v. Mackey, 191 S.C. 105, 3 S.E.2d 816, 824, 830. The doctrine is purely an equitable one, and arises only when, from lapse of time and laches of plaintiff, it would be inequitable to allow a party to enforce his legal rights. Wood v. City Board of Plumbing Examiners, 192 Ga. 415, 15 S.E.2d 486, 488; Lamar v. Rivers, 235 Ala. 130, 178 So. 16, 18.

STALLAGE. The liberty or right of pitching or erecting stalls in fairs or markets, or the money paid for the same. 1 Steph. Comm. 664.

STALLARIUS. In Saxon law. The prcefectus stabuli, now master of the horse. Sometimes one who has a stall in a fair or market.

STAMP. An impression made by public authority, in pursuance of law, upon paper or parchment, upon which certain legal proceedings, conveyances, or contracts are required to be written, and for which a tax or duty is exacted.

A small label or strip of paper, bearing a particular device, printed and sold by the government, and required to be attached to mail-matter, and to some other articles subject to duty or excise. U. S. v. Skilken, D.C.Ohio, 293 F. 916, 919.

STAMP ACTS. In English law. Acts regulating the stamps upon deeds, contracts, agreements, papers in law proceedings, bills and notes, letters, receipts, and other papers.

STAMP DUTIES. Duties imposed upon and raised from stamps upon parchment and paper, and forming a branch of the perpetual revenue of the kingdom. 1 Bl. Comm. 323.

STANCE. In Scotch law. A resting place; a field or place adjoining a drove-road, for resting and refreshing sheep and cattle on their journey. 7 Bell, App. Cas. 53, 57, 58.

STAND. To cease from movement or progress; to pause, remain stationary or inactive. Jaggers v. Southeastern Greyhound Lines, D.C.Tenn., 34 F.Supp. 667, 668.

To abide; to submit to; as "to stand a trial."

To remain as a thing is; to remain in force. Pleadings demurred to and held good are allowed to stand.

To appear in court.

STANDARD. Stability, general recognition, and conformity to established practice. Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Standard Surety & Casualty Co., D.C.N.Y., 53 F.2d 119, 120.

An ensign or flag used in war.

A type, model, or combination of elements accepted as correct or perfect. Ashwell v. Miller, 54 Ind.App. 381, 103 N.E. 37, 40.

STANDARD ESTABLISHED BY LAW. That of a reasonable man under like circumstances. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Bell, Tex.Civ.App., 101 S.W. 2d 363, 364.

STANDARD MORTGAGE CLAUSE. In fire policy. Clause providing that in case of loss policy shall be payable to mortgagee, and that his interest as payee shall not be invalidated by act of mortgagor. Rhode Island Ins. Co. v. Wurtman, 265 Ky. 835, 98 S.W.2d 29, 31.

Basic difference In effect between "loss payable clause" and "standard mortgage clause" is that the former is subject to such defenses as insurer may have against the mortgagor, while the latter is not. Overholt v. Reliance Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, 319 Pa. 340, 179 A. 554, 556.

STANDARD OF WEIGHT, or MEASURE. A weight or measure fixed and prescribed by law, to which all other weights and measures are required to correspond.

STANDING. One's place in the community in the estimation of others; his relative position and social, commercial, or moral relations; his repute, grade, or rank. Gross v. State, 186 Ind. 581, 117 N.E. 562, 564, 1 A.L.R. 1151.

STANDING ASIDE JURORS. A practice by which, on the drawing of a jury for a criminal trial, the prosecuting officer puts aside a juror, provisionally, until the panel is exhausted, without disclosing his reasons, instead of being required to challenge him and show cause. The statute 33 Edw. I. deprived the crown of the power to challenge jurors without showing cause, and the practice of standing aside jurors was adopted, in England, as a method of evading its provisions. A similar practice is in use in Pennsylvania. See Warren v. Corn., 37 Pa. 54; Zell v. Com., 94 Pa. 272; Haines v. Corn., 100 Pa. 322. But in Missouri, it is said that the words "stand aside" are the usual formula, used in impaneling a jury, for rejecting a juror. State v. Hultz, 106 Mo. 41, 16 S.W. 940.

STANDING BY. Used in law as implying knowledge, under such circumstances as rendered it the duty of the possessor to communicate it; and it is such knowledge, and not the mere fact of "standing by," that lays the foundation of responsibility. The phrase does not import an actual presence, "but implies knowledge under such circumstances as to render it the duty of the possessor to communicate it." Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 573, 47 Am.Rep. 394; Gatling v. Rodman, 6 Ind. 292; Richardson v. Chickering, 41 N.H. 380, 77 Am.Dec. 769; Morrison v. Morrison, 2 Dana, Ky., 16; Piqua State Bank v. Brannum, 103 Kan. 25, 173 P. 1, 2.

STANDING MUTE. A prisoner, arraigned for treason or felony, was said to "stand mute," when he refused to plead, or answered foreign to the purpose, or, after a plea of not guilty, would not put himself upon the country.

STANDING IN LOCO PARENTIS. As required to entitle deceased employee's illegitimate child to compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act for his death, is voluntary, not court directed, assumption of obligations of parental relation. Smrekar v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, 137 Pa.Super. 183, 8 A.2d 461, 464.

STANDING ORDERS. Rules and forms regulating the procedure of the two houses of parliament, each having its own. They are of equal force in every parliament, except so far as they are altered or suspended from time to time. Cox, Inst. 136; May, Parl. Pr. 185.

STANDING SEISED TO USES. A covenant to stand seised to uses is one by which the owner of an estate covenants to hold the same to the use of another person, usually a relative, and usually in consideration of blood or marriage. It is a species of conveyance depending for its effect on the statute of uses.

STANDING TO SUE DOCTRINE. Doctrine that in action in federal constitutional court by citizen against a government officer, complaining of alleged unlawful conduct there is no justiciable controversy unless citizen shows that such conduct invades or will invade a private substantive legally protected interest of plaintiff citizen. Associated Industries of New York State v. Ickes, C.C.A.2, 134 F.2d 694, 702.

STANNARIES. A district which includes all parts of Devon and Cornwall where some tin work is situate and in actual operation. The tin miners of the stannaries have certain peculiar customs and privileges.

STANN ARY COURTS. Courts of Devonshire and Cornwall for the administration of justice among the miners and tinners. These courts were held before the lord warden and his deputies by virtue of a privilege granted to the workers of the tin-mines there, to sue and be sued in their own courts only, in order that they might not be drawn away from their business by having to attend law-suits in distant courts. Brown.

STAPLE.

English Law

A mart or market. A place where the buying and selling of wool, lead, leather, and other articles were put under certain terms. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 393.

International Law

The right of staple, as exercised by a people upon foreign merchants, is defined to be that they may not allow them to set their merchandises and wares to sale but in a certain place. This practice is not in use in the United States. 1 Chit. Corn. Law, 103.

General

Law of the staple. Law administered in the court of the mayor of the staple; the law-merchant. 4 Inst. 235. See Staple.

Staple inn. An inn of chancery. See Inns of Chancery.

Statute staple. The statute of the staple, 27 Ed. III. stat. 2, confined the sale of all commodities to be exported to certain towns in England, called estaple or staple, where foreigners might resort. It authorized a security for money, commonly called statute staple, to be taken by traders for the benefit of commerce; the mayor of the place is entitled to take recognizance of a debt in proper form, which had the effect to convey the lands of the debtor to the creditor till out of the rents and profits of them he should be satisfied. 2 Rolle, Abr. 446; Bac. Abr. Execution (B. 1) ; Co. 4th Inst. 238. A security for a debt acknowledged to be due, so called from its being entered into before the mayor of the staple, that is to say, the grand mart for the principal commodities or manufactures of the kingdom, formerly held by act of parliament in certain trading towns. In other respects it resembled the statute-merchant, (q. v.,) but like that has now fallen into disuse. 2 Bl. Comm. 160; 1 Steph. Comm. 287.

STAR—CHAMBER. A court which originally had jurisdiction in cases where the ordinary course of justice was so much obstructed by one party, through writs, combination of maintenance, *or ov-er*awing influence that no inferior court would find its process obeyed. The court consisted of the privy council, the common-law judges, and (it seems) all peers of parliament. In the reign of Henry VIII. and his successors, the jurisdiction of the court was illegally extended to such a degree (especially in punishing disobedience to the king's arbitrary proclamations) that it became odious to the nation, and was abolished. 4 Steph. Comm. 310; Sweet.

STAR PAGE. The line and word at which the pages of the first edition of a law book began are frequently marked by a star in later editions, and always should be.

STARBOARD. In maritime law. The righthand side of a vessel when the observer faces forward. "Starboard tack," the course of vessel when she has the wind on her starboard bow. Burrows v. Gower, D.C.Mass., 119 F. 617.

STARE DECISIS. Lat. To abide by, or adhere to, decided cases.

Policy of courts to stand by precedent and not to disturb settled point. Neff v. George, 364 Ill. 306, 4 N.E.2d 338, 390, 391. Doctrine that, when court has once laid down a principle of law as applicable to a certain state of facts, it will adhere to that principle, and apply it to all future cases, where facts are substantially the same. Moore v. City of Albany, 98 N.Y. 396, 410; Regardless of whether the parties and property are the same. Horne v. Moody, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 505, 509, 510. Under doctrine a deliberate or solemn decision of court made after argument on question of law fairly arising in the case, and necessary to its determination, is an authority, or binding precedent in the same court, or in other courts of equal or lower rank in subsequent cases where the very point is again in controversy. State v. Mellenberger, 163 Or. 233, 95 P.2d 709, 719, 720, 128 A.L.R. 1506. Doctrine is one of policy, grounded on theory that security and certainty require that accepted and established legal principle, under which rights may accrue, be recognized and followed, though later found to be not legally sound, but whether previous holding of court shall be adhered to, modified, or overruled is within court's discretion under circumstances of case before it. Otter Tail Power Co. v. Von Bank, 72 N.D. 497, 8 N.W.2d 599, 607, 145 A.L.R. 1343. Under doctrine, when point of law has been settled by decision, it forms precedent which is not afterwards to be departed from, and, while it should ordinarily be strictly adhered to, there are occasions when departure is rendered necessary to vindicate plain, obvious principles of law and remedy continued injustice. McGregor v. Provident Trust Co. of Philadelphia, 119 Fla. 718, 162 So. 323. The doctrine is a salutary one, and should not ordinarily be departed from where decision is of long standing and rights have been acquired under it, unless considerations of public policy demand it. Colonial Trust Co. v. Flanagan, 344 Pa. 556, 25 A.2d 728, 729.

The doctrine is limited to actual determinations in respect to litigated and necessarily decided questions, and is not applicable to dicta or obiter dicta. In re Herle's Estate, 165 Misc. 46, 300 N.Y.S. 103.

Federal courts should in all instances follow the law of the state with respect to the construction of state statutes, and where that law has been determined by the courts of last resort, their decisions are "stare decisis" and must be followed, irrespective of federal courts' opinions con cerning what the law ought to be, but with respect to the pronouncement of other state courts, federal courts are not so bound and may conclude that the decision does not truly express the state law. Kehaya v. Axton, D.C.N.Y., 32 F.Supp. 266, 268.

STARE DECISIS ET NON QUIETA MOVERE. To adhere to precedents, and not to unsettle things which are established. 87 Pa. 286; Ballard County v. Kentucky County Debt Commission, 290 Ky. 770, 162 S.W.2d 771, 773. See Stare Decisis.

STARE IN JUDICIO. Lat. To appear before a tribunal, either as plaintiff or defendant.

STARR, or STARRA. The old term for contract or obligation among the Jews, being a corruption from the Hebrew word "shetar," a covenant, by an ordinance of Richard I., no starr was allowed to be valid, unless deposited in one of certain repositories established by law, the most considerable of which was in the king's exchequer at Westminster; and Blackstone conjectures that the room in which these chests were kept was thence called the "starr-chamber." 4 Bl. Comm. 266, 267, note a.

STATE EXPERIENCE FACTOR. The term as used in Unemployment Compensation Law, means a factor based on factual experience of all employers and their employees operating within the state coming within influence of the act. Broadway v. Alabama Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Co., 246 Ala. 201, 20 So.2d 41, 49.

STATE OF FACTS. Formerly, when a master in chancery was directed by the court of chancery to make an inquiry or investigation into any matter arising out of a suit, and which could not conveniently be brought before the court itself, each party in the suit carried in before the master a statement showing how the party bringing it in represented the matter in question to be; and this statement was technically termed a "state of facts," and formed the ground upon which the evidence was received, the evidence being, in fact, brought by one party or the other, to prove his own or disprove his opponent's state of facts. And so now, a state of facts means the statement made by any one of his version of the facts. Brown.

STATE OF FACTS AND PROPOSAL. In English lunacy practice, when a person has been found a lunatic, the next step is to submit to the master a scheme called a "state of facts and proposal," showing what is the position in life, property, and income of the lunatic, who are his next of kin and heir at law, who are proposed as his committees, and what annual sum is proposed to be allowed for his maintenance, etc. From the state of facts and the evidence adduced in support of it, the master frames his report. Elmer, Lun. 22; Pope, Lun. 79; Sweet.

STATEMENT. In a general sense, an allegation; a declaration of matters of fact. The term has come to be used of a variety of formal narratives of facts, required by law in various jurisdictions as the foundation of judicial or official proceedings and in a limited sense is a formal, exact, detailed presentation. Southern Surety Co. v. Schmidt, 117 Ohio St. 28, 158 N.E. 1, 3. For "False and Misleading Statement," and "Foreign Statement," see those titles.

STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS. In English bankruptcy practice, a bankrupt or debtor who has presented a petition for liquidation or composition must produce at the first meeting of creditors a statement of his affairs giving a list of his creditors, secured and unsecured, with the value of the securities, a list of bills discounted, and a statement of his property. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM. A written or printed statement by the plaintiff in an action in the English high court, showing the facts on which he relies to support his claim against the defendant, and the relief which he claims. It is delivered to the defendant or his solicitor. The delivery of the statement of claim is usually the next step after appearance, and is the commencement of the pleadings. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF CONFESSION. Oftentimes referred to as a "power of attorney" is written authority of debtor and his direction to enter judgment against debtor as stated therein. Blott v. Blott, 227 Iowa 1108, 290 N.W. 74, 76.

STATEMENT OF DEFENSE. In the practice of the English high court, where the defendant in an action does not demur to the whole of the plaintiff's claim, he delivers a pleading called a "statement of defense." The statement of defense deals with the allegations contained in the statement of claim, (or the indorsement on the writ, if there is no statement of claim,) admitting or denying them, and, if necessary, stating fresh facts in explanation or avoidance of those alleged by the plaintiff. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF PARTICULARS. In English practice, when the plaintiff claims a debt or liquidated demand, but has not indorsed the writ specially, (i. e., indorsed on it the particulars of his claim under Order iii. r. 6,) and the defendant fails to appear, the plaintiff may file a statement of the particulars of his claim, and after eight days enter judgment for the amount, as if the writ had been specially indorsed. Court Rules, xiii. 5; Sweet.

STATUTUM GENERALITER EST INTELLIGENDUM QUANDO VERBA STATUTI SUNT SPECIALIA, RATIO AUTEM GENERALIS. When the words of a statute are special, .but the reason of it general, the statute is to be understood generally. 10 Coke, 101.

STATUTUM HIBERNIZE DE COHAEREDIBUS. The statute 14 Hen. III. The third public act in the statute-book. It has been pronounced not to be a statute. In the form of it, it appears to be an instruction given by the king to his justices in Ireland, directing them how to proceed in a certain point where they entertained a doubt. It seems the justices itinerant in that country had a doubt, when land descended to sisters, whether the younger sisters ought to hold of the eldest, and do homage to her for their several portions, or of the chief lord, and do homage to him; and certain knights had been sent over to know what the practice was in England in such a case. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 259.

STATUTUM SESSIONUM. In old English law. The statute session; a meeting in every hundred of constables and householders, by custom, for the ordering of servants, and debating of differences between masters and servants, rating of wages, etc. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

Law, 93, 94.

STAURUM. In old records. A store, or stock of cattle. A term of common occurrence in the accounts of monastic establishments. Spelman; Cowell.

STAY, v. To stop, arrest, or forbear. State Founders v. Oliver, 165 Md. 360, 169 A. 59, 61.

To "stay" an order or decree means to hold it in abeyance, or refrain from enforcing it. State v. Draney, 57 Utah 14, 176 P. 767, 769.

STAY, n. A stopping; the act of arresting a judicial proceeding by the order of a court. In re Schwarz, D.C.N.Y., 14 F. 788.

Also that which holds, restrains, or supports. Armenti v. Brooklyn Union Gas Co., 142 N.Y.S. 420, 425, 157 App.Div. 276; Rookstool v. Cudahy Packing Co., 100 Neb. 118, 158 N.W. 440, 444.

Stay laws. Acts of the legislature prescribing a stay of execution in certain cases, or a stay of foreclosure of mortgages, or closing the courts for a limited period, or providing that suits shall not be instituted until a certain time after the cause of action arose, or otherwise suspending legal remedies; designed for the relief of debtors, in times of general distress or financial trouble.

Stay of execution. The stopping or arresting of execution on a judgment, that is, of the judgment-creditor's right to issue execution, for a limited period. This is given by statute in many jurisdictions, as a privilege to the debtor, usually on his furnishing bail for the debt, costs, and interest. Or it may take place by agreement of the parties. See National Docks, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 54 N.J.Eq. 167, 33 A. 936; State ex rel. Gray v. Hennings, 194 Mo.App. 545, 185 S.W. 1153, 1154.

Stay of proceedings. The temporary suspension of the regular order of proceedings in a cause, by direction or order of the court, usually to await the action of one of the parties in regard to some omitted step or some act which the court has required him to perform as incidental to the suit; as where a nonresident plaintiff has been ruled to give, security for costs. See Wallace v. Wallace, 13 Wis. 226; Lewton v. Hower, 18 Fla. 876; Rossiter v. "Etna L. Ins. Co., 96 Wis. 466, 71 N.W. 898.

"Stay of proceedings" and "abatement", though similar are not identical; abatement being a matter of right, while application for stay of proceedings is addressed to discretion of the court. Evans v. Evans, Tex.Civ.App., 186 S.W.2d 277, 279.

STEADY COURSE. A ship is on a "steady course," not only when her heading does not change, but whenever her future positions are certainly ascertainable from her present position and movements. Commonwealth & Dominion Line v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 20 F.2d 729, 731.

STEAL. This term is commonly used in indictments for larceny, ("take, steal, and carry away,") and denotes the commission of theft, that is, the felonious taking and carrying away of the personal property of another, and without right and without leave or consent of owner, People v. STERLING. In English law. Current or standard coin, especially silver coin; a standard of coinage.

STET BILLA. If the plaintiff in a plaint in the mayor's court of London has attached property belonging to the defendant and obtained execution against the garnishee, the defendant, if he wishes to contest the plaintiff's claim, and obtain restoration of his property, must issue a scire facias disprobandum debitum; if the only question to be tried is the plaintiff's debt, the plaintiff in appearing to the scire facias prays stet billa "that his bill original," i. e., his original plaint, "may stand, and that the defendant may plead thereto." The action then proceeds in the usual way as if the proceedings in attachment (which are founded on a fictitious default of the defendant in appearing to the plaint) had not taken place. Brand, F. Attachm. 115; Sweet.

STET PROCESSUS. An entry on the roll in the nature of a judgment of a direction that all further proceedings shall be stayed, (i. e., that the process may stand,) and it is one of the ways by which a suit may be terminated by an act of the party, as distinguished from a termination of it by judgment, which is the act of the court. It was used by the plaintiff when he wished to suspend the action without suffering a nonsuit. Brown.

STEVEDORE. A person employed in loading and unloading vessels. The Senator, D.C.Ohio, 21 F. 191; Rankin v. Merchants' & M. Transp. Co., 73 Ga. 232, 54 Am.Rep. 874; Zampiere v. William Spencer & Son Corporation, 194 App.Div. 576, 185 N.Y.S. 639, 640.

STEWARD. A man appointed in the place or stead of another, also a principal officer within his jurisdiction. Brown.

Land Steward

See that title.

Steward of a Manor

An important officer who has the general management of all forensic matters connected with the manor of which he is steward. He stands in much the same relation to the lord of the manor as an under-sheriff does to the sheriff. Cowell.

Steward of all England

In old English law. An officer who was invested with various powers; among others, to preside on the trial of peers.

Steward of Scotland

An officer of the highest dignity and trust. He administered the crown revenues, superintended the affairs of the household, and possessed the privilege of holding the first place in the army, next to the king, in the day of battle. From this office the royal house of Stuart took its name. But the office was sunk on their advancement to the throne, and has never since been revived. Bell.

STEWARTRY. In Scotch law, equivalent to the English "county." See Brown.

STEWS. Certain brothels anciently permitted in England, suppressed by Henry VIII. Also, breeding places for tame pheasants.

STILL. Any device used for separating alcoholic spirits from fermented substances. Moore v. State, 154 Ark. 13, 240 S.W. 1083, 1084; Davis v. State, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 546, 278 S.W. 848, 849. The word is sometimes applied to the whole apparatus for evaporation and condensation used in the manufacture of ardent spirits, but in the description of the parts of the apparatus it is applied merely to the vessel or retort used for boiling and evaporation of the liquid. Hodgkiss v. State, 156 Ark. 340, 246 S.W. 506, 507.

STILL COKE. Coke formed by the distillation of petroleum. Rodman Chemical Co. v. Steel Treating Equipment Co., C.C.A.Mich., 288 F. 471, 473.

STILL WORM. The tube or coil used for condensation of the vapor which is passed through it from boiling mash for the purpose of being distilled into whisky. Rosslot v. State, 162 Ark. 340, 258 S.W. 348.

STILLBORN CHILD. A child born dead or in such an early stage of pregnancy as to be incapable of living, though not actually dead at the time of birth. Children born within the first six months after conception are considered by the civil law as incapable of living, and therefore, though they are apparently born alive, if they do not in fact survive so long as to rebut this presumption of law, they cannot inherit, so as to transmit the property to others. Marsellis v. Thalhimer, 2 Paige (N.Y.) 41, 21 Am.Dec. 66.

STILLICIDIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The drip of water from the eaves of a house. The servitude stillicidii consists in the right to have the water drip from one's eaves upon the house or ground of another. The term "fiumen" designated the rain-water collected from the roof, and carried off by the gutters, and there is a similar easement of having it discharged upon the adjoining estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317, par. 4.

STINT. In English law. Limit; a limited number. Used as descriptive of a species of common. See Common sans Nombre.

STIPEND. A salary; settled pay. Mangam v. Brooklyn, 98 N.Y. 597, 50 Am.Rep. 705.

In English and Scotch law. A provision made for the support of the clergy.

STIPENDIARY ESTATES. Estates granted in return for services, generally of a military kind. 1 Steph.Comm. 174.

STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES. In English law. Paid magistrates; appointed in London and some other cities and boroughs, and having in general the powers and jurisdiction of justices of the peace.

STIPENDIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The pay of a soldier; wages; stipend. Calvin.

STEMS. Lat. In old English law. Stock; a stock; a source of descent or title. Communis stipes, the common stock. Fleta, lib. 6, c. 2.

STIPITAL. Relating to stirpes, roots, or stocks. "Stipital distribution" of property is distribution Ter stirpes; that is, by right of representation.

STIPULATED DAMAGE. Liquidated damage, (q. v.).

STIPULATE. Arrange or settle definitely, as an agreement or covenant. Mennen Co. v. Krauss Co., D.C.La., 37 F.Supp. 161, 163.

STIPULATIO. Lat. In the Roman law, stipulatio was the verbal contract, (verbis obligatio,) and was the most solemn and formal of all the contracts in that system of jurisprudence. It was entered into by question and corresponding answer thereto, by the parties, both being present at the same time, and usually by such words as "spondes? spondeo," "promittis? promitto," and the like. Brown.

STIPULATIO AQUILIANA. A particular application of the stipulatio, which was used to collect together into one verbal contract all the liabilities of every kind and quality of the debtor, with a view to their being released or discharged by an acceptilatio, that mode of discharge being applicable only to the verbal contract. Brcwn.

STIPULATION. A material article in an agreement.

Practice

The name given to any agreement made by the attorneys engaged on opposite sides of a cause, (especially if in writing,) regulating any matter incidental to the proceedings or trial, which falls within their jurisdiction. Such, for instance, are agreements to extend the time for pleading, to take depositions, to waive objections, to admit certain facts, to continue the cause. See Lewis v. Orpheus, 15 F.Cas. 492; Southern Colonization Co. v. Howard Cole & Co., 185 Wis. 469, 201 N.W. 817, 819.

Practice

An agreement between counsel respecting business before the court. It is not binding unless assented to by the parties or their representatives, and most stipulations are required to be in writing. Holland Banking Co. v. Continental Nat. Bank of Jackson County, Kansas City, Mo., D.C. Mo., 9 F.Supp. 988, 989.

"Stipulations" are of two types: First, those relating to merely precedural matters; and, second, those which have all essential characteristics of mutual contract. Paine v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 217 Wis. 601, 258 N.W. 846.

Admiralty Practice

A recognizance of certain persons (called in the old law "fide jussors") in the nature of bail for the appearance of a defendant. 3 Bl.Comm. 108.

STIPULATOR. In the civil law. The party who asked the question in the contract of stipulation; the other party, or he who answered, being called the "promissor." But, in a more general sense, the term was applied to both the parties. Calvin.

STIRPES. Lat. Descents. The root-stem, or stock of a tree. Figuratively, it signifies in law that person from whom a family is descended, and also the kindred or family. Taking property by right of representation is called "succession per stirpes," in opposition to taking in one's own right, or as a principal, which is termed "taking per capita." Rotmanskey v. Heiss, 86 Md. 633, 39 A. 415. See, also, Per Stirpes and Representation.

STOCK.

Mercantile Law

The goods and wares of a merchant or tradesman, kept for sale and traffic. Schnitzer v. Excelsior Powder Mfg. Co., Mo.App., 160 S.W. 282, 285.

In a larger sense. The capital of a merchant or other person, including his merchandise, money, and credits, or, in other words, the entire property employed in business.

Corporation Law

The term is used in various senses. It may mean the capital or principal fund of a corporation or joint-stock company, formed by the contributions of subscribers or the sale of shares; the aggregate of a certain number of shares severally owned by the members or stockholders of the corporation or the proportional share of an individual stockholder; also the incorporeal property which is represented by the holding of a certificate of stock; and in a wider and more remote sense, the right of a shareholder to participate in the general management of the Company and to share proportionally in its net profits or earnings or in the distribution of assets on dissolution, the term "stock" has also been held to embrace not only capital stock of a corporation but all corporate wealth and resources, subject to all corporate liabilities and obligations. Whitman v. Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore, 148 Md. 90, 129 A. 22, 27. See also Thayer v. Wathen, 17 Tex.Civ.App. 382, 44 S.W. 906; Harrison v. Vines, 46 Tex. 15; Seawright v. Dickson, 16 Ga.App. 436, 85 S.E. 625, 628; Hood Rubber Co. v. Commonwealth, 238 Mass. 369, 131 N.E. 201, 202.

"Stock" is distinguished from "bonds" and, ordinarily, from "debentures," in that it gives right of ownership in part of assets of corporation and right to interest in any surplus after payment of debt. Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. v. Duffy-Powers, Inc., D.C.N.Y., 9 F.Supp. 199, 201.

The capital stock of a corporation differs widely in legal import from the aggregate shares into which it is divided by its charter (Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U.S. 686, 24 L. Ed. 558; People v. Coleman, 126 N.Y. 437, 27 N.E. 818, 12 L.R.A. 762) ; the former includes only the fund of money or other property derived by it from the sale or exchange of its shares of stock, while the latter represents the totality of the corporate assets and property ; Hamor v. Engineering Co., C.C.Del., 84 F. 396. See "Capital Stock."

The funded indebtedness of a state or government, also, is often represented by stocks, shares of which are held by its creditors at interest.

Classes of Corporate Stock

Preferred stock is a separate portion or class of the stock of a corporation, which is accorded, by the charter or by-laws, a preference or priority in respect to dividends, over the remainder of the stock of the corporation, which in that case is called common stock. That is, holders of the preferred stock are entitled to receive dividends at a fixed annual rate, out of the net earnings or profits of the corporation, before any distribution of earnings is made to the common stock. If the earnings applicable to the payment of dividends are not more than sufficient for such fixed annual dividend, they will be entirely absorbed by the preferred stock. If they are more than sufficient for the purpose, the remainder may be given entirely to the common stock (which is the more usual custom) or such remainder may be distributed pro rata to both classes of the stock, in which case the preferred stock is said to "participate" with the common. The fixed dividend on preferred stock may be "cumulative" or "non-cumulative." In the former case, if the stipulated dividend on preferred stock is not earned or paid in any one year, it becomes a charge upon the surplus earnings of the next and succeeding years, and all such accumulated and unpaid dividends on the preferred stock must be paid off before the common stock is entitled to receive dividends. In the case of "non-cumulative" preferred stock, its preference for any given year is extinguished by the failure to earn or pay its dividend in that year. If a corporation has no class of preferred stock, all its stock is common stock. The word "common" in this connection signifies that all the holders of such stock are entitled to an equal pro rata division of profits or net earnings, if any there be, without any preference or priority among themselves. Deferred stock is rarely issued by American corporations, though it is not uncommon in England. This kind of stock is distinguished by the fact that the payment of dividends upon it is expressly postponed until some other class of stock has received a dividend, or until some certain liability or obligation of the corporation is discharged. If there is a class of "preferred" stock, the common stock may in this sense be said to be "deferred," and the term is sometimes used as equivalent to "common" stock. But it is not impossible that a corporation should have three classes of stock: (1) Preferred, (2) common, and (3) deferred; the latter class being postponed, in respect to participation in profits, until both the preferred and the common stock had received dividends at a fixed rate. See Cook, Corp. § 12; Scott v. Railroad Co., 93 Md. 475, 49 A. 327; Jones v. Railroad Co., 67 N.H. 234, 30 A. 614, 68 Am.St.Rep. 650; General Inv. Co. v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 87 N.J.Eq. 234, 100 A. 347, 349; Day v. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co., 96 N.J.Eq. 736, 126 A. 302, 304.

Law of Descent

The term is used, metaphorically, to denote the original progenitor of a family, or the ancestor from whom the persons in question are all descended; such descendants being called "branches." Matter of Samson's Estate, 139 Misc. 490, 249 N.Y.S. 79, 83.

General

Capital stock. See that title.

Certificate of stock. See Certificate.

Exchange of stock. See Exchange.

Guarantied stock. Stock of a corporation which is entitled to receive dividends at a fixed annual rate, the payment of which dividends is guarantied by some outside person or corporation. Field v. Lamson, etc., Mfg. Co., 162 Mass. 388, 38 N.E.. 1126, 27 L.R.A. 136.

Public stocks. The funded or bonded debt of a government or state.

Special stock of a corporation, in Massachusetts, is authorized by statute. It is limited in amount to two-fifths of the actual capital. It is subject to redemption by the corporation at par after a fixed time. The corporation is bound to pay a fixed annual dividend on it as a debt. The holders of it are in no event liable for the debts of the corporation beyond their stock; and an issue of special stock makes all the general stockholders, liable for all debts and contracts of the corporation until the special stock is fully redeemed. American Tube Works v. Boston Mach. Co., 139 Mass. 5, 29 N.E. 63.

Stock association. A joint-stock company, (q. v.).

Stock jobber. A dealer in stock; one who buys and sells stock on his own account on speculation. State v. Debenture Co., 51 La.Ann. 1874, 26 So. 600.

Stock law district. A district in which stock ,is by law prohibited from running at large. Griffin v. Fowler, 17 Ala.App. 44, 81 So. 426, 428.

Stock life insurance company. One in which capital stock investment is made by subscribers to stock, and business is thereafter conducted by board of directors elected by its stockholders, and, subject to statutes, distribution of earnings or profits, as between stockholders and policy holders, is determined by board of directors. Atlantic Life Ins. Co. v. Moncure, D.C.Va., 35 F.2d 360, 362.

Stock note. The term has no technical meaning, and may as well apply to a note given on the sale of stock which the bank had purchased or taken in the payment of doubtful debts as to a note given on account of an original subscription to stock. Dunlap v. Smith, 12 Ill. 402.

Stock of merchandise. Goods or chattels which a merchant holds for sale. Swift & Co. v. Tempelos, 178 N.C. 487, 101 S.E. 8, 7 A.L.R. 1581; Meier Electric & Machine Co. v. Dixon, 81 Ind. App. 400, 143 N.E. 363, 364; Baiter v. Crum, 199 Mo.App. 380, 203 S.W. 506, 507.

Stock raising. The raising of domestic animals. Krobitzsch v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 181 Cal. 541, 185 P. 396, 398.

Watered stock. See that title.

STOCKHOLDER. A person who owns shares of stock in a corporation or joint-stock company. Ross v. Knapp, etc., Co., 77 Ill.App. 424; Corwith v. Culver, 69 Ill. 502; Hirshfeld v. Bopp, 145 N.Y. 84, 39 N.E. 817; Ludden & Bates v. Watt, 18 Ala. App. 652, 94 So. 239, 240; Fuller v. Lockhart, 209 N.C. 61, 182 S.E. 733.

Owner of shares in a corporation which has a capital stock. If a corporation has no capital stock, the corporators and their successors are called "members." Civ.Code Dak. § 392 (Comp. Laws N.D.1913, § 4515; Rev.Code 1919, § 247).

STOCKHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE SUIT. An equity proceeding by a stockholder for purpose of sustaining in his own name a right of action existing in corporation itself, where corporation would be an appropriate plaintiff. Felsenheld v. Bloch Bros. Tobacco Co., 119 W.Va. 167, 192 S.E. 545, 546, 123 A.L.R. 334. It is based upon two distinct wrongs: The act whereby corporation was caused to suffer damage, and act of corporation itself in refusing to redress such act. Druckerman v. Harbord, 174 Misc. 1077, 22 N.Y.S.2d 595, 597.

STOCKHOLDER'S LIABILITY. Phrase is frequently employed to denote stockholder's statutory, added or double liability for corporation's debts, notwithstanding full payment for stock, but is often employed where stockholder, agreeing to pay full par value of stock, obtained stock certificate before complete payment or where stock, only partly paid for, is intentionally issued by corporation as fully paid up and all or part of 'purported consideration therefor is entirely fictitious. Gray Const. Co. v. Fantle, 62 S.D. 345, 253 N.W. 464.

STOCKHOLDERS' REPRESENTATIVE ACTION. An action brought or maintained by a stockholder in behalf of himself and all others similarly situated. New York Cent. R. Co. v. New York & Harlem R. Co., 193 Misc. 795, 85 N.Y.S.2d 112, 115.

STOCKHOLDER'S SUIT. One by the corporation conducted by stockholder as its representative, and the stockholder is only a nominal plaintiff.and the corporation is the real party in interest. Rettinger v. Pierpont, 145 Neb. 161, 15 N. W.2d 393, 397. See, also, Derivative Stockholders' Suit.

STOP SIGN. A legally erected and maintained traffic signal requiring all traffic to stop before entering into or crossing an intersection. Sweet v. Awtrey, 70 Ga.App. 334, 28 S.E.2d 154, 161.

STOPPAGE. In the civil law. Compensation or set-off.

STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU. The act by which the unpaid vendor of goods stops their progress and resumes possession of them, while they are in course of transit from him to the purchaser, and not yet actually delivered to the latter.

The right of stoppage in transitu is that which the vendor has, when he sells goods on credit to another, of resuming the possession of the goods while they are in the possession of a carrier or middle-man, in the transit to the consignee or vendee, and before they arrive into his actual possession, or the destination he has appointed for them on his becoming bankrupt and insolvent. 2 Kent, Comm. 702.

The right which arises to an unpaid vendor to resume the possession, with which he has parted, of goods sold upon credit, before they come into the possession of a buyer who has become insolvent, bankrupt, or pecuniarily embarrassed. Inslee v. Lane, 57 N.H. 454.

The right of stoppage in transitu continues during the transitus, that is, until the goods are delivered by the carrier to the buyer, or possession, actual or constructive, is taken by the buyer. M. Degaro Co. v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 123 Ohio St. 179, 174 N.E. 587, 590.

STOPPAGE OF WORK. Within unemployment compensation law denying workman benefits, if his unemployment was due to stoppage of work because of labor dispute in which workman participated means strike. Board of Review v. Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation, 193 Okl. 36, 141 P.2d 69, 71 72.

A combined effort among workmen to compel the master to the concession of a certain demand, by preventing the conduct of his business until compliance with the demand. Keith Theatre v. Vachon. 134 Me. 392, 187 A. 692, 694.

Mining Law

The strike of a vein or lode is its extension in the horizontal plane, or its lengthwise trend or course with reference to the points of the compass; distinguished from its "dip," which is its slope or slant, away from the perpendicular, as it goes downward into the earth, or the angle of its deviation from the vertical plane. Empire Star Mines Co. v. Butler, 62 Cal.App.2d 49, 145 P.2d 49, 58.

STRIKE OFF. In common parlance, and 121 the language of the auction-room, property is understood to be "struck off" or "knocked down," when the auctioneer, by the fall of his hammer, or by any other audible or visible announcement, signifies to the bidder that he is entitled to the property on paying the amount of his bid, according to the terms of the sale. Sherwood v. Reade, 7 Hill, N. Y., 439.

A court is said to "strike off" a case when it directs the removal of the case from the record or docket, as being one over which it has no jurisdiction and no power to hear and determine it.

STRIKE SUITS. Shareholder derivative actions begun with hope of winning large attorney fees or private settlements, and with no intention of benefiting corporation on behalf of which suit it theoretically brought. Shapiro v. Magaziner, 210 A.2d 890, 894, 418 Pa. 278.

SUBJACENT SUPPORT. The right of land to be supported by the land which lies under it. See, also, Support.

SUBJECT.

Constitutional Law

One that owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by his laws. The natives of Great Britain are subjects of the British government. Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens; as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises; as subjects they are bound to obey the laws. Webster. The term is little used, in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government. The Pizarro, 2 Wheat. 245, 4 L.Ed. 226; Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504.

Legislation

The matter of public or private concern for which law is enacted. State ex rel. Jensen v. Kelly, 65 S.D. 345, 274 N.W. 319, 323. Thing legislated about or matters on which Legislature operates to accomplish a definite object or objects reasonably related one to the other. Crouch v. Benet, 198 S.C. 185, 17 S.E.2d 320, 322. The matter or thing forming the groundwork of the act. McCombs v. Dallas County, Tex.Civ.App., 136 S. W.2d 975, 982.

The constitutions of several of the states require that every act of the legislature shall relate to but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title of the statute. Ex parte Thomas, 113 Ala. 1, 21 So. 369; In re Mayer, 50 N.Y. 504; State v. County Treasurer, 4 S.C. 528; State v. Laundy, 103 Or. 443, 204 P. 958, 963; Roark v. Prideaux, Tex. Civ.App., 284 S.W. 624, 627; Hoyne v. Ling, 264 Ill. 506, 106 N.E. 349. But term "subject" within such constitutional provisions is to be given a broad and extensive meaning so as to allow legislature full scope to include in one act all matters having a logical or natural connection. Shaw v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 271, 134 P.2d 999, 1006; Jaffee v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 95, 134 P.2d 1027, 1032.

Logic

That concerning which the affirmation in a proposition is made; the first word in a proposition. State v. Armstrong, 31 N.M. 220, 243 P. 333, 337.

Scotch Law

The thing which is the object of an agreement.

SUBJECT-MATTER. The subject, or matter presented for consideration; the thing in dispute; the right which one party claims as against the other, as the right to divorce; of ejectment; to recover money; to have foreclosure. Flower Hospital v. Hart, 178 Okl. 447, 62 P.2d 1248, 1252. Nature of cause of action, and of relief sought. Moffatt v. Cassimus, 238 Ala. 99, 190 So. 299, 300.

SUBJECT TO. Liable, subordinate, subservient, inferior, obedient to; governed or affected by; provided that; provided; answerable for. American Mfg. Co. v. Commonwealth, 251 Mass. 329, 146 N.E. 801; Hannibal Trust Co. v. Elzea, 315 Mo. 485, 286 S.W. 371, 377; Allen v. Simmons, 97 W. Va. 318, 125 S.E. 86, 88; Middleton v. Findla, 25 Cal. 76; Manning v. Sams, 143 Ga. 205, 84 S.E. 451; Homan v. Employers Reinsurance Corporation, 345 Mo. 650, 136 S.W.2d 289, 302, 127 A.L.R. 163.

SUBJECTION. The obligation of one or more persons to act at the discretion or according to the judgment and will of others.

SUBLATA CAUSA TOLLITUR EFFECTUS. Co. Litt. 303. The cause being removed the effect ceases.

SUBLATA VENERATIONE MAGISTRATUUM,. RES PUBLICA RUIT. When respect for magistrates is taken away, the commonwealth falls.. Jenk. Cent. p. 43, case 81.

SUBLATO PRINCIPAL!, TOLLITUR ADJUNCTUM. When the principal is taken away, the incident is taken also. Co. Litt. 389a.

SUBLEASE, See Lease.

SUBLETTING. A leasing by lessee of a whole or part of premises during a portion of unexpired balance of his term. O'Neil v. A. F. Oys & Sons,. 216 Minn. 391, 13 N.W.2d 8, 11. See, also, Sublease.

SUBMARINE BASE. See Base.

SUBMERGENCE. As it concerns the proprietorship of land, consists in the disappearance of land under water and the formation of a more or less navigable body over it. Michelsen v. Leskowicz,. 269 App.Div. 693, 55 N.Y.S.2d 831, 838.

SUBMISSION. A yielding to authority. A citizen is bound to submit to the laws; a child to his parents.

Maritime Law

Submission on the part of the vanquished, and complete possession on the part of the victor, transfer property as between belligerents. The Alexander, 1 Gall. 532, Fed.Cas.No.164.

Practice

A contract between two or more parties whereby they agree to refer the subject in dispute to others and to be bound by their award. District of Columbia v. Bailey, 171 U.S. 161, 18 S.Ct. 868, 872, 43 L.Ed. 118. Schoolnick v. Finman, 108 Conn. 478, 144 A. 41, 42.

The submission itself implies an agreement to abide the result, even if no such agreement were expressed. Whitcher v. Whitcher, 49 N.H. 176, 180, 6 Am. Rep. 486.

SUBMISSION BOND. The bond by which the parties agree to submit their matters to arbitration, and by which they bind themselves to abide by the award of the arbitrator. Brown.

SUBMIT. To commit to the discretion of another. Board of Education of Cherokee County v. Board of Com'rs of Cherokee County, 150 N.C. 116, 63 S.E. 724, 729. To propound; to present for determination; as an advocate submits a proposition for the approval of the court. MacDermot v. Grant, 181 Cal. 332, 184 P. 396; Noland v. Hayward, 69 Colo. 181, 192 P. 657, 658; People ex rel. Kerner v. Huls, 355 Ill. 412, 189 N.E. 346, 348.

SUBMORTGAGE. When a person who holds a mortgage as security for a loan which he has made, procures a loan to himself from a third person, and pledges his mortgage as security, he effects what is called a "submortgage."

SUBNERVARE. To ham-string by cutting the sinews of the legs and thighs.

It was an old custom meretrices et impudicas mulieres subnervare. Wharton.

SUBNOTATIONS. In the civil law. The answers of the prince to questions which had been put to him respecting some obscure or doubtful point of law.

SUBORDINATE. Placed in a lower order, class, or rank; occupying a lower position in a regular descending series; inferior in order, nature, dignity, power, importance, or the like; belonging to an inferior order in classification, and having a lower position in a recognized scale; secondary, minor. In re Fidelity Union Title & Mortgage Guaranty Co., 118 N.J.Eq. 155, 177 A. 449, 452.

SUBORDINATE OFFICER. One who performs duties imposed on him under direction of a principal or superior officer or he may be an independent officer subject only to such directions as the statute lays on him. State ex rel. Landis v. Blake, 110 Fla. 178, 148 So. 566, 570.

SUBORN. To prepare. provide, or procure especially in a secret or underhand manner. United States v. Silverman, C.C.A.Pa., 106 F.2d 750, 751.

In criminal law. To procure another to commit perjury. Steph.Crim.Law, 74.

SUBORNATION OF PERJURY. In criminal law. The offense of procuring another to take such a false oath as would constitute perjury in the principal. Stone v. State, 118 Ga. 705, 45 S.E. 630, 98 Am.St.Rep. 145; State v. Fahey, 3 Pennewill, Del., 594, 54 A. 690; State v. Richardson, 248 Mo. 563, 154 S.W. 735, 737, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 307.

SUBORNER. One who suborns or procures another to commit any crime, particularly to commit perjury.

SUBPOENA. (Lat. Sub, under, poena, penalty). A process to cause a witness to appear and give testimony, commanding him to lay aside all pretenses and excuses, and appear before a court or magistrate therein named at a time therein mentioned to testify for the party named under a penalty therein mentioned. Alexander v. Harrison, 2 Ind.App. 47, 28 N.E. 119, 121.

This is called distinctively a subpcena ad testificandum.

Chancery Practice

A mandatory writ or process directed to and requiring one or more persons to appear at a time to come and answer the matters charged against him or them. Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618,

The writ of subpcena was originally proceeding in courts of common law to enforce attendance of witness, but was used in chancery for same purpose as citation in courts of civil and canon law, to compel appearance of defendant and to require him to answer plaintiff's allegations on oath. Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618.

SUBPCENA AD TESTIFICANDUM. Lat. Subpoena to testify. A technical and descriptive term for the ordinary subpcena. Catty v. Brockelbank, 124 N.J.Law 360, 12 A.2d 128, 129. See Subpoena.

SUBP4ENA DUCES TECUM. A process by which the court, at the instances of a suitor, commands a witness who has in his possession or control some document or paper that is pertinent to the issues of a pending controversy, to produce it at the trial. State ex rel. Everglades Cypress Co. v. Smith, 104 Fla. 91, 139 So. 794; Ex parte Hart, 240 Ala. 642, 200 So. 783, 785.

SUBREPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. Obtaining gifts of escheat, etc., from the king by concealing the truth. Bell; Calvin.

SUBREPTION. In French law. The fraud committed to obtain a pardon, title, or grant, by alleging facts contrary to truth.

SUBROGATION. The substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, Whyel v. Smith, 101 Fla. 971, 134 So. 552, 554; so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relatio.p to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities. Home Owners' Loan Corporation v. Baker, 299 Mass. 158, 12 N.E.2d 199, 201; Gerken v. Davidson Grocery Co., 57 Idaho 670, 69 P.2d 122, 126. A legal fiction through which a person who, not as a volunteer or in his own wrong, and in absence of outstanding and superior equities, pays debt of another, is substituted to all rights and remedies of the other, and the debt is treated in equity as still existing for his benefit, and the doctrine is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays the debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by such other. Home Owners' Loan Corporation v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 123 Conn. 232, 193 A. 769, 772. The principle which lies at the bottom of the doctrine is that the person seeking it must have paid the debt under grave necessity to save himself a loss. The right is never accorded to a volunteer. Callan Court Co. v. Citizens & Southern Nat. Bank, 184 Ga. 87, 190 S.E. 831, 856.

"Subrogation" is equitable remedy borrowed from civil law. Ierardi v. Farmers' Trust Co. of Newark, 4 W.W. Harr. Del., 246, 151 A. 822, 825. And as a matter of right, independently of agreement, takes place only for the benefit of insurers ; or of one who, being himself a creditor, has satisfied the lien of a prior creditor ; or for the benefit of a purchaser who has extinguished an incumbrance upon the estate which he has purchased; or of a co-obligor or surety who has paid the debt which ought, in whole or in part, to have been met by another. The doctrine of "subrogation" is not applied for the mere stranger or volunteer who has paid the debt of another without any assignment or agreement for subrogation, without being under any legal obligation to make the payment, and without being compelled to do so for the preservation of any rights or property of his own. Harford Bank of Bel Air v. Hopper's Estate, 169 Md. 314, 181 A. 751, 755.

It is also said that its elements are: (1) That party claiming it shall have paid debt; (2) that he was not a volunteer, but had a direct interest in discharge of debt or lien; (3) that he was secondarily liable for debt or discharge of lien; (4) that no injustice would be done to the other party by allowance of the equity. Hampton Loan & Exchange Bank v. Lightsey, 155 S.C. 222, 152 S.E. 425, 427.

Subrogation is of two kinds, either conventional or legal; the former being where the subrogation is express, by the acts of the creditor and the third person; the latter being (as in the case of sureties) where the subrogation is effected or implied by the operation of the law. Gordon v. Stewart, 4 Neb., Unof., 852, 96 N.W. 628; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cornwell, 72 Hun, 199, 25 N.Y.S. 348; French v. Grand Beach Co., 239 Mich. 575, 215 N.W. 13, 14; Meyer v. Florida Home Finders, 90 Fla. 128, 105 So. 267, 268; Combs v. Agee, 148 Va. 471, 139 S.E. 265, 266.

SUBROGEE. A person who is subrogated; one who succeeds to the rights of another by subrogation.

SUBSCRIBE. Literally to write underneath, as one's name; sub, under; scribere, to write; or, to write below a documentary statement, and in its popular meaning is usually limited to a signature at the end of a printed or written instrument. Corporation Commission of North Carolina v. Wilkinson, 201 N.C. 344, 160 S.E. 292, 294. In re Arcowsky's Will, 171 Misc. 41, 11 N.Y.S.2d 853, 854. Also to agree in writing to furnish money or its equivalent. Jefferson County Farm Bureau v. Sherman, 208 Iowa 614, 226 N.W. 182, 185.

SUBSCRIBER. One who writes his name under a written instrument; one who affixes his signature to any document, whether for the purpose of authenticating or attesting it, of adopting its terms as his own expressions, or of binding himself by an engagement which it contains.

One who becomes bound by a subscription to the capital stock of a corporation. Latimer v. Bennett, 37 Ga.App. 246, 139 S.E. 570, 572. A "subscriber" is one who has agreed to take stock from the corporation on the original issue of such stock. Jones v. Rankin, 19 N.M. 56, 140 P. 1120, 1121. "Subscriber," as used in the Workmen's Compensation Act, means an employer who has become a member of the association or insured under the act. In re Cox, 225 Mass. 220, 114 N.E. 281, 283.

SUBSCRIBING WITNESS. He who witnesses or attests the signature of a party to an instrument, and in testimony thereof subscribes his own name to the document.

One who sees a writing executed, or hears it acknowledged, and at the request of the party thereupon signs his name as a witness.

SUBSCRIPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A writing under, or under-writing; a writing of the name under or at the bottom of an instrument by way of attestation or ratification; subscription.

That kind of imperial constitution which was granted in answer to the prayer of a petitioner who was present. Calvin.

SUBSCRIPTION. The act of writing one's name under a written instrument; the affixing one's signature to any document, whether for the purpose of authenticating or attesting it, of adopting its terms as one's own expressions, or of binding one's self by an engagement which it contains.

Subscription is the act of the hand, while attestation is the act of the senses. To subscribe a paper published as a will is only to write on the same paper the name of the witness; to attest a will is to know that it was published as such, and to certify the facts required to constitute an actual and legal publication. In re Downie's Will, 42 Wis. 66, 76.

A written contract by which one engages to take and pay for capital stock of a corporation, or to contribute a sum of money for a designated purpose, either gratuitously, as in the case of subscribing to a charity, or in consideration of,' an equivalent to be rendered, as a subscription to a periodical, a forthcoming book, a series of entertainments, or the like. Davis v. Roney, 124 Kan. 132, 257 P. 746, 747; First Caldwell Oil Co. v. Hunt, 100 N.J.L. 308, 127 A. 209, 210.

SUBSCRIPTION LIST. A list of subscribers to some agreement with each other or a third person.

SUBSELLIA. Lat. In Roman law. Lower seats or benches, occupied by the judices and by inferior magistrates when they sat in judgment, as distinguished from the tribunal of the prEetor. Calvin.

SUBSOIL. The word includes, prima facie, all that is below the actual surface, down to the center of the earth. 17 L.J.C.P. 162. It is a wider term than mines, quarries, or minerals. 2 L.R. Ir. 339.

SUBSTANCE. Essence; the material or essential part of a thing, as distinguished from "form." State v. Burgdoerfer, 107 Mo. 1, 17 S.W. 646, 14 L.R.A. 846; Pierson v. Insurance Co., 7 Houst., Del., 307, 31 A. 966; Metzroth v. City of New York, 241 N.Y. 470, 150 N.E. 519, 520; State v. Gregory, 198 Iowa 316, 198 N.W. 58, 60. That which is essential. Rose v. Osborne, 136 Me. 15, 1 A.2d 225, 226.

It means not merely subject of act, but an intelligible abstract or synopsis of its material and substantial elements, though the "substance" may be stated without recital of any details. State, on Inf. of Murphy, v. Brooks, 241 Ala. 55, 1 So.2d 370, 371.

SUBSTANTIAL. Of real worth and importance; of considerable value; valuable. Tax Commission of Ohio v. American Humane Education Soc., 42 Ohio App. 4, 181 N.E. 557. Belonging to substance; actually existing; real; not seeming or imaginary; not illusive; solid; true; veritable. Seglem v. Skelly Oil Co., 145 Kan. 216, 65 P.2d 553, 554. Something worth while as distinguished from something without value or merely nominal. In re Krause's Estate, 173 Wash. 1, 21 P.2d 268. Synonymous with material. Lewandoski v. Finkel, 129 Conn. 526, 29 A.2d 762, 764.

A claim to bankrupt's property is "substantial" so as to preclude summary proceeding if there are probable facts or circumstances sufficient to support a reasonable legal hypothesis upon which it should be allowed. Atlanta Flooring & Insulation Co. v. Russell, C.C.A.Ga., 146 F.2d 884, 886, 888.

SUBSTANTIAL COMPLIANCE RULE. In like insurance law is that where insured has done substantially all he is required to do under policy to effect change in beneficiary and mere ministerial acts of insurer's officers and agents only remain to be done, change will take effect. Inter-Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Cochran, 259 Ky. 677, 83 S.W. 2d 11, 14.

SUBSTANTIAL DAMAGES. See Damages.

SUBSTANTIAL EQUIVALENT OF PATENTED DEVICE. Same as thing itself, so that if two devices do same work in substantially same way, and accomplish substantially same results, they are equivalent, even though differing in name, form, or shape. Bedell v. Dictograph Products Co., 251 App.Div. 243, 296 N.Y.S. 25, 32; Freeman v. Altvater, C.C.A.Mo., 66 F.2d 506, 511.

SUBSTANTIAL JUSTICE. Justice administered according to the rules of substantive law, notwithstanding errors of procedure. Interstate Bankers Corporation v. Kennedy, D.C.Mun.App., 33 A.2d 165, 166.

SUBSTANTIAL PERFORMANCE. Exists where there has been no willful departure from the terms of the contract, and no omission in essential points, and the contract has been honestly and faithfully performed in its material and substantial particulars, and the only variance from the strict and literal performance consists of technical or unimportant omissions or defects. Cotherman v. Oriental Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 272 S.W. 616, 619; Brown v. Aguilar, 202 Cal. 143, 259 P. 735, 737; Cramer v. Esswein, 220 App.Div. 10, 220 N.Y.S. 634; Connell v. Higgins, 170 Cal. 541, 150 P. 769, 774. Performance except as to unsubstantial omissions with compensation therefor. Cassino v. Yacevich, 261 App.Div. 685, 27 N.Y.S. 2d 95, 97; 99.

Equitable doctrine of "substantial performance", protects against forfeiture, for technical inadvertence or trivial variations or omissions in performance. Sgarlat v. Griffith, 349 Pa. 42, 36 A.2d 330, 332.

SUBSTITUTES. In Scotch law. The person first called or nominated in a tailzie (entailment of an estate upon a number of heirs in succession) is called the "institute" or "heir-institute;" the rest are called "substitutes."

SUBSTITUTIO IILZEREDIS. Lat. In Roman law, is was competent for a testator after instituting a hceres (called the "hceres institutus") to substitute another (called the "hceres substitutes") in his place in a certain event. If the event upon which the substitution was to take effect was the refusal of the instituted heir to accept the inheritance at all, then the substitution was called "vulgaris," (or common;) but if the event was the death of the infant (pupillus) after acceptance, and before attaining his majority, (of fourteen years if a male, and of twelve years if a female,) then the substitution was called "pupillaris," (or for minors.) Brown.

SUBSTITUTION. Putting in place of another thing, change of one thing for another, serving in lieu of another, having some of its parts replaced. In re Cooke's Estate, 147 Misc. 528, 264 N.Y.S. 336.

In the civil law. The putting one person in place of another; particularly, the act of a testator in naming a second devisee or legatee who is to take the bequest either on failure of the original devisee or legatee or after him.

"Substitution," with respect to wills, and in view of Civ. Code, art. 1520, prohibiting substitution, is the putting of one person in the place of another so that he may, in default of ability in the former, or after him, have the benefit of the devise or legacy, particularly the act of testator in naming a second devisee or legatee who is to take the bequest on failure of the original devisee or legatee, or after him. In re Courtin, 144 La. 971, 81 So. 457, 459.

In Scotch law. The enumeration or designation of the heirs in a settlement of property. Substitutes in an entail are those heirs who are appointed in succession on failure of others.

SUBSTITUTIONAL, SUBSTITUTIONARY. Where a will contains a gift of property to a class of persons, with a clause providing that on the death of a member of the class before the period of distribution his share is to go to his issue, (if any,) so as to substitute them for him, the gift to the issue is said to be substitutional or substitutionary. A bequest to such of the children of A. as shall be living at the testator's death, with a direction that the issue of such as shall have died shall take the shares which their parents would have taken, if living at the testator's death, is an example. Sweet. Acken v. Osborn, 45 N.J.Eq. 377, 17 A. 767; In re De Laveaga's Estate, 119 Cal. 651, 51 P. 1074.

SUBSTITUTIONARY EVIDENCE. Such as is admitted as a substitute for what would be the original or primary instrument of evidence; as where a witness is permitted to testify to the contents of a lost document.

SUBSTITUTIONARY EXECUTOR. See Executor.

SUBSTRACTION. In French law. The fraudulent appropriation of any property, but particularly of the goods of a decedent's estate.

SUBTENANT. An under-tenant; one who leases all or a part of the rented premises from the original lessee for a term less than that held by the latter. Forrest v. Durnell, 86 Tex. 647, 26 S.W. 481; Peak v. Gaddy, 152 Okl. 138, 3 P.2d 1042, 1043.

SUBTERFUGE. That to which one resorts for escape or concealment. Los Angeles Fisheries v. Crook, C.C.A.Cal., 47 F.2d 1031, 1035.

SUBTERRANEAN WATERS, See Water.

SUBTRACTION. The offense of withholding or withdrawing from another man what by law he is entitled to. There are various descriptions of this offense, of which the principal are as follows: (1) Subtraction of suit and services, which is a species of injury affecting a man's real property, and consists of a withdrawal of (or a neglect to perform or pay) the fealty, suit of court, rent, or services reserved by the lessor of the land. (2) Subtraction of tithes is the withholding from the parson or vicar the tithes to which he is entitled, and this is cognizable in the ecclesiastical courts. (3) Subtraction of conjugal rights is the withdrawing or withholding by a husband or wife of those rights and privileges which the law allows to either party. (4) Subtraction of legacies is the withholding or detaining of legacies by an executor. (5) Subtraction of church rates, in English law, consists in the refusal to pay the amount of rate at which any individual parishioner has been assessed for the necessary repairs of the parish church. Brown.

SUBTRACTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS. The act of a husband or wife living separately from the other without a lawful cause. 3 Bl.Comm. 94. See, also, Subtraction.

SUBURBAN!. Lat. In old English law. Husbandmen.

SUBVASSORES. In old Scotch law. Base holders; inferior holders; they who held their lands of knights. Skene.

SUCCESSIO. Lat. In the civil law. A coming in place of another, on his decease; a coming into the estate which a deceased person had at the time of his death. This was either by virtue of an express appointment of the deceased person by his will, (ex testamento,) or by the general appointment of law in case of intestacy, (ab intestato.) Inst. 2, 9, 7; Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 10.

SUCCESSION. The devolution of title to property under the law of descent and distribution. State ex rel. Walker v. Payne, 129 Mo. 468, 31 S.W. 797, 798, 3 L.R.A. 576. The act or right of legal or official investment with a predecessor's office, dignity, possession, or functions; also the legal or actual order of so succeeding from that which is or is to be vested or taken. Glascott v. Bragg, 111 Wis. 605, 87 N.W. 853, 854, 56 L.R.A. 258.

The word when applied to realty denotes persons who take by will or inheritance and excludes those who take by deed, grant, gift, or any form of purchase or contract. Olsan Bros. v. Miller, Tex.Civ.App., 108 S.W.2d 856, 857.

The right by which one set of men may, by succeeding another set, acquire a property in all the goods, movables, and other chattels of a corporation. 2 Bl.Comm. 430. The power of perpetual succession is one of the peculiar properties of a corporation. 2 Kent, Comm. 267. See Perpetual.

Civil Law and Louisiana

The fact of the transmission of the rights, estate, obligations, and charges of a deceased person to his heir or heirs.

The right by which the heir can take possession of the decedent's estate. The right of the heir to step into the place of the deceased, with respect to the possession, control, enjoyment, administration, and settlement of all the latter's property, rights, obligations, charges, etc.

The estate of a deceased person, comprising all kinds of property owned or claimed by him, as well as his debts and obligations, and considered as a legal entity (according to the notion of the Roman law) for certain purposes, such as collecting assets and paying debts. Davenport v. Adler, 52 La.Ann. 263, 26 So. 836; Succession of Blumberg, 148 La. 1030, 88 So. 297, 299.

The transmission of the rights and obligations of the deceased to the heirs, also the estates, rights, and charges which a person leaves after his death, whether the property exceeds the charges or the charges exceed the property, or whether he has only left charges without any property. Delaneuville v. Duhe, 114 La. 62, 38 So. 20, 22.

The succession not only includes the rights and obligations of the deceased as they exist at the time of his death, but all that has accrued thereto since the opening of the succession, as also the new charges to which it becomes subject.

The coming in of another to take the property of one who dies without disposing of it by will.

General

Artificial succession. That attribute of a corporation by which, in contemplation of law, the company itself remains always the same though its constituent members or stockholders may change from time to time. See Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend., N.Y., 100.

Hereditary succession. Descent or title, by descent at common law; the title whereby a man on the death of his ancestor acquires his estate by right of representation as his heir at law. See In re Donahue's Estate, 36 Cal. 332; Barclay v. Cameron, 25 Tex. 241.

Intestate succession. The succession of an heir at law to the property and estate of his ancestor when the latter has died intestate, or leaving a will which has been annulled or set aside.

Irregular succession. That which is established by law in favor of certain persons, or of the state, in default of heirs, either legal or instituted by testament.

Legal succession. That which the law establishes in favor of the nearest relation of a deceased person.

Natural succession. Succession taking place between natural persons, for example, in descent on the death of an ancestor. Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend., N.Y., 100.

SUCCESSION DUTY. An American law. A tax placed on the gratuitous acquisition of property passing on the death of any person by transfer from one person to another. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Maxwell, 221 N.C. 528, 20 S.E.2d 840, 842.

In English law. A duty, (varying from one to ten per cent.,) payable under the statute 16 & 17 Viet. c. 51, in respect chiefly of real estate and leaseholds, but generally in respect of all property (not already chargeable with legacy duty) devolving upon any one In consequence of any death. Brown.

Succession tax. A tax imposed upon the privilege of receiving property from a decedent by devise or inheritance. See Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 346, 23 L.Ed. 99; State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 287, 45 S.W. 245, 40 L.R.A. 280; Wonderly v. Tax Commission of Ohio, 112 Ohio St. 233, 147 N.E. 509, 512; Shepard v. State, 184 Wis. 88, 197 N.W. 344, 345; Bankers' Trust Co. v. State, 96 Conn. 361, 114 A. 104, 106.

It is tax on right of succession to property, and not on property itself. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 208 N.C. 578, 182 S.E. 341.

Testamentary succession. In the civil law, that which results from the institution of an heir in a testament executed in the form prescribed by law.

Vacant succession. When no one claims it, or when all the heirs are unknown, or when all the known heirs to it have renounced it. Civ.Code La. art. 1095. Simmons v. Saul, 11 S.Ct. 369, 138 U.S. 439, 34 L.Ed. 1054.

SUCCESSIVE. Following one after another in a line or series. In re Buchholtz, Cust. & Pat.App., 54 F.2d 965, 966.

SUCCESSOR. One that succeeds or follows; one who takes the place that another has left, and sustains the like part or character; one who takes the place of another by succession. Thompson v. North Texas Nat. Bank, Tex.Com.App., 37 S.W.2d 735, 740; Wawak Co. v. Kaiser, C.C.A.Ill., 90 F.2d 694, 697.

One who has been appointed or elected to hold an office after the term of the present incumbent.

Term with reference to corporations, generally means another corporation which, through amalgamation, consolidation, or other legal succession, becomes invested with rights and assumes burdens of first corporation. Schmoele v. Atlantic City R. Co., 110 N.J.Eq. 597, 160 A. 524, 526.

Singular Successor

A term borrowed from the civil law, denoting a person who succeeds to the rights of a former owner in a single article of property, (as by purchase,) as distinguished from a universal successor, who succeeds to all the rights and powers of a former owner, as in the case of a bankrupt or intestate estate.

SUCCINCT. Brief, precise, exact. Logan v. Hite, 214 Ind. 233, 13 N.E.2d 702, 703.

SUCCURRITUR MINORI; FACILIS EST LAPSUS JUVENTUTIS. A minor is [to be] aided; a mistake of youth is easy, [youth is liable to err.] Jenk. Cent. p. 47, case 89.

SUCH. Of that kind, having particular quality or character specified. In re Brock, 312 Pa. 92, 166 A. 785, 787. Identical with, being the same as what has been mentioned. In re Watson's Will, 144 Misc. 213, 258 N.Y.S. 755. Alike, similar, of the like kind; "such" represents the object as already particularized in terms which are not mentioned, and is a descriptive and relative word, referring to the last antecedent. Strawberry Hill Land Corporation v. Starbuck, 124 Va. 71, 97 S.E. 362, 366; People ex rel. Kelly v. Public Service Commission, 171 App.Div. 810, 157 N.Y.S. 703, 705.

SUCKEN, SUCKEN. In Scotch law. The whole lands astricted to a mill; that is, the lands of which the tenants are obliged to send their grain to that mill. Bell.

SUDDEN. Happening without previous notice or with very brief notice; coming or occurring unexpectedly; unforeseen; unprepared for. Hagaman v. Manley, 141 Kan. 647, 42 P.2d 946, 949.

SUDDEN AFFRAY. A difficulty or fight suddenly resulting from the mutual agreement of two or more parties. Cavanaugh v. Commonwealth, 172 Ky. 799, 190 S.W. 123, 126; Gibbons v. Commonwealth, 253 Ky. 72, 68 S.W.2d 753.

SUDDEN HEAT OF PASSION. In the common-law definition of manslaughter, this phrase means an access of rage or anger, suddenly arising from a contemporary provocation. It means that the provocation must arise at the time of the killing, and that the passion is not the result of a former provocation, and the act must be directly caused by the passion arising out of the provocation at the time of the homicide. Stell v. State, Tex.Cr. App., 58 S.W. 75; Farrar v. State, 29 Tex.App. 250, 15 S.W. 719; Violett v. Com., 24 Ky.Law Rep. 1720, 72 S.W. 1.

SUDDEN OR VIOLENT INJURY. Injury occurring unexpectedly and not naturally or in the ordinary course of events. State v. District Court of St. Louis County, 138 Minn. 131, 164 N.W. 585, L.R.A.1918C, 116.

SUDDEN PERIL RULE. Under this rule, a defendant who is guilty of primary negligence is not liable in case of sudden peril where the peril or alarm was caused by the negligence of the opposite party, apprehension of peril from the standpoint of defendant seeking to excuse his primary negligence was reasonable, appearance of danger was so imminent as to leave no time for deliberation. White v. Munson, Tex.Civ.App., 162 S.W.2d 429, 432.

But rule cannot be invoked by one bringing emergency on or not using due care, tb avoid it. McClelland v. Interstate Transit Lines, 142 Neb. 439, 6 N.W.2d 384, 391.

SUDDER. In Hindu law. The best; the forecourt of a house; the chief seat of government, contradistinguished from "mofussil," or interior of the country; the presidency. Wharton.

SUE. To commence or to continue legal proceedings for recovery of a right; to proceed with as an action, and follow it up to its proper termination; to gain by legal process. Lervold v. Republic Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 142 Kan. 43, 45 P.2d 839, 843, 106 A.L.R. 673. Word includes a proceeding instituted by confession of judgment. Commonwealth ex rel. Bradford County v. Lynch, 146 Pa. Super. 469, 23 A.2d 77, 78.

SUE OUT. To obtain by application; to petition for and take out. Properly the term is applied only to the obtaining and issuing of such process as is only accorded upon an application first made; but conventionally it is also used of the taking out of process which issues of course. The term is occasionally used of instruments other than writs. Thus, we speak of "suing out" a pardon. See South Missouri Lumber Co. v. Wright, 114 Mo. 326, 21 S.W. 811; Kelley v. Vincent, 8 Ohio St. 420; U. S. v. American Lumber Co., 29 C.C.A. 431, 85 F. 830.

SUERTE. In Spanish law. A small lot of ground. Particularly, such a lot within the limits of a city or town used for cultivation or planting as a garden, vineyard or orchard. Building lots in towns and cities are called "solares." Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.

SUFFER. To allow, to admit, or to permit. Gregory v. Marks, C.C.Ill., Fed.Cas.No.5,802; 10 Fed.Cas. 1194, 1198; Osborne v. Winter, 133 Cal. App. 664, 24 P.2d 892. It includes knowledge of what is to be done under sufferance. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Port Chester v. New York Title Ins. Co., 171 Misc. 854, 12 N.Y.S.2d 703, 709.

Also to have the feeling or sensation that arises from the action of something painful, distressing or the like; to feel or endure pain; to endure or undergo without sinking; to support; to bear up under; to be affected by; to sustain; to experience; to feel pain, physical or mental. The customary use of the word indicates some experience of conscious pain. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Calhoun, C.C.A.Mo., 97 F.2d 896, 898.

To suffer an act to be done or a condition to exist is to permit or consent to it; to approve of it, and not to hinder it. It implies knowledge, a willingness of the mind and responsible control or ability to prevent. Wilspn v. Nelson, 183 U.S. 191, 22 S.Ct. 74, 46 L.Ed. 147; Selleck v. Selleek, 19 Conn. 505; Gregory v. U. S., C.C.N.Y., Fed.Cas. No.5,803; 10 Fed.Cas. 1197; In re Thomas, D.C.Pa., 103 F. 272, 274; Allison v. Commonwealth, 221 Ky. 205, 298 S.W. 680.

SUFFERANCE. Toleration; negative permission, by not forbidding; passive consent; license implied from the omission or neglect to enforce an adverse right. See People on Inf. of Price v. Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Co., 225 N.Y. 25, 121 N.E. 474, 476.

SUFFERANCE WHARVES. In English law. Wharves in which goods may be landed before any duty is paid. They are appointed for the purpose by the commissioners of the customs. 2 Steph. Comm. 500, note.

SUFFERENTIA PACIS. Lat. A grant or sufferance of peace or truce.

SUFFERING A RECOVERY. A recovery was effected by the party wishing to convey the land suffering a fictitious action to be brought against him by the party to whom the land was to be conveyed, (the demandant,) and allowing the demandant to recover a judgment against him for the land in question. The vendor, or conveying party, in thus assisting or permitting the demandant so to recover a judgment against him, was thence technically said to "suffer a recovery." Brown.

SUFFICIENT. Adequate, enough, as much as may be necessary, equal or fit for end proposed, and that which may be necessary to accomplish an object. Brittain v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 95 Ohio St. 391, 115 N.E. 110; Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Enderle, Tex.Civ.App., 170 S.W. 276, 277; Commissioners of Sinking Fund of Louisville v. Anderson, D.C.Ky., 20 F.Supp. 217, 220. Of such quality, number, force, or value as to serve a need or purpose. Nissen v. Miller, 44 N.M. 487, 105 P.2d 324, 326. As to sufficient "Consideration" see that title.

SUFFICIENT CAUSE. With respect to right to remove officers does not mean any cause which removing officer may deem sufficient, but means legal cause, specifically relating to and affecting administration of office, of substantial nature directly affecting public's rights and interests, touching officer's qualifications or his performance of duties, and showing that he is not fit or proper to hold office. Sausbier v. Wheeler, 252 App.Div. 267, 299 N.Y.S. 466, 472; Zurich General Accident & Liability Ins. Co. v. Kinsler, 12 Cal.2d 98, 81 P.2d 913, 915.

SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE. Adequate evidence; such evidence, in character, weight, or amount, as will legally justify the judicial or official action demanded; according to circumstances, it may be "prima facie" or "satisfactory" evidence, according to the definitions of those terms given above. People v. Stern, 33 Misc.Rep. 455, 68 N. Y.S. 732; Mallery v. Young, 94 Ga. 804, 22 S.E. 142; Parker v. Overman, 18 How. 141, 15 L.Ed. 318; State v. Newton, 33 Ark. 284.

Sufficient evidence is that which is satisfactory for the purpose; Mallery v. Young, 94 Ga. 804, 22 S.E. 142, 143., that amount of proof which ordinarily satisfies an unprejudiced mind, beyond a reasonable doubt; Cole v. McClure, 88 Ohio St. 1, 102 N.E. 264, 266. The term is not synonymous with "conclusive." Pensacola & A. R. Co. v. State, 5 So. 833, 835, 25 Fla. 310, 3 L.R.A. 661. But it may be used interchangeably with the term "weight of evidence." Waldron v. New York Cent. Ry. Co., 106 Ohio St. 371, 140 N.E. 161, 163. See, also, Satisfactory Evidence.

SUFFOCATE. To kill by stopping respiration, as by strangling or asphyxiation. Stone v. Physicians Casualty Ass'n of America, 130 Neb. 769, 266 N.W. 605, 607.

SUFFRAGAN. Bishops who in former times were appointed to supply the place of others during their absence on embassies or other business were so termed. They were consecrated as other bishops were, and were anciently called "chorepiscopi," or "bishops of the county," in contradistinction to the regular bishops of the city or see. The practice of creating suffragan bishop;, after having long been discontinued, was recently revived; and such bishops are now permanently "assistant" to the bishops. Brown.

A suffragan is a titular bishop ordained to aid and assist the bishop of the diocese in his spiritual function; or one who supplieth the place instead of the bishop, by whose suffrage ecclesiastical causes or matters committed to him are to be adjudged, acted on, or determined. Some writers call these suffragans by the name of "subsidiary bishols." Tomlins.

SUFFRAGE. A vote; the act of voting; the right or privilege of casting a vote at public elections. The last is the meaning of the term in such phrases as "the extension of the suffrage," "universal suffrage," etc. Spitzer v. Fulton, 33 Misc. 257, 68 N.Y.S. 660; Coneld v. Farrell, 38 Okl. 608, 134 P. 407, 409.

Participation in the suffrage is not of right, but is granted by the state on a consideration of what is most for the interest of the state, Cooley, Const., 2d Ed. 752; Spencer v. Board of Registration, 8 D.C. 169, 29 Am.Rep. 582; U. S. v. Anthony, 11 Blatchf. 200, Fed.Cas.No.14,459. The grant of suffrage makes it a legal right until it is recalled, and it is protected by the law as property is.

SIM RAGIUM. Lat. In Roman law. A vote., the right of voting in the assemblies of the people.

Aid or influence used or promised to obtain some honor or office; the purchase of office. Cod. 4, 3.

SUGGEST. To introduce indirectly to the thought; to propose with diffidence or modesty; to hint; to intimate. Sims v. Ratcliff, 62 Ind.App. 184, 110 N. E. 122, 123.

SUGGESTIO FALSI. Lat. Suggestion or representation of that which is false; false representation. To recite in a deed that a will was duly executed, when it was not, is suggestio falsi; and to conceal from the heir that the will was not duly executed is suppressio veri. 1 P. Wms. 240, and see Turney v. Avery, 92 N.J.Eq. 473, 113 A. 710.

SUGGESTION. A suggesting, presentation of an idea especially indirectly, as through association of ideas, bringing before the mind for consideration, action, solution, or the like. Artificial Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Martin, 102 Ind.App. 74, 198 N.E. 446, 449.

It is in the nature of a hint or insinuation, and lacks the element of probability. Facts which merely suggest do not raise an inference of the existence of the fact suggested, and therefore a suggestion is much less than an inference or presumption. Lopa v. Smith, 37 Ohio App. 346, 174 N.E. 258, 259.

In practice. A statement, formally entered on the record, of some fact or circumstance which will materially affect the further proceedings in the cause, or which is necessary to be brought to the knowledge of the court in order to its right disposition of the action, but which, for some reason, cannot be pleaded. Thus, if one of the parties dies after issue and before trial, his death may be suggested on the record. C. J. Huebel Co. v. Mackinnon, 186 Mich. 617, 152 N.W. 1098, 1100.

SUGGESTION OF ERROR. Request for rehearing. White v. State, 190 Miss. 589, 195 So. 479, 482.

SUGGESTIVE INTERROGATION. A phrase used by some writers to signify "leading question." 2 Benth. Jud. Ev. b. 3, c. 3. It is used in the French law.

SUI GENERIS. Lat. Of its own kind or class; e., the only one of its own kind; peculiar.

SUI IUEREDES. Lat. In the civil law. One's own heirs; proper heirs. Inst. 2, 19, 2.

SUI JURIS. Lat. Of his own right; possessing full social and civil rights; not under any legal disability, or the power of another, or guardianship.

Having capacity to manage one's own affairs; not under legal disability to act for one's self. Story, Ag. § 2.

SUICIDE. Self-destruction; the deliberate termination of one's existence, while in the possession and enjoyment of his mental faculties. See Insurance Co. v. Moore, 34 Mich. 41; Weber v. Supreme Tent, 172 N.Y. 490, 65 N.E. 258, 92 Am.St. Rep. 753; Daniels v. Railroad Co., 183 Mass. 393, 67 N.E. 424, 62 L.R.A. 751.

The term "suicide," as used in insurance policies, has been held to mean death by one's own hand, irrespective of mental condition. Great Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 148 Miss. 173, 114 So. 262, 263, 56 A.L.R. 681. But other cases hold that intent is essential. Benard v. Protected Home Circle, 161 App. Div. 59, 146 N.Y.S. 232, 233; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 42 Ga.App. 624, 157 S.E. 112.

SUICIDE, SANE OR INSANE. An exemption from liability for death by "suicide, sane or insane," in a life policy includes self-destruction irrespective of the assured's mental condition at the time of the act. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Blum, C.C.A.Wash., 258 F. 897, 899; Power v. Modern Brotherhood of America, 98 Kan. 487, 158 P. 870, 872.

SUING AND LABORING CLAUSE. A clause in an English policy of marine insurance, generally in the following form: "In case of any loss or misfortune, it shall be lawful for the assured, their factors, servants and assigns, to sue, labor, and travel for, in, and about the defense, safeguard, and recovery of the" property insured, "without prejudice to this insurance; to the charges whereof we, the assurers, will contribute." The object of the clause is to encourage the assured to exert themselves in preserving the property from loss. Sweet.

SUIT.

Old English Law

The witnesses or followers of the plaintiff. 3 Bl. Comm. 295. See Secta.

Old books mention the word in many connections which are now disused,-at least, in the United States. Thus, "suit" was used of following any one, or in the sense of pursuit; as in the phrase "making fresh suit." It was also used of a petition to the king or lord. "Suit of court" was the attendance which a tenant owed at the court of his lord. "Suit covenant" and "suit custom" seem to have signified a right to one's attendance, or one's obligation to attend, at the lord's court, founded upon a known covenant, or an immemorial usage or practice of ancestors. "Suit regal" was attendance at the sheriff's tourn or leet, (his court.) "Suit of the king's peace" was pursuing an offender,-one charged with breach of the peace, while "suithold" was a tenure in consideration of certain services to the superior lord. Abbott.

Modern Law

A generic term, of comprehensive signification, and applies to any proceeding by one person or persons against another or others in a court of justice in which the plaintiff pursues, in such court, the remedy which the law affords him for the redress of an injury or the enforcement of a right, whether at law or in equity. See Kohl v. U. S., 91 U.S. 375, 23 L.Ed. 449; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 464, 7 L.Ed. 481; Syracuse Plaster Co. v. Agostini Bros. Bldg. Corporation, 169 Misc. 564, 7 N.Y.S.2d 897. It is, however, seldom applied to a criminal prosecution. And it is sometimes restricted to the designation of a proceeding in equity, to distinguish such proceeding from an action at law. Patterson v. Standard Accident Ins. Co., 178 Mich. 288, 144 N.W. 491, 492, 51 L.R.A., N.S., 583. For "Ancillary" suit and suit "Jn Rem" see those titles.

General

Class suits. See Class or Representative Action.

Suit against state. Suit in which relief against the state is sought. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bosworth, D.C.Ky., 209 F. 380, 401.

Within rule of state immunity from suit without its consent, one in which the subject matter must be an interest of value in a material sense to the state as a distinct entity. American Federation of Labor v. Mann, Tex.Civ. App., 188 S.W.2d 276, 279, 280. And in the determination of whether a suit is one against the state, it is not necessary that the state appear on the record as a party; but, if the state is the real party against which the relief is sought, the suit is a "suit against the state" although nominally it appears on the record as a suit against one of its officers. McKamey v. Aikin, Tex.Civ.App., 118 S.W.2d 482, 483, 484.

Suit money. An allowance, in the nature of temporary alimony, authorized by statute in some states to be made to a wife on the institution of her suit for divorce, intended to cover the reasonable expenses of the suit and to provide her with means for the efficient preparation and trial of her case. See Yost v. Yost, 141 Ind. 584, 41 N.E. 11.

Suit of a civil nature. A suit for the remedy of a private wrong, the test being whether the law is penal in the strict and primary sense, and whether the wrong is to the public or to the individual. City of Montgomery, Ala., v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., D.C.Ala., 218 F. 471, 474.

Suit of court. This phrase denoted the duty of attending the lord's court, and, in common with fealty, was one of the incidents of a feudal holding. Brown.

Suit of the king's peace. The pursuing a man for breach of the king's peace by treasons, insurrections, or trespasses. Cowell.

Suits or proceedings at law or in chancery. Suits instituted and carried on in substantial conformity with the forms and modes prescribed by the common law or by the rules in chancery excluding cases instituted and carried on solely in accordance with statutory provisions. Lavin v. Wells Bros. Co., 272 Ill. 609, 112 N.E. 271, 272.

Suit silver. A small sum of money paid in lieu of attendance at the court-baron. Cowell.

SUITE. Those persons who by his authority follow or attend an ambassador or other public minister.

SUITOR. A party to a suit or action in court. In its ancient sense, "suitor" meant one who was bound to attend the county court; also one who formed part of the secta.

SUITORS' DEPOSIT ACCOUNT. Formerly suitors in the English court of chancery derived no income from their cash paid into court, unless it was invested at their request and risk. Now, however, it is provided by the court of chancery (funds) act, 1872, that all money paid into court, and not required by the suitor to be invested, shall be placed on deposit and shall bear interest at two per cent. per annum for the benefit of the suitor entitled to it. Sweet.

SUITORS' FEE FUND. A fund in the English court of chancery into which the fees of suitors in that court were paid, and out of which the salaries of various officers of the court were defrayed. Wharton.

SUITORS' FUND IN CHANCERY. In England. A fund consisting of moneys which, having been paid into the court of chancery, are placed out for the benefit and better security of the suitors, including interest from the same. By St. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 91, § '4, the principal of this fund, amounting to over £3,000,000, was transferred to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt. Mozley & Whitley.

SULCUS. In old English law. A small brook or stream of water. Cowell.

SULLERY. In old English law. A plowland. 1 Inst. 5.

SUM. In English law. A summary or abstract; a compendium; a collection. Several of the old law treatises are called "sums." Lord Hale applies the term to summaries of statute law.. Burrill.

The sense in which the term is most commonly used is "money"; a quantity of money or currency; any amount indefinitely, a sum of money, a small sum, or a large sum. U. S. v. Van Auken, 96 U.S. 368, 24 L.Ed. 852; Donovan v. Jenkins, 52 Mont. 124, 155 P. 972, 973.

SUM IN GROSS. See In Gross.

SUM PAYABLE. As used within Negotiable Instruments Law is the amount for which, by the terms of the instrument, the maker becomes liable, and which he might tender and pay in fill satisfaction of his obligation. First Nat. Bank of Iowa City, Iowa, v. Watson, 56 Okl. 495, 155 P. 1152.

SUMAGE. Toll for carriage on horseback. Cowell.

SUMMA CARITAS EST FACERE JUSTITIAM SINGULIS, ET OMNI TEMPORE QUANDO NECESSE FUERIT. The greatest charity is to do justice to every one, and at any time whenever it may be necessary. 11 Coke, 70.

SUMMA EST LEX QUIE PRO RELIGIONE FACIT. That is the highest law which favors religion. 10 Mod. 117, 119; Broom, Max. 19.

SUMMA RATIO EST QUIE PRO RELIGIONE FACIT. That consideration is strongest which determines in favor of religion. Co. Litt. 341a; Broom, Max. 19.

SUMMARILY. Without ceremony or delay, short or concise. In re Gabelmann, 136 Misc. 641, 241 N.Y.S. 405, 408.

SUMMARY, n. An abridgment; brief; compendium; also a short application to a court or judge, without the formality of a full proceeding. Wharton.

SUMMARY, adj. Short, concise. State v. Bettman, 124 Ohio St. 24, 176 N.E. 664, 665. Immediate, peremptory; off-hand; without a jury; provisional; statutory. The term used in connection with legal proceedings means a short, concise, and immediate proceeding. Vance v. Noel, 143 La. 477, 78 So. 741, 742; and trial of a "summary" character is a trial without a jury. State v. King, 137 Tenn. 17, 191 S.W. 352, 354; City of St. Paul v. Robinson, 129 Minn. 383, 152 N.W. 777, Ann.Cas. 1916E, 845.

Summary actions. In Scotch law. Those which are brought into court not by summons, but by petition, corresponding to summary proceedings in English courts. Bell; Brown.

Summary conviction. See Conviction.

Summary jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of a court to give a judgment or make an order itself forthwith; e. g., to commit to prison for contempt; to punish malpractice in a solicitor; or, in the case of justices of the peace, a jurisdiction to convict an offender themselves instead of committing him for trial by a jury. Wharton.

Summary procedure on bills of exchange. This phrase refers to the statute 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, passed in 1855, for the purpose of facilitating the remedies on bills and notes by the prevention of frivolous or fictitious defenses. By this statute, a defendant in an action on a bill or note, brought within six months after it has become payable, is prohibited from defending the action without the leave of the court or a judge. See 2 Steph. Comm. 118, note; Lush. Pr. 1027.

Summary proceeding. See Proceeding.

SUMMARY PROCESS. See Process.

SUMMER FALLOWING. Plowing and harrowing of grounds preparatory to cropping during next season. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Walla Walla v. Small, 131 Wash. 197, 229 P. 531, 533.

SUMMER-HUS SILVER. A payment to the lords of the wood on the Wealds of Kent, who used to visit those places in summer, when their undertenants were bound to prepare little summer-houses for their reception, or else pay a composition in money. Cowell.

SUMMING UP. On the trial of an action by a jury, a recapitulation of the evidence adduced, in order to draw the attention of the jury to the salient points. The counsel for each party has the right of summing up his evidence, if he has adduced any, and the judge sometimes sums up the whole in his charge to the jury. Smith, Act. 157. State v. Ezzard, 40 S.C. 312, 18 S.E. 1025.

SUMMON. In practice. To serve a summons; to cite a defendant to appear in court to answer a suit which has been begun against him; to notify the defendant that an action has been instituted against him, and that he is required to answer to it at a time and place named.

SUMMONEAS. L. Lat. In old practice. A writ of summons; a writ by which a party was summoned to appear in court.

SUMMONERS. Petty officers, who cite and warn persons to appear in any court. Fleta, lib. 9.

SUMMONITORES SCACCARII. Officers who assisted in collecting the revenues by citing the defaulters therein into the court of exchequer.

SUMMONS.

Practice

A writ, directed to the sheriff or other proper officer, requiring him to notify the person named that an action has been commenced against him in the court whence the writ issues, and that he is required to appear, on a day named, and answer the complaint in such action. See Whitney v. Blackburn, 17 Or. 564, 21 P. 874, 11 Am.St.Rep. 857; Horton v. Railway Co., 26 Mo.App. 358.

Under code procedure a summons is not process, but is a notice to defendant that an action against him has been commenced and that judgment will be taken against him if he fails to answer the complaint. Flanary v. Kusha, 143 Minn. 308, 173 N.W. 652; United States v. Van Dusen, C.C. A.Minn., 78 F.2d 121, 124.

Scotch Law

A writ passing under the royal signet, signed by a writer to the signet, and containing the grounds and conclusions of the action, with the warrant for citing the defender. This writ corresponds to the writ of summons in English procedure. Bell; Paters. Comp.

SUMMONS AD RESPONDENDUM. Process issuing in a civil case at law notifying defendant therein named that he must appear on day designated and thereupon make answer to plaintiff's statement of his cause of action. Walker Fertilizer Co. v. Race, 123 Fla. 84, 166 So. 283, 285, 105 A.L.R. 341.

SUMMONS AND ORDER. In English practice. The summons is the application to a common-law judge at chambers in reference to a pending action, and upon it the judge or master makes the order. Mozley & Whitley.

SUMMONS AND SEVERANCE. The proper name of what is distinguished in the books by the name of "summons and severance" is "severance;" for the summons is only a process which must, in certain cases, issue before judgment of severance can be given; while severance is a judgment by which one or more of parties joined in action is enabled to proceed without the other or others. Jacob.

SUMMUM JUS. Lat. Strict right; extreme right. The extremity or rigor of the law. See "Apex Juris."

SUMMUM JUS, SUISLMA INJURIA; SUMMA LEX, SUMMA CRUX. Extreme law (rigor of law) is the greatest injury; strict law is great punishment. Hob. 125. That is, insistence upon the full measure of a man's strict legal rights may work the greatest injury to others, unless equity can aid.

SUMMER. See Sompnour.

SUMPTUARY LAWS. Laws made for the purpose of restraining luxury or extravagance, particularly against inordinate expenditures in the matter of apparel, food, furniture, etc.

SUNDAY. The first day of the week is designated by this name; also as the "Lord's Day," and as the "Sabbath." State v. Reade, 98 N.J.L. 596, 121 A. 288, 289.

For Work of Necessity see "Necessity."

SUNDAY SCHOOL. School for religious instruction. Dougherty v. Kentucky Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, 279 Ky. 262, 130 S.W.2d 756, 759; Stubbs v. Texas Liquor Control Board, Tex.Civ. App., 166 S.W.2d 178, 180.

SUNDRIES. Miscellaneous or various items which may be considered together, without being separately specified or identified. People v. Bernstein, 237 App.Div. 270, 261 N.Y.S. 381.

SUNDRY. Separate, divers, or various. Hammond v. State, 173 Ark. 674, 293 S.W. 714, 717.

SUNSTROKE. An inflammatory disease of the brain, brought on by exposure to the too intense heat of the sun's rays, or to overheated air. Mather v. London Guarantee & Accident Co., 125 Minn. 186, 145 N.W. 963; Continental Casualty Co. v. Clark, 70 Okl. 187, 173 P. 453, L.R.A. 1918F, 1007. Though "sunstroke," strictly speaking, is a disease, suddenness of its approach and its catastrophic nature have caused it to be classified as an accident. Lurye v. Stern Bros. Department Store, 275 N.Y. 182, 9 N.E.2d 828, 829.

SUO NOMINE. Lat. In his own name.

SUO PERICULO. Lat. At his own peril or risk.

SUPELLEX. Lat. In Roman law. Household furniture. Dig. 33, 10.

SUPERINTENDENT REGISTRAR. In English law. An officer who superintends the registers of births, deaths, and marriages. There is one in every poor-law union in England and Wales.

SUPERIOR, n. One who has a right to command; one who holds a superior rank.

SUPERIOR, adj. Higher; belonging to a higher grade. People ex rel. McCoy v. McCahey, 296 Ill. App. 310, 15 N.E.2d 988, 993. More elevated in rank or office. Possessing larger power. Entitled to command, influence, or control over another.

In estates, some are superior to others. An estate entitled to a servitude or easement over another estate is called the "superior" or "dominant," and the other, the "inferior" or "servient," estate. 1 Bouv.Inst. no. 1612

In the feudal law, until the statute quia emptores precluded subinfeudations, (q. v.,) the tenant who granted part of his estate to be held of and from himself as lord was called a "superior."

Superior and vassal. In Scotch law. A feudal relation corresponding with the English "lord and tenant." Bell.

Superior courts. In English law. The courts of the highest and most extensive jurisdiction, viz., the court of chancery and the three courts of common law, i. e., the King's bench, the common pleas, and the exchequer, which sit at Westminster, were commonly thus denominated. But these courts are now united in the supreme court of judicature. In American law. Courts of general or extensive jurisdiction, as distinguished from the inferior courts. As the official style of a tribunal, the term "superior court" bears a different meaning in different states. In some it is a court of intermediate jurisdiction between the trial courts and the chief appellate court; elsewhere it is the designation of the ordinary nisi prius courts.

Superior fellow servant. A term introduced into the law of negligence, and meaning one higher in authority than another, and whose commands and directions his inferiors are bound to respect and obey, though engaged at the same manual work. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Coleman, 22 Ky.Law Rep. 878, 59 S.W. 14; Knutter v. Telephone Co., 67 N.J.L. 646, 52 A. 565, 58 L.R.A. 808.

Superior force. In the law of bailments and of negligence, an uncontrollable and irresistible force, of human agency, producing results which the person in question could not avoid; equivalent to the Latin phrase "vis major." See Via.

SUPERIORITY. In Scotch law. The dominium directum of lands, without the profit. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 97.

SUPER—JURARE. Over-swearing. A term anciently used when a criminal endeavored to excuse himself by his own oath or the oath of one or two witnesses, and the crime objected against him was so plain and notorious that he was convicted on the oaths of many more witnesses. Wharton.

SUPERNUMERARH. Lat. In Roman law. Advocates who were not registered or enrolled and did not belong to the college of advocates. They were not attached to any local jurisdiction. See Statuti.

SUPERONERATIO. Lat. Surcharging a common; e., putting in beasts of a number or kind other than the right of common allows.

SUPERONERATIONE PASTURE. A judicial writ that lay against him who was impleaded in the county court for the surcharge of a common with his cattle, in a case where he was formerly impleaded for it in the same court, and the cause was removed into one of the superior courts.

SUPERPLUSAGIUM. In old English law. Overplus; surplus; residue or balance. Bract. fol. 301; Spelman.

SUPERSEDE. Obliterate, set aside, annul, replace, make void, inefficacious or useless, repeal. City of Los Angeles v. Gurdane, C.C.A.Cal., 59 F. 2d 161, 163. To set aside, render unnecessary, suspend, or stay. Taylor v. New York Telephone Co., 97 Misc. 160, 160 N.Y.S. 865; Dick v. King, 73 Mont. 456, 236 P. 1093, 1095.

SUPERSEDEAS. In Practice. The name of a writ containing a command to stay the proceedings at law.

A suspension of the power of a trial court to issue an execution on judgment appealed from, or, if writ of execution has issued, it is a prohibition emanating from court of appeal against execution of writ. Stewart v. Hurt, 9 Cal.2d 39, 68 P.2d 726, 727.

An auxiliary process designed to supersede enforcement of trial court's judgment brought up for review, and its application is limited to the judgment from which an appeal is taken. Mascot Pictures Corporation v. Municipal Court of City of Los Angeles, 3 Cal.App.2d 559, 40 P.2d 272.

Originally it was a writ directed to an officer, commanding him to desist from enforcing the execution of another writ which he was about to execute, or which might come in his hands. In modern times the term is often used synonymously with a "stay of proceedings," and is employed to designate the effect of an act or proceeding which of itself suspends the enforcement of a judgment. Dulin v. Coal Co., 98 Cal. 306, 33 P. 123.

SUPERSEDING CAUSE. An act of a third person or other force which by its intervention prevents the actor from being liable for harm to another which his antecedent negligence is a substantial factor in bringing about. Superior Oil Co. v. Richmond, 172 Miss. 407, 159 So. 850, 852. Shuster v. Vecchi, 203 Minn. 76, 279 N.W. 841, 844.

SUPERSTITIOUS USE. In English law. When lands, tenements, rents, goods, or chattels are given, secured, or appointed for and towards the maintenance of a priest or chaplain to say mass, for the maintenance of a priest or other man to pray for the soul of any dead man in such a church or elsewhere, to have and maintain perpetual obits, lamps, torches, etc., to be used at certain times to help to save the souls of men out of purgatory,—in such cases the king, by force of several statutes, is authorized to direct and appoint all such uses to such purposes as are truly charitable. Bac. Abr. "Charitable Uses." The doctrine has no recognition in this country; Appeal of Seibert, 18 Wkly. Notes Cas., Pa., 276; and a bequest to support a Catholic priest, and perhaps other uses void in England, would not be considered as superstitious uses. Harrison v. Brophy, 59 Kan. 1, 51 P. 883, 40 L.R.A. 721.

SUPERVENING CAUSE. A new effective cause which, operating independently of anything else, becomes proximate cause of accident. Chesapeake & 0. Ry. Co. v. Crum, 140 Va. 333, 125 S.E. 301, 304.

SUPERVENING NEGLIGENCE. That situations may come within the doctrine of last clear chance or supervening negligence, four conditions must coexist, to wit: (1) That the injured party has already come into a position of peril; (2) that the injuring party then or thereafter becomes, or in the exercise of ordinary prudence ought to have become, aware, not only of that fact, but also that the party in peril either reasonably cannot escape from it or apparently will not avail himself of opportunities open to him for doing so; (3) that the injuring party subsequently has the opportunity by the exercise of reasonable care to save the other from harm; and (4) that he fails to exercise such care. Emmons v. New York and S. R. Co., 108 Conn. 133, 142 A. 676, 677.

See Last Clear Chance.

SUPERVISE. To have general oversight over, to superintend or to inspect. State v. Manning, .220 Iowa 525, 259 N.W. 213.

SUPERVISION. An act of occupation of supervising; inspection. Kemp v. Stanley, 204 La. 110, 15 So.2d 1, 11.

SUPERVISOR. A surveyor or overseer; a highway officer. Also, in some states, the chief officer of a town; one of a board of county officers.

In a broad sense, one having authority over others, to superintend and direct. Cafferty v. Southern Tier Pub. Co., 226 N.Y. 87, 123 N.E. 76, 77.

SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION. Persons appointed and commissioned by the United States circuit judges to supervise the registration of voters and the holding of elections for representatives in congress under Rev. St. §§ 2011-2031; repealed by the act of Feb. 8, 1894, 28 Stat. 36.

SUPERVISORY CONTROL. Control exercised by courts to compel inferior tribunals to act within their jurisdiction, to prohibit them from acting outside their jurisdiction, and to reverse their extrajurisdictional acts. State v. Superior Court of Dane County, 170 Wis. 385, 175 N.W. 927, 928.

SUPPLEMENT, LETTERS OF. In Scotch practice. A process by which a party not residing within the jurisdiction of an inferior court may be cited to appear before it. Bell.

SUPPLEMENTAL. That which is added to a thing to complete it. State v. Day, 189 Ind. 243, 123 N.E. 402, 403; People ex rel. Astor Trust Co. v. State Tax Commission, 174 App.Div. 320, 160 N.Y.S. 854, 858.

SUPPLEMENTAL ACT. That which supplies a deficiency, adds to or completes, or extends that which is already in existence without changing or modifying the original; Act designed to improve an existing statute by adding something thereto without changing the original text. Swanson v. State, 132 'Neb. 82, 271 N.W. 264, 268.

SUPPLEMENTAL AFFIDAVIT. An affidavit made in addition to a previous one, in order to supply some deficiency in it. Callan v. Lukens, 89 Pa. 136.

SUPPLEMENTAL BILL. In equity pleading. A bill filed in addition to an original bill, in order to supply some defect in its original frame or structure which cannot be supplied by amendment. Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 332-338; Bloxham v. Railroad Co., 39 Fla. 243, 22 So. 697; Thompson v. Srhenectady Railroad Co., C.C.N.Y., 119 F. 634; Bartee v. Matthews, 212 Ala. 667, 103 So. 874, 876; Pantaleo v. Colt's Patent Fire Arms Mfg. Co., D.C.N.Y., 13 F.Supp. 989, 990. Also for purpose of bringing into controversy matter occurring after original bill was filed. Snellings v. Builders' Supply Co., 228 Ala. 47, 152 So. 459, 461.

SUPPLEMENTAL BILL IN NATURE OF BILL OF REVIEW. Employed to invoke jurisdiction of court of chancery to recall one of its adjudications made while some fact existed which, if before court, would have prevented rendition of final decree, and which, without negligence of party presenting it, was not earlier presented to chancellor. Brown v. Oehler, 114 Fla. 57, 152 So. 862.

SUPPLEMENTAL CLAIM. A further claim which was filed when further relief was sought after the bringing of a claim. Smith, Ch. Pr. 655.

SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT. Under the codes of practice obtaining in many of the states, a complaint filed in an action to bring to the notice of the court and the opposite party matters occurring after the commencement of action and which may affect the rights asserted. Pouder v. Tate, 132 Ind. 327, 30 N.E. 880; Plumer v. McDonald Lumber Co., 74 Wis. 137, 42 N.W. 250; Title and Trust Co. v. U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co., 138 Or. 467, 7 P.2d 805, 812.

It is distinguished from an "amended complaint," in that an "amended complaint" is one which corrects merely faults and errors of a pleading. Pantaleo v. Colt's Patent Fire Arms Mfg. Co., D.C.N.Y., 13 F.Supp. 989, 990.

SUPPLEMENTAL PLEA[1]9ING. One consisting of facts arising since filing of the original, State v. Patten, 209 Ind. 482, 199 N.E. 577, 579; or of which pleader at time of serving of original pleading had no notice. Fisher v. Bullock, 204 App. Div. 523, 198 N.Y.S. 538, 540.

SUPPLEMENTARY. Added as a supplement; additional; being, or serving as, a supplement. Swanson v. State, 132 Neb. 82, 271 N.W. 264, 268.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS. Proceedings supplementary to an execution, directed to the discovery of the debtor's property and its application to the debt for which the execution is issued. They are purely statutory, they are in the nature of a creditor's bill for the collection of a judgment or tax, and are proceedings in personam and not in rem. In re Maltbie, 119 N.E. 389, 391, 223 N.Y. 227; Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924, 925.

SUPPLETORY OATH. See Oath.

SUPPLIANT. The actor in, or party preferring, a petition of right.

SUPPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A petition for pardon of a first offense; also a petition for reversal of judgment; also equivalent to "duplicatio," which corresponds to the common law rejoinder. Calvin.

SUPPLICAVIT. In English law. A writ issuing out of the king's bench or chancery for taking sureties of the peace. It is commonly directed to the justices of the peace, when they are averse to acting in the affair in their judicial capacity. 4 Bl.Comm. 253.

SUPPLICIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Punishment; corporal punishment for crime. Death was called "ultimum supplicium," the last or extreme penalty.

SUPPLIES. In English law. In parliamentary proceedings the sums of money which are annually voted by the house of commons for the maintenance of the crown and the various public services. Jacob; Brown.

Means of provision or relief; stores; available aggregate of things needed or demanded in amount sufficient for a given use or purpose; accumulated stores reserved for distribution; sufficiency for use or need; a quantity of something supplied or on hand. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Sanders County, 66 Mont. 608, 214 P. 596, 599.

In connection with building contracts, things other than labor, which are consumed in, but do not become a physical part of, the structure and is distinguished from the word "materials," which are things becoming a physical part of the structure. Hurley-Mason Co. v. American Bonding Co., 79 Wash. 564, 140 P. 575, 576, L.R.A.1915B, 1131.

SUPPLY.. To furnish with what is wanted; available aggregate of things needed or demanded; anything yielded or afforded to meet a want; and the act of furnishing with what is wanted. Clayton v. Bridgeport Mach. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 33 S.W. 2d 787, 789.

SUPPLY, COMMISSIONERS OF. Persons appointed to levy the land-tax in Scotland, and to cause a valuation roll to be annually made up, and to perform other duties in their respective counties. Bell.

SUPPLY, COMMITTEE OF. In English law. All bills which relate to the public income or expenditure must originate with the house of commons, and all bills authorizing expenditure of the public money are based upon resolutions moved in a committee of supply, which is always a committee of the whole house. Wharton.

SUPPORT, v. Furnishing funds or means for maintenance; to maintain; to provide for; to enable to continue; to carry on. State v. Hinkle, 161 Wash. 652, 297 P. 1071, 1075. To provide a means of livelihood. Board of Com'rs of Logan County v. State, 122 Okl. 268, 254 P. 710, 711. To vindicate, to maintain, to defend, to uphold with aid or countenance. U. S. v. Schulze, D.C.Cal., 253 F. 377, 379.

To support a rule or order is to argue in answer to the arguments of the party who has shown cause against a rule or order nisi.

SUPPORT, n. That which furnishes a livelihood; a source or means of living; subsistence, sustenance, or living. Great Western Power Co. of California v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 191 Cal. 424, 218 P. 1009, 1014.

In a broad sense the term includes all such means of living as would enable one to live in the degree of comfort suitable and becoming to his station of life. Benjamin F. Shaw Co. v. Palmatory, 7 Boyce, Del., 197, 105 A. 417, 419. For "Family," see that title.

It is said to include anything requisite to housing, feeding, clothing, health, proper recreation, vacation, traveling expense, or other proper cognate purposes, In re Vanderbilt's Estate, 223 N.Y.S. 314, 316, 129 Misc. 605; and proper care, nursing, and medical attendance in sickness, and suitable burial at death. McKnight v. McKnight, 212 Mich. 318, 180 N.W. 437, 442.

Support also signifies the right to have one's ground supported so that it will not cave in, when an adjoining owner makes an excavation. This support is of two kinds, lateral and subjacent. Lateral support is the right of land to be supported by the land which lies next to it. Subjacent support is the right of land to be supported by the land which lies under it.

SUPPOSITION. A conjecture based upon possibility or probability that a thing could or may have occurred, without proof that it did occur. Mitchell's Adm'x v. Harlan Central Coal Co., 263 Ky. 702, 93 S.W.2d 347, 348; Louisville and N. R. Co. v. Mann's Adm'r, 227 Ky. 399, 13 S.W.2d 257, 258.

SUPPRESS. To put a stop to a thing actually existing; to prohibit, put down, to prevent, subdue, or end by force. State v. Mustachia, 152 La. 821, 94 So: 408, 409; State ex rel. Hamilton V. Martin, 173 Wash. 249, 23 P.2d 1.

SUPPRESSIO VERI. Lat. Suppression or concealment of the truth. It is a rule of equity, as well as of law, that a suppressio ^y en is equivalent to a suggestio falsi; and where either the suppression of the truth or the suggestion of what is false can be proved, in a fact material to the contract, the party injured may have, relief against the contract. Fleming v. Slocum, 18 Johns., N.Y., 405, 9 Am.Dec. 224; Turney v. Avery, 92 N.J.Eq. 473, 113 A. 710.

SUPPRESSIO VERI, EXPRESSIO FALSI. Suppression of the truth is [equivalent to] the expression of what is false. Addington v. Allen, 11 Wend., N.Y., 374, 417.

SUPPRESSIO VERI, SUGGESTIO FALSI. Suppression of the truth is [equivalent to] the suggestion of what is false. Paul v. Hadley, 23 Barb. N.Y. 521, 525.

SUPRA: Lat. Above; upon. This word occurring by itself in a book refers the reader to a previous part of the book, like "ante;" it is also the initial word of several Latin phrases.

SUPRA PROTEST. See Protest.

SUPRA-RIPARIAN. Upper riparian; higher up the stream. This term is applied to the estate, rights, or duties of a riparian proprietor whose land is situated at a point nearer the source of the stream than the estate with which it is compared.

SUPREMA POTESTAS SEIPSAM DISSOLVERE POTEST. Supreme power can dissolve itself. Bac. Max.

SUPREMACY. The state of being supreme, or in the highest station of power; paramount authority; sovereignty; sovereign power.

Act of Supremacy

The English statute 1 Eliz. c. 1, whereby the supremacy and autonomy of the crown in spiritual or ecclesiastical matters was declared and established.

Oath of Supremacy

An oath to uphold the supreme power of the kingdom of England in the person of the reigning sovereign.

SUPREME. Superior to all other things.

SUPREME COURT. A court of high powers and extensive jurisdiction, existing in most of the states. In some it is the official style of the chief appellate court or court of last resort. In others (such as New York) the supreme court is a court of general original jurisdiction, possessing also (in New York) some appellate jurisdiction, but not the court of last resort.

Supreme court of errors. In American law. An appellate tribunal, and the court of last resort, in the state of Connecticut.

Supreme court of the United States. The court of last resort in the federal judicial system. It is vested by the constitution with original jurisdiction in all cases affecting ambassadors, public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a state is a party, and appellate jurisdiction over all other cases within the Judicial power of the United States, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as congress may make. Its appellate powers extend to the subordinate federal courts, and also (in certain cases) to the supreme courts of the several states. The court is composed of a chief justice and eight associate justices.

Supreme judicial court. In American law. An appellate tribunal, and the court of last resort, in the states of Maine and Massachusetts.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE. The court formed by the English judicature act, 1873, (as modified by the judicature act, 1875, the appellate jurisdiction act, 1876, and the judicature acts of 1877, 1879, and 1881,) in substitution for the various superior courts of law, equity, admiralty, probate, and divorce, existing when the act was passed, including the court of appeal in chancery and bankruptcy, and the exchequer chamber. It consists of two permanent divisions, viz., a court of original jurisdiction, called the "high court of justice," and a court of appellate jurisdiction, called the "court of appeal." Its title of "supreme" is now a misnomer, as the superior appellate jurisdiction of the house of lords and privy council, which was originally intended to be transferred to it, has been allowed to remain. Sweet.

High Court of Justice

That branch of the English supreme court of judicature (q. v.) which exercises (1) the original jurisdiction formerly exercised by the court of chancery, the courts of queen's bench, common pleas, and exchequer, the courts of probate, divorce, and admiralty, the court of common pleas at Lancaster, the court of pleas at Durham, and the courts of tile judges or commissioners of assize; and (2) the appellate jurisdiction of such of those courts as heard appeals from inferior courts. Judicature act, 1873, § 16.

SUPREME POWER. The highest authority in a state, all other powers in it being inferior thereto. State ex rel. Hartley v. Clausen, 146 Wash. 588, 264 P. 403, 405.

SUPREMUS. Lat. Last; the last.

SUPREMUS EST QUEM NEMO SEQUITUR. He is last whom no one follows. Dig. 50, 16, 92.

SUR. Fr. On; upon; over. In the titles of real actions "sur" was used to point out what the writ was founded upon. Thus, a real action brought by the owner of a reversion or seigniory, in certain cases where his tenant repudiated his tenure, was called "a writ of right sur disclaimer." So, a writ of entry sur disseisin was a real action to recover the possession of land from a disseisor. Sweet.

SUR CUI ANTE DIVORTIUM. See Cui Ante Divortium.

SUR CUI IN VITA. A writ that lay for the heir of a woman whose husband had aliened her land in fee, and she had omitted to bring the writ of cui in vita for the recovery thereof; in which case her heir might have this writ against the tenant after her decease. Cowell. See Cui in Vita.

SUR DISCLAIMER. A writ in the nature of a writ of right brought by the lord against a tenant who had disclaimed his tenure, to recover the land.

SUR MORTGAGE. Upon a mortgage. In some states the method of enforcing the security of a mortgage, upon default, is by a writ of "scire facias sur mortgage," which requires the defendant (mortgagor) to show cause why it should not be foreclosed.

SURCHARGE, n. An overcharge; an exaction, impost, or incumbrance beyond what is just and right, or beyond one's authority or power. "Surcharge" may mean a second or further mortgage. Wharton.

SURCHARGE, v. To put more cattle upon a common than the herbage will sustain or than the party has a right to do. 3 Bl. Comm. 237.

Equity Practice

To show that a particular item, in favor of the party surcharging, ought to have been included, but was not, in an account which is alleged to be settled or complete. To prove the omission of an item from an account which is before the court as complete, which should be inserted to the credit of the party surcharging. Story, Eq. Jur. § 525; 2 Ves. 565; Perkins v. Hart, 24 U.S. 237, 11 Wheat. 237, 6 L.Ed. 463; Dempsey v. McGinnis, 203 Mo.App. 494, 219 S.W. 148, 150.

General

Second surcharge. In English law. The surcharge of a common a second time, by the same defendant against whom the common was before admeasured, and for which the writ of second surcharge was given by the statute of Westminster, 2. 3 Bl. Comm. 239.

Surcharge and falsify. This phrase, as used in the courts of chancery, denotes the liberty which these courts will occasionally grant to a plaintiff, who disputes an account which the defendant alleges to be settled, to scrutinize particular items therein without opening the entire account. The showing an item for which credit ought to have been given, but was not, is to surcharge the account; the proving an item to have been inserted wrongly is to falsify the account. Brown. See Philips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch., N.Y., 23; Rehill v. McTague, 114 Pa. 82, 7 A. 224, 60 Am.Rep. 341; Shores-Mueller Co. v. Bell, 21 Ga.App. 194, 94 S.E. 83, 84.

SURDUS. Lat. In the civil law. Deaf; a deaf person. Inst. 2, 12, 3. Surdus et mutus, a deaf and dumb person.

SURENCHERE. In French law. A party desirous of repurchasing property at auction before the court, can, by offering one-tenth or one-sixth.

according to the case, in addition to the price realized at the sale, oblige the property to be put up once more at auction. This bid upon a bid is called a "surenchare." Arg. Fr. Mere. Law, 575.

SURETY. One who undertakes to pay money or to do any other act in event that his principal fails therein. In re Brock, 312 Pa. 92, 166 A. 778, 781. One bound with his principal for the payment of a sum of money or for the performance of some duty or promise and who is entitled to be indemnified by some one who ought to have paid or performed if payment or performance be enforced against him. Anderson v. Trueman, 100 Fla. 727, 130 So. 12, 13. Everyone who incurs a liability in person or estate, for the benefit of another, without sharing in the consideration, stands in the position of a "surety," whatever may be the form of his obligation. Howell v. War Finance Corporation, C.C.A.Ariz., 71 F.2d 237, 243.

A surety and guarantor have this in common, that they are both bound for another person; yet there are points of difference between them. A surety is usually bound with his principal by the same instrument, executed at the same time and on the same consideration. He is an original promisor and debtor from the beginning, and is held ordinarily to every known default of his principal. On tile other hand, the contract of guarantor is his own separate undertaking, in which the principal does not join. It is usually entered into before or after that of the principal, and is often founded on a separate consideration from that supporting the contract of the principal. The original contract of the principal is not the guarantor's contract, and the guarantor is not bound to take notice of its nonperformance. The surety joins in the same promise as his principal and is primarily liable; the guarantor makes a separate and individual promise and is only secondarily liable. His liability is contingent on the default of his principal, and he only becomes absolutely liable when such default takes place and he is notified thereof. Georgia Casualty Co. v. Dixie Trust & Security Co., 23 Ga.App. 447, 98 S.E. 414, 416; Stifel Estate Co. v. Cella, 220 Mo.App. 657, 291 S.W. 515, 518; Ricketson v. Lizotte, 90 Vt. 386, 98 A. 801. "Surety" and "guarantor" are both answerable for debt, default, or miscarriage of another, but liability of guarantor is, strictly speaking, secondary and collateral, while that of surety is original, primary, and direct. In case of suretyship there is but one contract, and surety is bound by the same agreement which binds his principal, while in case of guaranty there are two contracts, and guarantor is bound by independent undertaking. Howell v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 69 F.2d 447, 450.

A surety is an insurer of the debt or obligation; a guarantor is an insurer of the solvency of the principal debtor or of his ability to pay. McClain v. Georgian Co., 17 Ga. App. 648, 87 S.E. 1090; Bishop v. Currie-McGraw Co., 133 Miss. 517, 97 So. 886, 889.

SURETY COMPANY. A company, usually incorporated, whose business is to assume the responsibility of a surety on the bonds of officers, trustees, executors, guardians, etc., in consideration of a fee proportioned to the amount of the security required. See State ex rel. Travelers' Indemnity Co. v. Knott, 114 Fla. 820, 153 So. 304.

SURETY INSURANCE. This phrase is generally used as synonymous with "guaranty insurance." People v. Potts, 264 Ill. 522, 106 N.E. 524, 528.

SURETY OF THE PEACE. A species of preventive justice, and consists in obliging those persons whom there is a probable ground to suspect of future misbehavior, to stipulate with, and to give full assurance to, the public that such offense as is apprehended shall not take place, by finding pledges or securities for keeping the peace, or for their good behavior. Brown. See Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 582.

SURETYSHIP, CONTRACT OF. Contract whereby one party engages to be answerable for debt, default, or miscarriage of another and arises when one is liable to pay debt or discharge obligation, and party is entitled to indemnity from person who should have made the payment in the first instance before surety was so compelled. Bradley v. Bentley, 163 So. 351, 231 Ala. 28. A contract whereby one person engages to be answerable for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another. Pitm.. Princ. & Sur. 1, 2; Scandinavian-American Bank of Fargo v. Westby, 41 N.D. 276, 172 N.W. 665, 670.. An accessory promise by which a person binds himself for another already bound, and agrees with the creditor to satisfy the obligation, if the debtor does not. Hope v. Board, 43 La.Ann. 738, 9 So. 754. A lending of credit to aid a principal having insufficient credit of his own; the one expected to pay, having the primary obligation, being the "principal," and the one bound to pay, if the principal does not, being the "surety." Rollings v. Gunter, 211 Ala. 671, 101 So. 446, 448.

See Surety.

In contracts of "indemnity" against liability, the engagement is to indemnify another against liability on some obligation which he has incurred, or is about to incur, to a third person, and is not, as in "suretyship," a promise to one to whom another is answerable; in the former there is direct privity between the promisor and promisee and no debt owing by the third person to the promisee and the promisee has no remedy against the third person, whereas in the latter both principal and surety are bound to answer to the promisee. McManus v. Tralles, Mo.App., 253 S.W. 406, 409.

SURFACE. This term, when used in law, is seldom, if ever, limited to mere geometrical. superficies, Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S.E. 308, 312, 55 A.L.R. 1376; although when used without any qualifying phrase in a deed, it ordinarily signifies only the superficial part of land, Drummond v. White Oak Fuel Co., 104 W.Va. 368, 140 S.E. 57, 58, 56 A.L.R. 303. And when employed in connection with mining, it usually means that part of the earth or geologic section lying over the minerals in question, unless the contract or conveyance otherwise defines it. Marquette Cement Mining Co. v. Oglesby Coal Co., D.C.I11., 253 F. 107, 111. Thus, where the surface is granted to one and the underlying coal to another, the "surface" includes the soil and waters which lie above and are superincumbent on the coal. Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S.E. 308, 312, 55 A.L.R. 1376. Nevertheless, a conveyance of the "surface," except the oil and gas rights in the land, may be deemed, under certain circumstances, to constitute a conveyance of all the land (including coal deposits), except only the oil and gas rights specifically reserved. Ramage v. South Penn Oil Co., 94 W.Va. 81, 118 S.E. 162, 171, 31 A.L.R. 1509.

The term "surface," when used as the subject of a conveyance, is not a definite one capable of a definition of universal application, but is susceptible of limitation according to the intention of the parties using it; and in determining its meaning, regard may be had, not only to the language of the deed in which it occurs, but, also to the situation of the parties, the business in which they were engaged, and to the substance of the transaction. Ramage v. South Penn Oil Co., 94 W.Va. 81, 118 S.E. 162, 171, 31 A.L.R. 1509.

SURFACE WATERS. See Water.

SURGEON. One whose profession or occupation is to cure diseases or injuries of the body by manual operation; one who practices surgery, Webster; which is therapy of a distinctly operative kind, such as cutting operations, the reduction and putting up of fractures and dislocations and similar manual forms of treatment; Napier v. Greenz*weig,* C.C.A.N.Y., 256 F. 196, 197.

Popularly, one possessing particular knowledge and skill to correct and relieve some unnatural condition of the human body. Maupin v. Southern Surety Co., 205 Mo.App. 81, 220 S.W. 20, 21. One whose occupation is to cure local injuries or disorders, whether by manual operation, or by medication and constitutional treatment. Stewart v. Raab, 55 Minn. 20, 56 N.W. 256; Nelson v. State Board of Health, 108 Ky. 769, 57 S.W. 501, 50 L.R. A. 383; Surgery.

SURGERY. The art or practice of healing by manual operation; that branch of medical science which treats of mechanical or operative measures for healing diseases, deformities or injuries. State v. Eustace, 117 Kan. 746, 233 P. 109, 110; Maryland Casualty Co. v. McCallum, 200 Ala. 154, 75 So. 902, 904. Therapy of a distinctly operative kind, such as cutting operations, the reduction and putting up of fractures and dislocations and similar manual forms of treatment. Napier v. Greenzweig, C.C.A.N.Y., 256 F. 196, 197. As used in statutes, the term does not include osteopathy. Mo. R.S.A. § 10042. Le Grand v. Security Benefit Ass'n, 210 Mo.App. 700, 240 S.W. 852, 853. State v. Eustace, 117 Kan. 746, 233 P. 109, 110.

Greek words signifying the hand and work. Originally, it was part of the profession of barbers, but later was taken up by physicians and now is recognized as that branch of medical science, and more specifically, that branch of medical science which treats of mechanical or operative measures for healing diseases, deformities, or injuries. State ex rel. Beck v. Gleason, 148 Kan. 1, 79 P.2d 911.

The practice of medicine, in contradistinction to the practice of surgery, denotes the treatment of disease by the administration of drugs or other sanative substances. There cannot be a •complete separation between the practice of medicine and surgery; the principles of both are the same throughout, and no one is qualified to practice either who does not properly understand the fundamental principles of both.

SURGICAL OPERATION. An act or series of acts performed on a patient's body by a surgeon to produce a cure. Hartford Live Stock Ins. Co. v. McMillen, C.C.A.Ohio, 9 F.2d 961, 962.

SURMISE. Formerly where a defendant pleaded a local custom, for instance, a custom of the city of London, it was necessary for him to "surmise," that is, to suggest that such custom should be certified to the court by the mouth of the recorder, and without such a surmise the issue was to be tried by the country as other issues of fact are. 1 Burrows, 251; Vin. Abr. 246.

Something offered to a court to move it to grant a prohibition, audita querela, or other writ grantable thereon. Jacob.

In ecclesiastical law. An allegation in a libel. A collateral surmise is a surmise of some fact not appearing in the libel. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1445.

SURNAME. The family name; the name over *and above the Christian name. The part of a name which is not given in baptism; the name of a person which is derived from the common name of his parents; In re Faith's Application, 22 N.J. Misc. 412, 39 A.2d 638, 640. The last name; the name common to all members of a family. A patronymic. Riley v. Litchfield, 168 Iowa 187, 150 N.W. 81, 83, Ann.Cas.1917B, 172.

SURPLICE FEES. In English ecclesiastical law. Fees payable on ministerial offices of the church; such as baptisms, funerals, marriages, etc.

SURPLUS. That which remains of a fund appropriated for a particular purpose; the remainder of a thing; the overplus; the residue. Smith v. Cotting, 231 Mass. 42, 120 N.E. 177, 181; People's F. Ins. Co. v. Parker, 35 N.J.L. 577; Towery v. McGaw, 22 Ky.Law.Rep. 155, 56 S.W. 727; Appeal of Coates, 2 Pa. 137; 18 Ves. 466.

The "surplus" of a corporation may mean either the net assets of the corporation in excess of all liabilities including capital stock, Winkelman v. General Motors Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.Supp. 960, 996; or what remains after making provisions Tor all liabilities of every kind, except capital stock. Insurance Co. of North America v. McCoach, C.C.A.Pa., 224 F. 657, 658. The term is also defined as the residue of assets after defraying liabilities, Douglas v. Edwards, C.C.A.N.Y., 298 F. 229, 237; Cochrane v. Interstate Packing Co., 139 Minn. 452, 167 N.W. 111, 113; the excess of net assets over the face value of the stock. Sexton v. C. L. Percival Co., 189 Iowa 586, 177 N.W. 83, 86; the excess of gross assets over the outstanding capital stock, without deducting debts or liabilities; State v. State Tax Commission ex rel. Marquette Hotel Inv. Co., 282 Mo. 213, 221 S.W. 721, 722; and as the accumulation of moneys or property in excess of the par value of the stock. Small v. Sullivan, 245 N.Y. 343, 157 N.E. 261, 263.

There is a sharp distinction between the "surplus," as of a bank, and undivided profits. Surplus, like the capital stock, constitutes the working capital of the bank and is, in addition, a fund for the protection of the depositors. First Nat. Bank v. Moon, 102 Kan. 334, 170 P. 33, 34, L.R. A.1918C, 986. The "undivided profits" constitute a temporary fund changing in size from day to day and carried only until dividend periods when it is distributed to the stockholders or transferred to the permanent surplus. It is the fund from which the expenses and losses of the bank are paid. Sarles v. Scandinavian American Bank, 33 N.D. 40, 156 N.W. 556, 557. Willcuts v. Milton Dairy Co., 48 S.Ct. 71, 72, 275 U.S. 215, 72 L.Ed. 247; State ex rel. Payne v. Exchange Bank of Natchitoches, 147 La. 25, 84 So. 481, 482.

As to surplus "Earnings," "Profits," and "Water," see those titles.

SURPLUSAGE. Extraneous, impertinent, superfluous, or unnecessary matter. In re Wolcott's Estate, 54 Utah, 165; 180 P. 169, 170, 4 A.L.R. 727.

Accounts

A greater disbursement than the charge of the accountant amounts unto. In another sense, the remainder or overplus of money left. Jacob. A balance over. 1 Lew. 219.

Pleading

Allegations of matter wholly foreign and impertinent to the cause. All matter beyond the circumstances necessary to constitute the action. 5 East 275; Allaire v. Ouland, 2 Johns. Cas. (N.Y.) 52; Adams v. Capital State Bank, 74 Miss. 307, 20 So. 881; Bradley v. Reynolds, 61 Conn. 271, 23 A. 928; State v. Kavanaugh, 203 La. 1, 13 So.2d 366, 371. Any allegation without which the pleading would yet be adequate. Mathews v. U. S., C.C.A. Neb., 15 F.2d 139, 142; State v. Williams, 94 Vt. 423, 111 A. 701, 708; People v. Osborne, 278 Ill. 104, 115 N.E. 890, 891.

SURPLUSAGIUM NON NOCET. Surplusage does no harm. 3 Bouv. Inst. no. 2949; Broom, Max. 627.

SURPRISE. Act of taking unawares; sudden confusion or perplexity. Davis v. Steuben School Tp., 19 Ind.App. 694, 50 N.E. 1. In its legal acceptation, denotes an unforeseen disappointment against which ordinary prudence would not have afforded protection. Patrick v. Boonville Gas Light Co., 17 Mo.App. 462, 463, 465.

Equity Practice.

The act by which a party who is entering into a contract is taken unawares, by which sudden confusion or perplexity is created, which renders it proper that a court of equity should relieve the party so surprised. 2 Brown, Ch. 150.

The situation in which a party is placed without any default of his own, which will be injurious to his interests. Rawle v. Skipwith, 8 Mart. N. S., La., 407.

Anything which happens without the agency or fault of the party affected by it, tending to disturb and confuse the judgment, or to mislead him, of which the opposite party takes an undue advantage, is in equity a surprise, and one species of fraud for which relief is granted. Gidlonsen v. Union Depot R. Co., 129 Mo. 392, 31 S.W. 800; Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548, 4 Pac. 557; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661, 81 N.W. 849; Thompson v. Connell, 31 Or. 231, 48 P. 467, 65 Am.St.Rep. 818.

There does not seem anything technical or peculiar in the word "surprise," as used in courts of equity. Where a court of equity relieves on the ground of surprise, it does so upon the ground that the party has been taken unawares, and that he has acted without due deliberation, and under confused and sudden impressions. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. 120, note. But Jeremy, Eq.Jur. 366, 383, note, seems to think that the word surprise is a technical expression, and nearly synonymous with fraud. It is sometimes used in this sense when it is deemed presumptive of, or approaching to, fraud. 1 Fonbl.Eq. 123; 3 Ch.Cas. 56, 74, 103, 114.

Law

As a ground for a new trial, that situation in which a party is unexpectedly placed without default on his part, which will work injury to his interests. State v. Price, 100 W.Va. 699, 131 S.E. 710, 711. He must show himself to have been diligent at every stage of the proceedings. Henderson v. Hazlett, 75 W.Va. 255, 83 S.E. 907, 908. And that the event was one which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against; Cupples v. Zupan. 35 Idaho, 458, 207 P. 328, 329; .Jennings v. American President Lines, 61 Cal.App.2d 417, 143 P.2d 349, 356.

A situation, status, or result produced, having a substantive basis of fact and reason, from which the court may justly deduce, as a legal conclusion, that the party will suffer a judicial wrong if not relieved from his mistake. Levy v. Caledonian Ins. Co., D.C.Cal., 226 F. 336, 337.

The general rule is that when a party or his counsel is "taken by surprise," in a material point or circumstance which could not have been anticipated, and when want of skill, care, or attention cannot be justly imputed, and injustice has been done, a new trial should be granted. Hill. New Trials, 521.

SURREBUTTER. In pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebutter. Steph. Pl. 59. It is governed by the same rules as the replication. See 6 Com. Dig. 185; 7 id. 389.

SURREJOINDER. In pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rejoinder. Steph. Pl. 59. It is governed in every respect by the same rules as the replication. Steph. PL 77; 7 Com. Dig. 389.

SURRENDER. To give back; yield; render up; restore; and in law the giving up of an estate to the person who has it in reversion or remainder, so as to merge it in the larger estate; the giving up of a lease before its expiration; yielding up a tenancy in a copyhold estate to the lord of the manor for a specified purpose; a deed by which surrender is made; the giving up by a bankrupt of his property to his creditors or their assignees; also, his due appearance in the bankruptcy court for examination as formerly required by the bankruptcy acts. In re Emlen's Estate, 333 Pa. 238, 4 A.2d 143, 145; Nolander v. Burns, 48 Minn. 13, 50 N.W. 1016.

A yielding up of an estate for life or years to him who has an immediate estate in reversion or remainder, wherein the estate for life or years may drown by mutual agreement between them. Roberts Inv. Co. v. Hardie Mfg. Co., 142 Or. 179, 19 P.2d 429, 431; Kimberlin v. Hicks, 150 Kan. 449, 94 P.2d 335, 339.

"Surrender" is contractual act and occurs only through consent of both parties. Motch's Adm'r v. Portner, 237 Ky. 25, 34 S.W.2d 744, 745.

Surrender differs from "abandonment," as applied to leased premises, inasmuch as the latter is simply an act on the part of the lessee alone; but to show a surrender, a mutual agreement between lessor and lessee that the lease is terminated must be clearly proved. Noble v. Sturm, 210 Mich. 462, 178 N.W. 99, 106.

A surrender is of a nature directly opposite to a release; for, as the latter operates by the greater estate descending upon the less, the former is the falling of a less estate into a greater, by deed. Shepp.Touchst. 300.

SURRENDER BY BAIL. The act, by bail or sureties in a recognizance, of giving up their principal again into custody, in their own discharge. 1 Burrill, Pr. 394.

SURRENDER BY OPERATION OF LAW. This phrase is properly applied to cases where the tenant for life or years has been a party to some act the validity of which he is by law afterwards estopped from disputing, and which would not be valid if his particular estate continued to exist. Ledsinger v. Burke, 113 Ga. 74, 38 S.E. 313; Brown

v. Cairns, 107 Iowa, 727, 77 N.W. 478. An implied surrender occurs when an estate incompatible with the existing estate is accepted, or the lessee takes a new lease of the same lands. Livingston v. Potts, 16 Johns., N.Y., 28; 1 B. & Ald. 50. See Beall v. White, 94 U.S. 389, 24 L.Ed. 173; Martin v. Stearns, 52 Iowa, 347, 3 N.W. 92.

The rule of law as now settled by recently adjudicated cases is that any acts which are equivalent to an agreement on the part of the tenant to abandon, and on the part of the landlord to resume the possession of the demised premises, amount to a "surrender by operation of law." Carlton Chambers Co. v. Trask, 261 Mass. 264, 158 N.E. 786, 788; 1375-83 Broadway Corporation v. Filler, 267 N.Y.S. 779, 149 Misc. 474. The rule may be safely said to be that a surrender is created by operation of law, when the parties to a lease do some act so inconsistent with the subsisting relation of landlord and tenant as to imply that they have both agreed to consider the surrender as made. Flannagan v. Dickerson, 103 Okl. 206, 229 P. 552, 553; Hodgkiss v. Dayton-Brower Co., 156 N.Y.S. 907, 908, 93 Misc. 109; Triest & Co. v. Goldstone, 173 Cal. 240, 159 P. 715, 716.

SURRENDER OF CHARTER. A corporation created by charter may give up or "surrender" its charter to the people, unless the charter was granted under a statute, imposing indefeasible duties on the bodies to which it applies. Grant, Corp. 45.

SURRENDER OF COPYHOLD. The mode of conveying or transferring copyhold property from one person to another is by means of a surrender, which consists in the yielding up of the estate by the tenant into the hands of the lord for such purposes as are expressed in the surrender. The process in most manors is for the tenant to come to the steward, either in court or out of court, or else to two customary tenants of the same manor, provided there be a custom to warrant it, and there, by delivering up a rod, a glove, or other symbol, as the custom directs, to resign into the hands of the lord, by the hands and acceptance of his steward, or of the said two tenants, all his interest and title to the estate, in trust, to be again granted out by the lord to such persons and for such uses as are named in the surrender, and as the custom of the manor will warrant. Brown.

SURRENDER OF CRIMINALS. The act by which the public authorities deliver a person accused of a crime, and who is found in their jurisdiction, to the authorities within whose jurisdiction it is alleged the crime has been committed.

SURRENDER OF A PREFERENCE. In bankruptcy practice. The surrender to the assignee in bankruptcy, by a preferred creditor, of anything he may have received under his preference and any advantage it gives him, which he must do before he can share in the dividend. In re Richter's Estate, 1 Dill. 544, Fed.Cas.No.11,803. The word as generally defined may denote either compelled or voluntary action. Keppel v. Bank, 197 U.S. 356, 25 S.Ct. 443, 49 L.Ed. 790. In. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57g (11 U.S.C.A. § 93 (g), providing that creditors must surrender preferences before having claims allowed, it is unqualified and generic, and hence embraces both meanings. Keppel v. Bank, supra.

SURRENDER TO USES OF WILL. Formerly a copyhold interest would not pass by will unless it had been surrendered to the use of the will. By St. 55 Geo. III. c. 192, this is no longer necessary. 1 Steph. Comm. 639; Mozley & Whitley.

SURRENDEREE. The person to whom a surrender is made.

SURRENDEROR. One who makes a surrender. One who yields up a copyhold estate for the purpose of conveying it.

SURREPTITIOUS. Stealthily or fraudulently done, taken away, or introduced.

SURROGATE. In American law. The name given in some of the states to the judge or judicial officer who has the administration of probate matters, guardianships, etc. See Malone v. Sts. Peter & Paul's Church, 172 N.Y. 269, 64 N.E. 961. In other states he is called judge of probate, register, judge of the orphans' court, etc. He is ordinarily a county officer, with a local jurisdiction limited to his county.

In English law. One that is substituted or appointed in the room of another, as by a bishop, chancellor, judge, etc.; especially an officer appointed to dispense licenses to marry without banns. 2 Steph. Comm. 247.

SURROGATE'S COURT. In the United States. A state tribunal, with similar jurisdiction to the court of ordinary, court of probate, etc., relating to matters of probate, etc. 2 Kent, Comm. 409, note b. And see Robinson v. Fair, 9 S.Ct. 30, 128 U.S. 53, 32 L.Ed. 415; In re Hawley, 104 N.Y. 250, 10 N.E. 352.

SURROUND. To inclose on all sides; to encompass. In re Creveling, Cust. & Pat.App., 61 F.2d 862, 863.

SURROUNDING CIRCUMSTANCES. Which may permit inference of culpability on part of defendant under res ipsa loquitur rule refers, not 'co circumstances directly tending to show lack of care, but only to mere neutral circumstances of control and management by defendant, which may, when explained, appear to be entirely consistent with due care. Hepp v. Quickel Auto & Supply Co., 37 N.M. 525, 25 P.2d 197.

SURSISE. L. Fr. In old English law. Neglect; omission; default; cessation.

SURSUM REDDERE. Lat. In old conveyancing. To render up; to surrender.

SURSUMREDDITIO. Lat. A surrender.

SURVEILLANCE. Oversight, superintendence, supervision. People v. Howard, 120 Cal.App. 45, 8 P.2d 176, 179.

SURVEY, v. Of land, to ascertain corners, boundaries, divisions, with distances and directions, and not necessarily to compute areas included within defined boundaries. Keer v. Fee, 179 Iowa, 1097, 161 N.W. 545, 547.

SURVEY, n. The process by which a parcel of land is measured and its contents ascertained; also a statement of the result of such survey, with the courses and distances and the quantity of the land. Corporation of Frederick Scholes v. Theodore Ficke Warehouses, 213 App.Div. 259, 210 N.Y.S. 341, 343. The land included in field notes. Cross v. Wilkinson, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W. 345, 346.

Insurance

An examination. A plan and description of the present existing state, condition, and mode of use of the property. Macatawa Transp. Co. v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 179 Mich. 443, 146 N.W. 396, 398.

In insurance law, the term has acquired a general meaning, inclusive of what is commonly called the "application," which contains the questions propounded on behalf of the company, and the answers of the assured. Albion Lead Works v. Williamsburg City F. Ins. Co., C.C.Mass., 2 F. 484; May v. Buckeye Ins. Co., 25 Wis. 291, 3 Am.Rep. 76.

Sales

An examination.

General

Survey of a vessel. A statement of its present condition. Chicago S. S. Lines v. U. S. Lloyds, C.C.A.I11., 12 F.2d 733, 737. A public document, looked to both by underwriters and owners, as affording the means of ascertaining, at the time and place, the state and condition of the ship and other property at hazard. Potter v. Ocean Ins, Co., 3 Sumn. 43, 19 Fed.Cas.1,173; Hathaway v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw., N.Y., 68.

SURVEYOR. One who makes surveys, determines area of. portion of earth's surface, length and direction of boundary lines, and contour of surface. Severance v. Ball, 93 Cal.App, 56, 268 P. 1068, 1070.

SURVEYOR OF HIGHWAYS. In English law. A person elected by the inhabitants of a parish, in vestry assembled, to survey the highways therein. He must possess certain qualifications in point of property; and, when elected, he is compellable, unless he can show some grounds of exemption, to take upon himself the office. Mozley & Whitley.

SURVEYOR OF THE PORT. A revenue officer of the United States appointed for each of the principal ports of entry, whose duties chiefly concern the importations at his station and the determination of their amount and valuation. Rev.St.U.S. § 2627 (19 U.S.C.A. § 40).

SURVIVAL STATUTES. Statutory provision for the survival, after death of the injured person, of certain causes of action for injury to the person whether death results from the injury or from some other cause. The cause of action which survives is for the wrong to the injured person. In re Daniel's Estate, 294 N.W. 465, 208 Minn. 420.

See, also, Wrongful Death Statutes.

SURVIVE. To continue to live or exist beyond the life, or existence of; to continue to live or exist beyond (a specified period or event); to live through in spite of; live on after passing through; to remain alive; exist in force or operation beyond any period specified. Thompson v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 145 La. 805, 83 So. 19, 20.

SURVIVING. Remaining alive. State ex rel. Baker v. Bird, 253 Mo. 569, 162 S.W. 119, 123, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 353.

SURVIVOR. One who survives another; one who outlives another; one who lives beyond some happening; one of two or more persons who lives after the death of the other or others. Baker v. Baker, 182 Ala. 194, 62 So. 284, 286.

The word "survivor," however, in connection with the power of one of two trustees to act, is used not only with reference to a condition arising where one of such trustees dies, but also as indicating a trustee who continues to administer the trust after his cotrustee is disqualified, has been removed, renounces, or refuses to act. Busch v. Schuttler, 216 Ill. App. 212, 217.

SURVIVORSHIP. The living of one of two or more persons after the death of the other or others.

Survivorship is where a person becomes entitled to property by reason of his having survived another person who had an interest in it. In re Conklin's Estate, 20 N.Y.S.2d 59, 62, 259 App.Div. 432; United States v. Jacobs, III. & N. Y., 306 U.S. 363, 59 S.Ct. 551, 555, 83 L.Ed. 763.

SUS. PER COLL. An abbreviation of "suspendatur per collum," let him be hanged by the neck. Words formerly used in England in signing judgment against a prisoner who was to be executed; being written by the judge in the margin of the sheriff's calendar or list, opposite the prisoner's name. 4 BL Comm. 403. Written, also, "sus' per coil'."

SUSCEPTIBLE. Capable. U. S. v. Sischo, D.C. Wash., 262 F. 1001, 1005. And see Bensdorff v. Uihlein, 132 Tenn, 193, 177 S.W. 481, 482, 2 A.L.R. 1364, SUSPECT. To have a slight or even vague idea concerning;—not necessarily involving knowledge or belief or likelihood. Cheek v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 89 Kan. 247, 131 P. 617, 624.

"Suspect" with reference to probable cause as grounds for arrest without warrant is ordinarily used in place of the word believe. U. S. v. Rembert, D.C.Tex., 284 F. 996, 1001. But to "suspect and believe" that a person, claiming to have been falsely imprisoned by a deputy sheriff, is a felon, is not the legal equivalent of belief on probable cause. Hill v. Wyrosdick, 216 Ala. 235, 113 So. 49, 50.

SUSPEND. To interrupt; to cause to cease for a time; to postpone; to stay, delay, or hinder; to discontinue temporarily, but with an expectation or purpose of resumption. To forbid a public officer, attorney, employee, or ecclesiastical person from performing his duties or exercising his functions for a more or less definite interval of time.

Insurance Co. v. Aiken, 82 Va. 428; Stack v. O'Hara, 98 Pa. 232; Reeside v. U. S., 8 Wall. 42, 19 L.Ed. 318; U. S. v. Felder, D.C.N.Y., 13 F.2d 527, 528; Bishop v. Bacon, 130 Pa.Super. 240, 196 A. 918, 921.

To postpone, as a judicial sentence. State v. Anderson, 43 S.D. 630, 181 N.W. 839, 840; People ex rel. Holton v. Hunt, 217 App.Div. 428, 216 N.Y.S. 765, 768, To stay, as a decree;—not synonymous with vacate. Stewart v. Oneal, C.C.A.Ohio, 237 F. 897, 903.

To cause a temporary cessation, as of work by an employee; to lay off;—not synonymous with remove. Thomas v. City of Chicago, 194 Ill.App. 526, 529.

Also, sometimes, to discontinue or dispense with (permanently) ; to remove permanently from office; to discharge (an employee) permanently. Phelps v. Connellee, Tex.Civ.App., 278 S.W. 939, 941. See Suspension.

SUSPENDER. In Scotch law. He in whose favor a suspension is made.

SUSPENSE. When a rent, profit a prendre, and the like, are, in consequence of the unity of possession of the rent, etc., of the land out of which they issue, not in esse for a time, they are said to be in suspense, tunc dormiunt; but they may be revived or awakened. Co. Litt. 313a.

SUSPENSION. A temporary stop, a temporary delay, interruption, or cessation. Hood ex rel. North. Carolina Bank & Trust Co. v. Clark, 211 N.C. 693, 191 S.E. 732, 733.

A temporary stop of a right, of a law, and the like. Thus, we speak of a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, of a statute, of the power of alienating an estate, of a person in office, etc..

A temporary' cutting off or debarring one, as from the privileges of an institution or society. John B. Stetson University v. Hunt, 88 Fla. 510, 102 So. 637, 639.

An ad interim stoppage or arrest of official power and pay.;—not synonymous with "removal," which terminates wholly the incumbency of the office or employment.. State v. Board of Police & Fire Com'rs of La Crosse, 159 Wis. 295, 150 N.W. 493, 494. Temporary withdrawal or cessation from public work as distinguished from permanent severance accomplished by removal, Bois v. City of Fall River, 257 Mass. 471, 154 N.E. 270; "removal" being, however, the broader term, which may on occasion include suspension. State v. Medler, 19 N.M. 252, 142 P. 376, 379.

Ecclesiastical Law

An ecclesiastical censure, by which a spiritual person is either interdicted the exercise of his ecclesiastical function or hindered from receiving the profits of his benefice. It may be partial or total, for a limited time, or forever, when it is called "deprivation" or "amotion." Ayl. Par. 501.

Scotch Law

A stay of execution until after a further consideration of the cause. Ersk. Inst. 4, 3, 5.

General

Pleas in suspension Were those which showed some matter of temporary incapacity to proceed with the action or suit. Steph. Pl. 45.

Suspension of a right. The act by which a party Is deprived of the exercise of his right for a time. A temporary stop of a right, a partial extinguish.. ment for a time, as contrasted with a complete extinguishment, where the right is absolutely dead. In re Muser's Estate, 122 Misc. 164, 203 N.Y.S. 619, 621. Suspension of a right in an estate is a temporary or partial withholding of it from use or exercise. It differs from extinguishment, because a suspended right is susceptible of being revived, which is not the case where the right was extinguished. Bac. Abr. Extinguishment (A).

Suspension of a statute. A temporary stop. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Holliday, 45 Okl. 536, 145 P. 786, 793. The suspension of a statute for a limited time operates so as to prevent its operation for the time; but it has not the effect of a repeal. Brown v. Barry, 3 U.S. 365, 3 Dall. 365, 1 L.Ed. 638.

Suspension of arms. An agreement between belligerents, made for a short time or for a particular place, to cease hostilities between them. See, also, Armistice.

Suspension of business. These words in a statute contemplate an interruption of ordinary business operations, evidenced by some objective features; an interruption of the ordinary course of business, other than a mere failure to meet maturing obligations. Hoover Steel Ball Co. v. Schafer Ball Bearings Co., 89 N.J.Eq. 433, 105 A. 500, 501..

SUSPENSIVE CONDITION. See Condition.

SUSPENSORY CONDITION. See Condition.

SUSPICION. The act of suspecting, or the state of being suspected; imagination, generally of something ill; distrust; mistrust; doubt. McCalla v. State, 66 Ga. 348. The apprehension of something without proof or upon slight evidence. State v. Hall, Mo.App., 285 S.W. 1009, 1011.

Suspicion implies a belief or opinion based upon facts or circumstances which do not amount to proof. Burton v. McNeill, 196 S. C. 250, 13 S.E.2d 10, 11, 133 A.L.R. 603.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER. In the criminal laws of some of the states, a person who is known or strongly suspected to be an habitual criminal, or against whom there is reasonable cause to believe that he has committed a crime or is planning or intending to commit one, or whose actions and behavior give good ground for suspicion and who can give no good account of himself, and who may therefore be arrested or required to give security for good behavior. See McFadin v. San Antonio, 22 Tex.Civ.App. 140, 54 S.W. 48; People v. Russell, 35 Misc.Rep. 765, 72 N.Y.Supp. 1; 4 Bl. Comm. 252.

SUSTAIN. To carry on; to maintain. George v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co., 84 Okl. 172, 201 P. 510, 512, 23 A.L.R. 80.

To support; to warrant;—said of evidence in connection with a verdict, decision, etc. Johnson v. Allispaugh, 58 Ind.App. 83, 107 N.E. 686, 688; Work v. Whittington, 61 Cal.App. 302, 214 P. 474.

To suffer; bear; undergo. To endure or undergo without failing or yielding; to bear up under. Webster.

SUTHDURE. The south door of a church, where canonical purgation was performed, and plaints, etc., were heard and determined. Wharton.

SUTLER. A person who, as a business, follows an army and sells provisions and liquor to the troops. A small trader who follows an army and who is licensed to sell goods, especially edibles, to the soldiers. Keane v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 272 F. 577, 582.

SUUM CUIQUE TRIBUERE. Lat. To render to everyone his own. One of the three fundamental maxims of the law laid down by Justinian.

SUUS HARES. See Hferes.

SUUS JUDEX. Lat. In old English law. A proper judge; a judge having cognizance of a cause. Literally, one's own judge. Bract. fol. 401.

SUZERAIN. In French and feudal law. The immediate vassal of the king; a crown vassal; a tenant in capite. A lord who possesses a fief whence other fiefs issue. Note 77 of Butler & Hargrave's notes, Co. Litt. 1. 3. Also spelled "suzereign."

International Law

A state that exercises political control over another state, in relation to which it is sovereign. Webster.

The word has no clear or precise signification. It has been extended to the control of European Powers through their colonies over imperfectly civilized people. 12 L. Quart.Rev. 223; 1896, p. 122. See, also, Hershey, Int.L. 106.

In modern times suzerainty is used as descriptive of relations, ill-defined and vague, which exist between powerful and dependent states; its very indefiniteness being its recommendation. While protecting and protected states tend to draw nearer, the reverse is true of suzerain and vassal states; a protectorate is generally the preliminary to incorporation; suzerainty, to separation. Encycl.Br.

It is said that suzerainty is title without corresponding power ; protectorate is power without corresponding title. Freund, Pol.Sci.Quart. 1899, p. 28.

SWAIN; SWAINMOTE. See Swein; Sweinmote.

SWAMP. A "swamp" has been defined as wet, spongy land, soft low ground saturated with water, but not usually covered by it, marshy ground away from seashore. Campbell v. Walker, 137 Or. 375, 2 P.2d 912, 914.

SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS. Lands unfit for cultivation by reason of their swampy character and requiring drainage or reclamation to render them available for beneficial use. Miller v. Eastern Ry. & Lumber Co., 84 Wash. 31, 146 P. 171, 173; Beer v. Whiteville Lumber Co., 170 N.C. 337, 86 S.E. 1024.

Such lands, when constituting a portion of the public domain, have generally been granted by congress to the several states within whose limits they lie. See Miller v. Tobin, C.C.Or., 18 F. 614; Keeran v. Allen, 33 Cal. 546; Hogaboom v. Ehrhardt, 58 Cal. 233; Thompson v. Thornton, 50 Cal. 144; Martin v. Busch, 93 Fla. 535, 112 So. 274, 284.

SWANIMOTE. See Sweinmote.

SWARF-MONEY. Warth-money; or guard-money paid in lieu of the service of castle-ward. Cowell.

SWATCH. Commercially, a small sample of cloth from which suits, etc., are to be ordered. U. S. Fashion & Sample Book Co. v. Montrose Cloak & Suit Co., Mo.Sup., 218 S.W. 867, 869.

SWEAR. To put on oath; to administer an oath to a person.

To take an oath; to become bound by an oath duly administered. To declare on oath the truth (of a petition, etc.). Indiana Quarries Co. v. Simms, 158 Ky. 415, 165 S.W. 422; Landrum v. Landrum, 159 Ga. 324, 125 S.E. 832, 833, 38 A.L.R. 217.

To use profane language;—a punishable offense in many jurisdictions. See Gaines v. State, 7 Lea, Tenn., 410, 40 Am.Rep. 64; State v. Chrisp, 85 N.C. 528, 39 Am.Rep. 713. For "False Swearling," see that title.

SWEARING THE PEACE. Showing to a magistrate that one has just cause to be afraid of another in consequence of his menaces, in order to have him bound over to keep the peace.

SWEATING. The questioning of a person in custody charged with crime with intent to obtain information concerning his connection therewith or knowledge thereof by plying him with questions, or by threats or other wrongful means, extorting information to be used against him. Under the statute mere questioning amounts to "sweating" if done for the purpose of extorting from the accused information to be used against him; that is, inducing him to unwillingly or involuntarily give such information. Commonwealth v. , McClanahan, 153 Ky. 412, 155 S.W. 1131, 1132, Ann.Cas. 1915C, 132.

SWEAT SHOP. A plant whose employees are overworked and paid low wages, or a place where employees are required to work to an extent hardly endurable, and in the public mind the term imputes unsavory and illegal business practices. Masters v. Sun Mfg. Co., 237 Mo.App. 240, 165 S.W.2d 701, 703.

SWEEPING. Comprehensive; including in its scope many persons or objects; as, a sweeping objection.

SWEEPSTAKES. In horse racing, the sum of the stakes for which the subscribers agree to pay for each horse nominated. Stone v. Clay, 10 C.C. A. 147, 61 F. 889.

SWEIN. In old English law. A freeman or freeholder within the forest.

SWEINMOTE. In forest law. A court holden before the verderors, as judges, by the stewart of the sweinmote, thrice in every year, the sweins or freeholders within the forest composing the jury. Its principal jurisdiction was—First, to inquire into the oppressions and grievances committed by the officers of the forest; and, secondly, to 'receive and try presentments certified from the court of attachments in offenses against vert and venison. 3 BL Comm. 72.

SWELL. To enlarge or increase. In an action of tort, circumstances of aggravation may "swell" the damages.

SWIFT WITNESS. A term colloquially applied to a witness who is unduly zealous or partial for the side which calls him, and who betrays his bias by his extreme readiness to answer questions or volunteer information.

SWINDLER. A cheat; one guilty of defrauding divers persons. 1 Term, 748.

SWINDLING. Cheating and defrauding grossly with deliberate artifice. Wyatt v. Ayres, 2 Port., Ala., 157; Chase v. Whitlock, 3 Hill, N.Y., 140. Usually applied to a transaction where the guilty party procures the delivery to him, under a pretended contract, of the personal property of another, with the felonious design of appropriating it to his own use. 2 Russ.Cr. 130; Stevenson v. Hayden, 2 Mass. 406; Jones v. State, 97 Ga. 430, 25 S.E. 319.

The acquisition of any personal or movable property, money, or instrument of writing conveying or securing a valuable right, by means of some false or deceitful pretense or device, or fraudulent representation, with intent to appropriate the same to the use of the party so acquiring, or of destroying or impairing the rights of the party justly entitled to the same. May v. State, 15 Tex.App. 436; Cochrain v. State, 93 Tex.Cr.R. 483, 248 S.W. 43, 44.

To make out offense of "cheating" and "swindling" by false representations, state must prove that representations were made, that representations were knowingly and designedly false, that representations were made with intent to defraud, that representations did defraud, that representations related to existing fact or past event, and that party to whom representations were made, relying on their truth, was thereby induced to part with his property. Code 1933, § 26-7401 et seq. Diamond v. State, 52 Ga.App. 184, 182 S.E. 813, 814.

SWITCH. A mechanical device which turns a movable object from one course to another. Jeffery v. Kewaunee, G. B. & W. Ry. Co., 189 Wis. 207, 207 N.W. 283, 284.

As used in railroading, a device for moving a small section of track so that rolling stock may be run or shunted from one line to another. Jeffery v. Kewaunee, G. B. & W. Ry. Co., supra. A mechanical arrangement of movable parts of rails for transferring cars from one track to another; also a siding; a turnout. Pittsburgh Rys. Co. v. Borough of Carrick, 259 Pa. 333, 103 A. 106, 108. A track in the nature of a sidetrack adjacent to and used in .connection with another line of track. Indiana Rys. & Light Co. v. City of Kokomo, 183 Ind. 543, 108 N.E. 771, 772.

SWITCH LIMITS. Depot or station grounds; yard limits. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. McCall, 48 Okl. 602, 150 P. 173, 174.

SWITCH-YARD DOCTRINE. The doctrine that there can be no implied license to the public to use the track of a railroad company within the limits of its switch-yard. Binion v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co., 12 Ga.Ap1). 663, 78 S.E. 131

SWITCHING MOVEMENT or OPERATION. This term becomes of importance in determining whether or not the Safety Appliance Act (45 U.S. C.A. § 1 et seq.) is applicable to a particular set of facts, and is distinguished from "train movement."

Thus, the continuous movement of freight cars, reassembled after switching, from one portion of a railroad yard to another 4,500 feet away, through the business or warehouse part of a city, and crossing several city streets at grade, was held to be a "train movement," and not a "switching operation." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. U. S., C.C. A.Neb., 14 F.2d 747, 748.

SWITCHING SERVICE. This term is principally used in law in contradistinction to "transportation service," for which different rates may be set. "Transportation service" is one which requires no other service to complete the shipper's object, while "switching service" is one which precedes or follows transportation service. Andrews Steel Co. v. Davis, 210 Ky. 473, 27.6 S.W. 148, 150; on which legal freight charges have already been earned, or are to be earned. Louisville Water Co. v. Illinois . Cent. R. Co., D.C.Ky., 14 F.Supp. 301, 303. The word "switching" in this connection is synonymous with "transferring." J. B. Doppes Sons Lumber Co. v. Cincinnati, N. 0. & T. P. Ry. Co., supra. The test of distinction between these two services is not only whether the switching service follows transportation, but whether the movement of cars is under the yard-master's direction, in which case it is switching service, or under the trainmaster's direction, in which event it is transportation service. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Clark Pressed Brick Co., 127 Ark. 474, 192 S.W. 382, 384.

"Switching services" may also be distinguished from a "line haul," in that the latter is a definite service rendered between two definite points, to which switching is a mere incident. Cummings Sand & Gravel Co. v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co., 182 Iowa, 955, 166 N.W. 354, 356, L.R.A.1918C, 797.

SWITCHING TRACKS. Tracks for use in loading, reloading, storing, and switching cars, and other things incidental to railroad's regular train haul. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., 137 Kan. 217, 19 P.2d 484, 489.

SWOLING OF LAND. So much land as one's plow can till in a year; a hide of land. Cowell.

SWORN. Frequently used interchangeably with "verified." Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa, 307, 214 N.W. 882, 885. See Swear.

SWORN BROTHERS. In old English law. Persons who, by mutual oaths, covenant to share in each other's fortunes.

SWORN CLERKS IN CHANCERY. Certain officers in the English court of chancery, whose duties were to keep the records, make copies of pleadings, etc. Their offices were abolished by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103.

SYB AND SOM. A Saxon form of greeting, meaning peace and safety.

SYLLABUS. An abstract; a headnote; a note prefixed to the report of an adjudged case, containing an epitome or brief statement of the rulings of the court upon the point or points decided in the case. In West Virginia it is the law of the case, whatever may be the reasoning employed in the opinion of the court. Kuhn v. Coal Co., 215 U.S. 356, 30 S.Ct. 140, 141, 54 L.Ed. 228. The syllabus, however, in that state, is never made up of finding of facts, but is limited to points of law determined. Sometimes the finding of facts is referred to for the purpose of explaining the point of law adjudicated, but only for that purpose. Koonce v. Doolittle, 48 W.Va. 592, 37 S.E. 644, 645. Likewise in Ohio, the authority of decisions of its Supreme Court is limited to points stated in the syllabus. Walsh v. E. G. Shinner & Co., C.C.A. Del., LO F.2d 586, 588. But ordinarily, where a headnote, even though prepared by the court, is given no special force by statute or rule of court, the opinion is to be looked to for the original and authentic statement of the grounds of decision. Burbank v. Ernst, 232 U.S. 162, 34 S.Ct. 299, 58 L.Ed. 551.

Also, a catalogue or list; specifically (capitalized), a collection of eighty condemned propositions addressed by Pope Pius IX to all the Catholic episcopate, December 8, 1864. It gave rise to the most violent polemics; the Ultramontane party was loud in its praise, while the liberals treated it as &declaration of war by the church on modern society and civilization. Encycl. Br.

SYLLOGISM. In logic. The full logical form of a single argument. It consists of three propositions, (two premises and the conclusion,) and these contain three terms, of which the two occurring in the conclusion are brought together in the premises by being referred to a common class.

SYLVA CIEDUA. Lat. In ecclesiastical law. Wood of any kind which was kept on purpose to be cut, and which, being cut, grew again from the stump or root. Lynd. Prov. 190; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law 90. And see Silva Ciedua.

SYMBOLZEOGRAPHY. The art or cunning rightly to form and make written instruments. It is either judicial or extrajudicial; the latter being wholly occupied with such instruments as concern matters not yet judicially in controversy, such as instruments of agreements or contracts, and testaments or last wills. Wharton.

SYMBOLIC DELIVERY. The constructive delivery of the subject-matter of a sale or gift, where it is cumbersome or inaccessible, by the actual delivery of some article which is conventionally accepted as the symbol or representative of it, or which renders access to it possible, or which is evidence of the purchaser's or donee's title to it. Thus, a present gift of the contents of a box in a bank vault, accompanied by a transfer of the key thereto, is valid as a symbolical delivery. In re Leadenham's Estate, 289 Pa. 216, 137 A. 247, 249.

SYMBOLUM ANIMIE. Lat. A mortuary, or soul scot. See Soul Scot.

SYMMETRY. Due proportion of several parts of a body to each other; adaptation of the form or dimensions of the several parts of a thing to each other; harmonious relation of parts; conformance; consistency; congruity; correspondence or similarity of form, dimensions, or parts on opposite sides of an axis, center, or a dividing plane. Maxwell v. City of Buhl, 40 Idaho, 644, 236 P. 122, 123.

SYMOND'S INN. Formerly an inn of chancery.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE. A boycott. Booth v. Brown, C.C.Wash., 62 F. 794, 795.

SYNALLAGMATIC CONTRACT. In the civil law. A bilateral or reciprocal contract, in which the parties expressly enter into mutual engagements, each binding himself to the other. Poth. Obl. no. 9. Such are the contracts of sale, hiring, etc. See State ex rel. Waterman v. J. S. Waterman and Co., 178 La. 340, 151 So. 422, 426.

SYNCHRONISM. Two things may be said to be operating in "synchronism," not merely when they operate simultaneously, but also when their cycles of operation bear a timed relation to each other. Diamond Power Specialty Corporation v. Bayer, C.C.A.Mo., 13 F.2d 337, 342.

SYNCHRONIZATION. The operation of two radio broadcasting stations simultaneously upon the same frequency and with identical programs. WGN, Inc., v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 App. D.C. 385, 68 F.2d 432, 433.

SYNCOPARE. To cut short, or pronounce things so as not to be understood. Cowell.

SYNDIC. In the civil law. An advocate or pa, tron; a burgess or recorder; an agent or attorney who acts for a corporation or university; an ac, tor or procurator; an assignee. Wharton.

The word "syndic" in the civil law corresponds very nearly with that of assignee under the common law. Mobile & 0. R. Co. v. Whitney, 39 Ala. 468, 471.

In English common law. An agent appointed by a corporation for the purpose of obtaining letters of guardianship and the like, to whom such letters were issued. Minnesota L. & T. Co. v. Beebe, 40 Minn. 7, 41 N.W. 232, 233, 2 L.R.A. 418.

In French law. The person who is commissioned by the courts to administer a bankruptcy. He fulfills the same functions as the trustee or assignee. Also, one who is chosen to conduct the affairs and attend .to the concerns of a body corporate or community. In this sense the word corresponds to director or manager. Rodman Notes to Code de Com. p. 351; Dalloz, Dict. Syndic. See Field v. United States, 9 Pet. 182, 9 L.Ed. 94.

In Louisiana. The assignee of a bankrupt. Also, one of several persons to be elected by the creditors of a succession, for the purpose of ad. ministering thereon, whenever a succession has been renounced by the heirs, or has been accepted under the benefit of an inventory, and neither the beneficiary heirs, their attorney in fact, nor tutor will accept the administration and give the security required. Civ.Code. La. art. 1224.

'SYNDICALISM. The theory, plan, or practice of trade-union action which aims by the genera] strike and direct action to establish control by local organizations of workers over the means and processes of production. Webster.

A form or development of trade-unionism, originating in France, which aims at the possession of th means of production and distribution, and ultimately at the control of society and government, by the federated bodies of industrial workers, and which seeks to realize its purposes through the agency of general strikes and of terrorism, sabotage, violence, or other criminal means. New Cent. Dict.

Criminal Syndicalism

Defined by the California Criminal Syndicalism Act as any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching, or aiding and abetting the commission of crime, sabotage (defined in the act as willful and malicious physical damage or injury to physical property), or unlawful acts of force and violence or unlawful methods of terrorism, as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership, or control, or effecting any political change. See People v. Lesse, 52 Cal.App. 280, 199 P. 46, 47;• State v. Dingman, 37 Idaho, 253, 219 P. 760, 763.

SYNDICATE. A university committee. A combination of persons or firms united for the purpose of enterprises too large for individuals to undertake; or a group of financiers who buy up the shares of a company in order to sell them at a profit by creating a scarcity. Mozley & Whitley.

An association of individuals, formed for the purpose of conducting and carrying out some particular business transaction, ordinarily of a financial character, in which the members are mutually interested. Hambleton v. Rhind, 84 Md. 456, 36 A. 597, 40 L.R.A. 216. An organization formed for some temporary purpose. Gates v. Megargel, C.C.A.N.Y., 266 F. 811, 817, such as the organization of a real estate trust and the sale of shares to the public. Minot v. Burroughs, 223 Mass. 595, 112 N.E. 620, 623.

Merely "joint adventure," which is special combination in specific venture for profit without partnership or corporate designation. McCausey v. Burnet, 60 App.D.C. 201, 50 F.2d 491, 492.

SYNDICATING. Gathering materials suitable for newspaper publication from writers and artists and distributing the same at regular intervals, in the form of matrices, to newspapers throughout the country for publication on the same day. Star Co. v. Wheeler Syndicate, 91 Misc. Rep. 640, 155 N.Y.S. 782, 784.

SYNDICOS, or SYNDICUS. One chosen by a college, municipality, etc., to defend its cause. Calvin. See Syndic.

SYNGRAPIL The name given by the canonists to deeds or other written instruments of which both parts were written on the same piece of parchment, with some word or letters of the alphabet written between them, through which the parchment was cut in such a manner' as to leave half the word on one part and half on the other. It thus corresponded to the chirograph or indenture of the common law. 2 Bl.Comm. 295, 296.

Formerly such writings were attested by the subscription and crosses of the witnesses; afterwards, to prevent frauds and concealments, they made deeds of mutual covenant in a script and rescript, or in a part and counterpart, and in the middle between the two copies they wrote the word syngraphus in large letters, which, being cut through the parchment and one being delivered to each party, on being afterwards put together proved their authenticity.

A deed, bond, or other written instrument under the hand and seal of all the parties. It was so called because the parties wrote together.

SYNOD. A meeting or assembly of ecclesiastical persons concerning religion; being the same thing, in Greek, as convocation in Latin. There are four kinds: (1) A general or universal synod or council, where bishops of all nations meet; (2) a national synod of the clergy of one nation only; (3) a provincial synod, where ecclesiastical persons of a province only assemble, being now what is called the "convocation;" (4) a diocesan synod, of those of one diocese. 'A synod in Scotland is composed of three or more presbyteries. Wharton.

A convention of bishops and elders within a district including at least three presbyteries. Trustees of Pencader Presbyterian Church in Pencader Hundred v. Gibson, Del., 22 A.2d 782, 788.

A meeting of the few adjoining presbyteries,-not the same as an ecumenical council, which is a council of all, and not of a part. Groesbeeck v. Dunscomb, 41 How. Pract., N.Y., 344.

SYNODAL. A tribute or payment in money paid to the bishop or archdeacon by the inferior clergy, at the Easter visitation.

SYNODALES TESTES. L. Lat. Synods-men (corrupted into sidesmen) were the urban and rural deans, now the church-wardens. See Sidesmen.

SYNONYMOUS. Expressing the same or nearly the same idea. McCarthy v. Dunlevy-Franklin Co., 277 Pa. 467, 121 A. 409, 410; Hoffine v. Ewing, 60 Neb. 729, 84 N.W. 93, 95.

SYNOPSIS. A brief or partial statement, less than the whole; an epitome; synonymous with summary. Barker v. Barker, 43 Kan. 91, 22 P. 1000, 1001; State ex rel. Hubbell v. Bettman, 124 Ohio St. 24, 176 N.E. 664, 665.

SYPHILIS. In medical jurisprudence. A venereal disease (vulgarly called "the pox") of peculiar virulence, infectious by direct contact, capable of hereditary transmission, and the source of various other diseases and, directly or indirectly, of insanity.

SYSTEM. Orderly combination or arrangement, as of particulars, parts, or elements into a whole; especially such combination according to some rational principle; any methodic arrangement of parts. State v. Kistler, 119 Neb. 89, 227 N.W. 319, 320. Method; manner; mode. Fosche v. Union Traction Co., 108 Kan. 585;196 P. 423, 424.

In mining usage, under the principle that a system or plan of development is sufficient to meet the requirements of annual expenditure in development of mining claims, the term "system" or "general system" of work means that work as it is commenced on the ground is such that if continued it will lead to a discovery and development of the veins or ore bodies that are supposed to be in the claims, or if these are known that the work will facilitate the extraction of ores and minerals. Golden Giant Mining Co. v. Hill, 27 N.M. 124, 198 P. 276, 279, 14 A.L.R. 1450.

T

T. As an abbreviation, this letter usually stands for either "Territory," "Trinity," "term," "tempore," (in the time of,) or "title."

Every person who was convicted of felony, short of murder, and admitted to the benefit of clergy, was at one time marked with this letter upon the brawn of the thumb. Abolished by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. Whart. Dict.

By a law of the Province of Pennsylvania, A. D. 1698, it was provided that a convicted thief should wear a badge in the form of the letter "T.," upon his left sleeve, which badge should be at least four inches long and of a color different from that of his outer garment. Linn, Laws Prov. Pa. 275.

T. R. E. An abbreviation of "Tempore Regis Edwardi," (in the time of King Edward,) of common occurrence in Domesday, when the valuation of manors, as it was in the time of Edward the Confessor, is recounted. Cowell.

TABARD. A short gown; a herald's coat; a surcoat.

TABARDER. One who wears a tabard or short gown; the name is still used as the title of certain bachelors of arts on the old foundation of Queen's College, Oxford. Enc. Lond.

TABELLA. Lat. In Roman law. A tablet. Used in voting, and in giving the verdict of juries and decision of judges ; and, when written upon, commonly translated "ballot." The laws which introduced and regulated the mode of voting by ballot were called "leges tabellarice." Calvin.; 1 Kent, Comm. 232, note.

TABELLIO. Lat. In Roman law. An officer corresponding in some respects to a notary. His business was to draw legal instruments, (contracts, wills, etc.,) and witness their execution. Calvin.

Tabelliones differed from notaries in many respects : they had judicial jurisdiction in some cases, and from their judgments there were no appeals. Notaries were then the clerks or alders of the tabelliones; they received the agreements of the parties, which they reduced to short notes; and these contracts were not binding until they were written in extenso, which was done by the tabelliones. Jacob Law Dict. Tabellion.

TABERNACULUM. In old records. A public inn, or house of entertainment. Cowell.

TABERNARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A shopkeeper. Dig. 14, 3, 5, 7.

In old English law. A taverner or tavern keeper. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 12, § 17.

TABES DORSALIS. In medical jurisprudence. Another name for locomotor ataxia. It accompanies attacks of tabetic dementia. See Insanity.

TABETIC DEMENTIA. See Insanity.

TABLE. A synopsis or condensed statement, bringing together numerous items or details so as to be comprehended in a single view; as genealogical tables, exhibiting the names and relationships of all the persons composing a family; life and annuity tables, used by actuaries; interest tables, etc.

TABLE DE MARBRE. Fr. In old French law. Table of Marble; a principal seat of the admiralty, so called. These Tables de Marbre are frequently mentioned in the Ordonnance of the Marine. Burrill.

TABLE OF CASES. An alphabetical list of the adjudged cases cited, referred to, or digested in a legal text-book, volume of reports, or digest, with references to the sections, pages, or paragraphs where they are respectively cited, etc., which is commonly either prefixed or appended to the volume.

TABLE RENTS. In English law.- Payments which used to be made to bishops, etc., reserved and appropriated to their table or housekeeping. Wharton.

TABLEAU OF DISTRIBUTION. In Louisiana. A list of creditors of an insolvent estate, stating what each is entitled to. Taylor v. Hollander, 4 Mart.N.S., La., 535.

TABULA. Lat. In the civil law. A table or tablet; a thin sheet of wood, which, when covered with wax, was used for writing.

TABULA IN NAUFRAGIO. Lat. A plank in a shipwreck. This phrase is used metaphorically to designate the power subsisting in a third mortgagee, who took without notice of the second mortgage, to acquire the first incumbrance, attach it to his own, and thus squeeze out and get satisfaction, before the second is admitted to the fund. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 414; 2 Ves.Ch. 573. "It may be fairly said that the doctrine survives only in the unjust and much-criticised English rule of tacking." Ames, Lect. Leg. Hist. 269. See Tacking. The use of the expression is attributed to Sir Matthew Hale. See 2 P. Wms. 491..

TABULIE. Lat. In Roman law. Tables. Writings of any kind used as evidences of a transaction. Brissonius. Contracts and written instruments of all kinds, especially wills. So called because originally written on tablets and with wax. Calvinus.

TABULIE NUPTIALES. In the civil law. A written record of a marriage; or the agreement as to the dos.

TABULARIUS. Lat. A notary, or tabellio. Calvin.

TAC, TAK. In old records. A kind of Customary payment by a tenant. Cowell.

TAC FREE. In old records. Free from the common duty or imposition of tac. Cowell.

TACHOMETER. A device used on automobiles to record speed. Cooper v. Hoeglund, 221 Minn. .446, 22 N.W.2d 450.

TACIT. Existing, inferred, or understood without being openly expressed or stated, implied by silence or silent acquiescence, understood, implied as a tacit agreement; a tacit understanding. State v. Chadwick, 150 Or. 645, 47 P.2d 232, 234. Done or made in silence, implied or indicated, but not actually expressed. Goree v. Midstates Oil Corporation, 205 La. 988, 18 So.2d 591, 596. Manifested by the refraining from contradiction or objection; inferred from the situation and circumstances, in the absence of express matter.

TACIT ACCEPTANCE. In the civil law, a tacit acceptance of an inheritance takes place when some act is done by the heir which necessarily supposes his intention to accept and which he would have no right to do but in his capacity as heir. Civ. Code La. art. 988.

TACIT DEDICATION. Of property for public use is dedication arising from silence or inactivity, without express contract or agreement. Goree v. Midstates Oil Corporation, 205 La. 988, 18 So.2d :591, 596.

TACIT HYPOTHECATION. In the civil law, a species of lien or mortgage which is created by operation of law without any express agreement of the parties. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 343. In admiralty law, this term is sometimes applied to a maritime lien, which is not, strictly speaking, an hypothecation in the Roman sense of the term, though it resembles it. See The Nestor, 1 Sumn. 73, 18 Fed.Cas. 9.

TACIT LAW. A law which derives its authority from the common consent of the people without any legislative enactment. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 120.

TACIT MORTGAGE. In the law of Louisiana. The law alone in certain cases gives to the creditor a mortgage on the property of his debtor, without it being requisite that the parties should stipulate it. This is called "legal mortgage." It is called also "tacit mortgage," because it is established by the law without the aid of any agreement. Civ. Code La. art. 3311.

TACIT RELOCATION. A doctrine borrowed from the Roman law. It is a presumed renovation of the contract from the period at which the former expired, and is held to arise from implied consent of parties, in consequence of their not having signified their intention that agreement should terminate at the period stipulated. Though the original contract may have been for a longer period than one year, the renewed agreement can never be for more than one year, because verbal contract of location can extend longer. Srygley v. City of Nashville, 175 Tenn. 417, 135 S.W.2d 451.

In Scotch law. The tacit or implied renewal of a lease, inferred when the landlord, instead of warning a tenant to remove at the stipulated expiration of the lease, has allowed him to continue without making a new agreement. Bell, "Relocation."

TACIT TACK. In Scotch law. An implied tack or lease; inferred from a tacksman's possessing peaceably after his tack is expired. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

TACITA QUIEDAM HABENTUR PRO EXPRESSIS. 8 Coke, 40. Things unexpressed are sometimes considered as expressed.

TACITE. Lat. Silently; impliedly; tacitly.

TACITURNITY. In Scotch law, laches in not prosecuting a legal claim, or in acquiescing in an adverse one. Mozley & Whitley.

TACK, v. To annex some junior lien to a first lien, thereby acquiring priority over an intermediate one. See Tacking.

TACK, n. In Scotch law.. A term corresponding to the English "lease," and denoting the same species of contract.

Tack duty. Rent reserved upon a lease.

TACKING. The uniting of securities given at different times, so as to prevent any intermediate purchaser from claiming a title to redeem or otherwise discharge one lien, which is prior, without redeeming or discharging the other liens also, which are subsequent to his own title. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 412. The term is particularly applied to the action of a third mortgagee who, by buying the first lien and uniting it to his own, gets priority over the second mortgagee.

The source and origin of the English doctrine is the case of Marsh v. Lee, 2 Ventr. 337; 1 Ch.Cas. 162; 1 Wit & T. L.C.Eq. 611, notes. This case and the doctrine founded upon it has been the subject of severe criticism. Langd. Eq.P1. 191. Lord Ch. J. Holt is said to have been one of the first to benefit by the right of tacking. Holt v. Mill, 2 Vern. 279. This doctrine is inconsistent with laws which require the recording of mortgages, and in the United States, it does not exist to any extent. Brayee v. Bank, 14 Ohio 318; Dyer v. Graves, 37 Vt. 375; Parkist v. Alexander, 1 Johns.Ch., N.Y., 399; Bisph.Eq. § 159.

The term is also used in a number of other connections, as of possessions, disabilities, or items in accounts or other dealings. In these several cases the purpose of the pro-. posed tacking is to avoid the bar of a statute of limitations. See Davis v. Coblens, 174 U.S. 719, 19 S. a. 832, 43 L. Ed. 1147; Knippenberg v. Morris, 80 Ind. 540; Eager v. Com., 4 Mass. 182; Sharp v. Stephens' Committee, 21 Ky.L.Rep. 687, 52 S.W. 977; Graham v. Stanton, 177 Mass. 321, 58 N.E. 1023; Moore v. Blackman, 109 Wis. 528, 85 N.W. 429. The term is applied especially to the process of making out title to land by adverse possession, when the present occupant and claimant has not been in possession for the full statutory period, but adds or "tacks" to his own possession that of previous occupants under whom he claims. See J. B. Streeter Co. v. Fredrickson, 11 N.D. 300, 91 N.W. 692; Frost v. Courtis, 172 Mass. 401, 52 N.E. 515; Murray v. Pannaci, 67 N.J.Eq. 724, 57 A. 1132.

TACKSMAN. In Scotch law. A tenant or lessee; one to whom a tack is granted. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

TACTIS SACROSANCTIS. Lat. In old English law. Touching the holy evangelists. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 16, § 21. "A bishop may swear visis evangeliis, [looking at the Gospels,] and not tactis, and it is good enough." Freem. 133.

TACTO PER SE SANCTO EVANGELIO. Lat. Having personally touched the holy Gospel. Cro. Eliz. 105. The description of a corporal oath.

TAIL. Limited; abridged; reduced; curtailed, as a fee or estate in fee, to a certain order of succession, or to certain heirs.

TAIL, ESTATE IN. An estate of inheritance, which, instead of descending to heirs generally, goes to the heirs of the donee's body, which means his lawful issue, his children, and through them to his grandchildren in a direct line, so long as his posterity endures in a regular order and course of descent, and upon the death of the first owner without issue, the estate determines. 1 Washb. Real Prop. *72. Kolmer v. Miles, 270 Ill. 20, 110 N.E. 407, 408; Tantum v. Campbell, 83 N.J. Eq. 361, 91 A. 120, 121; Harwell v. Harwell, 151 Tenn. 587, 271 S.W. 353, 355.

A freehold of inheritance, limited to a person and the heirs of his body, general or special, male or female, and is the creature of the statute de Donis. The estate, provided the entail be not barred, reverts to the donor or reversioner, if the donee die without leaving descendants answering to the condition annexed to the estate upon its creation, unless there be a limitation over to a third person on default of such descendants, when it vests in such third person or remainder-man. Wharton. In re Reeves, 10 Del. Ch. 324, 92 A. 246, 247; 10 Del.Ch. 483, 94 A. 511, 513; Conover v. Cade, 184 Ind. 604, 112 N.E. 7, 11; Gardner v. Anderson, 114 Kan. 778, 227 P. 743, 748; Cox v. Fink, 200 Ky. 219, 254 S.W. 757, 758.

Several Tail

An entail severally to two; as if land is given to two men and their wives, and to the heirs of their bodies begotten; here the donees have a joint estate for their two lives, and yet they have a several inheritance, because the issue of the one shall have his moiety, and the issue of the other the other moiety. Cowell.

Tail after Possibility of Issue Extinct

A species of estate tail which arises where one is tenant in special tail, and a person from whose body the issue was to spring dies without issue, Or, having left issue, that issue becomes extinct. In either of these cases the surviving tenant in special tail becomes "tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct." 2 Bl.Comm. 124.

Tail Female

When lands are given to a person and the female heirs of his or her body. The male heirs are not capable of inheriting it.

Tail General

An estate in tail granted to one "and the heirs of his body begotten," which is called "tail general" because, how often soever such donee in tail be married, his issue in general by all and every such marriage is, in successive order, capable of inheriting the estate tail per formam doni. 2 Bl.Comm. 113; Tantum v. Campbell, 83 N.J.Eq. 361, 91 A. 120, 122. This is where an estate is limited to a man and the heirs of his body, without any restriction at all; or, according to some authorities, with no other restriction than that in relation to sex. Thus, tail male general is the same thing as tail male; the word "general," in such case, implying that there is no other restriction upon the descent of the estate than that it must go in the male line. So an estate in tail female general is an estate in tail female. The word "general," in the phrase, expresses a purely negative idea, and may denote the absence of any restriction, or the absence of some given restriction which is tacitly understood. Mozley & Whitley.

Tail Male

When certain lands are given to a person and the male heirs of his or her body. The female heirs are not capable of inheriting it,

Tail Special

This denotes an estate in tail where the succession is restricted to certain heirs of the donee's body, and does not go to all of them in general; e. g., where lands and tenements are given to a man and "the heirs of his body on Mary, his now wife, to be begotten;" here no issue can inherit but such special issue as is engendered between those two, not such as the husband may have by another wife, and therefore it is called "special tail." 2 Bl.Comm. 113. It is defined by Cowell as the limitation of lands and tenements to a man and his wife and the heirs of their two bodies. But the phrase need not be thus restricted. Tail special, in its largest sense, is where the gift is restrained to certain heirs of the donor's body, and does not go to all of them in general. Mozley & Whitley.

TAIL LIGHT. Red light on the rear of a motor vehicle. Mahar v. Mackay, 55 Cal.App.2d 869, 132 1^3.2d 42, 47.

TAILAGE. See Tallage,

TAILLE. Fr.

In old English law. The fee which is opposed to fee-simple, because it is so minced or pared that it is not in the owner's free power to dispose of it, but it is, by the first giver, cut or divided from all other, and tied to the issue of the donee,—in short, an estate-tail. Wharton.

In old Franch law. A tax or assessment levied by the king, or by any great lord, upon his subjects, usually taking the form of an imposition upon the owners of real estate. Brande. The equivalent of the English tallage—the typical direct tax in France of the Middle Ages, as tonlieu was the generic term for an indirect tax. See Tallage.

TAILORS TO THE TRADE. Those who cut, make, and trim garments for merchant tailors in different parts of the United States. Magid v. Tannenbaum, 164 App.Div. 142, 149 N.Y.S. 445.

TAILZIE. In Scotch law. An entail. A tailzied fee is that which the owner, by exercising his inherent right of disposing of his property, settles upon others than those to whom it would have descended by law. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 2, p. 101.

TAINT. A conviction of felony, or the person so convicted. Cowell.

TAKE. To lay hold of; to gain or receive into possession; to seize; to deprive one of the use or possession of; to assume ownership. City of Durham v. Wright, 190 N.C. 568, 130 S.E. 161, 163.

Thus, constitutions generally provide that a man's property shall not be taken for public uses without just compensation. Evansville & C. R. Co. v. Dick, 9 Ind. 433; Gas Products Co. v. Rankin, 63 Mont. 372, 207 P. 993, 998, 24 A.L.R. 294; Piper v. Ekern, 180 Wis. 586, 194 N.W. 159, 162, 34 A.L.R. 32. Property may be deemed "taken" within the meaning of these constitutional provisions when it Is totally destroyed or rendered valueless, Lund v; Salt Lake County, 58 Utah 546, 200 P. 510, 513; or when it is damaged by a public use in connection with an actual taking by the exercise of eminent domain, City of St. Louis v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 272 Mo. 80, 197 S.W. 107, 111; or when there is interference with use of property to owner's prejudice, with resulting diminution in value thereof, Webster County v. Lutz, 234 Ky. 618, 28 S.W.2d 966, 967. But acquisition of title or total destruction of value is not essential to "taking," for which compensation must be made. Cheves v. Whitehead, D.C.Ga., 1 F. Supp. 321, 324.

The word take has many shades of meaning, precise meaning which it is to bear in any case depending on the subject with respect to which it is used. Kennedy v. New York Life Ins. Co., 178 Misc. 258, 172 So. 743, 745.

In the law of larceny, to obtain or assume possession of a chattel unlawfully, and without the owner's consent; to appropriate things to one's own use with felonious intent. Thus, an actual taking is essential to constitute larceny. 4 Bl. Comm. 430. A "taking" occurs when a person with a preconceived design to appropriate property to his own use obtains possession of it by means of fraud or trickery. People v. Edwards, Cal.App. 102, 236 P. 944, 948.

In this connection, "take" is not synonymous with "obtain," which embraces many other ways of acquiring property. Allen v. State, 97 Tex.Cr.R. 467, 262 S. W. 502, 503. Nor is "take" necessarily synonymous with "steal." Hunt v. State, 89 Tex.Cr.R. 89, 229 S.W. 869, 871; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Malone, 200 Ala. 380, 76 So., 296, 297. But the phrase "take by stealth" may have the same meaning as "steal." Roach v. State, 23 Okl.Cr. 280, 214 P. 563, 564.

To seize or apprehend a person; to arrest the body of a person by virtue of lawful process. Thus, a capias commands the officer to take the body of the defendant. Corn. v. Hall, 9 Gray, Mass., 267, 69 Am.Dec. 285.

To acquire the title to an estate; to receive or be entitled to an estate in lands from another person by virtue of some species of title. Thus one is said to "take by purchase," "take by descent," "take a life-interest under the devise," etc. In re Bock, 125 Misc. 653, 211 N.Y.S. 621. 622.

To receive the verdict of a jury; to superintend the delivery of a verdict; to hold a court. The commission of assize in England empowers the judges to take the assizes; that is, according to its ancient meaning, to take the verdict of a peculiar species of jury called an "assize;" but, in its present meaning, "to hold the assizes." 3 Bl. Comm. 59, 185. To choose; e. g., ad capiendas assisas, to choose a jury.

To procure or to obtain (an appeal). Nessans v. Colomes, 136 La. 1051, 68 So. 122; Cochran v. State, 206 Ala. 74, 89 So. 278.

See, also, Taking.

TAKE AWAY. This term in a statute punishing every person who shall take away any female under 18 from her father for the purpose of prostitution requires only that such person procure or cause her to go away by some persuasion, enticement, or inducement offered, exercised, or held out to the girl, or by furnishing her the means or money with which to go away. State v. Corrigan, 262 Mo. 195, 171 S.W. 51, 54.

TAKE BACK. To revoke; to retract; as, to take back one's promise. Dimock State Bank v. Boehnen, 46 S.D. 50, 190 N.W. 485.

TAKE BY STEALTH. To steal; feloniously to take and carry away the personal goods of another; to take without right, secretly, and without leave or consent of the owner. Roach v. State, 23 Okl.Cr. 280, 214 P. 563, 564.

TAKE CARE OF. To support; maintain; look after (a person). Ballenger v. Ballenger, 208 Ala. 147, 94 So. 127. To pay (a debt). Scranton Mercantile Co. v. E. Schneider & Co., 163 Ark. 536, 260 S.W. 426, 427. To attend to. Southern Surety Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 215 Iowa, 525, 245 N.W. 864, 868.

TAKE EFFECT. To become operative or executed. Miller v. Oliver, 54 Cal.App. 495, 202 P. 168, 171. To be in force, or go into operation. Mowery v. Washington Nat. Ins. Co., 289 Ill.App. 443, 7 N.E.2d 334, 335.

TAKE OVER. To assume control or management of;-not necessarily involving the transfer of absolute title. New York Trust Co. v. Farmers' Irr. Dist., C.C.A.Neb., 280 F. 785, 795. See, however, Knight v. First Nat. Bank, C.C.A.Ky., 281 F. 968, 972.

TAKE UP. To pay or discharge (a note). Ashville Sa^{y}. Bank v. Lee, 214 Ala. 501, 108 So. 335, 337; McKenzie v. Smith, 18 Ga.App. 626, 89 S.E. 1097, 1098; Dilenbeck v. Herrold, 183 Iowa, 264, 164 N.W. 869, 870. Also, sometimes, to purchase a note. Dilenbeck v. Herrold, supra. To retire (a negotiable instrument) ; to discharge one's liability on it;-said particularly of an indorser or acceptor.

A party to a negotiable instrument, particularly an indorser or acceptor, is said to "take up" the paper, or to "retire" it, when he pays its amount, or substitutes other security for it, and receives it again into his own hands. See Hartzell v. McClurg, 54 Neb. 316, 74 N.W. 626; McKenzie v. Smith, 18 Ga.App. 626, 89 S.E. 1097, 1098.

TAKENOKO. Chopped, cooked, and canned barnboo sprouts from Japan, used as a vegetable in a manner similar to asparagus. Nippon Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 548, 549.

TAKEOVER BID. A tender offer, cL. v.

TAKER. One who takes or acquires; particularly, one who takes an estate by devise. When an estate is granted subject to a remainder or executory devise, the devisee of the immediate interest is called the "first taker."

TAKING. In criminal law and torts. The act of laying hold upon an article, with or without removing the same. It implies a transfer of possession, dominion, or control. See Take.

Under various statutes relating to sexual offenses, such as the abduction of a girl under the age of 18 years for the purpose of carnal intercourse, to constitute a "taking" no force, actual or constructive, need be exercised. State v. Lauzer, 152 Minn. 279, 188 N.W. 558, 559. The "taking" may be effected by persuasion, enticement, or inducement. State v. Richards, 88 Wash. 160, 152 P. 720. And it is not, necessary that the girl be taken from the control or against the will of those having lawful authority over her. State v. Lauzer, 152 Minn. 279, 188 N.W. 558. But the state must prove conduct by defendant indicating a control, complete or partial, of her person, having sexual intercourse as its object. State v. Clough, Del.Gen.Sess., 134 A. 172. 173.

TALC. A mineral compound, known as hydrated silicate of magnesia. U. S. v. R. C. Boeckel & Co., C.C.A.Mass., 221 F. 885, 886.

TALE. The count or counting of money. Said to be derived from the same root as "tally." Cowell. Whence also the modern word "teller."

Old Pleading

The plaintiff's count, declaration, or narrative of his case. 3 Bl.Comm. 293.

TALES. Lat. Such; such men. A number of jurors added to a deficient panel to supply the deficiency. Nesbit v. People, 19 Colo. 441, 36 P. 221. See Shields v. Bank, 3 Hun, N.Y., 477, 479. When, by means of challenges or any other cause, a sufficient number of unexceptionable jurors does not appear at the trial, either party may pray a "tales," as it is termed; that is, a supply of such men as are summoned on the first panel in order to make up the deficiency. Brown. See State v. McCrystol, 43 La.Ann. 907, 9 So. 922; Railroad Co. v. Mask, 64 Miss. 738, 2 So. 360.

A list of such jurymen as were of the tales, kept in the king's bench office in England.

TALES DE CIRCUMSTANTIBUS. So many of the by-standers. The emphatic words of the old writ awarded to the sheriff to make up a deficiency of jurors out of the persons present in court. 3 Bl.Comm. 365.

The order of the judge for taking such bystanders as jurors. See Lee v. Evaul, 1 N.J.Law, 283; Fuller v. State, 1 Blackf., Ind., 65.

TALESMAN. A person summoned to act as a juror from among the by-standers in the court. Linehan v. State, 113 Ala. 70, 21 So. 497; Shields v. Niagara County Say. Bank, 5 Thomp. & C., N.Y., 587. A person summoned as one of the tales added to a jury. Webster.

TALIO. Lat. In the civil law. Like for like; punishment in the same kind; the punishment of an injury by an act of the same kind, as an eye for an eye, a limb for a limb, etc. Calvin.

TALIS INTERPRETATIO SEMPER FIENDA EST, UT EVITETUR ABSURDUM ET INCONVENIENS, ET NE JUDICIUM SIT ILLUSORIUM. 1 Coke, 52. Interpretation is always to be made in such a manner that what is absurd and inconvenient may be avoided, and the judgment be not illusory [or nugatory].

TALIS NON EST EADEM; NAM NULLUM SIMILE EST IDEM, 4 Coke, 18. What is like is not the same; for nothing similar is the same.

TALIS RES, VEL TALE RECTUM, QUIE VEL QUOD NON EST IN HOMINE ADTUNC SUPERSTITE SED TANTUMMODO EST ET CONSISTIT IN CONSIDERATIONE ET INTELLIGENTIA LEGIS, ET QUOD ALII DIXERUNT TALEM REM VEL TALE RECTUM FORE IN NUBIBUS. Such a thing or such a right as is not vested in a person then living, but merely exists in the consideration and contemplation of law [is said to be in abeyance,] and others have said that such a thing or such a right is in the clouds. Co. Litt. 342.

TALITER PROCESSUM EST. So it has proceeded. Words formerly used in pleading, by which a defendant, in justifying his conduct by the process of an inferior court, alleged the proceedings in such inferior court. Steph.P1. 5th ed. p. 369. Upon pleading the judgment of an inferior court, the proceedings preliminary to such judgment, and on which the same was founded, must, to some extent, appear in the pleading, but the rule is that they may be alleged with a general allegation that "such proceedings were had," instead of a detailed account of the proceedings themselves, and this general allegation is called the "taliter processum est." A like concise mode of stating former proceedings in a suit is adopted at the present day in chancery proceedings upon petitions and in actions in the nature of bills of revivor and supplement. Brown.

TALLAGE, or TAILAGE. A piece cut out of the whole. Cowell. Used metaphorically for a share of a man's substance paid by way of tribute, toll, or tax, being derived from the French "tailler," which signifies to cut a piece out of the whole. Cowell. See State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 287, 45 S.W. 245, 40 L.R.A. 280; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 102 Mich. 374, 60 N.W. 767, 29 L.R.A. 195. A term used to denote subsidies, taxes, customs, and, indeed, any imposition whatever by the government for the purpose of raising a revenue. Bacon, Abr. Smuggling, etc. (B) ; Fort. De Laud. 26; Madd. Exch. c. 17; Co. 2d Inst. 531. A tax upon cities, townships and boroughs granted to the king as a part of the royal revenue. 2 Steph.Com. 622; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 647.

TALLAGER. A tax or toll gatherer; mentioned by Chaucer (and spelled "talaigier").

TALLAGIUM. L. Lat. A term including all taxes.

TALLAGIUM FACERE. To give up accounts in the exchequer, where the method of accounting was by tallies.

TALLATIO. A keeping account by tallies. Cowell.

TALLEY, or TALLY. A stick cut into two parts, on each whereof is marked, with notches or otherwise, what is due between debtor and creditor. It was the ancient mode of keeping accounts. One part was held by the creditor, and the other by the debtor. The use of tallies in the exchequer was abolished by St. 23 Geo. III. c. 82, and the old tallies were ordered to be destroyed by St 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 15. Wharton. By the custom of London, sealed tallies were effectual as a deed. Liber Albus 191a. They are admissible by the French and Italian Codes as evidence between traders. It is said that they were negotiable. See Penny Encycl.; Hall, Antiq. of Exch. 118.

Tallies of loan. A term originally used in England to describe exchequer bills, which were issued by the officers of the exchequer when a temporary loan was necessary to meet the exigencies of the government, and charged on the credit of the exchequer in general, and made assignable from one person to another. Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 328, 9 L.Ed. 709.

Tally trade. A system of dealing by which dealers furnish certain articles on credit, upon an agreement for the payment of the stipulated price by certain weekly or monthly installments. McCul. Dict.

TALLIA. L. Lat. A tax or tribute; tallage; a share taken or cut out of any one's income or means. Spelman.

TALMUD. A work which embodies the civil and canonical law of the Jewish people.

TALTARUM'S CASE. A case reported in Yearb. 12 Edw. IV. 19-21, which is regarded as having established the foundation of common recoveries.

TALWEG. Germ. (Tal meaning valley, Weg meaning way.) Commonly used by writers on international law in definition of water boundaries between states, meaning the middle or deepest or most navigable channel, and while often styled "fairway" or "midway" or "main channel" the word has been taken over into various languages and the doctrine of Talweg is often applicable in respect of water boundaries to sounds, bays, straits, gulfs, estuaries and other arms of the sea and also applies to boundary lakes and landlocked seas whenever there is a deep water sailing channel therein. State of Louisiana v. State of Mississippi, 26 S.Ct. 408, 421, 202 U.S. 1, 50 L.Ed. 913.

TAM QUAM. A phrase used as the name of a writ of error from inferior courts, when the error is supposed to be as well in giving the judgment as in awarding execution upon it. (Tam in redditione judicii, quam in adjudicatione executionis.)

Venire Tam Quam

One by which a jury was summoned, as well to try an issue as to inquire of the damages on a default. 2 Tidd, Pr. 722, 895.

TAME. Domesticated; accustomed to man; reclaimed from a natural state of wildness. In the Latin phrase, tame animals are described as domitce naturce.

TAMEN. Lat. Notwithstanding; nevertheless; yet.

TAMPER. To meddle so as to alter a thing, especially to make corrupting or perverting changes; as, to tamper with a document or a text; to interfere improperly; to meddle; to busy oneself rashly; to try trifling or foolish experiments. United States v. Tomicich, D.C.Pa., 41 F.Supp. 33, 35.

TANAMOSHI. Japanese. An association usually consisting of from fourteen to seventeen members. Members are obligated to contribute an agreed amount per month to the association. Each month a drawing is held and the member who bids the highest amount by way of interest and who has not yet received a loan from the association is entitled to take the aggregate of contributions for that particular month, except that at the last meeting of the association no interest is paid. The interest bid each month is returned to each member of the Tanamoshi as his profit on the amount of his contribution to the association. Heylin v. Yil, 30 Haw. 606, 607.

TANGIBLE. Capable of being touched; also, perceptible to the touch; tactile; palpable, and as being capable of being possessed or realized; readily apprehensible by the mind; real; substantial; evidence. Moeller, McPherrin & Judd v. Smith, 127 Neb. 424, 255 N.W. 551.

TANGIBLE PROPERTY. That which may be felt or touched, and is necessarily corporeal, although it may be either real or personal. H. D. & J. K. Crosswell, Inc., v. Jones, D.C.S.C., 52 F.2d 880, 883.

TANK. A receptacle for liquid. American Tank Co. v. Revert Oil Co., 108 Kan. 690, 196 P. 1111, 1112.

TANKAGE. Waste matter from tanks, especially the dried, nitrogenous residue from tanks, in which fat has been rendered, used as a fertilizer. Jenkins v. Springfield Reduction & Chemical Co., 169 Mo.App. 534, 154 S.W. 832, 834. The refuse of meat-packing houses, unfit for human consumption, is known as "tankage" or "liquid stick" according to its water content. Darling & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 86, 87.

TANNERIA. In old English law. Tannery; the trade or business of a tanner. Fleta. lib. 2, c. 52, § 35.

TANTEO. Span. In Spanish law. Pre-emption. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 3.

TANTO, RIGHT OF. In Mexican law. The right enjoyed by an usufructuary of property, of buying the property at the same price at which the owner offers it to any other person, or is willing to take from another. Civ.Code Mex. art. 992.

TANTUM BONA VALENT, QUANTUM VENDI POSSUNT. Shep. Touch: 142. Goods are worth so much as they can be sold for. 3 Inst. 305.

TANTUM HABENT DE LEGE, QUANTUM HABENT DE JUSTITIA. (Precedents) have value in the law to the extent that they represent justice. Hob. 270.

TARDE VENIT. Lat. In practice. The name of a return made by the sheriff to a writ, when it came into his hands too late to be executed before the return-day.

TARE. A deficiency in the weight or quantity of merchandise by reason of the weight of the box, cask, bag, or other receptacle which contains it and is weighed with it. Also an allowance or abatement of a certain weight or quantity which the seller makes to the buyer, on account of the weight of such box, cask, etc. Napier v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 191, 17 Fed.Cas. 1149. See Tret.

TARIFF. A cartel of commerce, a book of rates, a table or catalogue, drawn usually in alphabetical order, containing the names of several kinds of merchandise, with the duties or customs to be paid for the same, as settled by authority, or agreed on between the several princes and states that hold commerce together. Enc. Lond.; Railway Co. v. Cushman, 92 Tex. 623, 50 S.W. 1009; Pacific S. S Co. v. Cackette, C.C.A.Or., 8 F.2d 259, 261.

The list or schedule of articles on which a duty is imposed upon their importation into the United States, with the rates at which they are severally taxed. Also the custom or duty payable on such articles. And, derivatively, the system or principle of imposing duties on the importation of foreign merchandise.

TASSUM. In old English law. A heap; a haymow, or hay-stack. Fcenum in tassis, hay in stacks. Reg. Orig. 96.

TATH. In the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, the lords of manors anciently claimed the privilege of having their tenants' flocks or sheep brought at night upon their own demesne lands, there to be folded for the improvement of the ground, which liberty was called by the name of the "tath." Spelman.

TAURI LIBERI LIBERTAS. Lat. A common bull; because he was free to all the tenants within such a manor, liberty, etc.

TAUTOLOGY. Describing the same thing twice in one sentence in equivalent terms; a fault in rhetoric. It differs from repetition or iteration, which is repeating the same sentence in the same or equivalent terms; the latter is sometimes either excusable or necessary in an argument or address; the former (tautology) never. Wharton.

TAVERN. A place of entertainment; a house kept up for the accommodation of strangers. Originally, a house for the retailing of liquors tt be drunk on the spot. Waitt Const. Co. v. Chase, 197 App.Div. 327, 188 N.Y.S. 589, 592; City of Birmingham v. Bollas, 209 Ala. 512, 96 So. 591, 592.

The word "tavern," in a charter provision authorizing municipal authorities to "license and regulate taverns," includes hotels. "Tavern," "hotel," and "public house" are, in this country, used synonymously; and while they entertain the traveling public, and keep guests, and receive compensation therefor, they do not lose their character, though they may not have the privilege of selling liquors. St. Louis v. Siegrist, 46 Mo. 595. And see Bonner v. Welborn, 7 Ga. 306; Rafferty v. Insurance Co., 18 N.J.L. 484, 38 Am. Dec. 525; In re Brewster, 39 Misc. 689, 80 N.Y.S. 666.

TAVERN KEEPER. One who keeps a tavern. One who keeps an inn; an innkeeper.

TAVERNER. In old English law. A seller of wine; one who kept a house or shop for the sale of wine.

TAX, v. To impose a tax; to enact or declare that a pecuniary contribution shall be made by the persons liable, for the support of government. Spoken of an individual, to be taxed is to be included in an assessment made for purposes of taxation.

Practice

A pecuniary burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex., 31 F.Supp. 977, 978, 979. Annual compensation paid to government for annual protection and for current support of government. Alabama Power Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.5, 134 F.2d 602, 608. A ratable portion of the produce of the property and labor of the individual citizens, taken by the nation, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, for the support of government, for the administration of the laws, and as the means for continuing in operation the various legitimate functions of the state. Black, Tax Titles, § 2; New London v. Miller, 60 Conn. 112, 22 A. 499; Graham v. St. Joseph Tp., 67 Mich. 652, 35 N.W. 808; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat 1, 6 L.Ed. 23; Tevander v. Ruysdael, C.C.A.I11., 299 F. 746, 753; Montgomery County v. City of Montgomery, 190 Ala. 366, 67 So. 311, 313; Strand v. Marin, 30 N.D. 165, 152 N.W. 280. An enforced contribution of money or other property, assessed in accordance with some reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of a sovereign state on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purpose of defraying the public expenses. Heirs v. Mitchell, 95 Fla. 345, 116 So. 81, 85.

In a general sense, any contribution imposed by government upon individuals, for the use and service of the state, whether under the name of toll, tribute, tallage, gabel, impost, duty, custom, excise, subsidy, aid, supply, or other name. Story, Const. § 950. And in its essential characteristics is not a debt. City of Newark v. Jos. Hollander, Inc., 136 N.J.Eq. 539, 42 A.2d 872, 875.

Synonyms

In a broad sense, taxes undoubtedly include assessments, and the right to impose assessments has its foundation in the taxing power of the government; and yet, in practice and as generally understood, there is a broad distinction between the two terms. "Taxes," as the term is generally used, are public burdens imposed generally upon the inhabitants of the whole state, or upon some civil division thereof, for governmental purposes, without reference to peculiar benefits to particular individuals or property. "Assessments" have reference to impositions for improvements which are specially beneficial to particular individuals or property, and which are imposed in proportion to the particular benefits supposed to be conferred. They are justified only because the improvements confer special benefits, and are just' only when they are divided in proportion to such benefits. Roosevelt Hospital v. New York, 84 N.Y. 112. Flansburg v. Shumway, 117 Neb. 125, 219 N.W. 956, 958. As distinguished from other kinds of taxation, "assessments" are those special and local impositions upon property in the immediate vicinity of municipal improvements which are necessary to pay for the improvement, and are laid with reference to the special benefit which the property is supposed to have derived therefrom. Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 599; Ridenour v. Saffin, 1 Handy (Ohio) 464; King v. Portland, 2 Or. 146; Witherow v. Board of Drainage Com'rs of Powder Springs Creek Drainage Dist. No. 2, 155 Ga. 476, 117 S.E. 329, 330.

Taxes differ from subsidies, in being certain and orderly, and from forced contributions, etc., in that they are levied by authority of law, and by some rule of proportion which is intended to insure uniformity of contribution, and a just apportionment of the burdens of government. Cooley, Tax'n, 2.

To assess or determine; to liquidate, adjust, or settle. Spoken particularly of taxing costs (q. v.).

General

Ad valorem tax. See Ad Valorem.

Capitation tax. See that title.

Collateral inheritance tax. See Collateral Inheritance.

Direct tax. One which Is demanded from the very persons who, it is intended or desired, should pay it. Indirect taxes are those which are demanded from one person, in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another. Mill, Pol. Econ. Taxes are divided into "direct," under which designation would be included those which are assessed upon the property, person, business, income, etc., of those who are to pay them, and "indirect," or those which are levied on commodities before they reach the consumer, and are paid by those upon whom they ultimately fall, not as taxes, but as part of the market price of the commodity. Cooley, Tax'n, 6.

Historical evidence shows that personal property, contracts, occupations, and the like, have never been regarded as the subjects of direct tax. The phrase is understood to be limited to taxes on land and its appurtenances, and on polls. Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L.Ed. 482 ; Railroad Co. v. Morrow, 87 Tenn. 406, 11 S.W. 348, 2 L.R.A. 853; People v. Knight, 174 N.Y. 475, 67 N.E. 65, 63 L.R.A. 87.

Estate tax. A tax upon the right to transfer, while a succession or legacy tax is a tax upon the right to receive. Hazard v. Bliss, 43 R.I. 431, 113 A. 469, 471, 23 A.L.R. 826; Frick v. Lewellyn, D.C:Pa., 298 F. 803, 810; In re Hamlin, 226 N.Y. 407, 124 N.E. 4, 6, 7 A.L.R. 701; In re Sherman's Estate, 179 App.Div. 497, 166 N.Y.S. 19, 23.

Excise and tax distinguished. See Excise.

Floor tax. A tax on all the distilled spirits "on the floor" of a warehouse, i. e., in the warehouse. Greenbrier Distillery Co. v. U. S., D.C.Ky., 288 F. 893, 895.

Franchise tax. See Franchise.

Income tax. See Income.

Indirect taxes are those demanded in the first instance from one person in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another. "Ordinarily all taxes paid primarily by persons who can shift the burden upon some one else, or who are under no legal compulsion to pay them, are considered indirect taxes." Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 15 S.Ct. 673, 157 U.S. 429, 39 L.Ed. 759; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 451; Foster & Creighton Co. v. Graham, 154 Tenn. 412, 285 S.W. 570, 572, 47 A.L.R. 971.

Inheritance tax. See Inheritance.

Land tax. See Land Tax.

License tax. See License Fee or Tax.

Local taxes. Those assessments which are limited to certain districts, as poor-rates, parochial taxes, county rates, municipal taxes, etc.

Occupation tax. See Occupation.

Parliamentary taxes. Such taxes as are imposed directly by act of parliament, i. e., by the legislature itself, as distinguished from those which are imposed by private individuals or bodies under the authority of an act of parliament. Thus, a sewers rate, not being imposed directly by act of parliament, but by certain persons termed "commissioners of sewers," is not a parliamentary tax; whereas the income tax, which is directly imposed, and the amount also fixed, by act of parliament, is a parliamentary tax. Brown.

Personal tax. This term may mean either a tax imposed on the person without reference to property, as a capitation or poll tax, or a tax imposed on personal property, as distinguished from one laid on real property. See Jack v. Walker, C.C.Ohio, 79 F. 138, 141; Potter v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517.

Poll tax. See that title.

Proportional taxes. Taxes are "proportional" when the proportion paid by each taxpayer bears the same ratio to the amount to be raised that the value of his property bears to the total taxable value, and in the case of a special tax when that is apportioned according to the benefits received. In re Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N.E. 570, 572; Perkins v. Inhabitants of Town of Westwood, 226 Mass. 268, 115 N.E. 411, 412; In re Opinion of the Justices, 77 N.H. 611, 93 A. 311, 312.

Public tax. A tax levied for some general public purpose or for the purposes of the general public revenue, as distinguished from local municipal taxes and assessments. Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 783, 14 Am.Rep. 640; Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N.Y. 509.

Sinking fund tax. See Fund.

Specific tax. A tax imposed as a fixed sum on each article or item of property of a given class or kind, without regard to its value; opposed to ad valorem tax.

Succession tax. See Succession.

Surtax. An additional tax imposed upon certain kinds of income, such as dividends from corporate stock, royalties, interest from money, notes, credits, bonds and other securities. A surtax is sometimes imposed on incomes exceeding a specified amount.

Tax certificate. A certificate of the purchase of land at a tax sale thereof, given by the officer making the sale, and which is evidence of the holder's right to receive a deed of the land if it is not redeemed within the time limited by law. See Eaton v. Manitowoc County, 44 Wis. 492; Nelson v. Central Land Co., 35 Minn. 408, 29 N.W. 121.

Tax lease. The instrument (or estate) given to the purchaser of land at a tax sale, where the law does not permit the sale of the estate in fee for non-payment of taxes, but instead thereof directs the sale of an estate for years.

Tax levy. The total sum to be raised by a tax. Also the bill, enactment, or measure of legislation by which an annual or general tax is imposed.

Tax purchaser. A person who buys land at a tax-sale; the person to whom land, at a tax-sale thereof, is struck down.

Tax roll. See Roll.

Tax sale. See Sale.

Tax-deed. The conveyance given upon a sale of lands made for non-payment of taxes; the deed whereby the officer of the law undertakes to convey the title of the proprietor to the purchaser at the tax-sale.

Tax-lien. A statutory lien, existing in favor of the state or municipality, upon the lands of a person charged with taxes, binding the same either for the taxes assessed upon the specific tract of land or (in some jurisdictions) for all the taxes due from the individual, and which may be foreclosed for non-payment, by judgment of a court or sale of the land.

Taxing district. The district throughout which a particular tax or assessment is ratably apportioned and levied upon the inhabitants; it may comprise the whole state, one county, a city, a ward, or part of a street.

Taxpayer. A person chargeable with a tax: one from whom government demands a pecuniary contribution towards its support.

Taxpayers' lists. Written exhibits required to be made out by the taxpayers resident in a district, enumerating all the property owned by them and subject to taxation, to be handed to the assessors, at a specified date or at regular periods, as a basis for assessment and valuation.

Tax-title. The title by which one holds land which he purchased at a tax sale. That species of title which is inaugurated by a successful bid for land at a collector's sale of the same for non-payment of taxes, completed by the failure of those entitled to redeem within the specified time, and evidenced by the deed executed to the tax purchaser, or his assignee, by the proper officer.

Tonnage tax. See Tonnage Duty.

Wheel tax. A tax on wheeled vehicles of some or all kinds and bicycles.

Window tax. See that title.

TAX FERRETS. Persons engaged in the business of searching for property omitted from taxation. Their activities when permitted are usually regarded as private rather than as part of a state agency. Pickett v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 100 F.2d 909, 913.

TAXA. L. Lat. A tax. Spelman.

In old records. An allotted piece of work; a task.

TAXABLE. Subject to taxation; liable to be assessed, along with others, for a share in a tax. Mississippi State Tax Commission v. Brown, 188 Miss. 483, 195 So. 465, 469, 127 A.L.R. 919. Something of value, subject to assessment, and to be levied upon and sold for taxes. Williams v. School Dist. No. 32 in County of Fremont, 56 Wyo. 1, 102 P.2d 48, 52.

Applied to costs in an action, the word means proper to be taxed or charged up; legally chargeable or assessable.

TAXABLE YEAR. This term in internal revenue statutes has different significations, according to its use. Waterman S. S. Corporation v. United States, Ct.C1., 32 F.Supp. 880, 882; but when used in ordinarily accepted meaning, refers to annual accounting period of taxpayer. American-Hawaiian S. S. Co. v. U. S., Ct.C1., 46 F.2d 592, 598.

TAXARE. Lat. To rate or value. Calvin.

To tax; to lay a tax or tribute. Spelman.

In old English practice. To assess; to rate or estimate; to moderate or regulate an assessment or rate.

TAXATI. In old European law. Soldiers of a garrison or fleet, assigned to a certain station. Spelman.

TAXATIO. Lat. In Roman law. Taxation or assessment of damages; the assessment, by the judge, of the amount of damages to be awarded to a plaintiff, and particularly in the way of reducing the amount claimed or sworn to by the latter.

TAXATIO ECCLESIASTICA. The value of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, on occasion of Pope Innocent IV. granting to King Henry III. the tenth of all spirituals for three years. This taxation was first made by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38 Hen. III., and hence called "Taxatio Norwicencis." It is also called "Pope Innocent's Valor." Wharton.

TAXATIO EXPENSARUM. In old English practice. Taxation of costs.

TAXATIO NORWICENSIS. A valuation of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38 Hen. III. Cowell.

TAXATION. The process of taxing or imposing a tax. In practice. Adjustment. Fixing the amount; e. g. Taxation of costs. 3 Chitty, Gen. Pr. 602. See Tax.

The differences between taxation and taking property in right of eminent domain are that taxation exacts money or services from individuals, as and for their respective shares of contribution to any public burden; while private property taken for public use, by right of eminent domain, is taken, not as the owner's share of contribution to a public burden, but as so much beyond his share, and for which compensation must be made. Moreover, taxation operates upon a community, or upon a class of persons in a community, and by some rule of apportionment; while eminent domain operates upon an individual, and without reference to the amount or value exacted from any other individual, or class of individuals. People v. Brooklyn, 4 N.Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266.

Double Taxation

See Double.

Taxation of Costs

In practice. The process of ascertaining and charging up the amount of costs in an action to which a party is legally entitled, or which are legally chargeable. And, in English practice, the process of examining the items in an attorney's bill of costs and making the proper deductions, if any.

TAXERS. Two officers yearly chosen in Cambridge, England, to see the true gauge of all the weights and measures.

TAXICAB. A motor driven passenger conveyance propelled by electric or gas power, held for public hire, at designated places, charging upon a time or distance basis, carrying passengers to destinations without following any fixed routes. Tuggle v. Parker, 159 Kan. 572, 156 P.2d 533, 534. A conveyance similar to hackney carriage or old-fashioned hack or stage which is held for hire at designated places and has no regular schedule or route, but operates to carry passengers at any time to any point and subject to call. Jarrell v. Orlando Transit Co., 123 Fla. 776, 167 So. 664, 668.

A "taxicab" differs from a jitney bus, street car, or omnibus as a carrier in that it does not follow a well-defined route prescribed by ordinance, but is vehicle subject to contract by person desiring special trip from one point to another, without reference to any prescribed legal route. Jackie Cab Co. v. Chicago Park Dist., 366 Ill. 474, 9 N. E.2d 213, 215, 112 A.L.R. 1410.

TAXING MASTER. See Master.

TAXING OFFICER. Each house of parliament has a taxing officer, whose duty it is to tax the costs incurred by the promoters or opponents of private bills. May, Parl. Pr. 843.

TAXING POWER. The power of any government to levy taxes.

TAXT-WARD. An annual payment made to a superior in Scotland, instead of the duties due to him under the tenure of ward-holding. Abolished. Wharton.

TEA CHEST. A box containing a definite and prescribed amount of tea, otherwise called whole chest (a hundred weight to 140 pounds or more), now seldom shipped, the smaller package being spoken of as half chest (75 to 80 pounds, but the weight varies according to the kind of tea), and quarter chest (from 25 to 30 pounds) and thus a "tea chest" in the language of the trade is understood to be a half chest and not a whole chest. Japan Tea Co. v. Franklin MacVeagh & Co., 142 Minn. 152, 171 N.W. 305, 307.

TEACH. To impart knowledge by means of lessons; to give instruction in; communicating knowledge; introducing into or impressing on the mind as truth or information, and may be done as well through written communications, personal direction, through the public press, or through any means by which information may be disseminated, or it may be done by the adoption of sentiment expressed or arguments made by others which are distributed to others for their adoption and guidance. Ex parte Bernat, D.C.Wash., 255 F. 429, 432.

TEACHER. One who teaches or instructs; especially one whose business or occupation is to teach others; an instructor; preceptor. Ortega

Kellogg, 118 Me. 42, 105 A. 433, 434, 6 A.L.R. 669; Smith 'v. Howard, 42 R.I. 126, 105 A. 649, 650.

TEAM or THEAME. In old English law. A royalty or privilege granted, by royal charter, to a lord of a manor, for the having, restraining, and judging of bondmen and villeins, with their children, goods, and chattels, etc. Glan. lib. 5, c. 2.

TEAM TRACK. Analogous to freight depot in that it bears the same relation to carload freight that such depot bears to less than carload freight. Shippers have no part in its construction or maintenance. There is a difference between "industrial tracks" and "team tracks." The former are for the handling of carload freight from and to plants. The cost of construction is usually borne in part by the owners of the plants. Carload freight is switched to and from the plants irrespective of whether the carrier performing the switching service participated in the line haul or not. Miller Engineering Co. v. Louisiana Ry. & Na^{y}. Co., 144 La. 786, 81 So. 314, 317.

TEAM WORK. Within the meaning of an exemption law, this term means work done by a team as a substantial part of a man's business; as in farming, staging, express carrying, drawing of freight, peddling, or the transportation of material used or dealt in as a business. Hickok v. Thayer, 49 Vt. 375.

TEAMSTER. One who drives horses and a wagon for the purpose of carrying goods for hire. Elder v. Williams, 16 Nev. 416; Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 306, 91 Am.Dec. 695. He is liable as a common carrier. Story, Bailm. § 496. A teamster is a laborer; McElwaine v. Hosey, 135 Ind. 481, 35 N.E. 272. See Carrier.

Within an exemption statute, one who habitually makes his living by use of team, harness and wagon or some other form of horse-drawn vehicle. Wertz v. Hale, 212 Iowa, 294, 234 N.W. 534, 535.

TEARING OF WILL. Under statute providing that will may be revoked by tearing, any act of tearing of paper on which will is written, however slight, constitutes an act of "tearing," if done with intent to revoke the will, but no act of tearing or cutting accomplishes such purpose unless done with intent to revoke. Fleming v. Fleming, 367 Ill. 97, 10 N.E.2d 641, 642.

TECHNICAL. Belonging or peculiar to an art or profession. Technical terms are frequently called in the books "words of art."

Immaterial, not affecting substantial rights, without substance. JEtna Ins. Co. v. Waco Co., Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 315, 317; City of Hartselle v. Culver, 216 Ala. 668, 114 So. 58, 60; Englebretson v. Industrial Accident Commission, 170 Cal. 793, 151 P. 421, 422; Jones v. State, 10 Okl.Cr. 216, 137 P. 121, 122.

TECHNICAL MORTGAGE. A true and formal mortgage, as distinguished from other instruments which, in some respects, have the character of equitable mortgages. Harrison v. Annapolis & E. R. R. Co., 50 Md. 514.

TEIND MASTERS. Those entitled to tithes.

TEINDS. In Scotch law. A term corresponding to tithes (q. v.) in English ecclesiastical law.

TEINLAND. Sax. In old English law. Land of a thane or Saxon noble; land granted by the crown to a thane or lord. Cowell; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 5.

TELEGRAM. A telegraphic dispatch; a message sent by telegraph.

TELEGRAM RACKET. Consists in a fictitious communication such as by radiogram or telephone call authorizing a trustee to pay out money. Cordovano v. State, 61 Ga.App. 590, 7 S.E.2d 45, 47.

TELEGRAPH. In the English telegraph act of 1863, the word is defined as "a wire or wires used for the purpose of telegraphic communication, with any casing, coating, tube, or pipe inclosing the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for the purpose of telegraphic communication." St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 112, § 3. An apparatus or device for transmitting messages to a distant point. State Public Utilities Com. v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 285 Ill. 411, 120 N.E. 795, 796, Any apparatus for transmitting messages by means of electric currents and signals. Davis v. Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., 127 Cal. 312, 315, 316, 59 P. 698, 699.

TELEGRAPHI2E. A word occasionally used in old English law to describe ancient documents or written evidence of things past. Blount.

TELEPHONE. In a general sense, any instrument or apparatus which transmits sound beyond the limits of ordinary audibility. But, since the recent discoveries in telephony, the name is technically and primarily restricted to an instrument or device which transmits sound by means of electricity and wires similar to telegraphic wires. In a secondary sense, however, being the sense in which it is most commonly understood, the word "telephone" constitutes a generic term, having reference generally to the art of telephony as an institution, but more particularly to the apparatus, as an entirety, ordinarily used in the transmission, as well as in the reception, of telephonic messages. Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 261, 5 N.E. 178, 55 Am.Rep. 201; State Public Utilities Commission ex rel. Chicago Telephone Co. v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 285 Ill. 411, 120 N.E. 795, 796.

TELETYPE MACHINE. A telegraph machine in general use in telegraph offices, which typewrites the telegram as the message is received instead of requiring an operator to receive it in the Morse code and transcribe it. In re Teletype Mach. No. 33335, 126 Pa.Super. 533, 191 A. 210, 211.

TELEVISION. Seeing at a distance by electrical means while a "motion picture exhibit" is produced by projecting upon a screen with the aid of light rays images recorded upon a film in such rapid and changing succession of exposures as to give the optical effect of a continuous picture of the objects even when in motion. The former directly employs natural phenomena; the latter, mechanics. A notable objective difference is that a motion picture may be re-exhibited as often as desired for the life of the film but a television exhibition once seen is gone forever so far as assembly of the electronic waves upon which the images are carried are concerned. Philadelphia. Retail Liquor Dealers Ass'n v. Pennsylvania Liquor Control Bd., 360 Pa. 269, 62 A.2d 53, 55, 4 A.L.R. 1212.

TELLER. One who numbers or counts. An officer of a bank who receives or pays out money. Also one appointed to count the votes cast in a deliberative or legislative assembly or other meeting. The name was also given to certain officers formerly attached to the English exchequer.

A considerable officer in the exchequer, of which officers there are four, whose office is to receive all money due to the king, and to give the clerk of the pells a bill to charge him therewith. They also pay to all persons any money. payable by the king, and make weekly and yearly books of their receipts and payments, which they deliver to the lord treasurer. Cowell; Jacob.

TELLERS IN PARLIAMENT. In the language of parliament, the members of the house selected to count the members when a division takes place. In the house of lords a division is effected by the "non-contents" remaining within the bar, and the "contents" going below it, a teller being appointed for each party. In the commons the "ayes" go into the lobby at one end of the house, and the "noes" into the lobby at the other end, the house itself being perfectly empty, and two tellers being appointed for each party. May, Parl. Pr.; Brown.

TELIGRAPHUM. An Anglo-Saxon charter of land. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 1, p. 10.

TELLTALES. In railroad practice ropes suspended from a wire across the track warning of a low bridge. West v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 103 C.C.A. 293, 179 F. 801.

TELLWORC. That labor which a tenant was bound to do for his lord for a certain number of days.

TEMENTALE, or TENEMENTALE. A tax of two shillings upon every plow-land, a decennary.

TEMERE. Lat. In the civil law. Rashly; inconsiderately. A plaintiff was said temere litigare who demanded a thing out of malice, or sued without just cause, and who could show no ground or cause of action. Brissonius.

TEMPERANCE. Habitual moderation in regard to the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions; restrained or moderate indulgence; moderation; as temperance in eating and drinking; temperance in the indulgence of joy or mirth. People v. Dashaway Ass'n, 84 Cal. 123, 24 P. 277, 12 L.R.A. 117. Not synonymous with abstinence. Mayfield v. Fidelity Casualty Co. of New York, 16 Ca1.App.2d 611, 61 P.2d 83, 89.

TEMPEST. A violent or furious storm; a current of wind rushing with extreme violence, and usually accompanied with rain or snow. Stover v. Insurance Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 39; Thistle v. Union Forwarding Co., 29 U.C.C.P. 84.

TEMPLARS. A religious order of knighthood, instituted about the year 1119, and so called because the members dwelt in a part of the temple of Jerusalem, and not far from the sepulcher of our Lord. They entertained Christian strangers and pilgrims charitably, and their profession was at first to defend travelers from highwaymen and robbers. The order was suppressed A.D. 1307, and their substance given partly to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and partly to other religious orders. Brown.

TEMPLE. Two English inns of court, thus called because anciently the dwelling place of the Knights Templar. On the suppression al the order, they were purchased by some professors of the common law, and converted into hospitia or inns of court. They are called the "Inner" and "Middle Temple," in relation to Essex House, which was also a part of the house of the Ternplars, and called the "Outer Temple," because situated without Temple Bar. Enc. Lond.

TEMPORAL LORDS. The peers of England; the bishops are not in strictness held to be peers, but merely lords of parliament. 2 Steph.Comm. 330, 345.

TEMPORALIS. Lat. In the civil law. Temporary; limited to a certain time.

TEMPORALIS ACTIO. An action which could only be brought within a certain period.

TEMPORALIS EXCEPTIO. A temporary exception which barred an action for a time only.

TEMPORALITIES. In English law. The lay fees of bishops, with which their churches are endowed or permitted to be endowed by the liberality of the sovereign, and in virtue of which they become barons and lords of parliament. Spelman. In a wider sense, the money revenues of a church, derived from pew rents, subscriptions, donations, collections, cemetery charges, and other sources. See Barabasz v. Kabat, 86 Md. 23, 37 A. 720.

TEMPORALITY. The laity; secular people.

TEMPORARILY. Lasting for a time only, existing or continuing for a limited time, not of long duration, not permanent, transitory, changing, but a short time. Young v. Povich, 121 Me. 141, 116 A. 26, 27, 29 A.L.R. 48; Burdine v. Sewell, 92 Fla. 375, 109 So. 648, 653; Vercruysse v. Ulaga, 229 Mich. 49, 201 N.W. 192, 193.

TEMPORARY. That which is to last for a limited time only, as distinguished from that which is perpetual, or indefinite, in its duration. Opposite of permanent. Thus, temporary alimony is granted for the support of the wife pending the action for divorce. Dayton v. Drake, 64 Iowa 714, 21 N.W. 158; Wohlfort v. Wohlfort, 116 Kan. 154, 225 P. 746, 748, 40 A.L.R. 538; Flamm v. City of Passaic, 141 N.J.Misc. 362, 184 A. 748, 750.

A temporary receiver is one appointed to take charge of property until a hearing is had and an adjudication made. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 47 C.C.A. 43, 107 F. 895.

As to temporary "Disability", "Insanity", "Injunction", and "Statute" see those titles.

TEMPORE. Lat. In the time of. Thus, the volume called "Cases tempore Holt" is a collection of cases adjudged in the king's bench during the time of Lord Holt. Wall.Rep. 398.

TEMPORIS EXCEPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A plea of time; a plea of lapse of time, in bar of an action. Corresponding to the plea of prescription, or the statute of limitations, in our law. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 213.

TEMPUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Time in general. A time limited; a season; e. g., tempus pessonis, mast time in the forest.

TEMPUS CONTINUUM. In the civil law. A continuous or absolute period of time. A term which begins to run from a certain event, even though he for whom it runs has no knowledge of the event, and in which, when it has once begun to run, all the days are reckoned as they follow one another in the calendar. Dig. 3, 2, 8; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 195.

TEMPUS ENIM MODUS TOLLENDI OBLIGATIONES ET ACTIONES, QUIA TEMPUS CURRIT CONTRA DESIDES ET SUI JURIS CONTEMPTORES. For time is a means of destroying obligations and actions, because time runs against the slothful and contemners of their own rights. Fleta, 1. 4, c. 5, § 12.

TEMPUS SEMESTRE. In old English law. The. period of six months or half a year, consisting of one hundred and eighty-two days. Cro.Jac. 166.

TEMPUS UTILE. In the civil law. A profitable or advantageous period of time. A term which begins to run from a certain event, only when he for whom it runs has obtained a knowledge of the event, and in which, when it has once begun to run, those days are not reckoned on which one has no experiundi potestas; e., on which one cannot prosecute his rights before a court. Dig. 3, 6, 6; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 195. A period of time which runs beneficially: i. e. feast-days are not included, nor does it run against one absent in a foreign country, or on business of the republic, or detained by stress of weather. But one detained by sickness is not protected from its running; for it runs where there is power to act by an agent as well as where there is power to act personally; and the sick man might havedeputed his agent. Calvinus.

TENANCY.

The Estate of a Tenant

The estate of a tenant, as in the expressions "joint tenancy," "tenancy in common."

The Term or Interest of a Tenant

The term or interest of a tenant for years or at will. Sweet; Stone v. City of Los Angeles, 114 Cal.App. 192, 299 P. 838, 841.

It implies a right of possession in tenant exclusive even of landlord. Cleveland v. Milner, 141 Tex. 120, 170 S.W.2d 472, 475.

General Tenancy

A tenancy which is not fixed and made certain in point of duration by the agreement of the parties. Brown v. Bragg, 22 Ind. 122.

Joint Tenancy

An estate in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will, arising by purchase or grant to two or more persons. Joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. The grand incident of joint tenancy is survivorship, by which the entire tenancy on the decease of any joint tenant remains to the survivors, and at length to the last survivor. Pub.St. Mass.1882, p. 1292; Simons v. McLain, 51 Kan. 153, 32 P. 919; Thornburg v. Wiggins, 135 Ind. 178, 34 N.E. 999, 22 L.R.A. 42, 41 Am.St.Rep. 422; Van Ausdall v. Van Ausdall, 48 R.I. 106, 135 A. 850, 851; In re Huggins' Estate, 96 N.J.Eq. 275, 125 A. 27, 30. See, also, Tenancy by the Entirety, infra.

Several Tenancy

A tenancy which is separate, and not held jointly with another person.

Tenancy by the Entirety

Is created by a conveyance to husband and wife, whereupon each becomes seized and possessed of the entire estate and after the death of one the survivor takes the whole. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Tait, D.C.Md., 295 F. 429, 431; Dutton v. Buckley, 116 Or. 661, 242 P. 626, 627; Settle v. Settle, 8 F.2d 911, 912, 56 App.D.C. 50, 43 A.L.R. 1079; Raptes v. Cheros, 259 Mass. 37, 155 N.E. 787; Gasner v. Pierce, 286 Pa. 529, 134 A. 494, 495; Smith v. Russell, 172 App.Div. 793, 159 N.Y.S. 169, 170. And is available only to husband and wife. Fairclaw v. Forrest, 76 U.S.App.D.C. 197, 130 F.2d 829, 832, 833, 143 A.L.R. 1154. It is essentially a "joint tenancy," modified by the common-law theory that husband and wife are one person, and survivorship is the predominant and distinguishing feature of each. United States v. Jacobs, Ill. & N. Y., 59 S.Ct. 551, 555, 306 U.S. 363, 83 L.Ed. 763.

The grand characteristic which distinguishes it from a joint tenancy is that it can be terminated only by joint action of husband and wife during their lives, while "joint tenancy" may be terminated by one tenant's conveyance of his interest. Milan v. Boucher, 285 Mass. 590, 189 N.E. 576, 578. In re Cotter's Will, 287 N.Y.S. 670, 673, 159 Misc. 324.

Tenancy in Common

Where property is held by several and distinct titles by unity of possession, neither knowing his own severally, and therefore they all occupy promiscuously. Fullerton v. Storthz Bros. Inv. Co., 190 Ark. 198, 77 S.W.2d 966, 968. The holding of an estate in land by different persons under different titles, but there must be unity' of possession and each must have right to occupy the whole in common with his cotenants. Fry v. Dewees, 151 Kan. 488, 99 P.2d 844, 847.

Although "tenancy in common" is generally used with reference to real property, a tenancy in common may exist in personalty as well. Haster v. Blair, 41 Cal.App.2d 896, 107 P.2d 933, 934. See, also, Tenant (Tenant in Common).

TENANT. In the broadest sense, one who holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of right or title, whether in fee, for life, for years, at will, or otherwise. Cowell; Young v. Home Telephone Co., Mo.App., 201 S.W. 635, 636; Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 114 Misc. 590, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 230.

In a more restricted sense, one who holds lands of another; one who has the temporary use and occupation of real property owned by another person, (called the "landlord,") the duration and terms of his tenancy being usually fixed by an instrument called a "lease." Becker v. Becker, 13 App.Div. 342, 43 N.Y.S. 17; Bowe v. Hunking, 135 Mass. 383, 46 Am.Rep. 471; Clift v. White, 12 N.Y. 527; Lightbody v. Truelsen, 39 Minn. 310, 40 N.W. 67; Williams v. Treece, 184 Mo.App. 135, 168 S.W. 209, 211; Minneapolis Iron Store Co. v. Brannurn, 36 N.D. 355, 162 N.W. 543, 545, L.R.A.1917E, 298. One who occupies another's land or premises in subordination to such other's title and with his assent, express or implied. In re Wilson's Estate, 349 Pa. 646, 37 A.2d 709, 710. One renting land and paying for it either in money or part of crop or equivalent. Wilcox & Co. v. Deines, 119 Neb. 692, 230 N.W. 682, 684.

Strictly speaking, a "tenant" is a person who holds land; but the term is also applied by analogy to personalty. Thus, we speak of a person being tenant for life, or tenant in common, of stock. Sweet.

Feudal Law

One who holds of another (called "lord" or "superior") by some service; as fealty or rent.

Tenant at Will

One who holds possession of premises by permission of owner or landlord, but without fixed term. Wiedemann v. Brown, 190 Minn. 33, 250 N.W. 724; where lands or tenements are let by one man to another, to have and to hold to him at the will of the lessor, by force of which lease the lessee is in possession. In this case the lessee is called "tenant at will," because he hath no certain nor sure estate, for the lessor may put him out at what time it pleaseth him. Litt. § 68; Sweet. Post v. Post, 14 Barb. (N.Y.) 258; Spalding v. Hall, 6 D.C. 125; Freedman v. Gordon, 220 Mass. 324, 107 N.E. 982, 983; Norton v. Averholtzer, 63 Cal.App. 388, 218 P. 637, 640,; O'Connor v. Brinsfield, 212 Ala. 68, 101 So. 679, 680.

General

Joint tenants. Two or more persons to whom are granted lands or tenements to hold in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will. 2 Bl.Comm. 179. Persons who own lands by a joint title created expressly by one and the same deed or will. 4 Kent, Comm. 357. Joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. 2 Bl.Comm. 180. See, also, Tenancy (Joint Tenancy).

Land tenant. See that title.

Quasi tenant at sufferance. An under-tenant, who is in possession at the determination of an original lease, and is permitted by the reversioner to hold over.

Sole tenant. He that holds lands by his own right only, without any other person being joined with him. Cowell.

Tenant a volunte. L. Fr. A tenant at will.

Tenant at sufferance. One that comes into the possession of land by lawful title, but holds over by wrong, after the determination of his interest. 4 Kent, Comm. 116; 2 Bl.Comm. 150; Fielder v. Childs, 13 Ala. 577; Pleasants v. Claghorn, 2 Miles (Pa.) 304; Bright v. McOuat, 40 Ind. 525; Parker v. Smith, 211 Ky. 624, 277 S.W. 986, 987; Lawer

v. Mitts, 33 Wyo. 249, 238 P. 654, 659; Stanley v. Stembridge, 140 Ga. 750, 79 S.E. 842, 844; Coleman v. State ex rel. Carver, 119 Fla. 653, 161 So. 89, 91.

He has no estate nor title but only naked possession without right and wrongfully, and stands in no privity to landlord and is not entitled to notice to quit, and is a bare licensee to whom landlord owes merely duty not wantonly nor willfully to injure him. Margosian v. Markarian, 288 Mass. 197, 192 N.E. 612, 613; Welch v. Rice, 61 Wyo. 511, 159 P.2d 502, 506, 509.

Tenant by copy of court roll (shortly, "tenant by copy") is the old-fashioned name for a copyholder. Litt. § 73.

Tenant by the curtesy. One who, on the death of his wife seised of an estate of inheritance, after having by her issue born alive and capable of inheriting her estate, holds the lands and tenements for the term of his life. Co.Litt. 30a; 2 Bl.Comm. 126.

Tenant by the manner. One who has a less estate than a fee in land which remains in the reversioner. He is so called because in avowries and other pleadings it is specially shown in what manner he is tenant of the land, in contradistinction to the veray tenant, who is called simply "tenant." Ham. N.P. 393.

Tenant for life. One who holds lands or tenements for the term of his own life, or for that of any other person, (in which case he is called "pur cuter vie,") or for more lives than one. 2 Bl.Comm. 120; In re Hyde, 41 Hun (N.Y.) 75.

Tenant for years. One who has the temporary use and possession of lands or tenements not his own, by virtue of a lease or demise granted to him by the owner, for a determinate period of time, as for a year or a fixed number of years. 2 Bl.Comm. 140.

Tenant from year to year. One who holds lands or tenements under the demise of another, where no certain term has been mentioned, but an annual rent has been reserved. See 1 Steph.Comm. 271; 4 Kent, Comm. 111, 114. One who holds over, by consent given either expressly or constructively, after the determination of a lease for years. 4 Kent, Comm. 112. See Shore v. Porter, 3 Term, 16; Rothschild v. Williamson, 83 Ind. 388; Hunter v. Frost, 47 Minn. 1, 49 N.W. 327; Coffman v. Sammons, 76 W.Va. 12, 84 S.E. 1061, 1063; Lawrence v. Goodstein, 91 Misc.Rep. 19, 154 N.Y.S. 229, 231. See, also, Year to Year, Tenancy from.

Tenant in capite. In feudal and old English law. Tenant in chief; one who held immediately under the king, in right of his crown and dignity. 2 Bl.Comm. 60.

Tenant in common. Tenants who hold the same land together by several and distinct titles, but by unity of possession, because none knows his own severalty, and therefore they all occupy promiscuously. 2 Bl.Comm. 191. Where two or more hold the same land, with interests accruing under different titles, or accruing under the same title, but at different periods, or conferred by words of limitation importing that the grantees are to take in distinct shares. 1 Steph.Comm. 323. See Coster v. Lorillard, 14 Wend., N.Y., 336; Taylor v. Millard, 118 N.Y. 244, 23 N.E. 376, 6 L.R.A. 667; Perry v. Jones, 48 Okl. 362, 150 P. 168, 169; Whyman v. Johnston, 62 Colo. 461, 163 P. 76, 77; Stewart v. Young, 212 Ala. 426, 103 So. 44, 45. See, also, Tenancy (Tenancy in Common).

Tenant in dower. This is where the husband of a woman is seised of an estate of inheritance and dies; in this case the wife shall have the third part of all the lands and tenements whereof he was seised at any time during the coverture, to hold to herself for life, as her dower. Co.Litt. 30; 2 Bl.Comm. 129; Combs v. Young, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 225, 26 Am.Dec. 225.

Tenant in fee-simple (or tenant in fee). He who has lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever, generally, absolutely, and simply; without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or to the disposition of thl law. 2 Bl.Comm. 104; Litt. § 1; Dows v. Board of Com'rs of City of Bayonne, 117 N.J.L. 337, 188 A. 509, 510.

Tenant in severalty. One who holds lands and tenements in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest during his estate therein. 2 Bl.Comm. 179.

Tenant in tail. One who holds an estate in fee-tail, that is, an estate which, by the instrument creating it, is limited to some particular heirs, exclusive of others; as to the heirs of his body or to the heirs, male or female, of his body.

Tenant in tail ex provisione viri. Where an owner of lands, upon or previously to marrying. a wife, settled lands upon himself and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and then died, the wife, as survivor, became tenant in tail of the husband's lands, in consequence of the husband's provision, (ex provisione viri.) Originally, she could bar the estate-tail like any other tenant in tail; but the husband's intention having been merely to provide for her during her widowhood, and not to enable her to bar his children of their inheritance, she was early restrained from so doing, by the statute 32 Hen. VII. c. 36. Brown.

Tenant of the demesne. One who is tenant of a mesne lord; as, where A. is tenant of B., and C. of A., B. is the lord, A. the mesne lord, and C. tenant of the demesne. Ham. N. P. 392, 393.

Tenant paravaile. The under-tenant of land; that is, the tenant of a tenant; one who held of a mesne lord.

Tenant to the prcipe. Before the English fines and recoveries act, if land was conveyed to a person for life with remainder to another in tail, the tenant in tail in remainder was unable to bar the entail without the concurrence of the tenant for life, because a common recovery could only be suffered by the person seised of the land. In such a case, if the tenant for life wished to cone ar in barring the entail, he usually conveyed his life-estate to some other person, in order that the prcecipe in the recovery might be issued against the latter, who was therefore called the "tenant to the prcecipe." Williams, Seis. 169; Sweet.

Tenants by the verge. The "same nature as tenants by copy of court roll, [i. e., copyholders.] But the reason why they be called 'tenants by the verge' is for that, when they will surrender their tenements into the hands of their lord to the use of another, they shall have a little rod (by the custome) in their hand, the which they shall deliver to the steward or to the bailife, * * * and the steward or bailife, according to the custome, shall deliver to him that taketh the land the same rod, or another rod, in the name of seisin; and for this cause they are called 'tenants by the verge,' but they have no other evidence [title-deed] but by copy of court roll." Litt. § 78; Co.Litt. 61a.

TENANT-RIGHT. A kind of customary estate in the north of England, falling under the general class of copyhold, but distinguished from copyhold by many of its incidents.

The so-called tenant-right of renewal is the expectation of a lessee that his lease will be renewed, in cases where it is an estaklished practice to renew leases from time to time, as in the case of leases from the crown, from ecclesiastical corporations, or other collegiate bodies. Strictly speaking, there can be no right of renewal against the lessor without an express compact by him to that effect, though the existence of the custom often influences the price in sales.

The Ulster tenant-right may be described as a right on the tenant's part to sell his holding to the highest bidder, subject to the existing or a reasonable increase of rent from time to time, as circumstances may require, with a reasonable veto reserved to the landlord in respect of the incoming tenant's character and solvency. Mozley & Whitley.

TENANT'S FIXTURES. This phrase signifies things which are fixed to the freehold of the demised premises, but which the tenant may detach and take away, provided he does so in season. Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray (Mass.) 256, 270, 64 Am. Dec. 64.

TENANTABLE REPAIR. Such a repair as will render a house fit for present habitation.

TENCON. L. Fr. A dispute; a quarrel. Kelham.

TEND. To have a leaning; serve, contribute, or conduce in some degree or way, or have a more or less direct bearing or effect; to be directed as to any end, object, or purpose; to have a tendency, conscious or unconscious, to any end, object or purpose. Rogers v. State, 122 Tex.Cr.R. 331, 54 S.W.2d 1010, 1012.

In old English law. To tender or offer. Cowell.

TENDER. An offer of money; the act by which one produces and offers to a person holding a claim or demand against him the amount of money which he considers and admits to be due, in satisfaction of such claim or demand, without any stipulation or condition. Kastens v. Ruland, 94 N. J.Eq. 451, 120 A. 21, 22; Mondello v. Hanover Trust Co., 252 Mass. 563, 148 N.E. 136, 137; Wooton v. Dahlquist, 42 Idaho, 121, 244 P. 407, 409; McCall Co. v. Hobbs-Henderson Co., 138 S.C. 435, 136 S.E. 762, 763.

The offer of performance, not performance itself, and, when unjustifiably refused, places other party in default and permits party making tender to exercise remedies for breach of contract. Walker v. Houston, 215 Cal. 742, 12 P.2d 952, 953, 87 A.L.R. 937.

The actual proffer of money, as distinguished from mere proposal or proposition to proffer it. Caplan v. Shaw, W. Va., 30 S.E.2d 132, 140. Hence mere written proposal to pay money, without offer of cash, is not "tender." Wardlaw v. Woodruff, 175 Ga. 515, 165 S.E. 557, 560.

"Tender," though usually used in connection with an offer to pay money, is properly used in connection with offer of property other than money. Maxwell Implement Co. v. Fitzgerald, 85 Ind.App. 206, 146 N.E. 883, 885; Central Flour Mills Co. v. Gateway Milling Co., Mo.App., 213 S. W. 131, 134; In re Katzowitz, 214 App.Div. 429, 212 N.Y.S. 336, 338; Harrison v. Beals, 111 Or. 563, 222 P. 728, 731; Jose v. Aufderheide, 222 Mo.App. 524, 293 S.W. 476, 479.

Tender, in pleading, is a plea by defendant that he has been always ready to pay the debt demanded, and before the commencement of the action tendered it to the plaintiff, and now brings it into court ready to be paid to him, etc. Brown.

Legal tender is that kind of coin, money, or circulating medium which the law compels a creditor to accept in payment of his debt, when tendered by the debtor in the right amount.

Tender of Amends

An offer by a person who has been guilty of any wrong or breach of contract to pay a sum of money by way of amends. If a defendant in an action make tender of amends, and the plaintiff decline to accept it, the defendant may pay the money into court, and plead the payment into court as a satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. Mozley & Whitley.

Tender of Issue

A form of words in a pleading, by which a party offers to refer the question raised upon it to the appropriate mode of decision. The common tender of an issue of fact by a defendant is expressed by the words, "and of this he puts himself upon the country." Steph.Pl. 54, 230.

TENEMENT. This term, in its vulgar acceptation, is only applied to houses and other buildings, but in its original, proper, and legal sense it signifies everything that may be holden, provided it be of a permanent nature, whether it be of a substantial and sensible, or of an unsubstantial, ideal, kind. Thus, liberum tenementum, frank tenement, or freehold, is applicable not only to lands and other solid objects, but also to offices, rents, commons, advowsons, franchises, peerages, etc.

2 Bl.Comm. 16; Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 517; Oskaloosa Water Co. v. Board of Equalization, 84 Iowa 407, 51 N.W. 18, 15 L.R.A. 296; Field v. Higgins, 35 Me. 341.

Property held by tenant, everything of permanent nature which may be holden, and, in more restrictive sense, house or dwelling. Hughes v. Milby and Dow Coal and Mining Co., 127 Okl. 30, 259 P. 559, 560.

Dominant Tenement

One for the benefit or advantage of which an easement exists or is enjoyed.

Servient Tenement

One which is subject to the burden of an easement existing for or enjoyed by another tenement. See Easement.

TENEMENTAL LAND. Land distributed by a lord among his tenants, as opposed to the demesnes which were occupied by himself and his servants. 2 Bl.Comm. 90.

TENEMENTIS LEGATIS. An ancient writ, lying to the city of London, or any other corporation, (where the old custom was that men might devise by will lands and tenements, as well as goods and chattels,) for the hearing and determining any controversy touching the same. Reg.Orig. 244.

TENENDAS. In Scotch law. The name of a clause in charters of heritable rights, which derives its name from its first words, "tenendas prcedictas terras;" it points out the superior of whom the lands are to be holden, and expresses the particular tenure. Ersk. Inst. 2, 3, 24.

TENENDUM. Lat. To be holden. It was used to indicate the lord of whom the land was to be held and the tenure by which it was to be held. but, since all freehold tenures have been converted into socage, the tenendum is of no further use, and is therefore joined in the habendum,—"to have and to hold." 2 Bl.Comm. 298; 4 Cruise, Dig. 26.

TENENS. A tenant; the defendant in a real action.

TENENTIBUS IN ASSISA. NON ONERANDIS. A writ that formerly lay for him to whom a disseisor had alienated the land whereof he disseised another, that he should not be molested in assize for damages, if the disseisor had wherewith to satisfy them. Reg. Orig. 214.

TENERE. Lat. In the civil law. To hold; to hold fast; to have in possession; to retain.

In relation to the doctrine of possession, this term expresses merely the fact of manual detention, or the corporal possession of any object, without involving the question of title; while habere (and especially possidere) denotes the maintenance of possession by a lawful claim; i. e., civil possession, as distinguished from mere natural possession.

TENERL The Latin name for that clause in a bond in which the obligor expresses that he is "held and firmly bound" to the obligee, his heirs, etc.

TENET; TENUIT. Lat. He holds; he held. In the Latin forms of the writ of waste against a tenant, these words introduced the allegation of tenure. If the tenancy still existed, and recovery of the land was sought, the former word was used, (and the writ was said to be "in the tenet.") If the tenancy had already determined, the latter term was used, (the writ being described as "in the tenuit,") and then damages only were sought.

TENHEDED, or TIENHEOFED. In old English law. A dean. Cowell.

TENMENTALE. The number of ten men, which number, in the time of the Saxons, was called a "decennary;" and ten decennaries made what was called a "hundred." Also a duty or tribute paid to the crown, consisting of two shillings for each plowland. Enc.Lond.

TENNE. A term of heraldry, meaning orange color. In engravings it should be represented by lines in bend sinister crossed by others bar-ways. Heralds who blazon by the names of the heavenly bodies, call it "dragon's head," and those who employ jewels, "jacinth." It is one of the colors called "stainand." Wharton.

TENOR. A term used in pleading to denote that an exact copy is set out. 1 Chit.Crim.Law. 235.

By the tenor of a deed, or other instrument in writing, is signified the matter contained therein, according to the true intent and meaning thereof. Cowell.

"Tenor," in pleading a written instrument, imports that the very words are set out. "Purport" does not import this, but is equivalent only to "substance." Corn. v. Wright, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 65; Dana v. State, 2 Ohio St. 93; State v. Bonney, 34 Me. 384; State v. Atkins, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 458; State v. Chinn, 142 Mo. 507, 44 S.W. 245; Saugerties Bank v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 204 App.Div. 211, 198 N.Y.S. 722, 723; State v. Collins, 297 Mo. 257, 248 S.W. 599, 602; Johns v. Rice, 165 Iowa, 233, 145 N.W. 290, 291.

The action of proving the tenor, in Scotland, is an action for proving the contents and purport of a deed which has been lost. Bell.

In Chancery Pleading

A certified copy of records of other courts removed in chancery by certiorari. Gres.Eq.Ev. 309.

TENOR EST QUI LEGEM DAT FEUDO. It is the tenor [of the feudal grant] which regulates its effect and extent. Craigius, Jus Feud. (3d Ed.) 66; Broom, Max. 459.

TENORE INDICTAMENTI MITTENDO. A writ whereby the record of an indictment, and the process thereupon, was called out of another court into the queen's bench. Reg.Orig. 69.

TENORE PRZESENTIUM. By the tenor of these presents, i. e., the matter contained therein, or rather the intent and meaning thereof. Cowell.

TENSERLÆ. A sort of ancient tax or military contribution. Wharton.

TENT. A shelter of flexible material supported by poles stretched by cords that are secured by pegs in the ground. Knowles v. State, 19 Ala.App. 476, 98 So. 207, 208; City of St. Louis v. Nash, 266 Mo. 523, 181 S.W. 1145, 1146, Ann.Cas.1918B, 134; Killman v. State, 2 Tex.App. 222, 28 Am.Rep. 432.

TENTATES PANIS. The essay or assay of bread. Blount.

TENTERDEN'S ACT, In English law. The statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 14, taking its name from Lord Tenterden, who procured its enactment, which is a species of extension of the statute of frauds, and requires the reduction of contracts to writing.

TENTHS. In English law. A temporary aid issuing out of personal property, and granted to the king by parliament; formerly the real tenth part of all the movables belonging to the subject. 1 Bl.Comm. 308.

In English ecclesiastical law. The tenth part of the annual profit of every living in the kingdom, formerly paid to the pope, but by statute 26 Hen. VIII. c. 3, transferred to the crown, and afterwards made a part of the fund called "Queen Anne's Bounty." 1 Bl.Comm. 284-286.

TENUIT. A term used in stating the tenure in an action for waste done after the termination of the tenancy. See Tenet.

TENURA. In old English law. Tenure.

TENURA EST PACTIO CONTRA COMMUNEM FEUD! NATURAM AC RATIONEM, IN CONTRACTU INTERPOSITA. Wright, Ten. 21. Tenure is a compact contrary to the common nature and reason of the fee, put into a contract.

TENURE. The mode or system of holding lands or tenements in subordination to some superior, which, in the feudal ages, was the leading characteristic of real property.

Tenure is the direct result of feudalism, which separated the dominium directum, (the dominion of the soil,) which is placed mediately or immediately in the crown, from the dominion utile, (the possessory title,) the right to the use and profits in the soil, designated by/the term "seisin," which is the highest interest a subject can acquire. Wharton: Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 231, 114 Misc. 590.

Wharton gives the following list of tenures which were ultimately developed:

Lay Tenures

I. Frank tenement, or freehold. (1) The military tenures (abolished, except grand serjeanty, and reduced to free socage tenures) were : Knight service proper, or tenure in chivalry ; grand serjeanty ; cornage. (2) Free socage, or plow-service; either petit serjeanty, tenure in burgage, or gavelkind.

II. Villeinage. (1) Pure villeinage, (whence copyholds at the lord's [nominal] will, which is regulated according to custom). (2) Privileged villeinage, sometimes called "villein socage," (whence tenure in ancient demesne, which is an exalted species of copyhold, held according to custom, and not according to the lord's will,) and is of three kinds : Tenure in ancient demesne ; privileged copyholds, customary freeholds, or free copyholds; copyholds of base tenure.

Spiritual Tenures

I. Frankalmoigne, or free alms.

II. Tenure by divine service.

In its general sense, a mode of holding or occupying. Thus, we speak of the tenure of an office, meaning the manner in which it is held, especially with regard to time, (tenure for life, tenure during good behavior,) and of tenure of land in the sense of occupation or tenancy, especially with reference to cultivation and questions of political economy; e. g., tenure by peasant proprietors, cottiers, etc. Sweet. See Bard v. Grundy, 2 Ky. 169; People v. Waite, 9 Wend. (N.Y.) 58; Barrett v. Duff, 114 Kan. 220, 217 P. 918, 922; People ex rel. McCoy v. McCahey, 296 Ill.App. 310, 15 N.E.2d 988, 993.

TENURE BY DIVINE SERVICE. Where an ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, holds land by a certain divine service; as, to say prayers on a certain day in every year, "or to distribute in almes to an, hundred poore men an hundred pence at such a day." Litt. § 137.

TENURE IN OFFICE. Right to perform duties and receive emoluments thereof. State ex rel. Daly v. City of Toledo, 142 Ohio St. 123, 50 N.E.2d 338, 342.

TERCE. In Scotch law. Dower; a widow's right of dower, or a right to a life estate in a third part of the lands of which her husband died seised.

TERCER. In Scotch law. A widow that possesses the third part of her husband's land, as her legal jointure. 1 Kames, Eq. pref.

TERCERONE. A term applied in the West Indies to a person one of whose parents was white and the other a mulatto. See Daniel v. Guy, 19 Ark. 131.

TERM. A word or phrase; an expression; particularly one which possesses a fixed and known meaning in some science, art, or profession.

A fixed period, a determined or prescribed duration. Carpenter v. Okanogan County, 163 Wash. 18, 299 P. 400, 404.

Civil Law

A space of time granted to a debtor for discharging his obligation. Poth. Obl. pt. 2, c. 3, art. 3, § 1; Civ.Code La. art. 2048.

Estates

Bounds, limitation, or extent of time for which an estate is granted; as when a man holds an estate for any limited or specific number of years, which is called his "term," and he himself is called, with reference to the term he so holds, the "termor," or "tenant of the term." Gay Mfg. Co. v. Hobbs, 128 N.C. 46, 38 S.E. 26, 83 Am.St.Rep. 661; Sanderson v. Scranton, 105 Pa. 472; Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 84; Rooney v. City of Omaha, 105 Neb. 447, 181 N.W. 143, 144; Curry v. Bacharach Quality Shops, 271 Pa. 364, 117 A. 435, 438.

Of Court

When used with reference to a court, signifies the space of time during which the court holds a session. A session signifies the time during the term when the • court sits for the transaction of business, and the session commences when the court convenes for the term, and continues until final adjournment, either before or at the expiration of the term. The term of the court is the time prescribed by law during which it may be in session. The session of the court is the time of its actual sitting. Lipari v. State, 19 Tex.App. 431; Conkling v. Ridgely, 112 Ill. 36, 1 N.E. 261, 54 Am.Rep. 204; Lanier v. Shayne, 85 Fla. 212, 95 So. 617, 618; Trower v. Mudd, Mo.App., 242 S.W. 993, 994. But "term" and "session" are often used interchangeably. Nation v. Savely, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 35; Muse v. Harris, 122 Okl. 250, 254 P. 72, 73; Lewis County Pub. Co. v. Lewis County Court, 75 W.Va. 305, 83 S.E. 993, 995.

General

General term. A phrase used in some jurisdictions to denote the ordinary session of a court, for the trial and determination of causes, as distinguished from a special term, for the hearing of motions or arguments or the despatch of various kinds of formal business, or the trial of a special list or class of cases. Or it may denote a sitting of the court in banc. State v. Eggers, 152 Mo. 485, 54 S.W. 498.

Regular term. A term begun at the time appointed by law, and continued, in the discretion of the court, to such time as it may appoint, consistent with the law. Wightman v. Karsner, 20 Ala. 451; Glebe v. State, 106 Neb. 251, 183 N.W. 295, 296; Carter v. State, 14 Ga.App. 242, 80 S.E. 533, 534; State v. Thompson, 100 W.Va. 253, 130 S.E. 456, 460; Ex parte Daly, 66 Fla. 345, 63 So. 834, 835.

Special term. In New York practice, that branch of the court which is held by a single judge for hearing and deciding in the first instance motions and causes of equitable nature is called the "special term," as opposed to the "general term," held by three judges (usually) to hear appeals. Abbott; Gracie v. Freeland, 1 N.Y. 232.

Term attendant on the inheritance. See Attendant Terms.

Term fee. In English practice. A certain sum which a solicitor is entitled to charge to his client, and the client to recover, if successful, from the unsuccessful party; payable for every term in which any proceedings subsequent to the summons shall take place. Wharton.

Term for deliberating. The time given to the beneficiary heir, to examine if it be for his interest to accept or reject the succession which has fallen to him. Civ.Code La. art. 1033.

Term for years. An estate for years and the time during which such estate is to be held are each called a "term;" hence the term may expire before the time, as by a surrender. Co.Litt. 45.

Term in gross. A term of years is said to be either in gross (outstanding) or attendant upon the inheritance. It is outstanding, or in gross, when it is unattached or disconnected from the estate or inheritance, as where it is in the hands of some third party having no interest in the inheritance; it is attendant, when vested in some trustee in trust for the owner of the inheritance. Brown.

Term of lease. The word "term," when used in connection with a lease, means the period which is granted for the lessee to occupy the premises, and does not include the time between the making of the lease and the tenant's entry. Young v. Dake, 5 N.Y. 463, 55 Am.Dec. 356; De Pauw University v. United Electric Coal Cos., 299 Lll.App. 339, 20 N.E.2d 146, 149.

Term of office. The period during which elected officer or appointee is entitled to hold office, perform its functions, and enjoy its privileges and emoluments. State v. Knight, 76 Mont. 71, 245 P. 267, 268; Wilson v. McCarron, 112 Me. 181, 91 A. 839, 840; State v. Board of Com'rs of Sierra County, 29 N.M. 209, 222 P. 654, 655, 31 A.L.R. 1310; State v. Oklahoma City, 38 Okl. 349, 134 P. 58, 59, 60; Bayley v. Garrison, 190 Cal. 690, 214 P. 871, 872.

Term probatory. The period of time allowed to the promoter of an ecclesiastical suit to produce his witnesses, and prove the facts on which he rests his case. Coote, Ecc.Pr. 240, 241.

Term to conclude. In English ecclesiastical practice. An appointment by the judge of a time at which both parties are understood to renounce all further exhibits and allegations.

Term to propound all things. In English ec.^.1esiastical practice. An appointment by the judge of a time at which both parties are to exhibit all the acts and instruments which make for their respective causes.

In the Law of Contracts and in Court Practice. The word is generally used in the plural, and "terms" are conditions; propositions stated or promises made which, when assented to or accepted by another, settle the contract and bind the parties. Webster. See Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 313, 60 Am.Dec. 381; State v. Fawcett, 58 Neb. 371, 78 N.W. 636; Nakdimen v. Ft. Smith & Van Buren Bridge Dist., 115 Ark. 194, 172 S.W. 272, 275.

Special terms. Peculiar or unusual conditions imposed on a party before granting some application to the favor of the court.

Under terms. A party is said to be under terms when an indulgence is granted to him by the court in its discretion, on certain conditions. Thus, when an injunction is granted ex parte, the party obtaining it is put under terms to abide by such order as to damages as the court may make at the hearing. Mozley & Whitley.

A writ that lay for a man convicted by attaint, to bring the record and process before the king, and take a fine for his imprisonment, and then to deliver to him his lands and tenements again, and release him of the strip and waste. Reg. Orig. 232. Also it was a writ for the delivery of lands to the heir, after homage and relief performed, or upon security taken that he should perform them. Orig. 293.

TERRITORIAL, TERRITORIALITY. These terms are used to signify connection with, or limitation with reference to, a particular country or territory. Thus, "territorial law" is the correct expression for the law of a particular country or state, although "municipal law" is more common. "Territorial waters" are that part of the sea adjacent to the coast of a given country which is by international law deemed to be within the sovereignty of that country, so that its courts have jurisdiction over offenses committed on those waters, even by a person on board a foreign ship. Sweet.

TERRITORIAL COURTS. The courts established in the territories of the United States.

TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION. Territory over which a government or a subdivision thereof has jurisdiction. State v. Cox, 106 Utah 253, 147 P.2d 858, 861.

Jurisdiction considered as limited to cases arising or persons residing within a defined territory, as, a county, a judicial district, etc. The authority of any court is limited by the boundaries thus fixed. See Phillips v. Thralls, 26 Kan. 781.

TERRITORIAL PROPERTY. The land and water over which the state has jurisdiction and control whether the legal title be in the state itself or in private individuals. Lakes and waters wholly within the state are its property and also the marginal sea within the three-mile limit, but bays and gulfs are not always recognized as state property.

TERRITORY. A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction.

American Law

A portion of the United States, not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized, with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial officers appointed by the president. See Ex parte Morgan, D.C.Ark., 20 F. 298, 304; People v. Daniels, 6 Utah, 288, 22 P. 159, 5 L.R.A. 444; Ex parte Heikich Terui, 187 Cal. 20, 200 P. 954, 956, 17 A.L.R. 630.

Const. Amend. 18, prohibiting the transportation of intoxicating liquor within or the importation thereof into the United States and territory subject to its jurisdiction, uses the word "territory" as meaning the regional areas of land and adjacent waters over which the United States claims and exercises dominion and control as a sovereign power. Cunard S. S. Co. v. Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 43 S.Ct. 504, 507, 67 L. Ed. 894, 27 A.L.R. 1306; International Mercantile Marine v. Stuart, D.C.N.Y., 285 F. 78, 81; State v. Morton, 31 Idaho, 329, 171 P. 495, 496.

TERRITORY OF A JUDGE. The territorial jurisdiction of a judge; the bounds, or district, within which he may lawfully exercise his judicial authority. Phillips v. Thralls, 26 Kan. 781.

TERROR. Alarm; fright; dread; the state of mind induced by the apprehension of hurt from some hostile or threatening event or manifestation; fear caused by the appearance of danger. In an indictment for riot, it must be charged that the acts done were "to the terror of the people." See Arto v. State, 19 Tex.App. 136.

TERTIA DENIJNCIATIO. Lat. In old English law. Third publication or proclamation of intended marriage.

TERTIUS INTERVENIENS. Lat. In the civil law. A third person intervening; a third person who comes in between the parties to a suit; one who interpleads. Gilbert's Forum Rom. 47.

TEST. To bring one to a trial and examination, or to ascertain the truth or the quality or fitness of a thing.

Something by which to ascertain the truth respecting another thing; a criterion, gauge, standard, or norm.

In public law, an inquiry or examination addressed to a person appointed or elected to a public office, to ascertain his qualifications therefor, but particularly a scrutiny of his political, religious, or social views, or his attitude of past and present loyalty or disloyalty to the government under which he is to act. See Attorney General v. Detroit Common Council, 58 Mich. 213, 24 N.W. 887, 55 Am.Rep. 675; People v. Hoffman, 116 Ill. 587, 5 N.E. 596, 56 Am.Rep. 793; Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun 637, 3 N.Y.S. 674.

TEST ACT. The statute 25 Car. II. c. 2, which directed all civil and military officers to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and make the declaration against transubstantiation, within six months after their admission, and also within the same time receive the sacrament according to the usage of the Church of England, under penalty of £500 and disability to hold the office. 4 Bl.Comm. 58, 59. This was abolished by St. 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, so far as concerns receiving the sacrament, and a new form of declaration was substituted.

TEST ACTION. An action selected out of a considerable number of suits, concurrently depending in the same court, brought by severar plaintiffs against the same defendant, or by one plaintiff against different defendants, all similar in their circumstances, and embracing the same questions, and to be supported by the same evidence, the selected action to go first to trial, (under an order of court equivalent to consolidation,) and its decision to serve as a test of the right of recovery in the others, all parties agreeing to be bound by the result of the test action.

TEST OATH. An oath required to be taken as a criterion of the fitness of the person to fill a public or political office; but particularly an oath of fidelity and allegiance (past or present) to the established government.

TEST-PAPER. In practice. A paper or instrument shown to a jury as evidence. A term used in the Pennsylvania courts. Depue v. Clare, 7 Pa. 428.

TESTA DE NEVIL. An ancient and authentic record in two volumes, in the custody of the king's remembrancer in the exchequer, said to be compiled by John de Nevil, a justice itinerant, in the eighteenth and twenty-fourth years of Henry III. Cowell. These volumes were printed in 1807, under the authority of the commissioners of the public records, and contain an account of fees held either immediately of the king or of others who held of the king in capite; fees holden in frankalmoigne; serjeanties holden of the king; widows and heiresses of tenants in capite, whose marriages were in the gift of the king; churches in the gift of the king; escheats, and sums paid for scutages and aids, especially within the county of Hereford. Cowell; Wharton.

TESTABLE. A person is said to be testable when he has capacity to make a will; a man of twenty-one years of age and of sane mind is testable.

TESTACY. The state or condition of leaving a will at one's death. Opposed to "intestacy."

TESTAMENT. A disposition of personal property to take place after the owner's decease, according to his desire and direction. Pluche v. Jones, C.C.A.Tex., 54 F. 860, 865, 4 C.C.A. 622; Aubert's Appeal, 109 Pa. 447, 1 A. 336; Conklin v. Egerton, 21 Wend., N.Y., 436; Ragsdale v. Booker, 2 Strob. Eq. (S.C.) 348; In re Lester's Will, 100 N.J.Eq. 521, 136 P. 322.

The act of last will, clothed with certain solemnities, by which the testator disposes of his property, either universally, or by universal title, or by particular title. Civ.Code La. art. 1571.

The common usage the world over is to employ the words "will," "testament," and "last will and testament" as exactly synonymous. Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Powers, 192 Wash. 475, 74 P.2d 27, 32, 114 A.L.R. 531. But strictly speaking, the term testament denotes only a will of personal property; a will of land not being called a "testament." Wyers v. Arnold, 347 Mo. 413, 147 S.W.2d 644, 647, 134 A.L.R. 876. The word "testament" is now seldom used, except in the heading of a formal will, which usually begins : "This is the last will and testament of me, A. B.," etc. Sweet.

The true declaration of a man's last will as to that which he would have to be done, aster his death. It is compounded, according to Justinian, from testatio mentis; but the better opinion is that it is a simple word formed from the Latin testor, and not a compound word. Mozley & Whitley.

Military Testament

In English law. A nuncupative will, that is, one made by word of mouth, by which a soldier may dispose of his goods, pay, and other personal chattels, without the forms and solemnities which the law requires in other cases. St. 1 Vict. c. 26, § 11.

Mutual Testaments

Wills made by two persons who leave their effects reciprocally to the survivor.

Mystic Testament

A form of testament made under Spanish law which prevailed in Louisiana and California. See Broutin v. Vassant, 5 Mart. O.S. (La.) 182; Schoul. Wills § 9. In the law of Louisiana. A sealed testament. The mystic or secret testament, otherwise called the "closed testament," is made in the following manner: The testator must sign his dispositions, whether he has written them himself or has caused them_to be written by another person. The paper containing those dispositions, or the paper serving as their envelope, must–be closed and sealed. The testator shall present it thus closed and sealed to the notary and to seven witnesses, or he shall cause it to be closed and sealed in their presence. Then he shall declare to the notary, in presence of the witnesses, that that paper contains his testament written by himself, or by another by his direction, and signed by him, the testator. The notary shall then draw up the act of superscription, which shall be written on that paper, or on the sheet that serves as its envelope, and that act shall be signed by the testator, and by the notary and the witnesses. Civ.Code La. art. 1584.

TESTAMENTA CUM DUO INTER SE PUGNANTIA REPERIUNTUR, ULTIMUM RATUM EST; SIC EST, CUM DUO INTER SE PUGNANTIA REPERIUNTUR IN EODEM TESTAMENTO. Co.Litt. 112. When two conflicting wills are found, the last prevails; so it is when two conflicting clauses occur in the same will.

TESTAMENTA LATISSIMAM INTERPRETATIONEM HABERE DEBENT. Jenk.Cent. 81. Wills ought to have the broadest interpretation.

TESTAMENTARY. Pertaining to a will or testament; as testamentary causes. Derived from, founded on, or appointed by a testament or will; as a testamentary guardian, letters testamentary, etc.

A paper, instrument, document, gift, appointment, etc., is said to be "testamentary" when it is written or made so as not to take effect until after the death of the person making it, and to be revocable and retain the property under his control during his life, although he may have believed that it would operate as an instrument of a different character. Sweet. See In re Murphy's Estate, 193 Wash. 400, 75 P.2d 916, 920.

Letters Testamentary

The formal instrument of authority and appointment given to an executor by the proper court, upon the admission of the will to probate, empowering him to enter upon the discharge of his office as executor.

Testamentary Capacity

That measure of mental ability which is recognized in law as sufficient for the making a will. See Nicewander v. Nicewander, 151 Ill. 156, 37 N. E. 698; Delafield v. Parish, 25 N.Y. 29; Duffield v. Robeson, 2 Har. (Del.) 379; Lowe v. Williamson, 2 N.J.Eq. 85.

A testator to have such capacity must have sufficient mind and memory to intelligently understand the nature of business in which he is engaged, to comprehend generally the nature and extent of property which constitutes his estate, and which he intends to dispose of, and to recollect the objects of his bounty. In re Larsen's Estate, 191 Wash. 257, 71 P.2d 47, 49. And it depends upon capacity at very time will was executed, and not previously or subsequently. Bishop v. Scharf, 214 Iowa 644, 241 N.W. 3, 7.

Testamentary Causes

In English law. Causes or matters relating to the probate of wills, the granting of administrations, and the suing for legacies, of which the ecclesiastical courts have jurisdiction. 3 Bl.Comm. 95, 98. Testamentary causes are causes relating to the validity and execution of wills. The phrase is generally confined to those causes which were formerly matters of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and are now dealt with by the court of probate. Mozley & Whitley.

Testamentary Class

Body of persons, uncertain in number at time of gift, ascertainable. in future, and each taking in equal or in other definite proportions. Newlin v. Mercantile Trust- Co. of Baltimore, 161 Md. 622, 158 A. 51, 57.

Testamentary Disposition

A disposition of property by way of gift, which is not to take effect unless the grantor dies or until that event. Diefendorf v. Diefendorf, 56 Hun 639, 8 N.Y.S. 617; Chestnut St. Nat. Bank v. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co., 40 A. 486, 186 Pa. 333, 65 Am.St.Rep. 860; Patch v. Squires, 105 Vt. 405, 165 A. 919, 921.

Testamentary Guardian

A guardian appointed by the last will of a father for the person and real and personal estate of his child until the latter arrives of full age. 1 Bl.Comm. 462; 2 Kent, Comm. 224; In re De Saulles, 101 Misc. 447, 167 N.Y.S. 445, 453.

Testamentary Paper or Instrument

An instrument in the nature of a will; an unprobated will; a paper writing which is of the character of a will, though not formally such, and, if allowed as a testament, will have the effect of a will upon the devolution and distribution of property. Young v. O'Donnell, 129 Wash. 219, 224 P. 682, 684.

Testamentary Power

A power of appointment exercisable only by will. Restatement, Property, § 321(1).

Testamentary Succession

In Louisiana, that which results from the institution of an heir contained in a testament executed in the form prescribed by law. Civ.Code La. 1900, art. 876.

Testamentary Trustee

See Trustee.

TESTAMENTI FACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. The ceremony of making a testament, either as testator, heir, or witness.

TESTAMENTUM. Lat. In the civil law. A testament; a will, or last will.

In old English law. A testament or will; a disposition of property made in contemplation of death. Bract. fol. 60.

A general name for any instrument of conveyance, including deeds and charters, and so called either because it furnished written testimony of the conveyance, or because it was authenticated by witnesses, (testes.) Spelman.

TESTAMENTUM EST VOLUNTATIS NOSTR1E JUSTA SENTENTIA, DE EO QUOD QUIS POST MORTEM SUAM FIER' VELIT. A testament is the just expression of our will concerning that which any one wishes done after his death, [or, as Blackstone translates, "the legal declaration of a man's intentions which he wills to be performed after his death."] Dig. 28, 1, 1; 2 Bl.Comm. 499.

TESTAMENTUM, 1. e., TESTATIO MENTIS, FACTA NULLO PR1ESENTE METU PERICULI, SED COGITATIONE MORTALITATIS. Co. Litt. 322. A testament, i. e., the witnessing of one's intention, made under no present fear of danger, but in expectancy of death.

TESTAMENTUM INOFFICIOSUM. Lat. In the civil law. An inofficious testament, (q. v.).

TESTAMENTUM OMNE MORTE CONSUMMATUR. Every will is perfected by death. A will speaks from the time of death only. Co. Litt. 232.

TESTARI. Lat. In the civil law. To testify; to attest; to declare, publish, or make known a thing before witnesses. To make a will. Calvin.

TESTATE. One who has made a will; one who dies leaving a will.

If deceased's property passed to the devisees under his will, then he died "testate" ; but, if no part of the property of his estate passed by will, but by the statute of descent and distribution, then he died "intestate". Leffler v. Leffler, 151 Fla. 455, 10 So.2d 799, 804.

TESTATION. Witness; evidence.

TESTATOR. One who makes or has made a testament or will; one who dies leaving a will. This term is borrowed from the civil law. Inst. 2, 14, 5, 6.

TESTATORIS ULTIMA VOLUNTAS EST PERIMPLENDA SECUNDUM VERAM INTENTIONEM SUAM. Co. Litt. 322. The last will of a testator is to be thoroughly fulfilled according to his real intention.

TESTATRIX. A woman who makes a will; a woman who dies leaving a will; a female testator.

TESTATUM. The name of a writ which is issued by the court of one county to the sheriff of another county in the same state, when defendant cannot be found in the county where the court is located: for example, after a judgment has been obtained, and a ca. sa. has been issued, which has been returned non est inventus, a testatum ca. sa. may be issued to the sheriff of the county where the defendant is. See Viner, Abr. Testatum 259.

In conveyancing. That part of a deed which commences with the words, "This indenture witnesseth."

TESTATUM WRIT. In practice. A writ containing a testatum clause; such as a testatum capias, a testatum / 1. fa., and a testatum ca. sa. See Testatum.

TESTATUS. Lat. In the civil law. Testate; one who has made a will. Dig. 50, 17, 7.

TESTE MEIPSO. Lat. In old English law and practice. A solemn formula of attestation by the sovereign, used at the conclusion of charters, and other public instruments, and also of original writs out of chancery. Spelman.

TESTE OF A WRIT. In practice. The concluding clause, commencing with the word "Witness," etc. A writ which bears the teste is sometimes said to be tested.

"Teste" is a word commonly used in the last part of every writ, wherein the date is contained beginning with the words, "Teste meipso," meaning the sovereign, if the writ be an original writ, or be issued in the name of the sovereign ; but, if the writ be a judicial writ, then the word "Teste" is followed by the name of the chief judge of the court in which the action is brought, or, in case of a vacancy of such office, in the name of the senior puisne judge. Mozley & Whitley.

TESTED. To be tested is to bear the teste, (q. v.).

TESTES. Lat. Witnesses.

TESTES PONDERANTUR, NON NUMERANTUR. Witnesses are weighed, not numbered. That is, in case of a conflict of evidence, the truth is to be sought by weighing the credibility of the respective witnesses, not by the mere numerical preponderance on one side or the other.

TESTES QUI POSTULAT DEBET DARE EIS SUMPTUS COMPETENTES. Whosoever demands witnesses must find them in competent provision.

TESTES, TRIAL PER. A trial had before a judge without the intervention of a jury, in which the judge is left to form in his own breast his sentence upon the credit of the witnesses examined; but this mode of trial, although it was common in the civil law, was seldom resorted to in the practice of the common law, but it is now becoming common when each party waives his right to a trial by jury. Brown.

TESTIBUS DEPONENTHIUS IN PARI NUMERO, DIGNIORIBUS EST CREDENDUM. Where the witnesses who testify are in equal number, [on both sides,] the more worthy are to be believed. 4 Inst. 279.

TESTIFY. To bear witness; to give evidence as a witness; to make a solemn declaration, under oath or affirmation, in a judicial inquiry, for the purpose of establishing or proving some fact. See State v. Robertson, 26 S.C. 117, 1 S.E. 443; Gannon v. Stevens, 13 Kan. 459; Mudge v. Gilbert, 43 How.Prac. (N.Y.) 221; People v. Krotz, 341 Ill. 214, 172 N.E. 135, 137.

TESTIMONIA PONDERANDA SUNT, NON NUMERANDA. Evidence is to be weighed, not enumerated.

TESTIMONIAL. Besides its ordinary meaning of a written recommendation to character, "testimonial" has a special meaning, under St. 39 Eliz. c. 17, § 3, passed in 1597, under which it signified a certificate under the hand of a justice of the peace, testifying the place and time when and where a soldier or mariner landed, and the place of his dwelling or birth, unto which he was to pass, and a convenient time limited for his passage. Every idle and wandering soldier or mariner not having such a testimonial, or willfully exceeding for above fourteen days the time limited thereby, or forging or counterfeiting such testimonial, was to suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy. This act was repealed, in 1812, by St. 52 Geo. III. c. 31. Mozley & Whitley.

TESTIMONIAL PROOF. In the civil law. Proof by the evidence of witnesses, i. e., parol evidence, as distinguished from proof by written instruments, which is called "literal" proof.

TESTIMONIO. In Spanish law. An authentic copy of a deed or other instrument, made by a notary and given to an interested party as evidence of his title, the original remaining in the public archives. Guilbeau v. Mays, 15 Tex. 414.

TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE. In conveyancing. That clause of a deed or instrument with which it concludes: "In witness whereof, the parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands and seals."

TESTIMONY. Evidence given by a competent witness, under oath or affirmation; as distinguished from evidence derived from writings, and other sources. Edelstein v. United States, 79 C.C.A. 328, 149 F. 636, 640, 9 L.R.A.,N.S., 236; Grayson v. Durant, 43 Okl. 799, 144 P. 592, 594; Cauble v. Key, Tex.Civ.App., 256 S.W. 654, 655.

Evidence and Testimony as Synonymous or Distinguishable

The words "testimony" and "evidence" are not synonymous. Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J.Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80, 89.

Although testimony is evidence, evidence may or may not be testimony or may, and in most cases does, consist of more than testimony, Superior Meat Products v. Holloway, 113 Ill. App. 320, 48 N.E.2d 83, 86.

Anything perceptible to the five senses, constitutes evidence, when submitted to court or jury, if competent, In re Fisher's Estate, 47 Idaho 668, 279 P. 291, 293.

Application for policy, although evidence in suit on policy, was not "testimony," Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lodzinski, 121 N.J.Eq. 183, 188 A. 681, 688.

"Evidence" is the broader term and includes all testimony. Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J.Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80, 89. In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and decedent, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 264 App.Div. 76, 34 N.Y.S.2d 489, 491.

Exhibits are "evidence" but not "testimony". Worland v. McGill, 26 Ohio App. 442, 160 N.E. 478, 480; Madison v. State, 138 Fla. 467, 189 So. 832, 835.

"Testimony" is found in spoken words of witnesses while "evidence" includes documents and other exhibits which may properly be submitted to jury. Madison v. State, 138 Fla. 467, 189 So. 832, 835.

"Testimony" is that species of evidence which is produced through language of witnesses. Weeks v. Bailey, 33 N.M. 193, 263 P. 29, 30.

Testimony is one species of evidence. But the word "evidence" is a generic term which includes every species of it. Gazette Printing Co. v. Morss, 60 Ind. 157. Testimony is the evidence given by witnesses. Evidence is whatever may be given to the jury as tending to prove a case. It includes the testimony of witnesses, documents, admissions of parties, etc. Mann v. Higgins, 83 Cal. 66, 23 P. 206 ; Carroll v. Bancker, 43 La. Ann. 1078, 10 So. 192 ; Columbia Nat. Bank v. German Nat. Bank, 56 Neb. 803, 77 N.W. 346; Harris v. Tomlinson, 130 Ind. 426, 30 N.E. 214; Jones v. Gregory, 48 Ill.App. 230; Industrial Commission v. Jasionowski, 24 Ohio App. 66, 156 N.E. 616, 618. What is sworn is testimony; what is the truth deduced therefrom is "evidence." Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Rogers, 21 Ga.App. 324, 94 S.E. 321, 322; Mick v. Mart, N.J.Ch., 65 A. 851.

But in common parlance, "testimony" and "evidence" are synonymous. State v. Winney, 21 N.D. 72, 128 N.W. 680, 681; Jones v. City of Seattle, 51 Wash. 245, 98 P. 743, 745; Fitzgerald v. Benner, 219 Ill. 485, 76 N.E. 709, 716;: Grayson v. Durant, 43 Okl. 799, 144 P. 592, 594.

Testimony properly means only such evidence as is delivered by a witness on the trial of a cause, either orally or in the form of affidavits or depositions. Thus, an ancient deed, when offered under proper circumstances, is evidence but it could not strictly be called "testimony."

The words "testimony" and "evidence," are frequently used synonymously. Superior Lloyds of America v. Foxworth, Tex.Civ.App., 178 S.W.2d 724, 726; Roberts v. Carlson, 142 Neb. 851, 857, 8 N.W.2d 175, 179; Wyuta Cattle Co. v. Connell, 43 Wyo. 135, 299 P. 279, 281.

As used in instruction "testimony" was used in the sense of "evidence." In re Burcham's Estate, 211 Iowa 1395, 235. N.W. 764, 766.

The use of the word "testimony" instead of "evidence" in an instruction, where both oral evidence and physical facts and circumstances are defensively interposed, is not prejudicial where it is clear from all the instructions that it was intended that such physical facts should also be considered by the jury. Roberts v. Carlson, 142 Neb. 857, N.W.2d 175, 179.

The word "testimony" as used in statute providing that when any deed, writing, or other document necessary as "testimony" may be in possession of a resident who is not a party subpoena duces tecum shall be issued on application, means "evidence". Ex parte Hart,. 240, Ala. 642,. 200 So. 783, 786.

Expert Testimony

See Expert Evidence.

Negative Testimony

Testimony not bearing directly upon the immediate fact or occurrence under consideration, but evidencing facts from which it may be inferred that the act or fact in question could not possibly have happened. See Barclay v. Hartman, 43 A. 174, 2 Marv. (Del.) 351; Cinadar v. Detroit, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 193 Mich. 38, 159 N.W. 312; Heywood v. State, 12 Ga.App. 643, 77 S.E. 1130; Williams v. State, 23 Ga.App. 542, 99 S.E. 43.

Positive Testimony

Direct testimony that a thing did or did not happen. Williams v. State, 23 Ga.App. 542, 99 S.E. 43; Roberts v. State, 90 Fla. 779, 107 So. 242, 244.

TESTIS. Lat. A witness; one who gives evidence in court, or who witnesses a document.

TESTIS DE VISU PRZEPONDERAT ALIIS. 4 Inst. 279. An eye-witness is preferred to others.

TESTIS LUPANARIS SUFFICIT AD FACTUM IN LUPANARI. Moore, 817. A lewd person is a sufficient witness to an act committed in a brothel.

TESTIS NEMO IN SUA CAUSA ESSE POTEST. No one can be a witness in his own cause.

TESTIS OCULATUS UNUS PLUS VALET QUAM AURITI DECEM. 4 Inst. 279. One eye-witness is worth more than ten ear-witnesses.

TESTMOIGNE. An old law French term, denoting evidence or testimony of a witness.

TESTMOIGNES NE POENT TESTIFIER LE NEGATIVE, MES L'AFFIRMATIVE. Witnesses cannot testify to a negative; they must testify to an affirmative. 4 Inst. 279.

TEXT-BOOK. A legal treatise which lays down principles or collects decisions on any branch of the law.

TEXTUS R0i[i]FENSIS. In old English law. The Rochester text. An ancient manuscript containing many of the Saxon laws, and the rights, customs, tenures, etc., of the church of Rochester, drawn up by Ernulph, bishop of that see from A. D. 1114 to 1124. Cowell.

THAINLAND. In old English law. The land which was granted by the Saxon kings to their thains or thanes was so called.

THALWEG. Old German spelling of Talweg, which title see.

THANAGE OF THE KING. A certain part of the king's land or property, of which the ruler or governor was called "thane." Cowell.

TIDESMEN, in English law, are certain officers of the custom-house, appointed to watch or attend upon ships till the customs are paid; and they are so called because they go aboard the ships at their arrival in the mouth of the Thames, and come up with the tide. Jacob.

TIE, v. To bind. "The parson is not tied to find the parish clerk." 1 Leon. 94.

TIE, n. When, at an election, neither candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, but each has the same number, there is said to be a "tie." So when the number of votes cast in favor of any measure, in a legislative or deliberative body, is equal to the number cast against it. See Wooster v. Mullins, 64 Conn. 340, 30 A. 144, 25 L.R.A. 694.

TIEL, L. Fr. Such. Nul tiel record, no such record.

TIEMPO INHABIL. Span. A time of inability; a time when the person is not able to pay his debts, (when, for instance, he may not alienate property to the prejudice of his creditors.) The term is used in Louisiana. Brown v. Kenner, 3 Mart.O.S. (La.) 270; Thorn v. Morgan, 4 Mart. N.S. (La.) 292, 16 Am.Dec. 173.

TIERCE. L. Fr. Third. Tierce mein, third hand. Britt. c. 120.

TIERCE. A liquid measure, containing the third part of a pipe, 3r forty-two gallons.

TIGH. In old records. A close or intlosure, a croft. Cowell.

TIGHT. As colloquially applied to a note, bond, mortgage, lease, etc., this term signifies that the clauses providing the creditor's remedy in case of default (as, by foreclosure, execution, distress, etc.) are summary and stringent.

TIGNI IMMITTENDI. Lat. In the civil law. The name of a servitude which is the right of inserting a beam or timber from the wall of one house into that of a neighboring house, in order that it may rest on the latter, and that the wall of the latter may bear this weight. Wharton. See Dig. 8, 2, 36.

TIGNUM. Lat. A civil-law term for building material; timber.

TIHLER. In old Saxon law. An accusation.

TILLAGE. A place tilled or cultivated; land under cultivation, as opposed to lands lying fallow or in pasture.

TIMBER. Wood felled for building or other such like use. In a legal sense it generally means (in England) oak, ash, and elm, but in some parts of England, and generally in America, it is used in a wider sense, which is recognized by the law.

The term "timber," as used in commerce, refers generally only to large sticks of wood, squared or capable of being squared for building houses or vessels; and certain trees only having been formerly used for such purposes, namely, the oak, the ash, and the elm, they alone were recognized as timber trees. But the numerous uses to which wood has come to be applied, and the general employment of all kinds of trees for some valuable purpose, has wrought a change in the general acceptation of terms in connection therewith, and we find that Webster defines "timber" to be "that sort of wood which is proper for buildings or for tools, utensils, furniture, carriages, fences, ships, and the like." This would Include all sorts of wood from which any useful articles may be made, or which may be used to advantage in any class of manufacture or construction. U. S. v. Stores, C.C., 14 F. 824; Wilson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 393; U. S. v. Soto, 7 Ariz. 230, 64 P. 420; Tuscarora Nation of Indians v. Williams, 141 N.Y.S. 207, 210, 79 Misc. 445; Eagle Coal Co. v. Patrick's Adm'r, 161 Ky. 333, 170 S.W. 960, 961; Nettles v. Lichtrnan, 228 Ala. 52, 152 So. 450, 453, 91 A.L.R. 1455.

TIMBER CULTURE ENTRY. See Entry.

TIMBER-TREES. Oak, ash, elm, in all places, and, by local custom, such other trees as are used in building. 2 Bl.Comm. 281.

TIMBERLODE. A service by which tenants were bound to carry timber felled from the woods to the lord's house. Cowell.

Burlington Voluntary Relief Dept. v. White, 41 Neb. 547, 59 N.W. 747, 43 Am.St.Rep. 701; Gerlach v. North Texas & S. F. Ry. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 244 S.W. 662, 666.

Time immemorial. Time whereof the memory of a man is not to the contrary.

Time is the essence of contract. Means that performance by one party at time or within period specified in contract is essential to enable him to require performance by other party. Hayes Mfg. Corporation v. McCauley, C.C.A.Ohio, 140 F.2d 187, 190; Williams v. Shamrock Oil and Gas Co., 128 Tex. 146, 95 S.W.2d 1292, 1295, 107 A.L.R. 269.

A contract where the parties evidently contemplated a punctual performance, at the precise time named, as vital to the agreement, and one of its essential elements. Time is not of the essence of the contract in any case where a moderate delay in performance would not be regarded as an absolute violation of the contract.

Time of accident. In occupational disease cases, time when disability first occurs. Michigan Quartz Silica Co. v. Industrial Commission, 214 Wis. 492, 253 N.W. 167.

Time of memory. In English law. Time commencing from the beginning of the reign of Richard I. 2 Bl.Comm. 31. Lord Coke defines time of memory to be "when no man alive hath had any proof to the contrary, nor hath any conusance to the contrary." Co. Litt. 86a, 86b.

Time out of memory. Time beyond memory; time out of mind; time to which memory does not extend.

Time-policy. A policy of marine insurance in which the risk is limited, not to a given voyage, but to a certain fiked term or period of time.

TIMOCRACY. An aristocracy of property; government by men of property who are possessed of a certain income.

TIMORES VANI SUNT AESTIMANDI QUI NON CADUNT CONSTANTEM VIRUM. 7 Coke, 17. Fears which do not assail a resolute man are to be accounted vain.

TINBOUNDING. A custom regulating the manner in which tin is obtained from wasteland, or land which has formerly been wasteland, within certain districts in Cornwall and Devon. The custom is described in the leading case on the subject as follows: "Any person may enter on the waste-land of another, and may mark out by four corner boundaries a certain area. A written description of the plot of land so marked out with metes and bounds, and the name of the person, is recorded in the local stannaries court, and is proclaimed on three successive court-days. If no objection is sustained by any other person, the court awards a writ to the bailiff to deliver possession of the said 'bounds of tinwork' to the `bounder,' who thereupon has the exclusive right to search for, dig, and take for his own use all tin and tin-ore within the inclosed limits, paying as a royalty to the owner of the waste a certain proportion of the produce under the name of 'toll-tin.' " 10 Q.B. 26, cited in Elton Commons, 113. The right of tinbounding is not a right of common, but is an interest in land, and, in Devonshire, a corporeal hereditament. In Cornwall tin bounds are personal estate. Sweet.

TINEL. L. Fr. A place where justice was administered. Kelham.

TINEMAN. Sax. In old forest law. A petty officer of the forest who had the care of vert and venison by night, and performed other servile duties.

TINET. In old records. Brush-wood and thorns for fencing and hedging. Cowell; Blount.

TIPPLING HOUSE. A place where intoxicating drinks are sold in drams or small quantities to be drunk on the premises, and where men resort for drinking purposes. Hussey v. State, 69 Ga. 58; Emporia v. Volmer, 12 Kan. 629; Mohrman v. State, 32 S.E. 143, 105 Ga. 709, 43 L.R.A. 398, 70 Am.St.Rep. 74.

TIPSTAFF. In American law. An officer appoint ed by the court, whose duty is to wait upon the court when it is in session, preserve order, serve process, guard juries, etc.

In English law. An officer appointed by the marshal of the king's bench to attend upon the judges with a kind of rod or staff tipped with silver, who take into their custody all prisoners, either committed or turned over by the judges at their chambers, etc. Jacob.

TITHER. One who gathers tithes.

TITHES. In English law. The tenth part of the increase, yearly arising and renewing from the. profits of lands, the stock upon lands, and the personal industry of the inhabitants. 2 Bl.Comm. 24. A species of incorporeal hereditament, being an ecclesiastical inheritance collateral to the estate of the land, and due only to an ecclesiastical person by ecclesiastical law. 1 Crabb, Real Prop.. § 133.

Great Tithes

In English ecclesiastical law. Tithes of corn,. peas and beans, hay and wood. 2 Chit.B1.Comm. 24, note; 3 Steph.Comm. 127.

Minute Tithes

Small tithes, such as usually belong to a vicar,. as of wool, lambs, pigs, butter, cheese, herbs,, seeds, eggs, honey, wax, etc.

Mixed Tithes

Those which arise not immediately from the ground, but from those things which are nourished by the ground, e. g., colts, chickens, calves, milk, eggs, etc. 3 Burn, Ecc. Law, 380; 2 Bl. Comm. 24.

Personal Tithes

Personal tithes are tithes paid of such profits as come by the labor of a man's person; as by buying and selling, gains of merchandise and handicrafts, etc. Tomlins.

Predial Tithes

Such as arise immediately from the ground; as, grain of all sorts, hay, wood, fruits, and herbs.

Tithe-Free

Exempted from the payment of tithes.

Tithe Rent-Charge

A rent-charge established in lieu of tithes, under the tithes commutation act, 1836, (St. 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 71.) As between landlord and tenant, the tenant paying the tithe rent-charge is entitled, in the absence of express agreement, to deduct it from his rent, under section 70 of the above act. And a tithe rent-charge unpaid is recoverable by distress as rent in arrear. Mozley & Whitley.

TITHING. One of the civil divisions of England, being a portion of that greater division called a "hundred." It was so called because ten freeholders with their families composed one. It is said that they were all knit together in one society, and bound to the king for the peaceable behavior of each other. In each of these societies there was one chief or principal person, who, from his office, was called "teothing-man," now "tithing-man." Brown.

TITHING-MAN,

Modern Law

A constable. "After the introduction of justices of the peace, the offices of constable and tithing-man became so similar that we now regard them as precisely the same." Willc. Const. Introd.

New England

A parish officer annually elected to preserve good order in the church during divine service, and to make complaint of any disorderly conduct. Webster, Diet.

In Saxon Law

The head or chief of a tithing or decennary of ten families; he was to decide all lesser causes between neighbors. Jacob, Law Dict. In modern English law, he is the same as an under-constable or peace-officer.

TITHING-PENNY. In Saxon and old English law. Money paid to the sheriff by the several tithings of his county. Cowell.

TITIUS. In Roman law. A proper name, frequently used in designating an indefthite or fictitious person, or a person referred to by way of illustration. "Titius" and "Seius," in this use, correspond to "John Doe" and "Richard Roe," or to "A. B." and "C. D."

TITLE. The radical meaning of this word appears to be that of a mark, style, or designation; a distinctive appellation; the name by which anything is known. Thus, in the law of persons, a title is an appellation of dignity or distinction, a name denoting the social rank of the person bearing it; as "duke" or "count." So, in legislation, the title of a statute is the heading or preliminary part, furnishing the name by which the act is individually known. It is usually prefixed to the statute in the form of a brief summary of its contents; as "An act for the prevention of gaming." State v. Thomas, 301 Mo. 603, 256 S.W. 1028, 1029. Again, the title of a patent is the short description of the invention, which is copied in the letters patent from the inventor's petition; e. g., "a new and improved method of drying and preparing malt." Johns. Pat. Man. 90.

The title of a book, or any literary composition, is its name; that is, the heading or caption prefixed to it, and disclosing the distinctive appellation by which it is to be known. This usually comprises a brief description of its subject-matter and the name of its author.

"Title" is also used as the name of one of the subdivisions employed in many literary works, standing intermediate between the divisions denoted by the term "books" or "parts," and those designated as "chapters" and "sections."

Law of Trade-Marks

A title may become a subject of property; as one who has adopted a particular title for a newspaper, or other business enterprise, may, by long and prior user, or by compliance with statutory provisions as to registration and notice, acquire a right to be protected in the exclusive use of it. Abbott.

Real Property Law

Title is the means whereby the owner of lands has the just possession of his property. Co. Litt. 345; 2 Bl.Comm. 195; Homey v.. Price, 189 N.C. 820, 128 S.E. 321, 323; Hahn v. Fletcher, 189 N.C. 729, 128 S.E. 326, 327; Wimpey v. Ledford, Mo. Sup., 11 A.L.R. 7, 177 S.W. 302, 304; Case v. Mortgage Guarantee and Title Co., 52 R.I. 155, 158 A. 724, 726. The union of all the elements which constitute ownership. Carroll v. City of Newark, 108 N.J.L. 323, 158 A. 458, 461. Full, independent and fee ownership. In re Pelis' Estate, 150 Misc. 918, 271 N.Y.S. 731. The right to or ownership in land. Andrews v. New Britain Nat. Bank, 113 Conn. 467, 155 A. 838, 840.

Title may be defined generally to be the evidence of right which a person has to the possession of property. The word "title" certainly does not merely signify the right which a person has to the possession of property; because there are many instances in which a person may have the right to the possession of property, and at the same time have no title to the same. In its ordinary legal acceptation, however, it generally seems to imply a right of possession also. It ,therefore, appears, on the whole, to signify the outward evidence of the right, rather than the mere right itself. Thus, when it is said that the "most Imperfect degree of title consists in the mere naked possession or actual occupation of an estate," it means that the mere circumstance of occupying the estate is the weakest species of evidence of the occupier's right to such possession. The word is defined by Sir Edward Coke thus : Titulus est justa causa possidendi id quod nostrum est, (1 Inst. 34;) that is to say, the ground whether purchase, gift, or other such ground of acquiring; "titulus" being distinguished in this respect from "modus acquirendi," which is the traditio, e., delivery or conveyance of the thing. Brown.

Title is when a man hath lawful cause of entry into lands, whereof another is seised; and it signifies also the means whereby a man comes to lands or tenements, as by feoffment, last will and testament, etc. The word "title" includes a right, but is the more general word. Every right is a title, though every title is not a right, for which an action lies. Jacob.

The investigation of titles is one of the principal branches of conveyancing and in that practice the word "title" has acquired the sense of "history," rather than of "right." Thus, we speak of an abstract of title, and of investigating a title, and describe a document as forming part of the title to property. Sweet.

Pleading

The right of action which the plaintiff has. The declaration must show the plaintiff's title, and, if such title be not shown in that instrument, the defect cannot be cured by any of the future pleadings. Bac. Abr. "Pleas," etc., B 1.

Procedure

Every action, petition, or other proceeding has a title, which consists of the name of the court in which it is pending, the names of the parties, etc. Administration actions are further distinguished by the name of the deceased person whose estate is being administered. Every pleading, summons, affidavit, etc., commences with the title. In many cases it is sufficient to give what is called the "short title" of an action, namely, the court, the reference to the record, and the surnames of the first plaintiff and the first defendant. Sweet.

General

Absolute title. As applied to title to land, an exclusive title, or at least a title which excludes all others not compatible with it; an absolute title to land cannot exist at the same time in different persons or in different governments. Johnson v. McIntosh, 21 U.S. 543, 8 Wheat. 543, 5,98, 5 L.Ed. 681.

Abstract of title. See that title.

Adverse title. A title set up in opposition to or defeasance of another title, or one acquired or claimed by adverse possession.

Bond for title. See Bond.

Chain of title. See that title.

Clear title, good title, merchantable title, marketable title, are synonymous; "clear title" meaning that the land is free from incumbrances, "good title" being one free from litigation, palpable defects, and grave doubts, comprising both legal and equitable titles and fairly deducible of record. Ogg v. Herman, 71 Mont. 10, 227 P. 476, 477; Veselka v. Forres, Tex.Civ.App., 283 S.W. 303, 306; Sipe v. Greenfield, 116 Okl. 241, 244 P. 424, 425.

Clear title of record, or clear record title, means freedom from apparent defects, grave doubts, and litigious uncertainties, and is such title as a reasonably prudent person, with full knowledge, would accept. A title dependent for its validity on extraneous evidence, ex parte affidavits, or written guaranties against the results of litigation is not a clear title of record, and is not such title as equity will require a purchaser to accept. Ammerman v. Karnowski, 109 Okl. 156, 234 P. 774, 776; Cleval v. Sullivan, 258 Mass. 348, 154 N.E. 920, 921.

Color of title. See that title.

Covenants for title. Covenants usually inserted in a conveyance of land, on the part of the grantor, and binding him for the completeness, security, and continuance of the title transferred to the grantee. They comprise "covenants for seisin, for right to convey, against incumbrances, for quiet enjoyment, sometimes 'for further assurance, and almost always of warranty." Rawle, Co^v. § 21.

Doubtful title. See that title.

Equitable title. A right in the party to whom it belongs to have the legal title transferred to him; or the beneficial interest of one person whom equity regards as the real owner, although the legal title is vested in another. Wyatt v. Meade County Bank, 40 S.D. 111, 166 N.W. 423, 424; Pogue v. Simon, 47 Or. 6, 81 P. 566, 567, 114 Am. St.Rep. 903, 8 Ann.Cas. 474; Karalis v. Agnew, 111 Minn. 522, 127 N.W. 440, 441; Joy v. Midland State Bank of Omaha, Neb., 28 S.D. 262, 133 N. W. 276, 277; Harris v. Mason, 120 Tenn. 668, 115 S.W. 1146, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1101; Niles v. Anderson, 5 How. (Miss.) 365, 385, quoted in Ayres v. U. S., 42 Ct.C1. 385, 413. See Equitable Estate.

Examination of title, see Examination.

Imperfect title. One which requires a further exercise of the granting power to pass the fee in land, or which does not convey full and absolute dominion. Paschal v. Perez, 7 Tex. 367; Paschal v. Dangerfield, 37 Tex. 300; Lambert v. Gant. Tex. Civ.App., 290 S.W. 548, 551.

Legal title. See that title.

Lucrative title. In the civil law, title acquired without the giving of anything in exchange for it; the title by which a person acquires anything which comes to him as a clear gain, as, for instance, by gift, descent, or devise. Opposed to "onerous title," as to which see infra.

Marketable title. See that title.

Onerous title. In the civil law, title to property acquired by the giving of a valuable consideration for it, such as the payment of money, the rendition of services, the performance of conditions, the assumption of obligations, or the discharge of liens on the property; opposed to "lucrative" title, or one acquired by gift or otherwise without the giving of an equivalent. Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 471; Kircher v. Murray, C.C.A.Tex.,

54 F. 617, 624; Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 453; Rev. Civ.Code La. 1900, art. 3556, subd. 22.

Paper title. A title to land evidenced by a conveyance or chain of conveyances; the term generally implying that such title, while it has color or plausibility, is without substantial validity.

Passive title. In Scotch law. A title incurred by an heir in heritage who does not enter as heir in the regular way, and therefore incurs liability for all the debts of the decedent, irrespective of the amount of assets. Paterson.

Perfect title. Various meanings have been attached to this term: (1) One which shows the absolute right of possession and of property in a particular person. Henderson v. Beatty, 124 Iowa, 163, 99 N.W. 716; Wilcox Lumber Co. v. Bullock, 109 Ga. 532, 35 S.E. 52; Donovan v. Pitcher, 53 Ala. 411, 25 Am.Rep. 634. (2) A grant of land which requires no further act from the legal authority to constitute an absolute title to the land taking effect at once. Hancock v. McKinney, 7 Tex. 457. (3) A title which does not disclose a patent defect suggesting the possibility of a lawsuit to defend it; a title such as a well-informed and prudent man paying full value for the property would be willing to take. Birge v. Bock, 44 Mo.App. 77. (4) A title which is good both at law and in equity. Warner v. Middlesex Mut. Assur. Co., 21 Conn. 449. (5) One which is good and valid beyond all reasonable doubt. Sheehy v. Miles, 93 Cal. 288, 28 P. 1046; Reynolds v. Borel, 86 Cal. 538, 25 P. 67. (6) A marketable or merchantable title. Ross v. Smiley, 18 Colo.App. 204, 70 P. 766; McCleary v. Chipman, 32 Ind.App. 489, 68 N.E. 320.

Presumptive title. A barely presumptive title, which is of the very lowest order, arises out of the mere occupation or simple possession of property, (jus possessionis,) without any apparent right, or any pretense of right, to hold and continue such possession.

Record title. See Record.

Singular title. The title by which a party acquires property as a singular successor.

Tax title. See Tax.

Title by adverse possession or prescription. The right which a possessor acquires to property by reason of his adverse possession during a period of time fixed by law. Walker v. Steffes, 139 Ga. 520, 77 S.E. 580.

The elements of "title by prescription" are open, visible and continuous use under a claim of right, adverse to and with knowledge of owner. Dry Gulch Ditch Co. v. Hutton, 170 Or. 656, 133 P.2d 601, 610.

Such title is equivalent to a "title by deed" and cannot be lost or divested except in the same manner, and mere recognition of title in another after such acquisition will not operate to divest the adverse claimant of that which he has acquired. Maloney v. Bedford, 290 Ky. 647, 162 S.W.2d 198, 199.

Title by descent. That title which one acquires by law as heir to the deceased owner. Stabel v. Gertel, N.J.Sup., 11 N.J.Misc. 247, 165 A. 876, 879.

Title by prescription. See Title by adverse possession, supra.

Title deeds. Deeds which constitute or are the evidence of title to lands.

Title defective in form. Title on face of which some defect appears, not one that may prove defective by circumstances or evidence dehors the instrument. Title defective in form cannot be basis of prescription. Thompson v. Futral, 18 La. App. 685, 136 So. 654.

Title insurance. See Insurance.

Title of a cause. The distinctive appellation by which any cause in court, or other juridical proceeding, is known and discriminated from others.

Title of an act. The heading, or introductory clause, of a statute, wherein is briefly recited its purpose or nature, or the subject to which it relates.

Title of clergymen, (to orders.) Some certain place where they may exercise their functions; also an assurance of being preferred to some ecclesiastical benefice. 2 Steph.Comm. 661.

Title of declaration. That preliminary clause of a declaration which states the name of the court and the term to which the process is returnable.

Title of entry. The right to enter upon lands. Cowell.

Title retention. A form of lien, in the nature of a chattel mortgage, to secure the purchase price. American Indemnity Co. v. Allen, for Use and Benefit of Commerce Union Bank, 176 Tenn. 134, 138 S.W.2d 445, 446.

Title to orders. In English ecclesiastical law, a title to orders is a certificate of preferment or provision required by the thirty-third canon, in order that a person may be admitted into holy orders, unless he be a fellow or chaplain in Oxford or Cambridge, or master of arts of five years' standing in either of the universities, and living there at his sole charges; or unless the bishop himself intends shortly to admit him to some benefice or curacy. 2 Steph.Comm. 661.

Unmarketable title. See that title.

TITULADA. In Spanish law. Title. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 2.

TITULARS OF ERECTION. Persons who in Scotland, after the Reformation, obtained grants from the crown of the monasteries and priories then erected into temporal lordships. Thus the titles formerly held by the religious houses, as well as the property of the lands, were conferred on these grantees, who were also called "lords of erection" and "titulars of the teinds." Bell.

TITULUS. Lat. Title. In the civil law. The source or ground of possession; the means whereby possession of a thing is acquired, whether such possession be lawful or not.

In old Ecclesiastical law. A temple or church; the material edifice. So called because the priest in charge of it derived therefrom his name and title. Spelman.

TITULUS EST JUSTA CAUSA POSSIDENDI ID QUOD NOSTRUM EST; DICITUR A TUENDO. 8 Coke, 153. A title is the just right of possessing that which is our own; it is so called from "tuendo," defending.

TO. This is ordinarily a word of exclusion, when used in describing premises; it excludes the terminus mentioned. Littlefield v. Hubbard, 120 Me. 226, 113 A. 304, 306; Sinford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Skeritt Inv. Co. v. City of Englewood, 79 Colo. 645, 248 P. 6, 8. It may be a word of inclusion, and may also mean "into." People v. Poole, 284 Ill. 39, 119 N.E. 916, 917; Thompson v. Reynolds, 59 Utah, 416, 204 P. 516, 518.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD. The words in a conveyance which show the estate intended to be conveyed. Thus, in a conveyance of land in fee-simple, the grant is to "A. and his heirs, to have and to hold the said [land] unto and to the use of the said A., his heirs and assigns forever." Williams, Real Prop. 198.

Strictly speaking, however, the words "to have" denote the estate to be taken, while the words "to hold" signify that it is to be held of some superior lord, i. e., by way of tenure, (q. v.). The former clause is called the "habendum;" the latter, the "tenendum." Co. Litt. 6a.

TO WIT. That is to say; namely; scilicet; videlicet. Spears v. Wise, 187 Ala. 346, 65 So. 786; Williams v. Shows, 187 Ala. 132, 65 So. 839, 840; J. R. Kilgore & Son v. Shannon & Co., 6 Ala.App. 537, 60 So. 520, 525.

TOALIA. In feudal law. A towel. There is a tenure of lands by the service of waiting with a towel at the king's coronation. Cowell.

TOBACCONIST. Any person, firm, or corporation whose business it is to manufacture cigars, snuff, or tobacco in any form. Act of congress of July 13, 1866, § 9 (14 Stat. 120).

TOFT. A place or piece of ground on which a house formerly stood, which has been destroyed by accident or decay. 2 Broom & H.Comm. 17.

TOFTMAN. In old English law. The owner of a toft. Cowell; Spelman.

TOGATI. Lat. In Roman law. Advocates; so called under the empire because they were required, when appearing in court to plead a cause, to wear the toga, which had then ceased to be the customary dress in Rome. Vicat.

TOGETHER. In union with, along with. Gilmore v. Mulvihill, 109 Mont. 601, 98 P.2d 335, 341.

TOILET. Act or process of dressing up. Inecto, Inc., v. Higgins, D.C.N.Y., 21 F.Supp. 418, 426. A cleansing and grooming of one's person. Mennen Co. v. Kelly, C.C.A.N.J., 137 F.2d 866, 868.

TOILET PREPARATION. Within statute taxing a "toilet preparation", any preparation which is intended to affect, and conceivably, to improve the bodily appearance. Peroxide Chemical Co. v. Sheehan, C.C.A.Mo., 108 F.2d 306, 308, 309.

TOKEN. A sign or mark; a material evidence of the existence of a fact. Thus, cheating by "false tokens" implies the use of fabricated or deceitfully contrived material objects to assist the person's own fraud and falsehood in accomplishing the cheat. See State v. Green, 18 N.J. Law, 181; State v. Leonard, 73 Or. 451, 144 P. 113, 118; Smith v. State, 74 Fla. 594, 77 So. 274, 277; State v. Whiteaker, 64 Or. 297, 129 P. 534, 537.

TOKEN-MONEY. A conventional medium of exchange consisting of pieces of metal, fashioned in the shape and size of coins, and circulating among private persons, by consent, at a certain value. No longer permitted or recognized as money. 2 Chit.Com.Law, 182.

TOLERATE. To allow so as not to hinder; to permit as something not wholly approved of ; to suffer; to endure. Gregory v. U. S., 17 Blatchf. 330, Fed.Cas.No. 5,803.

TOLERATION. The allowance of religious opinions and modes of worship which are contrary to, or different from, those of the established church or belief. Webster.

TOLERATION ACT. The statute 1 W. & M. St. 1, c. 18, for exempting Protestant dissenters from the penalties of certain laws is so called. Brown.

TOLL, v. To bar, defeat, or take away; thus, to toll the entry means to deny or take away the right of entry.

To toll the statute of limitations means to show facts which remove its bar of the action.

TOLL, n. A sum of money for the use of something, generally applied to the consideration which is paid for the use of a road, bridge, or the like, of a public nature. See Sands v. Manistee River Imp. Co., 8 S.Ct. 113, 123 U.S. 288, 31 L.Ed. 149; Anthony v. Kozer, D.C.Or., 11 F.2d 641, 645; City of Madera v. Black, 181 Cal. 306, 184 P. 397, 400; Rogge v. United States, C.C.A.Alaska, 128 F.2d 800, 802. The price of the privilege of travel over that particular highway and it is a quid pro quo and rests on principle that he who receives the toll does or has done something as an equivalent to him who pays it. State ex rel. Washington Toll Bridge Authority v. Yelle, 195 Wash. 636, 82 P.2d 120, 125.

In English law. An excise of goods; a seizure of some part for permission of the rest. It has two significations: A liberty to buy and sell within the precincts of the manor, which seems to import as much as a fair or market; a tribute or custom paid for passage. Wharton.

A Saxon word signifying, properly, a payment in towns, markets, and fairs for goods and cattle bought and sold. It is a reasonable sum of money due to the owner of the fair or market, upon sale of things tollable within the same. The word is used for a liberty as well to take as to be free from toll. Jacob.

In modern English law. A reasonable sum due to the lord of a fair or market for things sold there which are tollable. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 350, § 683.

Toll and Team

Words constantly associated with Saxon and old English grants of liberties to the lords of manors. Bract. fols. 56, 104b, 124b, 154b. They appear to have imported the privileges of having a market, and jurisdiction of villeins. See Team.

Toll Bridge

A part of the public highway the same as a bridge built by general taxation, the only difference being that it is made at the expense of others, instead of the public, and the cost of construction and maintenance is reimbursed by a toll fixed for the purpose. White River Bridge Co. v. Hurd, 159 Ark. 652, 252 S.W. 917.

Toll Road

A road or highway over which the public has the right to travel upon payment of toll, and on which the parties entitled to such toll have the right to erect gates and bars to insure its payment. In re Newland, C.C.A.Pa., 115 F.2d 165, 166.

Toll Gatherer

The officer who takes or collects toll.

Toll-Thorough

In English law. A toll for passing through a highway, or over a ferry or bridge. Cowell. A toll paid to a town for such a number of beasts, or for every beast that goes through the town, or over a bridge or ferry belonging to it. Corn. Dig. "Toll." C. A toll claimed by an individual where he is bound to repair some particular highway. 3 Steph.Comm. 257. And see King v. Nicholson, 12 East, 340; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 582, 9 L.Ed. 773.

Toll Traverse

In English law. A toll for passing over a private man's ground. Cowell. A toll for passing over the private soil of another, or for driving beasts across his ground. Cro.Eliz. 710.

Toll-Turn

In English law. A toll on beasts returning from a market. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 101, § 102. A toll paid at the return of beasts from fair or market, though they were not sold. Cowell.

TOLLAGE. Payment of toll; money charged or paid as toll; the liberty or franchise of charging toll.

TOLLBOOTH. A prison; a customhouse; an exchange; also the place where goods are weighed. Wharton.

TOLLDISH. A vessel by which the toll of corn for grinding is measured.

TOLLE VOLUNTATEM ET ERIT OMNIS ACTUS INDIFFERENS. Take away the will, and every action will be indifferent. Bract. fol. 2.

TOLLER. One who collects tribute or taxes.

TOLLERE. Lat. In the civil law. To lift up or raise; to elevate; to build up.

TOLLS. In a general sense, any manner of customs, subsidy, prestation, imposition, or sum of money demanded for exporting or importing of any wares or merchandise to be taken of the buyer. 2 Inst. 58. For "Fair and Reasonable Tolls," see that title.

TOLLSESTER. An old excise; a duty paid by tenants of some manors to the lord for liberty to brew and sell ale. Cowell.

TOLSEY. The same as "tollbooth." Also a place where merchants meet; a local tribunal for small civil causes held at the Guildhall, Bristol.

TOLT. A writ whereby a cause depending in a court baron was taken and removed into a county court. Old Nat. Brev. 4.

TOLTA. In old English law. Wrong; rapine; extortion. Cowell.

TOLZEY COURT. An inferior court of record having civil jurisdiction, still existing at Bristol, England.

TOMB. An excavation in earth or rock, intended to receive the dead body of a human being. Leaphart v. Harmon, 186 S.C. 362, 195 S.E. 628, 629.

TOMBSTONE. Stone marking place of burial and usually inscribed with memorial of deceased. Anshe Sephard Congregation v. Weisblatt, 170 Md. 390, 185 A. 107, 108.

TON. A measure of weight; differently fixed, by different statutes, at two thousand pounds avoirdupois, (1 Rev.St.N.Y. 609, § 35,) or at twenty hundred-weights, each hundred-weight being one hundred and twelve pounds avoirdupois, [19 U.S. C.A. § 4201) ; Chemung Iron & Steel Co. v. Mersereau Metal Bed Co., Sup., 179 N.Y.S. 577, 578.

TONNAGE. The capacity of a vessel for carrying freight or other loads, calculated in tons. But the way of estimating the tonnage varies in different countries. In England, tonnage denotes the actual weight in tons which the vessel can safely carry; in America, her carrying capacity estimated from the cubic dimensions of the hold. See Roberts v. Opdyke, 40 N.Y. 259; Kiessig v. San Diego County, 51 Cal.App.2d 47, 124 P.2d 163, 166.

The "tonnage" of a vessel is her capacity to carry cargo, and a charter of "the whole tonnage" of a ship transfers to the charterer only the space necessary for that purpose. Thwing v. Insurance Co., 103 Mass. 405, 4 Am.Rep. 567.

The tonnage of a vessel is her internal cubical capacity, in tons. Inman S. S. Co. v, Tinker, 94 U.S. 238, 24 L.Ed. 118.

TONNAGE—DUTY.

In American law. A tax laid upon vessels according to their tonnage or cubical capacity.

A tonnage duty is a duty imposed on vessels in proportion to their capacity. The vital principle of a tonnage duty is that it is imposed, whatever the subject, solely according to the rule of weight; either as to the capacity to carry or the actual weight of the thing itself. Inman S. S. Co. v. Tinker, 94 U.S. 238, 24 L.Ed. 118; Ross v. Mayor and Council of Borough of Edgewater, 115 N.J.L. 477, 180 A. 866.

A tonnage tax is defined to be a duty levied on a vessel according to the tonnage or capacity. It is a tax upon the boat as an instrument of navigation, and not a tax upon the property of a citizen of the state. The Math Cape, 6 Biss. 505. Fed.Cas.No.10,316.

In English law. A duty imposed by parliament upon merchandise exported and imported, according to a certain rate upon every ton. Brown.

TONNAGE-RENT. When the rent reserved by a mining lease or the like consists of a royalty on every ton of minerals gotten in the mine, it is often called a "tonnage-rent." There is generally a dead rent in addition. Sweet.

TONNAGIUM. In old English law. A custom or impost upon wines and other merchandise exported or imported, according to a certain rate per ton. Spelman; Cowell.

TONNETIGHT. In old English law. The quantity of a ton or tun, in a ship's freight or bulk, for which tonnage or tunnage was paid to the king. Cowell.

TONODERACH. In old Scotch law. A thief-taker.

TONSURA. Lat. In old English law. A shaving, or polling; the having the crown of the head shaven; tonsure. One of the peculiar badges of a clerk or clergyman.

TONSURE. In old English law. A being shaven; the having the head shaven; a shaven head. 4 Bl. Comm. 367.

TONTINE. In French law. A species of association or partnership formed among persons who are in receipt of perpetual or life annuities, with the agreement that the shares or annuities of those who die shall accrue to the survivors. This plan is said to be thus named from Tonti, an Italian, who invented it in the seventeenth century. The principle is used in some forms of life insurance. Merl. Repert; Cahn v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 208 Ill.App. 317, 322; Gourley v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co., 94 Okl. 46, 220 P. 645, 646.

Under the "Tontine" plan of insurance, no accumulation or earnings are credited to the policy unless it remains in force for the Tontine period of a specified number of years. Thus those who survive the period and keep their policies in force share in the accumulated funds and those who die or permit their policies to lapse during period do not; neither do their beneficiaries participate in such accumulation. Commercial Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Carlson, 104 Utah 41, 137 P.2d 656, 660.

TOOK AND CARRIED AWAY. In criminal pleading. Technical words necessary in an indictment for simple larceny.

TOOL. An instrument of manual operation, that is, an instrument to be used and managed by the hand instead of being moved and controlled by machinery. Lovewell v. Westchester F. Ins. Co., 124 Mass. 420, 26 Am.Rep. 671; Reffitt v. Southern Sheet & Tin Plate Co., 170 Ky. 362, 186 S.W. 155, 157; Sturgis Nat. Bank v. Maryland Casualty Co., 252 Mich. 426, 233 N.W. 367, 369.

Simple Tool

In law of Master and Servant. One whose condition can be seen at a glance, or by slightest inspection. Track wrench used to tighten and loosen nuts on railroad track held "simple tool." Allen Gravel Co. v. Yarbrough, 133 Mass. 652, 98 So. 117, 118; Arkansas Cent. R. Co. v. Goad, 136 Ark. 467, 206 S.W. 901, 902; Swaim v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., Iowa, 170 N.W. 296, 299; Kromer v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 139 Minn. 424, 166 N.W. 1072, 1073; Ronconi v. Northwestern Pac. R. Co., 35 Cal.App. 560, 170 P. 635, 636.

"Simple tool doctrine" is based on the idea that ordinarily an employee has better opportunity than employer to observe defects and guard himself against them and that the employer should not be charged with duty of care or safety of employee with respect to a matter in which the employee is in better position to care for himself. A "tool" is an instrument of manual operation. Tucker v. Holly Hill Lumber Co., 200 S.C. 259, 20 S.E.2d 704, 706.

Tools of Trade, Apparatus of Trade

And like terms under exemption statutes and bankruptcy act cover tools that vary according to the trade, handicraft or art in which they are used. The meaning of the word "tool" dominates the meaning of such terms. Corner v. Powell, Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 88, 91; Lindquist v. Clayton, 54 Utah 79, 179 P. 655, 656; Hooper v. Kennedy, 100 Vt. 314, 137 A. 194, 196; Busse v. Murray Meat & Live Stock Co., 45 Utah 596, 147 P. 626, 628.

TORPEDO DOCTRINE. Attractive nuisance doctrine. Schock v. Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows, 5 Wash.2d 599, 105 P.2d 838, 843.

TORRENS TITLE SYSTEM. A system under which, upon the landowner's application the court may, after appropriate proceedings, direct the issuance of a certificate of title. With exceptions, this certificate is conclusive as to applicant's estate in land. This system is so called, the author being Sir Robert Torrens.

TORT (from Lat. torquere, to twist, tortus, twisted, wrested aside). A private or civil wrong or injury. A wrong independent of contract. 1 Hill, Torts 1. A violation of a duty imposed by general law or otherwise upon all persons occupying the relation to each other which is involved in a given transaction. Coleman v. California Yearly Meeting of Friends Church, 27 Cal.App.2d 579, 81 P.2d 469, 470. There -must always be a violation of some duty owing to plaintiff, and generally such duty must arise by operation of law and not by mere agreement of the parties. Diver v. Miller, Del.Super., 148 A. 291, 293.

Three elements of every tort action are: Existence of legal duty from defendant to plaintiff, breach of duty, and damage as proximate result. City of Mobile v. McClure, 221 Ala. 51, 127 So. 832, 835.

A legal wrong committed upon the person or property independent of contract. It may be either (1) a direct invasion of some legal right of the individual; (2) the infraction of some public duty by which special damage accrues to the individual; (3) the violation of some private obligation by which like damage accrues to the individual. In the former case, no special damage is necessary to entitle the party to recover. In the two latter cases, such damage is necessary. Code Ga. 1882, § 2951 (Civ.Code 1910, § 4403). And see Hayes v. Insurance Co., 125 Ill. 626, 18 N.E. 322, 1 L.R.A. 303; Railway Co. v. Hennegan, 33 Tex. Civ.App. 314, 76 S.W. 453. Churchill v. Howe, 186 Mich. 107, 152 N.W. 989, 991; Strachan Shipping Co. v. Hazlip-Hood Cotton Co., 35 Ga.App. 94, 132 S.E. 454, 459; Keiper v. Anderson, 138 Minn. 392, 165 N.W. 237, 239, I.4.R.A.1918C, 299. A violation of a right in rem which plaintiff has as against all persons with whom he comes in contact or the violation of a right which is created by law and not by any act of parties. Mitchell v. Health Culture Co., 349 Mo. 475, 162 S.W.2d 233, 237.

Maritime Tort

See Maritime.

Personal Tort

One involving or consisting in an injury to the person or to the reputation or feelings, as distinguished from an injury or damage to real or personal property, called a "property tort." Mumford v. Wright, 12 Colo.App. 214, 55 P. 744. Gray v. Blight, C.C.A.Colo., 112 F.2d 696, 699.

Property Tort

See Personal Tort, supra.

Quasi Tort

Though not a recognized term of English law, may be conveniently used in those cases where a man who has not committed a tort is liable as if he had. Thus, a master is liable for wrongful acts done by his servant in the course of his employment. Broom, Corn. Law, 690; Underh. Torts, 29.

Willful Tort

See that title.

TORT-FEASOR. A wrong-doer; one who commits or is guilty of a tort. Gordon v. Lee, 133 Me. 361, 178 A. 353, 355.

Joint Tort•Feasors

To be "joint tort-feasors," the parties must either act together in committing the wrong, or their acts, if independent of each other, must unite in causing a single injury. Young v. Dille, 127 Wash. 398, 220 P. 782, 784; Anderson v. Smith, Tex.Civ.App., 231 S.W. 142, 144; Kirkland v. Ensign-Bickford Co., D.C.Conn., 267 F. 472, 475; Verheyen v. Dewey, 27 Idaho 1, 146 P. 1116, 1119; The Ross Coddington, C.C.A.N.Y., 6 F.2d 191, 192; Anderson v. Smith, Tex.Civ.App., 231 S.W. 142, 144.

TORTIOUS. Wrongful; of the nature of a tort. Formerly certain modes of conveyance (e. g., feoffments, fines, etc.) had the effect of passing not merely the estate of the person making the conveyance, but the whole fee-simple, to the injury of the person really entitled to the fee; and they were hence called "tortious conveyances." Litt. § 611; Co. Litt. 271b, n. 1; 330b, n. 1. But this operation has been taken away. Sweet.

TORTURA LEGUM PESSIMA. The torture or wresting of laws is the worst [kind of torture.] 4 Bacon's Works, 434.

TORTURE. In old criminal law. The question; the infliction of violent bodily pain upon a person, by means of the rack, wheel, or other engine, under judicial sanction and superintendence, in connection with the interrogation or examination of the person, as a means of extorting a confession of guilt, or of compelling him to disclose his accomplices.

TORY. Originally a nickname for the wild Irish in Ulster. Afterwards given to, and adopted by, one of the two great parliamentary parties which have alternately governed Great Britain since the Revolution in 1688. Wharton.

The name was also given, in America, during the struggle of the colonies for independence, to the party of those residents who favored the side of the king and opposed the war.

TOT. In old English practice. A word written by the foreign opposer or other officer opposite to a debt due the king, to denote that it was a good debt; which was hence said to be totted.

TOTA CURIA. L. Lat. In the old reports. The whole court.

TOTAL. Whole, not divided, lacking no part, entire, full, complete, the whole amount. In re Merritt's Estate, Sur., 180 N.Y.S. 877, 879; Jefferson Standard Life Ins. Co. v. King, 165 S.C. 219, 163 S.E. 653, 656; Utter, absolute. Glaze v. Hart, 225 Mo.App. 1205, 36 S.W.2d 684.

TOTAL DEPENDENCY. Within Workmen's Compensation Acts exist where the dependent subsists entirely on the earnings of the workman. Garbutt v. Stoll, 287 Mich. 396, 283 N.W. 624, 626; Burrows v. Industrial Commission, 246 Wis. 152, 16 N.W.2d 434, 435.

TOTAL DISABILITY. See Disability.

TOTAL EVICTION. That which occurs when the possessor is wholly deprived of his rights in the premises.

TOTAL LOSS.

Fire insurance. The complete destruction of the insured property by fire, so that nothing of value remains from it; as distinguished from a partial loss, where the property is damaged, but not entirely destroyed. Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. of Springfield, Mass., v. Shapoff, 179 Ky. 804, 201 S.W. 1116, 1118; Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Strayhorn, Tex.Com.App., 211 S.W. 447, 448, 449; Lowry v. Fidelity-Phcenix Fire Ins. Co., 272 S.W. 79, 80, 219 Mo.App. 121; Roquette v. Farmers Ins. Co., 191 N.W. 772, 774, 49 N.D. 478; Teter v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 82 S.E. 40, 42, 74 W.Va. 344.

Test whether building burned is "total loss" is whether substantial portion is left standing in condition reasonably suitable as basis on which to reconstruct building in like condition as to strength, security, and utility as it was before fire. Commerce Ins. Co. v. Sergi, Tex.Civ.App., 60 S.W.2d 1046.

Marine insurance. The entire destruction or loss, to the insured, of the subject-matter of the policy, by the risks insured against. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Beacham, 128 Md. 414, 97 A. 708, 709, L.R.A.1916F, 1168.

Actual total loss. The total loss of the vessel covered by a policy of insurance, by its real and substantive destruction, by injuries which leave it no longer existing in specie, by its being reduced to a wreck irretrievably beyond repair, or by its being placed beyond the control of the insured and beyond his power of recovery. Distinguished from a constructive total loss, which occurs where the vessel, though injured by the perils insured against, remains in specie and capable of repair or recovery, but at such an expense, or under such other conditions, that the insured may claim the whole amount of the policy upon abandoning the vessel to the underwriters. In such cases the insured is entitled to indemnity as for a total loss. An exception to the rule requiring abandonment is found in cases where the loss occurs in foreign ports or seas, where it is impracticable to repair. In such cases the master may sell the vessel for' the benefit of all concerned, and the insured may claim as for a total loss by accounting to the insurer for the amount realized on the sale.

Constructive total loss. See Actual total loss, supra.

Partial loss. Where an injury results to the vessel from a peril insured against, but where the loss is neither actually nor constructively total. Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 50, 64; Burt v. Insurance Co., 9 Hun (N.Y.) 383; Carr v. Insurance Co., 109 N.Y. 504, 17 N.E. 369; Wallerstein v. Insurance Co., 3 Rob. (N.Y.) 528.

See, also, Fire Insurance, supra.

TOTIDEM VERB'S. Lat. In so many words.

TOTIES QUOTIES. Lat. As often as occasion shall arise.

TOTIS VIRIBUS. Lat. With all one's might or power; with all his might; very strenuously.

TOTTED. A good debt to the crown, i. e., a debt paid to the sheriff, to be by him paid over to the king. Cowell; Mozley & Whitley.

TOTTEN TRUST. See Trust.

TOTUM PRJEFERTUR UNICUIQUE PARTI. 3 Coke, 41. The whole is preferable to any single part.

TOUCH. In insurance law. To stop at a port. If there be liberty granted by the policy to touch, or to touch and stay, at an intermediate port on the passage, the better opinion now is that the insured may trade there, when consistent with the object and the furtherance of the adventure, by breaking bulk, or by discharging and taking in cargo, provided it produces no unnecessary delay, nor enhances nor varies the risk. 3 Kent, Comm. 314.

TOUCH AND STAY. Words frequently introduced in policies of insurance, giving the party insured the right to stop and stay at certain designated points in the course of the voyage. A vessel which has the power to touch and stay at a place in the course of the voyage must confine herself strictly to the terms of the liberty so given; for any attempt to trade at such a port during such a stay, as, by shipping or landing goods, will amount to a species of deviation which will discharge the underwriters, unless the ship have also liberty to trade as well as to touch and stay at such a place. 1 Marsh. Ins. 275.

TOUCHING A DEAD BODY. It was an ancient superstition that the body of a murdered man would bleed freshly when touched by his murderer. Hence, in old criminal law, this was resorted to as a means of ascertaining the guilt or innocence of a person suspected of the murder.

TOUJOURS ET UNCORE PRIST. L. Fr. Always and still ready. This is the name of a plea of tender.

TOUR D'ECHELLE. In French law. An easement consisting of the right to rest ladders upon the adjoining estate, when necessary in order to repair a party-wall or buildings supported by it.

Also the vacant space surrounding a building left unoccupied in order to facilitate its reparation when necessary. Merl. Repert.

TOURIST. One who makes a tour; one who travels from place to place for pleasure or culture. Jones v. State, 64 Ga.App. 376, 13 S.E.2d 462, 465.

TOURN. In old English law. A court of record, having criminal jurisdiction, in each county, held before the sheriff, twice a year, in one place after another, following a certain circuit or rotation.

TOUT. Fr. All; whole; entirely. Tout temps prist, always ready.

TOUT CE QUE LA LOI NE DEFEND PAS EST PERMIS. Everything is permitted which is not forbidden by law.

TOUT TEMPS PRIST. L. Fr. Always ready. The . emphatic words of the old plea of tender; the defendant alleging that he has always been ready, and still is ready, to discharge the debt. 3 Bl. Comm. 303; 2 Salk. 622.

TOUT UN SOUND. L. Fr. All one sound; sounding the same; idem sonans.

TOUTE EXCEPTION NON SURVEILLEE TEND A PRENDRE LA PLACE DU PRINCIPE. Every exception not watched tends to assume the place of the principle.

TOWAGE. The act or service of towing ships and vessels, usually by means of a small steamer called a "tug." That which is given for towing ships in rivers.

The drawing a ship or barge along the water by another ship or boat, fastened to her, or by men or horses, etc., on land. It is also money which is given by bargemen to the owner of ground next a river, where they tow a barge or other vessel. Jacob. And see Ryan v. Hook, 34 Hun (N.Y.) 191; The Kingaloch, 26 Eng. Law & Eq. 597; The Egypt, D.C.Va., 17 F. 359, 370.

TOWAGE SERVICE. In admiralty law. A service rendered to a vessel, by towing, for the mere purpose of expediting her voyage, without reference to any circumstances of danger. It is confined to vessels that have received no injury or damage. The Reward, 1 W. Rob. 177; The Athenian, D.C.Mich., 3 F. 248, 249; The Kennebec, C.C.A.Tex., 231 F. 423, 425; The Mercer, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 981, 984.

TOWARD. The word has been held to mean not simply "to" but to include "about." Hudson v. State, 6 Tex.App. 565, 32 Am.Rep. 593. Also, in a course or line leading to, in the direction of. People v. Kreidler, 180 Mich. 654, 147 N.W. 559, 560; State v. Trent, 122 Or. 444, 259 P. 893, 898.

TOWN,

American Law

A civil and political division of a state, varying in extent and importance, but usually one of the divisions of a county. In the New England states, the town is the political unit, and is a municipal corporation. In some other states, where the county is the unit, the town is merely one of its subdivisions, but possesses some powers of local. self-government. In still other states, such subdivisions of a county are called "townships," and "town" is the name of a village, borough, or smaller city. See Herrman v. Guttenberg, 62 N.J.Law, 605, 43 A. 703; Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N.J.Law, 1; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449, 21 N.E. 274, 4 L.R.A. 65; Guadalupe County v. Poth (Tex.Civ.App.), 163 S.W. 1050, 1051; People v. Adams State Bank, 272 Ill. 277, 111 N.E. 989, 991; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N.E. 778, 781.

English Law

Originally, a vill or tithing; but now a generic term, which comprehends under it the several species of cities, boroughs, and common towns. 1 Bl. Comm. 114.

The word "town" is quite commonly used as a generic term and as including both cities and villages. Village of Ashley v. Ashley Lumber Co., 40 N.D. 515, 169 N.W. 87, 90; Plainfield-Union Water Co. v. Inhabitants of City of Plainfield, 84 N.J.L. 634, 87 A. 448, 450.

TOWN AGENT. Under the prohibitory liquor laws in force in some of the New England states a town agent is a person appointed in each town to purchase intoxicating liquors for the town and having the exclusive right to sell the same for the permitted purposes, medical, mechanical, scientific, etc. He either receives a fixed salary or is permitted to make a small profit on his sales. The stock of liquors belongs to the town, and is bought with its money. See Black, Intox. Liq. §§ 204, 205.

TOWN CLAUSE. In English practice. A cause tried at the sittings for London and Middlesex, 3 Steph. Comm. 517.

TOWN COLLECTOR. One of the officers of a town charged with collecting the taxes assessed for town purposes.

TOWN COMMISSIONER. In some of the states where the town is the political unit the town commissioners constitute a board of administrative officers charged with the general management of the town's business.

TOWN ORDER OR WARRANT. An official direction in writing by the auditing officers of a town, directing the treasurer to pay a sum of money.

TOWN POUND. A place of confinement maintained by a town for estrays.

TOWN PURPOSE. When it is said that taxation by a town, or the expenditure of the town's money, must be for town purposes, it is meant that the purposes must be public with respect to the town; i. e., concern the welfare and advantage of the town as a whole.

TOWN-REEVE. The reeve or chief officer of a town.

TOWN TAX. Such tax as a town may levy for its peculiar expenses; as distinguished from a county or state tax.

TOWN TREASURER. The treasurer of a town which is an organized municipal corporation.

TOWN-CLERK. In those states where the town is the unit for local self-government, the town-clerk is a principal officer who keeps the records, issues calls for town-meetings, and performs generally the duties of a secretary to the political organization. See Seamons v. Fitts, 21 R.I. 236, 42 A. 863.

TOWN-CRIER. An officer in a town whose business it is to make proclamations.

TOWN-HALL. The building maintained by a town for town-meetings and the offices of the municipal authorities.

TOWN-MEETING. Under the municipal organization of the New England states, the town-meeting is a legal assembly of the qualified voters of a town, held at stated intervals or on call, for the purpose of electing town officers, and of discussing and deciding on questions relating to the public business, property, and expenses of the town. See In re Foley, 8 Misc. 57, 28 N.Y.S. 608; Railroad Co. v. Mallory, 101 Ill. 588; Portland Water Co. v. Town of Portland, 97 Conn. 628, 118 A. 84, 86; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N.E. 778, 781.

TOWNSHIP. 1. In surveys of the public land of the United States, a "township" is a division of territory six miles square, containing thirty six sections.

2. In some of the states, this is the name given to the civil and political subdivisions of a county. Town, and Liberty Tp. v. Rock Island Tp., 44 Okl. 398, 144 P. 1025, 1026; People v. Stewart, 281 Ill.

365, 118 N.E. 55, 56; City of Hutchinson v. Reno County, 124 Kan. '149, 257 P. 750, 751. Rich v. Industrial Commission, 80 Utah 511, 15 P.2d 641, 645.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE. One of a board of officers to whom, in some states, affairs of a township are intrusted.

TOWNSITE. Portion of public domain segregated by proper authority and procedure as site for a town. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Keating, 191 Minn. 520, 254 N.W. 813.

TOXICAL. Poisonous; containing poison.

TOXICANT. A poison; a toxic agent; any substance capable of producing toxication or poisoning.

TOXICATE. To poison. Not used to describe the act of one who administers a poison, but the action of the drug or poison itself.

Auto-Intoxication

Self-empoisonment from the absorption of the toxic products of internal metabolism, e. g., ptomaine poisoning.

Intoxication

The state of being poisoned; the condition produced by the administration or introduction into the human system of a poison. This term is popularly used as equivalent to "drunkenness," which, however, is more accurately described as "alcoholic intoxication."

TOXICOLOGY. The science of poisons; that department of medical science which treats of poisons, their effect, their recognition, their antidotes, and generally of the diagnosis and therapeutics of poisoning.

TOXIN. In its widest sense, this term may denote any poison or toxicant; but as used in pathology and medical jurisprudence it signifies, in general, any diffusible alkaloidal substance (as, the ptomaines, abrin, brucin, or serpent venoms), and in particular the poisonous products of pathogenic (disease-producing) bacteria.

Anti-Toxin

A product of pathogenic bacteria which, in sufficient quantities, will neutralize the toxin or poisonous product of the same bacteria. In therapeutics, a preventive remedy (administered by inoculation) against the effect of certain kinds of toxins, venoms, and disease-germs, obtained from the blood of an animal which has previously been treated with repeated minute injections of the particular poison or germ to be neutralized.

Toxicomania

An excessive addiction to the use of toxic or poisonous drugs or other substances; a form. of mania or affective insanity characterized by an irresistible impulse to indulgence in opium, cocaine, chloral, alcohol, etc.

Woodfield v. Colzey, 47 Ga. 124; People v. Warden of City Prison, 144 N.Y. 529, 39 N.E. 686, 27 L.R.A. 718; Detroit Taxicab & Transfer Co. v. Callahan, C.C.A.Mich., 1 F.2d 911, 912. A line of work or a form of occupation pursued as a business or calling, as for a livelihood or for profit; anything practiced as a means of getting a living, money, booty, etc.; mercantile or commercial business in general, or the buying and selling, or exchanging, of commodities, either by wholesale or retail within a country or between countries. Helvering v. Wilmington Trust Co., C.C.A.3, 124 F.2d 156, 158.

All wholesale trade, all buying in order to sell again by wholesale, may be reduced to three sorts : The home trade, the foreign trade of consumption, and the carrying trade. 2 Smith, Wealth Nat. b. 2, c. 5.

TRADE ACCEPTANCE. A draft or bill of exchange drawn by the seller on the purchaser of goods sold and accepted by such purchaser. Luikart v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., 129 Neb. 771, 263 N.W. 124, 129.

TRADE AND COMMERCE. The words "trade" and "commerce," when used in juxtaposition impart to each other enlarged signification, so as to include practically every business occupation carried on for subsistence or profit, and into which the elements of bargain and sale, barter, exchange, or traffic, enter. State v. Tagami, 234 P. 102, 105, 195 Cal. 522.

TRADE AGREEMENT. See Collective Labor Agreement.

TRADE COMMISSION, FEDERAL. An act of congress was passed September 26, 1914, creating a Federal Trade Commission, composed of five commissioners appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The act provides: "That unfair methods of competition in commerce are hereby declared unlawful," and the commission is "directed to prevent persons, partnerships or corporations, except banks, and common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce."

TRADE DISPUTE. Within Unemployment Insurance Act barring benefit payments to persons who leave work because of trade dispute, the term includes controversy over working conditions, American-Hawaiian S. S. Co. v. California Employment Commission, 24 Cal.2d 716, 151 P.2d 213, 215; unwillingness to cross picket lines, Mattson Terminals v. California Employment Commission, 24 Ca1.2d 695, 151 P.2d 202, 206.

TRADE DOLLAR. A silver coin of the United States, of the weight of four hundred and twenty grains, troy. Rev.St.U.S. § 3513.

TRADE FIXTURES. See Fixtures.

TRADE-MARK. Generally speaking, a distinctive mark of authenticity, through which the products of particular manufacturers or the vendible commodities of particular merchants may be distinguished from those of others. It may consist in any symbol or in any form of words, but, as its office is to point out distinctively the origin or ownership of the articles to which it is affixed, it follows that no sign or form of words can be appropriated as a valid trade-mark which, from the nature of the fact conveyed by its primary meaning, others may employ with equal truth and with equal right for the same purpose. Jantzen Knitting Mills v. West Coast Knitting Mills, Cust. & Pat.App., 46 F.2d 182, 184.

A distinctive mark, motto, device, or emblem, which a manufacturer stamps, prints, or otherwise affixes to the goods he produces, so that they may be identified in the market, and their origin be vouched for. Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U.S. 87, 25 L.Ed. 550; Buffalo Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Batavia Rubber Co., 90 Misc.Rep. 418, 153 N.Y.S. 779, 783; Iowa Auto Market v. Auto Market & Exchange, 197 Iowa, 420, 197 N.W. 321, 322; Tillman & Bend-el v. California Packing Corporation, C.C.A.Cal., 63 F.2d 498, 503.

"Trade-mark" is created chiefly by use, which must be general, continuous, and exclusive and applied to goods and used in trade under such circumstances of publicity and length of use as to show intention to adopt mark for specific goods. Continental Corporation v. National Union Radio Corporation, C.C.A.I11., 67 F.2d 938, 942.

A "trade-mark" is merely a protection for good will and is not the subject of property rights except in connection with an existing business. 15 U.S.C.A. § 90. Lazar v. Cecelia Co., D.C.N.Y., 30 F.Supp. 769, 771.

Generally speaking, a "trade-mark" is applicable to a vendible commodity, to which it is affixed, and a "trade-name" to a business and its good will. American Steel Foundries v. Robertson, 46 S.Ct. 160, 162, 269 U.S. 372, 70 L.Ed. 317.

TRADE-MARKS REGISTRATION ACT, 1875. This is the statute 38 & 39 Vict. c. 91, amended by the acts of 1876 and 1877. It provides for the establishment of a register of trade-marks under the superintendence of the commissioners of patents, and for the registration of trade-marks as belonging to particular classes of goods, and for their assignment in connection with the good-will of the business in which they are used. Sweet.

TRADE-NAME. A name used in trade to designate a particular business of certain individuals considered somewhat as an entity, or the place at which a business is located, or of a class of goods, but which is not a technical trade-mark either because not applied or affixed to goods sent into the market or because not capable of exclusive appropriation by anyone as a trade-mark. "Trade-names" may, or may not, be exclusive. Non-exclusive "trade-names" are names that are publici juris in their primary sense, but which in a secondary sense have come to be understood as indicating the goods or business of a particular trader. "Trade-names" are acquired by adoption and user and belong to one who first used them and gave them a value. St. Louis Independent Packing Co. v. Houston, C.C.A.Mo., 215 F. 553, 560; Hartzler v. Goshen Churn & Ladder Co., 55 Ind.App. 455, 104 N.E. 34, 37. See, also, Trade-mark. For "Fanciful Trade-Name," see that title.

A "trade-name" is descriptive of the manufacturer or dealer for protection in trade, to avoid confusion in business, and to secure the advantages of a good reputatfon and is applied more to the good will of a business than as an identification of a product. Mary Muffet, Inc., v. Smelansky, Mo.App., 158 S.W.2d 168, 170.

TRADE-SECRET. A plan or process, tool, mechanism, or compound known only to its owner and those of his employees to whom it is necessary to confide it. Victor Chemical Works v. Iliff, 299 Ill. 532; 132 N.E. 806, 811; Progress Laundry Co. v. Hamilton, 208 Ky. 348, 270 S.W. 834, 835. A secret formula or process not patented, but known only to certain individuals using it in compounding some article of trade having a commercial value. Glucol Mfg. Co. v. Shulist, 239 Mich. 70, 214 N.W. 152, 153; U. S. ex rel. Norwegian Nitrogen Products Co. v. U. S. Tariff Commission, 6 F.2d 491, 495, 55 App.D.C. 366.

TRADE-UNION. A combination of workmen of the same trade or of several allied trades, for the purpose of securing by united action the most favorable conditions regarding wages, hours of labor, etc., for its members. People v. Distributors Division, Smoked Fish Workers Union, Local No. 20377, Sup., 7 N.Y.S.2d 185, 187; Keith Theatre v. Vachon, 134 Me. 392, 187 A. 692, 694.

TRADE-UNION ACT. The statute 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, passed in 1871, for the purpose of giving legal recognition to trade unions, is known as the "trade-union act," or "trade-union funds protection act." It provides that the members of a trade union shall not be prosecuted for conspiracy merely by reason that the rules of such union are in restraint of trade; and that the agreements of trade unions shall not on that account be void or voidable. Provisions are also made with reference to the registration and registered offices of trade unions, and other purposes connected therewith. Mozley & Whitley.

TRADE USAGE. The usage or customs commonly observed by persons conversant in, or connected with, a particular trade.

TRADER. One who makes it his business to buy merchandise, goods, or chattels to sell the same at a profit. People v. Terkanian, 27 Cal.App.2d 460, 81 P.2d 251, 253. One who sells goods substantially in the form in which they are bought; one who has not converted them into another form of property by his skill and labor. Albuquerque Lumber Co. v. Bureau of Revenue of New Mexico, 42 N.M. 58, 75 P.2d 334, 336.

TRADESMAN. In England, a shopkeeper; in the United States, a mechanic or artificer of any kind, whose livelihood depends on the labor of his hands; Richie v. McCauley, 4 Pa. 472.

TRADICION. Span. In Spanish law. Delivery. White. New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 9.

TRADING. Engaging in trade, (q. v.;) pursuing the business or occupation of trade or of a trader.

TRADING CORPORATION. See Corporation.

TRADING PARTNERSHIP. A firm the nature of whose business, according to the usual modes of conducting it, imports the necessity of buying and selling. Dowling v. National Exch. Bank, 145 U. S. 512, 12 S.Ct. 928, 36 L.Ed. 795; Schumacher v. Sumner Telephone Co., 161 Iowa, 326, 142 N.W. 1034, 1036, Ann.Cas. 1916A, 201; Maasdam v. Blokland, 123 Or. 128, 261 P. 66, 68.

A traveling salesman Is not employed or authorized to fix prices. He cannot pass upon the credit or standing of customers. He does not collect accounts. He is not responsible for the quality, condition or delivery of the goods. He makes no personal contracts and he has no other interest in the sale than his compensation for those which are approved by his employer. The territory assigned to him may be confined to a single city or state, or it may cover cities or states. Commonly, the employer pays the salesman's expenses, but sometimes, especially if he works for a commission, he pays his own expenses. Sometimes he is allotted a certain territory and he receives a commission upon all sales which are sent in from that territory. In some cases the employer may direct the routes he is to travel, and in other cases the salesman chooses his own routes. Sometimes the salesman sends the orders directly to his employer and sometimes the customers themselves send in the orders to the employer. He often sells after exhibiting samples. In re Herbert Candy Co., D.C.Pa., 43 F.Supp. 588, 591.

TRAVELING WAYS. As applied to coal mining, places for the passage of workmen to and from different parts of the mine. Ricardo v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 100 Kan. 95, 163 P. 641, 643.

TRAVERSE. In the language of pleading, a traverse signifies a denial. Thus, where a defendant denies any material allegation of fact in the plaintiff's declaration, he is said to traverse it, and the plea itself is thence frequently termed a "traverse." Brown.

Criminal Practice

To put off or delay the trial of an indictment till a succeeding term. More properly, to deny or take issue upon an indictment. 4 Bl.Comm. 351.

General

Common traverse. A simple and direct denial of the material allegations of the opposite pleading, concluding to the country, and without inducement or absque hoc.

General traverse. One preceded by a general inducement, and denying in general terms all that is last before alleged on the opposite side, instead of pursuing the words of the allegations which it denies. Gould.P1. vii. 5.

Special traverse. A peculiar form of traverse or denial, the design of which, as distinguished from a common traverse, is to explain or qualify the denial, instead of putting it in the direct and absolute form. It consists of an affirmative and a negative part, the first setting forth the new affirmative matter tending to explain or qualify the denial, and technically called the "inducement," and the latter constituting the direct denial itself, and technically called the "absque hoc." Steph.Pl. 169-180; Allen v. Stevens, 29 N.J.L. 513., Chambers v. Hunt, 18 N.J.L. 352; People v. Pullman's Car Co., 175 Ill. 125, 51 N.E. 664, 64 L.R.A. 366.

Traverse jury. A petit jury; a trial jury; a jury impaneled to try an action or prosecution, as distinguished from a grand jury. State v. James, 96 N.J.L. 132, 114 A. 553, 555, 16 A.L.R. 1141; De Krasner v. State, 54 Ga.App. 41, 187 S.E. 402, 405.

Traverse of indictment or presentment. The taking issue upon and contradicting or denying some chief point of it. Jacob.

Traverse of office. The proving that an inquisition made of lands or goods by the escheator is defective and untruly made. Tomlins. It is the challenging, by a subject, of an inquest of office, as being defective and untruly made. Mozley & Whitley.

Traverse upon a traverse. One growing out of the same point or subject-matter as is embraced in a preceding traverse on the other side.

TRAVERSER. In pleading. One who traverses or denies. A prisoner or party indicted; so called from his traversing the indictment.

TRAVERSING NOTE. This is a pleading in chancery, and consists of a denial put in by the plaintiff on behalf of the defendant, generally denying all the statements in the plaintiff's bill. The effect of it is to put the plaintiff upon proof of the whole contents of his bill, and is only resorted to for the purpose of saving time, and in a case where the plaintiff can safely dispense with an answer. A copy of the note must be served on the defendant. Brown.

TREACHER, TRECHETOUR, or TREACHOUR. A traitor.

TREAD-MILL, or TREAD-WHEEL. An instrument of prison discipline, being a wheel or cylinder with an horizontal axis, having steps attached to it, up which the prisoners walk, and thus put the axis in motion. The men hold on by a fixed rail, and, as their weight presses down the step upon which they tread, they ascend the next step, and thus drive the wheel. Enc. Brit.

TREASON. The offense of attempting by overt acts to overthrow the government of the state to which the offender owes allegiance; or of betraying the state into the hands of a foreign power. Webster.

"Treason" consists of two elements: Adherence to the enemy, and rendering him aid and comfort. Cramer v. U. S., U.S.N.Y., 65 S.Ct. 918, 932, 325 U.S. 1, 89 L.Ed. 1441.

In England, treason is an offense particularly directed against the person of the sovereign, and consists (1) in compassing or imagining the death of the king or queen, or their eldest son and heir; (2) in violating the king's companion, or the king's eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the king's eldest son and heir; (3) in levying war against the king in his realm; (4) in adhering to the king's enemies in his realm, giving to them aid and comfort in the realm or elsewhere, and (5) slaying the chancellor, treasurer, or the king's justices of the one bench or the other, justices in eyre, or justices of assize, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine, being in their places doing their offices. 4 Steph.Comm. 185-193; 4 Bl. Comm. 76-84.

Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. U.S.Const. art. 3, § 3, cl. 1. See Young v. U. S., 97 U.S. 62, 24 L.Ed. 992; U. S. v. Bollman, 1 Cranch, C.C. 373, Fed.Cas.No.14,622; U. S. v. Pryor, 3 Wash.C.C. 234, Fed.Cas.No.16,096.

Constructive Treason

Treason imputed to a person by law from his conduct or course of actions, though his deeds taken severally do not amount to actual treason. This doctrine is not known in the United States.

High Treason

In English law. Treason against the king or sovereign, as distinguished from petit or petty treason, which might formerly be committed against a subject. 4 Bl.Comm. 74, 75; 4 Steph. Comm. 183, 184, note.

Misprision of Treason

See Misprision.

Petit Treason

In English law. The crime committed by a wife in killing her husband, or a servant his lord or master, or an ecclesiastic his lord or ordinary. 4 Bl.Comm. 75.

Treason-felony

Under the English statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, passed in 1848, is the offense of compassing, devising, etc., to depose her majesty from the crown; or to levy war in order to intimidate either house of parliament, etc., or to stir up foreigners by any printing or writing to invade the kingdom. This offense is punishable with penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than five years, etc., under statutes 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, § 3; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, § 2; 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, § 2. By the statute first above mentioned, the government is enabled to treat as felony many offenses which must formerly have been treated as high treason. Mozley & Whitley.

TREASONABLE. Having the nature or guilt of treason.

TREASURE. A treasure is a thing hidden or buried in the earth, on which no one can prove his property, and which is discovered by chance. Civil Code La. art. 3423, par. 2. See Treasure-Trove.

TREASURE-TROVE. Literally, treasure found. Money or coin, gold, silver, plate or bullion found hidden in the earth or other private place, the owner thereof being unknown. 1 Bl.Comm. 295. Called in Latin "thesaurus inventus;" and in Saxon "fynderinga." Huthmacher v. Harris, 38 Pa. 499, 80 Am.Dec. 502; Vickery v. Hardin, 77 Ind.App. 558, 133 N.E. 922, 923.

Finder of "treasure trove," is entitled thereto as against owner of land where "treasure trove" is found and all the world save the true owner, in absence of statute. Groover v. Tippins, 51 Ga.App. 47, 179 S.E. 634, 635.

TREASURER. An officer of a public or private corporation, company, or government, charged with the receipt, custody, and disbursement of its moneys or funds. See State v. Eames, 39 La. Ann. 986, 3 So. 93; In re Millward-Cliff Cracker Co.'s Estate, 161 Pa. 167, 28 A. 1072; Jones v. Marrs, 114 Tex. 62, 263 S.W. 570, 574.

TREASURER, LORD HIGH. Formerly the chief treasurer of England, who had charge of the moneys in the exchequer, the chancellor of the exchequer being under him. He appointed all revenue officers and escheaters, and leased crown lands. The office is obsolete, and his duties are now performed by the lords commissioners of the treasury. Stim. Gloss.

TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES. An officer in the treasury department appointed by the president by and with the advice and consent of the senate. His principal duties are—to receive and keep the moneys of the United States, and disburse the same upon warrants drawn by the secretary of the treasury, countersigned by either comptroller and recorded by the register; to take receipts for all moneys paid by him; to render his account to the first comptroller quarterly, or oftener if required, and transmit a copy thereof, when settled, to the secretary of the treasury; to lay before each house, on the third day of every session of congress, fair and accurate copies of all accounts by him from time to time rendered to and settled with the first comptroller, and a true and perfect account of the state of the treasury; to submit at all times to the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller, or either of them, the inspection of the moneys in his hands. (31 U.S.C.A. § 141 et seq.).

The office of the Treasurer of the United States and certain other offices and agencies and their functions were consolidated into the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department, the function of said office to be administered by the Treasurer of the United States by Reorg. Plan No. III, § 1(a), eff. June 30, 1940, set out in note under 5 U.S. C.A. § 133t.

TREASURER'S REMEMBRANCER. In English law. He whose charge was to put the lord treasurer and the rest of the judges of the exchequer in remembrance of such things as were called on and dealt in for the sovereign's behoof. There is still one in Scotland. Wharton, TREASURY. A place or building in which stores of wealth are reposited; particularly, a place where the public revenues are deposited and kept, and where money is disbursed to defray the expenses of government. Webster.

That department of government which is charged with the receipt, custody, and disbursement (pursuant to appropriations) of the public revenues or funds.

TREASURY, FIRST LORD OF. A high office of state in Great Britain, usually held by the Prime Minister.

TREASURY BENCH. In the English house of commons, the first row of seats on the right hand of the speaker is so called, because occupied by the first lord of the treasury or principal minister of the crown. Brown.

TREASURY CHEST FUND. A fund, in England, originating in the unusual balances of certain grants of public money, which is used for banking and loan purposes by the commissioners of the treasury. Wharton.

TREASURY NOTE. A note or bill issued by the treasury department by the authority of the United States government, and circulating as money. See Brown v. State, 120 Ala. 342, 25 So. 182.

TREASURY SECURITIES. Such as have been lawfully issued and thereafter have been bought by corporation for a consideration out of corporate funds or otherwise acquired from owners, and not retired but placed as an asset of the corporation in its treasury for future use as such. Miners Nat. Bank of Pottsville v. Frackville Sewerage Co., 157 Pa.Super. 167, 42 A.2d 177, 179.

TREASURY STOCK. Ordinarily stock which has been issued as fully paid to stockholders and subsequently acquired by the corporation to be used by it in furtherance of its corporate purposes, and stock which is merely to be held as unsubscribed for and unissued is not usually regarded as "treasury stock". In re Public Service Holding Corporation, Del., 24 A.2d 584, 586.

TREATMENT. A broad term covering all the steps taken to effect a cure of an injury or disease; the word including examination and diagnosis as well as application of remedies. Kirschner v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., 157 Misc. 635, 284 N.Y.S. 506, 510; Hester v. Ford, 221 Ala. 592, 130 So. 203, 206.

TREATY.

International Law

A compact made between two or more independent nations with a view to the public welfare. Louis Wolf & Co. v. United States, Cust. & Pat.App., 107 F.2d 819, 827; United States v. Belmont, N.Y., 57 S.Ct. 758, 761, 301 U.S. 324, 81 L. Ed. 1134.

An agreement, league, or contract between two or more nations or sovereigns, formally signed by commissioners properly authorized, and solemnly ratified by the several sovereigns or the supreme power of each state. Edye v. Robertson, 5 S.Ct. 247, 112 U.S. 580, 28 L.Ed. 798; Ex parte Ortiz, C.C.Minn., 100 F. 962; Charlton v. Kelly, 33 S.Ct. 945, 954, 29 S.Ct. 447, 57 L.Ed. 1274, 46 L.R.A., N.S., 397.

A "treaty" is not only a law but also a contract between two nations and must, if possible, be so construed as to give full force and effect to all its parts. United States v. Reid, C.C.A.Or., 73 F.2d 153, 155.

Personal treaties relate exclusively to the persons of the contracting sovereigns, such as family alliances, and treaties guaranteeing the throne to a particular sovereign and his family. As they relate to the persons, they expire of course on the death of the sovereign or the extinction of his family. With the advent of constitutional government in Europe these treaties have lost their importance. Real treaties relate solely to the subject-matters of the convention, independently of the persons of the contracting parties, and continue to bind the state, although there may be changes in its constitution or in the persons of its rulers. Boyd's Wheat. Int. Law § 29.

Private Law

The discussion of terms which immediately precedes the conclusion of a contract or other transaction. A warranty on the sale of goods, to be valid, must be made during the "treaty" preceding the sale. Chit. Cont. 419; Sweet.

TREATY OF PEACE. An agreement or contract made by belligerent powers, in which they agree to lay down their arms, and by which they stipulate the conditions of peace and regulate the manner in which it is to be restored and supported. Vattel, b. 4, c. 2, § 9.

TREBELLANIC PORTION. In consequence of this article, the trebellanic portion of the civil law—that is to say, the portion of the property of the testator which the instituted heir had a right to detain when he was charged with a fidei commissa or fiduciary bequest—is no longer a part of our law. Civ.Code La. art. 1520, par. 3.

TREBLE COSTS. See Costs.

TREBLE DAMAGES. In practice. Damages given by statute in certain cases, consisting of the single damages found by the jury, actually tripled in amount. The usual practice has been for the jury to find the single amount of the damages, and for the court, on motion, to order that amount to be trebled. 2 Tidd, Pr. 893, 894.

TREBUCKET. A tumbrel, castigatory, or cucking stool. See James v. Comm., 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 227.

TREE. A woody plant, the branches of which spring from, and are supported upon, a trunk or body. Nettles v. Lichtman, 228 Ala. 52, 152 So. 450, 452, 91 A.L.R. 1455.

TREET. In old English law. Fine wheat.

TREMAGIUM, TREMESIUM. In old records. The season or time of sowing summer corn, being about March, the third month, to which the word may allude. Cowell.

TRES FACIUNT COLLEGIUM. Three make a corporation; three members are requisite to constitute a corporation. Dig. 50, 16, 8; 1 Bl.Comm. 469.

TRESAEL. L. Fr. A great-great-grandfather. Britt. c. 119. Otherwise written "tresaiel," and "tresayle." 3 Bl.Comm. 186; Litt. § 20.

TRESAYLE. An abolished writ sued on ouster by abatement, on the death of the grandfather's grandfather.

TRESPASS. Doing of unlawful act or of lawful act in unlawful manner to injury of another's person or property. Waco Cotton Oil Mill of Waco v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 103 S.W.2d 1071, 1072. An unlawful act committed with violence, actual or implied, causing injury to the person, property, or relative rights of another; an injury or misfeasance to the person, property, or rights of another, done with force and violence, either actual or implied in law. Grunson v. State, 89 Ind. 536, 46 Am.Rep. 178; Southern Ry. Co. v. Harden, 101 Ga. 263, 28 S.E. 847; Brown v. Walker, 188 N.C. 52, 123 S.E. 633, 636. It comprehends not only forcible wrongs, but also acts the consequences of which make them tortious. Mawson v. Vess Beverage Co., Mo.App., 173 S.W.2d 606, 612, 613, 614.

Trespass, in its most comprehensive sense, signifies any transgression or offense against the law of nature, of society, or of the country in which we live; and this, whether It relates to a man's person or to his property. In its more limited and ordinary sense, it signifies an iniury committed with violence, and this violence may be either actual or implied; and the law will imply violence tnough none is actually used, when the injury is of a direct and immediate kind, and committed on the person or tangible and corporeal property of the plaintiff. Of actual violence, an assault and battery is an instance; of implied, a peaceable but wrongful entry upon a person's land. Brown.

In practice a form of action, at the common law, which lies for redress in the shape of money damages for any unlawful injury done to the plaintiff, in respect either to his person, property, or rights, by the immediate force and violence of the defendant.

Continuing trespass. One which is in its nature a permanent invasion of the rights of another; as, where a person builds on his own land so that a part of the building overhangs his neighbor's land. H. H. Hitt Lumber Co. v. Cullman Property Co., 189 Ala. 13, 66 So. 720, 721.

Joint trespass. Where two or more persons unite in committing it, or where some actually commit the tort, the others command, encourage or direct it. Stephens v. Schadler, 182 Ky. 833, 207 S.W. 704.

Permanent trespass. One which consists of a series of acts, done on successive days, which are of the same nature, and are renewed or continued from day to day, so that, in the aggregate, they make up one indivisible wrong. 3 Bl.Comm. 212.

Trespass de bonis asportatis. (Trespass for goods carried away.) In practice. The technical name of that species of action of trespass for injuries to personal property which lies where the injury consists in carrying away the goods or property. See 3 Bl.Comm. 150, 151.

Trespass for mesne profits. A form of action supplemental to an action of ejectment, brought against the tenant in possession to recover the profits which he has wrongfully received during the time of his occupation. 3 Bl.Comm. 205.

Trespass on the case. The form of action, at common law, adapted to the recovery of damages for some injury resulting to a party from the wrongful act of another, unaccompanied by direct or immediate force, or which is the indirect or secondary consequence of defendant's act. Commonly called, by abbreviation, "Case." Munal v. Brown, C.C.Colo., 70 F. 968; Nolan v. Railroad Co., 70 Conn. 159, 39 A. 115, 43 L.R.A. 305; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Clay County, 221 Iowa 966, 267 N.W. 79, 80.

Trespass quare clausum fregit. "Trespass wherefore he broke the close." The common-law action for damages for an unlawful entry or trespass upon the plaintiff's land. In the Latin form of the writ, the defendant was called upon to show why he broke the plaintiff's close; e., the real or imaginary structure inclosing the land, whence the name. It is commonly abbreviated to *"tres-*pass qu. el. fr." See Kimball v. Hilton, 92 Me. 214, 42 A. 394. See, also, Trespass to try title, infra.

Trespass to try title. The name of the action used in several of the states for the recovery of the possession of real property, with damages for any trespass committed upon the same by the defendant.

A procedure by which rival claims to title or right to possession of land may be adjudicated, and as an incident partition may also be had when the controversy concerning title or right to possession is settled. Tide Water Oil Co. v. Bean, Tex.Civ.App., 148 S.W.2d 184, 187, 188.

It is different from "trespass quare clausum fregit," in that title must be proved. Bethea v. Home Furniture Co., 185 S.C. 271, 194 S.E. 10, 11.

Trespass vi et armis. Trespass with force and arms. The common-law action for damages for any injury committed by the defendant with direct and immediate force or violence against the plaintiff or his property. See Mawson v. Vess Beverage Co., Mo.App., 173 S.W.2d 606, 613.

TRESPASSER. One who has committed trespass.

Joint Trespassers

Two or more who unite in committing a trespass. Kansas City v. File, 60 Kan. 157, 55 P. 877; Bonte v. Postel, 109 Ky. 64, 58 S.W. 536, 51 L.R.A. 187.

Trespasser Ab Initio

Trespasser from the beginning. A term applied to a tort-feasor whose acts relate back so as to make a previous act, at the time innocent, unlawful; as if he enter peaceably, and subsequently commit a breach of the peace, his entry is considered a trespass. Stim. Gloss. See Wright v. Marvin, 59 Vt. 437, 9 A. 601.

TRESTORNARE. In old English law. To turn aside; to divert a stream from its course. Bract. fols. 115, 234b. To turn or alter the course of a road. Cowell.

TRESVIRI. Lat. In Roman law. Officers who had the charge of prisons, and the execution of condemned criminals. Calvin.

TRET. An allowance made for the water or dust that may be mixed with any commodity. It differs from tare, (q. v.).

TRETHINGA. In old English law. A trithing; the court of a trithing.

TREYT. Withdrawn, as a juror. Written also treat. Cowell.

TRIA CAPITA, in Roman law, were civitas, libertas, and familia; i. e., citizenship, freedom, and family rights.

TRIAL. A judicial examination, in accordance with law of the land, of a cause, either civil or criminal, of the issues between the parties, whether of law or fact, before a court that has jurisdiction over it. People v. Vitale, 364 Ill. 589, 5 N.E. 2d 474, 475. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Muse, 109 Tex. 352, 207 S.W. 897, 899, 4 A.L.R. 613; State v. Dubray, 121 Kan. 886, 250 P. 316, 319; Photo Cines Co. v. American Film Mfg. Co., 190 Ill.App. 124, 128. For purpose of determining such issue. City of Pasadena v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 212 Cal. 309, 298 P. 968, 970; State ex rel. Stokes v. Second Judicial Dist. Court, in and for Washoe County, 55 Nev. 115, 127 P.2d 534.

It includes all proceedings from time when issue Is joined, or, more usually, when parties are called to try their case in court, to time of its final determination. Molen v. Denning & Clark Livestock Co., 56 Idaho 57, 50 P.2d 9, 11.

And in its strict definition, the word "trial" in criminal procedure means the proceedings in open court after the pleadings are finished and the prosecution is otherwise ready, down to and including the rendition of the verdict. Thomas v. Mills, 117 Ohio St. 114, 157 N.E. 488, 489, 54 A. L.R. 1220.

New Trial

A re-examination of an issue of fact in the same court after a trial and decision by a jury or court or by referees. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 656. A re-examination of the issue in the same court, before another jury, after a verdict has been given. Pen.Code Cal. § 1179. A re-examination in the same court of an issue of fact, or some part or portions thereof, after the verdict by a jury, report of a referee, or a decision by the court. Rev. Code Iowa 1880, § 2837 (Code 1931, § 11549). And see Oxford v. State, 80 Okl. 103, 194 P. 101; Warner v. Goding, 91 Fla. 260, 107 So. 406, 408.

New Trial Paper

In English practice. A paper containing a list of causes in which rules nisi have been obtained for a new trial, or for entering a verdict in place of a nonsuit, or for entering judgment non obstante veredicto, or for otherwise varying or setting aside proceedings which have taken place at nisi pri^{g}s. These are called on for argument in the order in which they stand in the paper, on days appointed by the judges for the purpose. Brown.

Public Trial

A trial held in public, in the presence of the public, or in a place accessible and open to the attendance of the public at large, or of persons who may properly be admitted. "The requirement of a public trial is for the benefit of the accused; that the public may see, he is fairly dealt with and not unjustly condemned, and that the presence of interested spectators may keep his triers keenly alive to a sense of their responsibility and to the importance of their functions; and the requirement is fairly observed if, without partiality or favoritism, a reasonable proportion of the public is suffered to attend, notwithstanding that those persons whose presence could be of no service to the accused, and who would only be drawn thither by a prurient curiosity, are excluded altogether." Cooley, Const.Lim. *312. And see People v. Hall, 64 N.Y.S. 433, 51 App.Div. 57; Commonwealth v. Trinkle, 124 A. 191, 192, 279 Pa. 564; People v. Greeson, 203 N.W. 141, 149, 230 Mich. 124.

Trial Amendment

Pleading that a litigant files during progress of actual trial of case, office of which is to meet some situation that is developed by evidence. Texas Electric Service Co. v. Kinkead, Tex.Civ. App., 84 S.W.2d 567, 570.

Trial at Bar

A species of trial now seldom resorted to, excepting in cases where the matter in dispute is one of great importance and difficulty. It takes place before all the judges at the bar of the court in which the action is brought. Brown. See 2 Tidd, Pr. 747; Steph.Pl. 84.

Trial at Nisi Prius

In practice. The ordinary kind of trial which takes place at the sittings, assizes, or circuit, before a single judge. 2 Tidd, Pr. 751, 819.

Trial by Certificate

A form of trial allowed in cases where the evidence of the person certifying was the only proper criterion of the point in dispute. Under such circumstances, the issue might be determined by the certificate alone, because, if sent to a jury, it would be conclusive upon them, and therefore their intervention was unnecessary. Tomlins.

Trial by Fire

See Ordeal.

Trial by Grand Assize

A peculiar mode of trial allowed in writs of right. See Assize; Grand Assize.

Trial by Inspection or Examination

A form of trial in which the judges of the court, upon the testimony of their own senses, decide the point in dispute.

Trial by Jury

A trial in which the issues of fact are to be determined by the verdict of a jury of twelve men, duly selected, impaneled, and sworn. The terms "jury" and "trial by jury" were used at the adoption of the constitution, and always, it is believed, before that time, and almost always since, in a single sense. A jury for the trial of a cause was a body of twelve men, described as upright, well-qualified, and lawful men, disinterested and impartial, not of kin nor personal dependents of either of the parties, having their homes within the jurisdictional limits of the court, drawn and selected by officers free from all bias in favor of or against either party, duly impaneled under the direction of a competent court, sworn to render a true verdict according to the law and the evidence given them, who, after hearing the parties and their evidence, and receiving the instructions of the court relative to the law involved in the trial, and deliberating, when necessary, apart from all extraneous influences, must return their unanimous verdict upon the issue submitted to them. State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 60. And see Gunn v. Union R. Co., 23 R.I. 289, 49 A. 999; State v. Harney, 168 Mo. 167, 67 S.W. 620, 57 L.R.A. 846; Branham v. Commonwealth, 209 Ky. 734, 273 S.W. 489, 490; Davis v. Central States Fire Ins. Co., 121 Kan. 69, 245 P. 1062, 1063; N. Wagman & Co. v. Schafer Motor Freight Service, 167 Misc. 681, 4 N.Y.S.2d 526, 529.

In a federal court a trial by jury as understood and applied at common law and includes all the essential elements as they were recognized in this country and England when the constitution was adopted, including a jury of 12 men, neither more nor less. U.S.C.A.Const. art. 3, § 2, cl. 3; Amend. 6. Coates v. Lawrence, D.C.Ga., 46 F.Supp. 414, 423.

The Seventh Amendment to Federal Constitution declaring the right of "trial by jury" applies only to suits at common law. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 7. Ransom v. Staso Milling Co., D.C.Vt., 2 F.R.D. 128, 130, 131.

A right to a "trial by jury" when given by a constitution means a trial by a jury of 12, but where the right to a jury trial is not given by the constitution, the legislature may fix the number of jurors at less than 12. Doyle v.

Police Court of City of Niagara Falls, 177 Misc. 359, 30 N. Y.S.2d 324, 325. And is right to a jury trial in such cases as it existed at time of adoption of constitution. Blum v. Fresh Grown Preserve Corporation, N.Y., 292 N.Y. 241, 54 N.E.2d 809, 810.

Trial by Proviso

A proceeding allowed where the plaintiff in an action desists from prosecuting his suit, and does not bring it to trial in convenient time. The defendant, in such case, may take out the venire facias to the sheriff, containing these words, "proviso quod," etc., i. e., provided that. If plaintiff take out any writ to that purpose, the sheriff shall summon but one jury on them both. This is called "going to trial by proviso." Jacob, tit. "Proviso."

Trial by the Record

A form of trial resorted to where issue is taken upon a plea of nul tiel record, in which case the party asserting the existence of a record as pleaded is bound to produce it in court on a day assigned. If the record is forthcoming, the issue is tried by inspection and examination of it. If the record is not produced, judgment is given for his adversary. 3 Bl.Comm. 330.

Trial by Wager of Battel

See Wager of Battel.

Trial by Wager of Law

In old English law. A method of trial, where the defendant, coming into court, made oath that he did not owe the claim demanded of him, and eleven of his neighbors, as compurgators, swore that they believed him to speak the truth. 3 Bl. Comm. 343. See Wager of Law.

Trial by Witnesses

The name "trial per testes" has been used for a trial without the intervention of a jury, is the only method of trial known to the civil law, and is adopted by depositions in chancery. The judge is thus left to form, in his own breast, his sentence upon the credit of the witnesses examined. But it is very rarely used at common law. Tomlins.

Trial De Novo

A new trial or retrial had in an appellate court in which the whole case is gone into as if no trial whatever had been had in the court below. See Karcher v. Green, 32 A. 225, 8 Houst. (Del.) 163; Ex parte Morales, Tex.Cr.App., 53 S.W. 108; Carlson v. Avery Co., 196 Ill.App. 262, 272; Bardwell v. Riverside Oil and Refining Co., 139 Okl. 26, 280 P. 1083, 1085.

Trial Jury

See Jury.

Trial List

A list of cases marked down for trial for any one term.

Trial With Assessors

TROOPS. Within railroad land grant acts, requiring the railroads to transport free from toll or other charge troops of the United States, and in the land grant equalization agreements, whereby the railroads were to transport such troops at half rates, means soldiers collectively, a body of soldiers, and does not include discharged soldiers or military prisoners, rejected applicants for enlistment returning home from recruiting depots, accepted applicants for enlistment going to recruiting depots, retired soldiers or soldiers on furloughs, traveling as individuals and not as a body. United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 39 S.Ct. 294, 295, 249 U.S. 354, 63 L.Ed. 643; Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., 52 S.Ct. 324, 325, 285 U.S. 240, 76 L.Ed. 736. Or army engineers, engaged in improvement of rivers and harbors. Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., 52 S.Ct. 324, 326, 285 U.S. 240, 76 L.Ed. 736.

TROPHY. Anything taken from an enemy and shown or treasured up in proof of victory; a price or token of victory in any contest; hence, a memento of victory or success; an ornamental group of objects hung together on a wall, or any collection of objects typical of some event, art, industry, or branch of knowledge; a memento or memorial. In re Vortex Cup Co., Cust. & Pat.App., 83 F.2d 821, 822.

TROPHY MONEY. Money formerly collected and raised in London, and the several counties of England, towards providing harness and maintenance for the militia, etc.

utovEur. In common-law practice, the action of trover (or trover and conversion) is as jaecies of action on the case, and originally lay for the recovery of damages against a person who had found another's goods and wrongfully converted them to his own use. Subsequently the allegation of the loss of the goods by the plaintiff and the finding of them by the defendant was merely fictitious, and the action became the remedy for any wrongful interference with or detention of the goods of another. 3 Steph.Comm. 425. Sweet. See Burnham v. Pidcock, 33 Misc. 65, 66 N.Y.S. 806; Spellman v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 35 S.C. 475, 14 S.E. 947, 28 Am.St.Rep. 858; Daisy-Belle Petroleum Co. v. Thomas, 151 Okl. 94, 1 P.2d 700, 702. In form a fiction; in substance, a remedy to recover the value of personal chattels wrongfully converted by another to his own use. 1 Burr. 31; Athens & Pomeroy Coal & Land Co. v. Tracy, 22 Ohio App. 21, 153 N.E. 240, 243; Siverson v. Clanton, 88 Or. 261, 170 P. 933, 935. See Conversion.

A possessory action wherein plaintiff must show that he has either a general or special property in thin: [illegible] ossession a e ime o alleged conversion; Patten v. Denn son, 137 Me. 14 A.2d 12. And lies onl f• wr. [illegible] s, chattels, or [illegible] ro sert which is s ecific e[illegible] h t be den ifted. Olschewski v. u son, al.App. 282, 262 43, 46.

TROY WEIGHT. A weight of twelve ounces to the pound, having its name from Troyes, a city in Aube, France.

TRUCE. In international law. A suspension or temporary cessation of hostilities by agreement between belligerent powers; an armistice. Wheat. Int.Law, 442.

TRUCE OF GOD. In medieval law. A truce or suspension of arms promulgated by the church, putting a stop to private hostilities at certain periods or during certain sacred seasons.

TRUCK. Wheeled vehicle for carrying heavy weight; an automobile for transporting heavy loads. Paltani v. Sentinel Life Ins. Co., 121 Neb. 447, 237 N.W. 392.

TRUCK ACTS. Acts in England, 1 & 2 Wm. IV, amended in 1887 and 1896, which provide that workmen shall not have unreasonable deductions made from their wages (as for fines, damaged goods, materials, or tools), nor have their wages paid otherwise than in current coin, nor be obliged to spend them in any particular place or manner.

TRUE. Conformable to fact; correct; exact; actual; genuine; honest. See First State Bank of Teague v. Hadden, Tex.Civ.App., 158 S.W. 1168, 1170.

In one sense, that only is "true" which is conformable to the actual state of things. In that sense, a statement is "untrue" which does not express things exactly as they are. But in another and broader sense the word "true" is often used as a synonym of "honest", "sincere", hot "fraudulent." Zolintakis v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A.Utah, 108 F.2d 902, 905; Moulor v. American Life Ins. Co., 4 S.Ct. 466, 111 U.S. 335, 28 L.Ed. 447.

TRUE ADMISSION. A formal act done in course of judicial proceedings which waives or dispenses with production of evidence by conceding for purposes of litigation that proposition of fact alleged by opponent is true. Maltz v. Jackoway-Katz Cap Co., 336 Mo. 1000, 82 S.W.2d 909, 917.

TRUE BILL. In criminal practice. The indorsement made by a grand jury upon a bill of indictment, when they find it sustained by the evidence laid before them, and are satisfied of the truth of the accusation. 4 Bl.Comm. 306.

TRUE COPY. A true copy, does not mean an absolutely exact copy but means that the copy shall be so true that anybody can understand it. It may contain an error or omission. 51 L.J.Ch. 905.

TRUE, PUBLIC, AND NOTORIOUS. These three qualities used to be formally predicated in the libel in the ecclesiastical courts, of the charges which it contained, at the end of each article severally. Wharton.

TRUE VALUE RULE. Under this rule, one who subscribes for and receives corporate stock must pay therefor the par value thereof either in money or in money's worth, so that the real assets of the corporation shall at least square with its books, and whenever, whether by fraud, accident or mistake, the true value of property, labor or services received in payment does not equal par value, stock is deemed unpaid for to the full extent of the difference, and holders are liable to creditors for the difference, notwithstanding good faith of directors. Johansen v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 345 Mo. 135, 131 S.W.2d 599, 603.

TRUE VERDICT. The voluntary conclusion of the jury after deliberate consideration, and it is none the less a true verdict because the respective jurors may have been liberal in concessions to each other, if conscientiously and freely made. A verdict is not a "true verdict," the result of any arbitrary rule or order, whether imposed by themselves, or by the court or officer in charge. Mann v. State, 26 Ala.App. 558, 163 So. 821.

TRUNK RAILWAY. See Railway.

TRUST.

1. In General

A right of property, real or personal, held by one party for the benefit of another. See Goodwin v. McMinn, 193 Pa. 646, 44 A. 1094, 74 Am.St. Rep. 703; Boyce v. Mosely, 102 S.C. 361, 86 S.E. 771, 773; King v. Richardson, C.C.A.N.C., 136 F.2d 849, 856, 857. A confidence reposed in one person, who is termed trustee, for the benefit of another, who is called the cestui que trust, respecting property which is held by the trustee for the benefit of the cestui que trust. State ex rel. Wirt v. Superior Court for Spokane County, 10 Wash.2d 362, 116 P.2d 752, 755. Any arrangement whereby property is transferred with intention that it be administered by trustee for another's benefit. Raffo v. Foltz, 106 Cal.App. 51, 288 P. 884, 886.

A fiduciary relation with respect to property, subjecting person by whom the property is held to equitable duties to deal with the property for the benefit of another person which arises as the result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. Goodenough v. Union Guardian Trust Co., 267 N.W. 772, 773, 774, 275 Mich. 698. An obligation on a person arising out of confidence reposed in him to apply property faithfully and according to such confidence; as being in nature of deposition by which proprietor transfers to another property of subject intrusted, not that it should remain with him, but that it should be applied to certain uses for the behoof of third party. MacKenzie v. Union Guardian Trust Co., 262 Mich. 563, 247 N.W. 914, 919; Gurnett v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 356 Ill. 612, 191 N.E. 250, 252.

A "trust" can be created for any purpose which is not illegal, and which is not against public policy. Collins v. Lyon, Inc., 181 Va. 230, 24 S.E.2d 572, 579.

Essential elements of "trust" are designated beneficiary and trustee, fund sufficiently identified to enable title to pass to trustee, and actual delivery to trustee with intention of passing title. City Bank Farmers' Trust Co. v. Charity Organization Soc. of City of New York, 238 App. Div. 720, 265 N.Y.S. 267.

Accessory trust. In Scotch law, equivalent to "active" or "special" trust. See infra.

Active trust. One which imposes upon the trustee the duty of taking active measures in the execution of the trust, as, where property is conveyed to trustees with directions to sell and distribute the proceeds among creditors of the grantor; distinguished from a "passive" or "dry" trust. In re Buch's Estate, 278 Pa. 185, 122 A. 239, 240; Welch v. Northern Bank & Trust Co., 100 Wash. 349, 170 P. 1029, 1032.

Cestui que trust. The person for whose benefit a trust is created or who is to enjoy the income or the avails of it.

Charitable trusts. Trusts designed for the benefit of a class or the public generally. They are essentially different from private trusts in that the beneficiaries are uncertain. Bauer v. Myers, C. C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 911.

Complete voluntary trust. One completely created, the subject-matter being designated, the trustee and beneficiary being named, and the limitations and trusts being fully and perfectly declared. In re Leigh's Estate, 186 Iowa 931, 173 N.W. 143, 146.

Constructive trust. A trust raised by construction of law, or arising by operation of law, as distinguished from an express trust. Wherever the circumstances of a transaction are such that the person who takes the legal estate in property cannot also enjoy the beneficial interest without necessarily violating some established principle of equity, the court will immediately raise a constructive trust, and fasten it upon the conscience of the legal owner, so as to convert him into a trustee for the parties who in equity are entitled to the beneficial enjoyment. Hill, Trustees, 116; 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 511; Nester v. Gross, 66 Minn. 371, 69 N.W. 39; Porter v. Shaffer, 147 Va. 921, 133 S.E. 614, 616; Misamore v. Berglin, 197 Ala. 111, 72 So. 347, 349, L.R.A.1916F, 1024.

See, also, Involuntary Trust infra.

"Constructive trusts" do not arise by agreement or from intention, but by operation of law, and fraud, active or constructive, is their essential element. Actual fraud is not necessary, but such a trust will arise whenever circumstances under which property was acquired made it inequitable that it should be retained by him who holds the legal title. Constructive trusts have been said to arise through the application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel, or unaer the broad doctrine that equity regards and treats as done what in good conscience ought to be done, and such trusts are also known as "trusts ex maleficio" or "ex delicto" or "involuntary trusts" and their forms and varieties are practically without limit, being raised by courts of equity whenever it becomes necessary to prevent a failure of justice. Union Guardian Trust Co. v. Emery, 292 Mich. 394, 290 N.W. 841, 845.

Contingent trust. An express trust depending for its operation upon a future event. Civ.Code Ga.1910, § 3734.

Direct trust. An express trust, as distinguished from a constructive or implied trust. Currence v. Ward, 43 W.Va. 367, 27 S.E. 329.

Directory trust. One which is not completely and finally settled by the instrument creating it, but only defined in its general purpose and to be carried into detail according to later specific directions.

Dry trust. One which merely vests the legal title in the trustee, and does not require the performance of any active duty on his part to carry out the trust. In re Shaw's Estate, 198 Cal. 352, 246 P. 48, 52; Blackburn v. Blackburn, 167 Ky. 113, 180 S.W. 48, 49.

Educational trusts. Trusts for the founding, endowing, and supporting schools for the advancement of all useful branches of learning, which are not strictly private. Richards v. Wilson, 185 Ind. 335, 112 N.E. 780, 794.

Executed trust. A trust of which the scheme has in the outset been completely declared. Adams, Eq. 151. A trust in which the estates and interest in the subject-matter of the trust are completely limited and defined by the instrument creating the trust, and require no further instruments to complete them. Bisp.Eq. 20; Pillot v. Landon, 46 N.J.Eq. 310, 19 A. 25; Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H.L.Cas. 210; Mattsen v. U. S. Ensilage Harvester Co., 171 Minn. 237, 213 N.W. 893, 895.

Executory trust. One which requires the execution of some further instrument, or the doing of some further act, on the part of the creator of the trust or of the trustee, towards its complete creation or full effect. Martling v. Martling, 55 N.J.Eq. 771, 39 A. 203; Carradine v. Carradine, 33 Miss. 729; In re Fair's Estate, 132 Cal. 523, 60 P. 442, 84 Am.St.Rep. 70; Pillot v. Landon, 46 N. J.Eq. 310, 19 A. 25.

Express active trust. Where will confers upon executor authority to generally manage property of estate and pay over net income to devisees or legatees, such authority creates an "express active trust." In re Thomas' Estate, 17 Wash.2d 674, 136 P.2d 1017, 1020, 147 A.L.R. 598.

Express private passive trust has been defined as existing where land is conveyed to or held by one person in trust for another, without any power being expressly or impliedly given trustee to take actual possession of land or exercise acts of ownership over it, except by beneficiary's direction. E]vins v. Seestedt, 141 Fla. 266, 193 So. 54, 57, 126 A.L.R. 1001.

Express trust. A trust created or declared in express terms, and usually in writing, as distinguished from one inferred by the law from the conduct or dealings of the parties. State v. Campbell, 59 Kan. 246, 52 P. 454; Kaphan v. Toney, Tenn.Ch., 58 S.W. 913; Sanford v. Van Pelt, 314 Mo. 175, 282 S.W. 1022, 1030; Holsapple v. Schrontz, 65 Ind.App. 390, 117 N.E. 547, 549.

Imperfect trust. An executory trust, (which see;) and see Executed Trust.

Implied trust. A trust raised or created by implication of law; a trust implied or presumed from circumstances. Wilson v. Welles, 79 Minn. 53, 81 N.W. 549; Holsapple v. Schrontz, 65 Ind. App. 390, 117 N.E. 547, 549; Springer v. Springer, 144 Md. 465, 125 A. 162, 166.

Instrumental trust. See Ministerial Trusts, infra.

Involuntary trust. "Involuntary" or "constructive" trusts embrace all those instances in which a trust is raised by the doctrines of equity, for the purpose of working out justice in the most efficient manner, when there is no intention of the parties to create a trust relation. This class of trusts may usually be referred to fraud, either actual or constructive, as an essential element. Bank v. Kimball Milling Co., 1 S.D. 388, 47 N.W. 402, 36 Am.St.Rep. 739.

Massachusetts or business trusts. See "Trust Estates as Business Companies."

Ministerial trusts. (Also called "instrumental. trusts.") Those which demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ; as to convey an estate. They are a species of special trusts, distinguished from discretionary trusts, which necessarily require much exercise of the understanding. 2 Bouv.Inst. no. 1896.

Naked trust. A dry or passive trust; one which requires no action on the part of the trustee, beyond turning over money or property to the cestui que trust. Cerri v. Akron-People's Telephone Co., D.C.Ohio, 219 F. 285, 292.

Passive trust. A trust as to which the trustee has no active duty to perform. Holmes v. Walter, 118 Wis. 409, 95 N.W. 380, 62 L.R.A. 986; Dixon v. Dixon, 123 Me. 470, 124 A. 198, 199.

Precatory trust. Where words employed in a will or other instrument do not amount to a positive command or to a distinct testamentary disposition, but are terms of entreaty, request, recommendation, or expectation, they are termed "precatory words," and from such words the law will raise a trust, called a "precatory trust," to carry out the wishes of the testator or grantor. See Bohon v. Barrett, 79 Ky. 378; Hunt v. Hunt, 18 Wash. 14, 50 P. 578; Aldrich v. Aldrich, 172 Mass. 101, 51 N.E. 449.

Private trust. One established or created for the benefit of a certain designated individual or individuals, or a known person or class of persons, clearly identified or capable of identification by the terms of the instrument creating the trust; as distinguished from trusts for public institutions or charitable uses. See Pennoyer v. Wadhams, 20 Or. 274, 25 P. 720, 11 L.R.A. 210; Doyle v. Whalen, 87 Me. 414, 32 A. 1022, 31 L.R.A. 118; Brooks v. Belfast, 90 Me. 318, 38 A. 222; Bauer v. Myers, C.C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 911.

Proprietary trust. In Scotch law, a naked, dry, or passive trust. See supra.

Public trust. One constituted for the benefit either of the public at large or of some considerable portion of it answering a particular description; public trusts and charitable trusts may be considered in general as synonymous expressions. Lewin, Trusts, 20; Bauer v. Myers, C.C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 911.

Resulting trust. One that arises by implication of law, or by the operation and construction of equity, and which is established as consonant to the presumed intention of the parties as gathered from the nature of the transaction. It arises where the legal estate in property is disposed of, conveyed, or transferred, but the intent appears or is inferred from the terms of the disposition, or from the accompanying facts and circumstances, that the beneficial interest is not to go or be enjoyed with the legal title. Lafkowitz v. Jackson, C.C.A.Mo., 13 F.2d 370, 372. See Sanders v. Steele, 124 Ala. 415, 26 So. 882. Farwell v. Wilcox, 73 Okl. 230, 175 P. 936, 938, 4 A.L.R. 156; Cummings v. Cummings, 55 Cal.App. 433, 203 P. 452, 455.

Savings bank trust. A Totten trust.

Secret trusts. Where a testator gives property to a person, on a verbal promise by the legatee or devisee that he will hold it in trust for another person. Sweet.

Shifting trust. An express trust which is so settled that it may operate in favor of beneficiaries additional to, or substituted for, those first named, upon specified contingencies. Civ.Code Ga.1910, § 3734.

Simple trust. A simple trust corresponds with the ancient use, and arises where property is simply vested in one person for the use of another, and the nature of the trust, not being qualified by the settlor, is left to the construction of law. Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 154, 45 S.E. 541; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. 500, 100 Am.Dec. 586.

Special trust. One in which a trustee is interposed for the execution of some purpose particularly pointed out, and is not, as in case of a simple trust, a mere passive depositary of the estate, but is required to exert himself actively in the execution of the settlor's intention; as, where a conveyance is made to trustees upon trust to reconvey, or to sell for the payment of debts. Lew.Tr. 3, 16.

Special trusts have been divided into (1) ministerial (or instrumental) and (2) discretionary. The former, such as demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ ; the latter, such as cannot be duly administered without the application of a certain degree of prudence and judgment. 2 Bouv.Inst. no. 1896; Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 154, 45 S.E. 541.

Spendthrift trust. See Spendthrift.

Totten trust. A trust created by the deposit by one person of his own money in his own name as a trustee for another and it is a tentative trust revocable at will until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime by some unequivocal act or declaration such as delivery of the pass book or notice to the beneficiary and if the depositor dies before the beneficiary without revocation or some decisive act or declaration of disaffirmance the presumption arises that an absolute trust was created as to the balance on hand at the death of the depositor. Murray v. Brooklyn Sa^{y}. Bank, 258 App.Div. 132, 15 N.Y.S.2d 915, 917; In re Totten, 179 N.Y. 112, 71 N.E. 748, 70 L.R.A. 711, 1 Ann. Cas. 900.

Transgressive trust. A name sometimes applied to a trust which transgresses or violates the rule against perpetuities. See Pulitzer v. Livingston, 89 Me. 359, 36 A. 635.

Trust allotments. Allotments to Indians, in which a certificate or trust patent is issued declaring that the United States will hold the land for a designated period in trust for the allottee. U. S. v. Bowling, 41 S.Ct. 561, 562, 256 U.S. 484, 65 L.Ed. 1054.

Trust company. A corporation formed for the purpose of taking, accepting, and executing all such trusts as may be lawfully committed to it, and acting as testamentary trustee, trustee under deeds of settlement or for married women, executor, guardian, etc. To these functions are sometimes (but not necessarily) added the business of acting as fiscal agent for corporations, attending to the registration and transfer of their stock and bonds, serving as trustee for their bond or mortgage creditors, and transacting a general banking and loan business. See Venner v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 54 App.Div. 271, 66 N.Y.Supp. 773; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 7 S.Ct. 826, 121 U.S. 138, 30 L.Ed. 895; Loudoun Nat. Bank of Leesburg v. Continental Trust Co., 164 Va. 536, 180 S. E. 548, 551.

Trust deed. (1) A species of mortgage given to a trustee for the purpose of securing a numerous class of creditors, as the bondholders of a railroad corporation, with power to foreclose and sell on failure of the payment of their bonds, notes, or other claims. (2) In some of the states, and in the District of Columbia, a trust deed or deed of trust is a security resembling a mortgage, being a conveyance of lands to trustees to secure the payment of a debt, with a power of sale upon default, and upon a trust to apply the net proceeds to paying the debt and to turn over the surplus to the grantor. Dean v. Smith, 53 N.D. 123, 204 N.W. 987, 994; Guaranty Title & Trust Co. v. Thompson, 93 Fla. 983, 113 So. 117, 120.

A "trust deed" on real estate as security for a bond issue is, in effect, a mortgage on property executed by the mortgagor to a third person as trustee to hold as security for the mortgage debt as evidenced by the bonds, for the benefit of the purchasers of the bonds as lenders. Marden v. Elks Club, 138 Fla. 707, 190 So. 40, 42.

Trust deposit. Where money or property is deposited to be kept intact and not commingled with other funds or property of bank and is to be returned in kind to depositor or devoted to particular purpose or requirement of depositor or payment of particular debts or obligations of depositor. Also called "special deposit". Maurello v. Broadway Bank & Trust Co. of Paterson, 114 N.J.L. 167, 176 A. 391, 394. See, also "Deposit."

Trust estate. This term may mean either the estate of the trustee,—that is, the legal title,—or the estate of the beneficiary, or the corpus of the property which is the subject of the trust. See Cooper v. Cooper, 5 N.J.Eq. 9; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Carroll, 5 Barb. (N.Y.) 643.

Trust ex delicto. Trust ex maleficio, which title see, infra.

Trust ex maleficio. A species of constructive trust arising out of some fraud, misconduct, or breach of faith on the part of the person to be charged as trustee, which renders it an equitable necessity that a trust should be implied. See Rogers v. Richards, 67 Kan. 706, 74 P. 255; Kent v. Dean, 128 Ala. 600, 30 So. 543; Chanowsky v. Friedman, Tex.Civ.App., 108 S.W.2d 752, 754. See, also, Constructive Trust, supra.

Trust fund. A fund held by a trustee for the specific purposes of the trust; in a more general sense, a fund which, legally or equitably, is subject to be devoted to a particular purpose and cannot or should not be diverted therefrom. In this sense it is often said that the assets of a corporation are a "trust fund" for the payment of its debts. See Henderson v. Indiana Trust Co., 143 Ind. 561, 40 N.E. 516; In re Beard's Estate, 7 Wyo. 104, 50 Pac. 226, 38 L.R.A. 860, 75 Am.St. Rep. 882; Spencer v. Smith, C.C.A.Colo., 201 F. 647, 652; Terhune v. Weise, 132 Wash. 208, 231 P. 954, 955, 38 A.L.R. 94.

Trust fund doctrine. In substance, that where corporation transfers all its assets with a view to going out of business and nothing is left with which to pay debts, transferee is charged with notice of the circumstances of the transaction, and takes the assets subject to an equitable lien for the unpaid debts of the transferring company; the property of a corporation being a fund subject to be first applied to the payment of debts. Meikle v. Export Lumber Co., C.C.A.Or., 67 F.2d 301, 304.

Under such doctrine, if insolvent corporation's assets are distributed among its stockholders before its debts are paid, each stockholder is liable to creditors for full amount received by him. Scott v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 117 F.2d 36, 39.

Trust in invitum. A constructive trust imposed by equity, contrary to the trustee's intention and will, upon property in his hands. Sanford v. Hamner, 115 Ala. 406, 22 So. 117.

Trust legacy. See Legacy.

Trust receipt. Document in which is expressed security transaction, whereunder the lender having no prior title in the goods on which the lien is to be given, and not having possession which remains in the borrower, lends his money to the borrower on security of the goods, which the borrower is privileged to sell clear of the lien on agreement to pay all or part of the proceeds of the sale to the lender. In re Boswell, C.C.A.Cal., 96 F.2d 239, 242.

A term specifically applied to a written instrument whereby banker having advanced money for purchase of imported merchandise and having taken title in his own name, delivers possession to importer on agreement in writing to hold merchandise in trust for banker till he is paid. Simons v. Northeastern Finance Corporation, 271 Mass. 285, 171 N.E. 643, 644.

Voluntary trust. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another, as distinguished from an "involuntary" trust, which is created by operation of law. Civ.Code Cal. §§ 2216, 2217. According to another use of the term, "voluntary" trusts are such as are made in favor of a volunteer, that is, a person who gives nothing in exchange for the trust, but receives it as a pure gift; and in this use the term is distinguished from "trusts for value," the latter being such as are in favor of purchasers, mortgagees, etc. A "voluntary trust" is an equitable gift, and in order to be enforceable by the beneficiaries must be complete. Cameron v. Cameron, 96 Okl. 98, 220 P. 889, 890; Logan v. Ryan, 68 Cal.App. 448, 229 P. 993, 996.

The difference between a "gift inter vivos" and a "voluntary trust" is that, in a gift, the thing itself with title passes to the donee, while, in a voluntary trust, the actual title passes to a cestui que trust while the legal title is retained by the settlor, to be held by him for the purposes of the trust or is by the settlor transferred to another to hold for the purposes of the trust. Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

Voting trust. See that title.

2. Constitutional and Statutory Law

An association or organization of persons or corporations having the intention and power, or the tendency, to create a monopoly, control production, interfere with the free course of trade or transportation, or to fix and regulate the supply and the price of commodities.

In the history of economic development, the "trust" was originally a device by which several corporations engaged in the same general line of business might combine for their mutual advantage, in the direction of eliminating destructive competition, controlling the output of their commodity, and regulating and maintaining its price, but at the same time preserving their separate individual existence, and without any consolidation or merger. This device was the erection of a central committee or board, composed, perhaps, of the presidents or general managers of the different corporations, and the transfer to them of a majority of the stock in each of the corporations, to be held "in trust" for the several stockholders so assigning their holdings. These stockholders received in return "trust certificates" showing that they were entitled to receive the dividends on their assigned stock, though the voting power of it had passed to the trustees. This last feature enabled the trustees or committee to elect all the directors of all the corporations, and through them the officers, and thereby to exercise an absolutely controlling influence over the policy and operations of each constituent company, to the ends and with the purposes above mentioned. Though the "trust," in this sense, is now seldom if ever resorted to as a form of corporate organization, having given place to the "holding corporation" and other devices, the word has become current in statute laws as well as popular speech, to designate almost any form of combination of a monopolistic character or tendency. See Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) p. 428; Northern Securities Co. v. U. S., 193 U.S. 197, 24 Sup.Ct. 436, 48 L.Ed. 679; MacGinniss v. Mining Co., 29 Mont. 428, 75 P. 89; Georgia Fruit Exchange v. Turnipseed, 9 Ala.App. 123, 62 So. 542, 546; Mallinckrodt Chemical Works v. State of Missouri, 35 S.Ct. 671, 673, 238 U.S. 41, 59 L.Ed. 1192.

In a looser sense the term "trust" is applied to any combination of establishments in the same line of business for securing the same ends by holding the individual interests of each subservient to a common authority for the common interests of all. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works v. State of Missouri, 35 S.Ct. 671, 673, 238 U.S. 41, 59 L.Ed. 1192.

TRUST ESTATES AS BUSINESS COMPANIES. A practice originating in Massachusetts of vesting a business or certain real estate in a group of trustees, who manage it for the benefit of the beneficial owners; the ownership of the latter is evidenced by negotiable (or transferable) shares. The trustees are elected by the shareholders, or, in case of a vacancy, by the board of trustees. Provision is made in the agreement and declaration of trust to the effect that when new trustees are elected, the trust estate shall vest in them without further conveyance. The declaration of trust specifies the powers of the trustees. They have a common seal; the board is organized with the usual officers of a board of trustees; it is governed by by-laws; the officers have the usual powers of like corporate officers; so far as practicable, the trustees in their collective capacity, are to carry on the business under a specified name. The trustees may also hold shares as beneficiaries. Provision may be made for the alteration or amendment of the agreement or declaration in a specified manner. In Eliot v. Freeman, 31 Sup.Ct. 360, 220 U.S. 178, 55 L.Ed. 424, it was held that such a trust was not within the corporation tax provisions of the tariff act of Aug. 5, 1909. See also Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 31 S.Ct. 361, 220 U.S. 187, 55 L.Ed. 428.

TRUSTEE. The person appointed, or required by law, to execute a trust; one in whom an estate, interest, or power is vested, under an express or implied agreement to administer or exercise It for the benefit or to the use of another called the cestui que trust. Pioneer Mining Co. v. Tyberg, C.C.A.Alaska, 215 F. 501, 506, L.R.A.1915B, 442; Kaehn v. St. Paul Co-op. Ass'n, 156 Minn. 113, 194 N.W. 112; Catlett v. Hawthorne, 157 Va. 372, 161 S.E. 47, 48. Person who holds title to res and administers it for others' benefit. Reinecke v. Smith, Ill., 53 S.Ct. 570, 289 U.S. 172, 77 L.Ed. 1109.

In a strict sense, a "trustee" is one'who holds the legal title to property for the benefit of another, while, in a broad sense, the term is sometimes applied to anyone standing In a fiduciary or confidential relation to another, such as agent, attorney, bailee, etc. State ex rel. Lee v. Sartorius, 344 Mo. 912, 130 S.W.2d 547, 549, 550.

"Trustee" is also used in a wide and perhaps inaccurate sense, to denote that a person has the duty of carrying out a transaction, in which he and another person are interested, in such manner as will be most for the benefit of the latter, and not in such a way that he himself might be tempted, for the sake of his personal advantage, to neglect the interests of the other. In this sense, directors of companies are said to be "trustees for the shareholders." Sweet.

Conventional Trustee

One appointed by a decree of court to execute a trust, as distinguished from one appointed by the instrument creating the trust. Gilbert v. Kolb, 85 Md. 627, 37 Atl. 423.

Joint Trustees

Two or more persons who are intrusted with property for the benefit of one or more others.

Judicial Trustee

A "judicial trustee," as distinguished from a conventional trustee, is an officer of a chancery court whose acts are generally limited and defined by familiar and settled rules and procedure. Kramme v. Mewshaw, 147 Md. 535, 128 A. 468, 472.

Public Trustee

An act of 1906 referring to England and Wales provides for the appointment of a public trustee to administer estates of small value, to act as custodian trustee, or as ordinary trustee or judicial trustee, or to administer the property of a convict under the Forfeiture Act.

Quasi Trustee

A person who reaps a benefit from a breach of trust, and so becomes answerable as a trustee. Lewin, Trusts (4th Ed.) 592, 638.

Testamentary Trustee

A trustee appointed by or acting under a will; one appointed to carry out a trust created by a will. The term does not ordinarily include an executor or an administrator with the will annexed, or a guardian, except when they act in the execution of a trust created by the will and which is separable from their functions as executors, etc. See In re Hazard, 51 Hun, 201, 4 N.Y.Supp. 701; In re Valentine's Estate, 1 Misc. 491, 23 N.Y. Supp. 289; In re Hawley, 104 N.Y. 250, 10 N.E. 352.

Trustee Acts

The statutes 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, passed in 1850, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, passed in 1852, enabling the court of chancery, without bill filed, to appoint new trustees in lieu of any who, on account of death, lunacy, absence, or otherwise, are unable or unwilling to act as such; and also to make vesting orders by which legal estates and rights may be transferred from the old trustee or trustees to the new trustee or trustees so appointed. Mozley & Whitley.

Trustee Ex Maleficio

A person who, being guilty of wrongful or fraudulent conduct, is held by equity to the duty and liability of a trustee, in relation to the subject-matter, to prevent him from profiting by his own wrong. Rice v. Braden, 243 Pa. 141, 89 A. 877, 880. Alabama Water Co. v. City of Anniston, 227 Ala. 579, 151 So. 457, 458.

Trustee in Bankruptcy

A person in whom the property of a bankrupt is vested in trust for the creditors.

Trustee Process

The name given, in the New England states, to the process of garnishment or foreign attachment.

Trustee Relief Acts

The statute 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, passed in 1847, and statute 12 & 13 Vict. c. 74, passed in 1849, by which a trustee is enabled to pay money into court, in cases where a difficulty arises respecting the title to the trust fund. Mozley & Whiteley.

TRUSTER. In Scotch law. The maker or creator of a trust.

TRUSTIS. In old European law. Trust; faith; confidence; fidelity.

TRUSTOR. One who creates a trust. Also called settlor. Ulmer v. Fulton, 129 Ohio St. 323, 195 N.E. 557, 564, 97 A.L.R. 1170.

TRUTH. There are three conceptions as to what constitutes "truth": Agreement of thought and reality; eventual verification; and consistency of thought with itself. Memphis Telephone Co. v. Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co., C.C.A. Tenn., 231 F. 835, 842.

For "Fact" and "truth" distinguished, see Fact.

TRY. To examine judicially; to examine and investigate a controversy, by the legal method called "trial," for the purpose of determining the issues it involves.

TSAR. The better, though perhaps less common spelling of "czar" (q. v.).

TUAS RES TIBI HABETO. Lat. Have or take your things to yourself. The form of words by which, according to the old Roman law, a man divorced his wife. Calvin.

TUB. In mercantile law. A measure containing sixty pounds of tea, and from fifty-six to eighty-six pounds of camphor. Jacob.

TUB-MAN. In English law. A barrister who has a preaudience in the exchequer, and also one who has a particular place in court, is so called. Brown.

TUCIIAS. In Spanish law. Objections or exceptions to witnesses. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 10.

TUCKER ACT. The act of March 3, 1887, relating to the jurisdiction of the court of claims. Garl. & Ralston, Fed. Pr. 413.

TUERTO. In Spanish law. Tort. Las Partidas, pt. 7, tit. 6, 1, 5.

TUG. A steam vessel built for towing; synonymous with "tow-boat."

TUITION. The act or business of teaching the various branches of learning. State ex rel. Veeder v. State Board of Education, 97 Mont. 121, 33 P.2d 516, 522.

TULLIANUM. Lat. In Roman law. That part of a prison which was under ground. Supposed to be so called from Servius Tullius, who built that part of the first prison in Rome. Adams, Rom. Ant. 290.

TUMBREL. A castigatory, trebucket, or ducking-stool, anciently used as a punishment for common scolds.

TUMULTUOUS PETITIONING. Under St. 13 Car. II. St. 1, c. 5, this was a misdemeanor, and consisted in more than twenty persons signing any petition to the crown or either house of parliament for the alteration of matters established by law in church or state, unless the contents thereof had been approved by three justices, or the majority of the grand jury at assizes or quarter sessions. No petition could be delivered by more than ten persons. 4 B1.Comm. 147; Mozley & Whitley.

TUN. A measure of wine or oil, containing four hogsheads.

TUNING. The term as used with reference to signaling by electro-magnetic waves, or wireless telegraphy, means the bringing of two or more electrical circuits into resonance, or the adj.ustment of capacity and inductance to secure the time-period vibration or wave length desired. The wave length assigned to a station might be called its "tune." National Electric Signaling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States, C.C.A.Pa., 208 F. 679, 695.

TUNGREVE. A town-reeve or bailiff. Cowell.

TUNNAGE. A duty in England anciently due upon all wines imported, over and above the prisage and butlerage. 2 Steph.Com. 628.

TURBA. Lat. In the civil law. A multitude; a crowd or mob; a tumultuous assembly of persons. Said to consist of ten or fifteen, at the least. Calvin.

TURBARY. Turbary, or common of turbary, is the right or liberty of digging turf upon another man's ground. Brown.

TURF AND TWIG. A piece of turf, or a twig or a bough, were delivered by the feoffer to the feoffee in making livery of seisin. 2 Bla.Com. 315.

TURN, or TOURN. The great court-leet of the county, as the old county court was the court-baron. Of this the sheriff is judge, and the court is incident to his office; wherefore it is called the "sheriff's tourn;" and it had its name originally from the sheriff making a turn of circuit about his shire, and holding this court in each respective hundred. Wharton.

TURN KEY JOB. In oil drilling industry a job wherein driller of oil well undertakes to furnish everything and does all work required to complete well, place it on production, and turn it over ready to turn the key and start oil running into tanks. Retsal Drilling Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.Tex., 127 F.2d 355, 357.

TURNED TO A RIGHT. This phrase means that a person whose estate is divested by usurpation cannot expel the possessor by mere entry, but must have recourse to an action, either possessory or droitural. Mozley & Whiteley.

TURNKEY. A person, under the superintendence of a jailer, who has the charge of the keys of the prison, for the purpose of opening and fastening the doors.

TURNOUT. A short side-track on a railroad which may be occupied by one train while another is passing on the main track; a siding. Philadelphia v. R. Co., 133 Pa. 134, 19 A. 356; Indiana Rys. & Light Co. v. City of Kokomo, 183 Ind. 543, 108 N.E. 771, 772.

TURNPIKE. A gate set across a road, to stop travelers and carriages until toll is paid for the privilege of passage thereon.

TURNPIKE ROADS. These are roads on which parties have by law a right to erect gates and bars, for the purpose of taking toll, and of refusing the permission to pass along them to all persons who refuse to pay. Northam Bridge Co. v. London Ry. Co., 6 Mees. & W. 428. A public highway, established by public authority for public use, and is to be regarded as a public easement, and not as private property. The only difference between this and a common highway is that, instead of being made at the public expense in the first instance, it is authorized and laid out by public authority, and made at the expense of individuals in the first instance; and the cost of construction and maintenance is reimbursed by a toll, levied by public authority for the purpose. Corn. v. Wilkinson, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 175, 26 Am. Dec. 654.

TURNTABLE DOCTRINE. Also termed attractive nuisance doctrine. This doctrine requires the owner of premises not to attract or lure children into unsuspected danger or great bodily harm, by keeping thereon attractive machinery or dangerous instrumentalities in an exposed and unguarded condition, and where injuries have been received by a child so enticed the entry is not regarded as unlawful, and does not necessarily preclude a recovery of damages; the attractiveness of the machine or structure amounting to an implied invitation to enter. Heller v. New York N. H. & H. R. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 265 F. 192, 194. It imposes a liability on a property owner for injuries to a child of tender years, resulting from something on his premises that can be operated by such a child and made dangerous by him, and which is attractive to him and calculated to induce him to use it, where he fails to protect the thing so that a child of tender years cannot be hurt by it. Barnhill's Adm'r v. Mt. Morgan Coal Co., D.C. Ky., 215 F. 608, 609.

Doctrine is that who maintains or creates upon his premises or upon the premises of another in any public place an instrumentality or condition which may reasonably be expected to attract children of tender years and to constitute a danger to them is under duty to take the precautions that a reasonably prudent person would take under similar circumstance, to prevent injury to such children. Schock v. Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows, 5 Wash.2d 599, 105 P.2d 838, 843.

The dangerous and alluring qualities of a railroad turntable gave the "attractive nuisance rule" the name of "Turntable Doctrine." Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Vaughn, 292 Ky. 120, 166 S.W.2d 43, 46.

TURPIS. Lat. In the civil law. Base; mean; vile; disgraceful; infamous; unlawful. Applied both to things and persons. Calvin.

TURPIS CAUSA. A base cause; a vile or immoral consideration; a consideration which, on account of its immorality, is not allowed by law to be sufficient either to support a contract or found an action; e. g., future illicit intercourse.

TURPIS CONTRACTUS. An immoral or iniquitous contract.

TURPIS EST PARS QUIE NON CONVENIT CUM SUO TOTO. The part which does not agree with its whole is of mean account, [entitled to small or no consideration.] Plowd. 101; Shep. Touch. 87.

TURPITUDE. In its ordinary sense, inherent baseness or vileness of principle or action; shameful wickedness; depravity. In its legal sense, everything done contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals. State v. Anderson, 117 Kan. 117, 230 P. 315, 317; Hughes v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 162 Ga. 246, 134 S.E. 42, 46. An action showing gross depravity. Traders & General Ins. Co. v. Russell, Tex.Civ.App., 99 S.W.2d 1079, 1084.

Moral Turpitude

A term of frequent occurrence in statutes, especially those providing that a witness' conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude may be shown as tending to impeach his credibility. In general, it means neither more nor less than "turpitude," i. e., anything done contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals. In re Williams, 64 Okl. 316, 167 P. 1149, 1152; In re Humphrey, 174 Cal. 290, 163 P. 60, 62. Indeed, it is sometimes candidly admitted that the word "moral" in this phrase does not add anything to the meaning of the term other than that emphasis which may result from a tautological expression. Hughes v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 162 Ga. 246, 134 S.E. 42, 46. It is also commonly defined as an act of baseness, vileness, or depravity in the private and social duties which a man owes to his fellow man or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between man and man. Moore v. State, 12 Ala. App. 243, 67 So. 789, 791; United States v. Uhl, C.C.A.N.Y., 210 F. 860, 862.

Although a vague term, it implies something immoral in itself, regardless of its being punishable by law. Pippin v. State, 197 Ala. 613, 73 So. 340, 342; Coykendall v. Skrmetta, C.C.A.Ga., 22 F.2d 120; Thus excluding unintentional wrong, or an improper act done without unlawful or improper intent. Drazen v. New Haven Taxicab 'Co., 95 Conn. 500, 111 A., 861, 863. It is also said to be restricted to the gravest offenses, consisting of felonies, infamous crimes, and those that are malum in se and disclose a depraved mind. Bartos v. United States District -Court for District of Nebraska, C.C.A.Neb., 19 F.2d 722, 724.

TURPITUDO. Lat. Baseness; infamy; immorality; turpitude.

TUTA EST CUSTODIA QU2E SIBIMET CREDITUR. Hob. 340. That guardianship is secure which is intrusted to itself alone.

TUTELA. Lat. In the civil law. Tutelage; that 'species of guardianship which continued to the age of puberty; the guardian being called "tutor," and the ward, "pupillus." 1 Dom. Civil Law, b. 2, tit. 1, p. 260. A power given by the civil law over a free person to defend him when by reason of his age he is unable to defend himself. A child under the power of his father was not subject to tutelage, because not a free person, caput liberum.

TUTELA LEGITIMA. Legal tutelage; tutelage created by act of law, as where none had been created by testament. Inst. 1, 15, pr.

TUTELA TESTAMENTARIA. Testamentary tutelage or guardianship; that kind of tutelage which was created by will. Calvin.

TUTELIE ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. An action of tutelage; an action which lay for a ward or pupil, on the termination of tutelage, against the tutor or guardian, to compel an account. Calvin.

TUTELAGE. Guardianship; state of being under a guardian. See Tutela.

TUTELAM REDDERE. Lat. In the civil law. To render an account of tutelage. Calvin. Tutelam reposcere, to demand an account of tutelage.

TUTEUR. In French law. A kind of guardian.

TUTEUR OFFICIEUX. A person over fifty years of age may be appointed a tutor of this sort to a child over fifteen years of age, with the consent of the parents of such child, or, in their default, the conseil de famille. The duties which such a tutor becomes subject to are analogous to those in English law of a person who puts himself in loco parentis to any one. Brown.

TUTEUR SUBROGE. The title of a second guardian appointed for an infant under guardianship. His functions are exercised in case the interests of the infant and his principal guardian conflict. Code Nap. 420; Brown.

TUTIUS ERRATUR EX PARTE MITIORE. 3 Inst. 220. It is safer to err on the gentler side [or on the side of mercy].

TUTIUS SEMPER EST ERRARE ACQUIETANDO, QUAM IN PUNIENDO, EX PARTE MISERICORDLE QUAM EX PARTE JUSTITIZE. It is always safer to err in acquitting than punishing, on the side of mercy than on the side of justice. Branch, Princ.; 2 Hale, P. C. 290; Broom, Max. 326; Corn. v. York, 9 Mete. (Mass.) 116, 43 Am.Dec. 373.

TUTOR. One who teaches, usually a private instructor. State ex rel. Veeder v. State Board of Education, 97 Mont. 121, 33 P.2d 516, 522.

In the civil law. This term corresponds nearly to "guardian," (i. e., a person appointed to have the care of the person of a minor and the administration of his estate,) except that the guardian of a minor who has passed a certain age is called "curator," and has powers and duties differing somewhat from those of a tutor. See Washington Bank and Trust Co. v. Magee, 187 Miss. 198, 192 So. 438.

TUTOR ALIENUS. In English law. The name given to a stranger who enters upon the lands of an infant within the age of fourteen, and takes the profits. He may be called to an account by the infant and be charged as guardian in socage. Littleton, § 124; Co.Litt. 89b, 90a.

TUTOR PROPRIUS. The name given to one who is rightly a guardian in socage, in contradistinction to a tutor alienus.

TUTORSHIP. The office and power of a tutor. The power which an individual, sui juris, has to take care of the person of one who is unable to take care of himself.

There are four sorts of tutorships: Tutorship by nature; tutorship by will; tutorship by the effect of the law; tutorship by the appointment of the judge. Civ.Code La. art. 247.

TUTORSHIP BY NATURE. Upon the death of either parent, the tutorship of minor children belongs of right to the other. Upon divorce or judicial separation from bed and board of parents, the tutorship of each minor child belongs of right to the parent under whose care he or she has been placed or to whose care he or she has been entrusted. All those cases are called tutorship by nature. Civ.Code La. art. 250.

TUTORSHIP BY WILL. The right of appointing a tutor, whether a relation or a stranger, belongs exclusively to the father or mother dying last. This is called "tutorship by will," because generally it is given by testament; but it may likewise be given by any declaration by the surviving father or mother, executed before a notary and two wit. nesses. Civ.Code La. art. 257.

TUTRIX. A female tutor.

TWA NIGHT GEST. In Saxon law. A guest on the second night. By the laws of Edward the Confessor it was provided that a man who lodged at an inn, or at the house of another, should be considered, on the first night of his being there, a stranger, (uncuth;) on the second night, a guest; on the third night, a member of the family. This had reference to the responsibility of the host or entertainer for offenses committed by the guest.

TWELFHINDI. The highest rank of men in the Saxon government, who were valued at 1200s. If any injury were done to such persons, satisfaction was to be made according to their worth. Cowell.

TWELVE TABLES. The earliest statute or code of Roman law, framed by a commission of ten men, B.C. 450, upon the return of a commission of three who had been sent abroad to study foreign laws and institutions. The Twelve Tables consisted partly of laws transcribed from the institutions of other nations, partly of such as were altered and accommodated to the manners of the Romans, partly of new provisions, and mainly, perhaps, of laws and usages under their ancient kings. They formed the source and foundation for the whole later development of Roman jurisprudence. They exist now only in fragmentary form. See 1 Kent, Comm. 520. These laws were substantially a codification, and not merely an incorporation, of the customary law of the people. There were Greek elements in them, but still they were es• sentially Roman. Hunter, Rom.L. 16. See Stephenson, Hist.Rom.L. 120; Sohm's Inst.Rom.L.

TWELVE-DAY WRIT. A writ issued under the St. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, for summary procedure on bills of exchange and promissory notes, abolished by rule of court in 1880. Wharton.

TWELVEMONTH. This term (in the singular number), includes all the year; but twelve months are to be computed according to twenty-eight days for every month. 6 Coke, 62.

TWELVE-MONTH BOND. Twelve-month bond," under statute effective Jan. 20, 1837 (Hartley's Dig. art. 1277), had a double character, first as an obligation known to the Spanish civil law, and second, as a summary statutory judgment, with the force and effect of any other judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction; it being also a consent judgment. Clements v. Texas Co., Tex.Civ.App., 273 S.W. 993, 1001.

TWENTY PER CENT RULE. In election con- tests is that votes of entire precinct will be thrown out when such large proportion of votes cast was illegal, and it is impossible to determine for whom illegal votes were cast. Johnson v. Caddell, 251 Ky. 14, 64 S.W.2d 441.

TWENTY-FOUR CALENDAR MONTHS. Two years; a period of exactly 730 days. Carey v. Deems, 101 N.J.L. 419, 129 A. 191, 193.

TWICE IN JEOPARDY. See Jeopardy; Once in Jeopardy.

TWISTING. Colloquially, in insurance, the misrepresentation or misstatements of fact or incomplete comparison of policies to induce the insured to give up a policy in one company for the purpose of taking insurance in another. Brandt v. Beha, 217 App.Div. 644, 216 N.Y.S. 178, 179.

TWO ISSUE RULE. Error in charge dealing exclusively with one of two or more complete and independent issues required to be presented to jury in civil action will be disregarded, if charge in respect to another independent issue which will support verdict is free from prejudicial error, unless it is disclosed that verdict is in fact based upon issue to which erroneous instruction related. Asteri v. City of Youngstown, Ohio App., 121 N.E.2d 143, 145.

TWO YEARS. A period of exactly 730 days; identical with twenty-four calendar months. Carey v. Deems, 101 N.J.L. 419, 129 A. 191, 193. Thus, it is held that an accusation filed on March 16, 1912, and charging the commission of an offense on March 16, 1910, was not filed "within two years" after the commission of the offense. McLendon v. State, 14 Ga.App. 274, 80 S.E. 692.

TWYHINDI. The lower order of Saxons, valued at 200s. in the scale of pecuniary mulcts inflicted for crimes. Cowell. See Twelfhindi.

TYBURN TICKET. In English law. A certificate which was given to the prosecutor of a felon to conviction. By the 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23, the original proprietor or first assignee of such certificate is exempted from all parish and ward offices within the parish or ward where the felony was committed. Bacon, Abr. Constable (C).

TYHTLAN. :n Saxon law. An accusation, impeachment, or charge of any offense.

TYING. A term which, as used in a contract of lease of patented machinery means that the lessee has secured only limited rights of use, and that if he exceeds such limited rights by agreeing not to use the machines of others he may lose his lease. United States v. United Shoe Machinery Co. of New Jersey, D.C.Mass., 222 F. 349, 388, 394.

TYING WIRE. In concrete construction, No. 16 black fencing wire used to fasten the steel together. Soule v. Northern Const. Co., 33 Cal.App. 300, 165 P. 21, 22.

TYLWITH. Brit. A tribe or family branching or issuing out of another. Cowell.

TYMBRELLA. In old English law, a tumbrel, castigatory, or ducking stool, anciently used as an instrument of punishment for common scolds.

TYPEWRITING. The process of printing letter by letter by the use of a typewriter, Acme Coal

Co. v. Northrup Nat. Bank of Iola, Kan., 23 Wyo. 66, 146 P. 593, L.R.A.1915D, 1084, an instrument operated by hand, and used largely in business requiring much correspondence with others, or in connection with commercial transactions. Hooper v. Kennedy, 100 Vt. 314, 137 A. 194, 196. Typewriting, for certain purposes and under different statutes, is sometimes deemed to be included within the term "writing," and sometimes within the term "printing."

TYRANNY. Arbitrary or despotic government; the severe and autocratic exercise of sovereign power, either vested constitutionally in one ruler, or usurped by him by breaking down the division and distribution of governmental powers.

TYRANT. A despot; a sovereign or ruler, legitimate or otherwise, who uses his power unjustly and arbitrarily, to the oppression of his subjects.

TYROTOXICON. In medical jurisprudence. A poisonous ptomaine produced in milk, cheese, cream, or ice-cream by decomposition of albuminous constituents.

TYRRA, or TOIRA. A mount or hill. Cowell.

TYTHE. Tithe, or tenth part.

After deduction of drawbacks; in excess of deductions or expenses.

Ultra Vires

The modern technical designation, in the law of corporations, of acts beyond the scope of the powers of a corporation, as defined by its charter or act of incorporation. State ex rel. v. Holston Trust Co., 168 Tenn. 546, 79 S.W.2d 1012, 1016. The term has a broad. application and includes not only acts prohibited by the charter, but acts which are in excess of powers granted and not prohibited. State ex rel. Supreme Temple of Pythian Sisters v. Cook, 234 Mo.App. 898, 136 S.W.2d 142, 146, and generally applied either when a corporation has no power whatever to do an act, or when the corporation has the power but exercises it irregularly. People ex rel. Barrett v. Bank of Peoria, 295 Ill.App. 543, 15 N.E.2d 333, 335. Act is "ultra vires" when corporation is without authority to perform it under any circumstances or for any purpose. Orlando Orange Groves Co. v. Hale, 107 Fla. 304, 144 So. 674, 676.

By doctrine of "ultra vires" a contract made by a corporation beyond the scope of its corporate powers is unlawful. Community Federal Say. & Loan Ass'n of Independence, Mo., v. Fields, C.C.A.Mo., 128 F.2d 705, 708.

While the phrase "ultra vires" has been used to designate, not only acts beyond the express and implied powers of a corporation, but also acts contrary to public policy or contrary to some express statute prohibiting them, the latter class of acts is now termed illegal, and the "ultra vires" confined to the former class. In re Grand Union Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 219 F. 353, 363; Staacke v. Routledge, 111 Tex. 489, 241 S.W. 994, 998; Pennsylvania H. Co. v. Minis, 120 Md. 461, 496, 87 A. 1062, 1072.

ULTRA POSSE NON POTEST ESSE, ET VICE VERSA. What is beyond possibility cannot exist, and the reverse, [what cannot exist is not possible.] Wing. Max. 100.

ULTRONEOUS WITNESS. In Scotch law. A volunteer witness; one who appears to give evidence without being called upon. 2 Alis.Crim.Pr. 393.

UMPIRAGE. The decision of an umpire. Powell v. Ford, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 288. The word "Umpirage," in reference to an umpire, is the same as the word "award," in reference to arbitrators; but "award" is commonly applied to the decision of the umpire also.

UMPIRE. One clothed with authority to act alone in rendering a decision where arbitrators have disagreed. Hughes v. National Fuel Co., 121 W.Va. 392, 3 S.E.2d 621, 626.

When matters in dispute are submitted to two or more arbitrators, and they do not agree in their decision, it is usual for another person to be called in as "umpire," to whose sole judgment it is then referred. Brown. And see Ingraham v. Whitmore, 75 Ill. 30; Tyler v. Webb, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 123; Lyon v. Blossom, 4 Duer (N.Y.) 325. An "umpire," strictly speaking, makes his award independently of that of the arbitrators. Dennis v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 90 N.J.Eq. 419, 107 A. 161, 163.

UN-. A prefix used indiscriminately, and may mean simply "not." Thus, "unlawful" means "not authorized by law." State v. Sanders, 136 La. 1059, 68 So. 125, 126, Ann.Cas.1916E, 105.

UN NE DOLT PRISE ADVANTAGE DE SON TORT DEMESNE. 2 And. 38, 40. One ought not to take advantage of his own wrong.

UNA PERSONA VIX POTEST SUPPLERE VICES DUARUM. 7 Coke, 118. One person can scarcely supply the place of two. See 9 H.L.Cas. 274.

UNA VOCE. Lat. With one voice; unanimously; without dissent.

UNABLE. This term, as used in a statute providing that evidence given in a former trial may be proved in a subsequent trial, where the witness is unable to testify, means mentally and physically unable. Hansen-Rynning v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na^{y}. Co., 105 Or. 67, 209 P. 462, 464.

UNACCRUED. Not become due, as rent on a lease. Elms Realty Co. v. Wood, 285 Mo. 130, 225 S.W. 1002, 1005.

UNADJUSTED. Uncertain; not agreed upon. Richardson v. Woodbury, 43 Me. 214.

UNALIENABLE. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred.

UNAMBIGUOUS. Susceptible of but one meaning. Lawrie v. Miller, Tex.Com.App., 45 S.W.2d 172, 173.

UNANIMITY. Agreement of all the persons concerned, in holding one and the same opinion or determination of any matter or question; as the concurrence of a jury in deciding upon their verdict. See Unanimous.

UNANIMOUS. To say that a proposition was adopted by a "unanimous" vote does not always mean that every one present voted for the proposition, but it may, and generally does, mean, when a viva voce vote is taken, that no one voted in the negative. State v. Stephens, 195 Mo.App. 34, 189 S.W. 630, 631.

UNASCERTAINED. Not certainly known or determined. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Owens, C.C.A.10, 78 F.2d 768, 773.

UNASCERTAINED DUTIES. Payment in gross, on an estimate as to amount, and where the merchant, on a final liquidation, will be entitled by law to allowances or deductions which do not depend on the rate of duty charged, but on the ascertainment of the quantity of the article subject to duty. Moke v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 274, Fed. Cas.No.9,698.

UNAVOIDABLE. Not avoidable, incapable of being shunned or prevented, inevitable, and necessary. Day Wood Heel Co. v. Rover, 123 Ohio St. 349, 175 N.E. 588, 590.

UNAVOIDABLE ACCIDENT. An inevitable accident. Leland v. Empire Engineering Co., 135 Md. 208, 108 A. 570, 575, which could not have been foreseen and prevented by using ordinary diligence, and resulting without fault. U. S. v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., D.C.Ark., 189 F. 471. Not necessarily an accident which it was physically impossible, in the nature of things, for the person to have prevented, but one not occasioned in any degree, either remotely or directly, by the want of such care or skill as the law holds every man bound to exercise. An accident which could not be prevented by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence. Wollaston v. Stiltz, 114 A. 198, 200, 1 W.W.Harr. 273; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Cook, 34 Ga.App. 1, 128 S.E. 75, 76. A casualty which occurs without negligence of either party and when all means which common prudence suggests have been used to prevent it. Bucktrot v. Partridge, 130 Okl. 122, 265 P. 768, 771.

The term is sometimes defined, however, as synonymous with "act of God,"-any accident produced by physical causes which are inevitable, such as lightnings, storms, perils of the sea, earthquakes, inundations, sudden death, or illness. Early v. Hampton, 15 Ga.App. 95, 82 S.E. 669, 671.

UNAVOIDABLE CASUALTY. An event or accident which human prudence, foresight, and sagacity cannot prevent, happening against will and without negligence. Fernwood Mining Co. v. Pluma, 211 S.W. 159, 163, 138 Ark. 193; Sabin v. Sunset Garden Co., 184 Okl. 106, 85 P.2d 294, 295. Welles v. Castles, 3 Gray (Mass.) 325. Within the meaning of statutes in several states relating to the vacation of judgments, means some casualty or misfortune growing out of conditions or circumstances that prevented the party or his attorney from doing something that, except therefor, would have been done, and does not include mistakes or errors of judgment growing out of misconstruction or understanding of the law, or the failure of parties or counsel through mistake to avail themselves of remedies, which if resorted to would have prevented th' casualty or misfortune.

If by any care, prudence, or foresight a thing could have been guarded against, it is not unavoidable. Central Line of Boats v. Lowe. 50 Ga. 509; E. P. Barnes & Bro. v. Eastin, 190 Ky. 392, 227 S.W. 578, 580. The term is not ordinarily limited to an act of God. Kirby v. Davis, 21(1 Ala. 192, 97 So. 655, 656.

The term refers to events which human prudence or foresight cannot prevent (but see Kohlman v. Moore, 175 Ky. 710, 194 S.W. 933, 935), such as disease and death, miscarriage of the mails, or mistake in the wording of a telegram. Wagner v. Lucas, 79 Okl. 231, 193 P. 421, 422. It may include the sickness. Thweatt v. Grand Temple and Tabernacle of International Order of Twelve Knights and Daughters of Tabor, of Arkansas, 128 Ark. 269, 193 S. W. 508, 509, or death of an attorney, Columbia County v. England, 151 Ark. 465, 236 S.W. 625, 626, or his failure, through some oversight or misunderstanding, to defend. Krause v. Hobart, 173 Iowa, 330, 155 N.W. 279, but it does not apply to the neglect of an attorney or his client; Gavin v. Heath, 125 Okl. 118, 256 P. 745, 746; McGuire v. Mishawaka Woolen Mills, 218 Ky. 530, 291 S.W. 747, 749.

UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE. A cause which reasonably prudent and careful men under like circumstances do not and would not ordinarily anticipate, and whose effects, under similar circumstances, they do not and would not ordinarily avoid. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. U. S., 114 C.C.A. 334, 194 F. 342.

UNAVOIDABLE DANGERS. This term in a marine policy covering unavoidable dangers of the river includes the unexplained capsizing of a vessel, though human intervention existed in the operation of the vessel, for "unavoidable dangers" mean those unpreventable by persons operating the vessel, and, like the term perils of the sea, include ail kinds of marine casualties, thus including accidents in which there is human intervention. A river vessel's tendency to turn over, due to topheavy construction, necessary on account of the shallowness of rivers, is an "unavoidable danger" within the policy. Hillman Transp. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. of New York, 268 Pa. 547, 112 A. 108, 111.

UNBOLTED CORN MEAL. The courts judicially know that corn meal is an unmixed meal made from entire grains of corn, and that "unbolted corn meal" is simply meal not bolted, or from which the bran has not been sifted or separated. Miller Grain & Commission Co. v. International Sugar Feed No. 2 Co., 197 Ala. 100, 72 So. 368.

UNBROKEN. Continuous, as adverse possession. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hoffman, Tex.Civ. App., 250 S.W. 246, 248.

UNCEASESATH. In Saxon law. An oath by relations not to avenge a relation's death. Blount.

UNCERTAINTY. The state or quality of being unknown or vague. Such vagueness, obscurity, or confusion in any written instrument, e. g., a will, as to render it unintelligible to those who are called upon to execute or interpret it, so that no definite meaning can be extracted from it.

UNCHASTITY. Impurity in mind and conduct, which may exist without actually engaging in unlawful sexual intercourse. State v. Valvoda, 170 Iowa 102, 152 N.W. 21, 23; Cooper v. State, 15 Ala.App. 657, 74 So. 753, 754.

UNCIA, Lat. In Roman law. An ounce; the twelfth of the Roman "as," or pound. The twelfth part of anything; the proportion of one-twelfth. 2 Bl. Comm. 462, note m.

UNCIA AGRI, UNCIA TERRIE. These phrases often occur in the charters of the British kings, and signify some measure or quantity of land. It is said to have been the quantity of twelve modii; each modius being possibly one hundred feet square. Jacob; Mon. Ang. tom. 3, pp. 198, 205.

UNCIARIUS H!ERES. Lat. In Roman law. An heir to one-twelfth of an estate or inheritance. Calvin.

UNCLE. The brother of one's father or mother. State v. Reedy, 44 Kan. 190, 24 P. 66; State v. Guiton, 51 La.Ann. 155, 24 So. 784; Capps v. State, 87 Fla. 388, 100 So. 172, 173.

UNCLEAN HANDS PRINCIPLE. Principle that one who has unclean hands is not entitled to relief in equity. Van Antwerp v. Van Antwerp, 242 Ala. 92, 5 So.2d 73, 78, 79, 80. The doctrine has no application unless party's wrongdoing has some proximate relation to the subject matter in controversy. Fritz v. Jungbluth, 141 Neb. 770, 4 N.W. 2d 911, 913, 914. Vercesi v. Petri, 334 Pa. 385, 5 A. 2d 563, 565.

UNCONDITIONAL. Not limited or affected by any condition;-applied especially to the quality of an insured's estate in the property insured. Libby Lumber Co. v. Pacific States Fire Ins. Co., 79 Mont. 166, 255 P. 340, 344, 60 A.L.R. 1; Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Schmidt, 89 C.C.A. 333, 162 F. 447. See the subtitle "Sole and unconditional owner" under the main title Owner.

UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAIN. All unconscionable bargain or contract is one which no man in his senses, not under delusion, would make, on the one hand, and which no fair and honest man would accept, on the other. Hume v. U. S., 10 S.Ct. 134, 132 U.S. 406, 33 L.Ed. 393; Edler v. Frazier, 174 Iowa 46, 156 N.W. 182, 187; Hall v. Wingate, 159 Ga. 630, 126 S.E. 796, 813; 2 Ves. 125; 4 Bouv. Inst. n. 3848.

UNCONSCIONABLE CONDUCT. Conduct that is monstrously harsh and shocking to the conscience. Domus Realty Corporation v. 3440 Realty Co., 179 Misc. 749, 40 N.Y.S.2d 69, 73.

UNCONSCIOUS. Not possessed of mind. Wilson v. Ray, 64 Ga.App. 540, 13 S.E.2d 848, 852.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL. That which is contrary to the constitution. The opposite of "constitutional." See State v. McCann, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 10; In re Rahrer, C.C.Kan., 43 F. 558, 10 L.R.A. 444; Norton v. Shelby County, 6 S.Ct. 1121, 118 U.S. 425, 30 L.Ed. 178. The word does not necessarily mean that the act assailed is contrary to sound principles of legislation. Ketterer v. Lederer, D. C.Pa., 269 F. 153, 154.

This word is used in two different senses. One, which may be called the English sense, is that the legislation conflicts with some recognized general principle. This is no more than to say that it is unwise, or is based upon a wrong or unsound principle, or conflicts with a generally accepted policy. The other, which may be called the American sense, is that the legislation conflicts with some provision of our written Constitution, which it is beyond the power of the Legislature to change. U. S. v. American Brewing Co., D.C.Pa., 1 F.2d 1001, 1002.

This expression as applied to an act of parliament means simply that it is, in the opinion of the speaker, opposed to the spirit of the English constitution; it cannot mean that the act is either a breach of the law or is void. When applied to a law passed by the French parliament, it means that the law is opposed to the articles of the constitution; it does not necessarily mean that the law in question is void, for it is by no means certain that any French court will refuse to enforce a law because it is unconstitutional. It would probably, though not of necessity, be, when employed by a Frenchman, a term of censure. Dicey, Const. 516.

UNCONTROLLABLE. Incapable of being controlled or ungovernable. Alford v. Zeigler, 65 Ga. App. 294, 16 S.E.2d 69, 72.

UNCONTROLLABLE IMPULSE. As an excuse for the commission of an act otherwise criminal, this term means an impulse towards its commission of such fixity and intensity that it cannot be resisted by the person subject to it, in the enfeebled condition of his will and moral sense resulting from derangement or mania. See Insanity. And see State v. O'Neil, 51 Kan. 651, 33 P. 287, 24 L.R.A. 555.

UNCORE PRIST. L. Fr. Still ready. A species of plea or replication by which the party alleges that he is still ready to pay or perform all that is justly demanded of him. In conjunction with the phrase "tout temps prist," it signifies that he has always been and still is ready to do what is required, thus saving costs where the whole cause is admitted, or preventing delay where it is a replication, if the allegation is made out. 3 Bl. Comm. 303.

UNCUTH. In Saxon law. Unknown; a stranger. A person entertained in the house of another was, on the first night of his entertainment, so called. Bract. fol. 124b. See Twa Night Gest.

UNDE NIHIL HABET. Lat. , In old English law. The name of the writ of dower, which lay for a widow, where no dower at all had been assigned her within the time limited by law. 3 Bl. Comm. 183.

UNDEFENDED. A term sometimes applied to one who is obliged to make his own defense when on trial, or in a civil cause. A cause is said to be undefended when the defendant makes default, in not putting in an appearance to the plaintiff's action; in not putting in his statement of defense; or in not appearing at the trial either personally or by counsel, after having received due notice. Mozley & Whitley.

UNDER. Sometimes used in its literal sense of below in position, beneath, but more frequently in its secondary meaning of "inferior" or "subordinate." Mills v. Stoddard, Mo., 49 U.S. 345, 8 How. 356, 12 L.Ed. 1107; Biordi v. Yanosevich, 93 Pa.Super. 578, 582.

Also according to; as, "under the testimony." Boughan v. State, 193 Ind. 66, 138 N.E. 87.

UNDER AND SUBJECT. Words frequently used in conveyances of land which is subject to a mortgage, to show that the grantee takes subject to such mortgage. See Walker v. Physick, 5 Pa. 203; Lavelle v. Gordon, 15 Mont. 515, 39 P. 740, 27 A.L. R.,N.S., 337, 401.

UNDER CONTROL. This phrase does not necessarily mean the ability to stop instanter under any and all circumstances, an automobile being "under control" within the meaning of the law if it is moving at such a rate, and the mechanism and power under such control, that it can be brought to a stop with a reasonable degree of celerity. Esponette v. Wiseman, 130 Me. 297, 155 A. 650, 653. Am. motorist is only bound to use that degree of care, caution, and prudence that an ordinarily careful, cautious, and prudent man would have used at the time under same or similar circumstances in operation of said automobile. Gregory v. Suhr, 221 Iowa 1283, 268 N.W. 14, 17. In general, as applied to street cars or railroad trains, the term denotes the control and preparation appropriate to probable emergencies. Lincoln v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co., 33 Cal.App. 83, 164 P. 412, 415; Torantolla v. Kansas City Rys. Co., Mo. App., 226 S.W. 617, 618. It is such control as will enable a train to be stopped promptly if need should arise. Missouri K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 103 Kan. 1, 175 P. 97, 102. It implies the ability to stop within the distance the track is. seen to be clear. Fuller v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na^{y}. Co., 93 Or. 160, 181 P. 338, 341.

UNDER HERD. A term conveying the idea that a considerable number of domestic animals are gathered together and held together by herders in constant attendance and in control of their movements from place to place on a public range or within certain areas. Schreiner v. Deep Creek Stock Ass'n, 68 Mont. 104, 217 P. 663, 665.

UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR. Phrase as used in statutes or ordinances prohibiting the operation of motor vehicle by a party under the influence of intoxicating liquor covers not only all well-known and easily recognized conditions and degrees of intoxication, but any abnormal mental or physical condition which is the result of indulging in any degree in intoxicating liquors, and which tends to deprive one of that clearness of intellect and control of himself which he would otherwise possess. Commonwealth v. Long, 131 Pa.Super. 28, 198 A. 474, 477. Any condition where intoxicating liquor has so far affected the nervous system, brain or muscles of the driver as to impair, to an appreciable degree, his ability to operate his automobile in the manner that an ordinary, prudent and cautious man, in full possession of his faculties, using reasonable care, would operate or drive under like conditions. Luellen v. State, 64 Okl.Cr. 382, 81 P.2d 323, 328.

UNDER WAY. Not being at anchor, or made fast to the shore, or aground;—said of vessels subject to the navigation rules embraced in Act June 7, 1897, c. 4, 30 Stat. 96 (33 U.S.C.A. § 154 et seq., 46 U.S.C.A. § 381 note). The George W. Elder, C.C.A.Or., 249 F. 956, 958; Kaseroff v. Petersen, C.C.A.Cal., 136 F.2d 184, 186.

Thus, a vessel lying with her nose against the bank of a stream and holding her position against the current by the movement of her wheel is a vessel under way, and not entitled to the rights of an anchored vessel. The Ruth, 108 C.C.A. 199, 186 F. 87. And a steamer being towed down stream by tugs without any steam on her boilers, except for steering purposes, is nevertheless "under way." The Scandinavia, D.C.N.Y., 11 F.2d 542, 543.

UNDER–CHAMBERLAINS OF THE EXCHEQUER. Two officers who cleaved the tallies written by the clerk of the tallies, and read the same, that the clerk of the pell and comptrollers thereof might see their entries were true. They also made searches for records in the treasury, and had the custody of Domesday Book. Cowell. The office is now abolished.

UNDERCURRENT OR UNDERFLOW OF SURFACE STREAM. Those waters which slowly find their way through sand and gravel constituting bed of a stream, or lands under or immediately adjacent to stream, and are themselves part, of surface stream. Maricopa County Municipal Water Conservation Dist. No. 1 v. Southwest Cotton Co., 39 Ariz. 65, 4 P.2d 369, 380.

UNDERFLOW. See Undercurrent

UNDERGROUND WATERS. See Water, subtitle Subterranean Waters.

UNDERGhOWTH. A term applicable to plants growing under or below other greater plants. Clay v. Telegraph Co., 70 Miss. 411, 11 So. 658.

UNDER-LEASE. Where lessee lets premises for less time than period of his unexpired term, Marathon Oil Co. v. Lambert, Tex.Civ.App., 103 S.W. 2d 176, 181. Also the transfer of a part only of the lands, though for the whole term. Fulton v. Stuart, 2 Ohio 216, 15 Am.Dec. 542; contra, Cox v. Fenwick, 4 Bibb, Ky., 538.

See, also, that title under main title Lease.

UNDERLIE THE LAW. In Scotch criminal procedure, an accused person, in appearing to take his trial, is said "to compear and underlie the law." Mozley & Whiteley.

UNDER-SHERIFF. An officer who acts directly under the sheriff, and performs all the duties of the sheriff's office, a few only excepted where the personal presence of the high-sheriff is necessary. The sheriff is civilly responsible for the acts or omissions of his under-sheriff. Mozley & Whiteley. See Delfelder v. Teton Land and Investment Co., 46 Wyo. 142, 24 P.2d 702.

A sheriff's deputy, who, being designated by the sheriff as an "under sheriff," becomes his chief deputy with authority by virtue of his appointment to execute all the ordinary duties of the office of sheriff. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal.App. 405, 132 P. 454, 458. A distinction is sometimes made between this officer and a deputy, the latter being appointed for a special occasion or purpose, while the former discharges, in general, all the duties required by the sheriff's office.

UNDERSIGNED, THE. The person whose name is signed or the persons whose names are signed at the end of a document; the subscriber or subscribers. Farmers' Exchange Bank of Elvaston v. Sollars, 353 Ill. 224, 187 N.E. 289, 290, 89 A.L.R. 398.

UNDERSTAND. To know; to apprehend the meaning; to appreciate; as, to understand the nature and effect of an act. Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKechnie, Tex.Civ.App., 214 S.W. 456, 460; International-Great Northern R. Co. v. Pence, Tex. Civ.App., 113 S.W.2d 206, 210. To have a full and clear knowledge of ; to comprehend. Fox v. Schaeffer, 131 Conn. 439, 41 A.2d 46, 49.

Thus, to invalidate a deed on the ground that the grantor did not understand the nature of the act, the grantor must be incapable of comprehending that the effect of the act would divest him of the title to the land set forth in the deed. Miller v. Folsom, 49 Okl. 74, 149 P. 1185, 1188. As used in connection with the execution of wills and other instruments, the term includes the realization of the practical effects and consequences of the proposed act. Tillman v. Ogren, 99 Misc. 539, 166 N.Y.S. 39, 40.

UNDERSTANDING. In the law of contracts. An agreement. Southern Ry. Co. v. Powell, 124 Va. 65, 97 S.E. 357, 358. An implied agreement resulting from the express terms of another agreement, whether written or oral. United States v. United Shoe Machinery Co., D.C.Mo., 234 F. 127, 148. An informal agreement, or a concurrence as to its terms. Barkow v. Sanger, 47 Wis. 507, 3 N.W. 16. A valid contract engagement of a somewhat informal character. Winslow v. Lumber Co., 32 Minn. 238, 20 N.W. 145. This is a loose and ambiguous term, unless it be accompanied by some expression to show that it constituted a meeting of the minds of parties upon something respecting which they intended to be bound. Camp v. Waring, 25 Conn. 529.

The term may also import simply a wish or hope, as in a will bequeathing property to another with the "understanding" that at the legatee's death, all property derived under the will should be given to the testatrix's sister. Vincent v. Rix, 127 Misc. 639, 217 N.Y.S. 393, 399.

UNDERSTOOD. The phrase "it is understood," when employed as a word of contract in a written agreement, has the same force as the words "it is agreed." Phoenix Iron & Steel Co. v. Wilkoff Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 253 F. 165, 167; Mertz v. Fleming, 185 Wis. 58, 200 N.W. 655, 656.

UNDERTAKE. To take on oneself; to engage in; to enter upon; to take in hand; set about; attempt; as, to undertake a task; a journey; and, specifically, to take upon oneself solemnly or expressly; to lay oneself under obligation or to enter into stipulation; to perform or to execute; to covenant; contract; hence to guarantee; be surety for; promise; to accept or take over as a charge; to accept responsibility for the care of; to engage to look after or attend to; as to undertake a patient or guest. Lowe v. Poole, 235 Ala. 441, 179 So. 536, 540. To endeavor to perform, try, to promise, engage, or agree, assume an obligation. Torelle v. Templeman, 94 Mont. 149, 21 P.2d 60.

UNDERTAKER. One who undertakes (to do something). In a mechanic's lien statute, the word has been held not to include a mere furnisher of material in connection with the erection of the building. In re American Lime Co., D.C.Tenn., 201 F. 433, 435.

One whose business is to prepare the dead for burial and to take the charge and management of funerals. Anderson v. State, 19 Ala.App. 606, 99 So. 778, 779; State v. Whyte, 177 Wis. 541, 188 N.W. 607, 608, 23 A.L.R. 67.

UNDERTAKING. A promise, engagement, or stipulation. An engagement by one of the parties to a contract to the other, as distinguished from the mutual engagement of the parties to each other. 5 East 17; 4 B. & Ald. 595, followed in Alexander v. State, 28 Tex.App. 186, 12 S.W. 595. It does not necessarily imply a consideration. Thompson v. Blanchard, 3 N.Y. 335.

In a somewhat special sense, a promise given in the course of legal proceedings by a party or his counsel, generally as a condition to obtaining some concession from the court or the opposite party. Sweet.

A promise or security in any form. Code, Iowa, § 48, par. 20.

An official undertaking, such as one by a county clerk or other officer under statutes, unlike an official bond, is not required to be signed by the principal. Fleischner v. Florey, 111 Or. 35, 224 P. 831, 832.

UNDER-TENANT. A tenant under one who is himself a tenant; one who holds by under-lease. See, also, Under-Lease.

UNDERTOOK. Agreed; promised; assumed. This is the technical word to be used in alleging the promise which forms the basis of an action of assumpsit. Bacon, Abr. Assumpsit (F).

UNDER-TREASURER OF ENGLAND. He who transacted the business of the lord high treasurer.

UNDER-TUTOR. In Louisiana. In every tutorship there shall be an under-tutor, whom it shall be the duty of the judge to appoint at the time letters of tutorship are certified for the tutor. It is the duty of the under-tutor to act for the minor whenever the interest of the minor is in opposition to the interest of the tutor. Civ. Code La. arts. 273, 275.

UNDERWRITE. To insure life or property. See Underwriter.

To insure the sale of corporate bonds or similar securities to the public by agreeing to buy those which are not sold. Busch v. Stromberg-Carlson Tel. Mfg. Co., C.C.A. Mo., 217 F. 328, 330; Stewart v. G. L. Miller & Co., 161 Ga. 919, 132 S.E. 535, 538, 45 A.L.R. 559. To agree to sell bonds, etc., to the public, or to furnish the necessary money for such securities, and to buy those which cannot be sold. Minot v. Burroughs, 223 Mass. 595, 112 N.E. 620, 623; Rauer's Law & Collection Co. v. Harrell, 32 Cal. App. 45, 162 P. 125, 131.

An underwriting contract, aside from its use in insurance, is an agreement, made before corporate shares are brought before the public, that In the event of the public not taking all the shares or the number mentioned in the agreement, the underwriter will take the shares which the public do not take; "underwriting" being a purchase, together with a guaranty of a sale of the bonds. Fraser v. Home Telephone & Telegraph Co., 91 Wash. 253, 157 P. 692, 694; In re Hackett, Hoff and Thiermann, C.C.A.Wis., 70 F.2d 815, 819.

UNDERWRITER. The person who insures another, as in a fire or life policy; the insurer. See Childs v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 66 Minn. 393, 69 N. W. 141, 35 L.R.A. 99. Especially, a person who joins with others in entering into a marine policy of insurance as insurer.

One who underwrites corporate bonds or stocks. Fraser v. Home Telephone & Telegraph Co., 91 Wash. 253, 157 P. 692, 694. One who agrees with others to purchase an entire issue of bonds or other securities, usually at the end of a certain period. By reason of such underwriting, the bonds, etc., obtain a market value or a value as collateral security. See Underwrite.

UNDISCLOSED PRINCIPAL. If, at time of transaction conducted by agent, other party thereto has no notice that agent is acting for a principal, the principal is "undisclosed principal." Dodge v. Blood, 299 Mich. 364, 300 N.W. 121, 123.

UNDISPUTED. Meaning "uncontested," rather than "uncontradicted." Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Stallings, 165 Md. 615, 170 A. 163, 164.

UNDISPUTED FACT. Within the meaning of a statute, an admitted fact, which the court has not deemed sufficiently material to add to the finding, or has inadvertently omitted from it; a fact not found by the court does not become an "undisputed fact," merely because one or more witnesses testify to it without direct contradiction. Dexter Yarn Co. v. American Fabrics Co., 102 Conn. 529, 129 A. 527, 532.

UNDIVIDED PROFITS. Profits which have not in fact been divided or distributed, English & Mersick Co. v. Eaton, D.C.Conn., 299 F. 646, 649; or otherwise used, Douglas v. Edwards, C.C.A.N. Y., 298 F. 229, 237. Current undistributed earnings. Edwards v. Douglas, 46 S.Ct. 85, 89, 269 U. S. 204, 70 L.Ed. 235. Winkelman v. General Motors Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.Supp. 960, 966. Profits not set aside as surplus or distributed in dividends. First Nat. Bank v. Moon, 102 Kan. 334, 170 P. 33, 34, L.R.A.1918C, 986; Phillips v. U. S., D.C.Pa., 12 F.2d 598, 600.

The terms "surplus" and "undivided profits" have different meanings in banking circles. State ex rel. Payne v. Exchange Bank of Natchitoches, 84 So. 481, 482, 147 La. 25. Surplus, like the capital stock, constitutes the working capital of the bank and is, in addition, a fund for the protection of the depositors. The "undivided profits" constitute a temporary fund changing in size from day to day and carried only until dividend periods when it is distributed to the stockholders or transferred to the permanent surplus. It is the fund from which the expenses and losses of the bank are paid. Sarles v. Scandinavian American Bank, 33 N.D. 40, 156 N.W. 556, 557.

"Surplus" and "undivided profits," as commonly employed in corporate accounting, denote an excess in the aggregate value of the assets of the corporation over the sum of liabilities, including capital stock; "surplus" describing such part of the excess in the value of the corporate assets as is treated by the corporation as part of the permanent capital, while the term "undivided profits" designates such part of the excess as consists of profits neither distributed as dividends nor carried to the surplus account. Willcuts v. Milton Dairy Co., 48 S.Ct. 71, 72, 275 U.S. 215, 72 L.Ed. 247.

UNDIVIDED RIGHT. An undivided right or title, or a title to an undivided portion of an estate, is that owned by one of two or more tenants in common or joint tenants before partition. Held by the same title by two or more persons, whether their rights are equal as to value or quantity, or unequal. See In re Wellington, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 98, 26 Am.Dec. 631.

UNDRES. In old English law. Minors or persons under age not capable of bearing arms. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 9; Cowell.

UNDUE. More than necessary; not proper; illegal. Webb v. Superior Court in and for Del Norte County, 28 Cal.App. 391, 152 P. 957, 958. See, also, Elk Hotel Co. v. United Fuel Gas Co., 75 W.Va. 200, 83 S.E. 922, 924, L.R.A.1917E, 970.

It denotes something wrong, according to the standard of morals which the law enforces in relations of men, and in fact illegal, and qualifies the purpose with which influence is exercised or result which it accomplishes. Morris v. Morris, 192 Miss. 518, 6 So.2d 311, 312.

UNDUE INFLUENCE. Any improper or wrongful constraint, machination, or urgency of persuasion whereby the will of a person is overpowered and he is induced to do or forbear an act which he would not do or would do if left to act freely. Powell v. Betchel, 340 Ill. 330, 172 N.E. 765, 768. Influence which deprives person influenced of free agency or destroys freedom of his will and rem ders it more the will of another than his own. Conner v. Brown, Del., 3 A.2d 64, 71, 9 W.W.Harr. 529; In re Velladao's Estate, 31 Cal.App.2d 355, 88 P.2d 187, 190.

"Undue influence" is not necessarily physical injury or threat of it, but is a species of duress, or at least often indistinguishable from it. Trigg v. Trigg, 37 N.M. 296, 22 P.2d 119. And although there is no coercion amounting to duress, but transaction is result of moral, social, or domestic force, consciously and designedly exerted on party, peculiarly susceptible to external pressure on account of mental weakness, old age, ignorance, and the like, controlling the free action of the will, and preventing a true consent, equity may relieve against the transaction on the ground of "undue influence." In re Null's Estate, 302 Pa. 64, 153 A. 137, 139. But modest persuasion or arguments addressed to the understanding or the appeal of affection cannot be deemed "undue influence". Calveard v. Reynolds, 281 Ky. 518, 136 S.W.2d 795, 799.

Undue influence consists (1) in the use, by one in whom a confidence is reposed by another, or who holds a real or apparent authority over him, of such confidence or authority, for the purpose of obtaining an unfair advantage over him; (2) in taking an unfair advantage of another's weakness of mind; or (3) in taking a grossly oppressive and unfair advantage of another's necessities or distress. Buchanan v. Prall, 39 N.D. 423, 167 N.W. 488, 489; Dolliver v. Dolliver, 94 Cal. 642, 30 P. 4.

"Undue influence," such as will invalidate a will, must be something which destroys the free agency of the testator at the time when the instrument is made, and which, in effect, substitutes the will of another for that of the testator. It is not sufficient that the testator was influenced by the beneficiaries in the ordinary affairs of life, or that he was surrounded by them and in confidential relations with them at the time of its execution. Mere general influence, not brought to bear on the testamentary act, is not undue influence; but in order to constitute undue influence, it must be used directly to procure the will, and must amount to coercion destroying the free agency of the testator. Mere suspicion that undue influence was brought to bear is not sufficient to justify the setting aside of the will. Myers v. Myers, 130 Okl. 184, 266 P. 452, 455. To constitute "undue influence," justifying denial or revocation of probate of will, testator's mind must have been so controlled or affected by persuasion or pressure, artful or fraudulent contrivances, or by influences of persons in close confidential relations with him, that he is not left to act intelligently, understandingly, and voluntarily, but subject to will or purposes of another. In re Starr's Estate, 125 Fla. 536, 170 So. 620. Solicitation, importunity, argument, advice, and persuasion are not "undue influence" sufficient to avoid a contract or will. Influence obtained by persuasion and argument, or gained by kindness and affection, is not prohibited, where no imposition or fraud is practiced, and where the person's will is not overcome. Barron v. Reardon, 137 Md. 308, 113 A. 283, 285; Stump v. Sturn, C.C.A.W.Va., 254 F. 535, 538.

Undue influence at elections occurs where any one interferes with the free exercise of a voter's franchise, by violence, intimidation, or otherwise. It is a misdemeanor. 1 Russ.Crimes, 321; Steph. Crim. Dig. 79.

UNEARNED INCREMENT. Value due to no labor or expenditure on the part of an owner but to natural causes making an increased demand for it, such as increase of population or the general progress of society. Miller v. Huntington & Ohio Bridge Co., 123 W.Va. 320, 15 S.E.2d 687, 699.

UNEDUCATED. Not synonymous with illiterate. A man might be able to read and write, carry on a business correspondence, understand business transactions, and be bound by all his contracts, and yet be an "uneducated" man. Baker v. Patton, 144 Ga. 502, 87 S.E. 659, 660.

UNEMPLOYMENT. State of being not employed, lack of employment. A. J. Meyer & Co. v. Unemployment Compensation Commission, 348 Mo. 147, 152 S.W.2d 184, 189.

UNEQUAL. Not uniform. Los Angeles County v. Ransohoff, 24 Cal.App.2d 238, 74 P.2d 828, 830. Ill-balanced; uneven; partial; unfair;—not synonymous with inappropriate, which means unsuitable, unfit, or improper. Lane v. St. Denis Catholic Church of Benton, Mo.App., 274 S.W. 1103, 1106.

UNEQUIVOCAL. Clear; plain; capable of being understood in only one way, or as clearly demonstrated; free from uncertainty, or without doubt; and, when used with reference to the burden of proof, it implies proof of the highest possible character and it imports proof of the nature of mathematical certainty. Berry v. Maywood Mut. Water Co. No. 1, 11 Cal.App.2d 479, 53 P.2d 1032; Molyneux v. Twin Falls Canal Co., 54 Idaho 619, 35 P.2d 651, 656, 94 A.L.R. 1264.

UNERRING. Incapable of error or failure; certain; sure; infallible. Gardner v. State, 27 Wyo. 316, 196 P. 750, 752, 15 A.L.R. 1040.

UNETHICAL. Not ethical; hence, colloquially, not according to business or professional standards. Kraushaar v. La Vin, 181 Misc. 508, 42 N. Y.S.2d 857, 859.

UNETHICAL CONDUCT. Authorizing recovery of broker's commission for sale completed by another broker means a purpose to obtain profits from broker's exertions without payment, and exists where employer revokes the broker's authority and makes the sale through other means when the broker has performed all he has undertaken or is plainly or evidently approaching success. Kacavas v. Diamond, 303 Mass. 88, 20 N.E. 2d 936, 938.

UNEXCEPTIONABLE. Without any fault; not subject to any objection or criticism. Washam v. Beaty, 210 Ala. 635, 99 So. 163, 167.

UNEXPECTED. Not expected, coming without warning, sudden. Bachus v. Ronnebaum, 98 Ind. App. 603, 186 N.E. 386, 387.

UNEXPIRED TERM. Remainder of a period prescribed by law after a portion of such time has passed, and phrase is not synonymous with "vacancy." State ex rel. Sanchez v. Dixon, La.App., 4 So.2d 591, 596.

UNFAIR. In the labor movement, unfriendly to organized labor; refusing to recognize its rules and regulations ;—applied particularly to employers, e. g., one who refuses to employ members of a trade union. Steffes v. Motion Picture Mach. Operators' Union, 136 Minn. 200, 161 N.W. 524. A characterization of an employer who refuses to conduct his business in manner desired by union. John R. Thompson Co. v. Delicatessen and Cafeteria Workers Union Local 410, 126 N.J. Eq. 119, 8 A.2d 130, 133; Blossom Dairy Co. v.

International Brotherhood of Teamsters, 125 W. Va. 165, 23 S.E.2d 645, 650.

UNFAIR COMPETITION. A term which may be applied generally to all dishonest or fraudulent rivalry in trade and commerce, but is particularly applied in the courts of equity (where it may be restrained by injunction) to the practice of endeavoring to substitute one's own goods or products in the markets for those of another, having an established reputation and extensive sale, by means of imitating or counterfeiting the name, title, size, shape, or distinctive pecularities of the article, or the shape, color, label, wrapper, or general appearance of the package, or other such simulations, the imitation being carried far enough to mislead the general public or deceive an unwary purchaser, and yet not amounting to an absolute counterfeit or to the infringement of a trade-mark or trade-name. Called in France "concurrence deloyale" and in Germany "unlauterer Wettbewerb." Reddaway v. Banham, [1896] App.Cas. 199; Singer Mfg. Co. v. June Mfg. Co., 16 S.Ct. 1002, 163 U.S. 169, 41 L.Ed. 118; Dennison Mfg. Co. v. Thomas Mfg. Co., C.C.Del., 94 F. 651; Sterling Remedy Co. v. Eureka Chemical Co., 25 C.C.A. 314, 80 F. 108.

The simulation by one person of the name, materials, color scheme, symbols, patterns, or devices employed by another for purpose of deceiving the public, or substitution of goods, or wares of one person for those of another, thus falsely inducing purchase of goods and obtaining benefits belonging to competitor. Mathews Conveyor Co. v. Palmer-Bee Co., C.C.A.Mich., 135 F.2d 73, 84; Esskay Art Galleries v. Gibbs, 205 Ark. 1157, 172 S.W.2d 924, 926. American Fork & Hoe Co. v. Stampit Corporation, C.C.A.Ohio, 125 F.2d 472, 474, 475. Passing off, or attempting to pass off upon the public the goods or business of one person as the goods or business of another. Westminister Laundry Co. v. Hesse Envelope Co., 174 Mo.App. 238, 156 S.W. 767, 768; Sayre v. McGill Ticket Punch Co., D.C.Ill., 200 F. 771, 773; Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. v. Oil City Refiners, C.C.A.Ohio, 136 F.2d 470, 474. The selling of another's product as one's own. A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corporation v. United States, N.Y., 55 S.Ct. 837, 844, 295 U.S. 495, 79 L.Ed. 1570, 97 A.L.R. 947. The sale of goods by means which shock judicial sensibilities. Margarete Steiff v. Bing, D.C.N.Y., 215 F. 204, 206. See, however, Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, 40 S.Ct. 572, 575, 253 U.S. 421, 64 L.Ed. 993. Also deceitful advertising which injures a competitor, bribery of employees, secret rebates and concessions, and other devices of unfair trade. In re Northern Pigment Co., Cust. & Pat. App., 71 F.2d 447, 453.

Fraudulent intent is a necessary ingredient of unfair competition. Queen Mfg. Co. v. Isaac Ginsberg & Bros., C.C.A.Mo., 25 F.2d 284, 288.

The equitable doctrine of "unfair competition" is not confined to cases of actual market competition between similar products of different parties, but extends to all cases in which one party fraudulently seeks to sell his goods as those of another. Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Dumore Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 35 F.2d 555, 557.

Test of "unfair competition" is, not whether distinction between two competing products can be recognized when placed alongside each other, but whether, when the two products are not viewed together, a purchaser of ordinary prudence would be induced by reason of the marked resemblance in general effect to mistake one for the other despite differences in matters of detail. Ralston Purina Co. v. Checker Food Products Co., Mo.App., 80 S.W.2d 717, 719, 720.

UNFAIR HEARING. Where the defect, or the practice complained of, was such as might have led to a denial of justice, or where there was absent one of the elements deemed essential to due process. Ex parte Bridges, D.C.Cal., 49 F.Supp. 292, 302, 306; Bufalino v. Irvine, C.C.A.Kan., 103 F.2d 830, 832; Kielema v. Crossman, C.C.A.Tex., 103 F.2d 292, 293.

UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. Within National Labor Relations Act for an employer: (1) To interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities, for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection. (2) To dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it. (3) By discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization. (4) To discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed charges or given testimony under the Act. (5) To refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of his employees. National Labor Relations Act, §§ 7, 8, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 102.1 et seq., 157, 158.

The following has been held to be "unfair labor practice" under National Relations Act:

Failure to re-employ striking employees. Western Cartridge Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.7, 139 F.2d 855, 858. Refusal of employer to reinstate union members who were evicted from plant unless members would withdraw from union. National Labor Relations Board v. J. G. Boswell Co., C.C.A.9, 136 F.2d 585, 590, 592, 596. Refusal of employer to bargain collectively in good faith. National Labor Relations Board v. Griswold Mfg. Co., C.C.A.3, 106 F.2d 713, 724; National Labor Relations Board v. Somerset Shoe Co., C.C.A.1, 111 F.2d 681, 688, 689. Threats by employer to close if union gained a foothold in plant. National Labor Relations Board v. J. G. Boswell Co., C.C.A.9, 136 F.2d 585, 590, 592, 596. Anti-union statements made by employer's supervisory employees during and after strike, together with statement to one of the strikers that he would never get a job in that town anymore. N. L. R. B. v. Indiana Desk Co., C.C.A.7, 149 F.2d 987, 992, 996. Refusal of employer to permit posting of a notice that employer would not discriminate against employees who wished to join union. National Labor Relations Board v. J. G. Boswell Co., C.C.A.9, 136 F.2d 585, 590, 592, 596. Discharge of an employee because of membership in or activity on behalf of a labor organization. National Labor Relations Board v. Newark Morning Ledger, C.C.A.3, 120 F.2d 262, 268; National Labor Relations Board v. Bank of America Trust & Savings Ass'n, C.C.A.9, 130 F.2d 624, 628, 629. Employer's interference with and his dominating formation and administration of new labor organization. National Labor Relations Board v. Swift & Co., C.C.A.8, 116 F.2d 143, 145 146; National Labor Relations Board v. Blossom Products Corporation, C.C.A.3, 121 F.2d 260, 262; National Labor Relations Board v. Stackpole Carbon Co., C.C.A.3, 105 F.2d 167, 173, 175. Refusal of employer which had refused to bargain with union which had been certified as the exclusive bargaining agent. National Labor Relations Board v. John Engelhorn & Sons, C.C.A.3, 134 F.2d 553, 558. Assault by persons employed by manufacturer upon union organizers or sympathizers. National Labor Relations Board v. Ford Motor Co., C.C.A.6, 114 F.2d 905, 911, 915. Discharge of employee because he would not become member of union in accordance with closed shop agreement. Virginia Electric & Power Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.4, 132 F.2d 390, 396.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION. This phrase within Federal Trade Commission Act has broader meaning than common-law term "unfair competition," but its scope cannot be precisely defined, and what constitutes "unfair methods of competition" must be determined in particular instances, upon evidence, in light of particular competitive conditions and of what is found to be a specific and substantial public interest. Federal Trade Commission Act § 5, 15 U.S.C.A. § 45. A.L.A. Schechter Poultry Corporation v. United States, N.Y., 55 S.Ct. 837, 844, 295 U.S. 495, 79 L.Ed. 1570, 97 A.L.R. 947.

The term though not defined by the statute is clearly inapplicable to practices never heretofore regarded as opposed to good morals because characterized by deception, bad faith, fraud, or oppression, or as against public policy because of their dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly.. The act was not intended to fetter free and fair competition as commonly understood and practiced by honorable opponents in trade. In re Amtorg Trading Corporation, Cust & Pat.App., 75 F.2d 826, 830. But a method was said to be an unfair method if it does not leave to each actual or potential competitor a fair opportunity for play of his contending force engendered by an honest desire for gain. California Rice Industry v. Federal Trade Commission, C.C.A.9, 102 F.2d 716, 721.

UNFAIR TRADE, DOCTRINE OF. The doctrine that one person has no right to sell goods as goods of another, nor to do other business as the business of another. Foster Canning Co. v. Lardan Packing Co., Sup., 17 N.Y.S.2d 583, 585.

UNFAITHFUL. Characterized by bad faith,—not synonymous with "illegal," which means unlawful or contrary to law, nor with "improper," which, as applied to conduct, implies such conduct as a man of ordinary and reasonable prudence would not, under the circumstances, have been guilty of. State v. American Surety Co. of New York, 26 Idaho 652, 145 P. 1097, 1104, Ann.Cas. 1916E, 209.

UNFINISHED. Not completed; not brought to an end; imperfect; the last effort, as a final touch is given to a work. Bell & Graddy v. O'Brien, Tex. Civ.App., 113 S.W.2d 560, 562.

UNFIT. Unsuitable, incompetent, not adapted or qualified for a particular use or service, having no fitness. Morse v. Caldwell, 55 Ga.App. 804, 191 S.E. 479, 488.

UNFIT FOR USE AS A BEVERAGE. This language in a statute is not necessarily applicable to an alcoholic compound or preparation merely because it may be drunk in sufficient quantities to produce death. Thamann v. Merritt, 111 Neb. 639, 197 N.W. 413, 414.

UNFORESEEN. Not foreseen, not expected. Pampel v. Board of Examiners, 114 Mont. 380, 136 P.2d 991, 994.

UNFORESEEN CAUSE. With reference to causes excusing delay, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, in giving notice of injury, a cause which could not have been reasonably foreseen as likely to arise or occur, and yet is of such a nature as to have substantially interfered with the giving of the notice. Wardwell's Case, 121 Me. 216, 116 A. 447, 448. A reasonable cause. Donahue v. R. A. Sherman's Sons Co., 39 R.I. 373, 98 A. 109, L.R.A. 1917A, 76.

UNFORESEEN EVENT. In the civil law. A vis major; an uncontrollable force;—so used in Civ. Code La. art. 2697, relating to the termination of a lease by the total destruction of the property. Knapp v. Guerin, 144 La. 754, 81 So. 302, 305.

UNGELD. In Saxon law An outlaw; a person whose murder required no composition to be made, or weregeld to be paid, by his slayer.

UNHARMED. Within provision of Federal Kidnapping Act that death sentence shall not be imposed if kidnapped person has been liberated unharmed, means uninjured. Federal Kidnapping Act § 1 et seq., as amended, 18 U.S.C.A. § 1201 et seq. Robinson v. U. S., Ky., 65 S.Ct. 666, 668, 324 U.S. 282, 89 L.Ed. 944.

UNIATE CHURCH. One united with Rome and subject to control by local ecclesiastical authority representing the Vatican. Drozda v. Bassos, 260 App.Div. 408, 23 N.Y.S.2d 544, 547.

UNICA TAXATIO. The obsolete language of a special award of venire, where, of several defendants, one pleads, and one lets judgment go by default, whereby the jury, who are to try and assess damages on the issue, are also to assess damages against the defendant suffering judgment by default. Wharton.

UNIFACTORAL OBLIGATION. See Contract.

UNIFIED. Made one. Adams v. Salt River Valley Water Users' Ass'n, 53 Ariz. 374, 89 P.2d 1060, 1071.

UNIFORM, n. Within the meaning of an ordinance requiring a traction company to give free transportation to members of the police force and fire department when in uniform, a plain clothes man, whose only prescribed uniform was a metal badge which might be worn concealed, while wearing such badge was "in uniform." Montgomery Light & Traction Co. v. Avant, 202 Ala. 404, 80 So. 497, 498, 3 A.L.R. 384.

UNIFORM, adj. Conforming to one rule, mode, or unvarying standard; not different at different times or places; applicable to all places or divisions of a country. People v. Vickroy, 266 Ill. 384, 107 N.E. 638, 640. Equable; applying alike to all within a class. Bufkin v. Mitchell, 106 Miss. 253, 63 So. 458, 459, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 428.

A statute is general and uniform in its operation when it operates equally upon all persons who are brought within the relations and circumstances provided for, McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20 Iowa, 342. Stevens v. Village of Nashwauk, 161 Minn. 20, 200 N.W. 927, 929, when all persons under the same conditions and in the same circumstances are treated alike, and classification is reasonable and naturally inherent in the subject-master. Kelly v. Finney, 207 Ind. 557, 194 N.E. 157, 166.

The words "general" and "uniform" as applied to laws have a meaning antithetical to special or discriminatory laws. Ex parte Nowak, 184 Cal. 701, 195 P. 402, 404. The term "uniform," however, does not mean universal. Watson v. G.eely, 67 Cal.App. 328, 227 P. 664, 670.

The burdens of taxation, to be uniform, must have the essential of equality, and must bear alike upon all the property within the limits of the unit wherein it is lawful to levy taxes for a purpose, whether that unit be the state, county, or a municipality. Lang v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 29, 226 S.W. 379, 382. See, also, Jordan v. Duval County, 68 Fla. 48, 66 So. 298, 299. And requirement is met when tax is equal on all persons belonging to descibed class on which tax is imposed. Hilton v. Harris, 207 N.C. 465, 177 S.E. 411.

With reference to locality, a tax is "uniform" when it operates with equal force and effect in every place where the subject of it is found, and with reference to classification, it is uniform when it operates without distinction or discrimination upon all persons composing the described class. Hart v. Board of Comrs. of Burke County, 192 N.C. 161, 134 S.E. 403, 405; City of Cape Girardeau v. Fred A. Groves Motor Co., 346 Mo. 762, 142 S.W.2d 1040, 1042.

UNIFORM LAWS. A considerable number of laws have been approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and many of them have been adopted in one or more jurisdictions in the United States and its possessions. Among the more important of these laws are the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act which has been adopted in all the states as well as in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and Porto Rico; the Uniform Sales Act, which in 1950 had been adopted in 37 jurisdictions; the Uniform Bills of Lading Act, in 32 jurisdictions; the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, in all the states as well as in the District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii; and the Uniform. Partnership Act, in 32. Others which may be mentioned include the Uniform Warehouse Receipts, Declaratory Judgments, Fiduciaries, Fraudulent Conveyance, Desertion and Nonsupport, Veterans' Guardianship, Conditional Sales and Limited Partnership Acts.

UNIFORMITY. Conformity to one pattern; sameness. Naill v. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, 103 Okl. 179, 229 P. 833, 837.

"Uniformity of operation" of laws does not require "universality of operation." The former term relates to similarity of conditions affecting subjects or localities of the state that are appropriately classified. The latter term relates to the whole and every part of the state. State v. Daniel, 87 Fla. 270, 99 So. 804, 809.

The constitutional requirement of "uniformity" is complied with when the law operates uniformly upon all persons brought within the relations and circumstances provided by it. Abbott v. Commissioners of Roads and Revenues of Fulton County, 160 Ga. 657, 129 S.E. 38, 41.

Uniformity in taxation implies equality in the burden of taxation, which cannot exist without uniformity in the mode of assessment, as well as in the rate of taxation. Further, the uniformity must be coextensive with the territory to which it applies. And it must be extended to all property subject to taxation, so that all property may be taxed alike and equally. Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 15. And see Edye v. Robertson, 5 S.Ct. 247, 112 U.S. 580, 28 L.Ed. 798; People v. Auditor General, 7 Mich. 90; Hilger v. Moore, 56 Mont. 146, 182 P. 477, 481. Department of Justice v. A. Overholt and Co., 331 Pa. 182, 200 A. 849, 853.

The rule of "uniformity" does not require that all subjects be taxed, nor taxed alike, but is complied with when the tax is levied equally and uniformly on all subjects of the same class and kind. Sims v. Ahrens, 167 Ark. 557, 271 S.W. 720, 729. The uniformity required in taxation is limited to a uniformity in rate, assessment, and valuation of the particular tax involved, and has no reference to a uniformity of the sum total of taxes which a citizen is required to pay. King v. Sullivan County, 128 Tenn. 393, 160 S.W. 847, 848, and does not require uniformity of collection, but only uniformity of assessment. Mississippi State Tax Commission v. Flora Drug Co., 167 Miss. 1, 148 So. 373, 378.

Uniformity in taxation means equality in burden and not equality in method. Ewert v. Taylor, 38 S.D. 124, 160 N.W. 797, 803.

See, also, "Uniform, adj."

UNIFORMITY, ACT OF. An act which regulates the terms of membership in the Church of England and the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, (St. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4.) See St. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59. The act of uniformity has been amended by the St. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 35, which inter alia provides a shortened form of morning and evening prayer. Wharton.

UNIFORMITY OF PROCESS ACT. The English statute of 2 Wm. IV. c. 39, establishing a uniform process for the commencement of actions in all the courts of law at Westminster. 3 Steph. Comm. 566. The improved system thus established was more fully amended by the Procedure Acts of 1852, 1854, and 1860, and by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875.

UNIFY. To cause to be one; to make into a unit; to unite; to become one; to consolidate. Adams v. Salt River Valley Water Users' Ass'n, 53 Ariz. 374, 89 P.2d 1060, 1071.

UNIGENITURE. The state of being the only begotten.

UNILATERAL. One-sided; ex parte; having relation to only one of two or more persons or things.

UNILATERAL CONTRACT. See Contract.

UNILATERAL MISTAKE. A mistake or misunderstanding as to the terms or effect of a contract, made or entertained by one of the parties to it but not by the other. Green v. Stone, 54 N.J. Eq. 387, 34 A. 1099, 55 Am.St.Rep. 577; Kant v. Atlanta, B. & A. R. Co., 189 Ala. 48, 66 So. 598, 599.

UNILATERAL RECORD. Records are unilateral when offered to show a particular fact, as a prima facie case, either for or against a stranger. Colligan v. Cooney, 107 Tenn. 214, 64 S.W. 31.

UNIMPEACHABLE WITNESS. Within a statute requiring proof of a holographic will by the unimpeachable evidence of at least three disinterested witnesses to the testator's handwriting, one whom the jury finds to speak truthfully and whose conclusion they find to be correct, notwithstanding the presence of other evidence contradicting him. Sneed v. Reynolds, 166 Ark. 581, 266 S.W. 686, 689; Murphy v. Murphy, 144 Ark. 429, 222 S.W. 721, 723.

UNIMPROVED LAND. A statutory term which includes lands, once improved, that have reverted to a state of nature, as well as lands that have never been improved. Moore v. Morris, 118 Ark. 516, 177 S.W. 6, 8.

UNINCLOSED PLACE. A place not entirely inclosed, an "inclosed" place being a place inclosed on all sides by some sort of material. Ex parte Wisner, 32 Cal.App. 637, 163 P. 868, 869.

UNINFECTED. Untainted or uncontaminated, not affected unfavorably, not impregnated or permeated with that which is bad or harmful. Leonardi v. A. Habermann Provision Co., 143 Ohio St. 623, 56 N.E.2d 232, 237.

UNINTELLIGIBLE. That which cannot be understood.

UNIO. Lat. In canon law. A consolidation of two churches into one. Cowell.

UNIO PROLIUM. Lat. Uniting of offspring. A method of adoption, chiefly used in Germany, by which step-children (on either or both sides of the house) are made equal, in respect to the right of succession, with the children who spring from the marriage of the two contracting parties. See Heinecc. Elem. § 188.

UNION. A league; a federation; an unincorporated association of persons for a common purpose; as, a trade or labor union. Hughes v. State, 109 Ark. 403, 160 S.W. 209. A joinder of separate entities. State ex rel. Dawson v. Dinwiddie, 186 Okl. 63, 95 P.2d 867, 869.

Ecclesiastical Law

Two or more benefices which have been united into one benefice. Sweet.

English Poor-Law

Two or more parishes which have been consolidated for the better administration of the poor-law therein.

Public Law

A popular term in America for the United States; also, in Great Britain, for the consolidated governments of England and Scotland, or for the political tie between Great Britain and Ireland.

Scotch Law

A "clause of union" is a clause in a feoffment by which two estates, separated or not adjacent, are united as one, for the purpose of making a single seisin suffice for both.

UNION-JACK. The national flag of Great Britain and Ireland, which combines the banner of St. Patrick with the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. The word "jack" is most probably derived from the surcoat, charged with a red cross, anciently used by the English soldiery. This appears to have been called a "jacque," whence the word "jacket," anciently written "jacquit." Some, however, without a shadow of evidence, derive the word from "Jacques," the first alteration having been made in the reign of King James I. Wharton.

UNION MORTGAGE CLAUSE. A clause, as in a fire policy (together with the rider making the loss, if any, payable to the mortgagee), which provides that if the policy is made payable to a mortgagee of the insured real estate, no act or default of any person other than such mortgagee, or his agents or those claiming under him, shall affect his right to recover in case of loss on such real estate. Bankers' Joint Stock Land Bank of Milwaukee, Wis., v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 158 Minn. 363, 197 N.W. 749. Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. German Mut. Fire Ins. Ass'n of Lohman, 231 Mo.App. 699, 105 S.W.2d 1001.

Such clause creates independent contract between insurer and mortgagee. Conard v. Moreland, 230 Iowa 520, 298 N.W. 628, 629. And is distinguished from "open mortgage clause" in that latter clause simply provides that policy is payable to mortgagee as his interest may appear. Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. German Mut. Fire Ins. Ass'n of Lohman, 231 Mo.App. 699, 105 S.W.2d 1001. And mortgagee under such latter clause is merely an appointee to receive fund recoverable in case of loss to extent of his interest. Capital Fire Ins. Co. of Cal. v. Langhorne, C.C.A.Minn., 146 F.2d 237, 241.

UNION OF CHURCHES. A combining and consolidating of two churches into one. Also it is when one church is made subject to another, and one man is rector of both; and where a conventual church is made a cathedral. Tomlins.

UNION SHOP. One in which none but members of labor union are engaged as workmen. People v. Fisher, 3 N.Y.S. 786, 788, 50 Hun, 552.

It was also said that "union shop" exists where employer is permitted to employ a non-union worker, but such worker is required to join the union as a requisite to his continuing work. And that it is distinguished from "closed shop" where the worker must be a member of the union as a condition precedent to his employment. Miners in General Group v. Hix, 123 W.Va. 637, 17 S.E.2d 810, 813.

UNION SOLDIERS. Those who fought in the American Civil War in support of the Union, in contradistinction to Confederate soldiers, who fought for the establishment of the new confederacy. Keely v. Board of Sup'rs of Dubuque County, 158 Iowa 205, 139 N.W. 473, 474.

UNIT. A single thing of any kind. State ex rel. S. Monroe & Son Co. v. Tracy, 129 Ohio St. 550, 196 N.E. 650. A term sometimes used in the sense of a share, as in an oil syndicate, Chew v. U. S., C.C.A.Ark., 9 F.2d 348, 351, or as equivalent to an investment security. State v. Summerland, 150 Minn. 266, 185 N.W. 255, 256.

UNIT CF PRODUCTION. The "unit of production" method of determining the taxable net income or profit in the oil or gas business is accomplished by a system of accounting by which is ascertained, as nearly as science will permit, the total amount of recoverable oil in the property, and to each barrel of this oil is assigned its part of the capital investment, and from the sale price of each barrel produced and sold there is deducted the expenses of producing it, and its proportion of the capital investment, leaving the balance as profit, and thus, when the property is exhausted, the operator has received back his capital and expenses, and accounted for his net income or loss. Carter v. Phillips, 88 Okl. 202, 212 P. 747, 750.

UNIT RULE. A method of valuing securities by multiplying the total number of shares held by the sale price of one share sold on a licensed stock exchange, ignoring all other facts regarding value. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust Co. v. Reeves, Ky., 259 S.W.2d 432, 434.

UNITAS PERSONARUM. Lat. The unity of persons, as that between husband and wife, or ancestor and heir.

UNITE. To join in an act, to concur, to act in concert. Bowling v. Wilkerson, D.C.Ky., 19 F. Supp. 584, 587.

UNITED GREEK CATHOLIC CHURCH. All the churches of the Byzantine Rite in communion with the See of Rome. The term is synonymous with "Uniate Greek Catholic Church" or "Uniat Greek Catholic Church," and signifies an ecclesiastical body in union with the Roman Catholic Church and acknowledging the primacy and supremacy of the pope. Morris v. Featro, 340 Pa. 354, 17 A.2d 403, 405.

UNITED IN INTEREST. A statutory term applicable to codefendants only when they are similarly interested in and will be similarly affected by the determination of the issues involved in the action; McCord v. McCord, 104 Ohio St. 274, 135 N.E. 548, 549; e. g., joint obligors upon a guaranty; Columbia Graphophone Co. v. Slawson, 100 Ohio St. 473, 126 N.E. 890, 891.

UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. The official title of the kingdom composed of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, and including the colonies and possessions beyond the seas, under the act of January 1, 1801, effecting the union betwen Ireland and Great Britain.

UNITED NATIONS. An organization started by the allied powers in World War II for the stated purposes of preventing war, providing justice and promoting welfare and human rights of peoples. It consists of a Security Council and a General Assembly and subordinate agencies.

UNITED STATES. This term has several meanings. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in family of nations, it may designate territory over which sovereignty of United States extends, or it may be collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution. Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, U. S. Ohio, 65 S.Ct. 870, 880, 324 U.S. 652, 89 L.Ed. 1252.

UNITED STATES BONDS. Obligations for payment of money which have been at various times issued by the government of the United States.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER. Whose powers in federal matters, are in most respects the same as those of justices of the peace in felony offenses against laws of state, is not a judge or court, and does not hold court, but is an adjunct of court, possessing independent, though subordinate, judicial powers of his own. U. S. v. Napela, D.C.N.Y., 28 F.2d 898, 899.

UNITED STATES COURTS. Except in the case of impeachments the judicial power of the United States is vested by the Constitution in a supreme court and such other inferior courts as may be from time to time established by congress. All the judges are appointed by the president, with the advice and consent of the senate, to hold office during good behavior, and their compensation cannot be diminished during their terms of office. The judges, other than those of the supreme court, are circuit judges and district judges. The circuit judges compose the courts of appeals and the district judges hold the district courts, and also at times sit in the circuit courts of appeal. For a detailed statement of the territorial boundaries of the several districts and divisions of districts, see 28 U.S.C.A. § 81 et seq. and various special acts.

It shall be the duty of the district court of each judicial district to appoint such number of persons, to be known as United States commissioners, at such places in the district as may be designated by the district court. Rev.St.U.S. § 627 (28 USCA § 631). Austill v. United States, 58 Ct.C1. 232; United States v. Maresca, D.C.N.Y., 266 F. 713.

In statutes, the words "court of the district", Prieto v. U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, 117 Misc. 703, 193 N.Y.S. 342, and "courts of the United States," are commonly deemed to refer to federal courts and not to state courts. General Inv. Co. v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 269 F. 235, 237.

UNITED STATES CURRENCY. Commonly understood to include every form of currency authorized by the United States government, whether issued directly by it or under its authority. Appel v. State, 28 Ariz. 416, 237 P. 190, 191.

UNITED STATES NOTES. Promissory notes, resembling bank-notes, issued by the government of the United States.

UNITED STATES OFFICER. Usually and strictly, in United States statutes, a person appointed in the manner declared under Const. art. 2, § 2, McGrath v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 275 F. 294, 300, providing for the appointment of officers, either by the President and the Senate, the President alone, the courts of law, or the heads of departments, Steele v. U. S., 45 S.Ct. 417, 418, 267 U.S. 505, 69 L.Ed. 761. Dropps v. U. S., C.C.A.Minn., 34 F.2d 15, 17.

UNITY. In the law of estates. The peculiar characteristic of an estate held by several in joint tenancy, and which is fourfold, viz., unity of interest, unity of title, unity of time, and unity of possession. In other words, joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. 2 Bl. Comm. 180.

UNITY OF INTEREST. Required in case of joint tenancy means that interests must accrue by one and same conveyance. Hernandez v. Becker, C.C. A.N.M., 54 F.2d 542, 547. It also signifies that no one of joint tenants can have a greater interest in the property than each of the others, while, in the case of tenants in common, one of them may have a larger share than any of the (others. Williams, Real Prop. 134, 139.

UNITY OF POSSESSION. Joint possession of two rights by several titles. As if I take a lease of land from a person at a certain rent, and afterwards I buy the fee-simple of such land, by this I acquire unity of possession, by which the lease is extinguished. Cowell; Brown. It is also one of the essential properties of a joint estate, requiring that the joint tenants must hold the same undivided possession of the whole and enjoy same rights until death of one. Hernandez v. Becker, C.C.A.N.M., 54 F.2d 542, 547.

UNITY OF SEISIN. Where a person seised of land which is subject to an easement, profit a p^{r}endre, or similar right, also becomes seised of the land to which the easement or other right is annexed. Sweet.

UNITY OF TIME. One of the essential properties of a joint estate; the estates of the tenants being vested at one and the same period. 2 Bl. Comm. 181; Hernandez v. Becker, C.C.A.N.M., 54 F.2d 542, 547.

UNITY OF TITLE. Applied to joint tenants, signifies that they hold their property by one and the same title, while tenants in common may take property by several titles. Williams, Real Prop. 134.

Legal requirements of easement of "right of way of necessity" are unity of title, by which is meant that owner of dominant estate must show that his land and that of owner of servient estate once belonged to same person, severance of title, and necessity. Brasington v. Williams, 143 S.C. 223, 141 S.E. 375, 382.

UNIUS OMNINO TESTIS RESPONSIO NON AUDIATUR. The answer of one witness shall not be heard at all; the testimony of a single witness shall not be admitted under any circumstances. A maxim of the civil and canon law. Cod. 4, 20, 9; 3 Bl. Comm. 370; Best, Ev. p. 426, § 390, and note.

UNIUSCUJUSQUE CONTRACTUS INITIUM SPECTANDUM EST, ET CAUSA. The commencement and cause of every contract are to be regarded. Dig. 17, 1, 8; Story, Bailm. § 56.

UNIVERSAL. Having relation to the whole or an entirety; pertaining to all without exception; a term more extensive than "general," which latter may admit of exceptions. See Blair v. Howell, 68 Iowa, 619, 28 N.W. 199; Koen v. State, 35 Neb. 676, 53 N.W. 595, 17 L.R.A. 821.

UNIVERSAL AGENT. One who is appointed to do all the acts which the principal can personally do, and which he may lawfully delegate the power to another to do. Story, Ag. 18; Baldwin v. Tucker, 112 Ky. 282, 65 S.W. 841, 57 L.R.A. 451.

UNIVERSAL LEGACY. See Legacy.

UNIVERSAL PARTNERSHIP. See Partnership.

UNIVERSAL REPRESENTATION. In Scotch law. A term applied to the representation by an heir of his ancestor. Bell.

UNIVERSAL SUCCESSION. In the civil law. Succession to the entire estate of another, living or dead, though generally the latter, importing succession to the entire property of the predecessor as a juridical entirety, that is, to all his active as well as passive legal relations. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 649.

UNIVERSALIA SUNT NOTIORA SINGULARIBUS. 2 Rolle, 294. Things universal are better known than things particular.

UNIVERSITAS. Lat. In the civil law. A corporation aggregate. Dig. 3, 4, 7. Literally, a whole formed out of many individuals. 1 Bl. Comm. 469.

UNIVERSITAS FACTI. In the civil law. A plurality of corporeal things of the same kind, which are regarded as a whole; e. g., a herd of cattle, a stock of goods. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS JURIS. In the civil law. A quantity of things of all sorts, corporeal as well as incorporeal, which, taken together, are regarded as a whole; e. g., an inheritance, an estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS RERUM. In the civil law. Literally, a whole of things. Several single things, which, though not mechanically connected with one another, are, when taken together, regarded as a whole in any legal respect. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS VEL CORPORATIO NON DICITUR ALIQUID FACERE NISI ID SIT COLLEGIALITER DELIBERATUM, ETIAMSI MAJOR PARS ID FACIAT. A university or corporation is not said to do anything unless it be deliberated upon as a body, although the majority should do it. Da^{y}. 48.

UNIVERSITY. An institution of higher learning, consisting of an assemblage of colleges united under one corporate organization and government, affording instruction in the arts and sciences and the learned professions, and conferring degrees. See Corn. v. Banks, 198 Pa. 397, 48 A. 277.

Whole body of teachers and scholars, engaged at particular place in giving and receiving instruction in higher branches of learning ; also such persons, associated together as society or corporate body with definite organization and acknowledged powers and privileges, especially of conferring degrees, and forming institution for promotion of education in higher and more important branches of learning. West v. Board of Trustees of Miami University and Miami Normal School, 41 Ohio App. 367, 181 N.E. 144, 149.

UNIVERSITY COURT. See Chancellor's Courts in the Two Universities.

UNIVERSUS. Lat. The whole; all together. Calvin.

UNJUST. Contrary to right and justice, or to the enjoyment of his rights by another, or to the standards of conduct furnished by the laws. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co., D.C.Ga., 264 F. 691, 695; Komen v. City of St. Louis, 316 Mo. 9, 289 S.W. 838, 841.

UNJUST ENRICHMENT, DOCTRINE OF. Doctrine that person shall not be allowed to profit or enrich himself inequitably at anothes expense. American University v. Forbes, 88 N.H. 17, 183 A. 860, 862. Under this doctrine a defendant has something of value at the plaintiff's expense under circumstances which impose a legal duty of restitution. Herrmann v. Gleason, C.C.A.Mich., 126 F.2d 936, 940. Doctrine permits recovery in certain instances where person has received from another a benefit retention of which would be unjust. Seekins v. King, 66 R.I. 105, 17 A.2d 869, 871, 134 A.L.R. 1060. Doctrine is not contractual but is equitable in nature. State v. Martin, 59 Ariz. 438, 130 P.2d 48, 52.

"Unjust enrichment" of a person occurs when he has and retains money or benefits which in justice and equity belong to another. Hummel v. Hummel, 133 Ohio St. 520, 14 N.E.2d 923, 927. Thus one who has conferred a benefit upon another solely because of a basic mistake of fact induced by a nondisclosure is entitled to restitution on above doctrine. Conkling's Estate v. Champlin, 193 Okl. 79, 141 P.2d 569, 570.

UNKOUTH. Unknown. The law French form of the Saxon "uncouth." Britt. c. 12.

UNLAGE. Sax. An unjust law.

UNLARICH. In old Scotch law. That which is done without law or against law. Spelman.

UNLAW. In Scotch law. A witness was formerly inadmissible who was not worth the king's unlaw; i. e., the sum of £10 Scots, then the common fine for absence from court and for small delinquencies. Bell.

UNLAWFUL. That which is contrary to law or unauthorized by law. State v. Chenault, 20 N.M. 181, 147 P. 283, 285. That which is not lawful. State v. Bulot, 175 La. 21, 142 So. 787, 788. The acting contrary to, or in defiance of the law; disobeying or disregarding the law. While necessarily not implying the element of criminality, it is broad enough to include it. Sturgeon v. Crosby Mortuary, 140 Neb. 82, 299 N.W. 378, 383.

"Unlawful" and "illegal" are frequently used as synonymous terms, but, in the proper sense of the word, "unlawful," as applied to promises, agreements, considerations, and the like, denotes that they are ineffectual in law because they involve acts which, although not illegal, i. e., positively forbidden, are disapproved of by the law, and are therefore not recognized as the ground of legal rights, either because they are immoral or because they are against public policy. It is on this ground that contracts in restraint of marriage or of trade are generally void. Sweet. And see Hagerman v. Buchanan, 45 isT.J.Eq. 292, 17 A. 946, 14 Am.St.Rep. 732; Tatum v. State, 66 Ala. 467. People v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130 Ill. 268, 22 N.E. 798, 8 L.R.A. 497, 17 Am.St.Rep. 319.

UNLAWFUL ACT. Act contrary to law, and presupposes that there must be an existing law. State v. Campbell, 217 Iowa 848, 251 N.W. 717, 92 A.L.R. 1176.

In criminal jurisprudence, a violation of some prohibitory law and includes all willful, actionable violations of civil rights, and is not confined to criminal acts. State v. Hailey, 350 Mo. 300, 165 S.W.2d 422, 427.

The "unlawful acts" within manslaughter statutes consist of reckless conduct or conduct evincing marked disregard for safety of others. State v. Newton, 105 Utah 561, 144 P.2d 290, 293; State v. Thatcher, 108 Utah 63, 157 P.2d 258, 261.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY. At common law. The meeting together of three or more persons, to the disturbance of the public peace, and with the intention of co-operating in the forcible and violent execution of some unlawful private enterprise. If they take steps towards the performance of their purpose, it becomes a rout; and, if they put their design into actual execution, it is a riot. 4 Bl. Comm. 146. To constitute offense it must apr pear that there was common intent of persons assembled to attain purpose, whether lawful or unlawful, by commission of acts of intimidation and disorder likely to produce danger to peace of neighborhood, and actually tending to inspire courageous persons with well-grounded fear of serious breaches of public peace. State v. Butterworth, 104 N.J.L. 579, 142 A. 57, 60, 58 A.L.R. 744.

Three or more persons who assemble peaceably without violent or tumultuous manner to do lawful act, but who thereafter make attempt or motion to do any act whether lawful or unlawful, in either tumultuous, violent, or unful manner to the terror or disturbance of others, become an "unlawful assembly." Koss v. State, 217 Wis. 325, 258 N.W. 860, 862.

UNLAWFUL BELLIGERENTS. Enemies passing the boundaries of the United States for purpose of destroying war industries and supplies without a uniform or other emblem signifying their belligerent status or discarding that means of identification after entry. Ex parte Quirin, App.D.C., 63 S.Ct. 2, 15, 317 U.S. 1, 87 L.Ed. 3.

UNLAWFUL DETAINER. The unjustifiable retention of the possession of lands by one whose original entry was lawful and of right, but whose right to the possession has terminated and who refuses to quit, as in the case of a tenant holding over after the termination of the lease and in spite of a demand for possession by the landlord. McDevitt v. Lambert, 80 Ala. 536, 2 So. 438; Silva v. Campbell, 84 Cal. 420, 24 Pac. 316; Brandley v. Lewis, 97 Utah 217, 92 P.2d 338, 339.

Actions of "unlawful detainer" concern only right of possession of realty, and differ from ejectment in that no ultimate question of title or estate can be determined. McCracken v. Wright, 159 Kan.- 615, 157 P.2d 814, 817.

Where an entry upon lands is unlawful, whether forcible or not, and the subsequent conduct is forcible and tortious, the offense committed is a "forcible entry and de-tainer;" but where the original entry is lawful, and the subsequent holding forcible and tortious, the offense is an "unlawful detainer" only. Pullen v. Boney, 4 N.J.L. 129.

UNLAWFUL ENTRY. An entry upon lands effected peaceably and without force, but which is without color of title and is accomplished by means of fraud or some other willful wrong. Blaco v. Haller, 9 Neb. 149, 1 N.W. 978.

UNLAWFUL PICKETING. Picketing which is not honest or truthful. Park & Tilford Import Corporation v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America, Local No. 848, A. F. of L., Cal. App., 139 P.2d 963, 971, Magill Bros. v. Building Service Employees' International Union, 20 Ca1.2d 506; 127 P.2d 542, 543. Picketing which involves false statements or misrepresentations of facts. Wiest v. Dirks, 215 Ind. 568, 20 N.E.2d 969, 971. Picketing when it ceases to serve the purpose it seeks to accomplish. E. M. Loew's Enterprises v. International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, 125 Conn. 391, 6 A.2d 321, 323, 122 A.L.R. 1287. When force or violence is used to persuade or prevent workmen from continuing their employment. Ex parte Bell, 37 Cal.App.2d 582, 100 P.2d 339, 343.

UNLAWFUL TOUCHING OF PERSON'S BODY. Constituting physical injury to person may be indirect, as by precipitation on body of person of any material substance. Christy Bros. Circus v. Turnage, 38 Ga.App. 581, 144 S.E. 680, 681.

UNLAWFUL TRANSPORTATION OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS. To constitute this offense there must be a substantial movement or transporting of the liquor from one place or vicinity to another. Nelson v. State, 116 Neb. 219, 216 N.W. 556, 557.

UNLAWFULLY. Illegally; wrongfully. Dickinson v. New York, 92 N.Y. 584; Dameron v. Hamilton, 264 Mo. 103, 174 S.W. 425, 430; See State v. Massey, 97 N.C. 465, 2 S.E. 445.

This word is frequently used in indictments in the description of the offence; it is necessary when the crime did not exist at common law, and when a statute, in describing an offence which it creates, uses the word; 1 Mood.C.C. 339; but is unnecessary whenever the crime existed at common law and is manifestly illegal; 1 Chit. Cr.L. *241.

UNLESS. If it be not that, if it be not the case that, if not, supposing not, if it be not, except. West Lumber Co. v. Keen, Tex.Com.App., 237 S. W. 236; Ward v. Interstate Business Men's Acc. Ass'n, 185 Iowa, 674, 169 N.W. 451, 452. A reservation or option to change one's mind provided a certain event happens, a conditional promise. Federal Sign System v. Amavet, 7 La.App. 680, 682.

UNLESS LEASE. An oil and gas lease which provides that lease will be rendered null and void and lessee will automatically be relieved from liability, upon failure to commence operations or to pay rent. It must be 'expressly stipulated in the lease that lease shall become null and void at a certain time "unless" the lessee begins operations or pays the rental stipulated. Brunson v. Carter Oil Co., D.C.Okl., 259 F. 656, 663.

Where the word "unless" precedes the description of the act to be performed under an oil lease, no obligation to perform that act is imposed by the lease. McCrabb v. Moulton, C.C.A.Mo., 124 F.2d 689, 691.

UNLIMITED. Without confines, unrestricted, boundless. Flynn v. Caplan, 234 Mass. 516, 126 N.E. 776, 777.

UNLIQUIDATED. Not ascertained in amount., not determined; remaining unassessed or unsettled; as unliquidated damages; Davies v. Turner, 61 Ga.App. 531, 6 S.E.2d 356, 358.

A debt is spoken of as "unliquidated," if the amount thereof cannot be ascertained at the trial by a mere computation, based on the terms of the obligation or on some other accepted standard. Hettrick Mfg. Co. v. Barish, 120 Misc. 673, 199 N.Y.S. 755, 767.

Under the law of accord and satisfaction, a claim or debt will be regarded as unliquidated if it is in dispute as to the proper amount. Paulsen Estate v. Naches—Selah Irr. Dist., 190 Wash. 205, 67 P.2d 856, 858.

A claim in bankruptcy is "unliquidated" until final fixation of amount of liability. United States v. Sullivan, D.C. N.Y., 19 F.Supp. 695, 698. See, also, Damages.

UNLIQUIDATED DEMAND. Where it is admitted that one of two specific sums is due, but there is a dispute as to which is proper amount. Perryman Burns Coal Co. v. Seaboard Coal Co. of Connecticut, 128 Conn. 70, 20 A.2d 404, 405.

UNLIVERY. A term used in maritime law to designate the unloading of cargo of a vessel at the place where it is properly to be delivered. The Two Catharines, 24 F.Cas. 429.

UNLOADING. Act of discharging a cargo, taking a load from, disburdening or removing from. American Oil & Supply Co. v. United States Casualty Co., 19 N.J.Misc. 7, 18 A.2d 257, 259.

An unloading clause in an automobile liability policy covers the entire process involved in the movement of articles by and from a motor vehicle to the place where they are turned over to the one to whom the insured is to make delivery, if the clause is construed in accordance with what may be called the "complete operation" rule. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. v. Commercial Cas. Ins. Co. of N. Y., 161 P.2d 423, 108 Utah 500, 160 A.L.R. 1251. There are, however, two other rules or doctrines used by various courts in applying the unloading clause of such a policy. One is known as the "coming to rest" rule, and the other is the "continuous passage" rule. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 3972.5. But the complete operation rule is said to be the modern doctrine, supported by the trend of the later cases. London Guarantee & Acc. Co. v. C. B. White & Bros., 49 S.E.2d 254, 188 Va. 195.

UNLOOKED FOR MISHAP OR UNTOWARD EVENT. One occurring unexpectedly and not naturally or in ordinary course of events. Fogg v. Van Saun Coal Co., 12 N.J.Misc. 680, 174 A. 419, 421.

UNMARKETABLE TITLE. When for vendee to accept title proffered would lay him open to fair probability of vexatious litigation with possibility of serious loss. Schoenberg v. O'Connor, 14 N.J. Misc. 412, 185 A. 377, 381. It being sufficient to render it so if ordinarily prudent man with knowledge of the facts and aware of legal questions involved would not accept it in the ordinary course of business but title need not be bad in fact; Barrett v. McMannis, 153 Kan. 420, 110 P.2d 774, 777, 778; Ayers v. Graff, 153 Kan. 209, 109 P.2d 202, 203; Ghormley v. Kleeden, 155 Kan. 319, 124 P.2d 467, 470.

Where some defect of substantial character exists and facts are known which fairly raise reasonable doubt as to title. Schul v. Clapp, 154 Kan. 372, 118 P.2d 570, 574. And mere quibbles and pecadilloes which the ingenuity of counsel can raise against a title do not render it an "unmarketable title". Barrett v. McMannis, 153 Kan. 420, 110 P.2d 774, 778.

UNMARRIED. Its primary meaning is never having been married; but it is a word of flexible meaning and it may be construed as not having a husband or wife at the time in question. 9 H.L. Cas. 601; People v. Weinstock, Mag.Ct., 140 N.Y.S. 453, 458.

A divorced woman has been held an unmarried woman. In re Giles, 85 C.C.A. 418, 158 F. 596; State v. Wallace, 79 Or. 129, 154 P. 430, L.R.A.1916D, 457. Douglas v. Board of Foreign Missions of Presbyterian Church in U. S. of America, 110 N.J.Eq. 331, 160 A. 37, 39.

UNNATURAL OFFENSE. The infamous crime against nature; e., sodomy or buggery.

UNNATURAL WILL. An expression applied to disposition of estate or large portion thereof to strangers, to exclusion of natural objects of testator's bounty without apparent reason. In re Shay's Estate, 196 Cal. 355, 237 P. 1079, 1083.

UNNECESSARY. Not required by the circumstances of the case. Hickman v. Ohio State Life Ins. Co., 92 Ohio St. 87, 110 N.E. 542, 543.

UNNECESSARY HARDSHIP. Within zoning ordinance so as to authorize granting of variance on such ground if land cannot yield a reasonable return if used only for a purpose allowed in zone, the plight of owner is due to unique circumstances not to general conditions in the neighborhood and use to be authorized will not alter essential character of the locality. Calcagno v. Town Board of Town of Webster, 265 App.Div. 687, 41 N.Y.S.2d 140, 142.

It has also been said that test whether terms of zoning ordinance impose an "unnecessary hardship". depends on whether use restriction is so unreasonable as to constitute an arbitrary interference with basic right of private property. Scaduto v. Town of Bloomfield, 127 N.J.L. 1, 20 A.2d 649, 650.

UNO ABSURDO DATO, INFINITA SEQUUNTUR. 1 Coke, 102. One absurdity being allowed, an infinity follows.

UNO ACTU. Lat. In a single act; by one and the same act.

UNO FLATU. Lat. In one breath. 3 Man. & G. 45. Uno flatu, et uno intuitu, at one breath, and in one view. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, 504, F. Cas.No. 11,274.

UNOCCUPIED. Within fire policy exempting insurer from liability in case dwelling is "unoccupied," means when it is not used as a residence, when it is no longer used for the accustomed and ordinary purposes of a dwelling or place of abode, or when it is not the place of usual return and habitual stoppage. Vinton v. Atlas Assur, Co., 107 Vt. 272, 178 A. 909, 911. Hence a mere temporary absence of occupants of dwelling house from such premises, with intention to return thereto does not render dwelling "unoccupied". Foley v. Sonoma County Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 18 Ca1.2d 232, 115 P.2d 1, 2, 3.

See Occupation.

UNPRECEDENTED. Having no precedent or example, novel, new, unexampled. State v. Malone, Tex.Civ.App., 168 S.W.2d 292, 300. Unusual and extraordinary; affording no reasonable warning or expectation of recurrence. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Yarbrough, 194 Ala. 162, 69 So. 582, 584.

UNPRECEDENTED RAINFALL. An unusual and extraordinary rainfall as has no example or parallel in the history of rainfall in the vicinity affected, or as affords no reasonable warning or expectation that it will likely occur again. City of Birmingham v. Jackson, 229 Ala. 133, 155 So. 527. Trout Brook Co. v. Willow River Power Co., 221 Wis. 616, 267 N.W. 302, 305.

UNPROFESSIONAL CONDUCT. That which is by general opinion considered to be grossly unprofessional because immoral or dishonorable. State Board of Dental Examiners v. Savelle, 90 Colo. 177, 8 P.2d 693, 697. That which violates ethical code of profession or such conduct which is unbecoming member of profession in good standing. People v. Gorman, 346 Ill. 432, 178 N.E. 880, 885. It involves breach of duty which professional ethics enjoin. People v. Johnson, 344 Ill. 132, 176 N.E. 278, 282.

UNQUES. L. Fr. Ever; always. Ne unques, never.

UNREASONABLE. Irrational; foolish; unwise; absurd; silly; preposterous; senseless; stupid. Southern Kansas State Lines Co. v. Public Service Commission, 135 Kan. 657, 11 P.2d 985, 987. Not reasonable; immoderate; exorbitant. Cass v. State, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 208, 61 S.W.2d 500. Capricious; arbitrary; confiscatory. Harris v. State Corporation Commission, 46 N.M. 352, 129 P.2d 323, 328.

UNREASONABLE REFUSAL TO SUBMIT TO OPERATION. An injured employee's refusal to submit to an operation is unreasonable, so as to deprive him of right to workmen's compensation if it appears that an operation of a simple character not involving serious suffering or danger will result in substantial physical improvement. Black Star Coal Co. v. Surgener, 297 Ky. 653, 181 S.W.2d 53, 54.

UNREASONABLE RESTRAINT OF TRADE. Within Sherman Anti-Trust Act agreements for price maintenance of articles moving in interstate commerce. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, § 1, 15 U.S.C.A. § 1. American Tobacco Co. v. U. S., C. C.A.Ky., 147 F.2d 93, 108. Any combination or conspiracy that operates directly on prices or price structure and has for its purpose the fixing of prices. United States v. Waltham Watch Co., D.C.N.Y., 47 F.Supp. 524, 531.

UNREASONABLE RESTRAINT ON ALIENATION. Brought about by gift of absolute ownership in property followed by such condition as takes away incidents of such ownership. Bliven v. Borden, 56 R.I. 283, 185 A. 239, 244.

UNREASONABLE SEARCH. See Search.

UNRULY AND DANGEROUS ANIMALS. Within the meaning of the law, such as are likely to injure other domestic animals and persons. Fink v. United States Coal & Coke Co., 72 W.Va. 507, 78 S.E. 702, 703.

UNSAFE. Dangerous. Hanson v. City of Anamosa, 158 N.W. 591, 595, 177 Iowa 101; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Smallwood, Tex.Civ.App., 171 S.W. 292, 293.

UNSEATED LAND. A phrase used in the Pennsylvania tax laws to describe land which, though owned by a private person, has not been reclaimed, cultivated, improved, occupied, or made a place of residence. See Seated Land, supra. And see Stoetzel v. Jackson, 105 Pa. 567; McLeod v. Lloyd, 43 Or. 260, 71 P. 799. A tract of land ceases to be unseated as soon as it is actually occupied with a view to permanent residence. Wallace v. Scott, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 248.

UNSEAWORTHY. Of a vessel, unable to withstand the perils of an ordinary voyage at sea. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Compania de Navegacion, Interior, S. A., C.C.A.La., 19 F.2d 493, 495; Or if she could not reasonably have been expected to make the voyage. Interlake Iron Corporation v. Gartland S. S. Co., C.C.A.Mich., 121 F.2d 267, 269, 270. Or if not manned by a competent crew. Peninsular & Occidental S. S. Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.5, 98 F. 2d 411, 414. But a ship is not "unseaworthy" where defect in ship is such that defect can be remedied on the spot in a short time by materials available. Middleton & Co. (Canada) Limited v. Ocean Dominion Steamship Corporation, C.C.A. N.Y., 137 F.2d 619, 622.

UNSOLEMN WAR. War denounced without a declaration; war made not upon general but special declaration; imperfect war. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, N.Y., 409, 37 Am.Dec. 328.

UNSOLEMN WILL. In the Civil law. One in which an executor is not appointed. Swimb. Wills 29.

UNSOUND MIND. A person of unsound mind is one who from infirmity of mind is incapable of managing himself or his affairs. The term, therefore, includes insane persons, idiots, and imbeciles. Sweet. See Insanity. And see Cheney v. Price, 90 Hun 238, 37 N.Y.S. 117; In re Black's Estate, 1 Myr.Prob. (Cal.) 24. Stewart v. Lispenard, 26 Wend. (N.Y.) 300; Ray v. State, 32 Ga.App. 513, 124 S.E. 57. It exists where there is an essential privation of the reasoning faculties, or where a person is incapable of understanding and acting with discretion in the ordinary affairs of life. Oklahoma Natural Gas Corporation v. Lay, 175 Okl. 75, 51 P.2d 580, 582.

But eccentricity, uncleanliness, slovenliness, neglect of person and clothing, and offensive and disgusting personal habits do not constitute unsoundness of mind. Pendarvis v. Gibb, 328 Ill. 282, 159 N.E. 353, 357.

UNTHRIFT. A prodigals a spendthrift. 1 Bl. Comm. 306.

UNTIL. Up to time of. A word of limitation, used ordinarily to restrict that which precedes to what immediately follows it, and its office is to fix some point of time or some event upon the arrival or occurrence of which what precedes will cease to exist. State v. Kehoe, 144 P. 162, 164, 49 Mont. 582; Irwin v. Irwin, 167 N.Y.S. 76, 78, 179 App.Div. 871; Empire Oil and Refining Co. v. Babson, 182 Okl. 336, 77 P.2d 682, 684.

UNTOWARD EVENT. See Unlooked for Mishap.

UNTRUE. Prima facie inaccurate, but not necessarily wilfully false. 3 B. & S. 929.

A statement is "untrue" which does not express things exactly as they are. Zolintakis v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A.Utah, 108 F.2d 902, 905.

UNUMQUODQUE DISSOLVITUR EODEM LIGAMINE QUO LIGATUR. Every obligation is dissolved by the same solemnity with which it is created. Broom, Max. 884.

UNUMQUODQUE EODEM MODO QUO COLLIGATU EST, DISSOLVITUR,—QUO CONSTITUITUR, DESTRUITUR. Everything is dissolved by the same means by which it is put together,—destroyed by the same means by which it is established. 2 Rolle, 39; Broom, Max. 891.

UNUMQUODQUE EST ID QUOD EST PRINCIPALIUS IN IPSO. Hob. 123. That which is the principal part of a thing is the thing itself.

UNUMQUODQUE PRINCIPIORUM EST SIBIMETIPSI FIDES; ET PERSPICUA VERA NON SUNT PROBANDA. Every general principle [or maxim of law] is its own pledge or warrant; and things that are clearly true are not to be proved. Branch; Co. Litt. 11.

UNUS NULLUS RULE, THE. The rule of evidence which obtains in the civil law, that the testimony of one witness is equivalent to the testimony of none. Wharton.

UNUSUAL. Uncommon; not usual, rare. Thompson v. Anderson, 107 Utah 331, 153 P.2d 665, 666.

UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCE. Requiring apportionment between life tenants and remaindermen of dividends declared upon stock held in corpus of trust is not one set up by fiduciary or court, but comes from some administrative or corporate act within corporation or some break down within corporate structure. In re Knox' Estate, 328 Pa. 177, 195 A. 28, 30, 113 A.L.R. 1185.

UNVALUED POLICY. One where the value of property insured is not settled in policy, and in case of loss must be agreed on or proved. Hartford Live Stock Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 256 Ky. 338, 76 S.W.2d 17, 18.

UNWHOLESOME FOOD. Food not fit to be eaten; food which if eaten would be injurious.

UNWORTHY. Unbecoming, discreditable, not having suitable qualities or value. Alsup v. State, 91 Tex.Cr.R. 224, 238 S.W. 667, 669.

UNWRITTEN LAW. All that portion of the law, observed and administered in the courts, which has not been enacted or promulgated in the form of a statute or ordinance, including the unenacted portions of the common law, general and particular customs having the force of law, and the rules, principles, and maxims established by judicial precedents or the successive like decisions of the courts. See Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1899; B. & C. Comp. Or. 1901, § 736 (Code 1930, § 9-609).

A popular expression to designate a supposed rule of law that a man who takes the life of his wife's paramour or daughter's seducer is not guilty of a criminal offence. Almerigi v. State, 17 Okl.Cr. 458, 188 P. 1094, 1096. A trial judge is said to have expressed to a jury his approval of a verdict based upon such a theory; see 43 Canada L. J. 764; see 19 Green Bag 721, an article from the London L. J.; see also 12 Law Notes 224.

The rule was much urged upon a jury in the common pleas of Philadelphia : Biddle, J., said to counsel : "In this court the 'unwritten law' is not worth the paper it isn't written on." It was held that such defense is not available to one accused of homicide in Wehenkel v. State, 116 Neb. 493, 218 N.W. 137, 138, and in People v. Young, 70 Cal. App.2d 28, 160 P.2d 132, 136.

UPKEEP. The act of keeping up or maintaining; maintenance, repair. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. v. Nisbet, 121 Conn. 682, 186 A. 643, 645.

UPLANDS. Lands bordering on bodies of waters. Martin v. Busch, 93 Fla. 535, 112 So. 274, 285.

UPLIFTED HAND. The hand raised towards the heavens, in one of the forms of taking an oath, instead of being laid upon the Gospels.

UPPER BENCH. The court of king's bench, in England, was so called during the interval between 1649 and 1660, the period of the commonwealth, Rolle being then chief justice. See 3 BL Comm. 202.

UPSET PRICE. The price at which any subject, as lands or goods, is exposed to sale by auction, below which it is not to be sold. In a final decree in foreclosure, the decree should name an upset price large enough to cover costs and all allowances made by the court, receiver's certificates and interest, liens prior to the bonds, amounts diverted from the earnings, and all undetermined claims which will be settled before the confirmation and sale. Blair v. St. Louis, H. & K R. Co., C.C.Mo., 25 F. 232; Brinckley v, Sager, 232 Wis. 88, 286 N.W. 570, 573, UPSUN. In Scotch law. Between the hours of sunrise and sunset. Poinding must be executed with upsun. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 3, p. 32.

URBAN. Of or belonging to a city or town. Derived from the Latin "urbanis," which in that language imports the same meaning. City of South Pasadena v. City of San Gabriel, 134 Cal.App. 403, 25 P.2d 516.

URBAN HOMESTEAD. See Homestead.

URBAN SERVITUDE. City servitudes, or servitudes of houses, are called "urban." They are the easements appertaining to the building and construction of houses; as, for instance, the right to light and air, or the right to build a house so as to throw the rain-water on a neighbor's house. Mozley & Whitley; Civ. Code La. § 711.

URBS. Lat. In Roman law. A city, or a walled town. Sometimes it is put for civitas, and denotes the inhabitants, or both the city and its inhabitants; i. e., the municipality or commonwealth. By way of special pre-eminence, urbs meant the city of Rome. Ainsworth.

URE. L. Fr. Effect; practice. Mis en ure, put in practice; carried into effect. Kelham.

USAGE. A reasonable and lawful public custom in a locality concerning particular transactions which is either known to the parties, or so well established, general, and uniform that they must be presumed to have acted with reference thereto. Milroy v. Railway Co., 98 Iowa 188, 67 N.W. 276; Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. 388, 19 L.Ed. 987; Barreda v. Milmo Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 241 S.W. 743, 745. Gerseta Corporation v. Silk Ass'n of America, 220 App.Div. 293, 222 N.Y.S. 11, 13. Practice in fact. Electrical Research Products v. Gross, C.C.A.Alaska, 120 F.2d 301, 305. Uniform practice or course of conduct followed in certain lines of business or professions or some procedure or phase thereof. Turner v. Donovan, 3 Cal.App.2d 485, 39 P.2d 858, 859.

"Usage" cannot be proved by isolated instances, but must be certain, uniform and notorious. Unkovich v. New York Cent. R. Co., 128 N.J.Eq. 377, 16 A.2d 558, 561. It is distinguished from "custom" in that "usage" derives its efficacy from assent of parties to transaction, and hence is important only in consensual agreements, while "custom" derives its efficacy from its adoption into the law, is binding irrespective of any manifestation of assent by parties concerned, and may be of importance in any department of law. Gulf Refining Co. v. Universal Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 32 F.2d 555, 557.

"Usage," in French law, is the "uses" of Roman law, and corresponds very nearly to the tenancy at will or on sufferance of English law. Brown.

"Usage," in its most extensive meaning, includes both custom and prescription; but, in its narrower signification, the term refers to a general habit, mode, or course of procedure. A usage differs from a custom, in that it does not require that the usage should be immemorial to establish it; but the usage must be known, certain, uniform, reasonable, and not contrary to law. Lowry v. Read, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 452.

Fair Usage

See Fair Usage,

General Usage

One which prevails generally throughout the country, or is followed generally by a given profession or trade, and is not local in its nature or observance.

Usage of Trade

A course of dealing; a mode of conducting transactions of a particular kind. Haskins V. Warren, 115 Mass. 535. A mode of dealing generally observed in a particular trade. United States v. Stanolind Crude Oil Purchasing Co., C. C.A.Okl., 113 F.2d 194, 200; Codd v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 14 Wash.2d 600, 128 P.2d 968, 973.

USANCE. In mercantile law. The common period fixed by the usage or custom or habit of dealing between the country where a bill is drawn, and that where it is payable, for the payment of bills of exchange. It means, in some countries, a month, in others two or more months, and in others half • a month. Story, Bills, H 50, 144, 332.

USE, v. To make use of, to convert to one's service, to avail one's self of, to employ. Hopkins v. Howard's Ex'x, 266 Ky. 685, 99 S.W.2d 810, 812. To leave no capacity of force or use in. Bridgeport Mach. Co. v. McKnab, 136 Kan. 781, 18 P.2d 186, 187.

USE, n. Act of employing everything, or state of being employed; application; employment, as the use of a pen, or his machines are in use. Also the fact of being used or employed habitually; usage, as, the wear and tear resulting from ordinary use. Berry-Kofron Dental Laboratory Co. v. Smith, 345 Mo. 922, 137 S.W.2d 452, 454, 455, 456. The purpose served, a purpose, object or end for useful or advantageous nature. Brown v. Kennedy, Ohio App., 49 N.E.2d 417, 418.

A confidence reposed in another, who was made tenant of the land, or terre-tenant, that he would dispose of the land according to the intention of the cestui que use, or him to whose use it was granted, and suffer him to take the profits. 2 Bl. Comm. 328.

A right in one person, called the "cestui que use," to take the profits of land of which another has the legal title and possession, together with the duty of defending the same, and of making estates thereof according to the direction of the cestui que use. Bouvier.

Uses and trusts are not so much different things as different aspects of the same subject. A use regards principally the beneficial interest; a trust regards principally the nominal ownership. The usage of the two terms is, however, widely different. The word "use" is employed to denote either an estate vested since the statute of uses, and by force of that statute, or to denote such an estate created before the statute as, had it been created since, would have become a legal estate by force of the statute. The word "trust" is employed since that statute to denote the relation between the party invested with the legal estate (whether by force of that statute or independently of it) and the party beneficially entitled, who has hitherto been said to have the equitable estate. Mozley & Whiteley.

Civil Law

A right of receiving so much of the natural profits of a thing as is necessary to daily sustenance. It differs from "usufruct," which is a right not only to use, but to enjoy. 1 Browne, Civil & Adm. Law, 184.

Right given to any one to make a gratuitous use of a thing belonging to another, or to exact such a portion of the fruit it produces as is necessary for his personal wants and those of his family. Civ.Code La. art. 626.

Conveyancing

"Use" literally means "benefit;" thus, in an ordinary assignment of chattels, the assignor transfers the property to the assignee for his "absolute use and benefit." In the expressions "separate use," "superstitious use," and "charitable use," "use" has the same meaning Sweet.

Non-technical Sense

The "use" of a thing means that one is to enjoy, hold, occupy, or have some manner of benefit thereof. Bryson v. Hicks, 78 Ind.App. 111, 134 N.E. 874, 875. Use also means usefulness, utility, advantage, productive of benefit. Williams v. City of Norman, 85 Oki. 230, 205 P. 144, 148; National Surety Co. v. Jarrett, 95 W.Va. 420, 121 S.E. 291, 295, 36 A.L.R. 1171.

General

Cestui que use. A person for whose use and benefit lands or tenements are held by another. The latter, before the statute of uses, was called the "feoffee to use," and held the nominal or legal title.

Charitable use. See Charitable.

Contingent use. A use limited to take effect upon the happening of some future contingent event; as where lands are conveyed to the use of A. and B., after a marriage shall be had between them. 2 Bl.Comm. 334; Haywood v. Shreve, 44 N.J.L. 94; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. (N.Y.) 692.

Exclusive use. See Exclusive Use.

Executed use. The first use in a conveyance upon which the statute of uses operates by bringing the possession to it, the combination of which, e., the use and the possession, form the legal estate, and thus the statute is said to execute the use. Wharton.

Executory uses. These are springing uses, which confer a legal title answering to an executory devise; as when a limitation to the use of A. in fee is defeasible by a limitation to the use of B., to arise at a future period, or on a given event.

Existing use. See Existing Use.

Feoffee to uses. A person to whom (before the statute of uses) land was conveyed "for the use" of a third person. He held the nominal or legal title, while the third person, called the "cestui que use," was entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the estate.

Official use. An active use before the statute of uses, which imposed some duty on the legal owner or feoffee to uses; as a conveyance to A. with directions for him to sell the estate and distribute the proceeds among B., C., and D. To enable A. to perform this duty, he had the legal possession of the estate to be sold. Wharton.

Passive use. A permissive use (q. v.).

Permissive use. A passive use which was resorted to before the statute of uses, in order to avoid a harsh law; as that of mortmain or a feudal forfeiture. It was a mere invention in order to evade the law by secrecy; as a conveyance to A. to the .use of B. A. simply held the possession, and B. enjoyed the profits of the estate. Wharton.

Resulting use. A use raised by equity for the benefit of a feoffor who has made a voluntary conveyance to uses without any declaration of the use. 2 Washb.Real Prop. 100. A resulting use arises where the legal seisin is transferred, and no use is expressly declared, nor any consideration or evidence of intent to direct the use. The use then remains in the original grantor, for it cannot be supposed that the estate was intended to be given away; and the statute immediately transfers the legal estate to such resulting use. Wharton.

Secondary use. A use limited to take effect in derogation of a preceding estate, otherwise called a "shifting use," as a conveyance to the use of A. and his heirs, with a proviso that, when B. returns from India, then to the use of C. and his heirs. 1 Steph.Comm. 546.

Shifting use. A use which is so limited that it will be made to shift or transfer itself, from one beneficiary to another, upon the occurrence of a certain event after its creation. For example, an estate is limited to the use of A. and his heirs, provided that, upon the return of B. from Rome, it shall be to the use of C. and his heirs; this is a shifting use, which transfers itself to C. when the event happens. 1 Steph.Comm. 503; 2 Bi. Comm. 335. These shifting uses are common in all settlements; and, in marriage settlements, the first use is always to the owner in fee till the marriage, and then to other uses. The fee remains with the owner until the marriage, and then it shifts as uses arise. 4 Kent, Comm. 297.

Springing use. A use limited to arise on a future event where no preceding use is limited, and which does not take effect in derogation of any other interest than that which results to the grantor, or remains in him in the meantime. 2 Washb.Real.Prop. 281; Smith v. Brisson, 90 N.C. 288.

Statute of uses. An English statute enacted in 1536, (27 Hen. VIII, c. 10,) directed against the practice of creating uses in lands, and which converted the purely equitable title of persons entitled to a use into a legal title or absolute ownership with right of possession. The statute is said to "execute the use," that is, it abolishes the intervening estate of the feoffee to uses, and makes the beneficial interest of the cestui que use an absolute legal title. See Ohio & Colorado Smelting & Refining Co. v. Barr, 58 Colo. 116, 144 P. 552, 554.

Superstitious uses. See that title.

Use and habitation. Within a grant does not mean the exclusive use and habitation, but the necessities of the grantee are determinative of extent of privileges to be enjoyed. Barrett v. Barrett, La.App., 5 So.2d 381, 383.

Use and occupation. This is the name of an action, being a variety of assumpsit, to be maintained by a landlord against one who has had the occupation and enjoyment of an estate, under a contract to pay therefor, express or implied, but not under such a lease as would support an action specifically for rent. Thackray v. Ritz, 130 Misc. 403, 223 N.Y.S. 668, 669.

Use plaintiff. One for whose use (benefit) an action is brought in the name of another. Thus, where the assignee of a chose in action is not allowed to sue in his own name, the action would be entitled "A. B. (the assignor) for the Use of C. D. (the assignee) against E. F." In this case, C. D. is called the "use plaintiff."

USED FOR ILLEGAL CONVEYING OF LIQUOR. Automobile is so used, if liquor is in or on the car and is being intentionally conveyed by its movements, though it is upon the person of an occupant of the car while he is conveyed by it. Morris v. State, 220 Ala. 418, 125 So. 655.

USEE. A person for whose use a suit is brought; otherwise termed the "use plaintiff."

USEFUL. The term as used in the patent law, when applied to a machine, means that the machine will accomplish its purpose practically when applied in industry. Besser v. Merrilat Culvert Core Co., C.C.A.Iowa, 243 F. 611.

By "useful" is meant such an invention as may be applied to some beneficial use in society, in contradistinction to an invention which is injurious to the morals, the health, or the good order of society. Bedford v. Hunt, 1 Mason, 302, F.Cas.No.1,217.

USEFULNESS. Capabilities for use. The word pertains to the future as well as to the past. Chesapeake, 0. & S. W. R. Co. v. Dyer Co., 87 Tenn. 712, 11 S.W. 943.

USER. The actual exercise or enjoyment of any right or property. It is particularly used of franchises.

Adverse User

Such a use of the property under claim of right as the owner himself would make, asking no permission, and disregarding all other claims to it, so far as they conflict with this use. Blanchard v. Moulton, 63 Me. 434; Murray v. Scribner, 74 Wis. 602, 43 N.W. 549; Thorworth v. Scheets, 269 Ill. 573, 110 N.E. 42, 45; Cummins v. Dumas, 147 Miss. 215.113 So. 332, 334.

USER DE ACTION. L. Fr. In old practice. The pursuing or bringing an action. Cowell.

USHER. This word is said to be derived from "huissier," and is the name of a subordinate officer in some English courts of law. Archb.Pr. 25.

USHER OF THE BLACK ROD. The gentleman usher of the black rod is an officer of the house of lords appointed by letters patent from the crown. His duties are, by himself or deputy, to desire the attendance of the commons in the house of peers when the royal assent is given to bills, either by the king in person or by commission, to execute orders for the commitment of persons guilty of breach of privilege, and also to assist in the introduction of peers when they take the oaths and their seats. Brown.

USING MAIL TO DEFRAUD. The elements of this offense are the formation of a scheme or artifice to defraud, and use of mails for purpose of executing or attempting to execute such scheme or artifice; the latter element being gist of the offense. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1341. Stryker v. United States, C.C.A.Colo., 95 F.2d 601, 604, 605. The crime is complete when mails are used in such scheme, and what happened subsequently is not controlling. United States v. Ames, D.C.N.Y., 39 F.Supp. 885, 886.

USING THE SERVICE OF ANOTHER FOR PAY. This phrase as used in Compensation Act defining employer means right to control the means and manner of that service, as distinguished from results of such service, the word "service" meaning the performance of labor for the benefit of another. Rutherford v. Tobin Quarries, 336 Mo. 1171, 82 S.W.2d 918, 923.

USO. In Spanish law. Usage; that which arises from certain things which men say and do and practice uninterruptedly for a great length of time, without any hindrance whatever. Las Partidas, pt. 1, tit. 2, 1. 1.

USQUE. Lat. Up to; until. This is a word of exclusion, and a release of all demands usque ad a certain day does not cover a bond made on that day. 2 Mod. 28.

Usually applied to ownership of property. Applied to right to air it has been held that ownership extends "usque ad coelum." Romano v. Birmingham Ry. Light & Power Co., 182 Ala. 335, 62 So. 677, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 642, Ann.Cas.1915D, 776. See A Coelo Usque Ad Centrum.

USQUE AD FILUM AQUIE, OR VUE. Up to the middle of the stream or road.

USUAL. Habitual; ordinary; customary; according to usage or custom; commonly established, observed, or practiced. Such as is in common use or occurs in ordinary practice or course of events. See Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Hause, 71 Ill.App. 147; Kellogg v. Curtis, 69 Me. 214, 31 Am.Rep. 273; Oilmen's Reciprocal Ass'n v. Gilleland, Tex.Com. App., 291 S.W. 197, 199; Roberts Coal Co. v. Corder Coal Co., 143 Va. 133, 129, S.E. 341, 344; Webb v. New Mexico Pub. Co., 47 N.M. 279, 141 P.2d 333, 335. Synonymous with custom, common, wonted, regular. Dancy v. Abraham Bros. Packing Co., 171 Tenn. 311, 102 S.W.2d 526, 528.

USUAL COURSE. These words in statute excepting from application of Compensation Act employment not in usual course of employer's trade or business, refer to normal operations constituting regular business of employer. Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, 33 U.S.C.A. §§ 901-950; D.C.Code 1929, T. 19, §§ 11, 12, 33 U.S.C.A. § 901 note. Hoage v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 64 App.D.C. 258, 77 F.2d 381.

USUAL COVENANTS. See Covenant.

USUAL PLACE OF ABODE. Within meaning of statute relating to service of process is place where defendant is actually living at time of service. State ex rel. Merritt v. Heffernan, 142 Fla. 496, 195 So. 145, 147, 127 A.L.R. 1263; Caskey v. Peterson, 220 Wis. 690, 263 N.W. 658, 660.

USUAL TERMS. A phrase in the common-law practice, which meant pleading issuably, rejoining gratis, and taking short notice of trial. When a defendant obtained further time to plead, these were the terms usually imposed. Wharton.

USUARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. One who had the mere use of a thing belonging to another for the purpose of supplying his daily wants; a usuary. Dig. 7, 8, 10, pr.; Calvin.

USUCAPIO, or USUCAPTIO. A term of Roman law used to denote a mode of acquisition of property. It corresponds very nearly to the term "prescription." But the prescription of Roman law differed from that of the English law, in this: that no mala fide possessor (i. e., person in possession knowingly of the property of another) could, by however long a period, acquire title by possession merely. The two essential requisites to usucapio were justa causa (i. e., title) and bona fides, (i. e., ignorance.) The term "usucapio" is sometimes, but erroneously, written "usucaptio." Brown. See Pavey v. Vance, 56 Ohio St. 162, 46 N.E. 898.

As to "lucrativa usucapio," see that title.

USUCAPIO CONSTITUTA EST UT ALIQUIS LITIUM FINIS ESSET. Prescription was instituted that there might be some end to litigation. Dig. 41, 10, 5; Broom, Max. 894, note.

USUFRUCT. In the civil law. The right of enjoying a thing, the property of which is vested in another, and to draw from the same all the profit, utility, and advantage which it may produce, provided it be without altering the substance of the thing. Civ.Code La. art. 533. Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 102; Modern Music Shop v. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. of Milwaukee, 131 Misc. 305, 226 N.Y.S. 630, 635.

Under Greek Law. A right attached to the person which may not be inherited. New England Trust Co. v. Wood, Mass., 93 N.E.2d 547, 549.

Imperfect Usufruct

An imperfect or quasi usufruct is that which is of things which would be useless to the usufructuary if he did not consume or expend them or change the substance of them; as, money, grain, liquors. Civ.Code La. art. 534.

See Quasi Usufruct infra.

Legal Usufruct

See that title.

Perfect Usufruct

An usufruct in those things which the usufructuary can enjoy without changing their substance, though their substance may be diminished or deteriorate naturally by time or by the use to which they are applied, as, a house, a piece of land, furniture, and other movable effects. Civ.Code La. art. 534.

Quasi Usufruct

In the civil law. Originally the usufruct gave no right to the substance of the thing, and consequently none to its consumption; hence only an inconsumable thing could be the object of it, whether movable or immovable. But in later times the right of usufruct was, by ar.alogy, extended to consumable things, and therewith arose the distinction between true and quasi usufructs. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 307; Civ.Code La. art. 534. See Imperfect Usufruct, supra.

USUFRUCTUARY. In the civil law. One who has the usufruct or right of enjoying anything in which he has no property, Cartwright v. Cartwright, 18 Tex. 628.

USUFRUIT. In French law. The same as the usufruct of the English and Roman law.

USURA. Lat. In the civil law. Money given for the use of money; interest. Commonly used in the plural, "usurce." Dig. 22, 1.

USURA EST COMMODUM CERTUM QUOD PROPTER USUM REI MUTUATIE RECIPITUR. SED SECUNDARIO SPIRARE DE ALIQUA RETRIBUTIONE, AD VOLUNTATEM EJUS QUI MUTUATUS JEST, HOC NON EST VITIOSUM. Usury is a certain benefit which is received for the use of a thing lent. But to have an understanding [literally, to breathe or whisper,] in an incidental way, about some compensation to be made at the pleasure of the borrower, is not lawful. Branch, Princ.; 5 Coke, 70b; Glan. lib. 7, c. 16.

USURA MANIFESTA. Manifest or open usury; as distinguished from usura velata, veiled or concealed usury, which consists in giving a bond for the loan, in the amount of which is included the stipulated interest.

USURA MARITIMA. Interest taken on bottomry or respondentia bonds, which is proportioned to the risk, and is not affected by the usury laws.

USURARIUS. In old English law. A usurer. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 52, § 14.

USURIOUS. Pertaining to usury; partaking of the nature of usury; involving usury; tainted with usury; as, a usurious contract.

USURIOUS CONTRACT. A contract if interest contracted to be paid exceeds the rate established by statute. Commerce Farm Credit Co. v. Ramp, Tex.Civ.App., 116 S.W.2d 1144, 1149. It being sufficient when there is contingency whereby lender may get more than lawful rate of interest. Reynolds Mortg. Co. v. Thomas, Tex.Civ.App., 61 S.W.2d 1011, 1013. See, also, Usury.

USURP. To seize and hold any office by force, and without right; applied to seizure of office, place, functions, powers, rights, etc. State ex rel. Scanes v. Babb, 124 W.Va. 428, 20 S.E.2d 683, 686.

USURPATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The interruption of a usucaption, by some act on the part of the real owner. Calvin.

USURPATION. The unlawful assumption of the use of property which belongs to another; an interruption or the disturbing a man in his right and possession. Tomlins.

The unlawful seizure or assumption of sovereign power; the assumption of government or supreme power by force or illegally, in derogation of the constitution and of the rights of the lawful ruler.

"Usurpation" for which writ of prohibition may be granted involves attempted exercise of power not possessed by inferior officer. Ex parte Wilkinson, 220 Ala. 529, 126 So. 102, 104.

USURPATION OF ADVOWSON. An injury which consists in the absolute ouster or dispossession of the patron from the advowson or right of presentation, and which happens when a stranger who has no right presents a clerk, and the latter is thereupon admitted and instituted. Brown.

USURPATION OF FRANCHISE OR OFFICE. The unjustly intruding upon or exercising any office, franchise, or liberty belonging to another. See, also, Usurpation.

"Usurpation" of public office authorizing quo warranto action under statute may be with or without forcible seizure of office and prerogatives thereof, and may consist of mere unauthorized assumption and exercise of power in performing duties of office upon claim of right thereto. State ex rel. Kirk v. Wheatley, 133 Ohio St. 164, 12 N.E.2d 491, 493.

USURPED POWER. In insurance. An invasion from abroad, or an internal rebellion, where armies are drawn up against each other, when the laws are silent, and when the firing of towns becomes unavoidable. These words cannot mean the power of a common mob. 2 Marsh.Ins. 791.

USURPER. One who assumes the right of government by force, contrary to and in violation of the constitution of the country. Toul, Droit. Civ. n. 32.

USURPER OF A PUBLIC OFFICE. One who either intrudes into a vacant office or ousts the incumbent without any color of title. Neal v. Parker, 200 Ark. 10, 139 S.W.2d 41, 44. One who intrudes on office and assumes to exercise its functions without legal title or color of right thereto. Alleger v. School Dist. No. 16, Newton County; Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 660, 663; State ex rel. City of Republic v. Smith, 345 Mo. 1158, 139 S.W.2d 929, 933. Any person attempting to fill pretended office attempted to be created by an unconstitutional law. Bodcaw Lumber Co. of Louisiana v. Jordan, La.App., 14 So.2d 98, 101.

USURY,

Modern Law

An illegal contract for a loan or forbearance of money, goods, or things in action, by which illegal interest is reserved, or agreed to be reserved or taken. Midland Loan Finance Co. v. Lorentz, 209 Minn. 278, 296 N.W. 911, 914, 915. An unconscionable and exorbitant rate or amount of interest. Heilos v. State Land Co., 113 N.J.Eq. 239, 166 A. 330, 332. An unlawful contract upon the loan of money, to receive the same again with exorbitant increase. 4 Bl.Comm. 156. The reserving and taking, or contracting to reserve and take, either directly or by indirection, a greater sum for the use of money than the lawful interest. See Henry v. Bank of Salina, 5 Hill. (N.Y.) 528; In re Elmore Cotton Mills (D.C.) 217 F. 810, 814. See, also, Usurious Contract.

"Usury" does not depend on question whether the lender actually gets more than the legal rate of interest or not; but on whether there was a purpose in his mind to make more than legal interest for the use of money, and whether, by the terms of the transaction, and the means used to effect the loan, he may by its enforcement be enabled to get more than the legal rate. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Schenck, Tex.Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 833, 837.

A profit greater than the lawful rate of interest, intentionally exacted as a bonus, for the forbearance of an existing indebtedness or a loan of money, imposed upon the necessities of the borrower in a transaction where the money is to be returned at all events. Monk v. Goldstein, 172 N.C. 516, 90 S.E. 519, 520; Anderson v. Beadle, 35 N.M. 654, 5 P.2d 528, 529.

Old English Law

Interest of money; increase for the loan of money; a reward for the use of money. 2 Bl.Comm. 454. The taking of any compensation whatever for the use of money. Marshall v. Beeler, 104 Kan. 32, 178 P. 245, 246; Schlesinger v. State, 195 Wis. 366, 218 N.W. 440, 442, 57 A.L.R. 352.

USUS. Lat. In Roman law. A precarious enjoyment of land, corresponding with the right of habitatio of houses, and being closely analogous to the tenancy at sufferance or at will of English law. The usuarius (i. e., tenant by usus) could only hold on so long as the owner found him cons venient, and had to go so soon as ever he was in the owner's way, (molestus.) The usuarius could not have a friend to share the produce. It was scarcely permitted to him (Justinian says) to have even his wife with him on the land; and he could not let or sell, the right being strictly personal to himself. Brown.

USUS BELLICI. Lat. In international law. War. like uses or objects. It is the usus bellici which determine an article to be contraband. 1 Kent, Comm. 141.

USUS EST DOMINIUM FIDUCIARIUM. Bac. St. Uses. Use is a fiduciary dominion.

USUS ET STATUS SIVE POSSESSIO POTIUS DIFFERUNT SECUNDUM RATIONEM FORI, QUAM SECUNDUM RATIONEM REI. Bac. St. Uses. Use and estate, or possession, differ more in the rule of the court than in the rule of the matter.

USUS FRUCTUS. Lat. In Roman law. Usufruct; usufructuary right or possession. The temporary right of using a thing, without having the ultimate property, or full dominion, of the substance. 2 Bl.Comm. 327.

UT CURRERE SOLEBAT. Lat. As it was wont to run; applied to a water-course.

UT DE FEODO. L. Lat. As of fee.

UT HOSPITES. Lat. As guests. 1 Salk. 25, pl. 10.

UT PANE AD PAUCOS, METUS AD OMNES PERVENIAT. That the punishment may reach a few, but the fear of it affect all. A maxim in criminal law, expressive of one of the principal objects of human punishment. 4 Inst. 6; 4 Bl. Comm. 11.

UT RES MAGIS VALEAT QUAM PEREAT. That the thing may rather have effect than be destroyed. Simonds v. Walker, 100 Mass. 113; National Pemberton Bank v. Lougee, 108 Mass. 373, 11 Am. Rep. 367. Charitable bequests are also governed by this maxim. King v. Richardson, C.C.A.N.C., 136 F.2d 849, 858.

UT SUMMIE POTESTATIS REGIS EST POSSE QUANTUM VELIT, SIC MAGNITUDINIS EST VELLE QUANTUM POSSIT, 3 Inst. 236. As the highest power of a king is to be able to do all he wishes, so the highest greatness of him is to wish all he is able to do.

UTAS. In old English practice. Octave; the octave; the eighth day following any term or feast. Cowell.

UTENSIL. A much broader term than "tool," though it may be applicable to many implements designated tools in common parlance. Murphy v. Continental Ins. Co., 178 Iowa, 375, 157 N.W. 855, 857, L.R.A. 1917B, 934. For "Farm Utensils," see that title.

UTERINE. Born of the same mother. A uterine brother or sister is one born of the same mother, but by a different father.

UTERO–GESTATION. Pregnancy.

UTERQUE. Lat. Both; each. "The justices, being in doubt as to the meaning of this word in an indictment, demanded the opinions of grammarians, who delivered their opinions that this word doth aptly signify one of them." 1 Leon. 241.

UTFANGTHEF, or UTFANGENETHEF. In Saxon and old English law. The privilege of a lord of a manor to judge and punish a thief dwelling out of his liberty, and committing theft without the same, if he were caught within the lord's jurisdiction. Cowell.

The right of the lord of a manor to hang a thief caught with the stolen goods, whether or not the capture was made on the manor. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 11. See Infangenthef.

UTI. Lat. In the civil law. To use. Strictly, to use for necessary purposes; as distinguished from "frui," to enjoy. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 4, § 415.

UTI FRUI. Lat. In the civil law. To have the full use and enjoyment of a thing, without damage to its substance. Calvin.

UTI POSSIDETIS. Lat.

The Civil Law

A species of interdict for the purpose of retaining possession of a thing, granted to one who, at the time of contesting suit, was in possession of an immovable thing, in order that he might be declared the legal possessor. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 6, no. 8. See Utrubi.

International Law

A phrase used to signify that the parties to a treaty are to retain possession of what they have acquired by force during the war. Wheat. Int. Law, 627.

A treaty which terminates a war may adopt this principle or that of the status quo ante bellum, or a combination of the two. In default of any treaty stipulation, the former doctrine prevails. Guillermo Alvarez y Sanches v. U. S., 42 Ct.C1. 458.

UTI ROGAS. Lat. In Roman law. The form of words by which a vote in favor of a proposed law was orally expressed. Uti rogas, volo vel jubeo, as you ask, I will or order; I vote as you propose; I am for the law. The letters "U. R." on a ballot expressed the same sentiment. Adams, Rom. Ant. 98, 100.

UTILE PER INUTILE NON VITIATUR. The useful is not vitiated by the useless. Surplusage does not spoil the remaining part if that is good in itself. Dyer, 392; Broom, Max. 627; 2 Wheat. 221, 4 L.Ed. 224.

UTILIDAD. Span. In Spanish law. The profit of a thing. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 1.

UTILIS. Lat. In the civil law. Useful; beneficial; equitable; available. Actio utilis, an equitable action. Calvin. Dies utilis, an available day.

UTILITY. In patent law. Industrial value; the capability of being so applied in practical affairs as to prove advantageous in the ordinary pursuits of life, or add to the enjoyment of mankind. Callison v. Dean, C.C.A.Okl., 70 F.2d 55, 58. The absence of frivolity and mischievousness, and utility for some beneficial purpose. Rob. Pat. § 339. But there is no utility if the invention can be used only to commit a fraud with, Klein v. Russell, 19 Wall. 433, 22 L.Ed. 116; or for some immoral purpose, Lowell v. Lewis, 1 Mason, 182, F. Cas.No.8,568; or can be used only for gambling purposes in saloons, Schultze v. Holtz, C.C.Cal., 82 F. 448; or if the invention is dangerous in its use, Mitchell v. Tilghman, 19 Wall. 287, 22 L.Ed. 125.

"Utility" is established if only partial success is attained. Emery Industries v. Schumann, C.C.A.I11., 111 F.2d 209, 211.

The "utility" which an infringing defendant is estopped to deny means sufficient practical utility to make a device useful in the sense of the patent statute. The estoppel does not forbid him to deny that there is any useful function, or new result serving to give inventive character to the slight step which a patentee has taken in differentiation from prior art. Sandy MacGregor Co. v. Vaco Grip Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 2 F.2d 655, 656.

UTLAGATUS, or UTLAGATUM. In old English law. An outlawed person; an outlaw.

UTLAGATUS EST QUASI EXTRA LEGEM POSITUS. CAPUT GERIT LUPINUM. 7 Coke, 14. An outlaw is, as it were, put out of the protection of the law. He bears the head of a wolf.

UTLAGATUS PRO CONTUMACIA ET FUGA, NON PROPTER HOC CONVICTUS EST DE FACTO PRINCIPAL!. Fleta. One who is outlawed for contumacy and flight is not on that account convicted of the principal fact.

UTLAGE. L. Fr. An outlaw. Britt. c. 12.

UTLESSE. An escape of a felon out of prison.

UTMOST CARE. Substantially synonymous with "highest care." Brogan v. Union Traction Co., 76 W.Va. 698, 86 S.E. 753, 756.

The "utmost care" which is required of a carrier of persons for reward, means the highest degree of care, but does not mean that in point of fact the same degree or quantum of care should be applied in every case, since the necessary degree of care varies with the dangers to be anticipated by a man of the utmost degree of prudence from the surrounding circumstances and conditions of each case. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Shelton, 135' Okl. 53, 273 P. 988, 990.

UTMOST RESISTANCE. This term, under the rule that to constitute rape there must be utmost resistance by the woman, is a relative rather than a positive term, and means that greatest effort of which she is capable must be used to foil assailant. State v. Brewster, 208 Iowa, 122, 222 N.W. 6. McLain v. State, 159 Wis. 204, 149 N.W. 771, 772.

UTRUBI,

Civil Law

The name of a species of interdict for retaining a thing, granted for the purpose of protecting the possession of a movable thing, as the uti possidetis was granted for an immovable. Inst. 4, 15, 4; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 260.

Scotch Law

An interdict as to movables, by which the colorable possession of a bona fide holder is continued until the final settlement of a contested right; corresponding to uti possidetis as to heritable property. Bell.

UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM. Both of us. Words used formerly in bonds.

UTTER, .v. To put or send (as a forged check) into circulation; Smith v. Commonwealth, 151 Ky. 517, 152 S.W. 574, 575; To publish or put forth; Barron v. State, 12 Ga.App. 342, 77 S.E. 214, 215; Valley Dry Goods Co. v. Buford, 114 Miss. 414, 75 So. 252, 254. To offer. Bish. Cr. L. § 607.

To utter and publish an instrument, as a counterfeit note, is to declare or assert, directly or indirectly, by words or actions, that it is good; uttering it is a declaration that it is good, with an intention or offer to pass it. Whart.Crim.Law, § 703; Corn. v. Searle, 2 Binn., Pa., 338, 4 Am.Dec. 446; Terry v. State, 29 Ala.App. 340, 197 So. 44, 45.

To utter, as used in a statute against forgery and counterfeiting, means to offer, whether accepted or not, a forged instrument, with the representation, by words or actions, that the same is genuine. See State v. Horner, 48 Mo. 522; People v. Rathbun, 21 Wend., N.Y., 521; People v. Caton, 25 Mich. 392; Commonwealth v. Fenwick, 177 Ky. 685, 198 S.W. 32, 34, L.R.A.1918B, 1189; Jones v. State, 69 Okl.Cr. 244, 101 P.2d 860, 863; 2 Bish.Cr.L. § 605.

"Uttering" or "publishing" a check consists in presenting it for payment, and the act is then done although no money may be obtained. State v. Hobl, 108 Kan. 261, 194 P. 921, 924.

UTTER, adj. Entire; complete; absolute; total. Bell v. Commonwealth, 170 Va. 597, 195 S.E. 675, 683.

In a statute making utter desertion for three years a ground for divorce, it suggests an abnegation of all the duties and obligations resulting from the marriage contract. Moody v. Moody, 118 Me. 454, 108 A. 849.

UTTER BAR. In English law. The bar at which those barristers, usually junior men, practice who have not yet been raised to the dignity of king's counsel. These junior barristers are said to plead without the bar; while those of the higher rank are admitted to seats within the bar, and address the court or a jury from a place reserved for them, and divided off by a bar, Brown. Also called "outer bar."

UTTER BARRISTER. In English law. Those barristers who plead without the bar, and are distinguished from benchers, or those who have been readers, and who are allowed to plead within the bar, as the king's counsel are. Cowell. See Outer Bar.

UXOR. Lat. In the civil law. A wife; a woman lawfully married.

Et Uxor

And his wife. A term used in indexing, abstracting, and describing conveyances made by a man and his wife as grantors, or to a man and his wife as grantees. Often abbreviated "et ux." Thus, "John Doe et ux. to Richard Roe."

Jure Uxoris

In right of his wife. A term used of a husband who joins in a deed, is seised of an estate, brings a suit, etc., in the right or on the behalf of his wife. 3 Bl. Comm. 210.

UXOR ET FILIUS SUNT NOMINA NATURE. Wife and son are names of nature. 4 Bac. Works, 350.

UXOR NON EST SUI JURIS, SED SUB POTESTATE VIRI. A wife is not her own mistress, but is under the power of her husband. 3 Inst. 108.

UXOR SEQUITUR DOMICILIUM VIRI. A wife follows the domicile of her husband. Tray. Lat. Max. 606.

UXORICIDE. The killing of a wife by her husband; one who murders his wife. Not a technical term of the law.

V. As an abbreviation, this letter may stand for "Victoria," "volume," or "verb;" also "vide" (see) and "voce" (word).

It is also a common abbreviation of "versus," in the titles of causes, and reported cases.

V. A. Veterans Administration.

V. C. An abbreviation for "vice-chancellor."

V. C. C. An abbreviation for "vice-chancellor's court."

V. E. An abbreviation for "venditioni exponas," (q. v.).

V. G. An abbreviation for "verbi gratia," for the sake of example.

V. I. S. T. A. Volunteers in Service to America.

VACANCY. A place which is empty. Wallace v. Payne, 197 Cal. 539, 241 P. 879. State v. Young, 137 La. 102, 68 So. 241, 247.

A strip of unsurveyed and unsold public lands. Hughes v. Rhodes, Tex.Civ.App., 137 S.W.2d 820, 821.

An unoccupied or unfilled post, position, or office. Alcorn ex rel. Hendrick v. Keating, 120 Conn. 427, 181 A. 340. An existing office, etc., without an incumbent. State v. Board of Election Com'rs of City of Tipton, 196 Ind. 472, 149 N.E. 69, 71. The state of being destitute of an incumbent, or a proper or legally qualified officer. Ashcroft v. Goodman, 139 Tenn. 625, 202 S.W. 939. The term is principally applied to an interruption in the incumbency of an office, or to cases where the office is not occupied by one who has a legal right to hold it and to exercise the rights and perform the duties pertaining thereto. Frantz v. Davis, 131 S.E. 784, 785, 144 Va. 320. State ex rel. Plunkett v. Miller, 162 Miss. 149, 137 So. 737, 739. See, also, Vacant.

The word "vacancy," when applied to official positions, means, in its ordinary and popular sense, that an office is unoccupied, and that there is no incumbent who has a lawful right to continue therein until the happening of a future event, though the word is sometimes used with reference to an office temporarily filled. Futrell v. Oldham, 107 Ark. 386, 155 S. W. 502, 504, Ann.Cas.1915A, 571; State v. Caulk, 3 W.W.Harr., Del., 344, 138 A. 354, 357.

Misconduct in office does not create a "vacancy". State ex rel. Brister v. Weston, 241 Wis. 584, 6 N.W.2d 648, 651. And though "suspension" becomes imperative pending trial of a public officer for malfeasance or nonfeasance in office, "vacancy" does not occur until the officer is removed following trial. State ex rel. Carlson v. Strunk, 219 Minn. 529, 18 N.W.2d 457, 460. But annulment of election creates a "vacancy" in office. Killian v. Wilkins, 203 S.C. 74, 26 S.E.2d 246, 248.

A person by entering armed forces of the United States does not create a vacancy of a civil office formerly held by such person. State ex rel. Thomas v. Wysong, 125 W.Va. 369, 24 S.E.2d 463, 467; Gullickson v. Mitchell, 113 Mont. 359, 126 P.2d 1106, 1110, 1111, 1114; In re Advisory Opinion to Governor, 150 Fla. 556, 8 So.2d 26, 32, 140 A.L.R. 1481.

VACANT. Empty; unoccupied; as, "vacant" office. Shaffner v. Shaw, 191 Iowa 1047, 180 N.W. 853, 854. Deprived of contents, without inanimate objects. It implies entire abandonment, nonoccupancy for any purpose. Foley v. Sonoma County Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Sonoma, Cal. App., 108 P.2d 939, 942.

"Vacant" and "unoccupied," as used together in rider to fire policy, have different meanings; term "vacant" meaning "empty," while term "unoccupied" means lack of habitual presence of human beings. Jelin v. Home Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.J., 72 F.2d 326, 327.

Absolutely free, unclaimed, and unoccupied; as, "vacant" land. Donley v. Van Horn, 49 Cal.App. 383, 193 P. 514, 516. See, also, War Fork Land Co. v. Llewellyn, 199 Ky. 607, 251 S.W. 663, 665. But land which is partially cultivated may still be "vacant land" within the meaning of a statute. Di Legge v. Peper, 148 Md. 268, 129 A. 292, 293.

See, also, Vacancy, and as to vacant "Possession" and "Succession," see those titles.

VACANTIA BONA. Lat. In the civil law. Goods without an owner, or in which no one claims a property; escheated goods. Inst. 2, 6, 4; 1 Bl. Comm. 298.

VACATE. To annul; to set aside; to cancel or rescind; to render an act void; as, to vacate an entry of record, or a judgment. Stewart v. Oneal, C.C.A.Ohio, 237 F. 897, 903.

As applied to a judgment or decree it is not synonymous with "suspend" which means to stay enforcement of judgment or decree. Ohio Fuel Gas Co. v. City of Mt. Vernon, 37 Ohio App. 159, 174 N.E. 260, 262.

To put an end to; as, to vacate a street. McCarl v. Clarke County, 167 Iowa, 14, 148 N.W. 1015, 1017.

To move out; to make vacant or empty; to leave; especially, to surrender possession by removal; to cease from occupancy. Ruble v. Ruble, Tex.Civ.App., 264 S.W. 1018, 1020; Polich v. Severson, 68 Mont. 225, 216 P. 785, 787.

See, also, Vacancy.

VACATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Exemption; immunity; privilege; dispensation; exemption from the burden of office. Calvin.

VACATION. A recess or leave of absence, a respite or time of respite from active duty, an intermission or rest period during which activity or work is suspended. It is a period of freedom from duty, but not the end of employment. In re Dauber, 151 Pa.Super. 293, 30 A.2d 214, 216. The act or result of vacating. An intermission of procedure. Kettlekamp v. Watkins, 70 Mont. 391, 225 P. 1003, 1006. It is not a termination of the relation of master and servant. Gutzwiller v. American Tobacco Co., 97 Vt. 281, 122 A. 586, 588. In schools, there are customary vacations at Christmas, Easter, and during the summer. Duffey v. School Committee of Town of Hopkinton, 236 Mass. 5, 127 N.E. 540.

That period of time between the end of one term of court and the beginning of another.

O'Neal v. State, 35 Ga.App. 665, 134 S.E. 332, 333; Conkling v. Ridgely, 112 Ill. 36, 1 N.E. 261, 54 Am. Rep. 204; Brayman v. Whitcomb, 134 Mass. 525.

Sometimes, any time when the court is not in session. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Ingram, 118 Ark. 377, 176 S.W. 692, 693.

Under practice statutes the intermission between the calls of the equity docket. West v. State ex rel. Matthews, 233 Ala. 588, 173 So. 46, 47.

Ecclesiastical Law

Vacation signifies that a church or benefice is vacant; e. g., on the death or resignation of the incumbent, until his successor is appointed. 2 Inst. 359; Phillim.Ecc.Law, 495.

VACATION BARRISTER. See Barrister.

VACATUR. Lat. Let it be vacated. In practice, a rule or order by which a proceeding is vacated; a vacating.

VACATURA. An avoidance of an ecclesiastical benefice. Cowell.

VACCARIA. In old English law. A dairyhouse. Co. Litt. 5b.

VACCINATION. Inoculation with vaccine or the virus of cowpox as a preventive against the smallpox; frequently made compulsory by statute. Daniel v. Putnam County, 113 Ga. 570, 38 S.E. 980, 54 L.R.A. 292; Zucht v. King, Tex.Civ.App., 225 S.W. 267.

VACUA POSSESSIO. Lat. The vacant possession, i. e., free and unburdened possession, which (e. g.,) a vendor had and has to give to a purchaser of lands.

VACUITY. Emptiness; vacancy; want of reality; nihility. McQueen v. Ahbe, 99 W.Va. 650, 130 S.E. 261, 262.

VACUUM. Practically synonymous with suction, although suction may be the result of vacuum. Pennsylvania Rubber Co. v. Dreadnaught Tire & Rubber Co., D.C.Del., 225 F. 138, 141.

VACUUS. Lat. In the civil law. Empty; void; vacant; unoccupied. Calvin.

VADES. Lat. In the civil law. Pledges; sureties; bail; security for the appearance of a defendant or accused person in court. Calvin.

VADIARE DUELLUM. L. Lat. In old English law. To wage or gage the duellum; to wage battel; to give pledges mutually for engaging in the trial by combat.

VADIMONIUM. Lat. In Roman law. Bail or security; the giving of bail for appearance in court; a recognizance. Calvin. An ancient form of suretyship. Hunter, Rom.L. 526.

VADIUM. Lat. A pledge; security by pledge of property. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld.Raym. 913.

VADIUM MORTUUM. A mortgage or dead pledge; a security given by the borrower of a sum of money, by which he grants to the lender an estate in fee, on condition that, if the money be not repaid at the time appointed, the estate so put in pledge shall continue to the lender as dead or gone from the mortgagor. 2 Bl.Comm. 157.

VADIUM PONERE. To take bail for the appearance of a person in a court of justice. Tomlins.

VADIUM VIVUM. A species of security by which the borrower of a sum of money made over his estate to the lender until he had received that sum out of the issues and profits of the land. It was so called because neither the money nor the lands were lost, and were not left in dead pledge, but this was a living pledge, for the profits of the land were constantly paying off the debt. Litt. § 206; 1 Pow.Mortg. 3; Termes de la Ley; Spect v. Spect, 88 Cal. 437, 26 P. 203, 13 L.R.A. 137, 22 Am.St.Rep. 314; O'Neill v. Gray, 39 Hun (N.Y.) 566; Kortright v. Cady, 21 N.Y. 344, 78 Am.Dec. 145.

VADLET. In old English law. The king's eldest son; hence the valet or knave follows the king and queen in a pack of cards. Bar.Obs.St. 344.

VADELET. See Valec.

VADUM. In old records, a ford, or wading place. Cowell.

VAGABOND. A vagrant or homeless wanderer without means of honest livelihood. Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 50 N.E.2d 497, 502. One who wanders from place to place, having no fixed dwelling, or, if he has one, not abiding in it; a wanderer, especially such a person who is lazy and generally worthless and without means of honest livelihood. Goodman v. Eggers, 11 N.J.Misc. 811, 168 A. 317, 318.

Vagabonds are described in old English statutes as "such as wake on the night and sleep on the day, and haunt customable taverns and ale-houses and routs about; and no man wot from whence they came, nor whither they go." 4 Bl.Comm. 169. See Forsyth v. Forsyth, 46 N.J.Eq. 400, 19 A. 119; Johnson v. State, 28 Tex. App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005.

VAGABUNDUM NUNCUPAMUS EUM QUI NULLIBI DOMICILIUM CONTRAXIT HABITATIONIS. We call him a "vagabond" who has acquired nowhere a domicile of residence. Phillim. Dom. 23, note.

VAGRANCY. At common law, the act of going about from place to place by a person without visible means of support, who is idle, and who, though able to work for his or her maintenance, refuses to do so, but lives without labor or on the charity of others. Ex parte Hudgins, 86 W. Va. 526, 103 S.E. 327, 328, 9 A.L.R. 1361. See Vagrant.

Ordinarily, a course of conduct or manner of life, rather than a single act, is necessary to give rise to charge of "vagrancy". State v. Suman, 216 Minn. 293, 12 N.W.2d 620, 621.

Under some statutes, however, a single act may be sufficient. 66 C.J. p. 401. Thus, it has been held that the act of prowling about and creeping up on parked automobiles and their occupants at night, under circumstances indicating an intent to commit a crime, constitutes vagrancy. Smith v. Drew, 26 P.2d 1040, 175 Wash. 11. It has also been held that, although traveling by automobile, a person may nevertheless be a vagrant, and, even though he travels without stop or hesitation for a considerable distance, he may still come within a statute punishing one who "wanders about" at late hours. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 5528.84.

VAGRANT. At common law, wandering or going about from place to place by idle person who had no lawful or visible means of support and who subsisted on charity and did not work, though able to do so. State v. Harlowe, 174 Wash. 227, 24 P.2d 601.

A general term, including, in English law, the several classes of idle and disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues. 4 Steph.Comm. 308, 309.

One who strolls from place to place, an idle wanderer, specifically, one who has no settled habitation, a vagabond. Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 50 N.E.2d 497, 502. A person able to work who spends his time in idleness or immorality, having no property to support him and without some visible and known means of fair, honest and reputable livelihood. State v. Oldham, 224 N.C. 415, 30 S.E.2d 318, 319. One who is apt to become a public charge through his own laziness. People, on Complaint of McDonough, v. Gesino, Sp.Sess., 22 N.Y.S.2d 284, 285. See Vagrancy.

A person who lives without employment is not a "vagrant" if he has sufficient means belonging to himself or means provided for him in a legitimate way. People v. Banwer, Mag.Ct., 22 N.Y.S.2d 566, 569, 571.

VAGRANT ACT. In English law. The statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, which is an act for the punishment of idle and disorderly persons. 2 Chit.St. 145. The act of 17 Geo. II divided vagrants into idle and disorderly persons; rogues and vagabonds; and incorrigible rogues. Other statutes were passed as late at 32 Geo. III bearing on this subject. See Jacob's Law Diet. s. v. Vagrant.

VAGUE. Indefinite. City of Cincinnati v. Schill, 125 Ohio St. 57, 180 N.E. 545, 547. Uncertain; not susceptible of being understood. 5 B. & C. 583.

Vague and unsatisfactory testimony is that which is dim and shadowy and fails to relieve the mind of the trier of facts from doubt or uncertainty. Weliska's Case, 125 Me. 147, 131 A. 860, 861.

VALE. In Spanish law. A promissory note. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 5, § 3. See Gov-In v. De Miranda, 140 N.Y. 662, 35 N.E. 628.

VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. It shall have effect as far as it can have effect. Cowp. 600; 4 Kent, Comm. 493; Shep.Touch. 87.

VALEC, VALECT, or VADELET. In old English law. A young gentleman; also a servitor or gentleman of the chamber. Cowell.

VALENTIA. L. Lat. The value or price of anything.

VALESIIERIA. In old English law. The proving by the kindred of the slain, one on the father's side, and another on tha t of the mother, that a man was a Welshman. Wharton. See Engleshire.

VALET. Anciently, a name denoting young gentlemen of rank and family, but afterwards applied to those of lower degree; now used for a menial servant, more particularly occupied about the person of his employer. Cab.Lawy. 800.

VALID. Having legal strength or force, executed with proper formalities, incapable of being rightfully overthrown or set aside. Edwards v. O'Neal, Tex.Civ.App., 28 S.W.2d 569, 572. Of binding force; legally sufficient or efficacious; authorized by law. Anderson, L.Dict.; Morrison v. Farmers' & Traders' State Bank, 70 Mont. 146, 225 P. 123, 125. Good or sufficient in point of law; efficacious; executed with the proper formalities; incapable of being rightfully overthrown or set aside; sustainable and effective in law, as distinguished from that which exists or took place in fact or appearance, but has not the requisites to enable it to be recognized and enforced by law. Thompson v. Town of Frostproof, 89 Fla. 92, 103 So. 118; United States v. McCutchen, D.C.Cal., 234 F. 702, 709.

A deed, will, or other instrument, which has received all the formalities required by law, is said to be valid.

Meritorious; as a valid defense. Berringer v. Stevens, 145 Ark. 293, 225 S.W. 14, 15.

VALID REASON. These words, in a statute providing for the withdrawal of the names of petitioners for a road improvement district when valid reasons therefor are presented, mean a sound sufficient reason, such as fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, duress, etc., a reason upon which the petitioner could support or justify his change in attitude. The word "valid" necessarily possesses an element of legal strength and force, and inconsistent positions have no such force. Echols v. Trice, 130 Ark. 97, 196 S.W. 801, 802.

VALIDATE. To test the validity of; to make valid; to confirm. Thompson v. Town of Frostproof, 89 Fla. 92, 103 So. 118. To sanction, to affirm. Peck v. Tugwell, 199 La. 125, 5 So.2d 524, 529.

VALIDATING STATUTE. A statute, purpose of which is to cure past errors and omissions and thus make valid what was invalid, but it grants no indulgence for the correction of future errors. Petition of Miller, 149 Pa.Super. 142, 28 A.2d 257, 258.

VALIDITY. Legal sufficiency, in contradistinction to mere regularity. Home Ins. Co. of New York v. Gaines, 74 Colo. 62, 218 P. 907, 908.

VALIDITY OF A STATUTE. This phrase, within the meaning of a constitutional provision relating to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, refers to the power to enact the particular statute, and not merely to its judicial construction or application. Boehringer v. Yuma County, 15 Ariz. 546, 140 P. 507, 508.

VALIDITY OF A TREATY. The term "validity," as applied to treaties, admits of two descriptions—necessary and voluntary. By the former is meant that which results from the treaties having been made by persons authorized by, and for purposes consistent with, the constitution. By voluntary validity is meant that validity which a treaty, voidable by reason of violation by the other party, still continues to retain by the silent acquiescence and will of the nation. It is voluntary, because it is at the will of the nation to let it remain or to extinguish it. The principles which govern and decide the necessary validity of a treaty are of a judicial nature, while those on which its voluntary validity depends are of a political nature. 2 Paine 688, as paraphrased in 5 Moore, Int.L. Dig. 183.

VALIDITY OF A WILL. As used in will contest statute has reference only to the genuineness or legal sufficiency of will under attack. In re Elliott's Estate, 22 Wash.2d 334, 156 P.2d 427, 438, 157 A.L.R. 1335.

VALLEY. As applied to a mountainous country, lowlands, in contradistinction to mountain slopes and ridges. Whaley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., C.C. Mont., 167 F. 664.

VALOR BENEFICIORUM. L. Lat. The value of every ecclesiastical benefice and preferment, according to which the first fruits and tenths are collected and paid. It is commonly called the "king's books," by which the clergy are at present rated. 2 Steph.Comm. 533; Wharton.

VALOR MARITAGII. Lat. Value of the marriage. The amount forfeited under the ancient tenures by a ward to a guardian who had offered her a marriage without disparagement, which she refused. In feudal law, the guardian in chivalry had the right of tendering to his infant ward a suitable match, without "disparagement," (inequality,) which, if the infants refused, they forfeited the value of the marriage (valor maritagii) to their guardian; that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give, to the guardian for such an alliance. 2 Bl.Comm. 70; Litt. § 110.

A writ which lay against the ward, on coming of full age, for that he was not married, by his guardian, for the value of the marriage, and this though no convenient marriage had been offered. Termes de la Ley.

VALUABLE. Of financial or market value; commanding or worth a good price; of considerable worth in any respect; estimable. Webster, Dict.

VALUABLE CONSIDERATION. A class of consideration upon which a promise may be founded, which entitles the promisee to enforce his claim against an unwilling promisor. Cockrell v. McKenna, 103 N.J.L. 166, 134 A. 687, 688, 48 A.L.R. 234, some right, interest, profit, or benefit accruing to one party, or some forbearance, detriment, loss, or responsibility given, suffered, or undertaken by the other. Onsrud v. Paulsen, 219 Wis. 1, 261 N.W. 541, 542. Industrial Loan & Investment Bank v. Dardine, 207 N.C. 509, 177 S.E. 635. A gain or loss to either party is not essential, it is sufficient if the party in whose favor the contract is made parts with a right which he might otherwise exert. Miller Ice Co. v. Crim, 299 Ill. App. 615, 20 N.E.2d 347. It need not be translatable into dollars and cents, but is sufficient if it consists of performance, or promise thereof, which promisor treats and considers of value to him. Asmus v. Longenecker, 131 Neb. 608, 269 N.W. 117, 119. It is not essential that the person to whom the consideration moves should be benefited, provided the person from whom it moves is, in a legal sense, injured. The injury may consist of a compromise of a disputed claim or forbearance to exercise a legal right, the alteration in position being regarded as a detriment that forms a consideration independent of the actual value of the right forborne. Boston Excelsior Co. v. Amerio, 147 Misc. 1, 263 N.Y.S. 174. Mutual promises in contract is sufficient. Adams, Payne & Gleaves v. Indiana Wood Preserving Co., 155 Va. 18, 154 S.E. 558, 562. For "Fair and Valuable Consideration," see that title.

The following was said to be a valuable consideration: Extension of time for payment of an obligation. C. I. T. Corporation v. Furrow, 227 Iowa 961, 289 N.W. 697, 698: Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Cawker City v. Higgins, 149 Kan. 783, 89 P.2d 916. Marriage. Rutland v. Norris, 154 Fla. 894, 19 So.2d 418, 419. Release of property subject to execution. Bradley v. DeLoach, 176 Ga. 142, 167 S.E. 301, 303. Pre-existing debt. Yale Oil Corporation v. Sedlacek, 99 Mont. 411, 43 P.2d 887, 890. (Contra Duncan v. Jones, Tex.Civ.App., 153 S.W.2d 214, 216.) The distinction between a good and a valuable consideration is that the former consists of blood, or of natural love and affection; as when a man grants an estate to a near relation from motives of generosity, prudence, and natural duty; and the latter consists of such a consideration as money, marriage which is to follow, or the like, which the law esteems an equivalent given for the grant. 2 Bl.Comm. 297; Exum v. Lynch, 188 N.C. 392, 125 S.E. 15, 18; Gay v. Fricks, 211 Ala. 119, 99 So. 846, 847; Barton v. Wilson, 116 Ark. 400, 172 S.W. 1032, 1034.

VALUABLE IMPROVEMENTS. As used in a statute relating to the specific performance of a parol contract for the purchase of real estate, improvements of such character as add permanent value to the freehold, and such as would not likely be made by one not claiming the right to the possession and enjoyment of the freehold estate. Improvements of a temporary and unsubstantial character will not amount to such part performance as, when accompanied by possession alone, will take the contract out of the operation of the statute of frauds. Farr v. West, 152 Ga. 595, 110 S.E. 724. The valuable improvements may, however, be slight and of small value, provided they are substantial and permanent in their nature, beneficial to the freehold, and such as none but an owner would ordinarily make. Vickers v. Robinson, 157 Ga. 731, 122 S.E. 405, 408.

VALUABLE PAPERS. This term as used in statute requiring that a holographic will devising realty be found among the "valuable papers" of decedent, in order to be effective, refers to such papers as are regarded by the testator as worthy of preservation and therefore in his estimation of some value. Fransioli v. Podesta, 21 Tenn.App. 554, 113 S.W.2d 769, 773, 777. And does not refer only to papers having money value. Pulley v. Cartwright, 23 Tenn.App. 690, 137 S.W.2d 336, 340.

VALUABLE THING. This phrase, as used in statutes relating to cheating and defrauding by-means of false pretenses, does not embrace a mere pecuniary advantage devoid of any physical attribute possessed by money, chattels, or valuable securities. State v. Tower, 122 Kan. 165, 251 P. 401, 402, 52 A.L.R. 1160. The words include everything of value, State v. Thatcher, 35 N.J.L. 452; as a promissory note, State v. Tomlin, 29 N.J.L. 13; or a physician's services; State v. Ball, 114 Miss, 505, 75 So, 373, 374, L.R.A.1917E, 1046.

Within gaming statutes, anything which affords the lure to indulge the gambling instinct. State v. Betti, 21 N.J.Misc. 345, 34 A.2d 91, 94.

VALUATION. The act of ascertaining the worth of a thing. The estimated worth of a thing. Lowenstein v. Schiffer, 38 App.Div. 178, 56 N.Y.S. 674; State v. Central Pac. R. Co., 7 Nev. 104. Soniat v. Board of State Affairs, 146 La. 450, 83 So. 760, 762.

"Valuation" of itself does not levy tax upon person or property, but is necessary step preliminary thereto. Johnson v. Board of Park Com'rs of Ft. Wayne, 202 Ind. 282, 174 N.E. 91, 94. For "Fair Valuation", see that title.

VALUATION LIST. In English law. A list of all the ratable hereditaments in a parish, showing the names of the occupier, the owner, the property, the extent of the property, the gross estimated rental, and the ratable value; prepared by the overseers of each parish in a union under section 14 of the union assessment committee act, 1862 (St. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103,) for the purposes of the poor rate. Wharton.

VALUE. The utility of an object in satisfying, directly or indirectly, the needs or desires of human beings, called by economists "value in use;" or its worth consisting in the power of purchasing other objects, called "value in exchange." Joint Highway Dist. No. 9 v. Ocean Shore R. Co., 128 Cal.App. 743, 18 P.2d 413, 417. Also the estimated or appraised worth of any object or property, calculated in money.

Any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract. Fowler v. Smith, 24 Ohio App. 324, 156 N.E. 913, 914; Veigel v. Johnson, 163 Minn. 288, 204 N.W. 36, 37; Wilbour v. Hawkins, 38 R.I. 116, 94 A. 856, 857.

The term is often used as an abbreviation for "valuable consideration," especially in the phrases "purchaser for value," "holder for value," etc. See Mays v. First State Bank of Keller, Tex.Civ.App., 233 S.W. 326, 328; Farr-Barnes Lumber Co. v. Town of St. George, 128 S.C. 67, 122 S.E. 24, 26.

In economic consideration, the word "value," when used in reference to property, has a variety of significations, according to the connection in which the word is employed. It may mean the cost of a production or reproduction of the property in question, when it is sometimes called "sound value" ; or it may mean the purchasing power of the property, or the amount of money which the property will command in exchange, if sold, this being called its "market value," which in the case of any particular property may be more or less than either the cost of its production or its value measured by its utility to the present or some other owner; or the word may mean the subjective value of property, having in view its profitableness for some particular purpose, sometimes termed its "value for use." William H. Low Estate Co. v. Lederer Realty Corporation, 35 R.I. 352, 86 A. 881, 883, Ann.Cas. 1916A, 341. See Agency of Canadian Car & Foundry Co. v. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co., C.C.A.Pa., 256 F. 339, 344; Babbitt v. Read, C.C.A.N.Y., 236 F. 42, 46; James v. Speer, 69 Mont. 100, 220 P. 535, 537; Burroughs v. School Dist. No. 2, Town of Richland, 155 Wis. 426, 144 N.W. 977, 978.

Salable value, actual value, market value, fair value, reasonable value, and cash value may all mean the same thing and may be designed to effect the same purpose. Burr. Tax. 227. See Cummings v. Bank, 101 U.S. 162, 25 L.Ed. 903; Wood v. Syracuse School Dist. No. 1, 108 Kan. 1, 193 P. 1049, 1050; Gulf Compress Co. v. Insurance Co. of Pennsylvania, 129 Tenn. 586, 167 S.W. 859, 863; In re Woolsey's Estate, 109 Neb. 138, 190 N.W. 215, 24 A.L.R. 1038.

"Value," as used in Const.U.S. art. 1, § 8, giving Congress power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, is the true, inherent, and essential value, not depending upon accident, place, or person, but the same everywhere and to every one, and in this sense regulating the value of the coinage is merely determining and maintaining coinage composed of certain coins within certain limitations at a certain specific composition and weight. Klattenburg v. Qualsett, 114 Neb. 18, 205 N.W. 577, 578.

"Value" of land for purpose of taxation is represented by price that would probably be paid therefor after fair negotiations between willing seller and buyer. Thaw v. Town of Fairfield, 132 Conn. 173, 43 A.2d 65, 67, 160 A.L.R. 679.

"Values," as used in tax statutes, are valuations of officials whose duty it is to make them. Wymore v. Markway, 338 Mo. 46, 89 S.W.2d 9, 13.

"Value" as it relates to stolen property is the market value at the time and place of the taking, or, in case of property without a market value, the cost of replacing it. Patterson v. State, 138 Tex.Cr.R. 551, 137 S.W.2d 1030; Givens v. State, 143 Tex.Cr.R. 277, 158 S.W.2d 535, 536.

As respects whether value of stolen property equals or exceeds jurisdictional amount fixed by the National Stolen Property Act, "value" of stolen property is market value at time and place of taking, if it has a market value. National Stolen Property Act, §§ 1-7, 18 U.S.C.A. § 413 et seq. Husten v. United States, C.C.A.Minn., 95 F.2d 168.

In action to recover chattel, "value" means value at time of trial, not at time of seizure thereof. Spear v. Auto Dealers' Discount Corporation, 154 Misc. 801, 278 N.Y.S. 561.

"Value" as used in eminent domain proceeding means market value, (which title see infra). Epstein v. Boston Housing Authority, 317 Mass. 297, 58 N.E.2d 135, 137.

Under the Uniform Sales Act, "value" is any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract. Blumberg v. Taggart, 213 Minn. 39, 5 N.W.2d 388, 392.

For purposes of corporate reorganization, "value" is a reasonable capitalization of future earnings as reasonably foreseeable at date of reorganization. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Marshall, C.C.A.2, 125 F.2d 943, 946.

Clear Value

Of an estate for the purpose of an inheritance tax is what remains after all claims against it have been paid. In re Hildebrand's Estate, 262 Pa. 112, 104 A. 866.

Market Value

Fair value of property as between one who wants to purchase it and another who desires to sell it. Lincoln Joint Stock Land Bank v. Board of Review of Sioux City, 227 Iowa, 1136, 290 N.W. 94, 95; People ex rel. Pennsylvania Tunnel & Terminal R. Co. v. Miller, Sup., 26 N.Y.S.2d 232, 236. What willing purchaser will give for property under fair market conditions. People v. F. H. Smith Co., 230 App.Div. 268, 243 N.Y.S. 446, 451. Not what the owner could realize at a forced sale, but the price he could obtain after reasonable and ample time, such as would ordinarily be taken by an owner to make a sale of like property. Wade v. Rathbun, 23 Cal.App.2d Supp. 758, 67 P.2d 765, 766.

Net Value

The "reserve" or "net value" of a life insurance policy is the fund accumulated out of the net premiums during the earlier years of the policy while the premium uniform throughout life or a term of years exceeds the actual value of the risk, and with the net premiums to be received in the future is the exact mathematical equivalent of the obligation incurred by the company. Hay v. Meridian Life & Trust Co., 57 Ind.App. 536, 101 N.E. 651, 654. The "net value" of a policy is equivalent to "reserve," and means that part of the annual premium paid by insured which, according to the American Experience Table of Mortality, must be set apart to meet or mature the company's obligations to insured, the net value of a policy on a given date being its actual value, its reserve. Jefferson v. New York Life Ins. Co., 151 Ky. 609, 152 S.W. 780, 783.

True Value

At which property must be assessed is price which would be paid therefor on assessing date to willing seller, not compelled to sell, by willing purchaser, not compelled to purchase. New York Bay R. Co. v. Kelly, 22 N.J.Misc. 204, 37 A.2d 624, 628.

Value of Matter in Controversy

As used in the Judicial Code, § 24 (28 U.S.C.A. § 1331, et seq.), the pecuniary result to either party which a judgment entered in the case would directly produce, either at once or in the future. Elliott v. Empire Natural Gas Co., C.C.A.Kan., 4 F. 2d 493, 497.

Value of Plant in Successful Operation

Synonymous with "going value," or "going concern value," meaning the additional value that a purchaser will give for the properties and business of the companies because they are going con cerns with established businesses; the additional value, over and above the fair and reasonable value of the physical properties plus the working capital, which a customer would pay for the property because it is a going concern. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Whitcomb, D. C.Wash., 12 F.2d 279, 284.

Value Received

A phrase usually employed in a bill of exchange or promissory note, to denote that a lawful consideration has been given for it. Baker v. Thomas, 102 Neb. 401, 167 N.W. 407; Clayton v. Clayton, 125 N.J.L. 537, 17 A.2d 496, 497. It is prima facie evidence of consideration; Palmer v. Blanchard, 113 Me. 380, 94 A. 220, 223, Ann.Cas.1917A, 809; Moses v. Bank, 13 S.Ct. 900, 149 U.S. 298, 37 L.Ed. 743; although not necessarily in money, Osgood v. Bringolf, 32 Iowa, 265.

The phrase when put in a bill of exchange, will bear two interpretations : The drawer of the bill may be presumed to acknowledge the fact that he has received value from the payee, 3 Maule & S. 351; Benjamin v. Tillman, 2 McLean 213, Fed.Cas.No.1,304; or when the bill has been made payable to the order of the drawer and accepted, it implies that value has been received by the acceptor. 5 Maule & S. 65; Thurman v. Van Brunt, 19 Barb.. N.Y., 409. The words are not required by the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act.

VALUED POLICY. One in which a definite valuation is by agreement of both parties put on the subject-matter of the insurance and written in the face of the policy and such value, in the absence of fraud or mistake, is conclusive on the parties. Lee v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co., 130 Misc.Rep. 165, 223 N.Y.S. 441, 442. One in which both property insured and loss are valued. Hight v. Maryland Ins. Co., 69 S.D. 320, 10 N.W.2d 285, 288.

It is distinguished from an "open policy", which is one where the value of the property insured is not settled in the policy. Ellis v. Hartford Livestock Ins. Co., 293 Ky. 683, 170 S.W.2d 51, 53.

VALUELESS. Worthless. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Cooper, 14 Ga.App. 738, 82 S.E. 310, 311.

VALUER. A person whose business is to appraise or set a value upon property.

VALVASORS, or VIDAMES. An obsolete title of dignity next to a peer. 2 Inst. 667; 2 Steph. Comm. 612.

VANA EST ILLA POTENTIA QUZE NUNQUAM VENIT IN ACTUM. That power is vain [idle or useless] which never comes into action, [which is never exercised.] 2 Coke, 51.

VANDALIC. Willfully or ignorantly destructive. Unkelsbee v. Homestead Fire Ins. Co. of Baltimore, D.C.Mun.App., 41 A.2d 168, 170.

VANDALISM. Willful or ignorant destruction of artistic or literary treasures; hostility to or contempt for what is beautiful or venerable. Unkelsbee v. Homestead Fire Ins. Co. of Baltimore, D.C.Mun.App., 41 A.2d 168, 170, 172.

VANI TDIORES SUNT IESTIMANDL QUI NON CADUNT IN CONSTANTEM VIRUM. Those are to be regarded as idle fears which do not affect a steady [firm or resolute] man. 7 Coke, 27.

VANI TIMORIS JUSTA EXCUSATIO NON EST. A frivolotis fear is not a legal excuse. Dig. 50, 17, 184; 2 Inst. 483; Broom, Max. 256, n.

VANTARIUS. L. Lat. In old records. A forefootman. Spelman; Cowell.

VARA, A Spanish-American measure of length, equal to 33 English inches or a trifle more or less, varying according to local usage. See U. S. v. Perot, 98 U.S. 428, 25 L.Ed. 251.

A measure used in Mexican land grants equal to 32.9927 inches. Ainsa v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 544, 161 U.S. 219, 40 L.Ed. 673.

VARDA. In old Scotch law. Ward; custody; guardianship. Answering to "warda," in old English law. Spelman.

VARENNA. In old Scotch law. A warren. Answering to "warenna," in old English law. Spelman.

VARIANCE. In pleading and practice. A discrepancy or disagreement between two instruments or two steps in the same cause, which ought by law to be entirely consonant. Thus, if the evidence adduced by the plaintiff does not agree with the allegations of his declaration, it is a variance; and so if the statement of the cause of action in the declaration does not coincide with that given in the writ. See Keiser v. Topping, 72 Ill. 229; Mulligan v. U. S., 56 C.C.A. 50, 120 F. 98; State v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 57; Mathews v. U. S., C.C.A.Neb., 15 F.2d 139, 142. For "Fatal Variance," see that title.

A disagreement between the allegations and the proof in some matter which, in point of law, is essential to the charge or claim. Franks v. Reeder, 101 Okl. 18, 223 P. 126 127; State v. Brozich, 108 Ohio St. 559, 141 N.E. 491. A substantial departure in the evidence adduced from the issue as made by the pleadings. Sposedo v. Merriman, 111 Me. 530, 90 A. 387, 392; Davidson Grocery Co. v. Johnston, 24 Idaho, 336, 133 P. 929, 931, Ann.Cas.1915C, 1129. The test of materiality of "variance" in an information is whether the pleading so fully and correctly informs a defendant of offense with which he is charged that, taking into account proof which is introduced against him, he is not misled in making his defense. People v. Guerrero, 22 Ca1.2d 183, 137 P.2d 21, 24.

To constitute a "variance," there must be a real and tangible difference between the allegations in the pleading and the proof offered in its support. James A. C. Tait & Co. v. Stryker, 117 Or. 338, 243 P. 104, 106. The difference must be substantial and material. Epstein v. Waas, 28 N.M. 608, 216 P. 506, 508; Johnson v. Doubleday, 92 Vt. 267, 102 A. 1038, 1040. It must be one that actually misleads the adverse party to his prejudice in maintaining his action or defense on the merits, German-American Bank of Seattle v. Wright, 85 Wash. 460, 148 P. 769, 771, Ann.Cas. 1917D, 381; or, in criminal cases, one which might mislead the defense or expose a defendant to being put twice in jeopardy for the same offense, Brashears v. State, 38 Okl.Cr. 175, 259 P. 665, 667; McCallister v. State, 217 Ind. 65, 26 N.E.2d 391, 393.

A "variance" in criminal case is an essential difference between accusation and proof, best illustrated where one crime is alleged and another proved, and test of material variance is whether offense alleged in a second indictment is the same as that alleged in the first, and accordingly a plea of autrefois acquit must be upon a prosecution for the identical offense. U. S. v. Wills, C.C.A.Pa., 36 F.2d 855, 856.

"Variance," i. e., a disagreement between allegations and proof in some matter which, in point of law, is essential to the claim or charge, differs from "repugnancy," which consists of two inconsistent allegations in one pleading. Fowler v. State, 20 Okl.Cr. 410, 203 P. 900, 901.

"Variance" also differs from failure of proof. Gordon. v. Pollock, 124 Okl. 64, 253 P. 1021, 1023. A variance occurs when, though the pleading and proof do not exactly correspond, they may be made to do so by amendment in the discretion of the court and upon such terms and conditions as may be just. Deligny v. Tate Furniture Co., 170 N.C. 189, 86 S.E. 980, 984.

VARIATION. Difference in degrees between the direction of the true pole and the magnetic pole; it is comparatively fixed for any one locality, but is not the same in different localities. The Aakre, C.C.A.N.Y., 122 F.2d 469, 472.

VARIOUS, Separate. Simmons v. Ramsbottom, 51 Wyo. 419, 68 P.2d 153, 156.

VARRANTIZATIO. In old Scotch law. Warranty.

VAS. Lat. In the civil law. A pledge; a surety; bail or surety in a criminal proceeding or civil action. Calvin.

VASECTOMY. A comparatively simple and painless operation, performed by section (cutting) of the vas deferens or spermatic cord, or by a tying off or ligaturing thereof;—sometimes performed on rapists and other criminals (especially sexual offenders), and on persons who are mentally defective. Laws Iowa 1911, c. 129; Rem. & Bal. Code (Wash.) § 2287 (Rem.Rev.Stat. § 2287) ; Rev. Laws Nev. § 6293 (Comp.Laws 1929, § 9977). Some of these and similar statutes have been declared unconstitutional; Williams v. Smith, 190 Ind. 526, 131 N.E. 2; Mickle v. Henrichs, D.C.Nev., 262 F. 687; Smith v. Bd. of Examiners, 85 N.J.L. 46, 88 A. 963; but in 1927, the validity of a Virginia. statute (Laws 1924, c. 394) providing for vasectomy in the case of males and for salpingectomy in the case of females was sustained in Buck v. Bell, 47 S.Ct. 584, 274 U.S. 200, 71 L.Ed. 1000, affirming 143 Va. 310, 130 S.E. 516, 51 A.L.R. 855. Sterilization of the female may also be accomplished by an operation known as oOphorectomy or ovariotomy. Acts Conn.1909, c. 209.

VASSAL. In feudal law. A feudal tenant or grantee; a feudatory; the holder of a fief on a feudal tenure, and by the obligation of performing feudal services. The correlative term was "lord." The vassal himself might be lord of some other vassal.

In after-times, this word was used to signify a species of slave who owed servitude and was in a state of dependency on a superior lord. 2 Bla. Comm. 53.

VASSAL STATES. In international law. States which are supposed to possess only those rights and privileges which have been expressly granted to them, but actually they seem to be well-nigh independent. Hershey, Int. L. 106. Egypt was such; also Crete.

VASSALAGE. The state or condition of a vassal.

VASSELERIA. The tenure or holding of a vassal. Cowell.

VASTUM. L. Lat. A waste or common lying open to the cattle of all tenants who have right of commoning. Cowell.

VASTUM FORESTIE VEL BOSCI. In old records. Waste of a forest or wood. That part of a forest or wood wherein the trees and underwood were so destroyed that it lay in a manner waste and barren. Paroch. Antiq, 351, 497; Cowell.

VAUDERIE. In old European law. Sorcery; witchcraft; the profession of the Vaudois.

VAUDEVILLE. A species of theatrical entertainment, composed of isolated acts forming a balanced show. Hart v. B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange, C.C.A.N.Y., 12 F.2d 341, 342. And see Princess Amusement Co. v. Wells, C.C.A.Tenn., 271 F. 226, 231.

VAVASORY. The lands that a vavasour held. Cowell.

VAVASOUR. One who was in dignity next to a baron. Britt. 109; Bract. lib. 1, c. 8. One who held of a baron. Enc.Brit.

VEAL-MONEY. The tenants of the manor of Bradford, in the county of Wilts, paid a yearly rent by this name to their lord, in lieu of veal paid formerly in kind. Wharton.

VECORIN. In old Lombardic law. The offense of stopping one on the way; forestalling. Spelman.

VECTIGAL, ORIGINE IPSA, JUS CAZESARUM ET REGUM PATRIMONIALE EST. Da[y]. 12. Tribute, in its origin, is the patrimonial right of emperors and kings.

VECTIGAL JUDICIARIUM. Lat. Fines paid to the crown to defray the expenses of maintaining courts of justice. 3 Salk. 33.

VECTIGALIA. In Roman law. Customs-duties; taxes paid upon the importation or exportation of certain kinds of merchandise. Cod. 4, 61. They differed from tribute, which was a tax paid by each individual.

Rent from state lands. Hunter, Rom.L. 901.

VECTURA. In maritime law. Freight.

VEGETABLE. A plant cultivated for food. State v. Hurst, 149 Or. 519, 41 P.2d 1079, 1081.

A part or the whole of a herb used chiefly for culinary purposes, but also frequently for feeding domestic animals. In a comprehensive sense, any living organism not possessed of animal life; a plant of any kind. There is no well-drawn distinction between vegetables and fruits in the popular sense; but it has been held by the courts that all those which, like potatoes, carrots, peas, celery, lettuce, tomatoes, etc., are eaten (whether cooked or raw) during the principal part of a meal are to be regarded as "vegetables," while those used for dessert are fruits. State v. Hurst, 149 Or. 519, 41 P.2d 1079, 1080.

VEHICLE. That in or on which a person or thing is or may be carried from one place to another, especially along the ground, also through the air; ally moving support or container fitted or used for the conveyance of bulky objects; a means of conveyance. Moffitt v. State Automobile Ins, Ass'n, 140 Neb. 578, 300 N.W. 837, 838. Any carriage moving on land, either on wheels or runners;: a conveyance; that which is used as an instrument of conveyance, transmission or communication. Burford-Toothaker Tractor Co. v. Curry, 241 Ala. 350, 2 So.2d 420, 421; People v. Curnuch, 177 Misc. 606, 31 N.Y.S.2d 105, 107.

Any carriage, conveyance, or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on land,--not ordinarily including locomotives, cars, and street cars which run and are operated only over and upon a permanent track or fixed way, unless the context of the ordinance 'or statute in question clearly indicates an intention to the contrary. Conder v. Griffith, 61 Ind. App. 218, 111 N.E. 816, 818; Rev.St.U.S. § 4 (1 U.S.C.A. § 4). The word includes a street sprinkler, St. Louis v. Woodruff, 71 Mo. 92 ; but not a ferry boat, Duckwall v. Albany, 25 Ind. 286; nor a domestic animal, unattached to a vehicle or a conveyance. State v. One Black Horse Mule, 207 Ala. 277, 92 So. 548. It has also been held to include a scraper used to remove snow from ice which was to be cut, particularly since the scraper had facilities for dumping and unloading and was horse-drawn. Berg v. Hetzler Bros., 166 N.Y.S. 830, 179 App.Div. 551. A combined thresher and cleaner, mounted on axles and wheels, while being drawn from farm to farm. Vincent v. Taylor Bros., 180 App.Div. 818, 168 N.Y.S. 287, 288. A bicycle; Sharkey v. Herman Bros., 3 N.J.Misc. 126, 127 A. 525, 526; Tulsa Ice Co. v. Wilkes, 54 Okl. 519, 153 P. 1169, 1171. A motorcycle; Knight v. Savannah Electric Co., 20 Ga.App. 314, 93 S.E. 17. And it includes an automobile; Shepard v. Findley, 204 Iowa, 107, 214 N.W. 676, 678; Stanley v. Tomlin, 143 Va. 187, 129 S.E. 379, 382; even though, at the time of the enactment of the legislation involved, automobiles were not in use, U. S. v. One Cadillac Automobile, D.C.Tenn., 2 F.2d 886, 888; City of Henderson v. Lockett, 157 Ky. 366, 163 S.W. 199, 201; White v. District of Columbia, 4 F.2d 163, 164, 55 App.D.C. 197. The term was held not to include a street car in the following cases: City of Chicago v. Keogh, 291 Ill. 188, 125 N.E. 881, 882; Harris v. Johnson, 174 Cal. 55, 161 P. 1155, 1156, L.R.A.1917C, 477, Ann. Cas.1918E, 560; Reed v. Public Service Ry. Co., 89 N.J.L. 431, 99 A. 100; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. R. Co., 114 Pa. 484, 8 A. 233. Contra, Bradley v. Minneapolis St. Ry. Co., 161 Minn. 322, 201 N.W. 606, 608, 46 A.L.R. 993.

As used in various statutes, however, the word is often given a somewhat narrower meaning than that which might be indicated by the above definition. Thus, it has been held that the term is inapplicable to a hand sled, Ide11 v. Day, 273 Pa. 34, 116 A. 506, 507, 20 A.L.R. 1429; to a child's coaster, Wright v. Salzberger & Sons, 81 Cal.App. 690, 254 P. 671, 676; and to an elevator, Wilson v. C. Dorflinger & Sons, 218 N.Y. 84, 112 N.E. 567, 568, Ann.Cas. 1917D, 38, reversing Wilson v. C. Dorflinger & Sons, 170 App.Div. 119, 155 N.Y.S. 857, 858.

But as defined in the Tariff Act, it has a much broader meaning, and includes any sort of conveyance used in the transportation of passengers and merchandise either by land or by water or through the air. Mellon v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 56 App.D.C. 160, 11 F.2d 332, 334. United States v. One Pitcairn Biplane, Registration No. N.C.-5062, Engine No. A.D.-8285, D.C.N.Y., 11 F. Supp. 24, 26.

VEHMGERICHT. See Fehmgericht.

VEIES. L. Fr. Distresses forbidden to be replevied; the refusing to let the owner have his cattle which were distrained. Kelham.

VEILINGS. As used in the tariff act, a material chiefly or exclusively used for the making of veils. A veil is a piece of cloth or other material, usually thin and light, designed to be worn over the head and face as an ornament or to protect or wholly or partly conceal the face from view. The textile material which is used to mask or screen the features resting beneath the face panels of caskets would be commonly and popularly regarded as veiling. Tiedeman & Sons v. U. S., 8 Ct. Cust.App. 134, 135.

VEIN. In mining law. A continuous body of mineral or mineralized rock, filling a seam or fissure in the earth's crust, within defined boundaries in the general mass of the mountain (which boundaries clearly separate it from the neighboring rock), and having a general character of continuity in the direction of its length. San Francisco Chemical Co. v. Duffield, C.C.A.Wyo., 201 F. 830, 835; McMullin v. Magnuson, 102 Colo. 230, 78 P.2d 964, 968. It includes all deposits of mineral matter found through a mineralized zone or belt coming from the same source, impressed with the same forms, and appearing to have been created by the same processes. Inyo Marble Co. v. Loundagin, 7 P.2d 1067, 1072, 120 Cal.App. 298.

A requirement that a miner shall locate his claim "along the vein" means along the out-crop or course of the apex, and not along the strike. Stewart Mining Co. v. Bourne, C.C.A.Idaho, 218 F. 327, 329.

The terms "principal," "original," and "primary," as well as "secondary," "accidental," and "incidental," have all been employed to describe the different veins found within the same surface boundaries, but their meaning is not entirely clear in all cases. They may refer to the relative importance or value of the different veins, or the relations to each other, or to the time of discovery, but the words "secondary," "accidental," and "incidental" are most frequently used to distinguish between the discovery vein and other veins within the same surface boundaries. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Suprise Consol. Mines Co., D.C.Wash., 271 F. 105, 111.

Discovery Vein

That vein which served as a basis of the location, in contradistinction to secondary, accidental, and incidental veins. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Long Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co., D.C.Wash., 271 F. 105, 113. The primary vein for the purpose of locating a mining claim and determining which are the end and which the side lines. Where the discovery vein crosses the opposite side lines of the claim as located, the side lines become end lines, not only with respect to such vein, but for determination of extralateral rights in any other vein which apexes within the claim. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co., C.C.A. Wash., 278 F. 719, 720.

VEJOURS. Viewers; persons sent by the court to take a view of any place in question, for the better decision of the right. It signifies, also, such as are sent to view those that essoin themselves de malo lecti, (i. e., excuse themselves on ground of illness) whether they be in truth so sick as that they cannot appear, or whether they do counterfeit. Cowell.

VEL NON: Or not.

These words appear in the phrase "devisavit vel non" (q. v.), meaning, literally, "did he devise or not." 26 C. J.S. p. 1296. Examples of their use by the courts may be seen in the following quotations : "So the sufficiency vel non of the order of publication is important" (Cone v. Benjamin, 27 So.2d 90, 97, 157 Fla. 800) ; "the negligence vel non of the owner was * * * for the jury" (Johnson v. Wood, 21 So.2d 353, 355, 155 Fla. 753); and "We come at last to the merits vel non of this appeal" (Hollywood, Inc., v. Clark, 15 So.2d 175, 185, 153 Fla. 501).

VELABRUM. In old English law. A tollbooth. Cro.Jac. 122.

VELITIS JUBEATIS QUIRITES? Lat. Is it your will and pleasure, Romans? The form of proposing a law to the Roman people. Tayl.Civil Law, 155.

VELLE NON CREDITUR QUI OBSEQUITUR IMPERIO PATRIS VEL DOMINI. He is not presumed to consent who obeys the orders of his father or his master. Dig. 50, 17, 4.

VELTRARIA. The office of dog-leader, or coursер. Cowell.

VELTRARIUS. One who leads greyhounds. Blount.

VELVET. In a secondary meaning, soft; smooth. Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co., D.C.Md., 231 F. 550, 551; Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co., C.C.A.Md., 254 F. 553, 555.

VENAL. Pertaining to something that is bought; capable of being bought; offered for sale; mercenary. Used usually in an evil sense, such purchase or sale being regarded as corrupt and illegal.

VENARIA. Beasts caught in the woods by hunting.

VENATIO. Hunting. Cowell.

VEND. To transfer to another for a pecuniary equivalent; to make an object of trade, especially by hawking or peddling; to sell. Goins v. State, 194 Ark. 598, 108 S.W.2d 1082, 1083.

The term is not commonly applied to the sale of real estate, although its derivatives "vendor" and "vendee" are.

VENDEE. A purchaser or buyer; one to whom anything is sold. Generally used of the purchaser of real property, one who acquires chattels by sale being called a "buyer."

VENDENS EANDEM REM DUOBUS FALSARIUS EST. He is fraudulent who sells the same thing twice. Jenk.Cent. 107.

VENDETTA. A private blood feud, in which a family seeks to avenge one of its members on the offender or his family. Stephens v. Howells Sales Co., D.C.N.Y., 16 F.2d 805, 808.

VENDIBLE. Fit or suitable to be sold; capable of transfer by sale; merchantable.

VENDITIE. In old European law. A tax upon things sold in markets and public fairs.- Spelman.

VENDITIO. Lat. In the civil law. In a strict sense, sale; the act of selling; the contract of sale, otherwise called "emptio venditio." Inst. 3, 24. Calvin.

In a large sense, any mode or species of alienation; any contract by which the property or ownership of a thing may be transferred. Inst. 3, 24. Calvin.

VENDITION. Sale; the act of selling.

VENDITIONI EXPONAS. Lat. You expose to sale. Richmond Cedar Works v. Stringfellow, D. C.N.C., 236 F. 264, 272. The name of a writ of execution, requiring a sale to be made, directed to a sheriff when he has levied upon goods under a fieri facias, but returned that they remained unsold for want of buyers; and in some jurisdictions it is issued to cause a sale to be made of lands, seized under a former writ, after they have been condemned or passed upon by an inquisition. Frequently abbreviated to "vend. ex." Beebe v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 532, 161 U.S. 104, 40 L.Ed. 633; Ritchie v. Higginbotham, 26 Kan. 648; W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Bendy, Tex.Civ.App., 251 S.W. 265, 272; State ex rel. First Nat. Bank v. Ogden, 173 Oki. 285, 49 P.2d 565, 567.

The writ gives no new authority to the sheriff but only directs him to perform his duty under the execution. Fannin's Ex'r v. Haney, 283 Ky. 68, 140 S.W.2d 630, 632.

VENDITOR. Lat. A seller; a vendor. Inst. 3, 24; Bract. fol. 41.

VENDITOR REGIS. In old English law. The king's seller or salesman; the person who exposed to sale those goods and chattels which were seized or distrained to answer any debt due to the king. Cowell.

VENDITRIX. Lat. A female vendor. Cod. 4, 51, .3.

VENDOR. The person who transfers property by sale, particularly real estate, "seller" being more commonly used for one who sells personalty. The latter may, however, with entire propriety, be termed a vendor; Atlantic Refining Co. v. Van Valkenburg, 265 Pa. 456, 109 A. 208, 210; e. g., a merchant; a retail dealer; Edgin v. Bell-Wayland Co., Okl.Cr.App., 149 P. 1145, L.R.A.1915F, 916; sometimes, one who buys to sell; Commonwealth v. Thorne, Neal & Co., 70 Pa.Super.Ct. 599, 602.

One who negotiates the sale, and becomes the recipient of the consideration, though the title comes to the vendee from another source, and not from the vendor. Rutland v. Brister, 53 Miss. 685; Canavan v. Coleman, 204 Iowa 901, 216 N.W. 292, 293.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER ACT. The act of 37 & 38 Viet. c. 78, which substitutes forty for sixty years as the root of title, and amends in other ways the law of vendor and purchaser. Mozley & Whiteley.

VENDOR'S LIEN. A creature of equity, a lien implied to belong to a vendor for the unpaid purchase price of land, where he has not taken any other lien or security beyond the personal obligation of the purchaser. Special Tax School Dist. No. 1 of Orange County v. Hillman, 131 Fla. 725, 179 So. 805, 809. An equitable security which arises from the fact that a vendee has received from his vendor property for which he has not paid the full consideration, and such lien exists independently of any express agreement. Sturdy v. Smith, Mo.App., 132 S.W.2d 1033, 1037; Causer v. Wilmoth, Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 777, 779; Mollett v. Beckman, Mo.App., 78 S.W.2d 886. 890.

Also, a lien existing in the unpaid vendor of chattels, the same remaining in his hands, to the extent of the purchase price, where the sale was for cash, or on a term of credit which has expired, or on an agreement by which the seller is to retain possession. See Morgan v. Dalrymple, 59 N. J.Eq. 22, 46 A. 664; Lee v. Murphy, 119 Cal. 364, 51 P. 549.

In English and American law a vendor's lien is exceptional in character, and is an importation from the civil law, which found its recognition through courts of chancery, on the equitable principle that the person who had secured the estate of another ought not in conscience to be allowed to keep it and not pay full consideration money, and that to enforce that payment it was just that the vendor should have a lien upon the property. Martin v. Becker, 169 Cal. 301, 146 P. 665, 671, Ann.Cas.1916D, 171.

VENDUE. A sale; generally a sale at public auction; and more particularly a sale so made under authority of law, as by a constable, sheriff, tax collector, administrator, etc.

VENDUE MASTER. An auctioneer.

VENEREAL. Sexual; as, venereal diseases. State v. Hollinshead, 77 Or. 473, 151 P. 710, 711.

VENEREAL DISEASE. One of several diseases identified with sexual intercourse. Collective term for gonorrhea, chancroid, and syphilis. Coleman v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., La.App., 145 So. 298, 299.

VENIA. A kneeling or low prostration on the ground by penitents; pardon.

VENIA)ETATIS. A privilege granted by a prince or sovereign, in virtue of which a person is entitled to act, sui juris, as if he were of full age. Story, Confl. Laws, § 74.

VENUE FACILITAS INCENTIVUM EST DELINQUENDI. 3 Inst. 236. Facility of pardon is an incentive to crime.

VENIRE. Lat. To come; to appear in court. Sometimes used as the name of the writ for summoning a jury, more commonly called a "venire facias."

VENIRE DE NOVO. Venire facias de novo, which title see.

VENIRE FACIAS. Lat. In practice. A judicial writ, directed to the sheriff of the county in which a cause is to be tried, commanding him that he "cause to come" before the court, on a certain day therein mentioned, twelve good and lawful men of the body of his county, qualified according to law, by whom the truth of the matter may be the better known, and who are in no wise of kin either to the plaintiff or to the defendant, to make a jury of the county between the parties in the action, because as well the plaintiff as the defendant, between whom the matter in variance is, have put themselves upon that jury, and that he return the names of the jurors, etc. 2 Tidd, Pr. 777, 778; 3 Bl.Comm. 352.

VENIRE FACIAS AD RESPONDENDUM. A writ to summon a person, against whom an indictment for a misdemeanor has been found, to appear and be arraigned for the offense. A justice's warrant is now more commonly used. Archb. Crim. P1.81; Sweet.

VENIRE FACIAS DE NOVO. A fresh or new venire, which the court grants when there has been some impropriety or irregularity in returning the jury, or where the verdict is so imperfect or ambiguous that no judgment can be given upon it, or where a judgment is reversed on error, and a new trial awarded. See Bosseker v. Cramer, 18 Ind. 44; Maxwell v. Wright, 160 Ind. 515, 67 N.E. 267. "The ancient common-law mode of proceeding to a new trial was by a writ of venire facias de novo. The new trial is a modern invention, intended to mitigate the severity of the proceeding to attaint. While a venire de novo and new trial are quite different, they are alike in that a new trial takes place in both. The material difference between them is that a venire de novo must be granted upon matters appearing upon the face of the record, but a new trial may be granted for things out of the record. Lowry v. Indianapolis Traction & Terminal Co., 77 Ind.App. 138, 126 N.E. 223, 225. See, also, 1 Wils. 48; 47 Am.L.Rev. 377.

The terms "venire facias de novo" and "venire de novo" are now used interchangeably to denote a new trial, Brodie v. State, 202 Ind. 40 171 N.E. 585.

VENIRE FACIAS JURATORES. A judicial writ directed to the sheriff, when issue was joined in an action, commanding him to cause to come to Westminster, on such a day, twelve free and lawful men of his county by whom the truth of the matter at issue might be better known. This writ was abolished by section 104 of the common-law procedure act, 1852, and by section 105 a precept issued by the judges of assize is substituted in its place. The process so substituted is sometimes loosely spoken of as a "venire." Brown. See, also, Steph.Pl. 104; Cridland v. Floyd, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 414; 3 Chitty, Pr. 797.

VENIRE FACIAS TOT MATRONAS. A writ to summon a jury of matrons to execute the writ de ventre inspiciendo.

VENIREMAN. A member of a panel of jurors; a juror summoned by a writ of venire facias.

VENIT ET DEFENDIT. L. Lat. In old pleading. Comes and defends. The proper words of appearance and defense in an action. 1 Ld. Raym. 117.

VENIT ET DICIT. Lat. In old pleading. Comes and says. 2 Salk. 544.

VENTE. In French law. Sale; contract of sale.

VENTE A RIEMPRE. A conditional sale, in which the seller reserves the right to redeem or repurchase at the same price. The term is used in Canada and Louisiana.

VENTE ALEATOIRE. A sale subject to an uncertain event.

VENTE AUX ENCHERES. An auction.

VENTER. Lat. (ventre, Fr.) The belly; the womb; the wife. Used in law as designating the maternal parentage of children. Thus, where in ordinary phraseology we should say that A. was B.'s child by his first wife, he would be described in law as "by the first venter." Brown. A child is said to be en ventre sa mere before it is born; while it is a foetus.

VENTRE INSPICIENDO. See De Ventre Inspiciendo; Venire facias tot matronas.

VENTURE, v. To take (the) chances. Allan v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 315 Mo. 254, 286 S.W. 16, 19.

VENTURE, n. An undertaking attended with risk, especially one aiming at making money; business speculation. McRee v. Quitman Oil Co., 16 Ga.App. 12, 84 S.E. 487.

VENUE. Formerly spelled visne. Co.Litt. 125a. In pleading and practice. A neighborhood; the neighborhood, place, or county in which an injury is declared to have been done, or fact declared to have happened. 3 Bl.Comm. 294; Jackson v. State, 187 Ind. 694, 121 N.E. 114, 115; 4 C. & P. 363; Heikes v. Com., 26 Pa. 513; Searcy v. State, 4 Tex. 450; People v. Lafuente, 6 Cal. 202.

Also, the county (or geographical division) in which an action or prosecution is brought for trial, and which is to furnish the panel of jurors. Armstrong v. Emmet, 41 S.W. 87, 16 Tex.Civ.App. 242; Paige v. Sinclair, 130 N.E. 177, 178, 237 Mass. 482; Commonwealth v. Reilly, 324 Pa. 558, 188 A. 574, 579; Heckler Co. v. Incorporated Village of Napoleon, 56 Ohio App. 110, 10 N.E.2d 32, 35. It relates only to place where or territory within which either party may require case to be tried. Cushing v. Doudistal, 278 Ky. 779, 129 S.W.2d 527, 528, 530. It has relation to convenience of litigants and may be waived or laid by consent of parties. Iselin v. La Coste, C.C.A.La., 147 F. 2d 791, 795.

"Venue," as a matter of procedure, does not arise until an action is started. State ex rel. Helmes v. District Court of Ramsey County, 206 Minn. 357, 287 N.W. 875.

"Venue" does not refer to jurisdiction at all. Arganbright v. Good, 46 Cal.App.2d Super. 877, 116 P.2d 186. "Jurisdiction" of the court means the inherent power to decide a case, whereas "venue" designates the particular county or city in which a court with jurisdiction may hear and determine the case. Southern Sand & Gravel Co. v. Massaponax Sand & Gravel Corporation, 145 Va. 317, 133 S.E. 812, 813. Stanton Trust and Savings Bank v. Johnson, 104 Mont. 235, 65 P.2d 1188, 1189.

In the common-law practice, that part of the declaration in an action which designates the county in which the action is to be tried. Sweet.

Local Venue

In pleading. A venue which must be laid in a particular county. When the action could have arisen only in a particular county, it is local, and the venue must be laid in that county. 1 Tidd, Pr. 427; Deacon v. Shreve, 23 N.J.L. 204.

VENUE FACTS. Facts to be established at hearing on plea of privilege. Central Motor Co. v. Roberson, Tex.Civ.App., 139 S.W.2d 287, 289. Facts which by statute constitute an exception to the general right of a defendant to be sued in the county of his residence. Crawford v. Sanger, Tex Civ.App., 160 S.W.2d 115, 116.

VENUE JURISDICTION. Power of the particular court to function. Brand v. Pennsylvania R. Co., D.C.Pa., 22 F.Supp. 569, 571.

VERANDA. A porch; a portico; a covered place of entrance to a building, differentiated from its principal mass. Hieronimus v. Moran, 272 Ill. 254, 111 N.E. 1022, 1025.

VERAY. L. Fr. True. An old form of vrai. Thus, veray, or true tenant, is one who holds in fee-simple; veray tenant by the manner, is the same as tenant by the manner, (q. v.,) with this difference only: that the fee-simple instead of remaining in the lord, is given by him or by the law to another. Ham. N.P. 393, 394.

VERBA. Lat. (Plural of verbum.) Words.

VERBA ACCIPIENDA SUNT CUM EFFECTU, UT SORTIANTUR EFFECTUM. Words are to be received with effect, so that they may produce effect. Bac.Max.

VERBA ACCIPIENDA SUNT SECUNDUM SUBJECTAM MATERIAM. 6 Coke, 62. Words are to be understood with reference to the subject-matter.

VERBA ALIQUID OPERARI DEBENT; DEBENT INTELLIGI UT ALIQUID OPERENTUR. 8 Coke, 94. Words ought to have some operation; they ought to be interpreted in such a way as to have some operation.

VERBA ALIQUID OPERARI DEBENT, VERBA CUM EFFECTU SUNT ACCIPIENDA. Words are to be taken so as to have effect. Bacon, Max. Reg. 3, p. 47. See 1 Duer, Ins. 210, 211, 216.

VERBA ARTIS EX ARTE. Terms of art should be explained from the art. 2 Kent, Comm. 556, note.

VERBA CANCELLARIX. Words of the chancery. The technical style of writs framed in the office of chancery. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 10, § 3.

VERBA CHARTARUM FORTIUS ACCIPIUNTUR CONTRA PROFERENTEM. The words of charters are to be received more strongly against the grantor [or the person offering them]. Co. Litt. 36; Broom, Max. 594; Bacon, Max.Reg. 3; Noy, Max., 9th ed. p. 48; 8 Term 605; 15 East 546; 1 Ball. & B. 335; 2 Pars. Con. 22.

VERBA CUM EFFECTU ACCIPIENDA SUNT. Bac. Max. 3. Words ought to be used so as to give them their effect.

VERBA CURRENTIS MONETAE, TEMPUS SOLUTIONIS DESIGNANT. Da^{y}. 20. The words "current money" designate current at the time of payment.

VERBA DEBENT INTELLIGI CUM EFFECTU, UT RES MAGIS VALEAT QUAM PEREAT. Words ought to be understood with effect, that a thing may rather be preserved than destroyed. 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 530.

VERBA DEBENT INTELLIGI UT ALIQUID OPERENTUR. Words ought to be understood so as to have some operation. 8 Coke, 94a.

VERBA DICTA DE PERSONA INTELLIGI DEBENT DE CONDITIONE PERSONAE. Words spoken of a person are to be understood of the condition of the person. 2 Rolle, 72.

VERBA FORTIUS ACCIPIUNTUR CONTRA PROFERENTEM. Words are to be taken most strongly against him who uses them. Bac. Max. 11, reg. 3.

VERBA GENERALIA GENERALITER SUNT INTELLIGENDA. 3 Inst. 76. General words are to be generally understood.

VERBA GENERALIA RESTRINGUNTUR AD HABILITATEM REI VEL APTITUDINEM PERSONAE. General words must be narrowed either to the nature of the subject-matter or to the aptitude of the person. Broom, Max. 646; Bacon, Max.Reg. 10; 11 C.B. 254, 356.

VERBA ILLATA (RELATA) INESSE VIDENTUR. Words referred to are to be considered as if incorporated. Broom, Max. 674, 677; 11 Mees. & W. 183; 10 C.B. 261, 263, 266.

VERBA IN DIFFERENTI MATERIA PER PRIUS, NON PER POSTERIUS, INTELLIGENDA SUNT. Words on a different subject are to be understood by what precedes, not by what comes after. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA INTELLIGENDA SUNT IN CASU POSSIBILI. Words are to be understood in [or "of," or "in reference to"] a possible case. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA INTENTION!, NON E CONTRA, DEBENT INSERVIRE. 8 Coke, 94. Words ought to be made subservient to the intent, not the intent to the words. 6 Allen (Mass.) 324; Bailey v. Abington, 201 Ark. 1072, 148 S.W.2d 176, 179.

VERBA ITA SUNT INTELLIGENDA, UT RES MAGIS VALEAT QUAM PEREAT. The words [of an instrument] are to be so understood, that the subject-matter may rather be of force than perish, [rather be preserved than destroyed; or, in other words, that the instrument may have effect, if possible.] Bac. Max. 17, in reg. 3; Plowd. 156; 2 Bl.Comm. 380; 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

VERBA MERE ,7EQUIVOCA, SI PER COMMUN. EM USUM LOQUENDI IN INTELLECTU CERTO SUMMUNTUR, TALIS INTELLECTUS PR1EFERENDUS EST. [In the case of] words merely equivocal, if they are taken by the common usage of speech in a certain sense, such sense is to be preferred. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA NTHIL OPERARI MELHJS EST QUAM ABSURDE. It is better that words should have no operation at all than [that they should operate] absurdly. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA NON TAM INTUENDA, QUAM CAUSA ET NATURA REI, UT MENS CONTRAHENTIUM EX EIS POTIUS QUAM EX VERBIS APPAREAT. The words [of a contract] are not so much to be looked at as the cause and nature of the thing, [which is the subject of it,] in order that the intention of the contracting parties may appear rather from them than from the words. Calvin.

VERBA OFFENDI POSSUNT, IMO AB EIS RECEDERE LICET, UT VERBA AD SANUM INTELLECTUM REDUCANTUR. Words may be opposed, [taken in a contrary sense,] nay, we may disregard them altogether, in order that the [general] words [of an instrument] may be restored to a sound meaning. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.

VERBA ORDINATION'S QUANDO VERIFICARI POSSUNT IN SUA VERA SIGNIFICATIONE, TRAHI AD EXTRANEUM INTELLECTUAL NON DEBENT. When the words of an ordinance can be carried into effect in their own true meaning, they ought not to be drawn to a foreign intendment. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.

VERBA POSTERIORA PROPTER CERTITUDINEM ADDITA, AD PRIORA QUi¹E CERTITUDINE INDIGENT, SUNT REFERENDA. Subsequent words, added for the purpose of certainty, are to be referred to the preceding words which require the certainty. Wing. Max. 167, max. 53; Broom, Max. 586; 6 Coke, 236.

VERBA PRECARIA. In the civil law. Precatory words; words of trust, or used to create a trust.

VERBA PRO RE ET SUBJECTA MATERIA ACCIPI DEBENT. Words ought to be understood in favor of the thing and subject-matter. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.

VERBA QUIE ALIQUID OPERARI POSSUNT NON DEBENT ESSE SUPERFLUA. Words which can have any kind of operation ought not to be [considered] superfluous. Calvin.

VERBA, QUANTUMVIS GENERALIA, AD APTITUDINEM RESTRINGANTUR, ETIAMSI NULLAM ALIAM PATERENTUR RESTRICTIONEM. Words, howsoever general, are restrained to fitness, (i. e., to harmonize with the subject-matter,) though they would bear no other restriction. Spiegelius.

VERBA RELATA HOC MAXIME OPERANTUR PER REFERENTIAM, UT IN EIS INESSE VIDENTUR. Related words [words connected with others by reference] have this particular operation by the reference, that they are considered as being inserted in those [clauses which refer to them.] Co. Litt. 9b, 359a. Words to which reference is made in an instrument have the same effect and operation as if they were inserted in the clauses referring to them. Broom, Max. 673; 14 East 568.

VERBA RELATA INESSE VIDENTUR. Words to which reference is made seem to be incorporated. 11 Cush. (Mass.) 137.

VERBA SECUNDUM MATERIAM SUBJECTAM INTELLIGI NEMO EST QIJI NESCIAT. There is no one who does not know that words are to be understood according to their subject-matter. Calvin.

VERBA SEMPER ACCIPIENDA SUNT IN MITIORI SENSU. Words are always to be taken in the milder sense. 4 Coke, 13a.

VERBA STRICT +, SIGNIFICATION'S AD LATAM EXTEND! POSSUNT, SI SUBSIT RATIO. Words of a strict or narrow signification may be extended to a broad meaning, if there be ground in reason for it. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin; Spiegelius.

VERBA SUNT INDICES ANIMI. Words are the indices or indicators of the mind or thought. Latch, 106.

VERBAL. Strictly, of or pertaining to words; expressed in words, whether spoken or written, but commonly in spoken words; hence, by confusion, spoken; oral. Webster, Dict. Parol; by word of mouth; as, verbal agreement, verbal evidence; or written, but not signed, or not executed with the formalities required for a deed or prescribed by statute in particular cases. Musgrove v. Jackson, 59 Miss. 390.

VERBAL ACT DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine, utterances accompanying some act or conduct to which it is desired to give legal effect are admissible where conduct to be characterized by words is material to issue and equivocal in its nature, and words accompany conduct and aid in giving it legal significance. Keefe v. State, 50 Ariz. 295, 72 P.2d 425, 427.

Under doctrine, where declarations of an individual are so connected with his acts as to derive a degree of credit from such connection, independently of the declaration, the declaration becomes part of the transaction and is admissible. American Employers Ins. Co. v. Wentworth, 90 N.H. 112, 5 A.2d 265, 269.

The "verbal act doctrine" and the "res gestaa doctrine" coincide practically and serve equally to admit certain sorts of statements, but they are nevertheless wholly distinct in their nature and in their right to exist. American Employers Ins. Co. v. Wentworth, 90 N.H. 112, 5 A.2d 265, 269.

VERBAL NOTE. A memorandum or note, in diplomacy, not signed, sent when an affair has continued a long time without any reply, in order to avoid the appearance of an urgency which perhaps is not required; and, on the other hand, to guard against the supposition that it is forgotten, or that there is an intention of not prosecuting it any further. Wharton.

VERBAL PROCESS. In Louisiana. ProcOs verbal, (q. v.).

VERBIS STANDUM UBI NULLA AMBIGUITAS. One must abide by the words where there is no ambiguity. Tray. Lat. Max. 612.

VERBUM IMPERFECT! TEMPORIS REM ADHUC IMPERFECTAM SIGNIFICAT. The imperfect tense of the verb indicates an incomplete matter. Mactier v. Frith, 6 Wend. (N.Y.) 103, 120, 21 Am.Dec. 262.

VERDERER, or VERDEROR. An officer of the king's forest, who is sworn to maintain and keep the assizes of the forest, and to view, receive, and enroll the attachments and presentments of all manner of trespasses of vert and venison in the forest. Manw. c. 6, § 5.

VERDICT. From the Latin "veredictum," a true declaration. State v. Blue, 134 La. 561, 64 So. 411, 413; Clark v. State, 170 Tenn. 499, 97 S.W.2d 644, 646. In practice. The formal and unanimous decision or finding made by a jury, impaneled and sworn for the trial of a cause, and reported to the court (and accepted by it), upon the matters or questions duly submitted to them upon the trial. Sitterson v. Sitterson, 191 N.C. 319, 131 S.E. 641, 642, 51 A.L.R. 760; Roth v. East Connellsville Coke Co., 242 Pa. 23, 88 A. 781. A declaration of the truth as to matters of fact submitted to jury. Groves v. State, 162 Ga. 161, 132 S.E. 769, 770; Arcadia Timber Co. v. Evans, 304 Mo. 674, 264 S.W. 810. The definitive answer given by the jury to the court concerning the matters of fact committed to the jury for their deliberation and determination. Ralston v. Stump, 75 Ohio App. 375, 62 N.E.2d 293, 294.

A true response of 12 men to the issues in the case, arrived at after a consideration of all the evidence in the case, by each juror acting independently and voluntarily in forming his conclusion, or the concurrent coincident conclusion of the 12. Roberts v. State, 26 Ala.App. 331, 159 So. 373, 374.

Explanations or comments in a written verdict are no part of the "verdict" of the jury but are mere "surplusage". Anderson v. Penn Hall Co., D.C.Pa., 47 F.Supp. 691, 692.

Until accepted by the court, a finding of the jury is not a 'verdict." Schulman v. Stock, 89 Conn. 237, 93 A. 531. Anderson v. Penn Hall Co., D.C.Pa., 47 F.Supp. 691, 692. The only "verdict" is that which the jury announces orally to the court, and which is received and recorded at direction of court as the jury's finding.

Although in common language, the word may be used in a more extended sense, it has a well-defined signification in law. It means the decision of a jury, and not the decision of a court or a referee or a commissioner. Kerner v. Petigo, 25 Kan. 656. "Decision" bears the same relation to non jury cases as "verdict" to jury cases, and a "verdict" is a conclusion upon the facts, and in effect a direction for judgment, while a "decision" is an order for judgment, and determines the judgment to be entered. Schofield v. Baker, D.C.Wash., 242 F. 657, 658.

Adverse Verdict

Where a party, appealing from an allowance of damages by commissioners, recovers a verdict in his favor, but for a less amount of damages than had been originally allowed, such verdict is adverse to him, within the meaning of his undertaking to pay costs if the verdict should be adverse to him. Hamblin v. Barnstable County, 16 Gray (Miss.) 256.

Chance Verdict

One determined by hazard or lot, and not by the deliberate understanding and agreement of the jury. Goodman v. Cody, 1 Wash.T. 335, 34 Am.Rep. 808; Improvement Co. v. Adams, 1 Colo. App. 250, 28 P. 662.

A verdict is not a "chance verdict" merely because, in arriving at the amount, the jury took each juror's estimate of what should be assessed as the damages and divided the total by the number of jurors, and afterward knowingly and understandingly agreed that such quotient should be the amount of the verdict. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Lenton, 31 N. D. 555, 154 N.W. 275, 277. See, also, Foley v. Hornung, 35 Cal.App. 304, 169 P. 705, 709. See Quotient Verdict, infra.

Compromise Verdict

One which is the result, not of justifiable concession of views, but of improper compromise of the vital principles which should have controlled the decision. Goelet v. Matt J. Ward Co., 155 C. C.A. 9, 242 F. 65, 67. Although it is proper for jurors to harmonize their views and reach a verdict with proper regard for each other's opinions, it is not proper for any juror to surrender his conscientious convictions on any material issue in return for a relinquishment by others of their like settled opinions on another issue, producing a result which does not command the approval of the whole panel. Snyder v. Portland Ry., Light & Power Co., 107 Or. 673, 215 P. 887, 889.

Excessive Verdict

See Excessive Verdict.

False Verdict

One obviously opposed to the principles of right and justice; an untrue verdict. Formerly, if a jury gave a false verdict, the party injured by it might sue out and prosecute a writ of attaint against them, either at common law or on the statute 11 Hen. VII. c. 24, at his election, for the purpose of reversing the judgment and punishing the jury for their verdict; but not where the jury erred merely in point of law, if they found according to the judge's direction. The practice of setting aside verdicts and granting new trials, however, so superseded the use of attaints that there is no instance of one to be found in the books or reports later than in the time of Elizabeth, and it was altogether abolished by 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, § 60. Wharton.

General Verdict

A verdict whereby the jury find either for the plaintiff or for the defendant in general terms; the ordinary form of a verdict. Glenn v. Sumner, 10 S.Ct. 41, 132 U.S. 152, 33 L.Ed. 301; Childs v. Carpenter, 87 Me. 114, 32 A. 780. A finding by the jury in the terms of the issue referred to them. Settle v. Alison, 52 Am.Dec. 393, 8 Ga. 208. Tidd, Pr. 798. That by which the jury pronounces generally on all of the issues in favor of plaintiff or defendant. Skelton v. City of Newberg, 76 Or. 126, 148 P. 53, 55; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Wolf, 189 Ind. 585, 128 N.E. 38, 40. That by which they pronounce generally upon all or any of the issues, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant;--distinguished from a special verdict, which is that by which the jury finds facts only. Comp.Stat. Ok1.1921, § 551 (Code 1931, § 369).

A "general verdict" is one by which the jury pronounces at the same time on the facts and the law, either in favor of the plaintiff or the defendant. Schofield v. Baker, D.C. Wash., 242 F. 657, 658; Co.Litt. 228; 4 Bla.Comm. 461. A general verdict of guilty in a criminal case means guilty on every count. Simmons v. State, 162 Ga. 316, 134 S.E. 54, 55.

Open Verdict

A verdict of a coroner's jury which finds that the subject "came to his death by means to the jury unknown," or "came to his death at the hands of a person or persons to the jury unknown," that is, one which leaves open either the question whether any crime was committed or the identity of the criminal.

Partial Verdict

In criminal law, a verdict by which the jury acquit the defendant as to a part of the accusation and find him guilty as to the residue. State v. McGee, 33 S.E. 353, 55 S.C. 247, 74 Am.St.Rep. 741; U. S. v. Watkins, 28 F.Cas. 419.

Privy Verdict

One given after the judge has left or adjourned the court, and the jury, being agreed, in order to be delivered from their confinement, obtain leave to give their verdict privily to the judge out of court. Such a verdict is of no force unless afterwards affirmed by a public verdict given openly in court. This practice is now superseded by that of rendering a sealed verdict. See Young v. Seymour, 4 Neb. 89.

Public Verdict

A verdict openly delivered by the jury in court. Withee v. Rowe, 45 Me. 571.

Quotient Verdict

A money verdict the amount of which is fixed by the following process: Each juror writes down the sum he wishes to award by the verdict, and these amounts are all added together, and the total is divided by twelve, (the number of jurors,) the quotient being the verdict of the jury by their agreement. Speer v. State, 130 Ark. 457, 198 S.W. 113, 115'; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Brown, 45 Okl. 143, 144 P. 1075, 1077; Hamilton v. Owego Water Works, 22 App.Div. 573, 48 N.Y.S. 106. To invalidate a verdict of this kind, it must appear that, in advance of the computation, there was an agreement to be bound by the result. In re Havenmaier's Estate, 163 Minn. 218, 203 N.W. 958, 959; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Lenton, 154 N.W. 275, 277, 31 N.D. 555; Carter v. Marshall Oil Co., 185 Iowa 416, 170 N.W. 798, 800.

Sealed Verdict

See Sealed.

Special Verdict

A special finding of the facts of a case by a jury, leaving to the court the application of the law to the facts thus found. 1 Archb.Pr.K.B. 213; 3 Bl.Comm. 377; Statler v. U. S., 15 S.Ct. 616, 157 U.S. 277, 39 L.Ed. 700; Samlin v. U. S., C.C.A., 278 F. 170, 172. A special finding by the jury on each material issue, of the case. Ford v. Brown, 45 Nev. 202, 200 P. 522, 525.

A "special verdict" exhibits the legitimate facts and leaves the legal conclusions to the court, and must cover all the issues in the case, while an answer to a special interrogatory may respond to but a single inquiry pertaining merely to one issue essential to the general verdict. Childress v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 182 Ind. 251, 105 N.E. 467, 470.

Verdict by Lot

This type of verdict was formerly held to be legitimate, 1 Keble 811; but such verdicts are now held to be illegal. See Barnard v. State, 221 S.W. 293, 294, 87 Tex.Cr.R. 365; Chance Verdict, supra.

Verdict Contrary to Law

A verdict which law does not authorize jury to render on evidence because conclusion drawn is not justified thereby. Gruhn v. J. H. Taylor Const. Co., 180 Misc. 956, 40 N.Y.S.2d 765, 770. One which is contrary to the principles of law as applied to the facts which the jury were called upon to try and contrary to the principles of law which should govern the cause. Piepho v. Gesse, 106 Ind.App. 450, 18 N.E.2d 468, 471.

Verdict of Guilty But Insane

A special verdict which amounts to an acquittal of the person tried. Rex v. Taylor, [1915] 2 K. B. 709, 712.

Verdict of No Cause of Action

A verdict for defendant. Feller v. Mulliner, 2 Johns. 181.

Verdict of Not Guilty

Simply a verdict of not proven in the particular case tried; it is not a verdict of innocence, and hence is not conclusive against the state in favor of any other person than the defendant who was actually acquitted. Woody v. State, 10 Okl.Cr. 322, 136 P. 430, 432, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 479.

Verdict Subject to Opinion of Court

A verdict returned by the jury, the entry of judgment upon which is subject to the determination of points of law reserved by the court upon the trial.

VERDICT, ESTOPPEL BY. The term is sometimes applied to the estoppel arising from a former adjudication of the same fact or issue between the same parties or their privies. Chicago Theological Seminary v. People, 189 Ill. 439, 59 N.E. 977; Swank v. Railway Co., 61 Minn. 423, 63 N.W. 1088. But this use is not correct, as it is not the verdict which creates an estoppel, but the judgment, and it is immaterial whether a jury participated in the trial or not. The doctrine of estoppel by verdict is but another branch of the doctrine of res judicata. Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. National Storage Co., 260 Ill. 485, 103 N.E. 227, 231; Citizen's Loan & Trust Co. of Washington, Ind. v. Sanders, 99 Ind.App. 77, 187 N.E. 396, 398. See, however, Coffman v. Hope Natural Gas Co., 74 W.Va. 57, 81 S.E. 575. See, also, Judgment, Estoppel By.

A former adjudication is conclusive in subsequent proceeding between same parties but on a different cause of action as to facts actually decided. Kimpton v. Spellman, 351 Mo. 674, 173 S.W.2d 886, 891; Holtz v. Beighley, 211 Minn. 153, 300 N.W. 445, 446.

It arises when material fact has been determined in former suit between same parties or those in privity with them, in which such fact was also material. Little v. Blue Goose Motor Coach Co., 346 Ill. 266, 178 N.E. 496, 497; Citizen's Loan & Trust Co. of Washington, Ind. v. Sanders, 187 N.E. 396, 99 Ind.App. 77. It is limited to matters actually or by necessary implication found and determined. In prior action. Missouri District Telegraph Co. v. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., 338 Mo. 692, 93 S.W.2d 19, 22. It operates only as to issues actually litigated. Gustafson V. Gustafson, 178 Minn. 1, 226 N.W. 412, 413.

It is not a decision on the law that concludes the parties, but the determination of a controlling fact or matter in issue. People v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 350 Ill. 274, 183 N.E. 233, 235.

The rules of "estoppel by verdict" apply to some fact or issue necessarily determined by the previous litigation. Skolnik v. Petella, 376 Ill. 500, 34 N.E.2d 825, 827.

To operate as "?,stoppel by verdict," it is necessary that there shall have been a finding of a specific fact in former judgment or record that was material and controlling in case, or was necessarily involved in verdict or judgment, and also material and controlling in pending case. Brown v. Brown, 286 Ill.App. 471, 3 N.E.2d 945, 946.

Where controlling fact or question material to determination of both causes is decided in a former suit and is again in issue in a subsequent suit between same parties, first adjudication will, if properly presented, be conclusive. Brown v. Brown, 286 Ill.App. 471, 3 N.E.2d 945, 946; McKee v. Producers' & Refiners' Corporation, 170 Okl. 559, 41 P.2d 466, 469.

VEREBOT. Sax. In old records. A packet-boat or transport vessel. Cowell.

VEREDICTUM. L. Lat. In old English law. A verdict; a declaration of the truth of a matter in issue, submitted to a jury for trial..

VEREDICTUM, QUASI DICTUM VERITATIS; UT JUDICIUM QUASI JURIS DICTUM. Co. Litt. 226. The verdict is, as it were, the dictum [saying] of truth; as the judgment is the dictum of law.

VERGE, or VIRGE. In English law. The compass of the royal court, which bounds the jurisdiction of the lord steward of the household; it seems to have been twelve miles about. Britt. 68. An uncertain quantity of land from fifteen to thirty acres. 28 Edw. I. Also a stick, or rod, whereby one is admitted tenant to a copyhold estate. Old Nat. Brev. 17.

VERGELT. In Saxon law. A mulct or fine for a crime. See Weregild.

VERGENS AD INOPIAM, L. Lat. In Scotch law. Verging towards poverty; in declining circumstances. 2 Karnes, Eq. 8.

VERGERS. In English law. Officers who carry white wands before the justices of either bench. Cowell. Mentioned in Fleta, as officers of the king's court, who oppressed the people by demanding exorbitant fees. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 38.

VERIFICATION. Confirmation of correctness, truth, or authenticity by affidavit, oath, or deposition. McNamara v. Powell, Sup., 52 N.Y.S.2d 515, 527.

Pleading

A certain formula with which all pleadings containing new affirmative matter must conclude, being in itself an averment that the party pleading is ready to establish the truth of what he has set forth.

The usual form of verification of a plea containing matter of fact is, "And this he is ready to verify," etc. See 3 Bla.Comm. 309.

Practice

The examination of a writing for the purpose of ascertaining its truth. A certificate or affidavit that it is true.

"Verification" is not identical with "authentication." A notary may verify a mortgagee's written statement of the actual amount of his claim, but need not authenticate the act by his seal. Ashley v. Wright, 19 Ohio St. 291.

Confirmation of the correctness, truth, or authenticity of a pleading, account, or other paper, by an affidavit, oath, or deposition. Herbert v. Roxana Petroleum Corporation, D.C.I11., 12 F.2d 81, 83; McDonald v. Rosengarten, 134 Ill. 126, 25 N.E. 429; Summerfield v. Phoenix Assur. Co., C.C. Va., 65 F. 296; Patterson v. Brooklyn, 6 App.Div. 127, 40 N.Y.S. 581.

VERIFY. To confirm or substantiate by oath. S. B. McMaster, Inc., v. Chevrolet Motor Co., D.C. S.C., 3 F.2d 469, 471; Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa 307, 214 N.W. 882, 885; Marshall v. State, 116 Neb. 45, 215 N.W. 564, 566. Particularly used of making formal oath to accounts, petitions, pleadings, and other papers.

The word "verified," when used in a statute, ordinarily imports a verity attested by the sanctity of an oath. Bristol v. Buck, 201 App.Div. 100, 194 N.Y.S. 53, 55. It is frequently used interchangeably with "sworn." Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa, 307, 214 N.W. 882, 885.

To prove to be true; to establish the truth of; to confirm; to confirm the truth or truthfulness of; to check or test the accuracy or exactness of; to confirm or establish the authenticity of; to authenticate; to prove; to maintain; to affirm; to support; second; back as a friend. MacNeill v. Maddox, 194 Ga. 802, 22 S.E.2d 653, 654.

The word "verify" sometimes means to confirm and substantiate by oath, and sometimes by argument. When used in legal proceedings it is generally employed in the former sense. De Witt v. Hosmer, 3 How.Prac., N.Y., 284.

VERIFIED COPY. A copy, if successive witnesses trace the original into the hands of a witness who made or compared the copy. Nu Car Carriers v. Traynor, 75 U.S.App.D.C. 174, 125 F.2d 47, 48.

VERIFIED NAMES. Names verified by county clerk in accordance with his duty to check names of signers against official registration lists. Allan v. Rasmussen, 101 Utah 33, 117 P.2d 287, 289.

VERILY. In very truth; beyond doubt or question; in fact; certainly; truly; confidently; really. Gregg v. Sigurdson, 67 Mont. 272, 215 P. 662.

VERITAS, A QUOCUNQUE DICITUR, A DEO EST. 4 Inst. 153. Truth, by whomsoever pronounced, is from God.

VERITAS DEMONSTRATIONIS TOLLIT ERROREM NOMINIS. The truth of the description removes an error in the name. 1 Ld.Raym. 303.

VERITAS HABENDA EST IN JURATORE; JUSTITIA ET JUDICIUM IN JUDICE. Truth is the desideratum in a juror; justice and judgment in a judge. Bract. fol. 185b.

VERITAS NHIIL VERETUR NISI ABSCONDI. Truth fears nothing but to be hid. 9 Coke, 20b.

VERITAS NIMIUM ALTERCANDO AMITTITUR. Truth is lost by excessive altercation. Hob. 344.

VERITAS NOMINIS TOLLIT ERROREM DEMONSTRATIONIS. The truth of the name takes away the error of description. Bacon, Max. Reg. 25; Broom, Max. 637, 641; 8 Taunt. 313; 2 Jones, Eq. (N.C.) 72.

VERITAS, QUIE MINIME DEFENSATUR OPPRIMITUR; ET QUI NON IMPROBAT, APPRO. BAT. 3 Inst. 27. Truth which is not sufficiently defended is overpowered; and he who does not disapprove, approves.

VERITATEM QUI NON LIBERE PRONUNCIAT PRODITOR EST VERITATIS. 4 Inst. Epil. He who does not freely speak the truth is a betrayer of truth.

VERITY. Truth; truthfulness; conformity to fact. The records of a court "import uncontrollable verity." 1 Black, Judgm. § 276.

VERNA. Lat. In the civil law. A slave born in his master's house.

VERSARI. Lat. In the civil law. To be employed; to be conversant. Versari male in tutela, to misconduct one's self in a guardianship. Calvin.

VERSUS. Lat. Against. In the title of a cause, the name of the plaintiff is put first, followed by the word "versus," then the defendant's name. Thus, "Fletcher versus Peck," or "Fletcher against Peck." The word is commonly abbreviated "vs." or "v." Vs. and versus have become ingraf ted upon the English language; their meaning is as well understood and their use quite as appropriate as the word against could be. Smith v. Butler, 25 N.H. 523.

VERT. Everything bearing green leaves in a forest. Manwood, For. Law 146.

Also that power which a man has, by royal grant, to cut green wood in a forest.

In heraldry, green color, called "venus" in the arms of princes, and "emerald" in those of peers, and expressed in engravings by lines in bend. Wharton.

VERTICAL PRICE—FIXING CONTRACT. A contract between producers and wholesalers or distributors, between producers and retailers, or between wholesalers or distributors and retailers, and not between producers themselves, between wholesalers themselves, or between retailers themselves as to sale or retail prices. Pazen v. Silver Rod Stores, 130 N.J.Eq. 407, 22 A.2d 237, 239; Seagram Distillers Corporation v. Old Dearborn Distributing Co., 363 Ill. 610, 2 N.E.2d 940, 942.

VERTIGO. A term quite commonly used in the sense of dizziness, giddiness—a condition in which the individual or the objects around him appear to be whirling about. Post v. Grand Lodge, A. 0. U. W., 211 Iowa 786, 232 N.W. 140, 144.

VERUS. Lat. True; truthful; genuine; actual; real; just.

VERY. As an adjective means real, actual, or true, but as an adverb means in a high degree, exceedingly, extremely; to no small extent. Benoist v. Driveaway Co. of Missouri, Mo.App., 122 S.W. 2d 86, 90; Shriver v. Union Stockyards Nat. Bank, 117 Kan. 638, 232 P. 1062, 1066.

VERY HIGH DEGREE OF CARE. That degree of care that would be used by a very cautious, prudent, and competent person under like or similar circumstances. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Williams, Tex.Civ.App., 3 S.W.2d 141, 142.

VERY LORD AND VERY TENANT. They that are immediate lord and tenant one to another. Cowell.

VESSEL. A ship, brig, sloop, or other craft used in navigation. The word in its broadest sense is more comprehensive than "ship."

Any structure which is made to float upon the water, for purposes of commerce or war, whether impelled by wind, steam, or oars. Chaffe v. Ludeling, 27 La.Ann. 607. Any structure, especially a hollow one, made to float upon the water for purposes of navigation; a craft for navigation of the water, often, specifically, one larger than a common row boat; as, a war vessel; a passenger vessel. City of Tampa v. Tampa Shipbuilding & Engineering Co., 136 Fla. 216, 186 So. 411, 412; Massman Const. Co. v. Bassett, D.C.Mo., 30 F. Supp. 813, 815.

Every description of water-craft or other artificial contrivances used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water. Rev.St.U.S. § 3 (1 U.S.C.A. § 3); Maryland Casualty Co. v. Lawson, C.C.A.Fla., 94 F.2d 190, 192. Under this definition, the term has been held to include a large barge, without motive power of its own. Norton v. Warner Co., Pa., 64 S.Ct. 747, 751, 321 U.S. 565, 88 L.Ed. 931; and likewise a house boat, not permanently attached to the shore, though without motive power, The Ark, D.C.Fla., 17 F.2d 446, 447; but not a wharfboat, secured to the shore by cables and used as an office, warehouse, and wharf, and having water and electric light connections and telephone system, Evansville & Bowling Green Packet Co. v. Chero Cola Bottling Co., 271 U.S. 19, 46 S.Ct. 379, 380, 70 L.Ed. 805; nor a dry dock used for the repair of vessels, though capable of being floated and towed from place to place; Berton v. Tietjen & Lang Dry Dock Co., D.C.N.J., 219 F. 763, 771.

As used in various other statutes, the word "vessel" has been held applicable to a ferryboat, Port Huron & Sarnia Ferry Co. v. Lawson, D.C.Mich., 292 F. 216, 219; a pile driver scow, George Leary Const. Co. v. Matson, C.C.A.Va., 272 F. 461, 462; a derrick boat, carrying a derrick used for loading logs from the river bank upon boats, Patton-Tully Transp. Co. v. Turner, C.C.A.Tenn., 269 F. 334, 336; a hydro-aeroplane while moving on the water, Reinhardt v. Newport Flying Service Corporation, 232 N.Y. 115, 133 N.E. 37, 372, 18 A.L.R. 1324; and even to a log raft. The Libby Maine, D.C.Wash., 3 F.2d 79, 80. The term is broad enough to include a vessel's tackle, apparel, furniture, chronometer and appurtenances. The Frolic, D.C.R.I., 148 F. 921.

The word has also been held to include a new ship as soon as its hull has been launched, The Pinthis, C.C.A. N.J., 286 F. 122; and any structure which is so far completed as to be capable of being used as a means of transportation on water, R. R. Ricou & Sons Co. v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co., C.C.A.Fla., 11 F.2d 103, 104; but not an old hull built of timber taken from an old dry dock. The Dredge A, D.C.N.C., 217 F. 617, 630. Contra, Moores v. Underwriters, C.C.Tenn., 14 F. 236.

The words "boat," "craft," and "water craft" are usually applied to small vessels, while larger vessels, especially in the case of large iron steamships, are usually referred to by the term "steamer," or "steamship," or "vessel." The Saxon, D.C.S.C., 269 F. 639, 641.

A utensil, such as a bottle, designed to hold liquids, etc. Old Tavern Farm v. Fickett, 125 Me. 123, 131 A. 305, 306.

Foreign Vessel

A vessel owned by residents in, or sailing under the flag of, a foreign nation. "Foreign vessel," under the embargo act of January, 1808, means a vessel under the flag of a foreign power, and not a vessel in which foreigners domiciled in the United States have an interest. The Sally, 1 Gall. 58, F. Cas.No.12,257.

Public Vessel

One owned and used by a nation or government for its public service, whether in its navy, its revenue service, or otherwise.

VEST. To give an immediate, fixed right of present or future enjoyment. Baldwin v. Fleck, Tex. Civ.App., 168 S.W.2d 904, 909. To accrue to; to be fixed; to take effect.

To clothe with possession; to deliver full possession of land or of an estate; to give seisin; to enfeoff. Spelman.

The normal sense of the word is to indicate a present and immediate interest, as distinguished from one that is contingent. In re Stocker's Estate, 260 Pa. 385, 103 A. 885, 886; Crawford v. Carlisle, 206 Ala. 379, 89 So. 565, 571.

Under Executive Order empowering Alien Property Custodian to "vest" any property of enemy national in the process of administration, the term is equivalent to "seize" and gives the Custodian the right to the immediate possession of the property for the benefit of the United States. Executive Order March 11, 1942, No. 9095, as amended, 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix § 6; Trading With the Enemy Act § 5 (b), as amended, 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix § 5(b). In re Oneida Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Utica, 53 N.Y.S.2d 416, 419, 183 Misc. 374.

VESTA. The crop on the ground. Cowell.

VESTED. Fixed; accrued; settled; absolute. Orthwein v. Germania Life Ins. Co. of City of New York, 261 Mo. 650, 170 S.W. 885, 888. Having the character or giving the rights of absolute ownership; not contingent; not subject to be defeated by a condition precedent. Scott v. West, 63 Wis. 529, 24 N.W. 161; McGillis v. McGillis, 11 App. Div. 359, 42 N.Y.S. 924; Smith v. Proskey, 39 Misc. 385, 79 N.Y.S. 851.

VESTED DEVISE, See Devise.

VESTED ESTATE. An interest clothed with a present, legal, and existing right of alienation. Anderson v. Menefee, Tex.Civ.App., 174 S.W. 904, 908; Chaison v. Chaison, Tex.Civ.App., 154 S.W.2d 961, 964. Any estate, whether in possession or not, which is not subject to any condition precedent and unperformed. The interest may be either a present and immediate interest, or it may be a future but uncontingent, and therefore transmissible, interest. Brown. See Tayloe v. Gould, 10 Barb. (N.Y.) 388; estate by which present interest is invariably fixed to remain to determinate person on determination of preceding freehold estate. Story v. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co. in Orlando, 115 Fla. 436, 156 So. 101. An estate, when the person or the class which takes the remainder is in existence or is capable of being ascertained when the prior estate vests. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Kellogg, C.C.A.3, 119 F.2d 54, 57; or when there is an immediate right of present enjoyment or a present right of future enjoyment. In re Kelly's Estate, 167 Misc. 751, 4 N.Y.S.2d 675, 678.

A vested estate, whether present or future, may be absolutely or defeasibly vested. L'Etourneau v. Henquenet, 89 Mich. 428, 50 N.W. 1077, 28 Am.St.Rep. 310. If a present right exists to future possession, the estate is "vested," even though actual possession may be defeated by a future event. Wheaton Coal. Co. v. Harris, 288 Pa. 294, 135 A. 637, 638. See, also, Vest.

VESTED GIFT. A gift if it is immediate, notwithstanding that its enjoyment may be postponed. Bankers Trust Co. v. Garver, 222 Iowa 196, 268 N. W. 568, 571. A future gift when the right to receive it is not subject to a condition precedent. First & American Nat. Bank of Duluth v. Higgins, 208 Minn. 295, 293 N.W. 585, 594. Where future gift is postponed to let in some other interest. Barrett v. Barrett, 134 N.J.Eq. 138, 34 A.2d 579, 590.

VESTED IN INTEREST. A legal term applied to a present fixed right of future enjoyment; as reversions, vested remainders, such executory devises, future uses, conditional limitations, and other future interests as are not referred to, or made to depend on, a period or event that is uncertain. Wharton. See Smith v. West, 103 Ill. 337; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N.Y.) 466; Gates v. Seibert, 157 Mo. 254, 57 S.W. 1065, 80 Am.St.Rep. 625.

VESTED IN POSSESSION. A legal term applied to a right of present enjoyment actually existing. See Vest.

VESTED INTEREST. A present right or title to a thing, which carries with it an existing right of alienation, even though the right to possession or enjoyment may be postponed to some uncertain time in the future, as distinguished from a future right, which may never materialize or ripen into title, and it matters not how long or for what length of time the future possession or right of enjoyment may be postponed, if the present right exists to alienate and pass title. Fugazzi v. Fugazzi's Committee, 275 Ky. 62, 120 S.W.2d 779, 781. A future interest not dependent on an uncertain period or event, or a fixed present right of future enjoyment. In re Whiting, D.C.N.C., 3 F.2d 440, 441; McMannis v. Peerless Casualty Co., 114 Me. 98, 95 A. 510. When a person has a right to immediate possession on determination of preceding or particular estate. In re Clark's Estate, Orph., 13 N.J.Misc. 393, 178 A. 574, 575. One in which there is a present fixed right, either of present enjoyment or of future enjoyment. Painter v. Herschberger, 340 Mo. 347, 100 S.W.2d 532, 535.

It is not the uncertainty of enjoyment in the future, but the uncertainty of the right of enjoyment, which makes the difference between a "vested" and a "contingent" interest. Mahoney v. Mahoney, 98 Conn. 525, 120 A. 342, 345; Grant v. Grant, 187 Ga. 807, 2 S.E.2d 421, 427. A future interest is vested when there is a person in being who would have a right, defeasible or indefeasible, to the immediate possession of the property, upon the ceasing of the intermediate or precedent interest. Civil Code Cal. § 694. See Allison v. Allison, 101 Va. 537, 44 S.E. 904, 63 L.R.A. 920; Hawkins v. Bohling, 168 Ill. 214, 48 N.E. 94; Stewart v. Harriman, 56 N.H. 25, 22 Am.Rep. 408; Bunting v. Speck, 41 Kan. 424, 21 P. 288, 3 L.R.A. 690.

VESTED LEGACY. A legacy given in such terms that there is a fixed, indefeasible right to its payment. In re Central Union Trust Co. of New York, 183 N.Y.S. 671, 673, 193 App.Div. 292. A legacy payable at a future time, certain to arrive, and not subject to conditions precedent, is vested, where there is a person in esse at the testator's death capable of taking when the time arrives, though his interest may be altogether defeated by his own death. In re Youngblood's Estate, 117 Pa. Super. 550, 178 A. 517, 518. A legacy is said to be vested when the words of the testator making the bequest convey a transmissible interest, whether present or future, to the legatee in the legacy. Thus a legacy to one to be paid when he attains the age of twenty-one years is a vested legacy, because it is given unconditionally and absolutely, and therefore vests an immediate interest in the legatee, of which the enjoyment only is deferred or postponed. Brown. See Magoffin v. Patton, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 113; Talmadge v. Seaman, 85 Hun 242, 32 N.Y.S. 906; Rubencane v. McKee, 6 Del.Ch. 40, 6 A. 639.

VESTED REMAINDER. See Remainder.

VESTED RIGHTS. In constitutional law. Rights which have so completely and definitely accrued to or settled in a person that they are not subject to be defeated or canceled by the act of any other private person, and which it is right and equitable that the government should recognize and protect, as being lawful in themselves, and settled according to the then current rules of law, and of which the individual could not be deprived arbitrarily without injustice, or of which he could not justly be deprived otherwise than by the established methods of procedure and for the public welfare. Cassard v. Tracy, 52 La.Ann. 835, 27 So. 368, 49 L.R.A. 272; Stimson Land Co. v. Rawson, C.C. Wash., 62 F. 429; Parker v. Schrimsher, Tex.Civ. App., 172 S.W. 165, 168. Which cannot be interfered with by retrospective laws, are interests which it is proper for state to recognize and protect and of which individual cannot be deprived arbitrarily without injustice. American States Water Service Co. of California v. Johnson, 31 Cal.App.2d 606, 88 P.2d 770, 774. Immediate or fixed right to present or future enjoyment and one that does not depend on an event that is uncertain. Dunham Lumber Co. v. Gresz, 71 N.D. 491, 2 N.W.2d 175, 179, 141 A.L.R. 60; Massa v. Nastri, 125 Conn. 144, 3 A.2d 839, 840, 120 A.L.R. 939; Wylie v. City Commission of Grand Rapids, 293 Mich. 571, 292 N.W. 668, 674. A right complete and consummated, and of such character that it cannot be divested without the consent of the person to whom it belongs, and fixed or established, and no longer open to controversy. State ex rel. Milligan v. Ritter's Estate, Ind.App., 46 N.E.2d 736, 743.

VESTIGIAL WORDS. Those contained in a statute which by reason of a succession of statutes on the same subject-matter, amending or modifying previous provisions of the same, are rendered useless or meaningless by such amendments. They should not be permitted to defeat the fair meaning of the statute. Saltonstall v. Birtwell, 17 S.Ct. 19, 164 U.S. 70, 41 L.Ed. 348.

VESTIGIUM. Lat. In the law of evidence, a vestige, mark, or sign; a trace, track, or impression left by a physical object. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 25, § 6.

VESTING ORDER. In English law. An order which may be granted by the chancery division of the high court of justice, (and formerly by chancery,) passing the legal estate in lieu of a conveyance. Commissioners also, under modern statutes, have similar powers. St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55; Wharton.

VESTRY. In ecclesiastical law. The place in a church where the priest's vestures are deposited. Also an assembly of the minister, church-wardens, and parishioners, usually held in the vestry of the church, or in a building called a "vestry-hall," to act upon business of the church. Mozley & Whiteley.

VESTRY-CESS. A rate levied in Ireland for parochial purposes, abolished by St. 27 Vict. c. 17.

VESTRY-CLERK. An officer appointed to attend vestries, and take an account of their proceedings, etc.

VESTRY-MEN. A select number of parishioners elected in large and populous parishes to take care of the concerns of the parish; so called because they used ordinarily to meet in the vestry of the church. Cowell.

VESTURA. A crop of grass or corn. Also a garment; metaphorically applied to a possession or seisin.

VESTURA TERRIE. In old English law. The vesture of the land; that is, the corn, grass, Underwood, sweepage, and the like. Co. Litt. 4b. See Simpson v. Coe, 4 N.H. 301.

VESTURE. In old English law. Profit of land. "How much the vesture of an acre is worth." Cowell.

VESTURE OF LAND. A phrase including all things, trees excepted, which grow upon the surface of the land, and clothe it externally. Ham. N.P. 151.

VETERA STATUTA. Lat. Ancient statutes. The English statutes from Magna Charta td the end of the reign of Edward II. are so called; those from the beginning of the reign of Edward III. being contradistinguished by the appellation of "Nova Statuta." 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 85.

VETERAN. Within Civil Service Laws giving preference to veterans, any honorably discharged soldier, sailor, marine, nurse, or army field clerk, who has served in military service of the United. States in any war. Ryan v. Civil Service Commission of New Jersey, 115 N.J.L. 316, 179 A. 848, 849.

VETERINARIAN. One who practices the art of treating diseases and injuries of domestic animals, surgically or medically. Tucker v. Williamson, D.C.Ohio, 229 F. 201, 210.

VETITUM NAMIUM. L. Lat. Where the bailiff of a lord distrains beasts or goods of another, and the lord forbids the bailiff to deliver them when the sheriff comes to make replevin, the owner of the cattle may demand satisfaction in placitum de vetito namio. 2 Inst. 140; 2 Bl.Comm. 148.

VETO (Lat. I forbid). The refusal of assent by the executive officer whose assent is necessary to perfect a law which has been passed by the legislative body, and the message which is usually sent to such body by the executive, stating such refusal and the reasons therefor. It is either absolute or qualified, according as the effect of its exercise is either to destroy the bill finally, or to prevent its becoming law unless again passed by a stated proportion of votes or with other formalities. Or the veto may be merely suspensive. See People v. Board of Councilmen (Super. Buff.) 20 N.Y. Supp. 51,

A statement by the Governor that he objects to certain items of an appropriation bill, without stating his reasons therefor, is insufficient to constitute an effective veto of such items. State v. French, 133 Kan. 579, 300 P. 1082, 1083. And where Governor returned resolution to the house in which it originated for purpose of correction of typographical error only, such communication was also held not to constitute a "veto". In re Block 1, Donly Heights Addition, Oklahoma City, 194 Okl. 221, 149 P.2d 265, 267.

Pocket Veto

Non-approval of a legislative act by the president or state governor, with the result that it fails to become a law, not by a written disapproval, (a veto in the ordinary form,) but by remaining silent until the adjournment of the legislative body, when that adjournment takes place before the expiration of the period allowed by the constitution for the examination of the bill by the executive.

VETO POWER, Executive's power conditionally to prevent acts passed by Legislature which have not yet become law. Fitzsimmons v. Leon, C.C.A. Puerto Rico, 141 F.2d 886, 888.

VEXATIOUS. Without reasonable or probable cause or excuse. Gardner v. Queen Ins. Co. of America, 232 Mo.App. 1101, 115 S.W.2d 4, 7.

VEXATIOUS ACTIONS ACT. An act of parliament of 1896, authorizing the Itigh Court to make an order, on the application of the attorney-general, that a person shown to be habitually and vexatiously litigious, without reasonable ground, shall not institute legal proceedings in that or any other court, without leave of the High Court judge thereof, upon satisfactory proof that such legal proceedings are not an abuse of the process of the court and that there is a prima facie ground therefor. The order when made is published in the Gazette. See 76 L.T. 351; [1913] W.N. 274 (Div.Ct.).

VEXATIOUS DELAY OR REFUSAL TO PAY. Under statute permitting recovery of damages for "vexatious 'delay" of an insurer in payment of a policy, no penalty can be inflicted unless it appears to a reasonable and prudent man before the trial that refusal was willful and without reasonable cause, and penalty will not be inflicted because of adverse outcome of trial. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Calhoun, C.C.A.Mo., 114 F.2d 526, 537.

An insurer is allowed an honest difference of opinion regarding its liability under a policy and so long as it acts in good faith, may contest either an issue of fact or an issue of law. Camp v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Boston, Mass., Mo.App., 165 S.W.2d 277, 283.

VEXATIOUS PROCEEDING. Proceeding instituted maliciously and without probable cause. Paramount Pictures v. Blumenthal, 256 App.Div. 756, 11 N.Y.S.2d 768, 772. Kind of malicious prosecution differing principally because based on civil action. Calvo v. Bartolotta, 112 Conn. 396, 152 A. 311. When the party bringing proceeding is not acting bona fide, and merely wishes to annoy or embarrass his opponent, or when it is not calculated to lead to any practical result. Such a proceeding is often described as "frivolous and vexatious," and the court may stay it on that ground. Sweet.

VEXATIOUS REFUSAL TO PAY. See Vexatious Delay.

VEXED QUESTION. A question or point of law often discussed or agitated, but not determined or settled.

VIDUA REGIS. Lat. In old English law. A king's widow. The widow of a tenant in capite. So called, because she was not allowed to marry a second time without the king's permission; obtaining her dower also from the assignment of the king, and having the king for her patron and defender. Spelman.

VIDUITATIS PROFESSIO. Lat. The making a solemn profession to live a sole and chaste woman.

VIDUITY. Widowhood.

VIE. Fr. Life; occurring in the phrases cestui que vie, pur autre vie, etc.

VIEW. The right of prospect; the outlook or prospect from the windows of one's house. A species of urban servitude which prohibits the obstruction of such prospect. 3 Kent, Comm. 448.

At common law, the proceeding by which tribunal goes to an object which cannot be produced in court because it is immovable or inconvenient to remove, and there observes it. Conner v. Parker, Tex.Civ.App., 181 S.W.2d 873, 874. An inspection by the jury previously to the trial of property in controversy, or of a place where a crime has been committed. See Garbarsky v. Simkin, 36 Misc. 195, 73 N.Y.S. 199; Wakefield v. Railroad Co., 63 Me. 385; Lancaster County v. Holyoke, 37 Neb. 328, 55 N.W. 950, 21 L.R.A. 394; Commonwealth v. Dascalakis, 246 Mass. 12, 140 N.E. 470, 477.

Offense is taking place within "view" of officer, so as to authorize arrest without warrant when officer's senses afford him knowledge that offense is being committed. Bass v. State, 182 Md. 496, 35 A.2d 155, 159; Kennington-Saenger, Inc. v. Wicks, 168 Miss. 566, 151 So. 549, 551.

Evidence

A "view" is not technically "evidence". Berlandi v. Commonwealth, 314 Mass. 424, 50 N.E.2d 210, 226.

Effect of jury's view of scene of murder without accused's presence in person is evidence. Snyder v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Mass., 54 S.Ct. 330, 291 U.S. 97, 78 L. Ed. 674, 90 A.L.R. 575.

Object of jury in viewing scene of crime is to clarify situation, and information thus obtained constitutes "evidence." Watson v. State, 166 Tenn. 400, 61 S.W. 476.

The jury's viewing of land, claimed by plaintiff to have been greatly damaged by overflow of river allegedly caused by railroad's reconstruction of bridge, although not in all respects "evidence", was proper to enable jury to understand better testimony given. Doman v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 125 W.Va. 8, 22 S.E.2d 703, 705.

What was seen by master, in suits to enjoin commonwealth's interference with outdoor advertising, who traveled to view billboards, etc., was in a sense "evidence." General Outdoor Advertising Co. v. Department of Public Works, 289 Mass. 149, 193 N.E. 799, 812.

Where trial judge visited premises what he saw and observed was "evidence" in plaintiff's personal injury action. Lee v. Dawson, 44 Cal.App.2d 362, 112 P.2d 683, 685.

VIEW AND DELIVERY. When a right of coinmon is exercisable not over the whole waste, but only in convenient places indicated from time to time by the lord of the manor or his bailiff, it is said to be exercisable after "view and delivery." Elton, Commons, 233.

VIEW, DEMAND OF. In real actions, the defendant was entitled to demand a view, that is, a sight of the thing, in order to ascertain its identity and other circumstances. As, if a real action were brought against a tenant, and such tenant did not exactly know what land it was that the demandant asked, then he might pray the view, which was that he might see the land which the demandant claimed. Brown.

VIEW OF AN INQUEST. A view or inspection taken by a jury, summoned upon an inquisition or inquest, of the place or property to which the inquisition or inquiry refers. Brown.

VIEW OF FRANK-PLEDGE. In English law. An examination to see if every freeman above twelve years of age within the district had taken the oath of allegiance, and found nine freeman pledges for his peaceable demeanor. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 7.

VIEWERS. Persons appointed by a court to make an investigation of certain matters, or to examine a particular locality, (as, the proposed site of a new road,) and to report to the court the result of their inspection, with their opinion on the same.

Old Practice

Persons appointed under writs of view to testify the view. Rosc. Real Act. 253.

VIF-GAGE. L. Fr. In old English law. A vivum vadium or living pledge, as distinguished from a mortgage or dead pledge. Properly, an estate given as security for a debt, the debt to be satisfied out of the rents, issues, and profits.

VIGIL. In ecclesiastical law. The eve or next day before any solemn feast.

VIGILANCE. Watchfulness; precaution; a proper degree of activity and promptness in pursuing one's rights or guarding them from infraction, or in making or discovering opportunities for the enforcement of one's lawful claims and demands.

It is the opposite of lathes. Wynne v. Conrad, 220 N.C. 355, 17 S.E.2d 514, 518.

VIGILANT. Watchful, awake, and on the alert; attentive to discover and avoid danger, or to provide for safety; circumspect; cautious; wary. City Ice & Fuel Co. v. Center, 54 Ohio App. 116, 6 N.E.2d 580, 583.

VIGILANTIBUS ET NON DORMIENTIBUS JURA SUBVENIUNT. The laws aid those who are vigilant, not those who sleep upon their rights. 2 Inst. 690; Merchants' Bank of Newburyport, President, etc., of, v. Stevenson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 493; Broom, Max. 892.

VIGOR. Lat. Strength; virtue; force; efficiency. Proprio vigore, by its own force.

VIIS ET MODIS. Lat. In the ecclesiastical courts, service of a decree or citation viis et modis, i. e., by all "ways and means" likely to affect the party with knowledge of its contents, is equivalent to substituted service in the temporal courts, and is opposed to personal service. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1258, 1283.

VILL. In old English law, this word was used to signify the parts into which a hundred or wapentake was divided. It also signifies a town or city.

Demi-vill

A town consisting of five freemen, or frankpledges. Spelman.

VILLA EST EX PLURIBUS MANSIONIBUS VICINATA, ET COLLATA EX PLURIBUS VICINIS, ET SUB APPELLATIONE VILLARUM CONTINENTUR BURGI ET CIVITATES. Co. Litt. 115. Vill is a neighborhood of many mansions, a collection of many neighbors, and under the term of "vills" boroughs and cities are contained.

VILLA REGIA. Lat. In Saxon law. A royal residence. Spelman.

VILLAGE. A collection of houses collocated after something like regular plan regarding streets and lanes, without intervening farm land, but with convenient curtilages attached, an assemblage of houses, less than a town or city, but urban or semiurban in character, or any small assemblage of houses for dwellings, business, or both, in country, whether situated on regularly laid out streets and alleys or not. Supervisors of Manheim Tp., Lancaster County, v. Workman, 154 Pa.Super. 146, 35 A.2d 747, 750.

In some states, this is the legal description of a class of municipal corporations of smaller population than "cities" and having a simpler form of government, and corresponding to "towns" and "boroughs," as these terms are employed elsewhere.

So it was held that a "village" is a municipal corporation invested with particular franchises, and it may take and hold real and personal estate absolutely or in trust for any public use, and its corporate powers extend beyond the field of local government and the administration of local affairs. Village of Kenmore v. Erie County, 252 N.Y. 437, 169 N.E. 637, 639.

VILLAIN. An opprobrious epithet, implying great moral delinquency, and equivalent to knave, rascal, or scoundrel. The word is libelous. 1 Bos. & P. 331.

VILLANUM SERVITIUM. In old English law. Villein service. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 13, § 1.

VILLEIN. A person attached to a manor, who was substantially in the condition of a slave, who performed the base and servile work upon the manor for the lord, and was, in most respects, a subject of property belonging to him. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 26.

VILLEIN IN GROSS. A villein who was annexed to the person of the lord, and transferable by deed from one owner to another. 2 Bl. Comm. 93.

VILLEIN REGARDANT. A villein annexed to the manor of land; a serf.

VILLEIN SERVICES. Base services, such as villeins performed. 2 Bl. Comm. 93. They were not, however, exclusively confined to villeins, since they might be performed by freemen, without impairing their free condition. Bract. fol. 24b.

VILLEIN SOCAGE. In feudal and old English law. A species of tenure in which the services to be rendered were certain and determinate, but were of a base or servile nature; i. e., not suitable to a man of free and honorable rank. This was also called "privileged villeinage," to distinguish it from "pure villeinage," in which the services were not certain, but the tenant was obliged to do whatever he was commanded. 2 Bl. Comm. 61.

VILLENAGE. A servile kind of tenure belonging to lands or tenements, whereby the tenant was bound to do all such services as the lord commanded, or were fit for a villein to do. Cowell. See Villein.

Pure Villenage

A base tenure, where a man holds upon terms of doing whatsoever is commanded of him, nor knows in the evening what is to be done in the morning, and is always bound to an uncertain service. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 188.

VILLENOUS JUDGMENT. A judgment which deprived one of his libera lex, whereby he was discredited and disabled as a juror or witness; forfeited his goods and chattels and lands for life; wasted the lands, razed the houses, rooted up the trees, and committed his body to prison. It has become obsolete. 4 Bl. Comm. 136; 4 Steph. Comm. 230; 4 Broom & H. Comm. 153. Wharton.

VIM VI REPELLERE LICET, MODO FIAT MODERAMINE EN'CULPATIE TUTELZE, NON AD SUMENDAM VINDICTAM, SED AD PROPULSANDAM INJURIAM. It is lawful to repel force by force, provided it be done with the moderation of blameless defense, not for the purpose of taking revenge, but to ward off injury. Co. Litt. 162a.

VISIT. In international law. The right of visit or visitation is the right of a cruiser or war-ship to stop a vessel sailing under another flag on the high seas, and send an officer to such vessel to ascertain whether her nationality is what it purports to be. It is exercisable only when suspicious circumstances attend the vessel to be visited; as when she is suspected of a piratical character.

VISITATION. Inspection; superintendence; direction; regulation. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n v. Douglas, 70 App.D.C. 221, 105 F.2d 100, 105, 123 A.L.R. 1266.

As applied to corporations, means, in law, the act of a superior or superintending officer who visits a corporation to examine into its manner of conducting business and to enforce an observance of its laws and regulations. Kawfield Oil Co. v. Illinois Refining Co., 169 Okl. 75, 35 P.2d 961, 963. Also a power given by law to the founders of all eleemosynary corporations. 2 Kent, Comm. 300-303; 1 Bl. Comm. 480, 481. In England, the visitation of ecclesiastical corporations belongs to the ordinary. 1 Bl.Comm. 480, 481. See Trustees of Union Baptist Ass'n v. Hunn, 7 Tex. Civ.App. 249, 26 S.W. 755; Thompson v. Southern Connellsville Coke Co., 269 Pa. 500, 112 A. 533, 534.

VISITATION BOOKS. In English law. Books compiled by the heralds, when progresses were solemnly and regularly made into every part of the kingdom, to inquire into the state of families, and to register such marriages and descents as were verified to them upon oath; they were allowed to be good evidence of pedigree. 3 Bl. Comm. 105; 3 Steph.Comm. 724.

VISITOR. An inspector of the government of corporations, or bodies politic. 1 Bl.Comm. 482.

The ordinary is visitor of spiritual corporations. But corporations instituted for private charity, if they are lay, are visitable by the founder, or whom he shall appoint; and from the sentence of such visitor there lies no appeal. By implication of law, the founder and his heirs are visitors of lay foundations, if no particular person is appointed by him to see that the charity is not perverted. Jacob.

The term "visitor" is also applied to an official appointed to see and report upon persons found lunatics by inquisition, and to a person appointed by a school board to visit houses and see that parents are complying with the provisions in reference to the education of their children. Mozley & Whitley.

VISITOR OF MANNERS. The regarder's office in the forest. Manw. i. 195.

VISNE. L. Fr. The neighborhood; vicinage; venue. The district from which juries were drawn at common law. Ex parte McNeeley, 36 W.Va. 84, 14 S.E. 436, 15 L.R.A. 226, 32 Am.St.Rep. 831; State v. Kemp, 34 Minn. 61, 24 N.W. 349.

VISUS. Lat. In old English practice. View; inspection, either of a place or person.

VITAL STATISTICS. Public records kept by a state, city or other governmental subdivision, under a statutory provision, of births, marriages and deaths, and disease.

VITAMIN. Nitrogenous substance found in some nucleic acids in the form of pyrimidine bases, as cytosin, minute quantities of which are essential to the diet of man, birds, and other animals. In re Wallerstein, Cust. & Pat. App., 53 F.2d 530, 531.

"Vitamin D" functions in regulating the metabolism of calcium and phosphorus in the body and is, therefore, concerned with the proper formation of bones and teeth. It is recognized as especially beneficial in the infant and growing child as a preventative and therapy of rickets and the building of strong bones and teeth. It is also an essential vitamin for adults. Vitamin D in nature is found almost exclusively in sunshine and certain fish livers which are unavailable to humans in the normal diet. Quaker Oats Co. v. Federal Security Administrator, C.C.A.7, 129 F.2d 76, 80.

VITIATE. To impair; to make void or voidable; to cause to fail of force or effect; to destroy or annul, either entirely or in part, the legal efficacy and binding force of an act or instrument; as when it is said that fraud vitiates a contract.

VITILIGATE. To litigate cavilously, vexatiously, or from merely quarrelsome motives.

VITIOUS INTROMISSION. In Scotch law. An unwarrantable intermeddling with the movable estate of a person deceased, without the order of law. Ersk.Prin. b. 3, tit. 9, § 25. The irregular intermeddling with the effects of a deceased person, which subjects the party to the whole debts of the deceased. 2 Karnes, Eq. 327.

VITIUM CLERICI. In old English law. The mistake of a clerk; a clerical error.

VITIUM SCRIPTORIS. In old English law. The fault or mistake of a writer or copyist; a clerical error. Gilb. Forum Rom. 185.

VITREOUS. Consisting of or resembling glass in its important characteristics. Vantine & Co. v. U. S., 9 Ct.Cust.App. 291, 292.

VITRICUS. Lat. In the civil law. A stepfather; a mother's second husband. Calvin.

VIVA AQUA. Lat. In the civil law. Living water; running water; that which issues from a spring or fountain. Calvin.

VIVA PECUNIA. Lat. Cattle, which obtained this name from being received during the Saxon period as money upon most occasions, at certain regulated prices. Cowell.

VIVA VOCE. Lat. With the living voice; by word of mouth. As applied to the examination of witnesses, this phrase is equivalent to "orally." It is used in contradistinction to evidence on affidavits or depositions. As descriptive of a species of voting, it signifies voting by speech or outcry, as distinguished from voting by a written or printed ballot.

The word "ballot" is used as a symbol of secrecy, while "viva voce" is used as a symbol of publicity. Day v. Walker, 124 Neb. 500, 247 N.Vv'. 350, 351.

VIVARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. An inclosed place, where live wild animals are kept. Calvin.; Spelman.

VIVARY. In English law. A place for keeping wild animals alive, including fishes; a fish pond, park, or warren.

VIZ. A contraction for videlicet, to-wit, namely, that is to say.

VOCABULA ARTIS. Lat. Words of art; technical terms.

VOCABULA ARTIUM EXPLICANDA SUNT SECUNDUM DEFINITIONES PRUDENTUM. Terms of arts are to be explained according to the definitions of the learned or skilled [in such arts.] Bl. Law Tracts, 6.

VOCARE AD CURIAM. In feudal law. To summon to court. Feud. Lib. 2, tit. 22.

VOCATIO IN JUS. Lat. A summoning to court. In the earlier practice of the Roman law, (under the legis actiones,) the creditor orally called upon his debtor to go with him before the prtor for the purpose of determining their controversy, saying, "In jus eamus; in jus te voco." This was called "vocatio in jus."

VOCATION. One's regular calling or business. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York v. Enecks, 41 Ga.App. 644, 154 S.E. 198, 199. The activity on which one spends major portion of his time and out of which he makes his living. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation v. Accident & Casualty Ins. Co. of Winterthur, Switzerland, C.C.A. Ohio, 134 F.2d 566, 568.

VOCIFERATIO. Lat. In old English law. Outcry; hue and cry. Cowell.

VOCIFEROUS. In a statute forbidding the use of loud and vociferous language, making a loud outcry; clamorous; noisy. Webst.; Anderson v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 20 S.W. 359; Thomason v. State, 98 Tex.Cr.R. 312, 265 S.W. 579.

VOCO. Lat. In the civil and old English law. 1 call; I summon; I vouch. In jus voco te, I summon you to court; I summon you before the prtor. The formula by which a Roman action was anciently commenced. Adams, Rom. Ant. 242.

VOID. Null; ineffectual; nugatory; having no legal force or binding effect; unable, in law, to support the purpose for which it was intended. McGarry v. Village of Wilmette, 303 Ill. 147, 135 N.E. 96, 98; Hardison v. Gledhill, Ga.App., 33 S.E.2d 921, 924.

There is this difference between the two words "void" and "voidable:" void in the strict sense, means that an instrument or transaction is nugatory and ineffectual so that nothing can cure it; voidable, when an imperfection or defect can be cured by the act or confirmation of him who could take advantage of it. Wharton. The term "void," however, as applicable to conveyances or other agreements, has not at all times been used with technical precision, nor restricted to its peculiar and limited sense, as contradistinguished from "voidable ;" it being frequently introduced, even by legal writers and jurists, when the purpose is nothing further than to indicate that a contract was invalid, and not binding in law. But the distinction between the terms "void" and "voidable," in their application to contracts, is often one of great practical importance; and, whenever entire technical accuracy is required, the term "void" can only be properly applied to those contracts that are of no effect whatsoever, such as are a mere nullity, and incapable of confirmation or ratification. Allis v. Billings, 6 Mete., Mass., 415, 39 Am.Dec. 744.

The word "void," in its strictest sense, means that which has no force and effect, is without legal efficacy, is incapable of being enforced by law, or has no legal or binding force, but frequently the word is used and construed as having the more liberal meaning of "voidable." In re Validation of $50,000 Serial Funding Bonds of Clarke County, 187 Miss. 512, 193 So. 449, 452.

The word "void" is used in statutes in the sense of utterly void so as to be incapable of ratification, and also in the sense of voidable and resort must be had to the rules of construction in many cases to determine in which sense the Legislature intended to use it. An act or contract neither wrong in itself nor against public policy, which has been declared void by statute for the protection or benefit of a certain party, or class of parties, is voidable only. U. S. v. New York & Porto Rico S. S. Co., 239 U.S. 88, 36 S.Ct. 41, 42, 60 L. Ed. 161; Weede v. Iowa Southern Utilities Co. of Delaware, 231 Iowa 784, 2 N.W.2d 372, 397, 398.

VOID CONTRACT. One which never had any legal existence or effect, and such contract cannot in any manner have life breathed into it. National Union Indemnity Co. v. Bruce Bros., Inc., 44 Ariz. 454, 38 P.2d 648, 652. Expression denotes that the parties to the transaction have gone through the form of making a contract, but that none has been made in law because of lack of some essential element of a contract, and such contract creates no legal rights and either party thereto may ignore it at his pleasure, in so far as it is executory. Griffin v. Smith, C.C.A.Ind., 101 F.2d 348, 350.

VOID IN PART, VOID IN TOTO. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N.Y. 9, 96.

VOID JUDGMENT. One which has no legal force or effect, invalidity of which may be asserted by any person whose rights are affected at any time and at any place directly or collaterally. Reynolds v. Volunteer State Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 80 S.W.2d 1087, 1092. One which, from its inception is and forever continues to be absolutely null, without legal efficacy, ineffectual to bind parties or support a right, of no legal force and effect whatever, and incapable of confirmation, ratification, or enforcement in any manner or to any degree. Ex parte Myers, 121 Neb. 56, 236 N.W. 143, 144. One that has merely semblance without some essential elements, as want of jurisdiction or failure to serve process or have party in court. Wellons v. Lassiter, 200 N.C. 474, 157 S.E. 434, 436. It is subject to collateral attack. Owens v. Cocroft, 14 Ga.App. 322, 80 S.E. 906, 907.

VOID MARRIAGE. One not good for any legal purpose, the invalidity of which may be maintained in any proceeding between any parties, while a "voidable marriage" is one where there is an imperfection which can be inquired into only during the lives of both of the parties in a proceeding to obtain a sentence declaring it void. State v. Smith, 101. S.C. 293, 85 S.E. 958, 959, Ann. Cas.1917C, 149.

"Voidable marriage" is valid for all civil puposes until annulled in direct proceedings, but "void marriage" is nullity and may be impeached at any time. Pridgen v. Pridgen, 203 N.C. 533, 166 S.E. 591, 593.

VOID PROCESS. One which fails in some material respect to comply with the requisite form of legal process. United States v. Van Dusen, C. C.A.Minn., 78 F.2d 121, 124.

VOID THINGS ARE AS NO THINGS. People v. Shall, 9 Cow. (N.Y.) 778, 784.

VOIDABLE. That may be avoided, or declared void; not absolutely void, or void in itself. 2 Kent, Comm. 234. That which operates to accomplish the thing sought to be accomplished, until the fatal vice in the transaction has been judicially ascertained and declared. Slaughter v. Qualls, Tex., 162 S.W.2d 671, 674. It imports a valid act which may be avoided rather than an invalid act which may be confirmed. Paulson v. McMillan, 8 Wash.2d 295, 111 P.2d 983, 985. See Void.

VOIDABLE CONTRACT. One which is void as to wrongdoer but not void as to wronged party, unless he elects to so treat it. Depner v. Joseph Zukin Blouses, 13 Cal.App.2d 124, 56 P.2d 574, 575. See, also, Void.

VOIDABLE JUDGMENT. One apparently valid, but in truth wanting in some material respect. Reynolds v. Volunteer State Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ. App., 80 S.W.2d 1087, 1092. One rendered by a court having jurisdiction but which is irregularly and erroneously rendered. Tanton v. State Nat. Bank of El Paso, Tex., 43 S.W.2d 957, 960; Gehret v. Hetkes, Tex., 36 S.W.2d 700, 701; Easterline v. Bean, Tex., 49 S.W.2d 427, 429.

VOIDABLE MARRIAGE. See Void Marriage.

VOIDABLE PREFERENCE. Under Bankruptcy Act, where person while insolvent and within four months of bankruptcy transferred property, effect of which will be to enable one creditor to obtain greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of same class and person receiving it or to be benefited thereby has reasonable cause to believe that enforcement of transfer will result in preference. Bankr.Act §§ 60a, 60b, 11 U.S.C.A. § 96 (a, b). Haas v. Sachs, C.C.A.Ark., 68 F.2d 623, 625. But it is unnecessary that bankrupt should have intended to prefer person receiving or benefited by transfer. Sams v. First Nat. Bank of Meridian, Miss., 181 So. 320, 321.

VOIDANCE. The act of emptying; ejection from a benefice.

VOIR DIRE. L. Fr. To speak the truth. This phrase denotes the preliminary examination which the court may make of one presented as a witness or juror, where his competency, interest, etc., is objected to. State v. McRae, 200 N.C. 149, 156 S.E. 800, 803.

VOITURE. Fr. Carriage; transportation by carriage.

VOLENS. Lat. Wining. He is said to be willing who either expressly consents or tacitly makes no opposition. Calvin.

VOLUNTARY COURTESY. A voluntary act of kindness; an act of kindness performed by one man towards another, of the free will and inclination of the doer, without any previous request or promise of reward made by him who is the object of the courtesy; from which the law will not imply a promise of remuneration. Holthouse.

VOLUNTARY DISCONTINUANCE. Voluntary action on part of plaintiff, whereby his case goes out of court without decision on merits. Ferber v. Brueckl, 322 Mo. 892, 17 S.W.2d 524, 527.

VOLUNTARY EXPOSURE TO UNNECESSARY DANGER. An intentional act which reasonable and ordinary prudence would pronounce dangerous. Archibald v. Order of United Commercial Travelers, 117 Me. 418, 104 A. 792, 793; Federal Sa^{y}. & Ins. Co. v. Rager, 75 Ind.App. 295, 128 N.E. 773, 774. Intentional exposure to unnecessary danger, implying a conscious knowledge of the danger. Empire Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 111 Ga. 413, 81 S.E. 120, 122. The voluntary doing of an act which is not necessary to be done, but which requires exposure to known danger to which one would not be exposed if unnecessary act is not done. Landau v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 315 Mo. 760, 287 S.W. 346, 351. The term implies a conscious, intentional exposure, something of which one is conscious but willing to take the risk.

VOLUNTARY IGNORANCE. This exists where a party might, by taking reasonable pains, have acquired the necessary knowledge, but has neglected to do so.

VOLUNTARY JURISDICTION. In English law. A jurisdiction exercised by certain ecclesiastical courts, in matters where there is no opposition. 3 B1.Comm. 66. The opposite of contentious jurisdiction, (q. v.). In Scotch law. One exercised in matters admitting of no opposition or question, and therefore cognizable by any judge, and in any place, and on any lawful day. Bell.

VOLUNTAS. Lat. Properly, volition, purpose, or intention, or a design or the feeling or impulse which prompts the commission of an act; but in old English law the term was often used to denote a will, that is, the last will and testament of a decedent, more properly called testamentum.

VOLUNTAS DONATORIS IN CHARTA DONI SUI MANIFESTE EXPRESSA OBSERVETUR. Co.Litt. 21. The will of the donor manifestly expressed in his deed of gift is to be observed.

VOLUNTAS EST JUSTA SENTENTIA DE EO QUOD QUIS POST MORTEM SUAM FIERI VELIT. A will is an exact opinion or determination concerning that which each one wishes to be done after his death.

VOLUNTAS ET PROPOSITUM DISTINGUUNT MALEFICIA. The will and the proposed end distinguish crimes. Bract. fols. 2b, 136b.

VOLUNTAS FACIT QUOD IN TESTAMENTO SCRIPTUM VALEAT. Dig. 30, 1, 12, 3. It is intention which gives effect to the wording of a will.

VOLUNTAS IN DELICTIS, NON EXITUS SPECTATUR. 2 Inst. 57. In crimes, the will, and not the consequence, is looked to.

VOLUNTAS REPUTATUR PRO FACTO. The intention is to be taken for the deed. 3 Inst. 69; Broom, Max. 311.

VOLUNTAS TESTATORIS EST AMBULATORIA USQUE AD EXTREMUM VITAE EXITUM. 4 Coke, 61. The will of a testator is ambulatory until the latest moment of life.

VOLUNTAS TESTATORIS HABET INTERPRETATIONEM LATAM ET BENIGNAM. Jenk. Cent. 260. The intention of a testator has a broad and benignant interpretation.

VOLUNTAS ULTIMA TESTATORIS EST PERIMPLENDA SECUNDUM VERAM INTENTIONEM SUAM. Co.Litt. 322. The last will of the testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention.

VOLUNTEER. A person who gives his services without any express or implied promise of remuneration. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Argo, 82 Ill. App. 667. One who intrudes himself into a matter which does not concern him, or one who pays the debt of another without request, when he is not legally or morally bound to do so, and when he has no interest to protect in making such payment. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Hood (Tex.Civ.App.) 172 S.W. 1120. See Irvine v. Angus, 35 C.C.A. 501, 93 F. 633; Arnold v. Green, 116 N.Y. 566, 23 N.E. 1; In re Welton's Estate, 141 Misc. 674, 253 N.Y.S. 128, 140. One who, acting on his own initiative, pays debt of another without invitation, compulsion, or the necessity of self-protection. In re Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank of Nooksack, 175 Wash. 78, 26 P.2d 631. One who merely offers his service on his own free will, as opposed to one who is conscripted. Gooden v. Mitchell, 2 Terry 301, 21 A.2d 197, 202. Also an attorney, as to any persons other than those by whom he was retained. In re Greenberg, 174 Misc. 182, 20 N.Y.S.2d 432, 433.

Conveyancing

One who holds a title under a voluntary conveyance, i. e., one made without consideration, good or valuable, to support it.

Law of Master and Servant

The term "Volunteer" includes one who, without the assent of the master and without justification arising from a legitimate personal interest, unnecessarily assists a servant in the performance of the master's business. Kalmich v. White, 95 Conn. 568, 111 A. 845, 846; Goshen Furnace Corporation v. Tolley's Adm'r, 134 Va. 404, 114 S.E. 728, 730.

Military Law

One who freely and voluntarily offers himself for service in the army or navy; as distinguished from one who is compelled to serve by draft or conscription, and also from one entered by enlistment in the standing army.

VOTE. Suffrage; the expression of his will, preference, or choice, formally manifested by a member of a legislative or deliberative body, or of a constituency or a body of qualified electors, in regard to the decision to be made by the body as a whole upon any proposed measure or proceeding or in passing laws, rules or regulations, or the selection of an officer or representative. And the aggregate of the expressions of will or choice, thus manifested by individuals, is called the "vote of the body." See Maynard v. Board of Canvassers, 84 Mich. 228, 47 N.W. 756, 11 L.R.A. 332; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 546; Commonwealth v. Baker, 237 Ky. 380, 35 S.W.2d 548, 549; Sawyer Stores v. Mitchell, 103 Mont. 148, 62 P.2d 342, 348.

Casting Vote

See that title.

Cumulative Voting

See Cumulative.

Voting Trust

A term applied to the accumulation in a single hand or in a few hands of shares of corporate stock, belonging to several or many owners, in trust for purpose of voting the shares in order, thereby, to control the business of the company through selection of directors. Manson v. Curtis, 223 N.Y. 313, 119 N.E. 559, 561, Ann.Cas.1918E, 247; Groub v. Blish, 88 Ind.App. 309, 152 N.E. 609, 611. See Voting Trust, infra.

VOTER. The word has two meanings—a person who performs act of voting, and a person who has the qualifications entitling him to vote. Its meaning depends on the connections in which it is used, and is not always equivalent to electors. Board of Education of Oklahoma City v. Woodworth, 89 Okl. 192, 214 P. 1077, 1079; State v. Williams, 100 Fla. 996, 130 So. 428, 430.

When used in apposition to or in contrast with the word "elector," it has but one meaning. A voter in this sense is an elector who exercises the privilege conferred upon him by the Constitution and laws of voting. He is an elector who does vote. State v. Williams, 100 Fla. 996, 130 So. 428, 432.

In a limited sense a voter is a person having the legal right to vote, sometimes called a legal voter. Aczel v. United States, C.C.A., 232 F. 652, 657; State v. Stewart, 57 Mont. 397, 188 P. 904, 907.

VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS. In the houses of parliament the clerks at the tables make brief entries of all that is actually done; and these minutes, which are printed from day to day for the use of members, are called the "votes and proceedings of parliament." From these votes and proceedings the journals of the house are subsequently prepared, by making the entries at greater length. Brown.

VOTING BY BALLOT. The term is used to distinguish open voting from secret . voting. The privilege of secrecy is of the essence of "voting by ballot." Smith & Son v. MacAulay, Vt., 196 A. 281, 283.

VOTING TRUST. One created by an agreement between a group of the stockholders of a corporation and the trustee, or by a group of identical agreements between individual stockholders and a common trustee, whereby it is provided that for a term of years, or for a period contingent upon a certain event, or until the agreement is terminated, control over the stock owned by such stockholders, either for certain purposes or for all, shall be lodged in the trustee, with or without a reservation to the owner or persons designated by them of the power to direct how such control shall be used. Alderman v. Alderman, 178 S.C. 9, 181 S.E. 897, 105 A.L.R. 102. A device whereby two or more persons, owning stock with voting powers, divorce voting rights thereof from ownership, retaining to all intents and purposes the latter in themselves and transferring the former to trustees in whom voting rights of all depositors in the. trust are pooled. Peyton v. William C. Peyton Corporation, Del.Ch., 194 A. 106, 111.

Agreement accumulating several owners' stock in hands of one or more persons in trust for voting purposes in order to control corporate business and affairs. It differs from proxy or reciprocal proxy in that it does not make either party the other's agent. Bankers' Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Sloss, 229 Ala. 26, 155 So. 371.

VOTUM. Lat. A vow or promise. Dies votorum, the wedding day. Fleta 1. 1, c. 4.

VOUCH. To call upon; to call in to warranty; to call upon the grantor or warrantor to defend the title to an estate.

To vouch is to call upon, rely on, or quote as an authority. Thus, in the old writers, to vouch a case or report is to quote it as an authority. Co.Litt. 70a.

VOUCHEE. In common recoveries, the person who is called to warrant or defend the title is called the "vouchee." 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2093.

Common Vouchee

In common recoveries, the person who is vouched to warranty. In this fictitious proceeding the crier of the court usually performs the office of a common vouchee. 2 Bl.Comm. 358; 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2093.

VOUCHER. A receipt, acquittance, or release, which may serve as evidence of payment or discharge of a debt, or to certify the correctness of accounts. An account-book containing the acquittances or receipts showing the accountant's discharge of his obligations. Whitwell v. Willard, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 218. When used in connection with disbursement of money, a written or printed instrument in the nature of a bill of particulars, account, receipt, or acquittance, that shows on its face the fact, authority, and purpose of disburse.. ment. Robertson's Guardian v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 227 Ky. 114, 12 S.W.2d 298, 300.

in Old Conveyancing

The person on whom the tenant calls to defend the title to the land, because he warranted the title to him at the time of the original purchase.

VOUCHER TO WARRANTY. The calling one who has warranted lands, by the party warranted, to come and defend the suit for him. Co.Litt. 101b.

VOX EMISSA VOLAT; LITERA SCRIPTA MANET. The spoken word flies; the written letter remains. Broom, Max. 666.

VOX SIGNATA. In Scotch practice. An emphatic or essential word. 2 Alis.Crim.Pr. 280.

VOYAGE. In maritime law. The passing of a vessel by sea from one place, port, or country to another. The term is held to include the enterprise entered upon, and not merely the route. Friend v. Insurance Co., 113 Mass. 326.

A voyage commences only when the vessel breaks ground or leaves her moorings in complete readiness for sailing and proceeding out to sea destined for her next port of call. The Willowpool, D.C.N.Y., 12 F.Supp. 96, 100.

Foreign Voyage

A voyage to some port or place within the territory of a foreign nation. The terminus of a voyage determines its character. If it be within the limits of a foreign jurisdiction, it is a foreign voyage, and not otherwise. Taber v. United States, 1 Story, 1, Fed.Cas.No.13,722; The Three Brothers, 23 Fed.Cas. 1,162.

Voyage Insured

In insurance law. A transit at sea from the terminus a quo to the terminus ad quam, in a prescribed course of navigation, which is never set out in any policy, but virtually forms parts of all policies, and is as binding on the parties thereto as though it were minutely detailed. 1 Arn. Ins. 333.

Voyage Policy

See Policy of Insurance.

VRAIC. Seaweed. It is used in great quantities by the inhabitants of Jersey and Guernsey for manure, and also for fuel by the poorer classes.

VS. An abbreviation for versus, (against,) constantly used in legal proceedings, and especially in entitling cases.

VULGAR. Lack of cultivation or refinement. Darnell v. State, 72 Tex.Cr.R. 271, 161 S.W. 971.

VULGARIS OPINIO EST DUPLEX, VIZ., ORTA INTER GRAVES ET DISCRETOS, QUIE MULTUM VERITATIS HABET, ET OPINIO ORTA INTER LEVES ET VULGARES HOMINES ABSQUE SPECIE VERITATIS. 4 Coke 107. Common opinion is of two kinds, viz., that which arises among grave and discreet men, which has much truth in it, and that which arises among light and common men, without any appearance of truth.

VULGARIS PURGATIO. Lat. In old English law. Common purgation; a name given to the trial by ordeal, to distinguish it from the canonical purgation, which was by the oath of the party. 4 Bl.Comm. 342.

VULGO CONCEPTI. Lat. In the civil law. Spurious children; bastards.

VULGO QU)ESITI. Lat. In the civil law. Spurious children; literally, gotten from the people; the offspring of promiscuous cohabitation, who are considered as having no father. Inst. 3, 4, 3; Inst. 3, 5, 4.

W. As an abbreviation, this letter frequently stands for "William," (king of England,) "Westminster," "west," or "western."

W. D. An abbreviation for "Western District."

WABBLE. To vacillate or sway unsteadily from side to side; to vacillate or show unsteadiness; to move or move along with an irregular rocking or staggering motion or unsteadily from one side to the other. Meadows v. State, 186 Ga. 592, 199 S.E. 133, 135.

WACREOUR. L. Fr. A vagabond, or vagrant. Britt. c. 29.

WADIA. A pledge. See Vadium; Fides Facta.

WADSET. In Scotch law. The old term for a mortgage. A right by which lands or other heritable subjects are impignorated by the proprietor to his creditor in security of his debt. Wadsets are usually drawn in the form of mutual contracts, in which one party sells the land, and the other grants the right of reversion. Ersk. Inst. 2, 8, 3.

WADSETTER. In Scotch law. A creditor to whom a wadset is made, corresponding to a mortgagee.

WAFTORS. Conductors of vessels at sea. Cowell.

WAGA. In old English law. A weight; a measure of cheese, salt, wool, etc., containing two hundred and fifty-six pounds avoirdupois. Cowell; Spelman.

WAGE. In old English practice. To give security for the performance of a thing. Cowell.

WAGE EARNER. Within Bankruptcy Act exempting wage earners from involuntary bankruptcy proceedings must have as his paramount occupation the earning of salary or wages, indicia of wage earning being whether earner depends on his wages for his subsistence and whether wage earning is his paramount occupation. Bankr.Act §§ 1(27), 4b, 11 U.S.C.A. §§ 1(27), 22(b). In re Gainfort, D.C.Cal., 14 F.Supp. 788, 791.

WAGER. A contract by which two or more parties agree that a certain sum of money or other thing shall be paid or delivered to one of them or that they shall gain or lose on the happening of an uncertain event or upon the ascertainment of a fact in dispute, where the parties have no interest in the event except that arising from the possibility of such gain or loss. H. Seay & Co. v. Moore, Tex.Com.App., 261 S.W. 1013, 1014; Young v. Stephenson, 82 Okl. 239, 200 P. 225, 228, 24 A.L.R. 978; Odle v. State, 139 Tex.Cr.R. 288, 139 S.W.2d 595, 597. See, also, Bet.

It was said that contract giving one party or the other an option to carry out the transaction or not at pleasure is not invalid as a "wager." Palmer v. Love, 18 Tenn. App. 579, 80 S.W.2d 100, 105; but if, under guise of contract of sale, real intent of both parties is merely to speculate in rise or fall of prices and property is not to be delivered, but at time fixed for delivery one party is to pay difference between contract price and market price, transaction is invalid as "wager." Baucum & Kimball v. Garrett Mercantile Co., 188 La. 728, 178 So. 256, 259, 260.

WAGER OF BATTEL. The trial by wager of battel was a species of trial introduced into England, among other Norman customs, by William the Conqueror, in which the person accused fought with his accuser, under the apprehension that Heaven would give the victory to him who was in the right. 3 Bl.Comm. 337. It was abolished by St. 59 Geo. III., c. 46.

WAGER OF LAW. In old practice. The giving of gage or sureties by a defendant in an action of debt that at a certain day assigned he would make his law; that is, would take an oath in open court that he did not owe the debt, and at the same time bring with him eleven neighbors, (called "compurgators,") who should avow upon their oaths that they believed in their consciences that he said the truth. Glanv. lib. 1, c. 9, 12; Bract. fol. 156b; Britt. c. 27; 3 Bl.Comm. 343; Cro.Eliz. 818.

WAGER POLICY. See Policy of Insurance.

WAGERING CONTRACT. One in which the parties stipulate that they shall gain or lose, upon the happening of an uncertain event, in which they have no interest except that arising from the possibility of such gain or loss. Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. 89.

WAGERING GAIN. The share of each, where individuals carrying on business in partnership make gains in wagering transactions. Jennings v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.Tex., 110 F.2d 945, 946.

WAGES. A compensation given to a hired person for his or her services; the compensation agreed upon by a master to be paid to a servant, or any other person hired to do work or business for him. Ciarla v. Solvay Process Co., 172 N.Y.S. 426, 428, 184 App.Div. 629; Cookes v. Lymperis, 178 Mich. 299, 144 N.W. 514, 515; Phoenix Iron Co. v. Roanoke Bridge Co., 169 N.C. 512, 86 S.E. 184, 185. Every form of remuneration payable for a given period to an individual for personal services, including salaries, commissions, vacation pay, dismissal wages, bonuses and reasonable value of board, rent, housing, lodging, payments in kind, tips, and any other similar advantage received from the individual's employer or directly with respect to work for him. Ernst v. Industrial Commission, 246 Wis. 205, 16 N.W.2d 867.

In a limited sense the word "wage" means pay given for labor usually manual or mechanical at short stated intervals as distinguished from salary, but in general the word means that which is pledged or paid for work or other services; hire; pay. In its legal sense, the word "wages" means the price paid for labor, reward of labor, specified sum for a given time of service or a fixed sum for a specified piece of work. In re Hollingsworth's Estate, 37 Cal. App.2d 432, 99 P.2d 599, 600, 602.

Maritime Law

The compensation allowed to seamen for their services on board a vessel during a voyage.

Political Economy

The reward paid, whether in money or goods, to human exertion, considered as a factor in the production of wealth, for its co-operation in the process.

"Three factors contribute to the production of commodities,—nature, labor, and capital. Each must have a share of the product as its reward, and this share, if it is just, must be proportionate to the several contributions. The share of the natural agents is rent; the share of labor, wages; the share of capital, interest. The clerk receives a salary; the lawyer and doctor, fees; the manufacturer, profits. Salary, fees, and profits are so many forms of wages for services rendered." De Laveleye, Pol. Econ.

WAGON. A kind of four-wheel vehicle, especially one used for carrying freight or merchandise. McMullen v. Shields, 96 Mont. 191, 29 P.2d 652, 654. A vehicle moving on wheels and usually drawn by horses. The word wagon is a generic term and includes other species of vehicle by whatever name they may be called. An automobile is a vehicle propelled by power generated within itself, used to convey passengers or materials, and in a general sense is a wagon. Strycker v. Richardson, 77 Pa.Super.Ct. 252, 255, but see contra United States v. One Automobile, D.C. Mont., 237 F. 891, 892; Whitney v. Welnitz, 153 Minn. 162, 190 N.W. 57, 28 A.L.R. 68. For "Farm Wagon," see that title.

WAGONAGE. Money paid for carriage in a wagon.

WAGONWAY. That part of a street ordinarily used for the passage of vehicles within the curb lines. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Chiara, C.C.A. N.J., 95 F.2d 663, 666.

WAIF. Waifs are goods found, but claimed by nobody; that of which every one waives the claim. Also, goods stolen and waived, or thrown away by the thief in his flight, for fear of being apprehended. Wharton.

Waifs are to be distinguished from bona fugitiva, which are the goods of the felon himself, which he abandons in his flight from justice. Brown: See People v. Kaatz, 3 Parker, Cr.R. (N.Y.) 138; Hall v. Gildersleeve, 36 N.J.L. 237.

WAINABLE. In old records. That may be plowed or manured; tillable. Cowell; Blount.

WAINAGE. In old English law. The team and instruments of husbandry belonging to a countryman, and especially to a villein who was required to perform agricultural services.

WAINAGIUM. What is necessary to the farmer for the cultivation of his land. Barring. Ob.St. 12; Magna Carta, c. 14. Instruments of husbandry. 1 Poll. & Maitl. 399.

WAIN-BOTE. In feudal and old English law. Timber for wagons or carts.

WAITING CLERKS. Officers whose duty it formerly was to wait in attendance upon the court of chancery. The office was abolished in 1842 by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103. Mozley & Whitley.

WAIVE, v. To abandon or throw away; as when a thief, in his flight, throws aside the stolen goods, in order to facilitate his escape, he is technically said to waive them.

In modern law, to abandon, throw away, renounce, repudiate, or surrender a claim, a privilege, a right, or the opportunity to take advantage of some defect, irregularity, or wrong. See Brigham Young University v. Industrial Commission of Utah, 74 Utah 349, 279 P. 889, 893, 65 A.L.R. 152.

A person is said to waive a benefit when he renounces or disclaims it, and he is said to waive a tort or injury when he abandons the remedy which the law gives him for it. Sweet.

In order for one to "waive" a right, he must do it knowingly and be possessed of the facts. Barnhill v. Rubin, D.C.Tex., 46 F.Supp. 963, 966.

WAIVE, n. In old English law. A woman outlawed. The term is, as it were, the feminine of "outlaw," the latter being always applied to a man; "waive," to a woman. Cowell.

WAIVER. The intentional or voluntary relinquishment of a known right, Lehigh Val. R. Co. v. Ins. Co., 172 F. 364, 97 C.C.A. 62; Vermillion v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 230 Mo.App. 993, 93 S.W.2d 45, 51; or such conduct as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of such right, Rand v. Morse, C.C.A.Mo., 289 F. 339, 344; Dexter Yarn Co. v. American Fabrics Co., 102 Conn. 529, 129 A. 527, 537; Gibbs v. Bergh, 51 S.D. 432, 214 N.W. 838, 841; or when one dispenses with the performance of something he is entitled to exact or when one in possession of any right, whether conferred by law or by contract, with full knowledge of the material facts, does or forbears to do something the doing of which or the failure of forbearance to do which is inconsistent with the right, or his intention to rely upon it. Estoup Signs v. Frank Lower, Inc., La.App., 10 So.2d 642, 645. The renunciation, repudiation, abandonment, or surrender of some claim, right, privilege, or of the opportunity to take advantage of some defect, irregularity, or wrong. Christenson v. Carleton, 37 A. 226, 69 Vt. 91; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 395, 97 Am.Dec. 107, 1 Am.Rep. 115; Smiley v. Barker, 28 C.C.A. 9, 83 F. 684; Boos v. Ewing, 17 Ohio 523, 49 Am.Dec. 478. A doctrine resting upon an equitable principle, which courts of law will recognize. Atlas Life Ins. Co. v. Schrimsher, 179 Okl. 643, 66 P.2d 944, 948. See, also, Estoppel.

"Waiver" is essentially unilateral, resulting as legal consequence from some act or conduct of party against whom it operates, and no act of party in whose favor it is made is necessary to complete it. Coleman Production Credit Ass'n v. Mahan, Tex.Civ.App., 168 S.W.2d 903, 904. And may be shown by acts and conduct and sometimes by nonaction. Concrete Engineering Co. v. Grande Bldg. Co., 230 Mo.App. 443, 86 S.W.2d 595, 608.

Waiver Is distinguished from "estoppel" in that in "waiver" the essential element is an actual intent to abandon or surrender a right, while in "estoppel" such intent is immaterial; the necessary condition being the deception to his injury of the other party by the conduct of the one estopped. Insurance Co. of North America v. Williams, 42 Ariz. 331, 26 P.2d 117, 119. And "estoppel," may result though party estopped did not intend to lose any existing rights. Boyce v. Toke Point Oyster Co., 145 Or. 114, 25 P.2d 930.

Insurance Law

Substance of doctrine of "waiver" in insurance law is that if insurer, with knowledge of facts which would bar existing primary liability, recognizes such primary liability by treating policy as in force, it will not thereafter be allowed to plead such facts to avoid its primary liability. Protective Life Ins. Co. v. Cole, 230 Ala. 450, 161 So. 818, 819.

Express Waiver

The voluntary, intentional relinquishment of a known right. Dickert v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 176 S.C. 476, 180 S.E. 462.

Implied Waiver

A waiver is implied where one party has pursued such a course of conduct with reference to the other party as to evidence an intention to waive his rights or the advantage to which he may be entitled, or where the conduct pursued is inconsistent with any other honest intention than an intention of such waiver, provided that the other party concerned has been induced by such conduct to act upon the belief that there has been a waiver, and has incurred trouble or expense thereby. Astritch v. German-American Ins. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 131 F. 20, 65 C.C.A. 251; Roumage v. Insurance Co., 13 N.J.L. 124.

To make out a case of implied "waiver" of a legal right, there must be a clear, unequivocal and decisive act of the party showing such purpose, or acts amounting to an estoppel on his part. Rosenthal v. New York Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 99 F.2d 578, 579.

Waiver by Election of Remedies, Doctrine of Doctrine applies if there exist two or more coexisting remedies between which there is right of election, inconsistency as to such available remedies, and actual bringing of action or doing some other decisive act, with knowledge of facts, whereby party electing indicates his choice between such inconsistent remedies. Hertz v. Mills, D.C.Md., 10 F.Supp. 979, 981.

Waiver of Exemption

A clause inserted in a note, bond, lease, etc., expressly waiving the benefit of the laws exempting limited amounts of personal property from levy and sale on judicial process, so far as concerns the enforcement of the particular debt or obligation. Mitchell v. Coates, 47 Pa. 203; Wyman v. Gay, 90 Me. 36, 37 A. 325, 60 Am.St.Rep. 238; Howard B. & L. Ass'n v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 102 Pa. 223.

Waiver of Immunity

A means authorized by statutes by which a witness, in advance of giving testimony or producing evidence, may renounce the fundamental right guaranteed to him by constitutions, that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. In re Grae, 282 N.Y. 428, 26 N.E.2d 963, 966.

Waiver of Protest

An agreement by the indorser of a note or bill to be bound in his character of indorser without the formality of a protest in case of non-payment, or, in the case of paper which cannot or is not required to be protested, dispensing with the necessity of a demand and notice. First Nat. Bank v. Falkenhan, 94 Cal. 141, 29 P. 866; Coddington v. Davis, 1 N.Y. 190.

Waiver of Tort

The election, by an injured party, for purposes of redress, to treat the facts as establishing an implied contract, which he may enforce, instead of an injury by fraud or wrong, for the committing of which he may demand damages, compensatory or exemplary. Harway v. Mayor, etc., of City of New York, 1 Hun (N.Y.) 630.

WAKEMAN. The chief magistrate of Ripon, in Yorkshire.

WAKENING. In Scotch law. The revival of an action. A process by which an action that has lain over and not been insisted in for a year and a day, and thus technically said to have "fallen asleep," is wakened, or put in motion again. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 4, p. 170; Ersk. Prin. 4, 1, 33.

WALAPAUZ. In old Lombardic law. The disguising the head or face, with the intent of committing a theft.

WALENSIS. In old English law. A Welshman.

WALESCHERY. The being a Welshman. Spelman.

WALISCUS. In Saxon law. A servant, or any ministerial officer. Cowell.

WALKERS. Foresters who have the care of a certain space of ground assigned to them. Cowell.

WALL. An erection of stone, brick, or other material, raised to some height, and intended for purposes of security or inclosure. In law, this term occurs in such compounds as "ancient wall," "party-wall," "division-wall," etc.

Common Wall

A party wall; one which has been built at the common expense of the two owners whose properties are contiguous, or a wall built by one party in which the other has acquired a common right. Campbell v. Mesier, 4 Johns. Ch. (N.Y.) 342, 8 Am. Dec. 570.

WALLIA. In old English law. A wall; a sea-wall; a mound, bank, or wall erected in marshy districts as a protection against the sea. Spelman.

WAMPUM. Beads made of shells, used as money by the North American Indians, and which continued current in New York as late as 1693.

WAND OF PEACE. In Scotch law. A wand or staff carried by the messenger of a court, and which, when deforced, (that is, hindered from executing process,) he breaks, as a symbol of the deforcement, and protest for remedy of law. 2 Forb.Inst. 207.

WANDER. To ramble here and there without any certain course. Guidon' v. Wheeler, C.C.A. Alaska, 230 F. 93, 96; Ex parte Karnstrom, 297 Mo. 384, 249 S.W. 595, 596.

WANLASS. An ancient customary tenure of lands; i. e., to drive deer to a stand that the lord may have a shot. Blount, Ten. 140.

WANT OF CONSIDERATION. Embraces transactions or instances where no consideration was intended to pass. In re Conrad's Estate, 333 Pa. 561, 3 A.2d 697, 699. Ranschenbach v. McDaniel's Estate, 122 W.Va. 632, 11 S.E.2d 852, 854. For distinction between "failure of consideration" and "want of consideration," see Failure of Consideration.

WANT OF JURISDICTION. A want of authority to exercise in a particular manner a power which the board or tribunal has, the doing of something in excess of authority possessed. Evans v. Superior Court in and for City and County of San Francisco, 14 Cal.2d 563, 96 P.2d 107, 116.

WANT OF REPAIR. As to highways, anything in the state or condition of the highway which renders it unsafe or inconvenient for ordinary travel. Adams v. Town of Bolton, Mass., 297 Mass. 459, 9 N.E.2d 562, 565, 111 A.L.R. 856.

WANTAGE. In marine insurance. Ullage; deficiency in the contents of a cask or vessel caused by leaking. Cory v. Boylston Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 107 Mass. 140, 9 Am.Rep. 14.

WANTON. Reckless, heedless, malicious, characterized by extreme recklessness, foolhardiness, recklessly disregardful of the rights or safety of others or of consequences. In re Wegner, C.C.A. Ill., 88 F.2d 899, 902; Cover v. Hershey Transit Co., 290 Pa. 551, 139 A. 266, 268.

WANTON ACT. One done in reckless disregard of the rights of others, evincing a reckless indifference to consequences to the life, or limb, or health, or reputation or property rights of another, and is more than negligence, more than gross negligence, and is such conduct as indicates a reckless disregard of the just rights or safety of others or of the consequences of action, equivalent in its results to willful misconduct. Ziman v. Whitley, 110 Conn. 108, 147 A. 370, 372.

Ill will is not a necessary element of a wanton act, but to constitute an act "wanton" party doing act or failing to act must be conscious of his conduct and, though having no intent to injure, must be conscious from his knowledge of surrounding circumstances and conditions that his conduct will naturally and probably result in injury. Proud v. Adelberg, 290 Ill.App. 319, 8 N.E.2d 678, 681.

WANTON ACTS AND OMISSIONS. Those of such character or done in such manner or under such circumstances as to indicate that a person of ordinary intelligence actuated by normal and natural concern for the welfare and safety of his fellowmen who might be affected by them could not be guilty of them unless wholly indifferent to their probable injurious effect or consequences. Pupke v. Pupke, 102 Colo. 337, 79 P.2d 290, 292.

WANTON AND FURIOUS DRIVING. An offence against public health, which under the stat. 24 & 25 Viet. c. 100, s. 56, is punishable as a misdemeanor by fine or imprisonment. In this country the offence is usually provided for by state, county, or municipal legislation.

WANTON AND RECKLESS MISCONDUCT. Occurs when a person, with no intent to cause harm, intentionally performs an act so unreasonable and dangerous that he knows, or should know, that it is highly probable that harm will result. Donnelly v. Southern Pac. Co., 18 Ca1.2d 863, 118 P.2d 465, 469, 470.

WANTON INJURY. Injury produced by conscious and intentional wrongful act, or omission of known duty with reckless indifference to consequences. Duke v. Gaines, 224 Ala. 519, 140 So. 600, 601. It must be predicated upon actual knowledge of another's peril and a failure to take available preventative action knowing that such failure will probably result in injury. Rainey v. State, 31 Ala.App. 271, 17 So.2d 683, 686.

WANTON MISCONDUCT. Act or failure to act, when there is a duty to act, in reckless disregard of rights of another, coupled with a consciousness that injury is a probable consequence of act or omission. Swain v. American Mut. Liability Ins. Co., C.C.A.La., 134 F.2d 886, 887. A conduct manifesting disposition to perversity. Universal Concrete Pipe Co. v. Bassett, 130 Ohio St..567, 200 N.E. 843, 846, 119 A.L.R. 646.

WANTON NEGLIGENCE. Heedless and reckless disregard for another's rights with consciousness that act or omission to act may result in injury to another. Craig v. Stagner, 159 Tenn. 511, 19 S.W.2d 234, 236.

WANTONNESS. Conscious doing of some act or the omission of some duty with knowledge of existing conditions and consciousness that, from the act or omission, injury will likely result to another. Bedwell v. De Bolt, 221 Ind. 600, 50 N.E.2d 875, 877. First Nat. Bank V. Sanders, 227 Ala. 313, 149 So. 848, 849. Conscious failure by one charged with a duty to exercise due care and diligence to prevent an injury after the discovery of the peril, or under circumstances where he is charged with a knowledge of such peril, and being conscious of the inevitable or probable results of such failure. Stout v. Gallemore, 138 Kan. 385, 26 P.2d 573. A reckless or intentional disregard of the property, rights, or safety of others, implying, actively, a willingness to injure and disregard of the consequences to others, and, passively, more than mere negligence, that is, a conscious and intentional disregard of duty. Brasington v. South Bound R. Co., 40 S.E. 665, 62 S.C. 325, 89 Am.St.Rep. 905; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Webb, 12 So. 374, 97 Ala. 308; Walldren Express & Van Co. v. Krug, 291 Ill. 472, 126 N.E. 97, 98.

WAPENTAKE. In English law. A local division of the country; the name is in use north of the Trent to denote a hundred. The derivation of the name is said to be from "weapon" and "take," and indicates that the division was originally of a military character. Cowell; Brown.

Also a hundred court.

WAR. Hostile contention by means of armed forces, carried on between nations, states, or rulers, or between parties in the same nation or state. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 227, 233. A contest by force between two or more nations, carried on for any purpose or armed conflict of sovereign powers or declared and open hostilities, or the state of nations among whom there is an interruption of pacific relations, and a general contention by force, authorized by the sovereign. West v. Palmetto State Life Ins. Co., 202 S.C. 422, 25 S.E. 2d 475, 477, 478, 145 A.L.R. 1461.

"War" does not exist merely because of an armed attack by the military forces of another nation until it is a condition recognized or accepted by political authority of government which is attacked, either through an actual declaration of war or other acts demonstrating such position. Savage v. Sun Life Assur. Co. of Canada, D.C.La., 57 F.Supp. 620, 621.

Articles of War

See Article.

Civil War

An internecine war. A war carried on between opposing masses of citizens of the same country or nation. Before the declaration of independence, the war between Great Britain and the United Colonies was a civil war; but instantly on that event the war changed its nature, and became a public war between independent states. Hubbard v. Exp. Co., 10 R.I. 244; Brown v. Hiatt, 4 F.Cas. 387; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 667, 17 L.Ed. 459; Central R. & B. Co. v. Ward, 37 Ga. 515.

Imperfect War

See Perfect War.

Laws of War

This term denotes a branch of public international law, and comprises the body of rules and principles observed by civilized nations for the regulation of matters inherent in, or incidental to, the conduct of a public war; such, for example, as the relations of neutrals and belligerents, blockades, captures, prizes, truces and armistices, capitulations, prisoners, and declarations of war and peace.

Mixed War

A mixed war is one which is made on one side by public authority, and on the other by mere private persons. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N.Y.) 377, 415, 37 Am.Dec. 328.

Perfect War

Where whole nation is at war with another whole nation, but when the hostilities are limited as respects places, persons, and things, the war is termed "imperfect war." Bas v. Tingy, 4 Dall. 37, 40, 1 L.Ed. 731.

Private War

One between private persons, lawfully exerted by way of defense, but otherwise unknown in civil society. People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. (N.Y.) 576, 37 Am.Dec. 328.

Public War

Every contention by force, between two nations, in external matters, under the authority of their respective governments. Prize Cases, 2 Black, 666, 17 L.Ed. 459; People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. (N.Y.) 483, 37 Am.Dec. 328.

Solemn War

A war made in form by public declaration; a war solemnly declared by one state against another. Bas v. Tingy, 4 Dall. 37, 40, 1 L.Ed. 731.

War Office

In England. A department of state from which the sovereign issues orders to his forces. Wharton.

WAR POWER of federal government is the power to wage war successfully. Brown v. Wright, C. C.A.W.Va., 137 F.2d 484, 489; United States v. Maviglia, D.C.N.J., 52 F.Supp. 946, 947. It embraces every aspect of national defense, including protection of war materials as well as members of armed forces from injury and danger. Schueller v. Drum, D.C.Pa., 51 F.Supp. 383, 387; but direct interference with liberty and property and abridgement of constitutional guaranties of freedom can be justified under the "war power" only where the danger to the government is real, impending and imminent. Schueller v. Drum, D.C. Pa., 51 F.Supp. 383, 387.

WARABI. Dried wild ferns from Japan, used as a vegetable in a manner similar to spinach. Nippon Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 548, 549.

WARD. Guarding; care; charge; as, the ward of a castle; so in the phrase "watch and ward."

A division in the city of London committed to the special ward (guardianship) of an alderman.

A territorial division is adopted in most American cities by which the municipality is separated into a number of precincts or districts called. "wards" for purposes of police, sanitary regulations, prevention of fires, elections, etc. See State ex rel. Witkowski v. Gora, 195 Wis. 515, 218 N.W. 837, 839.

A corridor, room, or other division of a prison, hospital, or asylum.

A person, especially an infant, placed by authority of law under the care of a guardian.

Ward-in-chancery. An infant who is under the superintendence of the chancellor.

Ward-mote. In English law. A court kept in every ward in London, commonly called the "ward-mote court," or "inquest." Cowell.

Ward-patient. One who pays for his hospital care but receives free of charge medical and surgical care from members of the hospital staff. Sheridan v. Quarrier, 127 Conn. 279, 16 A.2d 479, 480.

Ward-penny. In old English law. Money paid to the sheriff or castellains, for the duty of watching and warding a castle. Spelman.

Ward-staff. In old records. A constable's or watchman's staff. Cowell.

Ward-wit. In old English law. Immunity or exemption from the duty or service of ward, or from contributing to such service. Spelman. Exemption from amercement for not finding a man to do ward. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 16.

Wardage. Money paid and contributed to watch and ward. Domesday.

Wards of admiralty. Seamen are sometimes thus designated, because, in view of their general improvidence and rashness, and though they are not technically incapable of contracting, their contracts are treated like those of fiduciaries and beneficiaries, and if there is any inequality in terms or any disproportion in the bargain or any sacrifice of rights of seamen which are not compensated by extraordinary benefits, the judicial interpretation of the transaction is that the bargain is unjust and that pro tanto, the bargain ought to be set aside as inequitable. See Garrett v. Moore-McCormack Co., Pa., 63 S.Ct. 246, 251, 317 U.S. 239, 87 L.Ed. 239.

Wards of court. Infants and persons of unsound mind. Davis' Committee v. Loney, 290 Ky. 644, 162 S.W.2d 189, 190. Their rights must be guarded jealously. Montgomery v. Erie R. Co., C.C.A.N.J., 97 F.2d 289, 292.

Wardship. In military tenures, the right of the lord to have custody, as guardian, of the body and lands of the infant heir, without any account of profits, until he was twenty-one or she sixteen. In socage the guardian was accountable for profits; and he was not the lord, but the nearest relative to whom the inheritance could not descend, and the wardship ceased at fourteen. In copyholds, the lord was the guardian, but was perhaps accountable for profits. Stim. Gloss. See 2 Bl. Comm. 67.

Wardship in chivalry. An incident to the tenure of knight-service.

Wardship in copyholds. The lord is guardian of his infant tenant by special custom.

WARDA. L. Lat.

A ward; an infant under wardship. Spelman.

In old Scotch law. An award; the judgment of a court.

WARDEN. A guardian; a keeper. This is the name given to various officers.

WARDEN OF THE CINQUE PORTS. In English law. The title of the governor or presiding officer of the Cinque Ports, (q. v.).

WARDS AND LIVERIES. In English law. The title of a court of record, established in the reign of Henry VIII. See Court of Wards and Liveries.

WARECTARE. L. Lat. In old English law. To fallow ground; or plow up land (designed for wheat) in the spring, in order to let it lie fallow for the better improvement. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 33; Cowell.

WAREHOUSE. A place adapted to the reception and storage of goods and merchandise. State v. Huffman, 136 Mo. 58, 37 S.W. 797; Owen v. Boyle, 22 Me. 47; Carter v. Bauman, C.C.A.Cal., 19 F.2d 855, 856. The term may include any structure used to hold goods, stores or wares temporarily or for a length of time. In re Miller Land & Livestock Co., D.C.Mont., 56 F.Supp. 34, 35.

WAREHOUSE BOOK. A book used by merchants to contain an account of the quantities of goods received, shipped, and remaining in stock.

WAREHOUSE RECEIPT. A receipt given by a warehouseman for goods received by him on storage in his warehouse. Merchants' Warehouse Co. v. McClain, C.C.Pa., 112 F. 789; Collins v. Ralli, 20 Hun (N.Y.) 255; Vannett v. Reilly-Herz Automobile Co., 42 N.D. 607, 173 N.W. 466, 467. It is evidence of title to goods thereby represented. Woldson v. Davenport Mill & Elevator Co., 169 Wash. 298, 13 P.2d 478, 480.

WAREHOUSE SYSTEM. A system of public stores or warehouses, established or authorized by law, called "bonded warehouses," in which an importer may deposit goods imported, in the custody of the revenue officers, paying storage, but not being required to pay the customs duties until the goods are finally removed for consumption in the home market, and with the privilege of withdrawing the goods from store for the purpose of re-exportation without paying any duties.

WAREHOUSEMAN. One engaged in business of receiving and storing goods of others for compensation or profit; person who receives goods and merchandise to be stored in his warehouse for hire; one who, as a business and for hire, keeps and stores goods of others. State ex rel. and for Use and Benefit of Cawrse v. American Surety Co. of New York, 148 Or. 1, 35 P.2d 487, 491.

The business is public or private as it may be conducted for storage of goods of general public or for those of certain persons. Tobacco Growers' Co-op. Ass'n v. Danville Warehouse Co., 144 Va. 456, 132 S.E. 482, 486; State, to Use of Hubbard & Moffitt Commission Co. v. Cochrane, 264 Mo. 581, 175 S.W. 599, 600.

WARNING. A pointing out of danger. Also a protest against incurring it. Keller v. Banks, 130 Me. 397, 156 A. 817, 821.

The purpose of a "warning" is to apprise a party of the existence of danger of which he is not aware to enable him to protect himself against it, and where the party is aware of the danger, the warning will serve no useful purpose and is unnecessary, and there is no duty to warn against risks which are open and obvious. Wiseman v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 214 Minn. 101, 7 N.W.2d 672, 675.

Under the old practice of the English court of probate, was a notice given by a registrar of the principal registry to a person who had entered a caveat, warning him, within six days after service, to enter an appearance to the caveat in the principal registry, and to set forth his interest, concluding with a notice that in default of his doing so the court would proceed to do all such acts, matters, and things as should be necessary. By the rules under the judicature acts, a writ of summons has been substituted for a warning. Sweet.

WARNISTURA. In old records. Garniture; furniture; provision. Cowell.

WARNOTH. In old English law. An ancient custom, whereby, if any tenant holding of the Castle of Dover failed in paying his rent at the day, he should forfeit double, and, for the second failure, treble, etc. Cowell.

WARP. A rope attached to some fixed point, used for moving a ship. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1297.

WARRANDICE. In Scotch law. Warranty; a clause in a charter or deed by which the grantor obliges himself that the right conveyed shall be effectual to the receiver. Ersk. Prin. 2, 3, 11. A clause whereby the grantor of a charter obliges himself to warrant or make good the thing granted to the receiver. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 113.

Absolute Warrandice

In contracts. To engage or promise that a certain fact or state of facts, in relation to the subject-matter, is, or shall be, as it is represented to be.

In conveyancing. To assure the title to property sold, by an express covenant to that effect in the deed of conveyance. To stipulate by an express covenant that the title of a grantee shall be good, and his possession undisturbed.

WARRANT, n. 1. A writ or precept from a competent authority in pursuance of law, directing the doing of an act, and addressed to an officer or person competent to do the act, and affording him protection from damage, if he does it. People v. Wood, 71 N.Y. 376.

2. Particularly, a writ or precept issued by a magistrate, justice, or other competent authority, addressed to a sheriff, constable, or other officer, requiring him to arrest the body of a person therein named, and bring him before the magistrate or court, to answer, or to be examined, touching some offense which he is charged with having committed. See People v. Baxter, City Ct., 32 N.Y.S.2d 325, 327. See, also, Bench-Warrant; Search-Warrant.

3. An order by which the drawer authorizes one person to pay a particular sum of money. Shawnee County v. Carter, 2 Kan. 130.

4. An authority issued to a collector of taxes, empowering him to collect the taxes extended on the assessment roll, and to make distress and sale of goods or land in default of payment.

5. A command of a council, board, or official whose duty it is to pass upon the validity and determine the amount of a claim against the municipality, to the treasurer to pay money out of any funds in the municipal treasury, which are or may become available for the purpose specified, to a designated person whose claim therefor has been duly adjusted and allowed. Roe v. Roosevelt Water Conservation Dist., 41 Ariz. 197, 16 P.2d 967, 970; State v. State Board of Examiners, 74 Mont 1, 238 P. 316, 328.

A "warrant" differs from a "bond" in that a bond is a "negotiable instrument", whereas a warrant is nonnegotiable and is subject at all times to the defenses it would be were it in the hands of the original payee, which is not the case with a negotiable bond. Adams v. McGill, Tex.Clv.App., 146 S.W.2d 332, 334.

6. In England, a dividend warrant or coupon. See Coupons.

Bench warrant. See Bench.

Death warrant. A warrant issued generally by the chief executive authority of a state, directed to the sheriff or other proper local officer or the warden of a jail, commanding him at a certain time to proceed to carry into execution a sentence of death imposed by the court upon a convicted criminal.

Distress warrant. See Distress.

Dividend warrant. In England, a coupon. See Coupons.

General warrant. A process which formerly issued from the state secretary's office in England to take up (without naming any persons) the author, printer, and publisher of such obscene and seditious libels as were specified in it. It was declared illegal and void for uncertainty by a vote of the house of commons on the 22d April, 1766. Wharton.

Land warrant. See that title.

Landlord's warrant. See Landlord.

Search warrant. See that title.

Warrant creditor. See Creditor.

Warrant in bankruptcy. A warrant issued, upon an adjudication in bankruptcy, directing the marshal to take possession of the bankrupt's property, notify creditors, etc.

Warrant of arrest. See Arrest.

Warrant of attorney. In practice. An instrument in writing, addressed to one or more attorneys therein named, authorizing them, generally, to appear in any court, or in some specified court, on behalf of the person giving it, and to confess judgment in favor of some particular person therein named, in an action of debt. It usually contains a stipulation not to bring any writ of error, or file a bill in equity, so as to delay him. 2 Burrill, Pr. 239; Treat v. Tolman, 51 C.C.A. 522, 113 F. 892. Such writing usually being given as security for obligation on which judgment was authorized, and in such procedure service of process was not essential. Bonnett-Brown Corporation v. Coble, 195 N.C. 491, 142 S.E. 772, 774.

Warrant of commitment. A written authority committing a person to custody.

Warrant of merchantability. Warranty that goods are reasonably fit for general purpose for which sold. Sperry Flour Co. v. De Moss, 141 Or. 440, 18 P.2d 242, 243, 90 A.L.R. 406.

Warrant officers. In the United States army, navy, coast and geodetic survey, coast guard, marine corps and air force, these are a class of inferior officers who hold their rank by virtue of a written warrant instead of a commission.

Warrant to sue and defend. In old practice. A special warrant from the crown, authorizing a party to appoint an attorney to sue or defend for him. 3 Bl.Comm. 25. A special authority given by a party to his attorney, to commence a suit, or to appear and defend a suit, in his behalf. These warrants are now disused, though formal entries of them upon the record were long retained in practice. 1 Burrill, Pr. 39.

WARRANTEE. A person to whom a warranty is made.

WARRANTIA CHARTLE. In old practice. Warranty of charter. A writ which lay for one who, being enfeoffed of lands or tenements, with a clause of warranty, was afterwards impleaded in an assize or other action in which he could not vouch to warranty. In such case, it might be brought against the warrantor, to compel him to assist the tenant with a good plea or defense, or else to render damages and the value of the land, if recovered against the tenant. Cowell; 3 BL Comm. 300.

WARRANTIA CUSTODUE. An old English writ, which lay for him who was challenged to be a ward to another, in respect to land said to be holden by knight•service; which land, when it was bought by the ancestors of the ward, was warranted free from such thraldom. The writ lay against the warrantor and his heirs. Cowell.

WARRANTIA DIEI. A writ which lay for a man who, having had a day assigned him personally to appear in court in any action in which he was sued, was in the mean time, by commandment, employed in the king's service, so that he could not come at the day assigned. It was directed to the justices that they might not record him in default for that day. Cowell.

WARRANTIZARE. In old conveyancing. To warrant; to bind one's self, by covenant in a deed of conveyance, to defend the grantee in his title and possession.

WARRANTIZARE EST DEFENDERE ET ACQUIETARE TENENTEM, QUI WARRANTUM VOCAVIT, IN SEISINA SUA; ET TENENS DE RE WARRANTI EXCAMBIUM HABEBIT AD VALENTIAM. Co.Litt. 365. To warrant is to defend and insure in peace the tenant, who calls for warranty, in his seisin; and the tenant in warranty will have an exchange in proportion to its value.

WARRANTOR. One who makes a warranty. Shep. Touch. 181.

WARRANTOR POTEST EXCIPERE QUOD QUERENS NON TENET TERRAM DE QUA PETIT WARRANTIAM, ET QUOD DONUM FUIT INSUFFICIENS. Hob. 21. A warrantor may object that the complainant does not hold the land of which he seeks the warranty, and that the gift was insufficient.

WARRANTY. A promise that a proposition of fact is true. The Fred Smartley, Jr., C.C.A.Va., 108 F.2d 603, 606.

Real Property Law

A real covenant by the grantor of lands, for himself and his heirs, to warrant and defend the title and possession of the estate granted, to the grantee and his heirs, whereby, either upon voucher, or judgment in the writ of warrantia chartce, and the eviction of the grantee by paramount title, the grantor was bound to recompense him with other lands of equal value. Co.Litt. 365a. See "Covenant."

Sales of Personal Property

A statement or representation made by the seller of goods, contemporaneously with and as a part of the contract of sale, though collateral to the express object of it, having reference to the character, quality, or title of the goods, by which he promises or undertakes that certain facts are or shall be as he then represents them. Schley v. Zalis, 172 Md. 336, 191 A. 563, 564; Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 104 S. W.2d 627, 632. A promise or agreement by seller that article sold has certain qualities or that seller has good title thereto. Chanin v. Chevrolet Motor Co., D.C.Ill., 15 F.Supp. 57, 58. A statement of fact respecting the quality or character of goods sold, made by the seller to induce the sale, and relied on by the buyer. Hercules Powder Co. v. Rich, C.C.A.Ark., 3 F.2d 12, 14; Van Horn v. Stautz, 297 Ill. 530, 131 N.E. 153, 154.

"Warranty" in sale of personalty ordinarily applies only between seller and immediate buyer, and does not give such buyer right to sue original seller. Timberland Lumber Co. v. Climax Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 61 F.2d 391, 392.

Contracts

An undertaking or stipulation, in writing, or verbally, that a certain fact in relation to the subject of a contract is or shall be as it is stated or promised to be. United Iron Works Co. v. Henryetta Coal & Mining Co., 62 Okl. 99, 162 P. 209, 210; Hurley-Mason Co. v. Stebbins, Walker & Spinning, 79 Wash. 366, 140 P. 381, 384, L.R.A.1915B, 1131, Ann.Cas.1916A, 948. An express or implied statement of something undertaken as part of contract but collateral to its object. Pauls Valley Milling Co. v. Gabbert, 182 Okl. 500, 78 P.2d 685, 686.

A warranty differs from a representation in that a warranty must always be given contemporaneously with, and as part of, the contract; whereas a representation precedes and induces to the contract. And, while that is their difference in nature, their difference in consequence or effect is this: that, upon breach of warranty, (or false warranty,) the contract remains binding, and damages only are recoverable for the breach; whereas, upon a false representation, the defrauded party may elect to avoid the contract, and recover the entire price paid. Brown. And see Griswold v. Morrison, 53 Cal.App. 93, 200 P. 62, 65.

The same transaction cannot be characterized as a warranty and a fraud at the same time. A warranty rests upon contract, while fraud, or fraudulent representations have no element of contract in them, but are essentially a tort. When judges or law-writers speak of a fraudulent warranty, the language is neither accurate nor perspicuous. If there is a breach of warranty, it cannot be said that the warranty was fraudulent, with any more propriety than any other contract can be said to have been fraudulent, because there has been a breach of it. On the other hand, to speak of a false representation as a contract or warranty, or as tending to prove a contract or warranty, is a perversion of language and of correct ideas. Rose v. Hurley, 39 Ind. 81; Boysen v. Petersen, 203 Iowa 1073, 211 N.W. 894, 895.

Insurance

A "warranty" in the law of insurance consists of a statement by insured upon the literal truth of which the validity of the contract depends. Braddock, by Smith, v. Pacific Woodmen Life Ass'n, 89 Utah 75, 54 P.2d 1189, 1192. Statement, made in insurance contract by insured, which is susceptible of no construction other than that parties mutually intended that policy should not be binding, unless such statement be literally true. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v. Wood, Tex. Civ.App., 79 S.W.2d 665, 668.

It is in the nature of a condition precedent and must appear on face of policy; or, if on another part of it, or on a paper physically attached to it, it must appear that the statements were intended to form part of policy; or, if on another paper, they must be so referred to in policy as clearly to indicate that the parties intended them to form a part of it, but it is not necessary that the statements in an application be set forth in the policy. City Bank & Trust Co. v. Commercial Casualty Co., La.App., 176 So. 27.

Warranty may be either "affirmative" or "promissory." The former affirms the existence of a fact at the time the policy is entered into, while the latter requires that something be done or not done after the policy has taken effect. Sentinel Life Ins. Co. v. Blackmer, C.C.A.Colo., 77 F.2d 347, 350.

General

Affirmative warranty. In the law of insurance, warranties may be either affirmative or promissory. Affirmative warranties may be either express or implied, but they usually consist of positive representations in the policy of the existence of some fact or state of things at the time, or previous to the time, of the making of the policy; they are, in general, conditions precedent, and if untrue, whether material to the risk or not, the policy does not attach, as it is not the contract of the insurer. Maupin v. Insurance Co., 53 W.Va. 557, 45 S.E. 1003; Orient Ins. Co. v. Van Zandt-Bruce Drug Co., 50 Okl. 558, 151 P. 323, 324. See, also, Insurance.

Collateral warranty. Existed when the heir's title was not derived from the warranting ancestor, and yet it barred the heir from claiming the land by any collateral title, upon the presumption that he might thereafter have assets by descent from or through the ancestor; and it imposed upon him the obligation of giving the warrantee other lands in case of eviction, provided he had assets. 2 Bl.Com. 301.

Continuing warranty. One which applies to the whole period during which the contract is in force; e. g., an undertaking in a charter-party that a vessel shall continue to be of the same class that she was at the time the charter-party was made.

Covenant of warranty. See Covenant.

Executory warranties. See Executory Warranties.

Express warranty. In contracts and sales, one created by the apt and explicit statements of the seller or person to be bound. Borrekins v. Bevan, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 36, 23 Am.Dec. 85; White v. Stelloh, 74 Wis. 435, 43 N.W. 99; Hausken v. Hodson-Feenaughty Co., 109 Wash. 606, 187 P. 319, 321. In the law of insurance, an agreement expressed in a policy, whereby the assured stipulates that certain facts relating to the risk are or shall be true, or certain acts relating to the same subject have been or shall be done. 1 Phil.Ins. (4th Ed.) p. 425; Petit v. German Ins. Co., C.C.W.Va., 98 F. 802; Insurance Co. v. Morgan, 90 Va. 290, 18 S.E. 191.

General warranty. The name of a covenant of warranty inserted in deeds, by which the grantor binds himself, his heirs, etc., to "warrant and forever defend" to the grantee, his heirs, etc., the title thereby conveyed, against the lawful claims of all persons whatsoever. Where the warranty is only against the claims of persons claiming "by, through, or under" the grantor or his heirs, it is called a "special warranty."

Implied warranty. When the law derives it by implication or inference from the nature of the transaction or the relative situation or circumstances of the parties. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 104 S.W.2d 627, 632.

Lineal warranty. In old conveyancing, the kind of warranty which existed when the heir derived title to the land warranted either from or through the ancestor who made the warranty.

Personal warranty. One available in personal actions, and arising from the obligation which one has contracted to pay the whole or part of a debt due by another to a third person. Flanders v. Seelye, 105 U.S. 718, 26 L.Ed. 1217.

Promissory warranty. In the law of insurance, a warranty which requires the performance or omission of certain things or the existence of certain facts after the beginning of the contract of insurance and during its continuance, and the breach of which will avoid the policy. See King v. Relief Ass'n, 35 App.Div. 58, 54 N.Y.S. 1057; McKenzie v. Insurance Co., 112 Cal. 548, 44 P. 922.

Special warranty. A clause of warranty inserted in a deed of lands, by which the grantor covenants, for himself and his heirs, to "warrant and forever defend" the title to the same, to the grantee and his heirs, etc., against all persons claiming "by, through, or under" the grantor or his heirs. If the warranty is against the claims of all persons whatsoever, it is called a "general" warranty.

Warranty deed. One which contains a covenant of warranty.

Warranty of fitness. Warranty by seller that goods sold are suitable for special purpose of buyer. Sperry Flour Co. v. De Moss, 141 Or. 440, 18 P.2d 242, 243, 90 A.L.R. 406.

Warranty, voucher to. In old practice. The calling a warrantor into court by the party warranted, (when tenant in a real action brought for recovery of such lands,) to defend the suit for him. Co.Litt. 101b.

WARREN. A term in English law for a place in which birds, fishes, or wild beasts are kept.

A franchise or privilege, either by prescription or grant from the king, to keep beasts and fowls of warren, which are hares, coneys, partridges, pheasants, etc.

Also any place to which such privilege extends. Mozley & Whiteley.

Free Warren

A franchise for the preserving and custody of beasts and fowls of warren. 2 Bl.Comm. 39, 417; Co.Litt. 233. This franchise gave the grantee sole right of killing, so far as his warren extended, on condition of excluding other persons. 2 Bl. Comm. 39.

WARSCOT. In Saxon law. A customary or usual tribute or contribution towards armor, or the arming of the forces.

WARTH. In old English law. A customary payment, supposed to be the same with ward-penny. Spelman; Blount.

WASH. A shallow part of a river or arm of the sea.

The sandy, rocky, gravelly, boulder-bestrewn part of a river bottom deposited on level land near mouth of a canyon representing rocks and gravel washed down by a mountain stream. Haack v. San Fernando Mission Land Co., 177 Cal. 140, 169 P. 1021, 1022.

A fermented wort from which spirit is distilled. Neal v. State, 154 Ark. 324, 242 S.W. 578, 579; Pack v. State, 116 Or. 416, 241 P. 390, 392.

WASH BANK. A bank composed of such substance that it is liable to be washed away by the action of the water thereon, so as to become unsafe to travelers on highway. Kerr v. Bougher, 16 Ohio App. 434, 437.

WASH SALE or WASHED SALE. In the language of the stock exchange, this term is applied to the operation of simultaneously buying and selling the same stock. In re Wettengel, C.C.A.3, 238 F. 798, 799. Also a fictitious kind of sale, disallowed on stock and other exchanges, in which a broker who has received orders from one person to buy and from another person to sell a particular amount or quantity of some particular stock or commodity simply transfers the stock or commodity from one principal to the other and pockets the difference, instead of executing both orders separately to the best advantage in each case, as is required by the rules of the different exchanges. U. S. v. Keough, D.C.Nev., 48 F.2d 246, 252.

WASHING–HORN. The sounding of a horn for washing before dinner. The custom was formerly observed in the Temple.

WASHINGTON, TREATY OF. A treaty signed on May 8, 1871, between Great Britain and the United States of America, with reference to certain differences arising out of the war between the northern and southern states of the Union, the Canadian fisheries, and other matters. Wharton.

WASHOUT SIGNAL. In railroad parlance. Emergency signal meaning to stop immediately. Stinson v. Aluminum Co. of America, C.C.A.Tenn., 141 F.2d 682, 684.

WASTE. An abuse or destructive use of property by one in rightful possession. Halifax Drainage Dist. of Volusia County v. Gleaton, 137 Fla. 397, 188 So. 374, 379. Spoil or destruction, done or permitted, to lands, houses, gardens, trees, or other corporeal hereditaments, by the tenant thereof, to the prejudice of the heir, or of him in reversion or remainder. 2 Bl.Comm. 281. Camden Trust Co. v. Handle, 132 N.J.Eq. 97, 26 A.2d 865, 869, 154 A.L.R. 602. A destruction or material alteration or deterioration of the freehold, or of the improvements forming a material part thereof, by any person rightfully in possession, but who has not the fee title or the full estate. Hayman v. Rownd, 82 Neb. 598, 118 N.W. 328, 45 L.R.A.(N.S.) 623; Thomas v. Thomas, 166 N.C. 627, 82 S.E. 1032, 1033, L.R.A.1915B, 219. An unreasonable or improper use, abuse, mismanagement, or omission of duty touching real estate by one rightfully in possession, which results in its substantial injury. Thayer v. Shorey, 287 Mass. 76, 191 N.E. 435, 437, 94 A.L.R. 307. Any unlawful act or omission of duty on the part of the tenant which results in permanent injury to the inheritance. It is the violation of an obligation to treat the premises in such manner that no harm be done to them, and that the estate may revert to those having an underlying interest, undeteriorated by any willful or negligent acts. Camden Trust Co. v. Handle, 130 N.J.Eq. 125, 21 A.2d 354, 358.

The early English doctrine was to the effect that anything which changed the character or nature of the land, notwithstanding the fact that it was an improvement thereto, constituted "waste." Whitehead v. Whitehead, Del.Orph., 181 A. 684, 685.

The primary distinction between "waste" and "trespass" is that in waste the injury is done by one rightfully in possession. Camden Trust Co. v. Handle, 132 N.J.Eq. 97, 26 A.2d 865, 867, 869.

Old English Criminal Law

A prerogative or liberty, on the part of the crown, of committing waste on the lands of felons, by pulling down their houses, extirpating their gardens, plowing their meadows, and cutting down their woods. 4 Bl.Comm. 385.

General

Commissive waste. Active or positive waste; waste done by acts of spoliation or destruction, rather than by mere neglect; the same as voluntary waste. See infra.

Double waste. See Double.

Equitable waste. Injury to a reversion or remainder in real estate, which is not recognized by the courts of law as waste, but which equity will interpose to prevent or remedy. Gannon v. Peterson, 193 Ill. 372, 62 N.E. 210, 55 L.R.A. 701; Crowe v. Wilson, 65 Md. 479, 5 A. 427, 57 Am.Rep. 343. Otherwise defined as an unconscientious abuse of the privilege of non-impeachability for waste at common law, whereby a tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, will be restrained from committing willful, destructive, malicious, or extravagant waste, such as pulling down houses, cutting timber of too young a growth, or trees planted for ornament, or for shelter of premises. Wharton.

Impeachment of waste. Liability for waste committed, or a demand or suit for compensation for waste committed upon lands or tenements by a tenant thereof who has no right to commit waste. On the other hand, a tenure "without impeachment of waste" signifies that the tenant cannot be called to account for waste committed.

Nul waste. "No waste." The name of a plea in an action of waste, denying the commission of waste, and forming the general issue.

Permissive waste. That kind of waste which is a matter of omission only, as by suffering a house to fall for want of necessary reparations. 2 Bl. Comm. 281; Willey v. Laraway, 64 Vt. 559, 25 A. 436; White v. Wagner, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 391, 7 Am.Dec. 674.

Voluntary waste. Active or positive waste; waste done or committed, in contradistinction to that which results from mere negligence, which is called "permissive" waste. 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2394. "Voluntary waste" is the willful destruction or carrying away of something attached to the freehold, and "permissive waste" is the failure to take reasonable care of the premises. Fisher's Ex'r v. Haney, 180 Ky. 257, 202 S.W. 495, 496. Voluntary or commissive waste consists of injury to the demised premises or some part thereof, when occasioned by some deliberate or voluntary act, as, for instance, the pulling down of a house or removal of floors, windows, doors, furnaces, shelves, or other things affixed to and forming part of the freehold. Regan v. Luthy, 11 N.Y.S. 709, 16 Daly 413. Contrasted with "permissive" waste.

Writ of waste. See that title.

WASTE-BOOK. A book used by merchants, to receive rough entries or memoranda of all transactions in the order of their occurrence, previous to their being posted in the journal. Otherwise called a "blotter."

WASTE WATER. Water that is actually wasted or not needed by the claimant thereto; water which, after it has served the purpose of the lawful claimant thereto, has been permitted to run to waste or to escape; and water which from unavoidable causes escapes from the ditches, canals, or other works of the lawful claimants. Rock Creek Ditch & Flume Co. v. Miller, 93 Mont. 248, 17 P.2d 1074, 1077, 89 A.L.R. 200. But water is not "waste water" so long as it remains on the land of the original appropriator. Barker v. Sonner, 135 Or. 75, 294 P. 1053, 1054.

WASTEL. A standard of quality of bread, made of the finest white flour. Cocket bread was slightly inferior in quality. The statute of 1266 mentions seven kinds of bread. See Assisa; Studer, Oak Book of Southhampton, Vol. II.

WASTING PROPERTY. Includes such property as leasehold interests; royalties; patent rights; interests in things the substance of which is consumed, such as mines, oil and gas wells, quarries and timber lands; interests in things which are consumed in the using or are worn out by use, such as machinery and farm implements. In re Pennock's Will, 285 N.Y. 475, 35 N.E.2d 177, 178.

WASTING TRUST. A trust in which the trustee may apply a part of the principal to make good a deficiency of income.

WASTORS. In old statutes. A kind of thieves.

WATCH, v. To keep guard; to stand as sentinel; to be on guard at night, for the preservation of the peace and good order.

WATCH, n. A body of constables on duty on any particular night.

A division of a ship's crew. At sea, the ship's company is divided into two watches, larboard and starboard, with a mate to command each. O'Hara v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 46 S.Ct. 157, 160, 269 U.S. 364, 70 L.Ed. 313. Also the division of the day into time periods of service of the officers and crew, and, by immemorial Anglo-Saxon maritime custom, the time period of a watch never exceeds four hours. The Denali, C.C.A.Wash., 105 F.2d 413, 416.

WATCH AND WARD. "Watch" denotes keeping guard during the night; "ward," by day.

WATCHMAN. An officer in cities and towns having duty to watch and care for inhabitants' property; he possesses generally the common-law authority of a constable to arrest on reasonable ground to suspect felony, though without proof of commission of felony. Harris v. Sevier, 19 La. App. 165, 138 So. 459, 460. Also one whose services are constant watching or patrolling of the particular building or contiguous group of buildings. Bartholome v. Baltimore Fire Patrol & Despatch Co., D.C.Md., 48 F.Supp. 98, 103.

WATER. As designating a commodity or a subject of ownership, this term has the same meaning in law as in common speech; but in another sense, and especially in the plural, it may designate a body of water, such as a river, a lake, or an ocean, or an aggregate of such bodies of water, as in the phrases "foreign waters," "waters of the United States," and the like.

Water is neither land nor tenement nor susceptible of absolute ownership. It is a movable thing and must of necessity continue common by the law of nature. It admits only of a transient usufructuary property, and if it escapes for a moment, the right to it is gone forever, the qualified owner having no legal power of reclamation. It is not capable of being sued for by the name of "water," nor by a calculation of its cubical or superficial measure; but the suit must be brought for the land which lies at the bottom covered with water. As water is not land, neither is it a tenement, because it is not of a permanent nature, nor the subject of absolute property. It is not in any possible sense real estate, and hence is not embraced in a covenant of general warranty. Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 518.

Coast Waters

See that title.

Developed Water

Water which is brought to the surface and made available for use by the party claiming the water. Mountain Lake Mining Co. v. Midway Irr. Co., 47 Utah 346, 149 P. 929, 933.

Flood Waters

Waters which escape from a water course in great volume and flow over adjoining lands in no regular channel. The fact that such errant waters make for themselves a temporary channel or follow some natural channel, gully, or depression does not affect their character as "flood waters" or give to the course which they follow the character of a natural "water course." Mogle v. Moore, Cal.App., 96 P.2d 147, 150, 151; Everett v. Davis, Cal.App., 107 P.2d 650, 654, 655.

Foreign Waters

Those belonging to another nation or country or subject to another jurisdiction, as distinguished from "domestic" waters. The Pilot, 1 C.C.A. 523, 50 F. 437.

Inland Waters

See Inland.

Navigable Waters

See Navigable.

Percolating Waters

Those which pass through the ground beneath the surface of the earth without any definite channel, and do not form a part of the body or flow, surface or subterranean, of any water-course. They may be either rain waters which are slowly infiltrating through the soil or waters seeping through the banks or the bed of a stream, and which have so far left the bed and the other waters as to have lost their character as a part of the flow of that stream. Vineland Irr. Dist. v. Azusa Irr. Co., 126 Cal. 486, 58 P. 1057, 46 L.R.A. 820; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585; Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S.E. 308, 311, 55 A.L.R. 1376; Flanigan v. State, 113 Misc. 91, 183 N.Y.S. 934, 935.

Private Waters

Non-navigable streams, or bodies of water not open to the resort and use of the general public, but entirely owned and controlled by one or more individuals. Piazzek v. Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Jefferson County, 119 Kan. 119, 237 P. 1059, 1060.

Public Waters

Such as are adapted for the purposes of navigation, or those to which the general public have a right of access, as distinguished from artificial lakes, ponds, and other bodies of water privately owned, or similar natural bodies of water owned exclusively by one or more persons. See Lamprey v. Metcalf, 52 Minn. 181, 53 N.W. 1139, 18 L.R.A. 670, 38 Am.St.Rep. 541; State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 617, 41 A. 1030, 43 L.R.A. 290, 67 Am.St. Rep. 648.

Subterranean Waters

Waters which lie wholly beneath the surface of the ground, and which either ooze and seep through the subsurface strata without pursuing any defined course or channel, (percolating waters,) or flow in a permanent and regular but invisible course, or lie under the earth in a more or less immovable body, as a subterranean lake.

Surface Waters

As distinguished from the waters of a natural stream, lake, or pond, surface waters are such as diffuse themselves over the surface of the ground, following no defined course or channel, and not gathering into or forming any more definite body of water than a mere bog or marsh. They generally originate in rains and melting snows, but the flood waters of a river may also be considered as surface waters if they become separated from the main current, or leave it never to return, and spread out over lower ground. See Schaefer v. Marthaler, 34 Minn. 487, 26 N.W. 726, 57 Am.Rep. 40; Crawford v. Rambo, 44 Ohio St. 279, 7 N.E. 429; San Gabriel Valley Country Club v. Los Angeles County, 182 Cal. 392, 188 P. 554, 556, 9 A.L.R. 1200; Thompson v. New Haven Water Co., 86 Conn. 597, 86 A. 585, 588, 45 L.R.A.,N.S., 457.

Water derived from rains and melting snows that is diffused over surface of the ground, and it continues to be such and may be impounded by the owner of the land until it reaches some well-defined channel in which it is accustomed to, and does, flow with other waters, or until it reaches some permanent lake or pond, whereupon it ceases to be "surface water" and becomes a "water course" or a "lake" or "pond," as the case may be. State v. Hiber, 48 Wyo. 172, 44 P.2d 1005, 1008, 1011.

Surplus Water

Water running off from ground which has been irrigated; water not consumed by the process of irrigation; water which the land irrigated will not take up. Wedgworth v. Wedgworth, 20 Ariz. 518, 181 P. 952, 954.

Tide Waters

See Tide.

Water Course

See that title infra.

Water Front

Land or land with buildings fronting on a body opf water. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 175 Cal. 575, 166 P. 333, 335.

Water Power

The water power to which a riparian owner is entitled consists of the fall in the stream when in its natural state, as it passes through his land, or along the boundary of it; or, in other words, it consists of the difference of level between the surface where the stream first touches his land, and the surface where it leaves it. McCalmont v. Whitaker, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 90, 23 Am.Dec. 102.

The use of water for power according to common understanding means its application to a water wheel to the end that its energy under the specified head and fall may be utilized and converted into available force. Holyoke Water Power Co. v. American Writing Paper Co., D.C.Mass., 17 F.Supp. 895, 898.

Water Right

A legal right, in the nature of a corporeal hereditament, to use the water of a natural stream or water furnished through a ditch or canal, for general or specific purposes, such as irrigation, mining, power, or domestic use, either to its full capacity or to a measured extent or during a defined portion of the time. See Hill v. Newman, 5 Cal. 445, 63 Am.Dec. 140; Murphy v. Kerr, D.C. N.M., 296 F. 536, 541; City of Los Angeles v. City of Glendale, Cal.App., 132 P.2d 574, 584. A usufruct in a stream consisting in the right to have the water flow so that some portion of it may be reduced to possession and be made private property of individual, and it is therefore the right to divert water from natural stream by artificial means and apply the same to beneficial use. Ronzio v. Denver & R. G. W. R. Co., C.C.A.Utah, 116 F.2d 604, 605. It includes right to change the place of diversion, storage, or use of water if rights of other water users will not be injured. Lindsey v. McClure, C.C.A.N.M., 136 F.2d 65, 70.

It was also said to be real property which may be sold and transferred separately from land on which it has been used. Federal Land Bank of Spokane v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 54 Idaho 161, 29 P.2d 1009, 1011.

Water Right Claim

A "water right claim," as filed with the state engineer, is merely a declaration of intention to create a water right. Washington State Sugar Co. v. Goodrich, 27 Idaho 26, 147 P. 1073, 1076.

Water-Bailiff

The title of an officer, in port towns in England, appointed for the searching of ships, Also of an officer belonging to the city of London, who had the supervising and search of the fish brought thither. Cowell.

Water-Bayley

In American law. An officer mentioned in the colony laws of New Plymouth, (A. D. 1671,) whose duty was to collect dues to the colony for fish taken in their waters. Probably another form of water-bailiff. Burrell.

Water-Gage

A sea-wall or bank to restrain the current and overflowing of the water; also an instrument to measure water. Cowell.

Water-Gang

A Saxon word for a trench or course to carry a stream of water, such as are commonly made to drain water out of marshes. Cowell.

Water-Gavel

In old records. A gavel or rent paid for fishing in or other benefit received from some river or water. Cowell; Blount.

Water-Logged

A vessel is "water-logged" when she becomes heavy and unmanageable on account of the leakage of water into the hold. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Globe Nay. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 236 F. 618, 625.

Water-Mark

See that title infra.

Water-Measure

In old statutes. A measure greater than Winchester measure by about three gallons in the bushel. Cowell.

Water-Packed

A "water-packed" bale of cotton is one to the lint of which water is added in such a manner that the weight is increased, or in which water-damaged cotton is placed, or the sampling sides of which are packed with lint cotton not so wet or water-damaged. Wallace v. Crosthwait, 196 Ala. 356, 71 So. 666, 667.

Waters of the United States

All waters within the United States which are navigable for the purposes of commerce, or whose navigation successfully aids commerce, are included in this term. The Daniel Ball, 6 F.Cas. 1161.

Waterscape

An aqueduct or passage for water.

WATER COURSE. A running stream of water; a natural stream fed from permanent or natural sources, including rivers, creeks, runs, and rivulets. There must be a stream, usually flowing in a particular direction, though it need not flow continuously. It may sometimes be dry. It must flow in a definite channel, having a bed or banks, and usually discharges itself into some other stream or body of water. It must be something more than a mere surface drainage over the entire face of the tract of land, occasioned by unusual freshets or other extraordinary causes. Leader v. Matthews, 192 Ark. 1049, 95 S.W.2d 1138, 1139; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 P. 587; Walt v. Phillips, 166 Ark. 163, 266 S.W. 71, 73; Turner v. Big Lake Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 62 S.W.2d 491, 493.

A "water course," in the legal meaning of the word, does not consist merely of the stream as it flows within the banks which form its channel in ordinary stages of water, but the stream still retains its character as a water course when, in times of ordinary high water, the stream extending beyond its own banks, is accustomed to flow down over the adjacent lowlands in a broader but still definable stream. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co, v. Hadley, 168 Okl. 588, 35 P.2d 463, 466.

Water flowing underground in a known and well defined channel is not "percolating water", but constitutes a "water course", and is governed by law applicable to "surface streams", rather than by law applicable to percolating waters. Bull v. Siegrist, 169 Or. 180, 126 P.2d 832, 834.

Natural Water Course

A natural stream flowing in a defined bed or channel; one formed by the natural flow of the water, as determined by the general superficies or conformation of the surrounding country, as distinguished from an "artificial" water course, formed by the work of man, such as a ditch or canal. See Barkley v. Wilcox, 86 N.Y. 140, 40 Am. Rep. 519; Hawley v. Sheldon, 64 Vt. 491, 24 Atl. 717, 33 Am.St.Rep. 941; Porter v. Armstrong, 129 N.C. 101, 39 S.E. 799; Gaskill v. Barnett, 52 Ind. App. 654, 101 N.E. 40, 42; Williams v. Bass, 179 Wis. 364, 191 N.W. 499, 500.

WATER-MARK. A mark indicating the highest point to which water rises, or the lowest point to which it sinks.

High-Water Mark

This term is properly applicable to tidal waters, and designates the line on the shore reached by the water at the high or flood tide. With reference to the waters of artificial ponds or lakes, created by dams in unnavigable streams, it denotes the highest point on the shores to which the dams can raise the water in ordinary circumstances. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 423, 14 L.Ed. 189; Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 437, 4 Am.Dec. 155; Brady v. Blackinton, 113 Mass. 245; Cook v. McClure, 58 N.Y. 444, 17 Am.Rep. 270. The high-water mark of a river, not subject to tide, is the line which the river impresses on the soil by covering it for sufficient periods to deprive it of vegetation, and to destroy its value for agriculture. Raide v. Dollar, 34 Idaho 682, 203 P. 469, 471; Union Sand & Grave] Co. v. Northcott, 102 W.Va. 519, 135 S.E. 589, 592; Tilden v. Smith, 94 Fla. 502, 113 So. 708, 712.

Low-Water Mark

That line on the shore of the sea which marks the edge of the waters at the lowest point of the ordinary ebb tide. See Stover v. Jack, 60 Pa. 342, 100 Am.Dec. 566; Gerrish v. Prop'rs of Union Wharf, 26 Me. 395, 46 Am.Dec. 568. The "low-water mark," of a river is the point to which the water recedes at its lowest stage. Union Sand & Gravel Co. v. Northcott, 102 W.Va. 519, 135 S.E. 589, 593; Joyce-Watkins Co. v. Industrial Commission, 325 Ill. 378, 156 N.E. 346, 348.

WATER ORDEAL. See Ordeal.

WATERED STOCK. Stock which is issued by a corporation as fully paid-up stock, when in fact the whole amount of the par value thereof has not been paid in. Harn v. Smith, 85 Okl. 137, 204 P. 642, 644; Bank of Commerce v. Goolsby, 129 Ark. 416, 196 S.W. 803, 807; Loud v. Solomon, 188 Mich. 7, 154 N.W. 73, 75. Stock issued as bonus or otherwise without consideration or issued for a less sum of money than par value, or issued for labor, services, or property which at a fair valuation is less than the par value. Thomason v. Miller, Tex.Civ.App., 4 S.W.2d 668, 670.

WATERWAY. Water course. Smith v. Cameron, 123 Or. 501, 262 P. 946, 948. See Water Course.

WAVESON. In old records. Such goods as, after a wreck, swim or float on the waves. Jacob.

WAX SCOT. A duty anciently paid twice a year towards the charge of wax candles in churches. Spelman.

WAY. A passage, path, road, or street. In a technical sense, a right of passage over land.

"Ways are appendant or appurtenant" when they are incident to an estate, one terminus being on the land of the party claiming it; while "way in gross" must be a personal right, not assignable nor inheritable. Safety Building & Loan Co. v. Lyles, 131 S.C. 540, 128 S.E. 724, 725. See "Easement."

Private Way

A right which a person has of passing over the land of another. Jones v. Venable, 120 Ga. 1, 47 S.E. 549; Kister v. Reeser, 98 Pa. 1, 42 Am.Rep. 608; Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 P. 879. In another sense (chiefly in New England) a private way is one laid out by the local public authorities for the accommodation of individuals and wholly or chiefly at their expense, but not restricted to their exclusive use, being subject, like highways, to the public easement of passage. Clark v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co., 24 N.H. 118; Butchers', etc., Ass'n v. Boston, 139 Mass. 290, 30 N.E. 94.

Right of Way

See that title.

Way of Necessity

Exists where land granted is completely environed by land of the grantor, or partially by his land and the land of strangers. The law implies from these facts that a private right of way over the grantor's land was granted to the grantee as appurtenant to the estate. Gwinn v. Gwinn, 77 W.Va. 281, 87 S.E. 371, 373; Violet v. Martin, 62 Mont. 335, 205 P. 221, 223. It is not merely one of convenience, and never exists where person may reach highway over his own land. Backhausen v. Mayer, 204 Wis. 286, 234 N.W. 904, 905, 74 A.L.R. 1245. And it cannot legally exist where neither the party claiming the way nor owner of land over which it is claimed, nor anyone under whom either of them claim, was ever seized of both tracts of land at same time. Bowles v. Chapman, 180 Tenn. 232, 175 S.W.2d 313, 314. It is not based on continuous adverse user, but arises by implication of law from necessities of case, and ceases when necessity therefor ceases. Waubun Beach Ass'n v. Wilson, 274 Mich. 598, 265 N.W. 474, 478, 103 A.L.R. 983.

The extent of a "way of necessity" is a way such as is required for complete and beneficial use of land to which the way is impliedly attached. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Yarian, Ind., 219 Ind. 477, 39 N.E.2d 604, 606, 139 A.L.R. 455.

WAY-BILL. A writing in which is set down the names of passengers who are carried in a public conveyance, or the description of goods sent with a common carrier by land. Wharton.

WAY-GOING CROP. A crop of grain sown by a tenant for a term certain, during his tenancy, but which will not ripen until after the expiration, of his lease. In the absence of an express agreement to the contrary tenant is entitled thereto. Commonwealth v. Peterman, 130 Pa.Super. 497, 198 A. 687, 688.

WAYLEAVE. A right of way over or through land for the carriage of minerals from a mine or quarry. It is an easement, being a species of the class called "rights of way," and is generally created by express grant or reservation. Sweet.

WAYNAGIUM. Implements of husbandry. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, c. 5, p. 268.

WAYS AND MEANS. In a legislative body, the "committee on ways and means" is a committee appointed to inquire into and consider the methods and sources for raising revenue, and to propose means for providing the funds needed by the government.

WAYWARDENS. The English highway acts provide that in every parish forming part of a highway district there shall annually be elected one or more waywardens. The waywardens so elected, and the justices for the county residing within the district, form the highway board for the district. Each waywarden also represents his parish in regard to the levying of the highway rates, and in questions arising concerning the liability of his parish to repairs, etc. Sweet.

WEALD. Sax. A wood; the woody part of a country.

WEALREAF. In old English law. The robbing of a dead man in his grave.

WEALTH. All material objects, capable of satisfying human wants, desires, or tastes, having a value in exchange, and upon which human labor has been expended; e., which have, by such labor, been either reclaimed from nature, extracted or gathered from the earth or sea, manufactured from raw materials, improved, adopted, or cultivated.

"The aggregate of all the things, whether material or immaterial, which contribute to comfort and enjoyment, which cannot be obtained without more or less labor, and which are objects of frequent barter and sale, is what we usually call `wealth.' " Bowen, Pol. Econ. See Branham v. State, 96 Ga. 307, 22 S.E. 957.

WEAPON. An instrument of offensive or defensive combat, or anything used, or designed to be used, in destroying, defeating or injuring an enemy. Perry v. Commonwealth, 286 Ky. 587, 151 S.W.2d 377, 379; People ex rel. Griffin v, Hunt, 150 Misc. 163, 270 N.Y.S. 248. Something to fight with. Highsaw v. Creech, 17 Tenn.App. 573, 69 S.W.2d 249.

The term is chiefly used, in law, in the statutes prohibiting the carrying of "concealed" or "deadly" weapons. See those titles. And see also "Offensive."

WEAR, or WEIR. A great dam or fence made across a river, or against water, formed of stakes interlaced by twigs of osier, and accommodated for the taking of fish, or to convey a stream to a mill. Cowell; Jacob.

WEAR AND TEAR. "Natural wear and tear" means deterioration or depreciation in value by ordinary and reasonable use of the subject-matter. Green v. Kelly, 20 N.J.L. 548.

WEARING APPAREL. As generally used in statutes, refers not merely to a person's outer clothing, but covers all articles usually worn, and includes underclothing. Arnold v. U. S., 13 S.Ct. 406, 147 U.S. 494, 37 L.Ed. 253. All articles of dress generally worn by persons in the calling and condition of life and in the locality of the person in question. In re Steimes' Estate, 150 Misc. 279, 270 N.Y.S. 339.

WEATHERING. Consists in subjecting raw nat. ural gasoline to the atmosphere in open tanks until by evaporation, sometimes accelerated by steam coils, the required vapor pressure or vapor tension of the remaining liquid is had. Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., D.C.Del., 28 F.2d 218.

WED. Sax. A covenant or agreement. Cowell. A pledge. Jenks, Hist. E. L. 13.

WEDBEDRIP. Sax. In old English law. A customary service which tenants paid to their lords, in cutting down their corn, or doing other harvest duties; as if a covenant to reap for the lord at the time of his bidding or commanding. Cowell.

WEDLOCK. As used in the phrase "born out of wedlock" in Uniform Illegitimacy Act, means the ceremony or state of marriage or status of husband and wife and is equivalent to matrimony but does not include status of wife and her paramour. State v. Coliton, N.D., 73 N.D. 582, 17 N.W.2d 546, 549, 156 A.L.R. 1403.

WEEK. A period of seven consecutive days of time; and, in some uses, the period beginning with Sunday and ending with Saturday. See Leach v. Burr, 23 S.Ct. 393, 188 U.S. 510, 47 L.Ed. 567; Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. 361, 7 L.Ed. 882; United States v. Southern Pac. Co., C.C.A. Utah, 209 F. 562, 567; Progressive Building and Loan Ass'n v. McIntyre, 169 Tenn. 491, 89 S.W.2d 336, 337.

Words "two weeks" mean fourteen days. Fisher v. Booher, 269 Ky. 501, 107 S.W.2d 307, 309.

WEEK-WORK. In early English times, the obligation of a tenant to work two or three days in every week for his lord, during the greater part of the year, and four or five during the summer months. 1 Poll. & Maitl. 349.

WEHADING. In old European law. The judicial combat, or duel; the trial by battel.

WEIGHAGE. In English law. A duty or toll paid for weighing merchandise. It is called "tronage" for weighing wool at the king's beam, or "pesage" for weighing other avoirdupois goods. 2 Chit, Com.Law, 16.

WEIGHT. A measure of heaviness or ponderosity; and in a metaphorical sense influence, effectiveness, or power to influence judgment or conduct. The quantity of heaviness, the quality of being heavy, the degree or extent of downward pressure under the influence of gravity, or the quantity of matter as estimated by the balance or scale. Dwight & Lloyd Sintering Co. v. American Ore Reclamation Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 263 F. 315, 316.

Gross Weight

The whole weight of goods and merchandise, including the dust and dross, and also the chest or bag, etc., upon which tare and tret are allowed.

Miner's Weight

Such quantity of mine-run material, as operators and miners may, from time to time, agree as being necessary or sufficient to produce a ton of prepared coal. Drake v. Berry, 259 Pa. 8, 102 A. 315, 320.

WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE. The balance of preponderance of evidence; the inclination of the greater amount of credible evidence, offered in a trial, to support one side of the issue rather than the other.

The "weight" or "preponderance of proof" is a phrase constantly used, the meaning of which is well understood and easily defined. It indicates clearly to the jury that the party having the burden of proof will be entitled to their verdict, if, on weighing the evidence in their minds, they shall find the greater amount of credible evidence sustains the issue which is to be established before them. Haskins v. Haskins, 9 Gray, Mass., 393. Weight is not a question of mathematics, but depends on its effect in inducing belief. It often happens that an uncorroborated witness may tell a story so natural and reasonable, and in manner so sincere and honest, as to command belief, though contradicted by others. Braunschweiger v. Waits, 179 Pa. 47, 36 A. 155, 156. "Weight of proof" means greater amount of credible evidence and is synonymous with "preponderance of proof." Haskins v. Haskins, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 390, 393. For a contrary holding, see Shinn v. Tucker, 37 Ark. 580, 588. See, also, Preponderance.

WEIR. A fence or an inclosure of twigs, set in a stream to catch fish. Pub.St.Mass. p. 1297; Treat v. Chipman, 35 Me. 38.

WELDING. The art, practiced immemorially, of uniting two pieces of metal in one piece by heating those portions which are to be welded to a temperature at which they become plastic, and then pressing them strongly together, so as to. effect a union. Thomson Spot Welder Co. v. Ford Motor Co., 44 S.Ct. 533, 534, 265 U.S. 445, 68 L.Ed. 1098.

WELFARE. Well-doing or well-being in any respect; the enjoyment of health and common blessings of life; exemption from any evil or calamity; prosperity; happiness. Wiseman v. Tanner, D.C. Wash., 221 F. 694, 698.

WELFARE OF CHILD. Under statutes requiring in awarding custody of minor that "welfare of child," be guide, parents need only be honest and respectable, with disposition and capacity to maintain and educate child. In re Bourquin, 88 Mont. 118, 290 P. 250, 251. The "welfare of a child", is gauged by father's means and station in life and does not contemplate that child be taken from father because another can give child more in a material way. Starr v. Gorman, 136 N.J.L. 105, 40 A.2d 564, 565.

WELL, adj.

Marine Insurance

A term used as descriptive of the safety and soundness of a vessel, in a warranty of her condition at a particular time and place; as, "warranted well at _____ on _____."

Old Reports

Good, sufficient, unobjectionable in law; the opposite of "ill."

WELL, n. A hole or shaft sunk into the earth in order to obtain a fluid, such as water, oil, brine, or natural gas, from a subterranean supply. Loosely, any shaft or pit dug or bored in earth, or any space so constructed as to suggest or be likened to, a well for water; a pit or hole in the ground or a hollow cylinder built in such hole; or a shaft or excavation in mining. Seismograph Service Corporation v. Mason, 193 Okl. 623, 145 P.2d 967, 970.

Completed Well

In oil prospecting leases, a well drilled to the formation or sand in which oil in district in question is usually and commonly found. Kies v. Williams, 190 Ky. 596, 228 S.W. 40, 41.

WELL-BORN MEN. A tribunal in New Amsterdam (New York). 1 Fiske, Dutch and Quaker Colonies 238.

WELL KNOWING. A phrase used in pleading as the technical expression in laying a scienter, (q. v.).

WELSH MORTGAGE. See Mortgage.

WELSHING. Receiving a sum of money or valuable thing, undertaking to return the same or the value thereof together with other money, if an event (for example, the result of a horse-race) shall be determined in a certain manner, and at the time of receiving the deposit intending to cheat and defraud the depositor. Coldr. & Hawks. Gambling 303. The crime is larceny at common law.

WELSHER. One who at a race track makes bets or receives money to be bet and absconds without paying his losses or returning money entrusted to him. People v. Monroe, 349 Ill. 270, 182 N.E. 439, 443, 85 A.L.R. 605.

WEN. An indolent encysted tumor of the skin, especially a sebaceous cyst. Life & Casualty Ins. Co. v. King, 137 Tenn. 685, 195 S.W. 585, 589.

WEND. In old records. A large extent of ground, comprising several juga; a perambulation; a circuit. Spelman; Cowell.

WEOTUMA. The purchase price of a wife among the heathen Germans. 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 77.

WERA, or WERE. The estimation or price of a man, especially of one slain. In the criminal law of the Anglo-Saxons, every man's life had its value, called a "were," or "capitis cestimatio."

WEREGELT THEF. Sax. In old English law. A robber who might be ransomed. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 13.

WEREGILD, or WERGILD. This was the price of homicide, or other atrocious personal offense, paid partly to the king for the loss of a subject, partly to the lord for the loss of a vassal, and partly to the next of kin of the injured person. In the Anglo-Saxon laws, the amount of compensation varied with the degree or rank of the party slain. Brown. See Angild; Angylde; Assithment.

WESTMINSTER THE FIRST, STATUTE OF. The statute 3 Edw. I., A. D. 1275. This statute, which deserves the name of a code rather than an act, is divided into fifty-one chapters. Without extending the exemption of churchmen from civil jurisdiction, it protects the property of the church from the violence and spoliation of the king and the nobles, provides for freedom of popular elections, because sheriffs, coroners, and conservators of the peace were still chosen by the freeholders in the county court, and attempts had been made to influence the election of knights of the shire, from the time when they were instituted. It contains a declaration to enforce the enactment of Magna Charta against excessive fines, which might operate as perpetual imprisonment; enumerates and corrects the abuses of tenures, particularly as to marriage of wards; regulates the levying of tolls, which were imposed arbitrarily by the barons and by cities and boroughs; corrects and restrains the powers of the king's escheator and other officers; amends the criminal law, putting the crime of rape on the footing to which it has been lately restored, as a most grievous, but not capital, offense; and embraces the subject of procedure in civil and criminal matters, introducing many regulations to render it cheap, simple, and expeditious. 1 Camp. Lives Ld. Ch. p. 167; 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 9, p. 107. Certain parts of this act are repealed by St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125. Wharton.

WESTMINSTER THE SECOND, STATUTE OF. The statute 13 Edw. I. St. 1, A. D. 1285, otherwise called the "Statute de Donis Conditionalibus." See 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 10, p. 163. Certain parts of this act are repealed by St. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 64, and St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125. Wharton.

Widow's Quarantine

In old English law. The space of forty days after the death of a man who died seised of lands, during which his widow might remain in her husband's capital mansion-house, without rent, and during which time her dower should be assigned. 2 Bl.Comm. 135. See Vannoy v. Green, 206 N.C. 77, 173 S.E. 277.

Widow's Terce

In Scotch law. The right which a wife has after her husband's death to a third of the rents of lands in which her husband died infeft; dower. Bell.

Year of Mourning

See that title, and Annus Luctus.

WIDOWER. A man who has lost his wife by death and has not married again. Abrams v. Unknown Heirs of Rice, 317 Mo. 216, 295 S.W. 83, 85.

WIDOWHOOD. The state or condition of being a widow, or, sometimes, a widower. An estate is sometimes settled upon a woman "during widowhood," which is expressed in Latin, "durante viduitate."

WIENER. A small sausage of unknown content commonly called a "hot dog." State v. Shoaf, 179 N.C. 744, 102 S.E. 705, 9 A.L.R. 426.

WIFA. L. Lat. In old European law. A mark or sign; a mark set up on land, to denote an exclusive occupation, or to prohibit entry. Spelman.

WIFE. A woman united to a man by marriage; a woman who has a husband living and undivorced. The correlative term is "husband." Davis v. Bass, 188 N.C. 200, 124 S.E. 566, 568; Estes v. Merrill, 121 Ark. 361, 181 S.W. 136, 137; Ex parte Suzanna, D.C.Mass., 295 F. 713, 714.

Workmen's Compensation Laws should be strictly interpreted where rights of legal wife as against putative wife would be defeated or lessened by liberal interpretation, and, as so interpreted, terms "wife" and "widow" within compensation law do not include wife of putative marriage. Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills v. Fernandez, La. App., 159 So. 339, 345.

"Examination of wife," see Private Examination.

WIFE AND CHILDREN. A conveyance or devise by a man to his wife and children will be presumed, in the absence of language indicating a contrary purpose, to be to wife for life, with remainder to her and grantor's or testator's children. Sower v. Lillard, 207 Ky. 283, 269 S.W. 330, 331.

WIFE'S EQUITY. When a husband is compelled to seek the aid of a court of equity for the purpose of obtaining the possession or control of his wife's estate, that court will recognize the right of the wife to have a suitable and reasonable provision made, by settlement or otherwise, for herself and her children, out of the property thus brought within its jurisdiction. This right is called the "wife's equity," or "equity to a settlement." See 2 Kent, Comm. 139.

WIFE'S PART. See Legitime.

WIGREVE. In old English law. The overseer of a wood. Cowell.

WILD ANIMALS (or animals ferns naturce). Animals of an untamable disposition; animals in a state of nature.

WILD FOWL. Any large eatable bird of a wild nature. Crabtree v. State, 123 Ark. 68, 184 S.W. 430.

WILD LAND. Land in a state of nature, as distinguished from improved or cultivated land. Clark v. Phelps, 4 Cow., N.Y., 203. Land in a wilderness state, not used in connection with improved estates. Central Maine Power Co. v. Rollins, 126 Me. 299, 138 A. 170, 174. When land is contiguous to improved and cultivated land, and commonly used therewith for fuel, fencing, repairs, or pasturing, it no longer has the character of "wild land." Holden v. Page, 107 A. 492, 494, 118 Me. 242.

WILD WELL. In the parlance of men in the gas industry, a gas well wherein the gas pipe develops a leak at a point beneath the surface of ground with the result that large amounts of gas escape. Mitchell v. Mitchell Drilling Co., 154 Kan. 117, 114 P.2d 841, 842.

WILD'S CASE, RULE IN. A devise to B. anc his children or issue, B. having no issue at the time of the devise, gives him an estate tail; but, if he have issue at the time, B. and his children take joint estates for life. 6 Coke, 16b; Tudor, Lead. Cas. Real Prop. 542, 581.

WILL, v. An auxiliary verb commonly having the mandatory sense of "shall" or "must." Tennessee Cent. R. Co. v. Morgan, 132 Tenn. 1, 175 S. W. 1148, 1153. State v. Summers, Mo.App., 281 S.W. 123, 124. It is a word of certainty, while the word "may" is one of speculation and uncertainty. Carson v. Turrish, 140 Minn. 445, 168 N.W. 349, 352, L.R.A.1918F, 154.

WILL, n. Wish; desire; pleasure; inclination; choice; the faculty of conscious, and especially of deliberate, action. State v. Schwab, 109 Ohio St. 532, 143 N.E. 29, 31. When a person expresses his "will" that a particular disposition be made of his property, his words are words of command, Temple v. Russell, 251 Mass. 231, 146 N.E. 679, 680, 49 A.L.R. 1, and the word "will" as so used is mandatory, comprehensive, and dispositive in nature, Mastellar v. Atkinson, 94 Kan. 279, 146 P. 367, 368, Ann.Cas.1917B, 502.

Law of Wills

The legal expression or declaration of a person's mind or wishes as to the disposition of his property, to be performed or take effect after his death. Swinb. Wills, § 2; Thomas v. House, 145 Va. 742, 134 S.E. 673, 674; In re McCune's Estate, 265 Pa. 523, 109 A. 156, 157; Krause v. Krause, 113 Neb. 22, 201 N.W. 670, 673. A revocable instrument by which a person makes disposition of his property to take effect after his death. Howard's Ex'r v. Dempster, 246 Ky. 153, 54 S.W.2d 660, 661. Any instrument whereby a person makes a disposition of his property to take effect after his death. Todd v. Williams' Adm'x, 264 Ky. 788, 95 S.W.2d 593, 596. A written instrument executed with the formalities of law, whereby a person makes a disposition of his property to take effect after his death. Tax Commission of Ohio v. Parker, 117 Ohio St. 215, 158 N.E. 89, 90.

To constitute "will," intention must appear that writer by document itself intended to make disposition of property effective only after death. In re Button's. Estate, 209 Cal. 325, 287 P. 964, 967.

A "will" is not a sheet of paper, nor a number of sheets or pages, but consists of the words written thereon. In re Golden's Will, 165 Misc. 205, 300 N.Y.S. 737, 738. And the form of an instrument is of little consequence in determining whether it is a will, but if it is executed with formalities required by statute, and if it is to operate only after death of maker, it is a "will". In re Fowle's Estate, 292 Mich. 500, 290 N.W. 883, 885.

Instruments conveying a present interest are deeds, and not wills, Jung v. Petermann, Tex.Civ.App., 194 S.W. 202, 205; Moss v. Hodges, 294 Ky. 677, 172 S.W.2d 584, 585; for wills pass no interest until after the death of the maker; Willis v. Fiveash, Tex.Civ.App., 297 S.W. 509, 510; Sims v. Brown, 252 Mo. 58, 158 S.W. 624, 627. An instrument, although in form of a bill or note, which is intended to have no operation until death of maker, is not "contractual" but is of the nature of a "will." In re Murphy's Estate, 193 Wash. 400, 75 P.2d 916, 924.

"Codicil" to will is distinguished from new "will," in that the latter revokes the first in its entirety unless otherwise provided therein. In re Bissell's Estate, 302 Pa. 27, 153 A. 692, 694.

The distinction between a "will" and a "power of appointment" Is that a will concerns the estate of the testator, while an appointment under a power concerns that of the donor of the power. Thompson v. Pew, 214 Mass. 520, 102 N.E. 122.

The difference between a will and a trust is that a will operates from the moment of death, while a trust operates in pra?senti to a certain extent. Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

A gift inter vivos is distinguishable from a will in that such a gift may be made by parol and, upon the acceptance of the gift by the donee, the gift is irrevocable by the donor, while ordinarily a will is required to be in writing, and usually is made in view of the fact of death, and is ineffective until the death of the testator and the admission of the will to probate. York v. Trigg, 87 Old. 214, 209 P. 417, 423.

The term will, as an expression of the final disposition of one's property, is confined to the English laws and those countries which derive their jurisprudence from that source. The term testamentum, or testament, is exclusively used in the Roman civil law and by the continental writers upon that subject.

A will, when it operates upon personal property, is sometimes called a "testament," and when upon real estate, a "devise;" but the more general and the more popular denomination of the instrument embracing equally real and personal estate is that of "last will and testament." 4 Kent, Comm. 501; In re Kiltz's Will, 125 Misc.Rep. 475, 211 N.Y.S. 450, 461.

Criminal Law

The power of the mind which directs the action of a man.

Scotch Practice

That part or clause of a process which contains the mandate or command to the officer. Bell.

General

Ambulatory will. A changeable will (ambulatoria voluntas), the phrase merely denoting the power which a testator possesses of altering his will during his life-time. See Hattersley v. Bissett, 50 N.J.Eq. 577, 25 A. 332.

Conditional will. A conditional disposition is one which depends upon the occurrence of some uncertain event, by which it is either to take effect or to be defeated. Rogers v. Mosier, 121 Okl. 213, 245 P. 36, 38. If the happening of an event named in a will is the reason for making the will, it is "unconditional"; but, if the testator intends to dispose of his property in case the event happens, the will is "conditional." Ferguson v. Ferguson, Tex.Civ.App., 288 S.W. 833, 835.

Conjoint will. See Joint Will, infra.

Counter wills. Another name for "double," "mutual," or "reciprocal" wills. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189.

Double will. Called also a "counter," "mutual," or "reciprocal" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189. See Double.

Estate at will. This estate entitles the grantee or lessee to the possession of land during the pleasure of both the grantor and himself, yet it creates no sure or durable right, and is bounded by no definite limits as to duration. It must be at the reciprocal will of both parties, (for, if it be at the will of the lessor only, it is a lease for life,) and the dissent of either determines it. Wharton.

Holographic will. One that is entirely written, dated, and signed by the hand of the testator himself. In re Hail's Estate, 106 Okl. 124, 235 P. 916, 917; In re Cole's Will, 171 N.C. 74, 87 S.E. 962; Civ.Code La. art. 1588. Sometimes spelled "olographic." Succession of Cunningham, 142 La. 701, 77 So. 506, 510. The statutes in the different states differ to some extent, but agree substantially with the English statute of Charles II. Compliance with the precise terms of the statutory definition or requirements is commonly insisted upon with the utmost meticulosity. In re Thorn's Estate, 183 Cal. 512, 192 P. 19, 20.

Joint and mutual will. One executed jointly by two persons with reciprocal provisions, which shows on its face that the devises are made one in consideration of the other. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189; Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S.E. 572, 573.

Joint will. One where the same instrument is made the will of two or more persons and is jointly signed by them. Such wills are usually executed to make testamentary disposition of joint property. Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S.E. 572, 573; Campbell v. Dunkelberger, 172 Iowa 385, 153 N.W. 56, 58. A joint or conjoint will is a testamentary instrument executed by two or more persons, in pursuance of a common intention, for the purpose of disposing of their several interests in property owned by them in common, or of their separate property treated as a common fund, to a third person or persons. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N.C. 85, 91 S.E. 696.

Mutual will. One in which two or more persons make mutual or reciprocal provisions in favor of each other. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N.C. 85, 91 S.E. 696. "Mutual wills" are the separate wills of two persons which are reciprocal in their provisions, and such a will may be both joint and mutual. Campbell v. Dunkelberger, 172 Iowa 385, 153 N.W. 56, 58; Carle v. Miles, 89 Kan. 540, 132 P. 146, Ann.Cas.1915A, 363; Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S.E. 572, 573. Sometimes called a "reciprocal," "double," or "counter" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189.

Mystic will. See Testament.

Non-intervention will. In some jurisdictions, one authorizing the executor to act without bond and to manage, control, and settle the estate without the intervention of any court whatsoever. In re MacDonald's Estate, 29 Wash. 422, 428, 69 P. 1111.

Nuncupative will. See that title.

Reciprocal will. One in which two or more persons make mutual or reciprocal provisions in favor of each other. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N.C. 85, 91 S.E. 696. Also known as a "mutual," "double," or "counter" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189.

Self-proved wills. A will which eliminates some of the formalities of proof by execution in compliance with statute. It is made self-proved by affidavit of attesting witnesses in the form prescribed by statute. Most statutes provide that, unless contested, such a will may be admitted to probate without testimony of subscribing witnesses.

Statute of wills. See Wills Act, infra.

Unofficious will. In the civil law, testamentum inofficium. One made in disregard of natural obligations as to inheritance. Stein v. Wilzinski, 4 Redf.Sur. (N.Y.) 450; 2 Bla.Comm. 502; Hadley, Rom.L. 317. It has no place in the common law; 1 Fost. & F. 578.

WILL CONTEST. A proceeding sui generis, a suit in rem, having for its purpose determination of question of whether there is or is not a will. 50, 51. Any kind of litigated controversy concerning the eligibility of an instrument to probate as distinguished from validity of the contents of the will. In re Hesse's Estate, 62 Ariz. 273, 157 P.2d 347, 349, WILLA. In Hindu law. The relation between a master or patron and his freedman, and the relation between two persons who had made a reciprocal testamentary contract. Wharton.

WILLFUL. Proceeding from a conscious motion of the will; voluntary. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 160 Ky. 50, 169 S.W. 511, 513.

Intractable; having a headstrong disposition to act by the rule of contradiction. Bersch v. Morris & Co., 106 Kan. 800, 189 P. 934, 935, 9 A.L.R. 1374. Obstinate; perverse. Lynch v. Commonwealth, 131 Va. 762, 109 S.E. 427, 428; Jones v. State, 7 Ala.App. 180, 62 So. 306, 307.

Intending the result which actually comes to pass; designed; intentional; not accidental or involuntary. Garrett v. Commonwealth, 215 Ky. 484, 285 S.W. 203, 204; State v. Muzzy, 87 Vt. 267, 88 A. 895, 896; Roseville Trust Co. v. American Surety Co. of New York, 91 N.J.Law, 588, 103 A. 182; State v. Lehman, 131 Minn. 427, 155 N.W. 399, Ann.Cas.1917D, 615; United States v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., La., 58 S.Ct. 533, 535, 303 U.S. 239, 82 L.Ed. 773.

The word "wilful" is a word of many meanings depending on the context in which it is used. Zimberg v. United States, C.C.A.Mass., 142 F.2d 132, 137.

A "willful" act may be described as one done intentionally, knowingly, and purposely, without justifiable excuse, as distinguished from an act done carelessly, thoughtlessly, heedlessly, or inadvertently. Lobdell Car Wheel Co. v. Subielski, 125 A. 462, 464, 2 W.W.Harr. (Del.) 462.

A willful differs essentially from a negligent act. The one is positive and the other negative. Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 38 N.Y.Super.Ct. 317; Thayer v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 21 N.M. 330, 154 P. 691, 694. Simple negligence arises merely from heedlessness, and consists simply of facts of nonfeasance, and is therefore incompatible with willfulness, which comprises acts of aggressive wrong, Stauffer v. Schlegel, 74 Ind.App. 431, 129 N.E. 44, 46; and presupposes a conscious purpose to injure, In re Cunningham, D.C.N.Y., 253 F. 663, 665; Ft. Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction Co. v. Justus, 180 Ind. 464, 115 N.E. 585, 587; Brittain v. Southern Ry. Co., 167 N.C. 642, 83 S.E. 702, 703.

"Willfulness" implies an act done intentionally and designedly; "wantonness" implies action without regard to the rights of others, a conscious failure to observe care, a conscious invasion of the rights of others, willful, unrestrained action; and "recklessness" a disregard of consequences, an indifference whether a wrong or injury is done or not, and an indifference to natural and probable consequences. Jensen v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 44 Utah, 100, 138 P. 1185, 1188. See, also, Evans v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 289 Mo. 493, 233 S.W. 397, 399; Cover v. Hershey Transit Co., 290 Pa. 551, 139 A. 266, 268; Feore v. Trammel, 212 Ala. 325, 102 So. 529, 533; Crosman v. Southern Pac. Co., 44 Nev. 2E46, 194 P. 839, 843.

The word "reckless," as applied to negligence, is the legal equivalent of "willful" or "wanton." Heller v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 265 F. 192, 194. And see Strough v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey, C.C.A.N.J., 209 F. 23, 26.

Conscious; knowing; done with stubborn purpose, but not with malice. Bundy v. State, 206 N.W. 21, 22, 1141 Neb. 121; American Surety Co. of New York v. Sullivan, C.C.A.N.Y., 7 F.2d 605,

c rary v. Michael, 233 Mo.App. 797, 109S.W.2d

606; Helme v. Great Western Milling Co., 43 Cal. App. 416, 185 P. 510, 512; Gray v. Alabama Fuel & Iron Co., 216 Ala. 416, 113 So. 35, 39.

Premeditated; malicious; done with evil intent, or with a bad motive or purpose, or with indifference to the natural consequences; unlawful; without legal justification. State v. Vanderveer, 11-5 Wash. 184, 196 P. 650; State v. Johnson, 194 N.C. 378, 139 S.E. 697, 698; Boyce v. Greeley Square Hotel Co., 228 N.Y. 106, 126 N.E. 647, 649; State v. Palmer, 94 Vt. 278, 110 A. 436, 437.

Words which import an exercise of the will, such as "feloniously," "maliciously," and "unlawfully," will supply the place of the word "willfully" in an indictment. Howenstine v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 263 F. 1, 3; Chapman v. Corn., 5 Whart. (Pa.) 427, 34 Am.Dec. 565. Contra, State v. Waters, Mo.App., 189 S.W. 624; State v. Hyman, 116 Me. 419, 102 A. 231, 232.

WILLFUL AND MALICIOUS INJURY. The word "willful," as used in this phrase in the Bankruptcy Act July 1, 1898. c. 541, § 17(2), 30 Stat. 550, as amended by the Act of Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, 32 Stat. 797 (11 § 35), means intentional though not necessarily deliberate. Nunn v. Drieborg, 235 Mich. 383, 209 N.W. 89, 90; Wellman v. Mead, 93 Vt. 322, 107 A. 396, 404. Mere negligence is not enough; In re Roberts, D.C. Mich., 290 F. 257, 259; In re Byrne, C.C.A.N.Y., 296 F. 98, 100; there must be an intent to commit a wrong either through actual malice or from which malice will be implied; McClellan v. Schmidt, D. C.N.J., 235 F. 986, 987. Such an injury does not necessarily involve hatred or ill will, as a state of mind, but arises from intentional wrong committed without just cause or excuse. In re Wernecke, D.C.N.Y., 1 F.Supp. 127, 168. It may involve merely a willful disregard of what one knows to be his duty, an act which is against good morals and wrongful in and of itself, and which necessarily causes injury and is done intentionally. In re Stenger, D.C.Mich., 283 F. 419, 420; In re Phillips, D.C.Ohio, 298 F. 135, 138.

WILLFUL AND WANTON INJURY. To constitute such injury, act producing injury must have been knowingly and intentionally committed, or committed under circumstances evincing reckless disregard of safety of person injured. Price v. Gabel, 162 Wash. 275, 298 P. 444, 447.

WILLFUL INDIFFERENCE TO THE SAFETY OF OTHERS. Imports an intentional lack of regard concerning the safety of others, or an intentional doing of something with knowledge that serious injury is a probable result. People v. Murray, 58 Cal.App.2d 239, 136 P.2d 389, 391.

WILLFUL MISCONDUCT OF EMPLOYEE. Under Workmen's Compensation Acts, precluding compensation, means more than mere negligence, and contemplates the intentional doing of something with knowledge that it is likely to result in serious injuries, or with reckless disregard of its probable consequences. Carroll v. ·Etna Life Ins. Co., 39 Ga.App. 78, 146 S.E. 788, 789; Black Mountain Corporation v. Higgins, 226 Ky. 7, 10 S.W.2d 463, 464.

WILLFUL OR WANTON MISCONDUCT. Failure to exercise ordinary care to prevent injury to a person who is actually known to be or reasonably expected to be within the range of a dangerous act being done. Georgia Power Co. v. Deese, 78 Ga.App. 704, 51 S.E.2d 724, 728.

WILLFUL OR WANTON NEGLIGENCE. Failure to exercise ordinary care to prevent injury to a person who is actually known to be, or reasonably is expected to be, within range of a known danger. Barall Food Stores v. Bennett, 194 Okl. 508, 153 P.2d 106, 109, 110.

WILLFUL TORT. Implies intent or purpose to injure. Cousins v. Booksbaum, 51 Ohio App. 150, 200 N.E. 133, 135; American Casualty Co. v. Brinsky, 51 Ohio App. 298, 200 N.E. 654, 655.

It involves elements of intent or purpose and malice or ill will, but malice or ill will may be shown by indifference to safety of others, with knowledge of their danger, or failure to use ordinary care to avoid injury after acquiring such knowledge. Hillard v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., 68 Ohio App. 426, 34 N.E.2d 75, 77.

WILLFUL MURDER. The unlawful and intentional killing of another without excuse or mitigating circumstances. State v. Dalton, 178 N.C. 779, 101 S.E. 548, 549.

WILLFUL NEGLIGENCE. See Negligence.

WILLINGLY. Voluntarily; unreluctantly; without reluctance, and of one's own free choice. Edwards v. State, 21 Ala.App. 375, 108 So. 639, 640. See State v. Schwab, 109 Ohio St. 532, 143 N.E. 29, 31. As used in an instruction that one cannot invoke the doctrine of self-defense if he enters a fight willingly, it means voluntarily, aggressively, and without legal excuse. State v. Evans, 194 N.C. 121, 138 S.E. 518, 519.

WILLS ACT. In England. The statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, passed in 1540, by which persons seized in fee-simple of lands holden in socage tenure were enabled to devise the same at their will and pleasure, except to bodies corporate; and those who held estates by the tenure of chivalry were enabled to devise two-third parts thereof.

Also, the statute 7 Wm. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, passed in 1837, and also called "Lord Langdale's Act." This act permits of the disposition by will of every kind of interest in real and personal estate, and provides that all wills, whether of real or of personal estate, shall be attested by two witnesses, and that such attestation shall be sufficient. Other important alterations are effected by this statute in the law of wills. Mozley & Whiteley.

WINCHESTER MEASURE. The standard measure of England, originally kept at Winchester. 1 Bl.Comm. 274.

WINCHESTER, STATUTE OF. A statute passed in the thirteenth year of the reign of Edward I., by which the old Saxon law of police was enforced, with many additional provisions. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 163; Crabb, Hist.Eng.Law, 189. It required every man to provide himself with armor to aid in keeping the peace; and if it did not create the offices of high and petty constables, it recognized and regulated them, and charged them with duties answering somewhat to those of our militia officers. The statute took its name from the ancient capital of the kingdom. It was repealed by the Statute of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. See 1 Seld.Essays 153.

WIND SHIELD. On automobiles, the glass between the two front standards or posts ;—not ordinarily including wind deflectors placed outside of such standards. Hammond v. Benzer Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 295 F. 908, 912.

WIND UP. To settle the accounts and liquidate the assets of a partnership or corporation, for the purpose of making distribution and dissolving the concern. State v. Norman, 86 Okl. 36, 206 P. 522, 527; State v. Quigley, 93 Okl. 296, 220 P. 918; Barret v. Skalsky, 118 Kan. 162, 233 P. 1043.

WINDING–UP ACTS. In English law. General acts of parliament, regulating settlement of corporate affairs on dissolution.

WINDOW. An opening made in the wall of a building to admit light and air, and to furnish a view or prospect. Hale v. Ins. Co., 46 Mo.App. 508; Benner v. Benner, 119 Me. 79, 109 A. 376, 377. The use of this word in law is chiefly in connection with the doctrine of ancient lights and other rights of adjacent owners.

WINDOW ENVELOPE. One which has on its face a patch of transparent paper forming a window through which an address written upon an inclosure can be seen. Outlook Envelope Co. v. Samuel Cupples Envelope Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 223 F. 327, 329.

WINDOW TAX. A tax on windows, levied on houses which contained more than six windows, and were worth more than £5 per annum; established by St. 7 Wm. III. c. 18. St. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36, substituted for this tax a tax on inhabited houses. Wharton.

WINDSHAKES. Cracks in timber that are due to the wind when the timber stood, or to drying in the center after the timber is cut. Swartz v. Bergendahl-Knight Co., 259 Pa. 421, 103 A. 220, 221.

WINDSOR FOREST. A royal forest founded by Henry VIII.

WINDSTORM. A storm characterized by high wind, with little or no precipitation. George A. Hoagland & Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 131 Neb. 105, 267 N.W. 239, 241. A violent wind. Clark v. Fidelity & Guaranty Fire Corporation, City Ct., 39 N.Y.S.2d 377, 379, 380.

WINDY SHOTS. In blasting operations, explosions which cause pieces of rock to fly up in the air. Brede v. Minnesota Crushed Stone Co., 146 Minn. 406, 178 N.W. 820, 821.

WINE. The fermented juice of the grape. State v. Moore, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 118; Tux Ginger Ale Co. v. Davis, 12 Cal.App.2d 73, 54 P.2d 1122. A vinous liquor, Peretto v. State, 31 Okl.Cr. 319, 238 P. 870, containing more than 1 per cent. of alcohol, People v. Mueller, 168 Cal. 526, 143 P. 750, 751. Sometimes loosely used as to unfermented juice of the grape or any fruit used as a beverage. State v. Rosasco, 103 Or. 343, 205 P. 290, 295. But see State v. Dennison, 85 W.Va. 261, 101 S.E. 458, 460.

WINTER. A period of three months, whether reckoned astronomically from the winter solstice, on December 21, to the vernal equinox, on March 21, or according to the conventional method used in the United States as including December, January, and February. Saarela v. Hoglund, 198 Ill. App. 485, 487. In a popular sense, the cold months. Whitney v. Aronson, 21 Cal.App. 9, 130 P. 700.

WINTER CIRCUIT. An occasional circuit appointed for the trial of prisoners, in England, and in some cases of civil causes, between Michaelmas and Hilary terms.

WINTER HEYNING. The season between 11th November and 23d April, which is excepted from the liberty of commoning in certain forests. St. 23 Car. II. c. 3.

WINZE. A vertical or steeply inclined passageway driven to connect a mine working with another. Empire Star Mines Co. v. Butler, 62 Cal. App.2d 49, 145 P.2d 49, 63.

WISBY, LAWS OF. The name given to a code of maritime laws promulgated at Wisby, then the capital of Gothland, in Sweden, in the latter part of the thirteenth century. This compilation resembled the laws of Oleron in many respects, and was early adopted, as a system of sea laws, by the commercial nations of Northern Europe. It formed the foundation for the subsequent code of the Hanseatic League. A translation of the Laws of Wisby may be seen in the appendix to 1 Pet. Adm. And see 3 Kent, Comm. 13. They are also printed in 30 F.Cas. 1189.

WISH. Eager desire; longing; expression of desire; a thing desired; an object of desire. Noice v. Schnell, 101 N.J.Eq. 252, 137 A. 582, 589, 52 A.L.R. 965. As used in wills, it is sometimes merely directory or precatory; Colonial Trust Co. v. Brown, 105 Conn. 261, 135 A. 555, 563; Schill v. Schill, 101 N.J.Eq. 482, 138 A. 530, 531; and sometimes mandatory; Strout v. Strout, 117 Me. 357, 104 A. 577, 578; being equivalent to "will," Tzeses v. Tenez Const. Co., 97 N.J.Eq. 501, 128 A. 388, or to "give" or "devise," Brown v. Brown, 180 N.C. 433, 104 S.E. 889, 890.

WISTA. In Saxon law. Half a hide of land, or sixty acres.

WIT. To know; to learn; to be informed. Used only in the infinitive, to wit, which term is equivalent to "that is to say," "namely," or "videlicet."

WITAM. The purgation from an offense by the oath of the requisite number of witnesses.

WITAN. In Saxon law. Wise men; persons of information, especially in the laws; the king's advisers; members of the king's council; the optimates, or principal men of the kingdom. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 11, note.

WITCHCRAFT. Under Sts. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 8, and 1 Jac. I. c. 12, the offense of witchcraft, or supposed intercourse with evil spirits, was punishable with death. These acts were not repealed till 1736. 4 Bl.Comm. 60, 61. In Salem, in 1692, 20 persons were put to death by hanging. The last victims in England were executed in 1716, and the last in Scotland in 1722. 29 Encyc. Americana, 430, 431; 1 Beard, Rise of Amer. Civilization, 150.

WITE. Sax. A punishment, pain, penalty, mulct, or criminal fine. Cowell.

An atonement among the early Germans by a wrong-doer to the king or the community. It is said to be the germ of the idea that wrong is not simply the affair of the injured individual, and is therefore a condition precedent to the growth of a criminal law. 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 37. See 1 Sel.Essays, Anglo-Amer. L. H. 100.

WITEKDEN. A taxation of the West Saxons, imposed by the public council of the kingdom.

WITENA DOM. In Saxon law. The judgment of the county court, or other court of competent jurisdiction, on the title to property, real or personal. 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 22.

WITENAGEMOTE. (Spelled, also, witenagemot, wittenagemot, witanagemote, etc.) "The assembly of wise men." This was the great national council or parliament of the Saxons in England, comprising the noblemen, high ecclesiastics, and other great thanes of the kingdom, advising and aiding the king in the general administration of government.

It was the grand council of the kingdom, and was held, generally, in the open air, by public notice or particular summons, in or near some city or populous town. These notices or summonses were issued upon determination by the king's select council, or the body met without notice, when the throne was vacant, to elect a new king. Subsequently to the Norman Conquest it was called commune concilium regni, curia regis and finally parliament; but its character had become considerably changed. It was a court of last resort, more especially for determining disputes between the king and his thanes, and, ultimately, from all inferior tribunals. Great offenders, particularly those who were members of or might be summoned to the king's court, were here tried. The casual loss of title-deeds was supplied, and a very extensive equity jurisdiction exercised. 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 73; 1 Bla.Comm. 147; 1 Reeve, Hist.Eng.Law 7; 9 Co.Pref. It passed out of existence with the Norman Conquest, and the subsequent Parliament was a separate growth, and not a continuation of the Witenagemot. 29 Encyc. Americana, 432.

WITENS. The chiefs of the Saxon lords or thanes, their nobles, and wise men.

WITH. A word denoting a relation of proximity, contiguity, or association. White v. White, 183 Va. 239, 31 S.E.2d 558, 561. Sometimes equivalent to the words, "in addition to," but not synonymous with "including," as in a complaint demanding a specified sum, "with interest." Halpern v. Langrock Bros. Co., 169 App.Div. 464, 155 N.Y.S. 167, 168.

WITH ALL FAULTS. This phrase, used in a contract of sale, implies that the purchaser assumes the risk of all defects and imperfections, provided they do not destroy the identity of the thing sold.

WITH CONSENT. Phrase within a Constitution providing that Governor shall appoint officers with consent of senate, requires confirmation by senate and appointment under such provision is ineffective until confirmed. State, ex rel. Nagle v. Stafford, 97 Mont. 275, 34 P.2d 372, 379.

WITH PREJUDICE. The term, as applied to judgment of dismissal is as conclusive of rights of parties as if action had been prosecuted to final adjudication adverse to the plaintiff. Fenton v. Thompson, 352 Mo. 199, 176 S.W.2d 456, 460.

WITH STRONG HAND. In pleading. A technical phrase indispensable in describing a forcible entry in an indictment. No other word or circumlocution will answer the same purpose. Rex v. Wilson, 8 Term R. 357.

WITHDRAW. To take away what has been enjoyed; to take from. Central R. & B. Co. v. State, 54 Ga. 409. To remove. Hamilton v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co., C.C.A.Ky., 288 F. 326, 327.

WITHDRAWAL. Removal of money or securities from a bank or other place of deposit. Hensch v. Metropolitan Savings & Loan Co., 50 Ohio App. 25, 197 N.E. 416, 418.

WITHDRAWING A JUROR. In practice. The withdrawing of one of the twelve jurors from the box, with the result that, the jury being now found to be incomplete, no further proceedings can be had in the cause. The withdrawing of a juror is always by the agreement of the parties, and is frequently done at the recommendation of the judge, where it is doubtful whether the action will lie; and in such case the consequence is that each party pays his own costs (in Pennsylvania it is held that the costs abide the event of the suit). It is, however, no bar to a future action for the same cause. 2 Tidd, Pr. 861, 862; 1 Archb. Pr.K.B. 196; Wabash R. Co. v. McCormick, 23 Ind.App. 258, 55 N.E. 251; People v. Judges of New York, 8 Cow. (N.Y.) 127; Glendenning v. Canary, 64 N.Y. 636; Wolcott v. Studebaker, C.C. Ill., 34 F. 8; 3 Term 657; 1 Cr. M. & R. 64; Tr. & H. Pr. § 689; Ry. & M. 402; 3 B. & Ad. 349; 3 Chitty, Pr. 917. In American practice, it is usually a mere method of continuing a case, for some good reason. The cases are collected in a note in 48 L. R.A. 432.

WITHDRAWAL OF CHARGES. A failure to prosecute by the person preferring charges;—distinguished from a dismissal, which is a determination of their invalidity by the tribunal hearing them. Butler v. McSweeney, 222 Mass. 5, 109 N.E. 653, 655.

WITHDRAWING RECORD. In practice. The withdrawing by a plaintiff of the nisi prius or trial record filed in a cause, just before the trial is entered upon, for the purpose of preventing the cause from being tried. This may be done before the jury are sworn, and afterwards, by consent of the defendant's counsel. 2 Tidd, Pr. 851; 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 189; 3 Chit.Pr. 870; 2 C. & P. 185; 3 Camp. 333.

WITHERNAM. In practice. A taking by way of reprisal; a taking or a reprisal of other goods, in lieu of those that were formerly taken and eloigned or withholden. 2 Inst. 141. A reciprocal distress, in lieu of a previous one which has been eloigned. 3 Bl.Comm. 148.

The name of a writ which issues on the return of elongata to an alias or pluries writ of replevin, by which the sheriff is commanded to take the defendant's own goods which may be found in his bailiwick, and keep them safely, not to deliver them to the plaintiff until such time as the defendant chooses to submit himself and allow the distress, and the whole of it to be replevied; and he is thereby further commanded that he do return to the court in what manner he shall have executed the writ. Hamm.N.P. 453; 2 Inst. 140; Fitzh.N.B. 68, 69.

WITHERSAKE. An apostate, or perfidious renegade. Cowell.

WITHHOLD. To retain in one's possession that which belongs to or is claimed or sought by another. Fitzpatrick v. Garver, 253 Mo. 189, 161 S.W. 714, 715. To omit to disclose upon request; as, to withhold information. State v. Sharp, 121 Minn. 381, 141 N.W. 526, 527, 528. To refrain from paying that which is due. Dupuy v. Board of Education of City and County of San Francisco, 106 Cal.App. 533, 289 P. 689, 691.

Withholding means of support from dependents. Made felony by a statute, presupposes existence or ability to obtain means of support by accused, and need by alleged dependents from whom support is withheld. McBrayer v. State, 112 Fla. 415, 150 So. 736, 737.

WITHIN. Into. State v. Warburton, 97 Wash. 242, 166 P. 615, 617. In inner or interior part of, or not longer in time than. In re White's Estate, 130 Kan. 714, 288 P. 764, 765. Through. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Pace, 109 Miss. 667, 68 So. 926, 927. Inside the limits of. Sacks v. Legg, 219 Ill.App. 144, 148; Ex parte Watson, 82 W.Va. 201, 95 S.E. 648. On. Continental Life Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 36 Ga.App. 540, 137 S.E. 403.

When used relative to time, has been defined variously as meaning any time before; at or before; at the end of ; before the expiration of ; not beyond; not exceeding; not later than. Glenn v. Garrett, Tex.Civ.App., 84 S.W.2d 515, 516.

The use of the word "within" as a limit of time, or degree, or space, embraces the last day, or degree, or entire distance, covered by the limit fixed. Rice v. J. H. Beavers & Co., 196 Ala. 355, 71 So. 659; Ardery v. Dunn, 181 Ind. 225, 104 N.E. 299, 300; Laws N.Y. 1910, c. 347.

WITHOUT. Outside; beyond. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U.S. 277, 23 L.Ed. 347; -Ainslie v. Martin, 9 Mass. 456; Collins v. Morgan, C.C.A.Kan., 243 F. 495, 498. In excess of. Milwaukee Western Fuel Co. v. Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, 159 Wis. 635, 150 N.W. 998, 999.

WITHOUT DAY. A term used to signify that an adjournment or continuance is indefinite or final, or that no subsequent time is fixed for another meeting, or for further proceedings. See Sine Die.

WITHOUT DELAY. Instantly; at once. Rathbun v. Globe Indemnity Co., 107 Neb. 18, 184 N.W. 903, 908, 24 A.L.R. 191. Also, within the time allowed by law. See State v. Dolan, Mo.App., 216 S.W. 334.

WITHOUT GIVING COMPENSATION THEREFOR. This phrase within automobile guest statute indicates an intention to exclude application of "guest" designation not only to one who has paid cash or equivalent for his transportation but also to one who pays such recompense as makes it worth the other's while to furnish the ride. Duclos v. Tashjian, 32 Cal.App.2d 444, 90 P.2d 140, 143.

WITHOUT HER CONSENT. This phrase, as used in the law of rape, is equivalent to "against the will," and signifies the manifestation of the utmost reluctance and greatest resistance on the woman's part. State v. Catron, 317 Mo. 894, 296 S.W. 141, 143.

WITHOUT IMPEACHMENT OF WASTE. The effect of the insertion of this clause in a lease for life is to give the tenant the right to cut timber on the estate, without making himself thereby liable to an action for waste. When a tenant for life holds the land without impeachment of waste, he is, of course, dispunishable for waste, whether wilful or otherwise. But still this right must not be wantonly abused so as to destroy the estate; and he will be enjoined from committing malicious waste. Bac.Abr. Waste (N) ; 2 Eq.Cas. Abr. Waste (A, pl. 8). And see Derham v. Hovey, 195 Mich. 243, 161 N.W. 883, 884, 21 A.L.R. 999.

WITHOUT JUSTIFICATION. In a statute punishing any parent who willfully or without justification deserts a child under 16 years of age in destitute or necessitous circumstances, the term "without justification" is equivalent to "willfully." Ex parte Strong, 95 Tex.Cr.R. 250, 252 S.W. 767, 769.

WITHOUT NOTICE. As used of purchasers, etc., equivalent to "in good faith." Hunt v. Gragg, 19 N.M. 450, 145 P. 136, 138.

WITHOUT PREJUDICE. Where an offer or admission is made "without prejudice," or a motion is denied or a suit dismissed "without prejudice," it is meant as a declaration that no rights or privileges of the party concerned are to be considered as thereby waived or lost except in so far as may be expressly conceded or decided. See Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 170 N.Y. 278, 63 N.E. 350; O'Keefe v. Irvington Real Estate Co., 87 Md. 196, 39 Atl. 428; Olson v. Coalfield School Dist. No. 16 of Divide County, 54 N.D. 657, 210 N.W. 180, 181.

A dismissal "without prejudice" allows a new suit to be brought on the same cause of action. Freidenbloom v. McAfee, Tex.Civ.App., 167 S.W. 28; McIntyre v. McIntyre, 205 Mich. 496, 171 N.W. 393, 394.

The words "without prejudice" import into any transaction that the parties have agreed that as between themselves the receipt of money by one and its payment by the other shall not of themselves have any legal effect on the rights of the parties, but they shall be open to settlement by legal controversy as if the money had not been paid. In re Bell, 344 Pa. 223, 25 A.2d 344, 350.

The words "without prejudice", as used in judgment, ordinarily import the contemplation of further proceedings, and, when they appear in an order or decree, it shows that the judicial act is not intended to be res judicata of the merits of the controversy. Fiumara v. American Surety Co. of New York, 346 Pa. 584, 31 A.2d 283, 287.

WITHOUT RECOURSE. This phrase, used in making a qualified indorsement of a negotiable instrument, signifies that the indorser means to save himself from liability to subsequent holders, and is a notification that, if payment is refused by the parties primarily liable, recourse cannot be had to him. See Thompson v. First State Bank, 102 Ga. 696, 29 S.E. 610; Binswanger v. Hewitt, 79 Misc, 425, 140 N.Y.S. 143, 145.

An indorser "without recourse" specially declines to assume any responsibility for payment. Arthur v. Rosier, 217 Mo.App. 382, 266 S.W. 737, 738. He assumes no contractual liability by virtue of the indorsement itself, Kalil v. Bell, 88 Kan. 666, 129 P. 1135, 1136; and becomes a mere assignor of the title to the paper, Cameron v. Ham, 23 Ohio App. 359, 155 N.E. 655, 656; but such an indorsement does not indicate that the indorsee takes with notice of defects, or that he does not take on credit of the other parties to the note, Robertson v. American Inv. Co., 170 Ark. 413, 279 S.W. 1008. 1010.

Where a note and mortgage are transferred without recourse, legal effect of words "without recourse" constitutes indorser a mere assignor subject to no liability except as an implied guarantor that instruments are genuine, that he has good title to them, and that he is not aware of any illegality in them. Home Ins. Co. v. Citizens Bank, 181 Miss. 181, 178 So. 589, 590.

WITHOUT RESERVE. A term applied to a sale by auction, indicating that no price is reserved.

WITHOUT STINT. Without limit; without any specified number.

WITHOUT THE STATE. This phrase, in a statute providing that in computing limitations, the time during which the defendant shall be without the state shall be excluded, has no relation to mere temporary absence from domicile or residence in the state. Clegg v. Bishop, 105 Conn. 564, 136 A. 102, 104,

WITHOUT THIS, THAT. In pleading. Formal words used in pleadings by way of traverse, particularly by way of special traverse, (q. v.,) importing an express denial of some matter of fact alleged in a previous pleading, including the declaration, plea, replication, etc. Steph.P1. 168, 169, 179, 180. The Latin term is absque hoc. Com.Dig. Pleader (G 1) ; 1 Chitty, Pl. 576, note a.

WITNESS, v. To subscribe one's name to a deed, will, or other document, for the purpose of attesting its authenticity, and proving its execution, if required, by bearing witness thereto.

To see the execution of, as an instrument, and subscribe it for the purpose of establishing its authenticity. In re Harter's Estate, 229 Iowa 238, 294 N.W. 357, 360, 362.

WITNESS, n. In general, one who, being present, personally sees or perceives a thing; a beholder, spectator, or eyewitness. In re Harter's Estate, 229 Iowa 238, 294 N.W. 357, 362.

One who testifies to what he has seen, heard, or otherwise observed. Wigginton v. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, C.C.A.Ind., 126 F.2d 659, 666.

A person whose declaration under oath (or affirmation) is received as evidence for any purpose, whether such declaration be made on oral examination or by deposition or affidavit. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1878.

A person attesting genuineness of signature to document by adding his signature. In re Gorrell's Estate, 19 N.J.Misc. 168, 19 A.2d 334, 335.

One who is called upon to be present at a transaction, as a wedding, or the making of a will, that he may thereafter, if necessary, testify to the transaction.

Accused, by availing himself of statute providing that accused shall be a competent witness at his own request but not otherwise, assumes position of "witness". State v. McKinnon, 223 N.C. 160, 25 S.E.2d 606, 609; State v. Auston, 223 N. C. 203, 25 S.E.2d 613, 614.

Adverse witness. A *itness whose mind discloses a bias hostile to the party examining him. Brown; Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C.B.(N.S.) 801.

Attesting witness. See Attestation.

Competent witness. See Competent.

Credible witness. See Credible.

Expert witnesses. See Expert Witnesses.

Hostile witness. See that title.

Prosecuting witness. See that title.

Subscribing witness. See that title.

Swift witness. See that title.

Witness to will. One who has attested the will by subscribing his name thereto. In re Johnson's Will, 175 Wis. 1, 183 N.W. 888, 889.

WITNESS AGAINST HIMSELF. The federal constitutional provision that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case, to be a "witness against himself" must be applied in a broad spirit to secure to citizen immunity from self-accusation and provision applies to all proceedings Wherein defendant is acting as a witness in any investigation that requires him to give testimony that might tend to show him guilty of crime. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 5. United States v. Goodner, D.C.Colo., 35 F.Supp. 286, 290.

WITNESSING PART. In a deed or other formal instrument, is that part which comes after the recitals, or, where there are no recitals, after the parties. It usually commences with a reference to the agreement or intention to be effectuated, then states or refers to the consideration, and concludes with the operative words and parcels, if any. Where a deed effectuates two distinct objects, there are two witnessing parts. 1 Day.Prec. Con^{y}. 63, et seq.; Sweet.

WITTINGLY. With knowledge and by design, excluding only cases which are the result of accident or forgetfulness, and including cases where one does an unlawful act through an erroneous belief of his right. Osborne v. Warren, 44 Conn. 357.

WITWORD. A legally allowed claim, more especially the right to vindicate ownership or possession by one's affirmation under oath. Vinogradoff, Engl. Soc. in 11th Cent. 9.

WOLD. Sax. In England. A down or champaign ground, hilly and void of wood. Cowell; Blount.

WOLF'S HEAD. In old English law. This term was used as descriptive of the condition of an outlaw. Such persons were said to carry a wolf's head, (caput lupinum;) for if caught alive they were to be brought to the king, and if they defended themselves they might be slain and their heads carried to the king, for they were no more to be accounted of than wolves. Termes de la Ley, "Woolferthfod."

WOMEN. All the females of the human species. All such females who have arrived at the age of puberty. Dig. 50, 16, 13.

WONG. Sax. In old records. A field. Spelman; Cowell.

WdOD. The tough, hard substance of all trees and shrubs. It includes not only the hard fiber bundles of trees and shrubs in general, but also the tougher fibrous components of some herbaceous plants. It is a very broad term and includes not only material obtained from exogenous plants, but also like substances obtained from palms, from bamboo (which is a giant grass), and from some ferns (which are herbaceous plants). Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S., 9 Ct.Cust.App. 62, 63.

WOOD LEAVE. A license or right to cut down, remove, and use standing timber on a given estate or tract of land. Osborne v. O'Reilly, 42 N.J.Eq. 467, 9 A. 209.

WOOD PLEA COURT. A court held twice in the year in the forest of Clun, in Shropshire, for determining all matters of wood and agistments. Cowell.

WOOD-CORN. In old records. A certain quantity of oats or other grain, paid by customary tenants to the lord, for liberty to pick up dead or broken wood. Cowell.

WOOD-GELD. In old English law. Money paid for the liberty of taking wood in a forest. Cowell.

Immunity from such payment. Spelman.

WOOD-MOTE. In forest law. The old name of the court of attachments; otherwise called the "Forty-Days Court." Cowell; 3 Bl.Comm. 71.

WOODS. A forest; land covered with a large and thick collection of natural forest trees. The old books say that a grant of "all his woods" (omnes boscos suos) will pass the land, as well as the trees growing upon it. Co.Litt. 4b. See Averitt v. Murrell, 49 N.C. 323; Hall v. Cranford, 50 N.C. 3; Achenbach v. Johnston, 84 N.C. 264.

Bankr.Act § 64, sub. a(2), 11 U.S.C.A. § 104, sub. a(2). In re Paradise Catering Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 36 F.Supp. 974, 975.

Workmen's Compensation Act

The term "workman" in the Workmen's Compensation Act means, as the act states, one who engages to furnish services subject to the control of an employer, and the relation necessary to constitute one an employer and another a workman under the act is the relation of master and servant originating in a contract for personal services, subject to complete control of the details of the work and the mode of its performance. Landberg v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 107 Or. 498, 215 P. 594, 596.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION. Name commonly used to designate the method and means created by statutes for giving greater protection and security to the workman and his dependents against injury and death occurring in the course of employment. United Air Lines Transport Corporation v. Industrial Commission, 107 Utah 52, 151 P.2d 591, 594. It is not health insurance, and was not intended to compensate for disability through sickness or disease not caused by accidental injury arising out of and in course of employment. Gumtow v. Kalamazoo Motor Express, 266 Mich. 16, 253 N.W. 198.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACTS. Laws passed in most of the states of the Union which provide for fixed awards to employees or their dependents in case of industrial accidents and dispense with proof of negligence and legal actions. Some of the acts go beyond the simple determination of the right to compensation, and provide insurance systems, either under state supervision or otherwise.

Under the acts, methods are usually prescribed for the expression by employers and workmen of their preference as to the acceptance or rejection of the compensation system. This ranges from each workman filing a written rejection to a presumed acceptance in the absence of formal rejection.

Under the elective system in most of the states, it is made an inducement, that where employers refuse to come within the provisions of the compensation law, the customary defenses to actions for injuries shall not be allowed them.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LOSS. See Loss.

WORKS. Sometimes, a mill, factory, or other establishment for performing industrial labor of any sort (South St. Joseph Land Co. v. Pitt, 114 Mo. 135, 21 S.W. 449) ; also, a building, structure, or erection of any kind upon land, as in the civil-law phrase "new works. [pp]

New Works

A term of the civil law comprehending every sort of edifice or other structure which is newly commenced on a given estate or lot. Its importance lies chiefly in the fact that a remedy is given ("denunciation of new works") to an adjacent proprietor whose property would be injured or subjected to a more onerous servitude if such a work were allowed to proceed to completion.

Public Works

Works, whether of construction or adaptation, undertaken and carried out by the national, state, or municipal authorities, and designed to subserve some purpose of public necessity, use, or convenience; such as public buildings, roads, aqueducts, parks, etc. Ellis v. Common Council, 123 Mich. 567, 82 N.W. 244; Chattanooga & Tennessee River Power Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Tenn., 209 F. 28, 29. All fixed works constructed for public use. State v. A. H. Read Co., 33 Wyo. 387, 240 P. 208, 211. The term usually relates to the construction of public improvements and not to their maintenance or operation. State v. Peters, 112 Ohio St. 249, 147 N.E. 81, 83.

WORKSHOP. Within Workmen's Compensation Acts, a room or place wherein power-driven machinery is employed and manual labor is exercised by way of trade for gain or otherwise. Remsnider v. Union Savings & Trust Co., 89 Wash. 87, 154 P. 135, 136, Ann.Cas.1917D, 40.

It must be one provided or operated by the employer or one over which he has control or supervision. City of Hobart v. Wagoner, 191 Okl. 689, 132 P.2d 926, 927.

WORLD. This term sometimes denotes all persons whatsoever who may have, claim, or acquire an interest in the subject-matter; as in saying that a judgment in rem binds "all the world."

WORLDLY. Of or pertaining to the world or the present state of existence; temporal; earthly; devoted to, interested in, or connected with this present life, and its cares, advantages, or pleasures, to the exclusion of those of a future life. Anderson v. Gibson, 116 Ohio St. 684, 157 N.E. 377, 379, 54 A.L.R. 92. Concerned with enjoyment of this present existence; secular; not religious, spiritual, or holy. Commonwealth v. American Baseball Club of Philadelphia, 290 Pa. 136, 138 A. 497, 499, 53 A.L.R. 1027.

WORLDLY EMPLOYMENT OR BUSINESS, which, on Sunday, is prohibited by statutes in some states, includes the operation of a motion picture show under the New Jersey Vice and Immorality Act, § 1 (4 Comp.St.1910, p. 5712), Rosenberg v. Arrowsmith, 82 N.J.Eq. 570, 89 A. 524, 525, and one who does this habitually is guilty of keeping a disorderly house. State v. Rosenberg, N.J.Sup., 115 A. 203. The words also include, in Delaware, under Rev.Code 1915, § 4784, the playing of football on Sunday, knowing that tickets of admission were being offered for sale and sold to the public, Walsh v. State, Del.Super., 136 A. 160, 163, and, in. Pennsylvania, professional baseball, Commonwealth v. American Baseball Club of Philadelphia, 200 Pa. 136, 138 A. 497, 499, 53 A.L.R. 1027. But in the latter state it has been thought, at least by the lower courts, that notwithstanding Act April 22, 1794 (3 Smith's Laws, p. 177), § 1 (18 P.S. § 1991) one may lawfully purchase a cigar on Sunday. Commonwealth v. Hoover, 25 Pa. Super.Ct. 133, 134.

WORRYING CATTLE OR SHEEP. Within statutes providing that any one finding a dog, nut on the premises of its owner, worrying cattle or sheep, may kill the dog, means to run after; to chase; to bark at. Bass v. Nofsinger, 222 Wis. 480, 269 N.W. 303, 304; Failing v. People, 105 Colo. 399, 98 P.2d 865, 867.

WORSHIP. Any form of religious service showing reverence for Divine Being, or exhortation to obedience to or following of the mandates of such Being. People on Complaint of Doyle v. Smith, 259 N.Y. 48, 180 N.E. 891. Religious exercises participated in by a number of persons assembled for that purpose, the disturbance of which is a statutory offense in many states. Hamsher v. Hamsher, 132 Ill. 273, 22 N.E. 1123, 8 L.R.A. 556; State v. District Board, 76 Wis. 177, 44 N.W. 967, 7 L.R.A. 330, 20 Am.St.Rep. 41; State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 58 N.W. 728, 24 L.R.A. 68; State v. Norris, 59 N.H. 536; Woodall v. State, 4 Ga.App. 783, 62 S.E. 485.

English Law

A title of honor or dignity used in addresses to certain magistrates and other persons of rank or office. Co. 2d Inst. 666; Bacon, Abr. Misnomer (A 2).

Public Worship

This term may mean the worship of God, conducted and observed under public authority; or it may mean worship in an open or public place, without privacy or concealment; or it may mean the performance of religious exercises, under a provision for an equal right in the whole public to participate in its benefits; or it may be used in contradistinction to worship in the family or the closet. In this country, what is called "public worship" is commonly conducted by voluntary societies, constituted according to their own notions of ecclesiastical authority and ritual propriety, opening their places of worship, and admitting to their religious services such persons, and upon such terms, and subject to such regulations, as they may choose to designate and establish. A church absolutely belonging to the public, and in which all persons without restriction have equal rights, such as the public enjoy in highways or public landings, is certainly a very rare institution. Attorney General v. Merrimack Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 586.

WORSTED. Primarily and popularly, a yarn or fabric made wholly of wool. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 42 S.Ct. 384, 385, 258 U.S. 483, 66 L.Ed. 729.

WORT. Mash; wash; specifically, the mash after the malt, or other active ingredient, has been added, either before or during fermentation. Pack v. State, 116 Or. 416, 241 P. 390, 392.

WORT or WORTH. A curtilage or country farm.

WORTH. The quality of a thing which gives it value. McLane v. Pittsburg Rys. Co., 230 Pa. 29, 79 A. 237, 238. Although "worth" in some connections may mean more than pecuniary value, in law it means that sum of valuable qualities which renders a thing valuable and useful expressed in the current medium of the country; value. Duke v. City of Anniston, 5 Ala.App. 348, 60 So. 447. Furnishing an equivalent for. Herb v. Hallowell, 304 Pa. 128, 154 A. 582, 585.

WORTHIER TITLE. At common law where testator undertook to devise to an heir exactly same interest in land as such heir would take by descent, descent was regarded as the "worthier title" and heir took by descent rather than by devise. Jones v. Petrie, 156 Kan. 241, 132 P.2d 396, 398.

WORTHIEST OF BLOOD. In the English law of descent. A term applied to males, expressive of the preference given to them over females. See 2 Bl.Comm. 234-240. See some singular reasons given for this in Plowd. 305.

WORTHING OF LAND. A certain quantity of land so called in the manor of Kingsland, in Hereford. The tenants are called "worthies." Wharton.

WORTHLESS. Destitute of worth, of no value or use. Spring City Foundry Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 54 S.Ct. 644, 292 U.S. 182, 78 L.Ed. 1200.

WORTHY. Having worth; possessing merit; valuable; deserving of honor, or the 'ike; of high station,; of high social position; deserved, merited. Woodstown Nat. Bank and Trust Co. v. Snelbaker, 136 N.J.Eq. 62, 40 A.2d 222, 227.

WOULD. A word sometimes expressing what might be expected. Taylor v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 256 Mo. 191, 165 S.W. 327, 331. Often interchangeable with the word "should," Barnett v. Savannah Electric Co., 15 Ga.App. 270, 82 S.E. 910, 911, but not with "could," Gehrig v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 201 Ill.App. 287, 293.

WOUND. An injury to the body of a person or animal, especially one caused by violence, by which the continuity of the covering, as skin, mucous membrane, or conjunctiva, is broken. Gasperino v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, Mo.App., 107 S.W.2d 819, 827. Any breaking up or dispersion, or disintegration of the natural continuity of a tissue of the body. Gasperino v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, Mo.App., 107 S.W.2d 819, 827. Also injuries of every kind which affect the body, whether they are cuts, lacerations, fractures, or bruises. State v. Hammerli, Kan.Sup., 58 P. 559; Gatlin v. State, 18 Ga.App. 9, 89 S.E. 345. Also, any lesion of the body, Robinson v. Masonic Protective Ass'n, 87 Vt. 138, 88 A. 531, 47 L.R.A.,N.S., 924, a "lesion" being a hurt, loss, or injury. People v. Durrand, 307 Ill. 611, 139 N.E. 78, 83.

WOUNDED FEELINGS. Such as result from indignities to self-respect, sensibilities, or pride of a person, as distinguished from usual mental pain and suffering consequent to physical injury. Interstate Life & Accident Co. v. Brewer, 56 Ga.App. 599, 193 S.E. 458, 464.

WOUNDING. An aggravated species of assault and battery, consisting in one person giving another some dangerous hurt. 3 Bl.Comm. 121.

WRATH. Not merely anger, but violent anger. Jerald v. Houston, 124 Kan. 657, 261 P. 851, 856.

WRECCUM MARIS SIGNIFICAT ILLA BONA QUIE NAUFRAGIO AD TERRAM PELLUNTUR. A wreck of the sea signifies those goods which are driven to shore from a shipwreck.

WRECK. To destroy, disable, or seriously damage. Zohner v. Sierra Nevada Life and Casualty Co., 114 Cal.App. 85, 299 P. 749, 751. To reduce to a wreck or ruinous state by any kind of violence; to overthrow, shatter, or destroy; to cause to crash or suffer ruin, synonymous with ruin, smash, and demolish. Its antonyms are save, salvage, and preserve. Star Mfg. Co. v. Quarries, 172 Okl. 550, 46 P.2d 497, 498. Destruction, disorganization, or serious injury of anything, especially by violence. Houston Printing Co. v. Hunter, Tex.Civ.App., 105 S.W.2d 312, 317.

Goods cast ashore by the sea, and not claimed by the owner within a year, or other specified period; which, in such case, become the property of the state. 2 Kent, Comm. 322; Proctor v. Adams, 113 Mass. 376, 18 Am.Rep. 500. The term applies to property cast upon land by the sea. Baker v. Hoag, 7 N.Y. 555, 59 Am.Dec. 431. To jetsam, flotsam, and ligan. Murphy v. Dunham, D.C.Mich., 38 F. 503.

Common Law

Goods cast ashore from a wrecked vessel, where no living creature has escaped from the wreck alive; and which are forfeited to the crown, or to persons having the franchise of wreck. Cowell. But if claimed by the true owner within a year and a day the goods, or their proceeds, must be restored to him, by virtue of stat. Westm. I., 3 Edw. I. c. 4.

Maritime Law

A ship becomes a wreck when, in consequence of injuries received, she is rendered absolutely unnavigable, or unable to pursue her voyage, without repairs exceeding the half of her value. Wood v. Insurance Co., 6 Mass. 479, 4 Am.Dec. 163; Collard v. Eddy, 17 Mo. 355; Baker v. Hoag, 7 N.Y. 558, 59 Am.Dec. 431; Peele v. Insurance Co., 19 F. Cas. 104; Lacaze v. State, 1 Add., Pa., 99.

A "wrecked vessel," however, in common phraseology, includes a sunken vessel. See Gilchrist v. Godman, D.C. Ill., 79 F. 970; Act March 3, 1899, § 15 (33 USCA § 409) ; The R. J. Moran, C.C.A.N.Y., 299 F. 500; Thames Towboat Co. v. Fields, D.C.N.Y., 287 F. 155.

Wreck Commissioners

Persons appointed by the English lord chancellor under the merchant shipping act, 1876, (section 29,) to hold investigations at the request of the board of trade into losses, abandonments, damages, and casualties of or to ships on or near the coast of the United Kingdom, whereby loss of life is caused. Sweet.

WRECKER. Motor vehicles equipped for removing wrecked or disabled vehicles. Gossett v. Van Egmond, 176 Or. 134, 155 P.2d 304, 312.

WRECKFREE. Exempt from the forfeiture of shipwrecked goods and vessels to the king. Cowell.

WRIT. A precept in writing, couched in the form of a letter, running in the name of the king, president, or state, issuing from a court of justice, and sealed with its seal, addressed to a sheriff or other officer of the law, or directly to the person whose action the court desires to command, either as the commencement of a suit or other proceeding or as incidental to its progress, and requiring the performance of a specified act, or giving authority and commission to have it done.

A mandatory precept issuing from court of justice. Poirier v. East Coast Realty Co., 84 N.H. 461, 152 A. 612, 613. Process. State ex rel. Walling v. Sullivan, 245 Wis. 180, 13 N.W.2d 550, 555.

For the names and description of various particular writs, see the titles below.

Old English Law

An instrument in the form of a letter; a letter or letters of attorney. This is a very ancient sense of the word.

In the old books, "writ" is used as equivalent to "action;" hence writs are sometimes divided into real, personal, and mixed.

Scotch Law

A writing; an instrument in writing, as a deed, bond, contract, etc. 2 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, pp. 175-179.

General

Alias writ. A second writ issued in the same cause, where a former writ of the same kind has been issued without effect.

Close writ. In English law, a name given to certain letters of the sovereign, sealed with his great seal and directed to particular persons and for particular purposes, which, not being proper for public inspection, were closed up and sealed on the outside; also, a writ directed to the sheriff instead of to the lord. 2 BLComm. 346; 3 Reeve, Eng. Law. 45.

Concurrent writs. Duplicate originals, or several writs running at the same time for the same purpose, for service on or arrest of a person, when it is not known where he is to be found; or for service on several persons, as when there are several defendants to an action. Mozley & Whitley.

Judicial writs. In English practice. The capias and all other writs subsequent to the original writ not issuing out of chancery, but from the court to which the original was returnable. Being grounded on what had passed in that court in consequence of the sheriff's return, they were called judicial writs, in contradistinction to the writs issued out of chancery, which were called original writs. 3 Bl.Comm. 282. Such writs as issue under the private seal of the courts, and not under the great seal of England, and are tested or witnessed, not in the king's name, but in the name of the chief judge of the court out of which they issue. The word "judicial" is used in contradistinction to "original;" original writs being such as issue out of chancery under the great seal, and are witnessed in the king's name. See 3 Bl. Comm. 282. Pullman's Palace-Car Co. v. Washburn, C.C.Mass., 66 F. 792.

Junior writ. One which is issued, or comes to the officer's hands, at a later time than a similar writ, at the suit of another party, or on a different claim, against the same defendant.

Original writ. In English practice. An original writ was the process formerly in use for the commencement of personal actions. It was a mandatory letter from the king, issuing out of chancery, sealed with the great seal, and directed to the sheriff of the county wherein the injury was committed, or was supposed to have been committed, requiring him to command the wrong-doer or accused party either to do justice to the plaintiff or else to appear in court and answer the accusation against him. This writ is now disused, the writ of summons being the process prescribed by the uniformity of process act for commencing personal actions; and under the judicature act, 1873, all suits, even in the court of chancery, are to be commenced by such writs of summons. Brown.

Patent writ. In old practice, an open writ; one not closed or sealed up.

Peremptory writ. An original writ, called from the words of the writ a "si to fecerit securum," and which directed the sheriff to cause the defendant to appear in court without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gave the sheriff security effectually to prosecute his claim. The writ was very occasionally in use, and only where nothing was specifically demanded, but only a satisfaction in general; as in the case of writs of trespass on the case, wherein no debt or other specific thing was sued for, but only damages to be assessed by a jury. Brown.

Prerogative writs. Those issued by the exercise of the extraordinary power of the crown (the court, in modern practice) on proper cause shown; namely, the writs of procedendo, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and certiorari.

WRIT DE BONO ET MALO. See De Bono et Malo; Assize.

WRIT DE EJECTIONE FIRMAE. See Ejectione Firmw.

WRIT DE HIERETICO COMBURENDO. See De Haeretico Comburendo.

WRIT DE HOMINE REPLEGIANDO. See De Homine Replegiando.

WRIT DE ODIO ET ATIA. See De Odio et Atia.

WRIT DE RATIONABILI PARTE BONORUM. See De Rationabili Parte Bonorum.

WRIT OF AD QUOD DAMNUM. See Ad Quod Damnum.

WRIT OF ASSISTANCE. The name of a writ which issues from the court of chancery, in aid of the execution of a judgment at law, to put the complainant into possession of lands adjudged ta him, when the sheriff cannot execute the judgment. Emerick v. Miller, Ind.App., 62 N.E. 285; Hagerman v. Heltzel, 21 Wash. 444, 58 R 580; Marblehead Land Co. v. Los Angeles County, D.C.. Cal., 276 F. 305.

A form of process issued by an equity court to transfer the possession of lands, title or possession to which it has previously adjudicated, as a means of enforcing its decree, and performs the same office in a suit in equity as an execution in an action at law. Burney v. Lee, 57 Ariz. 41, 110 P.2d 554, 556. Its office is confined to lend aid to original equity jurisdiction, and the writ cannot be employed as a substitute for other common-law or statutory actions. Patterson v. McKay, 202 Ark. 241, 150 S.W.2d 196. It is essentially a mandatory injunction, effect of which is to bring about a change in the possession of realty—it dispossesses the occupant and gives possession to one adjudged entitled thereto by the court. Dusbabek v. Local Building & Loan Ass'n, 178 Okl. 592, 63 P.2d 756, 759.

A "writ of assistance" is equivalent to the writ of habere facias possessionem at law, and issues as of course without notice, so far as the parties to the record are concerned, when necessary to execute a decree. Gardner v. Duncan, 104 Miss. 477, 61 So. 545, 546.

While the office of both a writ of assistance and a writ of possession is to put the party entitled thereto into the possession of property, the former issues from equity and the latter from law. Southern State Bank v. Leverette, 187 N.C. 743, 123 S.E. 68, 70.

An ancient writ issuing out of the exchequer. Moz. & W. A writ issuing from the court of exchequer to the sheriff commanding him to be in aid of the king's tenants by knight's service, or the king's collectors, debtors, or accountants, to enforce payment of their own dues, in order to enable them to pay their own dues to the king. 1 Madox, Hist. Exch. 675.

WRIT OF ASSOCIATION. In English practice. A writ whereby certain persons (usually the clerk of assize and his subordinate officers) are directed to associate themselves with the justices and serjeants; and they are required to admit the said persons into their society in order to take the assizes. 3 Bl.Comm. 59.

WRIT OF ATTACHMENT. A writ employed to enforce obedience to an order or judgment of the court. It may take the form of commanding the sheriff to attach the disobedient party and to have him before the court to answer his contempt. Smith, Act. 176.

In its generic sense, any mesne civil process in the nature of a writ on which property may be attached, including trustee process. Smith v. Smith, 120 Me. 379, 115 A. 87, 88. See, also, Attachment.

WRIT OF CONSPIRACY. A writ which anciently lay against persons who had conspired to injure the plaintiff, under the same circumstances which would now give him an action on the case. It did not lie at common law, in any case, except when the conspiracy was to indict the party either of treason or felony; all the other cases of conspiracy in the books were but actions on the case. Hutchins v. Hutchins, 7 Hill (N.Y.) 104.

WRIT OF COVENANT. A writ which lies where a party claims damages for breach of covenant; 1. e., of a promise under seal.

WRIT OF DEBT. A writ which lies where the party claims the recovery of a debt; i. e., a liquidated or certain sum of money alleged to be due to him.

This is debt in the debet, which is the principal and only common for. There is another species mentioned in the books, called the debt in the detinet, which lies for the specific recovery of goods under a contract to deliver them. 1 Chitty, Pl. 101.

WRIT OF DECEIT. The name of a writ which lies where one man has done anything in the name of another, by which the latter is damnified and deceived. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 95, E.

WRIT OF DELIVERY. A writ of execution employed to enforce a judgment for the delivery of chattels. It commands the sheriff to cause the chattels mentioned in the writ to be returned to the person who has obtained the judgment; and, if the chattels cannot be found, to distrain the person against whom the judgment was given until he returns them. Smith, Act. 175; Sweet.

WRIT OF DETINUE. A writ which lies where a party claims the specific recovery of goods and chattels, or deeds and writings, detained from him. This is seldom used; trover is the more frequent remedy, in cases where it may be brought.

WRIT OF DOWER. This is either a writ of dower unde nihil habet, which lies for a widow, commanding the tenant to assign her dower, no part of which has yet been set off to her; or a writ of right of dower, whereby she seeks to recover the remainder of the dower to which she is entitled, part having been already received from the tenant. This latter writ is seldom used.

WRIT OF EJECTMENT. The writ in an action of ejectment, for the recovery of lands. See Ejectment.

WRIT OF ENTRY. A real action to recover the possession of land where the tenant (or owner) has been disseised or otherwise wrongfully dispossessed. If the disseisor has aliened the land, or if it has descended to his heir, the writ of entry is said to be in the per, because it alleges that the defendant (the alienee or heir) obtained posses.. sion through the original disseisor. If two alienations (or descents) have taken place, the writ is in the per and cui, because it alleges that the defendant (the second alienee) obtained possession through the first alienee, to whom the original disseisor had aliened it. If more than two alienations (or descents) have taken place, the writ is in the post, because it simply alleges that the defendant acquired possession after the original disseisin. Co.Litt. 238b; 3 Bl.Comm. 180. The writ of entry was abolished, with other real actions, in England, by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27, § 36, but is still in use in a few of the states of the Union. Sweet. See, also, Entry, Writ of.

WRIT OF ERROR. A writ issued from a court of appellate jurisdiction, directed to the judge or judges of a court of record, requiring them to remit to the appellate court the record of an action before them, in which a final judgment has been entered, in order that examination may be made of certain errors alleged to have been committed, and that the judgment may be reversed, corrected, or affirmed, as the case may require. Siegelschiffer v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 248 F. 226, 228; Ward v. Williams, 270 Ill. 547, 110 N.E. 821, 823; Board of County Com'rs of Harford County v. Jay, 122 Md. 324, 89 A. 715, 717. It is brought for supposed error in law apparent on record and takes case to higher tribunal, which affirms or reverses. Chambers v. State, 117 Fla. 642, 158 So. 153. It is commencement of new suit to set aside judgment, and is not continuation of suit to which it relates. Winchester v. Winn, 225 Mo.App. 288, 29 S.W.2d 188, 190. And unless abolished by statute, is writ of right applicable to all cases in which jurisdiction is exercised according to course of common law, but is inapplicable to cases not known to or in derogation of common law, unless otherwise provided by statute. Freeport Motor Casualty Co. v. Madden, 354 Ill. 329, 188 N.E. 415, 416.

"Appeal" is a process of civil law origin that entirely removes cause to appellate court subjecting facts as well as law to review and retrial, while "writ of error" is a process of common-law origin and removes nothing to appellate court for re-examination except the law. Whidden v. Abbott, 119 Fla. 25, 160 So. 475.

WRIT OF ERROR CORAM NOBIS. A common-law writ, the purpose of which is to correct a judgment in the same court in which it was rendered, on the ground of error of fact. Washington v. State, 92 Fla. 740, 110 So. 259, 262; People v. Black, 89 Cal.App. 225, 264 P. 346; for which the statute provides no other remedy, which fact did not appear of record, Ernst v. State, 181 Wis. 155, 193 N.W. 978; or was unknown to the court when judgment was pronounced, and which, if known, would have prevented the judgment, and which was unknown, and could not have been known to the party by the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to have been otherwise presented to the court, unless he was prevented from so presenting them by duress, fear, or other sufficient cause, Nickels v. State, 86 Fla. 208, 98 So. 502, 504; Smulski v. H. Feinberg Furniture Co., Del.Super., 193 A. 585, 587; as where judgment is rendered against a party after his death, or an infant not properly represented by guardian, or a feme covert where common-law disability still exists, or where some defect exists in the process or the execution thereof. Schneider v. Schneider, Mo.App., 273 S.W. 1081, 1083; 1 Saund. 101; Steph.P1. *119; Day v. Hamburgh, 1 Browne, Pa. 75.

An ordinary "writ of error" is brought for a supposed error in law apparent on the record, and takes the case to a higher tribunal where the question is to be decided and the judgment, sentence or decree is to be affirmed or reversed, while the "writ of error coram nobis" is brought for an alleged error in fact not appearing on the record and lies to the same court in order that it may correct the error, which it is presumed would not have been committed had the fact been brought to the court's notice in the first instance. State v. Wagner, 232 Wis. 138, 286 N.W. 544, 545.

At common law in England, it issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. Its principal aim is to afford the court in which an action was tried an opportunity to correct its own record with reference to a vital fact not known when the judgment was rendered. Lamb v. State, 91 Fla. 396, 107 So. 535, 537, 538; Rhodes v. State, 199 Ind. 183, 156 N.E. 389, 392. It is also said that at common law it lay to correct purely ministerial errors of the officers of the court. Cramer v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 260 Ill. 516, 103 N.E. 459, 461.

WRIT OF ERROR CORAM VOBIS. This writ, at the English common law, is distinguished from "writ of error coram nobis," in that the former issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, whereas the latter issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. Lamb v. State, 107 So. 535, 537, 91 Fla. 396.

WRIT OF EXECUTION. A writ to put in Three the judgment or decree of a court.

WRIT OF EXIGI FACIAS. See Exigent.

WRIT OF FALSE JUDGMENT. A writ which appears to be still in use to bring appeals to the English high court from inferior courts not of record proceeding according to the course of the common law. Archb.Pr. 1427.

WRIT OF FORMEDON. A writ which lies for the recovery of an estate by a person claiming as issue in tail, or by the remainder-man or reversioner after the termination of the entail. See Formedon.

WRIT OF INQUIRY. In common-law practice. A writ which issues after the plaintiff in an action has obtained a judgment by default, on an unliquidated claim, directing the sheriff, with the aid of a jury, to inquire into the amount of the plaintiff's demand and assess his damages. Lennon v. Rawitzer, 57 Conn. 583, 19 A. 334; Havens v. Hartford & N. R. Co., 28 Conn. 70; McGowin v. Dickson, 182 Ala. 161, 62 So. 685, 688.

WRIT OF MAINPRIZE, or MAINPRISE. In English law. A writ directed to the sheriff, (either generally, when any man is imprisoned for a bailable offense and bail has been refused, or specially, when the offense or cause of commitment is not properly bailable below,) commanding him to take sureties for the prisoner's appearance, commonly called "mainpernors," and to set him at large. 3 Bl.Comm. 128. See, also, Mainprise.

WRIT OF MANDAMUS. See Mandamus.

WRIT OF MESNE. In old English law. A writ which was so called by reason of the words used in the writ, namely, "Unde idem A. qui medius est inter C. et prcefatum B."; that is, A., who is mesne between C., the lord paramount, and B., the tenant paravail. Co.Litt. 100a.

WRIT OF POSSESSION. This is the writ of execution employed to enforce a judgment to recover the possession of land. It commands the sheriff to enter the land and give possession of it to the person entitled under the judgment. Smith, Act. 175. For a distinction between this writ and the "Writ of Assistance," see that title.

WRIT OF PR1ECIPE. This writ is also called a "writ of covenant," and is sued out by the party to whom lands are to be conveyed by fine, the foundation of which is a supposed agreement or covenant that the one shall convey the land to the other. 2 Bl.Comm. 349.

WRIT OF PREVENTION. This name is given to certain writs which may be issued in anticipation of suits which may arise. Co.Litt. 100. See Quia Timet.

WRIT OF PROBABLE CAUSE. An auxiliary process designed to supersede enforcement of judgment of trial court brought up for review. Martin v. Rosen, 2 Cal.App.2d 450, 38 P.2d 855, 857.

WRIT OF PROCESS. See Process; Action.

WRIT OF PROCLAMATION. In English law. By the statute 31 Eliz. c. 3, § 1, when an exigent is sued out, a writ of proclamation shall issue at the same time, commanding the sheriff of the county where the defendant dwells to make three proclamations thereof, in places the most notorious, and most likely to come to his knowledge, a month before the outlawry shall take place. 3 Bl.Comm. 284.

When it is not directed to the same sheriff as the exigent is, it is called a foreign writ of proclamation. 4 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 261.

WRIT OF PROHIBITION. See Prohibition.

WRIT OF PROTECTION. In England, the king may, by his writ of protection, privilege any person in his service from arrest in civil proceedings during a year and a day; but this prerogative is seldom, if ever, exercise. Archb.Pr. 687. See Co. Litt. 130a.

WRIT OF QUARE IMPEDIT. See Quare Impedit.

WRIT OF RECAPTION. If, pending an action of replevin for a distress, the defendant distrains again for the same rent or service, the owner of the goods is not driven to another action of replevin, but is allowed a writ of recaption, by which he recovers the goods and damages for the defendant's contempt of the process of the law in making a second distress while the matter is sub judice. Woodf. Landl. & Ten. 484.

WRIT OF REPLEVIN, See Replevin.

WRIT OF RESTITUTION. A writ which is issued on the reversal of a judgment commanding the sheriff to restore to the defendant below the thing levied upon, if it has not been sold, and, if it has been sold, the proceeds. Bac.Abr. "Execution," Q. A writ which lies, after the reversal of a judgment, to restore a party to all that he has lost by occasion of the judgment. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1186.

WRIT OF REVIEW. A general designation of any form of process issuing from an appellate court and intended to bring up for review the record or decision of the court below. Hopkins v. Benson, 21 Me. 401; West v. De Moss, 50 La.Ann. 1349, 24 So. 325. In Code practice, a substitute for, or equivalent of, the writ of certiorari. California. & 0. Land Co. v. Gowen, C.C.Or., 48 F. 775; Burnett v. Douglas County, 4 Or. 389; In re Winegard, 78 Hun, 58, 28 N.Y.S. 1039.

WRIT OF RIGHT. A writ which lay for one who had the right of property, against another who had the right of possession and the actual occupation. The writ properly lay only to recover corporeal hereditaments for an estate in fee-simple; but there were other writs, said to be "in the nature of a writ of right," available for the recovery of incorporeal hereditaments or of lands for a less estate than a fee-simple. Brown; Fitzh. N. B. 1 (B) ; 3 Bl.Comm. 391.

"Originally a writ of right is so called because it orders the feudal lord to do full right to the demandant, plenum rectum tenere. . . But when possessory actions have been established in the king's court, 'right' is contrasted with `seisin,' and all writs originating proprietary actions for land . . . come to be known as writs of right." Maitland, in 2 Sel.Essa;'s, Anglo-Am.Leg. Hist. 563.

In another sense, a writ which is grantable as a matter of right, as opposed to a "prerogative writ," which is issued only as a matter of grace or discretion.

WRIT OF SUMMONS. The writ by which, under the English judicature acts, all actions are commenced.

WRIT OF SUPERSEDEAS. See Supersedeas.

WRIT OF SUPERVISORY CONTROL. A writ which is issued only to correct erroneous rulings made by the lower court within its jurisdiction, where there is no appeal, or the remedy by appeal cannot afford adequate relief, and gross injustice is threatened as the result of such rulings. State v. District Court of First Judicial Dist. in and for Lewis and Clark County, 50 Mont. 428, 147 P. 612, 613. It is in nature of summary appeal to control course of litigation in trial court when necessary to prevent miscarriage of justice, and may be employed to prevent extended and needless litigation. State ex rel. 'Regis v. District Court of Second Judicial Dist. in and for Silver Bow County, 102 Mont. 74, 55 P.2d 1295.

Function of "writ of supervisory control" is to enable Supreme Court to control course of litigation in inferior courts where such courts are proceeding within their jurisdiction, but by mistake of law, or willful disregard of it, are doing gross injustice, and there is no appeal or remedy by appeal is inadequate. State ex rel. State Bank of Townsend v. District Court of First Judicial Dist. in and for Lewis and Clark County, 94 Mont. 551, 25 P.2d 396.

WRIT OF TOLT. In old English law. The name of a writ to remove proceedings on a writ of right patent from the court-baron into the county court.

WRIT OF TRIAL. In English law. A writ directing an action brought in a superior court to be tried in an inferior court or before the undersheriff, under St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 42. It is now superseded by the county courts act of 1867, c. 142, § 6, by which a defendant, in certain cases, is enabled to obtain an order that the action be tried in a county court. 3 Steph.Comm. 515, n.; Mozley & Whitley.

WRIT OF WASTE. The name of a writ to be issued against a tenant who has committed waste of the premises. There were anciently several forms of this writ, adapted to the particular circumstances. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 125.

WRIT PRO RETORNO HABENDO. A writ commanding the return of the goods to the defendant, upon a judgment in his favor in replevin, upon the plaintiff's default.

WRITER OF THE TALLIES. In England, An officer of the exchequer whose duty it was to write upon the tallies the letters of tellers' bills.

WRITER TO THE SIGNET. In Scotch law. An officer nearly corresponding to an attorney at law, in English and American practice. "Writers to the signet," called also "clerks to the signet," derive their name from the circumstance that they were anciently clerks in the office of the secretary of state, by whom writs were prepared and issued under the royal signet or seal; and, when the signet became employed in judicial proceedings, they obtained a monopoly of the privileges of acting as agents or attorneys before the court of session. Brande, voc. "Signet."

WRITING. The expression of ideas by letters visible to the eye. Clason v. Bailey, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 491. The giving an outward and objective form to a contract, will, etc., by means of letters or marks placed upon paper, parchment, or other material substance.

In the most general sense of the word, "writing" denotes a document, whether manuscript or printed, as opposed to mere spoken words. Writing is essential to the validity of certain contracts and other transactions. Sweet. See "Instrument."

WRITING OBLIGATORY. The technical name by which a bond is described in pleading. Denton v. Adams, 6 Vt. 40.

WRITTEN CONTRACT. See Contract.

WRITTEN INSTRUMENT. Something reduced to writing as a means of evidence, and as the means of giving formal expression to some act or contract. Curlee Clothing Co. v. Lowery, Tex.Civ. App., 275 S.W. 730, 732.

WRITTEN LAW. One of the two leading divisions of the Roman law, comprising the leges, plebiscita, senatus-consulta, principum placita, magistratuum edicta, and responsa prudentum. Inst. 1, 2, 3.

Statute law. 1 Steph.Comm. 40. Law deriving its force from express legislative enactment. 1 Bl.Comm. 62, 85.

WRONG. A violation of the legal rights of another; an invasion of right to the damage of the parties who suffer it, especially a tort. State ex rel. and to Use of Donelon v. Deuser, 345 Mo. 628, 134 S.W.2d 132, 133. It usually signifies injury to person, property or relative noncontractual rights of another than wrongdoer, with or without force, but, in more extended sense, includes violation of contract. Daurizio v. Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co., 152 Misc. 716, 274 N.Y.S. 174.

The idea of rights naturally suggests the correlative one of wrongs; for every right is capable of being violated. A right to receive payment for goods sold (for example) implies a wrong on the part of him who owes, but withholds the price; a right to live in personal security, a wrong on the part of him who commits personal violence. And therefore, while, in a general point of view, the law is intended for the establishment and maintenance of rights, we find it, on closer examination, to be dealing both with rights and wrongs. It first fixes the character and definition of rights, and then, with a view to their effectual security, proceeds to define wrongs, and to devise the means by which the latter shall be prevented or redressed. 1 Steph.Comm. 126.

Private Wrong

The violation of public or private rights, when considered in reference to the injury sustained by the individual, and consequently as subjects for civil redress or compensation. 3 Steph.Comm. 356; Huntington v. Attrill, 13 S.Ct. 224, 146 U.S. 657, 36 L.Ed. 1123; Tomlin v. Hildreth, 65 N.J.Law, 438, 47 A. 649; State v. Magee Pub. Co., 29 N.M. 455, 224 P. 1028, 1031, 38 A.L.R. 142.

Public Wrongs

Violations of public rights and duties which affect the whole community, considered as a community; crimes and misdemeanors. 3 Bl.Comm. 2; 4 Bl.Comm. 1.

Real Wrong

In old English law. An injury to the freehold.

WRONGDOER. One who commits an injury; a tort-feasor. The term ordinarily imports an invasion of right to the damage of the party who suffers such invasion. Merrill v. Comstock, 154 Wis. 434, 143 N.W. 313, 317.

WRONGFUL. Injurious, heedless, unjust, reckless, unfair. Infringement of some right. Mathes v. Williams, Tex.Civ.App., 134 S.W.2d 853, 858, WRONGFUL ACT. Any act which in the ordiflary course will infringe upon the rights of another to his damage, unless it is done in the exercise of an equal or superior right. Victor v. Lewis, La.App., 157 So. 293, 295; Louis Kamm, Inc., v. Flink, 113 N.J.Law 582, 175 A. 62, 67, 99 A.L.R. 1.

No act is "wrongful" unless the probability of injury to some determinate person or class of persons raises the duty as to those persons to refrain from such act. Harper v. Remington Arms Co., 156 Misc. 53, 280 N.Y.S. 862.

WRONGFUL CONDUCT. Conduct which contravenes some ditty which law attaches to relation between parties affected. Duncan v. Lumbermen's Mut. Casualty Co., 91 N.H. 349, 23 A.2d 325, 326.

WRONGFUL DEATH STATUTES. Statutory provision which operates upon the common-law rule that the death of a human being may not be complained of as an injury in a civil court. The cause of action for wrongful death is for the wrong to the beneficiaries. In re Daniel's Estate, 294 N.W. 465, 470, 208 Minn. 420.

See, also, Survival Statutes.

WRONGFUL LEVY. Which will entitle the owner of property levied on to damages for wrongful execution, has been made where there has been done to a third person's personalty those acts that would constitute a valid and complete levy if the debtor's property had been seized. Farris v. Castor, 186 Okl. 668, 99 P.2d 900, 902, 903.

WRONGFULLY. In a wrong manner; unjustly; in a manner contrary to the moral law, or to justice. Board of Com'rs of Howard County v. Armstrong, 91 Ind. 536.

WRONGFULLY INTENDING. In the language of pleading, this phrase is appropriate to be used in alleging the malicious motive of the defendant in committing the injury which forms the cause of action.

WRONGOUS. In Scotch law. Wrongful; unlawful; as wrongous imprisonment. Ersk.Prin. 4, 4, 25.

WURTH. In Saxon law. Worthy; competent; capable. Atheswurthe, worthy of oath; admissible or competent to be sworn. Spelman.

WYE. As applied to a street railway, a "wye" means a track with two branches, one joining the main track from one direction and the other joining the main track from another direction. Falls v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 189 Mich. 644, 155 N.W. 548, 549.

WYTE. In old English law. Acquittance or immunity from amercement.

X. In the written terminology of various arts and trades, where two or more dimensions of the same piece or article are to be stated, this letter is a well-known symbol equivalent to the word "by." Thus, the formula "3 x 5 in." will be understood, or may be explained by parol evidence, to mean "three by five inches," that is, measuring three inches in one direction and five in another. See Jaqua v. Witham & A. Co., 106 Ind. 547, 7 N.E. 314.

XENODOCHIUM. In the civil and old English law. An inn allowed by public license, for the entertainment of strangers, and other guests. Calvin.; Cowell.

A hospital; a place where sick and infirm persons are taken care of. Cowell.

XENODOCHY. Reception of stranger; hospitality. Enc. Lond.

XYLON. A punishment among the Greeks answering to our stocks. Wharton.

Y

YA ET NAY. In old records. Mere assertion and denial, without oath.

YACHT. Vessel larger than a rowboat used for private pleasure. Barker v. Inhabitants of Town of Fairhaven, 265 Mass. 333, 163 N.E. 901, 902.

YACHT BASIN. A system of channels, docks and wharves suitable for carrying, floating, anchoring, landing, loading and unloading yachts and other like sea-going craft. State v. City of Clearwater, 135 Fla. 148, 184 So. 790, 794.

YAHRZEIT. In the Orthodox Jewish faith an annual prayer for repose of soul of dead person. In re Fleishfarb's Will, 151 Misc. 399, 271 N.Y.S. 736.

YARD. A measure of length, containing three feet, or thirty-six inches.

A piece of land inclosed for the use and accommodation of the inhabitants of a house.

An enclosure, with or without buildings, devoted to some work or business. Grace Iron & Steel Corporation v. Ackerman, 123 N.J.L. 54, 7 A.2d 820, 822.

YARDLAND, or virgata terrce, is a quantity of land, said by some to be twenty acres, but by Coke to be of uncertain extent.

YARDMAN. Employee who takes care of or assists in care of yards and grounds. Statter v. Herring, 217 Iowa 410, 251 N.W. 715.

YEA AND NAY. Yes and no. According to a charter of Athelstan, the people of Ripon were to be believed in all actions or suits upon their yea and nay, without the necessity of taking any oath. Brown.

See, also, Yeas and Nays.

YEAR. The period in which the revolution of the earth round the sun, and the accompanying changes in the order of nature, are completed. Generally, when a statute speaks of a year, twelve calendar, and not lunar, months are intended. Cro.Jac. 166. The year is either astronomical, ecclesiastical, or regnal, beginning on the 1st of January, or 25th of March, or the day of the sovereign's accession. Wharton.

The civil year differs from the astronomical, the latter being composed of three hundred and sixty-five days, five hours, forty-eight minutes, forty-six seconds and a fraction, while the former consists sometimes of three hundred and sixty-five days, and at others, in leap-years, of three hundred and sixty-six days.

When the period of a "year" is named, a calendar year is generally intended, but the subject-matter or context of statute or contract in which the term is found or to which it relates may alter its meaning. J. L. Hammett Co. v. Alfred Peates Co., 105 N.E. 370, 217 Mass. 520, L.R.A.1915A, 334; United States Trust Co. v. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, 299 Mass. 296, 13 N.E.2d 6, 299 Mass. 296.

Natural Year

In old English law. That period of time in which the sun was supposed to revolve in its orbit, consisting of 365 days and one-fourth of a day, or six hours. Bract. fol. 359b.

Year and Day

This period was fixed for many purposes in law. Thus, in the case of an estray, if the owner did not claim it within that time, it became the property of the lord. So the owners of wreck must claim it within a year and a day. Death must follow upon wounding within a year and a day if the wounding is to be indicted as murder. Also, a year and a day were given for prosecuting or avoiding certain legal acts; e. g., for bringing actions after entry, for making claim for avoiding a fine, etc. Brown.

Year Books

Books of reports of cases in a regular series from the reign of the English King Edward I., inclusive, to the time of Henry VIII., which were taken by the prothonotaries or chief scribes of the courts, at the expense of the crown, and published annually; whence their name, "Year Books." Brown.

Year, Day, and Waste

In English law. An ancient prerogative of the king, whereby he was entitled to the profits, for a year and a day, of the lands of persons attainted of petty treason or felony, together with the right of wasting the tenements, afterwards restoring the property to the lord of the fee. Abrogated by St. 54 Geo. III., c. 145. Wharton.

See An, Jour, et Waste.

Year of Our Lord

In England the time of an offense may be alleged as that of the sovereign's reign, or as that of the year of our Lord. The former is the usual mode. Hence there "year" alone might not indicate the time intended, but as we have no other era, therefore, any particular year must mean that year in our era. Com. v. Doran, 14 Gray (Mass.) 38. The abbreviation A. D. may be omitted; and the word year is not fatal; State v. Bartlett, 47 Me. 393; contra, Com. v. McLoon, 5 Gray (Mass.) 92, 66 Am.Dec. 354.

Year to Year, Tenancy from

This estate arises either expressly, as when land is let from year to year; or by a general parol demise, without any determinate interest, but reserving the payment of an annual rent; or impliedly, as when property is occupied generally under a rent payable yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly; or when a tenant holds over, after the expiration of his term, without having entered into any new contract, and pays rent, (before which he is tenant on sufferance.) Wharton. See, also, Tenant, subtitle Tenant from Year to Year.

Years, Estate for

See Estate for Years.

YEAR OF MOURNING. The Roman "annus luctus" (q. v.).

The reason for the widow's year of mourning has been stated as follows: "But if a man dies, and his widow soon after marries again, and a child is born within such a time as by the course of nature it might have been the child of either husband, in this case he is said to be more than ordinarily legitimate; for he may, when he arrives at years of discretion, choose which of the fathers he pleases. To prevent this, the civil law ordained that no widow should marry for one year, and the same constitution was probably transmitted to our ancestors from the Romans, during their stay in Britain, for we find it established under the Saxon and Danish governments." 1 Bl. Comm. 456 (quoted from Browne's Abr., p. 151 [Gavit's Ed., p. 198]).

YEARLING. A young animal past its first year and not yet two years old. Moran v. State, 160 Miss. 598, 135 So. 209.

YEAS AND NAYS. The affirmative and negative votes on a bill or measure before a legislative assembly. "Calling the yeas and nays" is calling for the individual and oral vote of each member, usually upon a call of the roll.

YEAST. A small cellular micro-organism. In its ordinary significance, it is a conglomerate mass of infinitesimally small cells. Standard Brands v. National Grain Yeast Corporation, N.J., 60 S.Ct. 27, 28, 308 U.S. 34, 84 L.Ed. 17.

YELLOW DOG CONTRACT. A contract by which employer requires employee to sign an instrument promising as condition that he will not join a union during its continuance, and will be discharged if he does join. Denver Local Union No. 13 of International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen, and Helpers of America v. Perry Truck Lines, 101 P.2d 436, 443, 106 Colo. 25.

YEME. In old records. Winter; a corruption of the Latin "hiems." See Hyems.

YEN HOCK. A piece of metal sharpened at one end and blunt on the other end, used to cook an opium pill or yen pock. People v. Graves, 84 Cal. App.2d 531, 191 P.2d 32, 33.

YEN POCK. An opium pill. People v. Graves, 84 Cal.App.2d 531, 191 P.2d 32, 33.

YEN SHEE. A carbonized opium and a black granular substance. People v. Graves, 84 Cal. App.2d 531, 191 P.2d 32, 33.

YEOMAN. In English law. A commoner; a freeholder under the rank of gentleman. Cowell. A man who has free land of forty shillings by the year; who was anciently thereby qualified to serve on juries, vote for knights of the shire, and do any other act, where the law requires one that is probes et legalis homo. 1 Bl.Comm. 406, 407.

This term is occasionally used in American law, but without any definite meaning, except in the United States navy, where it designates an appointive petty officer. Who performs clerical duties usually associated with office workers.

YEOMANRY. The collected body of yeomen.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD. Properly called "yeomen of the guard of the royal household;" a body of men of the best rank under the gentry, and of a larger stature than ordinary, every one being required to be six feet high. Enc. Lond.

YEVEN, or YEOVEN. Given; dated. Cowell.

YIDDISH. A Middle High German dialect, or number of dialects, spoken by Jews, containing a large number of Germanized Hebrew words, and using Hebrew characters for its literature. U. S. ex rel. Engel v. Tod, C.C.A.2, 294 F. 820, 822.

YIELD. In the law of real property. To perform a service due by a tenant to his lord. Hence the usual form of reservation of a rent in a lease begins with the words "yielding and paying." Sweet.

In patent law. The word "yielding," as used in a patent claim, is not the equivalent of "resilient," or "spring-supported," but may be applied to a part which is retractable at will. Mergenthaler Linotype Co. v. International Typesetting Mach. Co., D.C.N.Y., 229 F. 168, 192.

YIELD UPON INVESTMENT Proportionate rate which the income upon an investment bears to the total cost interest excepted on that investment, taking into consideration the time when the investment may be outstanding before being paid off. Baltimore Mail S. S. Co. v. United States, D.C. Md., 7 F.Supp. 651, 653.

YIELDING AND PAYING In conveyancing. The initial words of that clause in leases in which the rent to be paid by the lessee is mentioned and reserved.

YOKELET. A little farm, requiring but a yoke of oxen to till it.

YOM KIPPUR. Day of Atonement, is the most sacred and solemn holiday in the Jewish calendar, a day on which Jews throughout the world, after a period of fasting, congregate together at their respective synagogues to worship and pray and ask divine forgiveness for sins committed during the year. Hoffman v. Graber, Mo.App., 153 S.W. 2d 817, 818.

YORK—ANTWERP RULES. Certain rules relating to uniform bills of lading formulated by the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Laws of Nations, now the International Law Association.

These rules are commonly incorporated in contracts of affreightment. They are the result of conferences of representatives of mercantile interests from several countries, in the interest of uniformity of law. They have no statutory authority. The text is in Maclachlan's Mercht. Shipping. For a history of them, see Lowndes, Gen. Av.

YORK, CUSTOM OF. A custom of the province of York in England, by which the effects of an intestate, after payment of his debts, are in general divided according to the ancient universal doctrine of the pars rationabilis; that is, one-third each to the widow, children, and administrator. 2 Bl.Comm. 518.

YORK, STATUTE OF. An important English statute passed at the city of York, in the twelfth year of Edward II., containing provisions on the subject of attorneys, witnesses, the taking of inquests by nisi pries, etc. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 299-302.

YOUNGER CHILDREN. This phrase, when used in English conveyancing with reference to settlements of land, signifies all such children as are not entitled to the rights of an eldest son. It therefore includes daughters, even those who are older than the eldest son. Mozley & Whiteley.

YOUTH. This word may include children and young persons of both sexes. Nelson v. Cushing, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 519, 528.

YULE. The times of Christmas and Lammas.

YVERNAIL BLE. L. Fr. Winter grain. Kelham.

ZAMINDAR. See Zemindar.

ZANJA. Span. A water ditch or artificial canal, and particularly one used for purposes of irrigation. See Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578.

ZANJERO. Span. A water commissioner or superintendent, or supervisor of an irrigation system. See Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578; Everett v. Standard Acc. Ins. Co., 45 Cal.App. 332, 187 P. 996, 1000.

ZEALOT. This word is commonly taken in a bad sense, as denoting a separatist from the Church of England, or a fanatic. Brown.

ZEALOUS WITNESS. An untechnical term denoting a witness, on the trial of a cause, who manifests a partiality for the side calling him, and an eager readiness to tell anything which he thinks may be of advantage to that side.

ZEIR. O. Sc. Year. "Zeir and day." Bell.

ZEMINDAR. In Hindu law. Landkeeper. An officer who under the Mohammedan government was charged with the financial superintendence of the lands of a district, the protection of the cultivators, and the realization of the government's share of its produce, either in money or kind. Wharton.

ZEOLITE PROCESS. The "zeolite process" of softening water consists in passing hard water through a filter bed of granular sodium zeolites, which exchange their sodium base for the calcium and magnesium in the water. Permutit Co. v. Wadham, D.C.Mich., 294 F. 370, 371.

ZEOLITES. Chemical compounds existing in nature, and also produced chemically, possessing the unique and valuable property of being able, when saturated with solution of sodium chloride, to take up from water passed through them such hardening elements as calcium or magnesium, and to exchange the same for salt when brought in contact therewith. Permutit Co. v. Graver Corporation, D.C.Ill., 37 F.2d 385, 386.

ZETETICK. Proceeding by inquiry. Enc. Lond.

ZIGARI, or ZINGARI. Rogues and vagabonds in the middle ages; from Zigi, now Circassia.

ZOLL-VEREIN. A union of German states for uniformity of customs, established in 1819. It continued until the unification of the German empire, including Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, Baden, Hesse-Cassel, Brunswick, and Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and all intermediate principalities. It was subsequently superseded by the German empire; and the federal council of the empire took the place of that of the Zoll-Verein. Wharton.

ZONE OF EMPLOYMENT. Within which injuries to employees are compensable under Workmen's Compensation Acts is the place of employment and the area thereabout, including the means of ingress thereto and egress therefrom under the control of the employer. Merz v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 134 Ohio St. 36, 15 N.E. 2d 632, 633. It implies reasonable proximity to place of employment. Evans v. Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, 124 W.Va. 336, 20 S.E.2d 172, 173.

ZONING. The division of a city by legislative regulation into districts and the prescription and application in each district of regulations having to do with structural and a7chitectural designs of buildings and of regulations prescribing use to which buildings within designated districts may be put. Miller v. Board of Public Works of City of Los Angeles, 195 Cal. 477, 234 P. 381, 384, 38 A. L.R. 1479; Elizabeth City v. Aydlett, 201 N.C. 602, 161 S.E. 78, 79.

ZYGOCEPHALUM. In the civil law. A measure or quantity of land. Nov. 17, c. 8. As much land as a yoke of oxen could plow in a day. Calvin.

ZYGOSTATES. In the civil law. A weigher; an officer who held or looked to the balance in weighing money between buyer and seller; an officer appointed to determine controversies about the weight of money. Spelman.

ZYTHUM. Lat. A liquor or beverage made of wheat or barley. Dig. 33, 6, 9, pr.

Inst., I, 2, 31. Justinian's Institutes, lib. 1, tit. 2, § 31.

The Institutes of Justinian are divided into four books,—each book is divided into titles, and each title into paragraphs, of which the first, described by the letters pr., or princip., is not numbered. The old method of citing the Institutes was to give the commencing words of the paragraph and of the title; e. g., § si adversus, Inst. de Nuptiis. Sometimes the number of the paragraph was introduced, e.g § 12, si adversus, Inst. de Nuptiis. The modern way is to give the number of the book, title, and paragraph, thus ,—Inst. 1. 10, 12; would be read Inst., Lib. I. tit. 10, § 12.
